Grand Funk Railroad

Wow, what a great article on the Grand Funk Railroad (Goldmine #475, Ot. 9, 1998). Thank you so much for doing it. I know many of us GER fans have wrote you the past few months, asking for a cover story, and you are no doubt very responsive to your readers. I have been a huge fan of GFR since 1970. I was a very young at the time and did not get to see GLR live in their first go around. It was a dream come true for me to see them live (five times since there retunion in '96) in the last two years. And I have to agree with Steve Roeser these guys still totally kick ass, they have not missed a beat, if anything, they are better than ever.

GER has been a band that never seemed to get any credit. Steve did a great job describing their accomplishment and how they had critical disdain from media types. Here's a band that sold out world wide tours, sold 12 Gold albums, 10 Platinum albums have many top ten hits (including two at #1) and they hardly even get a mention on any rock history program that is put together (for example: PBS' History of Rock).

It's ridiculous. Not only does GFR have the sales number's but, GFR is a band that influenced countless acts that followed them (such as Van Halen, Bon Jovi, Night Ranger, Alice In Chains, Red Hot Chili Peppers. Chris Whitley, Suck, Collision, Govt. Mule, Aldo Nove, Monster Magnet, The JayHawks, Jackal, The Black Crows, and on and on) and they were forgotten in the media totally, until you, did such a wonderful article.

I want to thank you again, hopefully this will be the start of GFR getting the credit they deserve, and hopefully they will get nominated and elected to the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame, where they belong.

— Richard D Cappetto Las Vegas, NV

(We try to accomodate article requests from our readers as best we can, and sometimes readers have to be patient. Glad we could pull this issue together. To all of you GFR fans you sent us letters and e-mail, it worked! - Ed.]

Grand Funk

I just want to congratulate you on a wonderful article about my favourite group, Grand Funk Railroad. I was unaware of your fine magazine but the other day I was in my local book store and there staring me in the face was GFR. I bought a copy immediately and read about my boy hood heroes re-uniting and touring and the trials and tribulations when they were at their peak. The article gave me a wonderful feeling of nostalgia and also of excitment for the future for

I was also impressed by the magazine as a whole as a venue for picking up memorabilia on just about any group there is.

Let me thank you again for rekindling a teenage high by meeting the guys in GFR and for doing such a top notch job of it.

LETTER FROM THE EDITOR

Meet Thomas P. Paar — our new publisher

Due to continued expansion at Krause Publications, Goldmine publisher Claude Chmiel has been re-assigned to head up the newly acquired International Collectibles Exposition which has 215 exhibitors and more than 22,800 attendees. Claude will also be associate publisher of Collectors Mart magazine, which has close ties to the show. The move was made because of Claude's previous experience with several other Krause show entities, as well as his magazine experience on Goldmine and other titles. Claude had taken over the Goldmine publisher reins a little over a year ago when then-publisher Greg Loescher switched to editor.

With Claude's move, my own responsibilities at Krause have changed. Previously associate publisher of our knife and gun collecting publications, I am now publisher of those magazines and also Goldmine.

Most of my experience has been in advertising sales and management, ranging from daily newspapers across the Midwest, including a stint with the Register-Star in Rockford, ILL (a Gannett property) and advertising sales with Krause's gun and knive collector publications, Gun List, Gun Show Calendar, and Blade magazine.

I don't anticipate many changes on the editorial side of the magazine, as our Goldmine editorial staff and freelance writers have that area rolling along pretty well. I will be spending more time with our sales staff, including personally calling some of our accounts, so I hope to get to know many of you over the coming months and

Regarding sales, beginning with this issue, we would like to welcome the entire 346-store Blockbuster Music chain to our growing list of more than 1,500 retail outlets who carry Goldmine. (If you are a retailer and would like to sell Goldmine in your stores, call Steve Hudziak at 715-445-2214, ext. 790 for info on our no-risk shop sales program.)

As for my own musical tastes, I am a longtime fan of '60s rock 'n' roll and big band music. I have been married to my beautiful wife, Sharon, for 30 years, have a son and a daughter, and enjoy living in this part of the country.

I am looking forward to serving our readers and advertisers as Goldmine publisher as we enter our 25th year of publishing.

— Thomas P. Paar

PS. I can't wait for your next issue to see who you profile next.

Levon & The Hawks discography update

Please note that the release number for the Levon & The Hawks' 45 on Atco is 6383. 65C-9344 (and 65C-9345) are the matrix numbers for "He Don't Love You" and "The Stones 1 Throw" respectively, which are assigned by the company either when the recording is made or when it is mastered. Atco also released another 45 by Levon & The Hawks in 1968 in response to the success of The Band. It is on Atco 6625. The sides are "He Don't Love You" (68-C-9344 SP) and "Go Go Lisa Jane" (68-C-9346 SP).

Both sides are credited this time to Jamie Robbie Robertson. One can see by the matrix numbers that all three sides come from one recording session since they are consecutive (4, 5 & 6), with the prefixes (65, 68) indicating the year of release.

Deep Purple his favorite

Your article on Deep Purple (Goldmine #475, Oct. 9, 1998) was my favorite article I've ever read in a magazine. Goldmine is what Rolling Stone wanted to be but was too blinded by commercialism.

It's great (Tommy) Bolin is finally being recognized to many including myself who missed him pretty much the first time around. I am now a devoted Bolin-head and much of a Purple fan also.

My take on Deep Purple is that (Ritchie) Blackmore played really awesome guitar but the other band members were so good he couldn't outshine them, especially (Ian) Paice and (Jon) Lord. Case in point: MKIII: Final Concerts, Disc One, first three songs -"Burn," "Stoermbringer," "Gypsy." The man plays his guts out and no on says "Ritchie Blackmore on guitar" or anything. He was more than just smoke on the water.

My solution: call Blackmore a guitar god like Clapton and Hendrix but Bolin is a guitar christ and every one on both sides of the Atlantic should be happy! Great article and keep on rockin"!

Big Brother rocks!

Thanks for the cover story on Big Brother and The Holding Company (Goldmine #474 Oct. 9, 1998). I've always thought that the original four guys, Sam Andrew, James Gurley, Peter Albin and Dave Getz had a lot more charisma than most of the '60s countemporaries in other San Francisco bands. I'm glad they're back together and seem to get along better than many groups of the same time period. Thanks for the update. I would invite anyone interested in further information on Big Brother to get a copy of Goldmine #130, dated July 19, 1985 when they were featured in a cover story, and also #226 from March 24, 1989, which contains a concert review on their reunion tour in the Grapevine column and a press photo of the group with Michele Bastian. Rock on, BBHC!

Another CD repair solution?

My mother told me about this and I want to pass it along to all my fellow Goldminers out there. Aural Tech CD Refining in Bellevue, Washington, can remove scratches, stains and gouges from music and game CDs and make 'em good as new for $3.50 per disc (plus shipping). No zip was given. Call 888-454-3223. Haven't tried them yet, but it sure sounds good to me. (Just the other day I was playing Love Da Capo and on the last song it

Chapman's Lennon-signed LP Put Up For Auction Minimum Bid Set At $350,000 For Record Signed For Assasin

Possibly one of the most significant pieces of memorabilia — and also one of the most controversial — is heading for the auction block. The Double Fantasy album John Lennon signed for David Chapman just five hours prior to Chapman's assassination of the former Beatle will be offered for the first time in ads running in Sports Collectors Digest's Oct. 20, 1998 issue and will also run in Goldmine's Nov. 6, 1998 Beatles issue.

The owner is hoping for $1.8 million. The album has a minimum bid of $350,000 with bidding in $25,000 increments. The auction ends December 6, 1998 at 10:00 pm

The owner, who remains anonymous, is being represented by Moments in Time, a memorabilia company in Washingtonville, New York.

When asked why the piece is being auctioned off now, Gary Zimet, president of Moments in Time, said the owner has family medical bills that have been mounting and feels "now is the time to sell it."

Obviously, the irony of Lennon autographing his assassin's album cover cannot be overlooked in this piece. What about the "morbidity factor" in auctioning off the album?

"It may play a very small part, but that's all," said Zimet. "This is as an historical piece as you can find [in popular culture]. This takes the cake!"

Bob Zaflan, Zimet's associate in the auctionand owner of Heart of the Order in Newton, NJ, told Goldmine that Beatles fans have been both positive and negative about the piece. But once he explains why the owner is selling it, to pay off medical bills, the fans understand. Zaflan said the owner had "no intention to ever sell it" and "he still feels he is losing a member of his family" by auctioning it off.

The album has a minimum bid of $350,000 with bidding in $25,000 increments. The auction ends December 6, 1998 at 10:00 pm EST.

So how did the owner acquire this historic piece? Zaflan explains that the owner had gone to a wrestling match at Madison Square Gardens the night of Lennon's assassination, Dec. 8, 1980.

"After the match, a friend dropped him off near the Dakota [which was on his way to his apartment], said Zaflan. "This was just 15 minutes after the shooting."

There were about 50 people in front of the Dakota, a number that would swell to several thousand within hours.

According to Zaflan, the story goes that the album owner was leaning up against a wall with bronze flower pots lining the top of it when the album fell onto his shoulder. He picked it up and placed it back into the flower pots. A short time later, the album fell back onto his shoulder. He hung onto the album this time, not really knowing what it was until later. As the crowd grew, he got nervous and decided to cab it home. The cab driver, who worked for the Geraldo Show, happened to notice the album and asked the owner if he realized what he had in his hands. The driver helped get him immediately onto TV and the album then ended up in the hands of the authorities. Several years later, the owner received the album back, along with letters of thanks from the New York Police Department and the District Attorney office as well as court documentations used during the trial.

"I've never seen anything with this much documentation," Zaflan said when they first reviewed the album and documents. "It's impeccable, it's unbelievable."

"There's no bigger piece of memorabilia in rock 'n' roll history," claims Zaflan. "Who knows what could have happened if John wasn't shot."

So what type of person will bid on this historic piece?

"My guess — a private collector," said Zimit. "If a museum had wanted it, they would have come forward by now."

Zimit also noted that most museums are looking for items to be donated, not purchased.

Zaflan felt that it would go to some highprofile person in the music or entertainment field.

"There's a lot of money in the music industry. I imagine that's were it would go."

Madonna Offends Hindus On MTV Performance

In a spectacle reminiscent of the furor generated by Sincad O'Connor when she shredded a photo of the Pope on Saturday Night Live, Madonna's appearance at the recent MTV Video Music awards drew the ire of members of the Hindu religion.

Wearing a nearly transparent blouse, and sporting facial markings which have holy significance in the Hindu religion, the Material Girl performed a spirited rendition of "Ray of Light" characterized by - surprise! - suggestive dancing and some lascivious moves with her guitarist. According to the World Vaishnava Association - a group comprised of Hindus, Vaishnavas, and yoga practitioners - Madonna's facial markings constituted a "Vaishnava tilak," a symbol of chastity, harmony, and purity. A statement issued by the organization asserted that by "wearing this sacred marking while wearing clothing through which her nipples were clearly visible and while gyrating in a sexually suggestive manner with her guitar player, [Madonna] offended Hindus and Vaishnavas throughout the world." The group also asked for an apology.

Addressing the issue, Madonna spokesperson Liz Rosenberg indicated that Madonna was "very surprised" by the criticism. According to the New York Daily News, Rosenberg said, "The essence of purity and divinity is nonjudgment. They should practice what they preach. If they're so pure, why are they watching MTV?" Rosenberg went on to say that a number of Indian publications have requested photos of Madonna, and that she didn't think the WVA was speaking for an entire community."

Strangely enough, within a few days of issuing its complaint, the WVA began backpedaling from its stance of outrage. As reported by Vibe Magazine online, the organization's vice president and its publisher — Swami B.V. Tripurari and the Mandela Publishing Group — went so far as to grant Madonna permission to integrate a picture from one of the WVA's spiritual texts into a backdrop of her stage set. Said Tripurari in a published statement: "...the Hindu community and Eastern spiritual seekers the world over should be happy for Madonna personally in terms of her genuine interest in enlightened life, and grateful to her for her sincere efforts to attract others to the same."

Nearly lost in the ruckus was the fact that Madonna — who in the past has also angered Catholics and fundamentalist Christians — carted home six silver Moonmen from the awards ceremony.

Jazz Singer Betty Carter: 1930-1998

Jazz chanteuse Betty Carter died of pancreatic cancer September 26th at her New York home. She was considered one of the best living jazz singers by many jazz critics. Known for her dry, smokehued alto which could simulate almost any instrument—she wanted it to. Carter was equally known for her scatting and improvisational abilities. Her unusual vocal approach often included bouncing syncopations against every offbeat but the expected one.

She was raised in Detroit and studied at the Detroit Conservatory of Music. She performed in clubs with visiting bebop musicians such as Dizzy Gillespie and Charlie Parker. After high school, she served a 2-year apprenticeship in Lionel Hampton's orchestra. After joining his band in 1948, the former Lillie Mae Jones formed a number of jazz trios through the fifties and sixties. She reached a career milestone with the 1961 collaboration album Ray Charles and Betty Carter which featured their flawless rendition of "Baby, It's Cold Outside."

By the 1970s. Carter was not being courted by any record labels, so she formed her own Bet-Car Productions. "The jazz community really had no vision as far as keeping our music on top," she once told the Star-Tribune newspaper. "When the other music came and floded us in the '60s, when the Beatles, Motown, recording technology, free jazz and all that hit at the same time, we went into a cocoon, like the Democrats are doing now. We didn't fight back. We got weak. A lot of jazz musicians deflected and decided to do the commercial stuff and you know, get all that money, money, money. That's what it's always been about. Money!"

Carter labored on, forming her own trios and producing her own music until she was picked up by Verve Records in the '80s. In 1988 she received her first Grammy Award for Look What I Got, which she followed with the live album Feed the Fire, which many critics

consider her best work

One of Carter's most fulfilling roles was in nurturing upcoming jazz musiciars. Her groups have spawned many successful musicians: pianists John Hicks, Mulgrew, Stephen Scott, Cyrus Chestnut, Benny Green and Jacky Terrasson, bassists Curtis Lundy, Ira Coleman, Micahel Bowie and Dennis Lundy and drummers Gregory Hutchinson, Kenny Washington, Lewis Nash and Winard Harper. Last year, she told New York Newsday jazz critic Gene Seymour, "I learn all the time from these kids because they're going to hear different things," Carter said. "And I like that — it has kept me fresh."

Playing For The Man: Lou Reed Gives Performance At The White House

In a scene that would have been as unimaginable 30 years ago as, say, the liberation of Czechoslovakia, Lou Reed rocked the East Room of the White House on Sept. 16 with a half-hour of music scheduled in conjunction with a dinner honoring Czech president Vaclav Havel.

The unlikely performance took place at the behest of Havel himself, who befriended Reed in 1990, not long after becoming the Czech republic's first post-Communist leader.

Imprisoned for years under communist Czechoslovakia's culturally prohibitive regime, the playwright-turned-president credited Reed's songs with inspiring the freedom efforts of himself and other similarly-minded Czech artists, who coined their fight for democracy the "Velvet Revolution." Indeed, when Rolling Stone approached Havel for an interview soon after he assumed leadership of the country in 1989, Havel agreed to cooperate only if Reed were designated to conduct the talk.

Guests at the gala White House event constituted an eclectic mix, to say the least. Besides the expected political dignitaries, among those attending were novelist Kurt Vonnegut, actress Mia Farrow, songwriters Stevie Wonder and Ric Ocasek, and performance artist Laurie Anderson.

Though many were reluctant to express opinions regarding the current scandal hounding President Clinton, the Washington Post quoted Reed as saying, "I think what's being done to him is terrible. Your private life should be your private life. I think it's a smear campaign."

During the 35-minute performance, Reed mixed a smattering of old songs with several recent compositions. Eschewing most of his controversial material, he nonetheless did perform "Dirty Blvd.," a scathing indictment of political indifference to suffering and poverty that he wrote during the Reagan era. According to a spokesman for the singer, other songs in the set included "Sweet Jane," "New Sensations," "Riptide," and "Legendary Hearts," which Reed dedicated specifically to Havel. Although most of the audience was subdued during the performance, the Post reported that Vice President Gore rocked in his chair incessantly.

Havel first encountered the Velvet Underground's music during a visit to New York in 1968. Though American rock 'n' roll was banned in Czechoslovakia, he returned to Prague carrying a copy of the Velvet's White Light/White Heat album. In a statement printed inside a program accompanying the White House dinner, Havel called Reed "one of the founders of the American underground," and someone who helped to create "a new type of American self-realization." Playing bass in Reed's backing band was Milan Hlavsa, a former member of the Velvets-inspired Czech group, Plastic People of the Universe.

R&B Singer Johnny Adams

New Orleans singer Johnny Adams, who blended blues, soul, and a mellow caress of suave jazz phrasing into a pure, often stunning vocal delivery that frequently soared into breathtaking falsetto range, died September 14 in his adopted hometown of Baton Rouge, La., after a long battle with cancer. He was either 66 or 67, depending on the source.

Since 1983, Adams had recorded prolifically for Rounder Records, releasing a series of acclaimed albums. His latest, Man of My Word, hit the shelves in August.

Usually listed as having been born January 5, 1932 in New Orleans, Laten John Adams learned his melismatic phrasing within the confines of the church, joining a group called the Soul Revivers during the early 1950s and spending a brief stretch with Bessie Griffin & her Soul Consolators. Signing with Joe Ruffino's Ric label in 1959, Adams debuted with the ballad "I Won't Cry" (originally known as "Oh Why"), produced and arranged by a teenaged Mac Rebennack (later known as Dr. John.) Ballads became his principal forte at Ric as he waxed the elegant "Nowhere To Go," "Teach Me To Forget," "Lonely Drifter," and "A Losing Battle." The latter, a sly gospel-based piece co-written by Rebennack, earned Adams his first trip to the national R&B charts when it hit in mid-1962.

After eleven Ric singles and a few more for Watch, Pacemaker, Smash, and Scram, Adams recaptured the spotlight in 1968 with a remake of the often-covered country chestnut "Release Me," which he gave an soul-steeped, falsetto-streaked treatment.

Adams waxed his biggest R&B hit in 1969 in Nashville. "Reconsider Me" was a breathtaking blend of soul and country penned by two of Singleton's most prolific writers, Myra Lewis and Margaret Smith.

Adams enjoyed one more taste of national chart success in 1978 when he reworked Conway Twitty's country smash "After All The Good Is Gone" into a solid seller, initially for the Hep Me label before Ariola licensed the master. A disco-tinged album for Ariola soon followed, but it took the Rounder deal in 1983 to fully showcase his thrilling multi-octave exploits. Beginning with From the Heart, they spotlighted the singer at his most satisfying.

Sonny Knight, R&B Vocalist

Sonny Knight, who briefly hit it big in the 1950s with the outstanding ballad "Confidential," died September 5, 1998, in his home on the island of Maui, Hawaii. He was 64 years old. Sonny's biggest recording was his 1956 hit, "Confidential," which lasted five weeks on the Billboard R&B chart and peaked at #8. It went to #17 Pop. He briefly made the Billboard pop chart in 1964, with "If You Want This Love" (#17 Pop) on Aura.

Knight wrote a number of other songs for himself and others including Amos Milburn's "Vicious, Vicious, Vodka." In 1981, Grove Press published The Day The Music Died, a book Knight wrote under his real name, Joseph C. Smith, that dealt with the exploitation of black performers in the recording industry.

Born May 17, 1934, in Maywood, Ill, Knight's family moved to Los Angeles, Calif., when he was about 11. Twenty-five years ago he moved to Hawaii, and for more than two decades performed as a lounge entertainer at the Hyatt Hotel on Maui. A couple of years ago, according to researcher Steve Propes, he suffered a stroke that forced him to retire from the

Vernon Guy, St. Louis R&B Singer

Vernon Guy, veteran St. Louis R&B singer, died in a car accident on September 10. He was 53 years old. Guy is best remembered for his work in the Sharpees, whose first release, in July of 1965, was "Do The 45," a song inspired by Junior Walker's "Shotgun." It became a national hit on the Chicago-based One-derful label. The group came back with another national hit in January of 1966, "Tired of Being Lonely." The Sharpees never got another hit, but stayed together until 1972, when lead singer Herbert Reeves was shot and killed. In 1980 Guy made a single on Electric Land that failed, and in subsequent years continue to perform in St. Louis clubs.

Vernon Guy was born in St. Louis, Missouri, on March 21, 1945. He joined Benny Sharp's revue around 1961. The following year, he and fellow revue member Stacy Johnson left Benny Sharp and joined the Ike and Tina Turner revue. While with Turner Guy and Johnson toured with the revue where each took solo spots. One live LP was made of the live revue show, and both Guy and Johnson were featured on the album. In 1964 Guy left Ike Turner and formed the Sharpees with Reeves and Horise O'Toole.

R&B AND FEMINIST ICON MILLIE JACKSON

by Bil Carpenter

illie lackson's name means a lot of things to a lot of different Lpeople. Pioneer or profiteer? In the '70s, she was hurled into the national spotlight because of the controversy over her then-notorious "rap" LPs such as Caught Up and Feelin' Bitchy. These groundbreaking wax saucers explored the vagaries of sexual fidelity in a subtly humorous street poetry that ignored the beguiling double-entendres of the blues for direct candor. Jackson's records were met with rebukes by civic leaders and others who thought she was recklessly using suggestiveness, and later profanity, for profit. Still, others embraced lackson's music for its honesty. Most of her fans had never heard anyone sing the things she had to say in the open manner that she had. This was the age of a black social revolution with undercurrents of black militancy, sexual experimentation (including man-sharing and shacking up) and questioning of traditional male-female roles.

Although, Jackson recorded briefly for MGM Records, it wasn't until she signed to Spring Records in 1972 that she initially had radio hits with "A Child of God (It's Hard To Believe)," "Ask Me What You Want," "My Man, A Sweet Man" and "Hurts So Good." Her commercial breakthrough was the 1974 Caught Up concept album that revolved around a love triangle and earned her a Grammy nomination as best female R&B vocalist. She did not initially use profanity on her albums. It was the graphic subject matter of words like "dirty drawers" that led most radio stations to ban her music which in turn created a public demand to hear what the stations would not play. The album sold a half million copies and Jackson kept the concept going with the equally successful Still Caught Up album. One side illustrated the wife's side of the story and the other side took on the mistresses' point of view. In 1977 Jackson scored her biggest hit thus far with the Feelin' Bitchy album, which featured the smash ballad "If You're Not Back In Love By Monday," a soulful cover of a Merle Haggard

By this time, she had been tagged the Dear Abby of the Record World, the Richard Pryor of Soul and the Queen of Raunch. Jackson continued her trademark performances well into the '80s, climaxing in the critically acclaimed, platinum Live and Outrageous album. By the late-80s, Jackson's label had folded and demand for her music had faded, but she remained a popular concert draw. Capitalizing on this fact, Jackson created a play to boost sales and draw attention to her Young Man, Older Woman album in 1992. It was a fluke, but ended up running for four years around the country and grossing $8 million. Jackson later signed with Ichiban Records. Via the Atlanta-based label, she has released the piay soundtracks Young Man. Older Woman (1993) and its sequel, It Ain't Over (1997). These days Jackson is working on her third play and several other ideas. She's also comfortable with the renewed interest in her career via the hip-hop community's generous sampling of her songs and the fact that artists like Li'l Kim call her "Mommy." This fall fans can see Jackson as one of the first guests on comedienne Roseanne's new daytime talk show. She recently journeyed to Utah where she served as Roseanne's special correspondent to the Lillith Fair. Twenty years ago Laura Lee, Candi Staton, Gwen McCrae and Jackson could have created their own Lillith Fair with the polarizing bedroom politics they espoused.

Goldmine: What do you miss most about he '70s?

Jackson: Probably the work. Because in the '70s I worked forty-nine weeks out of the year and there was no such thing as a tour. You just worked forty-nine weeks out of the year. They had all of those wonderful big clubs and everything where they brought live entertainment now where they use a DAT. They charge more money for the public to come in and hear plain old records rather than a live performance.

How has the scene changed?

Now, the clubs are smaller and there are not that many anymore that have live entertainment in general. For clubs now that have live entertainment, the singers are singing to DAT or something. I refuse to do that. I just can't perform without my live band and the music just is not the same. You don't get the same performance because you're so tied down and put in this little mode where you got to do what the record says in the right amount of time or you're out there on your own. It's like you're doing a TV spot on Soul Train or something instead of performing to a live audience.

Why do you think the club scene changed?

Jackson: Well, let's face it. You know in the seventies I was younger and now the clubs are the age limit I was in the seventies. And now they go out, they hang and they dance. The only difference is, like I said, they'll pay the same money to go in dance and listen to music as they used to pay in the seventies for a live performance. Basically, I think it's nothing but a meeting place anyway.

During the '70s what artists or songs did you like?

Oh, well my idols have always been Eddie Levert and the O'Jays, Gladys Knight & the Pips, Prince. Tyrone Davis, Bobby Womack. Nothing has changed because the good ones remain.

Vocally, did you ever identify more with male singers than female singers?

Male. That's funny you should ask me that because in the '70s and the '60s, girls had those high voices. The only ones that made it were the Dionne Warwicks, the Patti LaBelles and the Supremes and all those people who hit those high, high notes. That was the thing. In fact, "Hurt So Good" was the first song I ever did that did not get speeded up so that my voice would be higher. The producers always speeded up my voice because l have this deep voice. So my range was in the male group range rather than the female range of the '70s. The girls were singing "baby baby" [sings a little of "Where Did Our Love Go"], those little prissy girls. That wasn't me. Otis Redding! He'd get on the stage and stomp. I read an article where Al Green said if they nailed his feet to the floor, he couldn't sing. So I wanted to be like that. I wanted the power. I wanted to take over the whole stage and march back and forth and walk and you couldn't do that in a gown. And the other girls weren't doing that, so I wanted to do that. So I took on the persona of the male artist. Every bump and grind Otis Redding did, I felt like I should be doing it. And I remember I played Spartanburg, South Carolina and I heard people in the audience saying "that ain't no woman that's a drag queen. [laughs] Don't no woman move like that, that's a drag queen. Check out her Adam's apple. No, she ain't got one. Look at her ankles, no she ain't got no big ankles." The whole conversation the whole time I was on stage they were checking out different parts of me and trying to figure out if I was a drag queen because I was wearing pants.

You heard them, so how did that affect what you were doing? How did you get through it?

Well, it was hard to ignore, but I had to keep on pretending I didn't hear it.

Do you think there was a central message to the music of the '70s? Like today a lot of the messages are of anger and hostility...

Yeah, it was there then. The only difference is the music itself is harder now. Marvin Gaye said all the things that are being said now, but he said like "what's happening baby" and "mother, mother there's too many of us crying "We did all those political songs but the melodies were smoother. You heard it and it was said because of flower power and all of that, but you didn't get the feeling that after you heard it you wanted to go out and shoot somebody for doing it to you. It was like, [feigns a properly dignified voice] 'darn! Hc's right, I need to go march [laughs]. We need to have a sit-in [more laughter].' So the music was softer and easier and therefore, the projection of what was being said wasn't as harsh as it is now. You can get on a floor now and be talking about [very rough singing tone] "I love you baby, I want to kiss you baby," and if you didn't hear what he was saying, you (would) want to grab a gun [laughs]. The music says you gotta get on your feet and stomp and come with confrontation. The music does that because of the type of music it is itself.

In terms of the sexual aspect, do you think of the songs you wrote that those were making political statements as well?

Oh, yeah. It's funny because most people think of me as being such a feminist and the truth of the matter is I just say what comes up. I always did, whether it be a male, female or whatever situation. If I feel like saying it, I just say it. It's in a humorous fashion more than anything else because I just think it's funny. I poke fun at all these different things and people take me so serious.

What part do you think you played in the Sexual Revolution?

Well, uh. Roseanne claims that I'm responsible for her comedy career because she says that until she heard my records, she didn't have the nerve to say or discuss the things that I was discussing on stage. Then, she took it and put it in a comedy situation and went further with it. The same thing with Bette Midler. She calls herself the white Millie Jackson. Little Kim calls me Mommy. Basically, there are just a lot of people and I've been told Joan Rivers and a lot of them seem to have gotten the initial initiative to do this because I did it and they said, "no one has killed her, she's still alive [laughs] maybe, I can get away with it." Then, they tried it and got away with it. So, basically, if I contributed anything, I guess that would be

Do you think we've gone too far or is there a limit in terms of what we do, whether it's sexual or whatever?

Yeah. I've heard some stuff on the radio now that I'm amazed it's even being played. They picketed the radio station in New York because I said "funky drawers." When my man comes over to give me my piece, I don't have to wash nobody's funky drawers but my own because he's married. They picketed the radio station for that. They said, "Millie Jackson's on the radio talking about her piece and actually said 'funky drawers.'" And of course everybody said, "why ya'll picketing" and they'd say, "Millie Jackson, she said this" and they said, "she did!" and they head straight up the street to the record store. In fact, I was teasing Al Sharpton the last time I saw him. I said, "You know I haven't had a gold record in a long time. I think it's time you throw some pickets out here in front of me [laughs], can't we get a nice little revolutionary party going along here and picket Millie Jackson for something?" He just laughed and said, "How many you need girl!"

Would you ever date a married man?

Now, I don't think so. I never say never because you don't know where your heart will lead you, but I try to avoid married men now like the plague.

There was a time when you might have?

Oh, there was a time when I did, not might have! I did.

The reason I ask the question is because I'm wondering what you think about the President's dalliance with Monica Lewinsky.

What's the name of that TV show, Just Shoot Me! It's so obvious that they have set him up. It's just a shame that he fell for it. That he didn't realize he was being set up, but I don't care what he does. That's not my business. We got him to be our President, he's supposed to run the country. Good! He's doing a good job running the country. Who he sleeps with I don't care. I would not be upset. He's not sending anybody in here to ask who I'm sleeping with and so I don't care. How many millions of dollars have been spent on this that could have gone towards something more important than who the President is sleeping with? Now, his wife is still with him, why the hell should we care? That's why we can't get a greater choice of presidential candidates. You have to almost be insane to even want to be President and then when you find out that they are human everybody is so upset. What? The man is human and probably a little nuts because he ran in the first place. You got to have a terrible ego or something's got to be a little off with you for you to want to be President because nobody in the their right mind would want to be President. This is insane. Nobody wants their lives scrutinized like

What do you think of her for being with him?

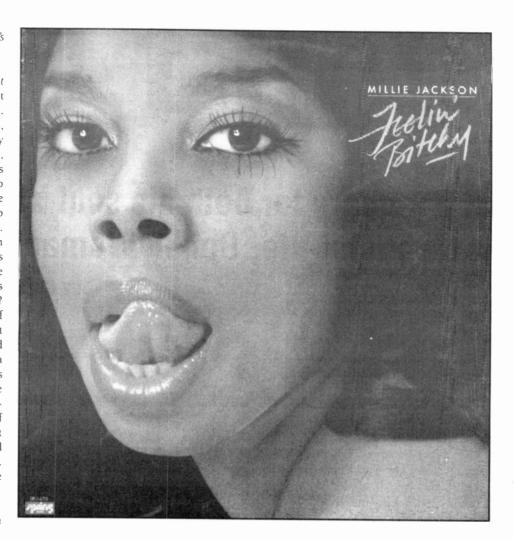

Well, let's face it. The slut had the blue dress on. I refuse to say lady. She's the woman with the blue dress on. Who keeps a dirty dress that long? Who does that and for what reason? You're not going to have it cleaned. If you're too dirty to have it cleaned, are you not going to rinse it out or something? Give me a break. Oh and by the way, let's make sure my girlfriend is taping my phone. You didn't know that? Come on? These are the kinds of friends you have with you where they are going to tape your conversation? For what reason? I can't remember anything I've ever said to a girlfriend of mine that was so important that I would want to tape my phone conversation?

When I think of situations like this, the hypocrisy reminds me of songs like your "A Child of God."

It's hard to believe. Well, let's face it. What did he tell you in the beginning? Who was his idol? JFK. Did you expect the man to have JFK for an idol and not to get any? He tried to warn the people, but nobody listened [laughs].

When you started recording, did you have an image of what kind of singer you wanted to be?

Nah! In fact, if you listen to my first albums, my producer [Raeford Gerald] was a Motown fanatic. Everything from "Ask Me What You Want" to "My Man Is A Sweet Man" all of them sound like Motown sound with that little bouncy, bouncy Motown stuff. Then in 1973 I took over production. I started co-producing my stuff and that's when my first gold album came out. That was Caught Up which had "If Loving You Is Wrong..." and all that stuff on it. I started talking garbage then. I took what I was doing on stage and put it on wax.

So you had been doing that on stage already?

Oh, yeah. I was doing that on stage already, but that came out of the fact that I was scared. You talk about nervous on stage? That was me. I never had any voice training or anything and I sounded horrible. I know I did. I'd be all off key sometimes. But, I found then that people liked me talking better than they did me singing. So I'd sing a little bit of the song and then when I'd start losing them, I'd break the band down and start talking and get 'em back. And then take it back up and start singing again until I get ready to lose them again, then I'd start talking [laughs].

How did you know that would work, or did vou?

I didn't. I just tried. It was trial and error. It always worked. I'm almost there now. People always ask me, "You're so funny why don't you try stand-up?" I need my band because if it's not funny, it's time to hit a song. Now, it's going just the opposite. Before they didn't like my singing, so I had to talk. Now they get tired of me talking and I've got to sing [laughs]. Singing quick soothes the savage beast! [laughs].

How did the record "Act of War" with Elton John come about?

I was in London and I was told through the grapevine that he had spoken to Tina Turner's people. It was written for him and Tina. And she wouldn't do it, so when I landed that was the first message I got. Elton john wants to speak to you in reference to recording a song with him. The rest is history. I just think they didn't know how to promote it because it was good for me because it introduced Elton's fans to Millie Jackson. But, most black people or Millie Jackson fans don't even know that record was out because they never promoted it to R&B or to the side where my fans would know it exists. So it didn't introduce Elton to any of the black audience that wasn't already aware of him, whereas, if they had promoted both sides like they did Boy George and George Michael it would have been a bigger record. Although, it did introduce me to the difference between black and white music. I never heard it on the radio ever. I saw the video once and my first check was $17,000 and I went oh! [feigns surprise, then laughter]. When they said they'd give me a percentage, I'm going yeah I'll get the exposure. What the hell, I'll do it because the video cost over 200,000 pounds and I'm like what money's going to be left? Yeah, right when I get my percentage. After the video is paid for I'm not going to make a quarter. But it's good publicity, I'll do it. I could not believe I actually got money for doing that like the video is paid for, the record is paid for and I got that much money for half a song! And got checks for like four years later I got a check [laughs].

I just wanted to get back to the Feelin' Bitchy album for a minute. Where did the title come from?

I think the record company came up with that title. In the song "All The Way Lover" I sing "I'm feelin' bitchy." They said that's the title. That cover came about because I was tired. I hate photographers. Even when I hire them I hate them. They always want you to do that extra little something. I'm like this is one cover you've shot thirty some rolls of film. How many pictures do you need for one cover? To me it's just useless time. He [Nima Yakubu] said okay we're back and he had reloaded the camera. I licked my tongue out at him because I was sick of playing, tired of taking pictures and I was being stupid And they said this is it! I said what? I was playing with him! "I don't care this is the cover," someone said. That's how we got my tongue hanging all out my head [laughs].

Legendary for both his soul-stirring music and his incredibly turbulent life, Bobby Womack is the ultimate R&B survivor

by Craig Werner

o one experienced or expressed the tensions at the heart of '70s soul more intensely than Bobby Womack. Deeply grounded in the gospel tradition that gave rise to Al Green, Aretha Franklin and his mentor Sam Cooke, Womack understood how soul music spoke to the connections between individuals and communities, between flawed human beings and the healing powers of the Lord. But he also watched as a disturbing number of his friends — Cooke, Marvin Gaye, Janis Joplin, Jimi Hendrix, Sly Stone - fell victim to the pressures of a blues-torn world of casual sex, heavy drugs and a party that, it seemed, would never end. Through it all, Womack never forgot the source of the songs that earned him the nicknames of "The Preacher," "The Poet," "The Survivor" and, simply, "The Womack": "Woman's Gotta Have It," "Lookin' for a Love," "That's the Way I Feel About Cha," "You're Welcome, Stop on By.'

Womack sums up the basic point simply: "You couldn't mail your voice in. You could either put a song across or you couldn't. The musicians weren't old fashioned, but some things should never change when it comes down to touching the heart. Soul music was at its peak, and all of it goes straight back to gospel."

Both soul and gospel singers honed their appeals in fiercely competitive settings. "The difference between today and the '70s is that people competed against each other," Womack reflects. "I'd love to see Aretha go up against Whitney. Not only would she drop 30 pounds, but you'd hear something that you haven't heard from Aretha in a while because she'd say, 'I don't want this young lady to kick my ass.' She loves her but at the same time she got to show her who's boss.

Womack clearly relishes the combination of aggression and friendship he experienced while touring with gospel-based soul luminaries such as Cooke and James Brown.

"They really entertained and became brothers and sisters that loved each other," he says, "But they're saying when I get on that stage you know I'm kicking your ass. We'd sit around backstage and laugh and drink, talk and have fun, play cards whatever. They said, 'Womack, you're on next.' Everything cut, you ain't my friend no more. I'm taking this house. When they leave here they gonna go out saying Womack. I was taught that way. Every time I go out to sing, I go out to sing to fuck an artist up. You wasn't doing it unless you were doing that. I learned it first from gospel. If you can't make them sisters shout, you ain't gonna be comin' back."

Womack traces the heritage to the great gospel vocalists of the '40s and '50s: Claude leter of the Swan Silvertones, Ira Tucker of the Dixie Hummingbirds, and R.H. Harris, Cooke's predecessor as lead vocalist of the Soul Stirrers. You can hear a note of sadness in Womack's voice as he observes, "The gospel singers got a hard road to go. They don't get to fly places, they don't stay in the best hotels, they eat whatever somebody cook for 'em. The saddest part about it is that the new gospel singers do not acknowledge the Blind Boys, they don't acknowledge the Soul Stirrers, the Swanee Quartet, the Silvertones. Those are the guys who made the dirt roads the paved roads."

Even as he pays homage to the ancestors, Womack speaks with candor about the struggles that lead one music industry veteran to comment, "Every time you read about a bad scene in the '70s, it seems like Bobby Womack was there."

"I ain't been a saint," Womack acknowledges. "I went the drug route and craziness along with some crazy people. But I always believed in keeping one foot on the ground. If I got two feet off the ground, then I don't know where I'm at. Ain't no high in the world that good.'

Womack pauses when his thoughts turn to his many friends destroyed by the tensions that, somehow, he survived. Womack is particularly distressed by the creative demise of Sly Stone, who played a crucial role in helping Womack reshape his

"Sly was different," he says, his rich baritone voice with the distinctive raw edge dropping near a whisper. "He wanted to fly. I said, 'Flying, Sly, ain't meant.' We were born near the same day, but he was just so much different from me," Womack continues. "I was the good Pisces, he was the bad Pisces. He would always want to be a gangster, beat somebody up, start a fight. And he always was goin' around looking for security people that was real tough. If you were around his camp, you could feel death and danger. I said, 'Man, there's a lotta good in this guy. I just don't wanna live in fear.' Sly heard the 'mmm-mmm' outta 'uhh-uhh.' He was just a bad little boy, always tryin' to do somethin' that had nothing to do with music.'

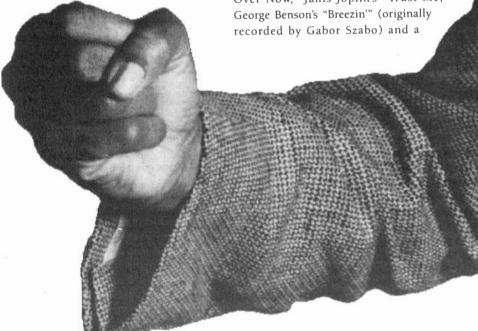

One of Womack's most powerful songs, 'Only Survivor," meditates on the things that kept him from going under while it pays tribute to those who, like Sly, didn't make it. Womack credits Ron Wood of the Rolling Stones with inspiring the song.

"Woodie came to my house and he said, 'Damn, Bobby, seems like every picture you got on your wall is somebody that's dead. You gotta change this atmosphere. You're the only survivor left in this room."

There were times when he wasn't all that sure he would survive. His 1976 classic pear so fast. Daylight done caught my ass up again."

But Womack did survive. He has always had a special place in the hearts of black listeners, many of whom share poet Kalamu ya Salaam's feeling that, when things were at their worst, "there were only two people in the world who really understood my predicament. I was one, and Bobby Womack was

In the pop music world, Womack is as well known for his guitar playing and songwriting as for his singing. His songwriting credits include the Rolling Stones' "It's All Over Now," Janis Joplin's "Trust Me," George Benson's "Breezin'" (originally recorded by Gabor Szabo) and a

"Daylight" captures the weariness that set in on anyone who got too deeply caught up in the cycle of parties and drugs.

"'Daylight' to me was a song about when I used to say, 'Man, I'm sick of partyin'. I'm too tired," Womack recalls. "Every night, every time I go to bed, there's not a time that after the show I didn't say, 'There ain't nobody comin' back to the room, ain't no party.' But someone'd say, 'Rod [Stewart] is out there.' I say, 'Rod's out there? Okay, he can come and he can bring one person.' 'Wilson Pickett's over there.' 'Okay, Pickett can come and hang out with two people.' Before you know it you got ten or twenty people in the room. And we all singin' gettin' high. I say, 'Baby, I ain't lettin' daylight catch me up again.' Before I know it this guy's knockin' on the door and my manager's savin,' 'Come on Womack, take care of your business, man.' And everybody can disapstring of Wilson Pickett hits including "I'm a Midnight Mover" and "I'm in Love." His spare melodic guitar work has graced records by Cooke, Ray Charles, Dusty Springfield, King Curtis, Aretha Franklin and many others.

While Womack's songs deal with the classic tensions at the heart of the blues, he always felt much more at home with styles based more directly on gospel. His awareness of the sources of his ambivalence about the blues crystallized when he met Eric Clapton while playing at a session for Aretha. "Aretha was doing 'Dr. Feelgood' and I was playing on that album [1 Never Loved A Man The Way I Love You-Ed.]," he says. "I'd played on every song of Aretha's and they got to 'Dr. Feelgood.' I knew I couldn't play the blues. I didn't hate the blues, I just didn't want to be no part of no more blues."

"I never played the blues," he continues. "People often ask, why is it that whites support blues more than blacks support their own music. I say it's because blues is poverty to blacks. It was a novelty to whites. They say, 'Let's go hear see some blues tonight, let's go hear B.B. King, let's get in the blues mood.' And they go hear some blues."

In the Cleveland neighborhood where Womack grew up, the blues signified something much more immediate. "When I was coming up as a kid all I heard was 'I ain't got the money, hide the kids, tell the insurance man I ain't home. Tell the rent man Daddy's down the street.' It was always some lie," Womack says. "I remember sometimes my father would say, 'We gonna fast today and thank God for the food we have received.' Only reason we were fasting is there wasn't nothing there to eat. And the only thing I could ever hear was Elmore James. 'Hand me down my walkin' cane.' It went right with my life. I said, boy I'm tellin' ya, he's cryin' the blues and I'm livin' the blues.'

From Womack's perspective, then, the harsh realities of ghetto life made the blues into a fundamentally black thing. But, Womack admits, "Eric Clapton turned me around."

"Eric walked in to the 'Dr. Feelgood' session," Womack continues, "and he says Bobby, would you mind me trying out on this cut?' I'm lookin' at this skinny white boy and I'm thinkin' this is the joke of the year. He was very polite. 'Bobby, do you mind if I use your amp?' I said, 'Man you can have my guitar, my pick, my strings, anything.' So he pulled his guitar out of a pillowcase. It was about 30,000 different colors. And he started playin' the blues on 'Doctor Feelgood' and it actually shocked me to a point that I said, 'Not only are white people prejudiced, blacks too.' My father taught me white people don't know nothin' about no blues. I thought all white people had it good and they didn't have no blues. They didn't even die, they didn't go to no funerals. I was always taught that way, thinking we were just living it.'

Womack continues to believe that race plays a major part in the music industry. He remembers Sam Cooke telling him that "James Brown can be the biggest thing in captivity, black. But if he was white, he'd be bigger than Elvis Presley." Later, he reports, Sly Stone echoed Cooke's strategic point: "Sly had the same theory, 'Bobby, always sing with a mixed band,' Sly said. 'You know why? Mexicans, Indians, Chinese, Japanese, whites, they all got the same feeling when it comes to music. You get a musician, I don't care what color he is. He may have his style, but if you bring him in, he can play yours."

Ultimately, for Womack, the discussion of race and music goes back to one of the most basic lessons of the gospel tradition: that, as Sly wrote in "Everyday People," "we got to live together." Womack concludes: "Sly said, "What it does, it just shows a picture of what the world has gotta be like.' He said you got art and heavy things happening that Mexicans have brought to the country, you got things that blacks have brought to the country. They can't paint a picture that the white man did everything. In many years, it's gonna destroy the country."

As in many other areas of Womack's life,

Sam Cooke played a central role in heightening his awareness of the political impact of his music. "I remember Sam tellin' me, 'You're a hell of a writer, you gotta a great instinct." Womack remembers. "But he said, Bobby, you don't like to read.' I said, 'When I was in school, everything was about George Washington, there was nothin' about what we did. The only time I ever saw a picture of a black man in the history books, he was holdin' a tray.' So I just didn't believe in history. Sam said, 'Yeah, but it would increase your knowledge so much.' Sam read heavily all the time. Soon as we got in town he wanted to know where the black library was. Or a library period. He'd bring all these books and before the next morning, he'd read 'em all. Then he'd say, 'I gotta start makin' some statements.' So, yeah, I always thought about my music in political terms."

From the beginning, Cooke played a crucial role in Womack's musical education. Bobby had begun performing with a family group alongside his four brothers, one of whom — Cecil — has gone on to forge his own niche in soul history as part of Womack and Womack, which he fronts with his wife (and Cooke's daughter) Linda (who has been both Bobby's step-daughter and sister-in-law.) The Womacks' father, Friendly, was a disciplinarian who commanded his family's love and respect. His father played the guitar and supervised his sons' stage act.

"I ran into several of the Jackson Five at an airport recently," Womack said. "And I said, 'My father was just like your father. He'd kick your ass if you didn't remember something. When he told you to step, you had to step like twins."

Cooke's 1952 performance at the Temple Baptist Church in the Womacks' native Cleveland provided the Womacks with their break.

"It was a big church where they brought all of the gospel singers," Womack recalls. "My father walked up to S.R. Crain, who started the Soul Stirrers and he said, 'I got a bunch of young boys, me and my sons. Would you mind lettin' us open up the show.' He said, 'When they grow up and get to be teenagers, bring 'em back, we might give 'em a shot.'

At that point, Cooke walked by. "Sam said, 'What is that about?,'" Womack remembers. "We were all dressed alike as stairsteps. Sam say, 'Doggone right, they gonna open up the show.' Then he said that after we sang, he wanted everybody to march around and before the Soul Stirrers ever hit a note, he wanted to hear some money go into this big purse my mother always carried. They took up something like $83 and that was a lot of money at the time. When we were singin' on stage, singin' a fast tune, we were goin' so fast I didn't know how to stop it. It just kept goin' over and over again."

When Cooke founded his own record label, SAR, with the explicit goal of bringing "real gospel" music to the pop charts, the Womacks were one of his first signings. Recording as The Womack Brothers, they cut a half dozen sides for SAR in 1960 and 1961, including "Somewhere There's a God" (later reworked in good crossover fashion as "Somewhere There's a Girl"), Bobby's composition "Yield Not to Temptation," and the gospel standard "Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray." While none of the gospel records charted, they demonstrated enough promise to convince Cooke to give the brothers — now renamed the Valentinos — a shot in the secular market. After several unsuccessful releases, "Lookin' for a Love" (#72 pop, #8 R&B) gave the group its first hit in 1962.

With "Lookin' for a Love" riding the charts, Cooke turned his attention to the group's development as performers. In retrospect, Womack understands the wisdom of Cooke's decision to send them on the road backing up James Brown. At the time, however, he thought working for Brown was "like being in Hitler's army. He'd always have these drumsticks and when he'd be talking to you, if you looked outta the way, he'd hit ya upside the head with a stick"

"When we made the switch from gospel to secular music, Sam said, 'I want you to go into the Apollo Theater with James Brown.' And I remember him and his partner laughing. And I wondered why they were laughing and he says, 'I can't be as tough on you as James Brown. James don't know you. Man, I love you guys. You'd think I hated you."

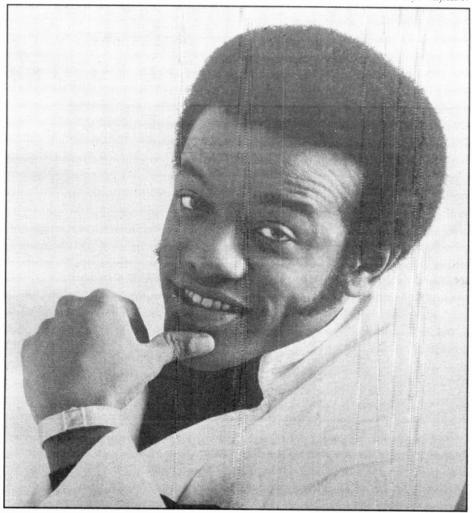

Womack recounts Cooke's explanation of the difference between the demands of performing gospel and soul. "Sam said, 'This is a whole different market. You can't call on Jesus every five minutes, but you still gotta communicate. You got a bigger audience and their minds are everywhere. When people come to church, they all come to try to be saved or something."

However harsh a teacher Brown may have been, Womack fully appreciates the value of what amounted to a graduate education in the theory and practice of soul. "He taught us that when you step, everybody steps together. If you're an inch before the next guy, it looks rehearsed. He said if you got a cold house, there's always somebody that ain't cold that's gonna be jumpin' up. Play off of them to get the other people going. You see one woman runnin' around screaming and hollerin," work with her and before you know it you got the whole audience."

Brown's performances set the standard in a soul scene defined by dynamic performers who consistently challenged one another to reach higher levels. "In those days, every artist took it up a notch," Womack says. "It wasn't that Wilson Pickett came one week and I came the next week. It'd be Bobby Womack, Wilson Pickett, James Brown and Jackie Wilson all on one show. Nobody wanted to look bad, everybody wanted to outdo everybody else. People forgot all about how much they were getting paid. They were just worried about 'Jackie took the house. He tore it up.' When the last showdown came between Jackie and James Brown it was like Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier."

Two years after the success of "Lookin' for a Love," the Valentinos appeared to be on the verge of crossover success when Bobby's composition "It's All Over Now" began receiving airplay on pop stations.

"What happened next," says Womack,

"was that the Stones was over here at Chess Records looking for songs. Our record had just come out and it was very big. The Stones heard it and said, 'Man, we got to cut that song.' Sam came to me and said 'Bobby, I got some good news and bad. The Rolling Stones want to cover your song.' And I said, 'Man, when these Pat Boones gonna stop?'"

While Cooke understood Womack's response, he saw things from a different angle. Womack continues: "Sam said, 'Bobby, they'll do more for your career than you'll ever believe. This group is gonna be huge and the longer they live, the bigger they're gonna get. It's a new thing happening, man, and I can see it already.' So I just said, 'I don't want them to sing the song. Tell 'em to get their own song.' Sam says, 'Bobby, they sell tons of records. This is gonna be the first record that breaks for them in the States. You know what that means? You introduced 'em.'"

Womack wasn't convinced. "I'm sayin', 'Oh, man, I don't care about all that.' So Sam said, 'Well, Bobby, I'm not gonna beg ya no more. I own the publishing. I'm gonna give them the song whether you want to or not.' They came out with 'It's All Over Now' so quick and I was laughin' because some of the words they thought we said, we didn't say. Mick said something totally different. I said, 'This is how a black person talk, the English sound different.' We were laughing, but I was still furious. They took our song and everybody thinks it's their song, never mind Sam talking about it's gonna make me a legend and all that. But I remember the first check I received, it was about $400,000. I been chasing 'em ever since tryin' to get 'em to do one of my songs."

Increasingly in the mid-60s, Bobby focused his personal and creative attention on his mentor. "I was so close to Sam, brothers don't even know," he says, the sense of loss unmistakable in his voice more than three decades after Cooke's senseless death in a shooting at a Los Angeles motel. Beginning in 1964, Bobby was a regular member of Cooke's road band, occasionally playing on studio recordings of songs like the soulful "That's Where It's At."

One of Womack's last memories of Cooke concerns the gospel soul classic "A Change Is Gonna Come." 'Sam called me about eleven or twelve o'clock and said he was driving to my house cause he wanted me to hear something," Womack says. "He said, 'I want you to tell me what you think of this.' When he played the song for me, it scared the shit out of me, man. I thought I'd dreamed it or heard somebody else's record. I said, 'The song sounds like death.' He said,

'Death?' and I said, 'Yeah, sounds like something terrible's happened or something terrible's going to happen.' And he said, 'That's exactly what I felt.' I said, 'It's a beautiful song, it's just scary.' And he said, 'Yeah, that's why it ain't comin' out.' And then two or three weeks later, he got killed."

Cooke's death shattered his young protegee emotionally and, as things worked out, professionally. The professional problem concerned Bobby's marriage to Cooke's widow Barbara, which took place less than three months after Sam's death. Many viewed the "romance" as an attempt to take over Sam's creative legacy and financial estate. Womack dismisses the charges with contempt: "Sam's death just killed me. The first thing I wanted to do was protect his family cause I know how cold this business is. Some people, I can't mention names, were ridin' in the limo to the funeral. All the close people I thought were his friends are there sayin' Sam told me he was gonna give me this, he was gonna buy me a club, he gonna build me a gas station.' I said, 'None of these niggers liked Sam.' And I loved him. They were tellin' me, 'Why don't you shut up all that noise' cause I was cryin."

"When it came down to me marrying his wife, I never knew his wife," Womack continues. "She was just so hurt and outdone that he had went out that way. She was ready to tackle the first thing that was the closest thing to him, that he liked. And that was me. And I was ready to be there because I knew she needed guidance. I knew if I put myself in there, a lot of people were gonna hate me. But if I don't marry this woman, this woman's gonna do something crazy, and she may not be able to get out of it."

Whatever Womack's motivations, the soul music world closed ranks against him, delaying the start of his solo recording career by several years. Rumors persist that DJs at black radio stations simply threw away the records he made for Chess, Keymen, Him, and Atlantic. Womack remembers the years following Cooke's death as an extremely difficult period.

"People started writin' hate letters about me and Sam's wife. His brothers jumped on me and beat me up pretty bad. That's when I started wearin' dark glasses. I could see out but they couldn't see in, couldn't see how scared I am. It's a different thing to step in those shoes like that. All of a sudden, you were a guy who's stepped into a king's place and you're supposed to be as bad as he is to be there."

Unable to break out as a solo artist, Womack fell back on his guitar to make a living, a decision that ultimately lead him to Memphis and Muscle Shoals. "When Sam died, Ray Charles offered me a job to come play with him. Back then I was gettin' such a bad rap as a little hustler, a little pimp. But I was learning."

In retrospect, Womack views the delay in his singing career as a blessing in disguise. "I wasn't ready to jump out on my own until I had learned from some of the pros."

If Cooke and James Brown provided Womack with his education in live performance, Chips Moman played an equivalent role in the studio. "I tell you what," Womack laughs, "if I was after the money, I had no reason to go to Memphis. Memphis was coming out with some great stuff. You had Stax and then you had the Memphis sound of Chips Moman. There were two studios there and they were producing some incredible stuff and basically it was that there wasn't a lot of gimmicks going on."

"I went to Memphis and I stayed at a place called the Trumpet Motel," Womack continues. "My wife Barbara said, 'What is wrong with you? You got a mansion out here and you gonna move into this little dumpy place?' Man, I had to get roach spray to kill the roaches and I put my food in there. So I went down there to [Moman's] American [Studio] and asked if I could play with the studio band. I just loved playin' with these different guys. Every time, it was someone new. Tomorrow it's gonna be Aretha Franklin, the next night it's gonna be Ronnie Milsap. Next time, 'we're caught in a trap' ["Suspicious Minds"] with Elvis Presley. I said, 'Man, this just blows me out. How you guys can turn and transcend into somebody else's sound and sound just like their records.' It was phenomenal."

Memphis finally provided Womack with his solo breakthrough when his 1968 cover of "Fly Me to the Moon," produced by Moman, was released on Minit (#18 R&B, #54 pop). On first glance, it seems surprising that his breakthrough and its two follow-ups ("California Dreamin"," #20 R&B, #43 pop; and "I Left My Heart in San Francisco," #48 R&B) were covers of other people's material. Ironically, the explanation involves the high quality of the songs Womack had written since Cooke's death, all of which wound up being recorded by Wilson Pickett, then one of the biggest stars in Southern soul.

"I went down to Memphis to record all the songs I gave to Pickett. But Pickett and them was sittin' around the studio, they didn't have no songs. They were just sittin' there sayin' 'Hey, man, let's try to re-do this song.' And someone else say, 'Nah, there ain't nothin' in it.' So I said, 'Hey, man, I got a whole bag fulla songs here.' I was waitin' for him to leave cause I was gonna record after that. But when Pickett left, he left with every song I had for my album of songs."

Pickett recorded a total of seventeen Womack compositions including the top-20 R&B hits "I'm in Love," "Jealous Love," "I'm a Midnight Mover," and "I Found a True Love." Womack never regretted giving the material to Pickett.

"Pickett was a star then. I admired him and I was just glad he was recordin' my songs. I wasn't even thinkin' about the money. Hell, these people don't think I got no talent. There's just mad at me cause they're tryin' to compare me with Sam Cooke 'cause I married his wife. But when they keep seein' my name on all of these artists, they're gonna say, 'This boy's got talent'"

"That's how I ended up cuttin' 'Fly Me to the Moon,'" Womack continues. "Pickett was runnin' around sayin' 'Ooo boy, I got smashes. Boy, you can write your ass off.' But I start thinkin' that I gotta do somethin' for my label. They knew I had hits cause I'd played 'em for 'em. I said, 'Man, if I don't go back there with some hits, them guys are gonna kill me' Pickett had taken all my songs, everything I knew. So I was runnin' around the studio and I just started singin' 'Fly Me to the Moon' with the guitar. So the guys started wakin' up one by one going to their instruments, sayin' 'What the hell was that?' I said, 'Man, you know the Tony Bennett version of 'Fly Me to the Moon?' Can you imagine somebody flyin' to the moon slow? Man, he's talkin' about flyin', you'd think he'd be in a hurry. So I'm just gonna take that song up tempo.'"

"I cut 'California Dreamin'. I cut 'I Left My Heart in San Francisco.' I was scufflin' for things to do," Womack concludes. "And the funny thing is 'Fly Me to the Moon' turned out just fine. But Liberty was sayin' 'What happened to them other songs you played for us when you came in.' I said, 'That's them' and they said, 'Well, they sound different.'"

Womack's final Minit singles, "How I Miss You Baby" (#14 R&B) and "More Than I Can Stand" (#23 R&B), maintained his presence on the R&B charts, but he was beginning to immerse himself in the party culture that would provide the ambiguous backdrop of his '70s success. Sly Stone and Janis Joplin were among his new friends.

Although he knew Joplin only briefly, Womack remembers her as "the sweetest lady I ever met. But there was nobody to show her the way or give her inspiration. She was tellin' me 'bout how she was always the ugliest girl in school. 'They always called me that,' she told me. 'They always laughed at me. Honey, let me tell ya somethin',' she said. 'I quit school and went to New Orleans and sung around bars and that's when I started drinkin' and whatever.'" Womack pauses. "She lived a rough life."

Womack and Joplin met when she approached him about the possibility of recording one of his songs. "She called me and said, 'Everybody's done one of your songs, I just wanna say I did one.' I didn't think it was her until (Joplin's producer) Paul Rothschild came on and said it was," Womack says. "So I go down there and she told me, 'This the way we gonna work this Mr. Womack. When I ding the bell, that means I don't like it.' So I'd hit the intro on a song and she'd ding the bell. She didn't even give me a chance to finish it. This goes on and on, she's pullin' my leg. So I went into 'Trust in me' and she didn't ding the bell. She said, 'I love it, let's record it now.' Just like that."

Womack remembers having been with Joplin the evening that she died from what was reported as an accidental heroin overdose. The two had discussed their respective places in the interracial music scene.

"She told me the thing she resented the most in her whole career was people tellin' her she tried to sing like Tina Turner," Womack says. "She said, 'I was scufflin' in New Orleans trying to get paid to sing before I ever heard of Tina Turner.' I said to her, 'Ya know I have a problem gettin' my records on white stations. Why don't we do a tour together.' She said, 'Yeah, that'd be cool.' I said, 'What I'll do is go out on stage and say this woman don't sound like Tina Turner. I'll tell my black people, I'll tell 'em this Janis Joplin, y'all listen to her as Janis Joplin. Then you introduce me to your people.' She was crackin' up, about ready to fall out. I usician, actor, author, record label head and media whipping boy Ice T has worn many hats in his lengthy career. He received his entry into show business when asked to rap in the 1984 film Breakin', and would go on to release a series of influential, street-wise rap albums starting with his 1987 debut LP, Rhyme Pays.

Ice T also is a member of the heavy metal band Body Count, which was the center of a major controversy in 1992 when they released the song "Cop Killer," drawing protests from America's men in blue.

In addition to his recording career, Ice T has appeared over a dozen films, including major roles in New Jack City, Ricochet, Trespass and Johnny Mnemonic.

Ice T is currently the head of Coroner Records, home to a bevy of hip hop artists including Kool Keith of Dr. Octagon fame.

Starting with his most favorite, Ice T's 10 favorite albums of the 1970s:

- 1. The Clones Of Dr. Funkenstein, Parliament
 - 2. The Big Payback, James Brown
- 3. Average White Band, Average White Band
- 4. Skin Tight, the Ohio Players
- 5. Black Sabbath, Black Sabbath
- 6. The Best Of The Delfonics, The Delfonics
 - 7. The Heat Is On, The Isley Brothers
 - 8. Bustin' Out, Rick James
 - 9. Heatwave, Heatwave
 - 10. Houses Of the Holy, Led Zeppelin said, 'That'd be cool. You got a problem, I got a problem. I'm tryin' to cross over and you're tryin' to cross over.' She said, 'Nah, I just don't want them to think I'm tryin' to sing like Tina.'"

Womack continues: "We go back to the hotel and I'm sittin' up tootin' coke and I think she may have tooted some with me. She said, 'I'm waitin' on my thing.' I keep sayin' 'Why you do that stuff?' She said, 'You don't like heroin?' I said, 'Nah, I had that slipped on me one time. You asleep, I don't want to be asleep. You just nod out and all that. Man, I wanna be up.' She said, 'I don't like to be speedy.' We were just talkin' about which drug was best. Anyway, someone called and she was cryin' cause Jimi had died. She said, 'Ya know what? I woulda killed myself, but if I'd did it at the same time he did, I wouldn't a got the publicity."

"After I left I called Paul Rothschild," Womack continues. "And I said, 'Paul, this girl is really hurtin.' She's sick. She needs some help.' He said, 'Bobby, you just met her. You don't know her. She's drinkin' Southern Comfort, isn't she? She cries the same fuckin' blues every time she drinks.' I said, 'But not to get high. I get high to escape, I think I'm escaping. I think she needs somebody to really listen to her.' Anyway, about two, three o'clock that morning, we was sittin' there playin' my record. We'd been talkin' but she said, 'Hey, you're gonna have to go now cause this person's comin' and I don't want you to see them.' I said, 'Well, hell, I don't wanna see them either.' But I was sorta curious to who it was. I heard him comin' up the steps, but I went down the elevator, so I never did see who that person was. Paul Rothschild called me about seven o'clock that morning and said, 'Janis is dead.'

And I said, 'See, I told you.' And he said, 'I knew you was gonna say that.' I said, 'She deliberately killed herself. She was a very broken woman and everybody wanted her to do one thing: draw an audience so they could make some money. That's all they cared about."

Womack's voice takes on a meditative undertone as he considers his own fate in relation to those of Marvin Gave, Janis and Sly. "There's more to entertainers than that," he observes. "They entertain but on the other side there's another person. That's why they end up like that. Some of them escape and some of them don't. Man, it could been me up on the night shift instead of Marvin. I escaped in part because I always stayed married. There was always someone there to say, 'Bobby, don't do that. Don't even go there. Let's go out and see a movie. Or let's have a drink.' Or they would sit with me and they knew I wouldn't mess with nothin' else 'cept coke."

Womack's popularity soared once he signed with United Artists in 1971. The series of albums Womack released beginning with Communication (1971) and Understanding (1972) and extending through Looking for a Love Again (1975) rank alongside those of Al Green, Curtis Mayfield, and Aretha Franklin as high points of '70s deep soul. "That's the Way I Feel About Cha" (#2 R&B, #27 pop) initiated a string of a dozen top-20 R&B hits, nine of which also made the pop charts. Most of the songs chart the ups and downs of male-female relationships, among them "Woman's Gotta Have It" (#1 R&B, #60 pop); Womack's solo remake of the Valentinos' "Lookin' for a Love" (#1 R&B, he man never had a clue who was watching him.

Gamble & Huff

He must have thought Boots, a little club in Philadelphia, would be a private place to meet his girlfriend. Certainly his wife would never find him there. Hopefully her husband wouldn't find her there. The man would show up, his girlfriend a half hour later, they would sit at the same table, eat the same food, then leave at separate times. And the man never knew that Kenny Gamble and Leon Huff took lunch at that same time, in that same club. He probably never knew that his luncheon routine with his mistress was so unchanging and so distinctive that it caught Gamble and Huff's attention.

Kenny Gamble still remembers those luncheons today. "There used to be a guy coming in the same time every day to meet this girl. The guy would come in the club the same day, they'd play the same song —

"They probably ate the same meal," added Leon Huff, his songwriting and business partner for 30 years.

"Then after they would leave," replied Gamble. "He would go one way, she would go the other way. So one day, we just said, 'Me and Mrs. Jones.' That's what it was. And then we'd come upstairs, got on the piano, wrote Me and Mrs. Jones.'

"We didn't know what their personal lives were based on." Huff said. "We just saw two people create this same pattern every day. So we started noticing, started laughing at it."

"But you know," finished Gamble, "it's just like today - it's all in the White House and everything. When Paula Jones was on TV one day, they were playing Me and Mrs. Jones when she was getting off the plane. That song was apropos for that situation."

Such were the songs of Kenny Gamble and Leon Huff, arguably the most proficient and diverse writers and producers of pop and soul music in the 1970's. Their songs of peace, love, social conscience and turmoil sold millions of records, made superstars out of artists that had previously toiled in obscurity, and created the sweet, sexy, stirring, socially conscious "Philly Soul" sound. Today, the Philadelphia International studios is once again alive with action, as a new distribution deal with EMI and a new stable of young artists are ready to bring the Philly Soul sound back to the top of the charts.

Kenneth Gamble was born in 1943 in Philadelphia, and even as a young man, music was part of his life (he cut his first records at penny arcade recording booths; he used to bring coffee to WDAS morning personality Georgie Woods). In the late 1950's, he fronted a band called Kenny Gamble and the Romeos, with keyboard player Thom Bell. They played and performed at all the local clubs, and later added a new keyboardist in session musician. Leon Huff (born in Camden, NJ, 1942).

"Great, great band, the Romeos," Huff said. "I just had to get in that band, because it was just such a great band. They worked everywhere, they worked with a lot of famous recording stars. We didn't have any records out yet, we were just that good. That was one of the best eras - me as a musician — that I can remember in that career. Being a member of that band made me feel like I had learned my craft as a keyboard player. The guys in the band were great musicians, really self-taught talented guys, raw and they could play anything. So I had to get in that band, because everywhere they worked at when I got in as a member, the club stayed crowded, everybody came to hear us play and hear Gamble sing. It was just a great

"We learned a lot just being that unit," said Gamble, "we played in Philadelphia, the Delaware Valley, doing a lot of road gigs with famous people, Chubby Checker, Little Anthony and the Imperials, we did a lot of road gigs for a lot of different bands. It was a great experience, it was a growth period."

While with the Romeos, Gamble and Huff discovered they had a shared love of songwriting and composing. "When me and Huff first got together, the first time we wrote, we must have wrote ten songs. We were writing some songs for another group, the Sapphires. Ten songs in one sitting. And it's been like that ever since."

During this time period, Gamble and Huff absorbed everything they could in the music industry — songwriting, production, composition, arranging — whatever it took. Huff played keyboards for Phil Spector and for the Ronettes; Gamble operated a record store on the corner of Broad and South Streets. But they still kept in touch, writing songs and sharing ideas.

By 1964, Gamble and Huff had their first production credit, "The '81," a little-heard single by Candy & the Kisses. "We wrote 'The '81,' Huff had the other side of that, 'Two Happy People.' We were just starting to work in the studio. At that time, we weren't even producers then. We were working with other people, Jerry Ross and Johnny Madera and Dave White, these were guys who were producers, and we were just writers trying to be producers, trying to find out what a producer does. And when we found out what a producer's responsibility was, then we became producers '

"The '81" didn't hit the Top 40, but it did open new avenues for Gamble and Huff, and soon their songs were being recorded by established artists - and then re-recorded by bigger artists. A song they had written for Dee Dee Warwick, "I'm Gonna Make You Love Me," was later covered note-for-note by the superstar pairing of the Supremes and the Temptations, and taken into the Top 10.

"We didn't work with the Temptations and the Supremes directly," said Gamble. "They took that song from Dee Dee Warwick's record Dee Dee's record came out and didn't do that well. It was a good record, Dee Dee Warwick did a good job with it, but it just didn't happen. One day I was riding home, and lo and behold, on the radio, they say there's a new record by Diana Ross and the Supremes and the Temptations, 'I'm Gonna Make You Love Me,' and I almost crashed the Ford. Hearing that song sung by them was beautiful, I enjoyed that, it was like a lift. They took that song to where it

"That was a standard to reach to," added-Huff. "We wrote that song quick, in 15-20 minutes, so it was just a good feeling with that song."

Gamble and Huff now had something on their resume - co-writing credit on a

"Love Train' was about the world, it was like peace in the world, people getting together. That's what our whole thing was, (what) all our music was about; people uniting, living together in peace and harmony, and having fun." -Kenny Gamble national hit. In 1966, they would "hit very talented, they were like the Young producer" to their resume.

In the mid-1960's, many of the Philadelphia music impressarios would gather for card games at disc jockey Jerry Blavat's house on Overbrook Avenue. At one of those meetings, Blavat suggested to Gamble that he should consider producing a local group, the Soul Survivors. Gamble and Huff arranged some recording time at Cameo-Parkway Studios, and brought the Soul Survivors in to record a custom-written song, "Expressway To Your Heart." With its car-horn introduction, thick bouncing bass, and plaintive, emotional vocals by Charles and Richard Ingui, "Expressway To Your Heart" (Crimson 1010) drove up the charts to the Top 10.

"People were putting all kinds of sound effects on records during those days," said Huff, "With 'Expressway,' it seemed like cars would just be good for them."

"And it worked," replied Gamble.

"Yeah it worked, it worked good."

"You were dealing with a white artist being produced by so-called 'black' producers," said Gamble, "and that was something that people couldn't understand. But we knew basically what we were doing, we were basically interested in the talents - when they were working around here in Philadelphia, every club they worked in, they had lines around the corner. Before they ever had a record out, they had a following in Philadelphia. That brought our attention. The Soul Survivors were wonderful people. We still see them now and again. They're Rascals, and like the Righteous Brothers."

With "Expressway To Your Heart" selling millions of copies, Gamble and Huff continued to freelance songs and production work, creating pop tunes for artists whose records were in a creative slump. Dusty Springfield, Joe South, Wilson Pickett Laura Nyro - all these artists received successful Gamble-Huff songs, production work - or both. "We called Jerry Wexler at Atlantic Records," said Gamble, "and told them we have a song for Archie Bell, who already had a tune called 'Tighten Up.' We went to New York, and got with Jerry Wexler. They didn't have a direction for Archie Bell anyway, because 'Tighten Up' was like a left field hit. We came up with T Can't Stop Dancing' (Atlantic 2534) and we went up there and recorded it in the Altantic studios. We took our band, the Romeos, Carl Chambers, Roland Chambers, all of us. And we cut 'I Can't Stop Dancing."

'We were the Drells on that record," Huff said with a smile. "We thought it was a great deal to work in Atlantic Studios. When I first walked into Atlantic Records, I was thrilled to death. It was something you read about, and people that you read about and thought you knew before you actually met them. So going into Atlantic, we were going into some heavy territory in terms of black music. We used to read their names on a lot of records - Ahmet Ertegun and Jerry Wexler and Lieber and Stoller, they were heavies. So went wah-wah-wah! I had to go lie down. I'm all better now.

Oh yeah, whilst I'm here (I know you guys are probably sick and tired of people writing in and asking you to do a story on so and so. And so, please do some kind of big write up or cover story on Tito Larriva. He's really great but very overlooked — I can't find anything on him. (Wish I had a computer.) Have you guys ever done anything on him in the past? I would be very interested and appreciative of any information you or anybody can give me on this talented musician.

Imperial Records' first 45s

As a new collector of R&B music, 1 am finding it difficult to ascertain exactly when Imperial Records first started to produce 45 r.p.m. records, particularly by Fats Domino. A respected dealer has told me that his first 45 r.p.m. release was Imperial 5044, but that there were no further such releases until Imperial 5180.

I should be eternally grateful for any information that you can provide as to which Fats Domino early releases were actually issued on 45 r.p.m.

Chris Brougham
 London, England

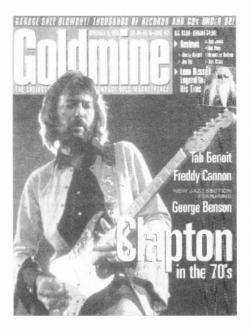

{Imperial released several dozen 45s for Fats from 1950 to 1970. There are three documented releases numbered prior to Imperial 5180: 5058-"The Fat Man"/"Detroit City Blues"; 5099-"Korea Blues"/"Every Night About This Time"; 5167-"You Know I Miss You"/"You'll Be Gone." These, and other Domino 45s, are listed in the new Standard Catalog of American Records by Tim Neely, due back from the printers later this fall and available directly through Goldmine. If your dealer friend can send us a photocopy of both sides of Imperial 5044, we would appreciate it. Address all info to Tim Neely, Goldmine, 700 E. State Street, Iola, WI 54990. — Ed.]

David Cassidy - more than a teen idol

I want to thank you and Amy Hansen for another well-done, complimentery interview with David Cassidy in your September 15th issue. You could tell that Amy knew her stuff on the various aspects of David's career and she didn't dwell on the "teen idol" David, but rather the "serious musician" David, having him talk about his new CD, Old Trick, New Dog, his past affiliations with the late Mick Ronson and David Bowie, permitting him to reveal the stifling situation he went through with Bell and RCA Records, and how he has now found happiness in his life being able to show people his true talent and what he really can do when given the chance.

Goldmine was one of the few publications that treated David with respect when you printed an interview with him in the early 90s, and I am very pleased to see that your respect continues in the present.

Goldmine #473, Sept. 11, 1998 featuring Freddy Cannon

A Freddy Cannon fan forever

Thanks for your story on singer Freddy Cannon (Goldmine #473, Sept. 11, 1998). It brought back happy memories and that's what I enjoy about Freddy's music — it's upbeat happy rockin' sound.

Coming home from school back in '62 and '63 to see Freddy on American Bandstand perform his latest singles like "Palisades Park," "Patty Baby," "Everybody Monkey." Besides making the old song "Way Down Yonder In New Orleans" a big hit, he was able to record lots more of the older pop songs and make them brand new again with his rockin' uptempo sounds — songs like "California Here I Come," "My Blue Heaven," "For Me And My Gal" and "Southtown USA." I thought Freddy should have recorded the old song "If I Were A Beautiful Doll" But Donnie Brooks did and had a hit with it in '61 or '62. (Brooks' "Oh You Beautiful Doll" came out in 1962. — Ed.)

I wish these things had been mentioned in the story. How many records did "Palisades Park" sell, did it make #1, who did the arrangement on "Palisades Park" with the roller coaster sound idea? Who was the lead guitar player on his song "Buzz Buzz A-Diddle It?" It was like the guitar licks on his song "Abigal Beecher."

Thanks, Freddy Cannon for the enjoyment your music gives me. A fan forever.

Jimmie Spheeris wanted

I'd like to second L.W. Buxton's request in issue #472 (Goldmine August 28, 1998) for an article on Jimmie Spheeris. I also wrote in a few years ago to request such an article, with the addition of Brian Protheros and Keith Christmas, all highly literate singer/songwriters in the '70s tradition. The only additional info on Jimmie Spheeris I can offer is the fact that I read an article a few years ago about his sister, film-maker Penelope Spheeris (Decline of Western Civilization 1 & 2), that stated he was dead. By the way, Isle of View was on Columbia, not Epic, and it is also a masterpiece in my humble opinion

1.000's MORE SOUNDTRACKS!

We recently purchased the entire inventory of Keith McNally, one of the world's leading soundtrack dealers, and author of "McNally's Price Guide for Soundtrack Records". There are 100's of soundtracks already listed on our website (www.rockaway.com), and we will be adding more weekly. There are also over 1,500 af the more common soundtracks for sale in our retail store. Most of these are priced between $3 - $10. Sorry, no list is available. Please call or send "want lists."

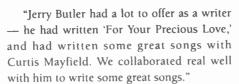

We also purchased his remaining stock of price guides, which originally sold for $29.95, we are now selling them for only $9.95 (Dealers: call for wholesale price)

when you get a chance to actually meet them, let alone working with them, then you feel as though you've made some strides in your career."

Another stride came when Gamble and Huff began a successful collaboration with Jerry Butler. The former lead singer of the Impressions had not had a hit in some time, and in fact was reduced to recording a syrupy version of his original debut hit "For Your Precious Love." One night, Butler was performing at Pep's, a popular club in Philadelphia that was adjacent to Kenny Gamble's record store. "I went into Pep's one day, and said 'Jerry, we've got some songs for you, we'd like you to listen to them.' We played for him a song called 'Lost, But Found In The Nick of Time.' It was nice, it had a nice bass line to it and everything."

"Plus," added Huff, "we had 'Expressway To Your Heart,' so people were starting to notice us a little bit."

One of those collaborations, "Only The Strong Survive," became a monster hit on both the pop and R&B charts. The earliest nuances of "Philly Soul" — meaty lyrics of family and survival; a chorus of strings duetting with a thumping bass, and a melody borrowed from equal parts gospel, soul and doo-wop — could be found in this song. But the record also rejuvenated Jerry Butler's career and provided him with a new image — the "Iceman," someone that wouldn't give up, no matter how many times she broke his heart.

"Only The Strong Survive' was later covered by Elvis Presley," said Huff. "That was a big plus for us, we were proud that Elvis covered that song."

After more successful writing and producing efforts, Gamble and Huff felt the time was right to start their own record label. With financial help from the Krass Brothers clothing store, Gamble Records was born. The song "(We'll Be) United" (Gamble 201) by a local doo-wop band with a successful following, the Intruders, became the new label's first release. Another single, "Cowboys To Girls" (Gamble 214) became a #1 R&B and Top 10 pop hit.

#1 R&B and Top 10 pop hit.

"I always loved the Intruders ever since I was in high school," said Gamble. "They were a favorite in Philly for years. Something happened with their agreement with Mercury Records, their production company didn't work out too good, so that left the Intruders without a deal. So we pursued them, and that was the first group that we really started extensive rehearsals with. We used to go over to Huff's house and rehearse all night long, writing songs together, "(We'll Be) United," "Together," "Cowboys To Girls," all those songs, they were well-rehearsed."

"You know what inspired those rehearsals?" added Huff. "The Intruders could really sing. They could harmonize— it wasn't really hard for us to rehearse them, once they got the parts, they knew the parts. They had the best harmony— I listen to their records now, and their harmony was just so good. And Little Sonny (Samuel Brown, the Intruders' lead vocalist) had such a unique voice. I was listening to his songs the other day, and I haven't heard a voice like that since."

Even in those early years, Kenny Gamble and Leon Huff had a talented supporting cast of musicians, writers, arrangers and singers. Thom Bell, who previously worked with Gamble and Huff in the Romeos, was a classically-trained pianist since the age of six. Under Bell's classically-trained ear, strings and horns and guitars decorated the Gamble-Huff compositions like ornaments and tinsel on a Christmas tree. Bobby Martin's jazz background helped him arrange spectacular horn sections for Gamble-Huff productions, and he could keep the rhythm and percussion flowing no matter how complicated the melodies got.

Joe Tarsia, an engineer at Cameo-Parkway Studios who turned the dials for Chubby Checker, Bybby Rydell, the Orlons and the Dovells, later became Gamble and Huff's engineer of choice ("Cowbovs To Girls" was the first Gamble-Huff song Tarsia engineered). In 1968, when Cameo-Parkway went bankrupt, Tarsia built his own recording studio, Sigma Sound Studios, near the Philadelphia Convention Center. Gamble and Huff produced Jerry Butler's single "Only The Strong Survive" at Sigma Sound; it was the first of many songs they would produce at the corner of North 12th and Race streets. "We were always working with Joe Tarsia," said Gamble. "We worked with him even before Sigma Sound started, at Cameo-Parkway.'

Gamble and Huff also acquired a stable of writers and producers from Cameo-Parkway. Bunny Sigler, whose 1967 Top 20 R&B hit with "Let The Good Times Roll & Feels So Good," was rising up the charts when Cameo-Parkway went bankrupt, signed on with Gamble and Huff, initially as a singer.

"We used to be over at the Marion Theater, that used to be called the Schubert Theater," remembers Sigler. "Allan Klein bought Cameo-Parkway, and I was left in limbo for a while. While I was waiting to get contracts straightened out, I was walking around the halls of the Schubert Theater, singing and playing the guitars. At the time, I was studying martial arts, and when you first study, you get all crazy, you start punching the walls and stuff. Someone came in the office and said, 'who is this crazy guy in the hallway doing karate?' So to get me out of the hall. Gamble told me to go in a room and start writing for somebody. The first song l wrote was for Wilson Pickett, 'International Playboy.' And I've been writing ever since."

While the Intruders had hits on Gamble Records, a second label, Neptune, was created in 1968 for distribution through the Chess/Checker/Cadet label. Before long, Gamble and Huff had assembled a small stable of artists for Neptune, including jazz singer Billy Paul; the female trio called The Three Degrees; and a Canton, Ohio quartet originally signed to Imperial, the O'Jays. The partnership between Chess and Neptune produced some R&B hits, but before the Neptune artists could really establish themselves, Chess president Leonard Chess passed away.

"Our original distribution deal with Chess started out great," said Gamble. "But when Leonard Chess passed away, things got more complicated. And at that time, independent distribution was drying up. There wasn't much independent distribution out there. So we tried to find another distributor."

And this time they wanted a major label. Independent distribution meant you were only as successful as your last single; albums that could be played on progressive FM stations meant more musical diversity, as well as financial stability. While Gamble and Huff were looking for another distributor for their music, major labels in the early 1970's were looking for as many R&B artists as they could find. Labels like RCA and Warner Bros. and Columbia and A&M were discovering what Atlantic and Motown and Stax/Volt already knew - R&B artists that are well-promoted and supported by major labels will return big hits and bigger profits. By 1972, Gamble and Huff met with Clive Davis, the head of CBS, and the three hammered out a new deal. Gamble and Huff would produce and record new R&B artists that would receive distribution through CBS. The corporate giant, in turn, gave Gamble and Huff an advance of $75,000 for 15 singles, and $25,000 per album.

"Clive Davis was the kind of a record guy who knew what was going on in the music business," said Huff. "So I think Clive Davis was aware of Gamble and Huff's independent track record as producers/songwriters. Clive Davis knew about our talents, and he knew about our consistency, because we were pretty consistent with our production company. And I think he was more excited about starting a relationship with us than we were with him. Because Clive Davis respects talent. It's a proven factor today. I think Clive was looking for us, more so than we were looking for national distribution."

Within weeks, the old Cameo-Parkway building at 309 South Broad Street now had a new musical tenant — Philadelphia International Records. Gamble and Huff brought all their talent from their Neptune and Gamble labels — The O'Jays, The Three Degrees, The Intruders and Billy Paul — and went to work.

The O'Jays had performed on stage for years, first as the Triumphs, then in Cleveland as the Mascots (where they took the name "The O'Jays" to honor Eddie O'Jay, the local disc jockey that gave them their first break). They had some early R&B hits on the Imperial and Bell labels, songs like "I'll Be Sweeter Tomorrow (Than I Was Today)" and "Lipstick Traces (On A Cigarette)." By 1972, they were a lean, mean trio of Walter Williams, William Powell and Eddie Levert, and Gamble and Huff wanted a song for them that would, with PIR's new distribution deal, make the O'Jays superstars.

"The O'Jays," said Gamble, "was a group that had had hits before, 'Lipstick Traces' and stuff like that. They were like the Intruders to me, a favorite group of mine. I used to see them all the time at the Uptown. So me and Huff said, 'these guys have got great voices, they just need great songs.' They seemed to be the kind of act that would lend towards our songwriting, and so what we decided to do, we went up to Cleveland, me and Huff, we went to talk to them, we played some songs for them, and worked with them, and we sorta blended together immediately."

By July 1972. Leon Huff wrote the song "Back Stabbers" with Gene McFadden and John Whitehead, two former members of Otis Redding's touring band, The Epsilons, who were hired by Gamble and Huff for their songwriting abilities. "We had to almost force the O'Jays to sing it," said Gamble, "they didn't like it. When I first heard it, I said 'hey, this is a smash.' I felt it, when they were doing it. And the O'Jays said, 'naw, we don't like that one.' But then we said 'Let's try it, and and see what happens."

From the first rat-a-tat pounding of Leon Huff's fingers on that one piano key, to the classical-yet-soulful orchestrations of Thom Bell, to the musical background by a 42-piece house orchestra culled from the Romeos, club musicians and the Philadelphia Symphony, to Eddie Levert's impassioned plea that somebody get these knives out of his back, "Back Stabbers" was a #1 R&B hit, a Top-5 pop hit, and a clarion call to Detroit and Memphis and New York and Muscle Shoals — there was a new home of soul music, in the shadow of William Penn's statue.

"Back Stabbers" was the O'Jays' first top 10 on the pop charts; their second release, a Gamble-Huff collaboration called "992 Arguments," became a solid R&B hit. But it was the third release, "Love Train," that gave the O'Jays their first across-the-board #1 hit. "I knew 'Love Train' was special when we were rehearsing it," said Huff, "writing it ourselves, me playing it and Gamble singing it. Right up against the wall in Gamble's office, that's where the piano was. We wrote a lot in Gamble's office."

"'Love Train' was about the world," replied Gamble. "It was like peace in the world, people getting together. That's what our whole thing was, (what) all our music was about; people uniting, living together in peace and harmony, and having fun."

"The way it was grooving, and we were writing it — the way I was playing it and the way Gamble was singing it, the words were just flowing out, like a spontaneous thing. All those elements — "

"We could have put more countries in it," smiled Gamble.

If the O'Jays were the socially conscious voice of Philadelphia International, Harold Melvin and the Blue Notes were the emotional voice. A popular Philadelphia doo-wop group for 20 years, with R&TB hits on the Josie, Value and Landa labels, Harold Melvin and the Blue Notes signed with Philadelphia International in 1972.

"Gamble was connected with the Blue Notes really closely," remembered Huff. "Most of those guys' home was in Philly, especially Harold's. It was very special, goes way back. Harold Melvin was always connected with good singing groups, so sooner or later it was a natural thing for us to hook up."

"I know that Harold had been constantly trying to find a lead singer. Me and Huff would always tell him to replace this person, replace that person, he was trying to put the right group together. One day I came into the office and Huff said, 'Man, I just rehearsed Harold's drummer on this song, "I Miss You," and he sounds great."

That drummer, Teddy Pendergrass, became the lead vocalist for the Blue Notes.

His distinctive singing voice, which coated emotion and sensuality and passion into every syllable, was just the hook to bring Harold Melvin and the Blue Notes to the top of the pop and soul charts. "Harold Melvin was a guy who could take three ordinary people and make a group out of them," said Gamble. "You didn't have to sing that good either, with Harold. You could dance, have some showmanship or whatever. Harold Melvin was a very extremely talented person in putting together these groups."

And the songs for Harold Melvin and the Blue Notes played to their strengths — hit songs like "If You Don't Know Me By Now." "Yesterday I Had The Blues," "The Love I Lost" and "Bad Luck" — songs that showcased the Blue Notes' harmonies and Teddy Pendergrass' impassioned voice.

Behind groups like the O'Jays and Harold Melvin and the Blue Notes, behind Billy Paul and the Intruders and the other Philadelphia International artists, was a top-notch house band that evolved from Gamble and Huff's old hand the Romeos Whereas Motown had the Van Dyke Six, and Stax had Booker T and the M.G.'s, MFSB (Mother, Father, Sister. Brother) played on not only the Philadelphia International hits, but also on tracks by the Spinners, the Delfonics, the Stylistics, and other bands who visited the Sigma Sound studios. MFSB evolved from Gamble and Huff's old band, the Romeos. They played under various names in the late 1960s - as the "Music Makers," they had a charting hit with an instrumental version of the Intruders' "(We'll Be) United." As Cliff Nobles & Co., they had a Top 5 hit with "The Horse." "MFSB was the Romeos," said Huff, "It was just built on with horns and strings. They played for a lot of people, and they would get the same results that they did when they were with us. As time went on, people were coming from all over the world, trying to get with what they thought was the Philly Sound with this band."

"Musicians could make a good living in Philadelphia playing different records," added Gamble.

"There were sessions almost every night. There were a lot of producers in this town that would use certain select guys. Thank God I was one of them. The majority of the records that were being made in Philly were being played by the Romeos. We were what you would call the prime musicians here in Philly, just like if you would go anywhere else, Motown, New York, you had prime musicians. It was not a clique, but if you were a good musician, people just wanted to

"Plus the musicians played on a couple of hit records. If you played on a couple of hit records, then everybody would want the musician to play on them. It was a lot of work, but it all paid off, and we worked hard to put that stuff together. We worked hard to write those songs, and we had a good distributor in CBS. All the pieces fit at that time, everything was there."

"When the Romeos split up for a while," said Huff, "they all went to play for some really strong artists. Carl Chambers went with Gladys Knight and Steve Wonder, Roland Chambers went with Marvin Gaye, and Gamble and I just went off into our thing."

"Roland Chambers was here from time to time, then we had Roland Harris, Ronnie Baker, Earl Young, and MFSB kept moving."

(Gamble and Huff from page 32)

And by 1974, MFSB had a hit of their own. "Don Cornelius was a friend of ours," said Gamble, "he used to put all of our acts on Soul Train. We talked to him once or twice, told him that we had a theme song for him. He came into Philly one Saturday, came into the studio, and we cut two different versions of the song, but it didn't come off right. The second day, we had a sing-along part — 'Soul Train, Soul Train,' and then we came up with that base line, and that was it. We cut the track, and then we put the Three Degrees on it. We were trying to break the Three Degrees and trying to get them going, so we thought this would help them."

The "Soul Train" theme was so popular that Gamble and Huff released it as a single, "TSOP (The Sound Of Philadelphia)," which shot to #1 on almost every chart it entered. The song's name change not only reflected the music of Philadelphia and of MFSB, but it also represented the sound and spirit of the City of Brotherly Love — it was freedom at Independence Hall, the vibrations of the Liberty Bell, the locomotive rhythm of a SEPTA subway train, the ebb and flow of a Flyers wrist shot and a Phillies triple and a Sixers layup. When Dick Clark hosted American Bandstand from Philadelphia, the common phrase was that it had a good beat and you can dance to it. With "TSOP," the beat was spectacular and you couldn't sit still to it.

Inside the Philadelphia International studios, writers worked day and night to compose the best songs. Dexter Wansel had originally signed with PIR as a member of the hand Yellow Sunshine. He later stayed with the company as a writer and arranger.

"What people can't forget is that it was really Gamble and Huff, and Thom Bell," Wansel said. Here were three music giants they didn't have to relinquish any production or writing, because essentially they could do it themselves. Being here with those guys, for me, was a real eye-opener. If I wanted to compete as an arranger, guess who I was competing with? I was competing against Thom Bell, I was competing against Jack Faith, Vince Montana, Bobby Martin — and as a writer, I was competing against Bunny Sigler and Gamble and Huff and Thom Bell and Linda Creed and Joe Jefferson, all these great writers. It was a great place to create, and a great time to be creative."

It was an extended family, bound together by not only blood, but by hard work, including rehearals into the middle of the night so that when recording time came, the singers knew the words cold. Everything had to be synchronized — even in the engineering booth.

"They used to have ten guys in here," said Craig White, a current engineer for Philadelphia International, "before we had automation, where you could control all the mixing through a computer. You had four or five guys in here, grabbing a group of faders. Everybody was responsible for three or four tracks. You had to do your moves correctly, or else you had to go back to the beginning and do it again."

"We were rehearsal fools," said Leon Huff. "We rehearsed, rehearsed, rehearsed. Great results come from that. I don't where all that energy came from — the energy that was put into those rehearsals. I don't know if the average man can hold out from all those long hours. We rehearsed for hours and hours and hours, and stay up half the night listening to the rehearsal on the tape. We didn't get to bed until 3, 4 in the morning. But I wasn't tired. There was another kind of energy. And then you've got to get up and be in the studio at 10:00. And that's how that cycle was. I don't care how late you stayed out, how late you hung out, but you better be in the studio ready to perform the next day. It was regimented. What made it easy was the love for it."

"A lot of people say when you go into the studio, you just have to sing," said Bunny Sigler. "But Eddie Levert and William Powell of the O'Jays were performing in the studio. If you hear them, you could almost see them performing. One of the songs I wrote for them, "Just Let Me Make Love," we tried to make that have a live sound in the studio. I remember Gamble saying that Eddie Levert performs — when you hear him, you can see him perform "

By the end of 1974 Kenny Gamble, Leon Huff and Thom Bell were the top three pop and soul producers, having placed more than 20 hits on the charts that year (Bell's production credits included the Stylistics and the Spinners, who recorded for other labels). Two years after its creation, Philadelphia International was the second-largest African-American owned company in USA. just behind Motown. PIR's songs were also reaching an appreciative international audience. Although the Three Degrees had a major hit in America with "When Will I See You Again," the trio's song was so popular in England that, during a stop on their European tour, the Three Degrees were presented a gold record by Her Highness, Princess

Within the music industry, other artists were trying to mine that same Philly hitmaking sound — whether it meant David Bowie or Todd Rundgren recording at Sigma Sound Studios or at the newly-refurbished Philadelphia International Studios; whether it meant "borrowing" MFSB for a track or two; copping beats, riffs and even whole introductions (the intro to the Eagles' "Take It To The Limit" sounds suspiciously similar to "If You Don't Know Me By Now").

Such an explosion of popular music from Philadelphia International was also noticed by other people — the United States government. In 1975, Gamble and Huff, along with some of their partners and business associates, were charged with providing money and gifts to various disc jockeys in exchange for favorable airplay.

"I think it made us stronger musically," said Huff. "We felt that we hadn't done anything wrong. I think it was unfair what they were doing, but they got their reasons for doing whatever they were doing."

And the O'Jays sung Gamble and Huff's latest compositions into the Top 10. "For The Love of Money" (PIR 3544), featured a devastating wa-wah guitar and a backward-echoed chorus (the O'Jays' vocals were recorded, then the tape was flipped over and played backwards. One of the recording channels was left open, creating a recorded echo. Then the tape was flipped over again, creating the "fade-in" chorus). Another track, "Rich Get Richer," from the O'Jays' Survival album, took its inspiration from Ferdinand Lundberg's book The Rich and the Super-Rich.

In 1976, Gamble and Huff were brought into court to answer payola charges. The government was out for blood --- earlier in the year, four executives at Brunswick Records were convicted of mail fraud and conspiracy in a similar payola scandal. According to Variety, Gamble admitted he had given "gratuities" to some radio station employees - some clothing, airline tickets and cash - but denied that it was for favorable airplay. But rather than risk a jury trial (especially after the Brunswick convictions), Gamble and Huff's parent company, Assorted Music, pleaded nolo contendere in exchange for dismissal of most of the indictment and a $45,000 fine.

Their legal battle behind them, Gamble and Huff went back to creating hits at Philadelphia International. But now their own artists were suffering from internal problems.

William Powell of the O'Jays had been battling cancer, and by the mid-1970s could no longer tour. He continued to record with the O'Jays, but was replaced on tour by Sammy Strain, a former member of Little Anthony and the Imperials. On May 26, 1977. William Powell finally walked from his Canton home up the stairway to heaven.

Meanwhile, Teddy Pendergrass wanted to leave the Blue Notes for a solo career. Harold Melvin took his band to ABC Records, while Gamble and Huff signed Pendergrass to a solo contract.

But Philadelphia International survived and continued to grow through all this turmoil. New voices joined the label and began working with Gamble and Huff. Lou Rawls had been a professional singer for 20 years (that's his voice backing up Sam Cooke on "Bring It On Home To Me"), but had no Top 10 hits to his credit. By the summer of 1976, Rawls had his first Top 5 hit with "You'll Never Find (Another Love Like Mine)," a Gamble-Huff collaboration that showcased Rawls' sweet baritone with a funky beat and effective strings.

"We always went after great voices," Gamble said. "and he had one of the great voices, and it felt like it was time for him to get another hit."

In 1976, Detroit and Philadelphia met as one when the Jacksons entered 309 South Broad Street for the first of two Gamble-Huff produced albums.

"Epic asked us if we wanted to produce the Jacksons," said Gamble. "In reality, we were trying to sign the Jacksons ourselves to our own label. No question we were trying to do that. But CBS (Epic's parent company) had deeper pockets than ours. Those songs were released on a combined label, that's the first time they ever did that. (That was) the house band, MFSB, that played on that first album. The Jacksons didn't play, they just sang on the album."

"I think Tito played on one thing," replied Huff, "maracas or something like that. He did play on a couple of the things did for themselves. They did cut a couple of songs on that album."

"It was a whole new world for all of them," Gamble continued. "They came into our world; Philly International was a different environment for them. They were welcome to participate in the production, they produced a couple of songs on their albums, so they had a lot more freedom here. It was trying times for them too, because Jermaine had just left the group, they were going through just a little bit of controversy there. Me and Huff, we had the songs for them, and that's the easy part. Getting in the studio and getting the right songs. I enjoyed working with Michael, because he had his own ideas about how he wanted himself to

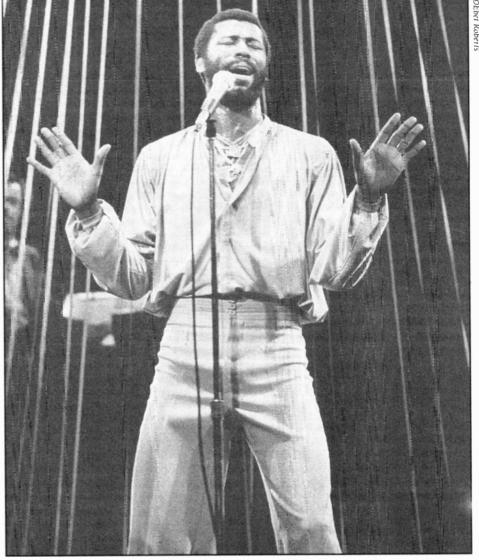

"Michael made our job a little eaiser. He was very clever. Plus, he could sing."

In 1977, Philadelphia International collaborated again with CBS Records, this time for a special neighborhood beautification campaign. Gamble and Huff, along with the entire PIR stable of singers and composers, created a single called "Let's Clean Up The Ghetto" (PIR 3627). Sales of the single and accompanying album (which included classic tracks from artists like Lou Rawls, Billy Paul, Teddy Pendergrass and the Intruders) were used to finance inner-city cleanup projects. Young people were hired to pick up garbage, paint over graffiti, and sweep dirty streets in their neighborhood. The successful project was later endorsed by the mayors of Chicago, Los Angeles, Memphis and Atlanta.

According to Variety, Philadelphia mayor Frank Rizzo refused to participate in his hometown corporation's campaign, taking offense to the song's lyric "You can no longer depend on the man downtown," as well as the use of the word "ghetto" to describe the inner city. Despite Rizzo's objections, PIR's campaign received statewide support and a proclamation from Pennsylvania governor

But as the 1970s rolled on, the hits were getting harder and harder to break. With the exception of the O'Jays and Teddy Pendergrass (whose solo efforts were bought by millions of swooning women), the releases on Philadelphia International were quick rockets rather than sustaining candles.

The duo who co-wrote "Back Stabbers," Gene McFadden and John Whitehead, produced and sang their own Top 10 hit in 1979, "Ain't No Stoppin' Us Now" (PIR 3681). A sister group, the Jones Girls, nabbed a Top 40 hit in "You're Gonna Make Me Love Somebody Else" (PIR 3681).

Teddy Pendergrass

Meanwhile, the Gamble and Huff catalog was being mined by other labels. Thelma Houston recorded a note-for-note orchestration of Harold Melvin and the Blue Notes' "Don't Leave Me This Way" and took it to number one on the pop and soul charts. The California group Tierra created a medley of the Intruders' "Together" and "Cowboys To Girls," hitting the Top 40 in 1981. Even the O'Jays mined the old Gamble and Huff library, and came up with "Use Ta Be My Girl" (PIR 3642), a Top 10 smash.

Other groups weren't content with just nabbing a song here and there - they wanted to capture that Philly Sound that Gamble and Huff and Thom Bell and MFSB and Joe Tarsia created. In Hialeah, Fla., TK Records created a mixture of Philly Soul and salsa, which culminated in a series of hits for KC and the Sunshine Band. In New York, producers like Jacques Morali were taking MFSB orchestrations and packing them onto high-hat disco beats. Giorgio Morodor tried to replicate Earl Young's signature drum patterns and created a series of early synthpop hits for Donna Summer and Blondie. Bernard Edwards and Nile Rodgers snatched the thumping bass and funky beats, and the Chic organization took root. It was as if Gamble and Huff were competing for radio time against their own students.

But Gamble and Huff didn't give up. This time, they allowed their in-house staff to come up with new ideas and fresh concepts - even if it meant overseeing the production of their top artists. Dexter Wansel remembers the day he got permission, along with Nick Ashford and Valerie Simpson, to co-produce Teddy Pendergrass. "I did an album for Teddy Pendergrass named TP. And Teddy was coming off a double live album, and we had some stuff in the can that we were going to put out. But I suggested to Gamble that Teddy needed fresh music out. Just to really affirm his position as a great soul singer, he needed some fresh new material. The live album and the album prior to that, they were a continuous flow of sound that was the same. And I felt he needed fresh music, and Gamble was like 'okay, Huff's got to go out of town, and I'm going to be busy, so why don't you dig in there and see what you can do.' It was like getting the keys to the car. When Teddy found out that I was going to be overseeing at least half of the album, he was like - why? And then I started spending a lot of time with him, and he chilled out after that, and all said, it wound up to be maybe his biggest album, with 'Love T.K.O.,' which I co-produced, was one of the writers, and arranged, and the duets with Stephanie Mills. It was wonderful for me, because it really let me know that instead of just doing a tune here or a tune there on some of the albums, that I could really do it, produce and arrange a Top 10 album. It was a great school, I feel like I've graduated here with a couple of doctor's Gamble admitted he had given "gratuities" to some radio station employees some clothing, airline tickets and cash — but denied that it was for favorable airplay.

Country Junction

ollin Raye is a man on a mission. Not content to be one of modern country's most bankable stars, he's constantly pushing the envelope, asking his fans to walk with him through potentially sensitive areas - among his 11 charttopping hits are "Little Rock," which explored the topic of alcohol abuse, "I Think About You," about domestic abuse, and "Not That Different," which carried an anti-racism message.

"The Fleventh Commandment," the closing track on the East Texan's newest album, The Walls Come Down, deals squarely and frankly with child abuse. Raye, 38, has begun working with the national organization Child Help USA - he's putting on a series of benefit concerts, and will flash their national hotline (1-800-4-A-CHILD) at the end of the video for "The Eleventh Commandment."

It is, he figures, the very least he can do. Because he's a man who cares about things.

Goldmine: There's no shortage of "sensitive guys" in country music these days. But you've taken it one step further - why do you tackle assuc songs?

Collin Raye: I would love to say this has been a plan since my teen-age years, but it really happened sort of unexpectedly. I came to town with the hope of having some hit records. That happened pretty quickly, and I don't do well without motivation; I can't just go through the motions of life, and music.

To me, the motivation to just make money and entertain people kind of got tired early on. Then all of a sudden "Little Rock" came along, and we got the chance to attempt to make a commercial piece of music out of something ... well, it was a healing song. It wasn't just a song about a social issue — it was a hopeful song about it.

From then on, my career changed. I realized 'ohhh... that's why God's got me doing this." I have just been blessed to have these songs land on me.

Don't you worry about becoming the poster boy for issue songs?

That's why, on the greatest hits album (Direct Hits), we put on four new cuts to take a break from it, just to remind people that I am an entertainer, and I do want to make people happy. Because we can get so carried away in reminding people of dark things that need to be lit, we forget that there's a great healing in having a good time, too. There's healing in escapism.

'The Eleventh Commandment' is a beautiful song, but it made my stomach turn, too.

That's sort of what it's designed to do. But it does require an explanation. I know some people think He put that out because he wants a Nobel Prize for Country Music Sensitivity.' And I can see why people think that.

I want to use this song as a banner to bring a much greater public awareness of child abuse and what it really is, and what can really be done about it. It's everybody's business. It's not some family matter, where you're supposed to leave 'em alone and let them work it out: It's a crime. the same as murder, the same as theft. And it must be reported, and I want to challenge people to do

Many of your hits are ballads --was that part of a plan to showcase your voice, or did it just sort of turn out that way?

Most of the hits that I've had in the last two years have been uptempo. People forget that.

To me, the ballads will always mean more There's no way I could compare "Little Red Rodeo" to "Love Remains." I mean, "Love Remains" still makes me cry sometimes when Thear it. "Little Red Rodeo" is just fun.

> You co-produced this album. What was that like for you?

> I usually sing, we cut the tracks, and then I go to work in Duluth or whatever, and somebody else cleans up and mixes and overdubs. And it's always bothered me because I would always hear something I would have done different.

I've always wished I was in there for the final assault, and this time I was. And I feel much closer to this record than anything in the past because of that.

You're a Catholic. Isn't Nashville a bastion of Baptists? Does that make you an outsider?

People are always blown away when I tell them I converted when I was 23. No offense to my cradle Catholic brethren, but I think converts are usually the most devout, because they appreciate what the Roman Catholic faith is.

To get to receive it as an adult was overwhelming, because all my life I'd heard that Catholics were evil, that they worship Satan, they worship the Pope, they worship Mary... none of which is true.

Your mom was a singer. Didn't she open for Flvis?

She was 16 or 17, and her sister was a little older, and they lived in Arkansas. Sun

Records had this package tour that came through the Texarkana area in 1957, and of course Elvis was headlining, and Cash was on it, and Carl Perkins, and Jerry Lee Lewis. Her and her sister got to open the shows, and they also got to sing harmony with every-

Her daddy had told her "You stay away from that Elvis Presley."

When you were playing the bars with your brother, weren't you known as Bubba Wray?

That's just my nickname. Nobody has ever called me anything but that in my family. In school, I was Bubba. And people who've known me for a while now still call me Bubba. I love it when people say "You don't look like a Bubba." I go "Thank you."

You have a track on the new Tribute to Tradition album. What song did you record,

Well, I got to do two. "Cold, Cold Heart" was always my favorite Hank Williams song, because it was so poetic. And to me, it's the time capsule epitome of what a country song is supposed to be. I think it says so much, so simply, it's always been a stud of a song to What's the other one?

The label had asked me and Joe Diffie to do something together, and "Honky Tonk Heroes" was my idea. Being a great Waylon/Billy Joe Shaver song, I thought it fit us perfectly, because both of us did our times in the bars.

-Bill DeYoung

On the Racks

TRACY LAWRENCE The Best Of Tracy Lawrence Atlantic (83137-2)

Ever wonder what Alan Jackson would sound like on helium? If so, check out Tracy Lawrence. This high-pitched redneck has been one of country's most reliable hitmakers since he emerged in 1991 with a number one record his first time out: "Sticks and Stones." Best Of offers a dozen chart smashes as well as two new singles.

Lawrence's best includes a few good ol' boy anthems ("Renegades, Rebels, and Rogues" and "If The Good Die Young") and a couple of tunes that tie his native Texas to honky tonkin' love songs ("Texas Tornado" and "Stars Over Texas"). Lost love is also a recurring theme, with our protagonist a bitter man ("Sticks And Stones"), gracious loser ("I See It Now"), and hopeful reconciliator ("Is That A Tear").

Every hit on this set is topnotch — he most noteworthy and substantial being Lawrence's reflective odes ("Time Marches On" and "If The World Had A Front Porch"). The collection's only letdown is that Atlantic didn't find room for his seven other top-5 hits (particularly "Today's Lonely Fool" and "As Any Fool Can See"). All seven are worthy of inclusion.

The two new recordings on the set showcase the softer side of the Lawrence sound. "While You Sleep," which melodically brings to mind Billy Joel's "New York State Of Mind," relates the story of a guy who forgets to tell his woman that he loves her until she is asleep, while "Her Old Stompin' Ground" delivers a more traditional (for country) ballad about a husband who dutifully waits for his cheating wife to return.

With his well-documented sordid private life overshadowing his music the past couple of years, Lawrence now faces an uphill battle on country radio (some stations have banned his music and "While You Sleep" has already undeservedly bombed on the charts). Whatever the future may hold for Lawrence, this collection serves as a reminder of his status as one of country music's top artists in the '90s.

DOLLY PARTON Hungry Again Decca (DRND-70041)

Before writing the 12 songs that comprise Hungry Again, Dolly Parton returned to her old stomping grounds in the Tennessee mountains to fast and pray. The CD title refers to the sense of renewal she found there and the music reflects a return to her early, "rootsier" work. Parton sounds more natural and at ease in this decisive step away from her more pop-oriented work (which at times bordered on atrocious).

The ballads allow Parton to indulge her longtime love of story tunes. Particularly noteworthy are "Blue Valley Songbird" (about a struggling singer who escapes an abusive father) and "When Jesus Comes Calling For Me" (in which an old man contemplates the day the Lord takes him home).

Elsewhere, Parton brings an emotional depth to that country staple, the hurtin' song. The nimble "Time And Tears" traces the long road to recovery from heartbreak, while "The Camel's Heart" — which rides on a skittish melody line — conveys a staunch defiance ("Too late now, it's your time to crawl"). Then there's "I Still Lost You," which is chock full of heart-wrenching despair ("I gave my love completely/My heart was always yours/It wouldn't do/I still lost you").

Hungry Again appropriately ends on an inspirational note with the gospel-ish "Shine On." After pouring on the angst so effectively, Parton must have realized her listeners could use a bit of soothing.

ALAN JACKSON High Mileage Arista Nashville (07822-18864-2)

High Mileage is Alan Jackson's eighth Arista release in a decade. Its leadoff single, "I'll Go On Loving You" — with its airy, acoustic backdrop and sensual Conway Twitty-style spoken verses — is an unconventional hit. But don't let it fool you. This album, while fairly consistent, contains no other surprises. With all seven previous albums having gone platinum, however, he obviously doesn't need to stray far from the ordinary to rack up another success.

Still, this effort may be too mellow for some. The wryly humorous "Another Good Reason," which recounts a series of booze-fueled misadventures, is the closest Jackson comes to really cutting loose. The rest of the material settles into a natural match for Jackson's laconic delivery. Especially noteworthy is "Little Man," a wistful ode to smalltown businessmen and simpler times, when people were friendly and good customer service was the norm.

Jackson wrote half of the songs on High Mileage, which thematically lean toward the pensive. "Hurtin' Comes Easy" concerns a perpetual loser in love who's "gotten used to getting over," while the dude in the sleepy ballad "Amarillo" allows his old love to leave him so she can pursue her dreams — only to wonder years later whatever became of her. High Mileage is a good record, but an extra shot of adrenaline could have made it an even better one.

I CAN'T DATE THIS AMAZINGLY

COOL LP BY THE LATE, GREAT

ICEBERG SLIM (SHOWN ON THE COVER HERE IN POWDER BLUE PIMP FINERY!), BUT I'M

GONNA GUESS IT'S FROM THE LATE TO'S OR EARLY '80'S! I BOUGHT IT ABOUT 10 YEARS AGO AND I'VE

NEVER RUN ACROSS A COPY SINCE!! IT'S IN BEAUTIFUL

BASIS FOR HIS FIRST AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL NOVEL"PIMP: THE STORY OF MY LIFE" (1969)! I'VE READ IT, AND IT'S VERY COOL! IN FACT,
I LOOKED ALL OVER FOR MY COPY, BUT IT MUST'VE GOT LOST WHEN I MOVED A FEW YEARS BACK! IT'S SO COOL THAT HOLLYWOOD BOUGHT THE RIGHTS DECADES AGO,
BUT AS OF THIS DATE THE PROJECT HASN'T MATERIALIZED - ALTHOWGH A FILM
WAS MADE BASED ON HIS BOOK "TRICK BABY"! IT CAME OUT IN 1973 AND STARS
NONE OTHER THAN "LOVE BOAT" BARTENDER TED LANGE!! I'VE NEVER SEEN IT, BUT I'D SURE PICK IT UP IF I SAW IT AT THE VIDEO STORE! ANWAY, BACK TO THE RECORD... THERE'S AN ALMOST HUMOROUS ADHERANCE TO RHYME AND IT'S EASY TO SEE WHY RAPPERS LIKE ICE-T PICKED UP ON"THE BERG"!

AND GUESS WHAT ... I FOUND AN IMPORT CO AVAILABLE OF THIS ON-LINE!

NEWLY DISCOVERED EXPLOSIVE '60s SOUL!

A Broad Abroad

MY PET FISH AND OTHER ECLECTIC OFFERINGS

by Jo-Ann Greene

fter last month's punk rock blitzkreig, things settle down again with a batch of new releases which really do take in the myriad extremities to which collectors are prone; from late Belgian balladeers to Sixties sex symbols television-style, from the excesses of psychedelia to the excedrin of glam rock, and onto the pinnacles of Bobby Goldsboro's Honey album.

But we begin this month with a release which has a more than reasonable chance of being described as 1998's most hotly anticipated follow-ups, Malika Spigel's sophomore solo set, My Pet Fish (Swim).

Incredibly, it's been five years since Spigel's debut, Rosh Ballata, debuted the label which she and husband Colin Newman formed as an outlet for what was then the deep cult of electronic dance music. Since that time, both Swim and its mission have burst into the mainstream, with the label's own roster of Pablo's Eye, Plastic Venus, Ronnie And Clyde, and Newman himself turning up some of the most adventurous sounds around..

And still they all pale before My Pet Fish.

Retaining the eastern European atmospheres which were employed to such devastating effect across both Rosh Ballata and Spigel's 1980s' work with the pioneering Minimal Compact, My Pet Fish rolls on repetitive rhythms, through which electronics, percussion, and some genuinely cutting guitars slice like switchblades. Spigel's own occasionally wordless vocals, however, are the principle instrument of attack, conjuring up imagery which is often violent, always seductive, and sometimes, just plain scary — usually all at once. It is the sound of dreams, and talking of dreams... while the world continues waiting for something new to emerge from Kraftwerk, whose live re-emergence last year now seems to have been a simple red herring, the radical chic pioneers of German minimalism do hit the racks again, and with one of their most unexpected offerings yet.

Concert Classics (Ranch Life) was recorded in 1975, during Kraftwerk's first, post-Autobahn, American tour... exactly where and when, unfortunately, is not disclosed by the liner notes, but for 47 minutes, such details seem irrelevant. Of course the hit is the dominant factor, but there's also a magnificent rendering of "Morgenspaziergang," and a reminder of the days when even Top 40 fans were too polite to spoil shows by shouting out for their favorite songs. Either that or they couldn't actually pronounce any of them....

Another European artist whose cult acclaim never seems to waver is the Belgian Jacques Brel. Recent months have seen the French label Barclay remaster a string of his original albums for release in digipack renderings of their original artwork, while a three-disc boxed set highlighting his entire career has also been released in France. For listeners who prefer their chansons rendered in English, however, Irregular Records (PO Box 72, Hounslow, Middx TW5 0YB, England) are releasing Ne Ne Quitte Pas, a tribute album designed to commemorate the 20th anniversary of Brel's passing.

Sadly, the contents are not quite what they could have been — a directory of artists who have covered Brel for Anglo-American consumption would range from Marc Almond to David Bowie, Frank Sinatra to Alex Harvey, and Rod McKuen to Scott Walker.

None of these are present. However, Brel biographer Alan Clayson weighs in with a song, alongside punk poet Attila the Stockbroker, Tom ("2-4-6-8 Motorway") Robinson, and '60s balladeer Dave Berry, together with a host of names which doubtless mean something to someone: Robb Johnson, Show Of Hands, Des de Moor and Vera Coomans.

Another tribute of sorts comes courtesy of Orchestral Manouvres In The Dark, or OMD as they apparently prefer to be referred to these days. With remixes from the likes of Moby and Sash already climbing the British chart, the synth duo's greatest hits album is set for release before Christmas (Virgin, U.K.).

Reissue specialists Beat Goes On have a full roster of reissues as the festive season approaches, including something for just about any musical palate one could imagine. Two albums Goldsboro (Honey/Summer (The First Time), Huey

English hit makers par excellence through the mid-1970s, Mud's first two albums, the seminal Mud Rock, and the imaginatively named Mud Rock II, have never appeared on disc before, an oversight which has doubtless been cured as the world continues gearing up for the release of the Velvet Goldmine glam rock movie. For what other reason could there be for the sudden glut of glam era releases to be flooding across the ocean?

Lewis (And The News/Picture This), Bobby Vee (I Remember Buddy Holly/Meets The Crickets), Pat Benatar (In The Heat Of The Night/Crimes Of Passion), and last but certainly not least,

English hit makers par excellence through the mid-1970s, Mud's first two albums, the seminal Mud Rock, and the imaginatively named Mud Rock II, have never appeared on disc before, an oversight which has doubtless been cured as the world continues gearing up for the release of the Velvet Goldmine glam rock movie. For what other reason could there be for the sudden glut of glam era releases to be flooding across the ocean?

We'll be covering the much-anticipated boxed set (Columbia) next month; in the meantime, however, devotees of glam's artier corners will thrill to Tramcars To Tomorrow, a sampling of Be Bop Deluxe BBC sessions (Hux), while BBC fans in general will enjoy a new Kevin Ayers archive project, serving up three live sessions from 1972, 1975 and 1976, the wryly titled Too Old To Die Young (Hux). Ayers himself appears to be on something of a musical sabbatical at the moment, acknowledging a writers' block which has lasted so long he's now beginning to consider it permanent. One hopes he's wrong, but in the meantime, Too Old To Die Young reminds us of the days when Ayers was so close to stardom he could smell it.

EMI's centennial party continues unabated, with the latest in the At Abbey Road various artist albums focussing on the venerable old studio's contributions to the psychedelic era. No Floyd nor Beatles, but a wealth of classics from Tomorrow, the Hollies, Simon Dupree, Donovan and the Pretty Things rub shoulders with lesser known gems from Mark Wirtz, Aquarian Age, the Koobas and the Mandrake Paddle Steamer, and an unreleased gem from the N'Betweens... who, of course, return our thoughts to Glammy pastures through their subsequent metamorphosis into Slade.

Psychedelia At Abbey Road is not, somewhat predictably, as cohesive a blast as the earlier Beat and R&B collections, but it still serves up its fair share of fun, particularly when played in conjunction with The Psychedelic Scene, a similarly themed trawl through the Decca/Deram vaults (Deram). Again, it's the third volume in a series which has already visited The Beat Scene and the R&B Scene, and again, better known acts

(the Moody Blues, the Small Faces, Al Stewart) punctuate the forgotten nuggets of those dim days of psilocybic silliness.

Back to Abbey Road, though, and individual compilations have arrived for Cliff Bennett, the pre-Procol Harum sounds of the Paramounts, the latter-day (1973-89) Hollies, and best of all, Scaffold.

Best known in the U.S. for starring Beatle Paul's brother Mike McGear, Scaffold were actually consistent hitmakers in Britain, serving up a music hall inflected blend of psychedelic daftness and Liverpudlian lunacy in the form of "Lily The Pink," "Thank U Very Much," "Gin Gan Goolie," "Knees Down Mother Brown" and the irresistible "Do The Albert." A 26-track collection includes eight previously unreleased cuts, and anyone with their sense of humor screwed on correctly will find the whole thing unputdownable. Probably.

From the sublimely ridiculous, to the simply stupid... When Sex Leers Its Inquisitive Head (RPM) is the long-awaited reissue of actor Peter Wyngarde's self-titled solo album from 1970... long-awaited because the record's original release, on RCA, was pulled from the stores after just three days, when somebody at the label finally realized how career-crushingly bizarre the whole thing was.

A generally spoken-word combination of W.H. Auden's poetry, readers' letters to the Times newspaper, and all-purpose anti-social misogyny, the album appeared at a time when the sophisticatedly moustachio'd Wyngarde was probably the number one actor in Britain, and the star of television's top rated Jason King (think Murder She Wrote, fronted by the thinking crumpet's stud muffin dreamdate). In the face of such success, an album highlighted by a graphic ode to rape had no chance of an even halfway fair listen, and the intervening years have seen prices for original copies soar to around the $700 mark.

Now, collectors and the curious alike have the opportunity to find out what all the fuss was really about. One hopes the wait was worthwhile.

The Best of the Rest

Armageddon: Armageddon (Repertoire) Keith Relf and Louis Cennamo's ill-fated 1975 collaboration returns to scare a whole new generation of Yardbirds fans.

Joe Cocker: Live (Parlophone) What is says is what it is, recorded on Cocker's last European tour, and highlighted by... ah, you know what it's highlighted by.

East Of Eden: Mercator Projection (Repertoire) A straight reissue for the "Jig A Jig" hitmakers' debut from 1970.

Madness: The Heavy Heavy Hits (Virgin) Some people complain that things like this are only being reissued because of something the industry calls "the ska revival." And maybe that's true. But it's still good to hear those old hits again.

Real Thing: Greatest Hits (Spectrum) Somewhere between the death of the Beatles and the birth of the Bunnymen, sweet 'n' slick soul purveyors Real Thing were the best thing Liverpool had to offer. But were they worth a 19-song compilation?

Marion Ryan: Love Me Forever (Sequel) The mother of '60s hitmakers Paul and Barry was one of the first top-line performers to have her records engineered by Joe Meek. Not many people know that.

Various Artists: Relax! The Ultimate 80s Mix (Polygram) A 2-CD collection of all those early-mid-80s dance hits you hoped you'd long forgotten.

Wax: Common Knowledge.Com (Dome) Unreleased 1984 demos from Andrew Gold and Graham Gouldman's melodic little double act.

BILLBOARD'S HOT 100: CHANGING SOON

by Tim Neely-

In the middle of September, Billboard magazine made a big deal about the 40th anniversary of the Hot 100 chart. In celebration, the magazine created all kinds of unique charts, such as the Hot 100 of the Hot 100 (the biggest hits of the past 40 years). Yet most of the talk has spread around chart director Geoff Mayfield's brief article on impending changes in the chart.

Responding to changes in the way music is marketed today, Billboard is going to alter its Hot 100 as of the Dec. 5, 1998 issue. Exactly what it is going to do and how it is going to change is the subject of much speculation, as the magazine has made no official announcement as to what is happening. But Billboard has been doing research with experimental charts that change the Hot 100 in any or all of three ways. Each has its

1. Changing the ratio of airplay to sales used on the Hot 100.

Currently, a song's chart position is based on 60 percent airplay, 40 percent sales. Most of the discussion has been to increase the airplay component, perhaps to as much as 90 percent. This would lessen the effect of "loss-leader" pricing. Many new singles are heavily discounted from the $3.49-$3.99 norms, to as low as 49 cents, to help insure a high chart debut. SoundScan, the company Billboard uses for its sales information, charts the number of copies sold, not how much they sold for.

Also, record companies take full advantage of the way the Billboard charts operate. I'm sure you've noticed in the past few years how all new releases come out on Tuesdays? That's because the beginning of the Billboard chart week is Tuesday. This was not common knowledge until the early 1990s. Also, record companies will wait until a song has been on the radio for a month or more before releasing a single, thus guaranteeing a high debut. They've also canceled singles for lack of early airplay: The Celine Dion/Barbra Streisand duct "Tell Him" was going to be released as a single, but was canceled when the response from Top 40 was lukewarm at best.

Increasing the airplay factor would help reduce the "loss leader" factor, but it could place the creation of number one hits into an even more contemptible group of hands than record company moguls: radio consultants who program more and more stations into greater and greater piles of bland nothingness. If one of them decides they like a song, or is paid to like a song, he/she can order their stations to play it to death so it can hit the top even if the public doesn't like it, doesn't request it or doesn't buy it.

2. Allowing songs not released as singles to make the Hot

One of the increasing (and to my eyes, disturbing) trends in the past few years is the number of big airplay hits that are never released to the general public as singles. I've written entire columns on this subject before, so I won't go into all the reasons why this is a bad thing. Despite belief to the contrary in some circles, not releasing a single is rarely an artist's decision, it's almost always a record company decision.

If Billboard allows the inclusion of non-sale songs onto the Hot 100, it will mark the end of the chart as we know it, pure and simple. It might as well change its name to "Top Pop Singles and Tracks," much as the country chart is now called "Hot Country Singles and Tracks." As far as collectors are concerned, there will be no Hot 100 anymore if you can't actually buy what's on the chart.

3. Changing the makeup of the "Hot 100 panel."

Today, the radio stations surveyed for Hot 100 points are limited to various types of Top 40-style formats. Among those that may be added to the panel are "mainstream R&B, adult R&B, country, mainstream rock, and triple-A rock stations," according to Mayfield's article.

This, it would seem to me, would be the best move. Based on sales alone, as much as 20 percent of the current Hot 100 is country music. With few exceptions, none of these get any airplay at all among the stations Billboard currently uses to compile the big chart. And it's not a secret that in many large markets, the country station or stations are the most popular.

And it's not a secret that in many large markets, the country station or stations are the most popular. Why not reflect that in the Hot 100, which should be to singles what The Billboard 200 is to albums —— a melting pot of many types of music that truly reflects what is being bought and listened to.

Why not reflect that in the Hot 100, which should be to singles what The Billboard 200 is to albums — a melting pot of many types of music that truly reflects what is being bought and listened to. Each format has its own chart already; why not make the Hot 100 the compilation of what is truly popular in singles today?

What's New?

For the first time since 1995, some country music has come out on vinyl LP.

The group BR5-49, one of those bands that the critics love but can't get played on today's tight radio playlists, has had its first two albums, the selftitled debut and Big Backyard Beat Party, plus an EP issued on 12-inch vinyl. Whether this leads to more country vinyl remains to be seen; unfortunately, I would tend to doubt it.

Also new on 12-inch slabs are the all-but-ignored current album by Soul Asylum; The Miseducation of Lauryn Hill, the debut album by the Fugees' female singer that just spent a couple weeks at the top of the Billboard charts; the brand-new one by Hootie and the Blowfish, Musical Chairs; and the solo debut by Rob Zombie of White Zombie, Hellbilly Deluxe. The latter was issued as a picture disc.

In the audiophile world, DCC Compact Classics has put out so much good stuff on vinyl lately that you'd go broke trying to keep up. Where do I start? How about with several greatest hits collections, one of which is a DCC exclusive. Jethro Tull's Original Masters has seen an audiophile release, as has Al Green/Greatest Hits with several bonus tracks, The Cars' Greatest Hits as first released in 1985, and a two-record set of Nat King Cole's The Greatest Hits. This DCC exclusive goes back to the 1940s and "Nature Boy" and continues to his electronic duet with daughter Natalie, "Unforgettable." (And yes, Nat's original version of that hit is here too.) Also, four Paul Simon solo albums are coming out on audiophile vinyl. Already available are Paul Simon and There Goes Rhymin' Simon; still to come is Still Crazy After All These Years and Live Rhymin'. Also coming soon from DCC (not out yet) are

Linda Ronstadt's Greatest Hits, Volume 2 (the company already has done the first volume) and Van Halen's debut album, the one with their loud remake of "You Really Got Me" (re-introduced in the famous Barbie-inspired Nissan TV commercial not too long ago).

Most of the exciting news is saved for 45s.

Several country labels had gone a long time without a 7-inch single and appeared ready to stop making them entirely. But both Arista Nashville and Sony Nashville have announced some essential titles for country fans.

On Arista, "I'll Go On Loving You," the controversial Alan Jackson hit reminiscent of Conway Twitty's sexy 1970s country hits, is out on 45. Also coming is the recent chart-topper by Brooks and Dunn, "How Long Gone" with the new one, "Husbands and Wives" on the other side. Sony, which hadn't put out a new 45 in a year or so (ironic, as the Sony pop labels have been among the better ones at releasing 45s), is putting out three double-sided hits, including the first 45 by the Dixie Chicks — "There's Your Trouble"/"Wide Open Spaces." The other two are by Ty Herndon

— "It Must Be Love"/"A Man Holdin' On (To a Woman Lettin' Go)" — and Joe Diffie — "Texas Size Heartache"/"Poor Me." We'll keep an eye on this to see if this is just a temporary blip or if this is a sign of good things to

Good things are happening on the pop side as well. Fastball's airplay hit "The Way," the melody of which sounds like a cross between "Delilah" and "Besame Mucho," is out on a limited-edition 45 — its only commercial single format so far. Barenaked Ladies' "One Week," which just entered the Billboard Hot 100 at number 3, is on 45 also. The new Madonna single, "The Power of Goodbye," another excellent track from the album Ray of Light, should be out on 45 by the time you read this. And believe it or not, a Willie Nelson 45, "The Maker," has been released from his new album on Island (country music ignores him now, so we'll put him under "pep").

Atlantic Records is getting better: Edwin McCain's Top 10 hit "I'll Be" is out on 45, and coming soon is a new track from Matchbox 20, "Back 2 Good," with the radio hit "Push" on the B-side. Also, Hootie and the Blowfish's first single from the new album, "I Will Wait," is coming on 45.

Some other interesting items: Less Than Jake has issued its new album, Hello Rockview, as a 7-inch box set. And two artists missing from 45 for a long time are coming out: Stevie Nicks, "If You Ever Did Believe" backed with a version of "Crystal" is due soon, as is "Stay" by the Temptations (yes, the Temptations!).

And we close by mentioning that R.E.M. has a new full-length release (presumably on vinyl) coming in mid-October. The first single, "Day Sleeper," is definitely coming on a 45.

Wow! It's exciting to talk about so much new stuff. It makes me feel good to have had faith in vinyl all these years.

Performer, producer and Marvin Gaye collaborator Ed Townsend remembers his time as the partner of a genius

by Bil Carpenter

arvin Gaye, more so than any other male soul singer, represented the essence of the '70s. His songs reflected what was really going on in America's boardrooms and in its bedrooms. The personal struggles Gaye suffered mirrored the challenges many other baby boomers felt at the time. The young America of the early-70s — the Age of Aquarius and pre-Watergate — was still bucking traditional conformity and mores. Just as other young adults were challenging their parents' authority, Gaye sought to break label founder Berry Gordy's paternal grip on his musical direction.

"I don't think Motown ever gave me the respect which I felt was my due," Gaye was quoted as saying in Sharon Davis Motown: The History. "There were disputes over financial matters, over promotion, over a whole heap of things. Also my marriage to Anna was over. I didn't know what I was going to do. I knew what I wasn't going to do and that was to come back and with something pretty much like what I'd done already. To me, that was a job finished and I was off to new adventures."

During his musical coming of age, Gave moved away from Motown's in-house tunesmiths and began constructing his own music to reflect his feelings on the world he was living in. From 1970-1973, the results were the stellar, biting social commentary albums What's Going On? and Trouble Man. During this period, Gave began collaborating with veteran performer Ed Townsend ("For Your Love") who had spent the last decade producing hits for Dee Dee Warwick, Theola Kilgore and the Impressions. What they created was perhaps the first sexual concept album. Let's Get It On in 1973. The eight songs celebrate the pleasure and pain of sex. It was a quiet revolution taking place. Mainstream music did not usually tackle sex as blatantly as the title track or "You Sure Love To Ball," which in addition to the provocative title, features heavy breathing and simulated orgasms similar to the ones that got Donna Summer's "Love To Love You Baby" banned from many radio playlists two years later.

"I can't see anything wrong with sex between consenting anybodies," Gaye wrote on the inside cover of the album which offended Gaye's father, a minister. "I think we make far too much of it. After all, one's genitals are just one important part of the magnificent human body. I have no argument with the essential part they play in the reproduction of the species; however, the reproduction process has been assured by the pleasure both parties receive when they engage in it.

"I contend that sex is sex and love is love. When combined, they work well together, if two people are of about the same mind. But, they are really two different needs and should be treated as such. Time and space will not permit me to expound further, especially in the area of the psyche. I don't believe in overly moralistic philosophies. Have your sex, it can be very exciting, if you're lucky. I hope the music that I present here makes you lucky."

The album was born from the Sexual Revolution taking place in American culture and set the stage for further exploration by Gaye's peers on tracks such as Barry White's "Ecstasy" or Rick James' "Fire & Desire." Gaye, however, drifted on to other musical topics until returning to floor critics with his comeback smash "Sexual Healing" in 1983, which picked up just where "Let's Get It On" left off. Ed Townsend vividly recalls those exciting "Let's Get It On" sessions in this conversation with Goldmine.

Goldmine: When did you first meet Marvin Gaye?

Townsend: I met Marvin earlier in my career. We would run into each other. We were friendly.

By run into each other, you mean you see each other at shows you might perform on together?

We didn't appear on the same shows exactly. I would sometimes come in as he was leaving. Then, I went out to Motown and got to know Berry Gordy and Berry's sisters just as sort of an education to myself because Berry was doing such great things out there that everybody wanted to know what in the hell was happening. And it was a hell of a thing to walk into a little house and see a studio where the speakers were hanging with wire from the roof. And down in the basement was a raggedy-ass house and he's knocking the big majors out of the box one after the other. It was like miraculous. Then, I got to know them. And I think Marvin sort of liked some of the things I did with Nelson Riddle because he wanted to do that kind of thing too.

I've heard that he wanted to be sort of a quote unquote black Sinatra.

But, that wasn't what he really wanted to be. You know, Marvin was an interesting person to work with. He had many facets to his personality. Did you see the E! TV Story recently released on Marvin's life?

The state of the s

No.

Well, they came here to my house and shot the scenes where I appear in it. And I tried to sum it up in that interview. It was one of the most indepth presentations I've seen yet as to how he died and circumstances around his death. It's at least 60% accurate. But, anyway. I had written "Let's Get It On" and somebody said 'Marvin wants you to come over and play some songs for him.' So I said 'where is he?,' they told me and I went to his house. I sat down and played him a couple of tunes and stuff. He said 'would you produce me, I'll record them if you produce me.' I said 'I'll produce you if you get on the phone right now and call Berry and tell him you want me to produce you.' Naturally, they wanted Marvin to get busy because he was sort of inactive there for awhile after What's Going On? In fact, he hadn't had anything successful in awhile. So then we did Let's Get It On and that was kind of an instant smash.

So that song was already written before you went to collaborate with Marvin?

Before I went to Marvin, yeah.

But isn't his name on the credits as well?

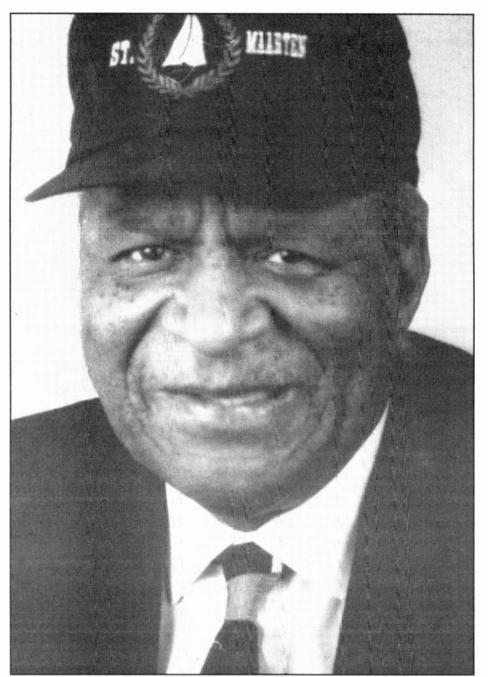

[laughs] You know the business, don't you. I really gave... I have a letter that I keep here where I really gave Marvin part of the song for his efforts over beyond the call of duty. He made a lot of contributions toward the success of it that he did not have to do, you know?

Like what?

He worked. He sang his butt off. He was at every rehearsal. He didn't give me that problem that people said you have with Marvin of not being on time and that kind of thing. He cooperated with me in every way. He made me feel very good for producing, if you understand what I'm saying. He could be difficult because he was a producer in his own right and sometimes ego would get in the way. And with most big artists who think that everything is done by them and we like to keep that going and I think the public helps to keep that going because they don't really know what's happening behind closed doors. It takes a lot of people to make a successful artist. The contributions come from many, many places and you gotta have everybody hitting on the one to make it

Marvin's often been referred to as a troubled genius. Did you see him that way?

You know, there's a certain mystique that people like to believe that surrounds people who are successful. And they don't really get to know the person. I think he was a genius, but troubled no more than any other human being who's not getting along with his wife. So you want to call that troubled? A lot of us have been troubled. He was not continuously as troubled as some of the writers have written. I think they enjoy saying that because it makes good reading and it makes for good copy. Marvin had a fear of dying young. I think he always thought he was going to die young.

Did he tell you why?

[laughs] No. He'd just say 'I don't think I'm going to live to be old.' And there was no particular reason for it. To get to know somebody as well as I got to know Marvin, takes some time and it takes some talking and it takes some living together. You look back at it, maybe he was troubled. I never really thought about it. I don't think I wanted to think about it. He didn't get along with his father too well and that kind of thing. He did have some problems. He was very, very talented. I think that God gave him "it." God gave Marvin "it." Marvin could sing the "Star Spangled Banner" and people would either want to shout or go to bed. Girls would react the same way to the "Star Spangled Banner" as they would to "Let's Get it On." He could take a song and make it a sexual song no matter what. He could sing to children. I've seen him stop in airports and children would say 'would you sing "Trouble Man" Marvin?,' and he'd get on his knees and sit down and sing to them. That was a wonderful side of Marvin that people didn't know. There was a real human side to Marvin. A loyal side to Marvin. He knew how to be a friend when he wanted to

I know you contributed to the Here, My Dear album. How did you all sit down and work that project?

[laughs] You know, I was not hired to do the Here, My Dear album. I went in to work on a couple of songs or something. The court had awarded Anna the royalties. When he was doing Here, My Dear it was really pulling his heart out on a very personal level. He sings about how no other woman he's enjoyed in bed like Anna, how she could suddenly make things alright. He was talked about when he met Janice [Hunter, his second wife]. He had a song talking about how good she was in bed. He talked about everything [At the time, Gaye had debts of

$7 million and owed the IRS $2 million in back-taxes as well]. The album cover was designed inside like a chess [Monopolyed.] board and Anna has all the important property like Boardwalk. Then, he's given her the album because all he's got is his guitar outside of the house and in the window he's giving her the album, saying "Here my dear." He finally, got through getting that done. I guess it wasn't too popular a message because it was too personal. The subject matter. If you didn't know Anna and if you didn't know him. Or you didn't know some of the preceeds that we used you probably wouldn't know where he was coming from unless you really followed the entire album and really knew his life. But those who did and really got into it, I think really appreciated Here, My Dear.

Let me get back to Let's Get It On again. When you and Marvin sat down and began planning the sessions, was there a concept in

No. At that time, he had just separated from Anna and was living alone on a street called Cataracus. And I went over and I had some songs I had written in New York and I was out in L.A. kind of shopping them and I played four songs for him at his home. The songs were "If I Should Die Tonight," "Let's Get It On" and "Stay." And what eventually turned out to be "Keep Gettin' It On."

How did "Keep Gettin' It On" come about?

Marvin and I were having a discussion about him punching in a lot. In today's recording you can record a part of a sentence and punch in the other part of the sentence if you want. You can do that ad infinitum. I don't like that because my school of training was that you had to start at letter A and go to letter G and there was no punch in because we didn't have that kind of equipment. Marvin had grown accustomed to doing that and we had a little argument in the studio about that. I said "Marvin, you know you can't think but fifteen seconds." So he said "What?" Then, he took off his shirt and he sang for ten minutes. It was too long for one record, so we said "keep gettin' it on." When he finished he said, "How ya like me now!" I said, "I love you now." Not only was it very long and he did it without stopping, it was in a key that he thought was too high for him. He didn't know it until three or four months later when he looked at the music. It was a hit and he'd been singing it, right? It was only in his head that he couldn't sing in a certain key. But, by then it was a success and a great record.

Why was he doing all these punch-ins before?

Marvin was somewhat of a perfectionist and it was a very convenient thing to do when you're working, especially by yourself and don't have a producer. When Marvin produced himself, he had to think about it and then do it. There was nobody in the studio that he trusted enough to just relax and just be a singer. So, I was lucky in that he had enough confidence in me to say, "hey, I'll be the singer, you be the producer."

How did you go about establishing that trust?

I don't know. I think he'd listen to things I'd done in the past with Nelson Riddle and my style of recording. He grew to like me. We got to know each other and he got to respect me. Once he relinquished the reins, he did so entirely. A good example of that was that the first engineer I had, I had asked him to use a certain mic. And he didn't want to use that mic because he said Marvin didn't like that mic. So Marvin looked through the window and could see that there was some disagreement between the engineer and myself. He said, "Ed, what's wrong?" The guy punched in and said "Marvin, I'm trying to tell him this is the mic you like to use and he won't listen. He wants to use this other mic." So Marvin said, "Who is the producer? Look at the contract. Ed Townsend's the producer. I'm the artist, I don't care what mic he wants to use. If he wants to use it, he uses it." And at that time, I asked another engineer. Marvin said, "when we get it straightened out, we'll be back" and I got another

What was wrong with the original mic the engineer wanted to use?

I didn't think it was particularly good for Marvin. At the time, there were newer mics coming out. I can't remember the name of the mic at this time. But, there were newer mics that I liked better and that's a matter of choice. There was a certain resonance that I liked in a mic. You know producers and artists become very superstitious. If you see a roach run across the studio when you get a hit, you try to look for a roach the next time you're in there like that roach has something to do with you getting a hit. Well, I don't believe that. I believe you're prepared, you have good material, you go in and do the best job that you can and if it's done right, you'll have a hit and the roach has nothing to do with it... There are people who type on the same typewriter all the time and to hell with using computers. "This is what I grew up with. This is the book I'm working on I'm going to use this old rinky dink Underwood typewriter." Baseball player has a favorite bat, he swears he's got to hit a ball with that bat. Then, he discovers he can hit with any kind of bat if he's a good ball player...

Considering the time period, was there any hesitance on Marvin's part to the sexual nature of these songs?

I'll tell you how that came about honestly, if you want to know. When I wrote "Let's Get It On," it was not intended to be sexual. I had been having a problem with alchohol where I had stopped drinking. And in the rehab, I was telling people who were being rehabilitated, "let's get on" with living. Then, it developed into a boy-girl relationship as the song developed. At the same time, Marvin could sing the "Star Spangled Banner" and it would almost become sexual.

Janice and Marvin Gaye.

He had sort of a god-given talent for doing things in a sexual nature. One day I said to him, "if you keep your hand on the kitten—the clit, you increase the possibility of getting a hit" and he took that all the way to "Sexual Healing." Most sexual songs do well. Sex has gotten the President in trouble. Most popular thing in the world is people's curiosity about sex and America has a hell of an appetite for sex.

You mentioned that at the beginning of the sessions, Marvin and Anna had been separated. How heavy was that on his mind?

I can't answer that entirely, only Marvin would know that.

I mean in terms of what he said and did in the studio.

He became so excited about Jan at the time, his focus was on Jan. I was not very familiar with Anna I only know that they were separated and they were having a problem trying to straighten it out. I wasn't really aware of that until the Here, My Dear album. I wrote a song called "Anger" that told Marvin that being angry was no good. If you listen to that, you can hear the discussion between he and I regarding anger.

Did you write anything else on that record?

Yes. A tune called "Sparrow." It was comparing a bird to the life of a sparrow. How they fly here and there. How flighty things in life can be and how flighty women can be.

How did you introduce Janice to Marvin?

I went by Janice's house around the time I was recording with Marvin because I was very friendly with her mother. Janice asked me if I would take her to see Marvin record. And I did. When she walked in, she saw Marvin. She was sixteen years old and had pigtails. When she saw Marvin, she went in the restroom, combed her hair down and put on some make-up. I'll tell you a very interesting thing about "Let's Get It On." Nobody yet, even in the karaokes where you see it being played, they have screwed up the line entirely about "I ain't threatening, I wants to get it on." They have all kinds of things in there where they are trying to interpret that line to be and I don't think anybody ever understood that line but Marvin and I. Girls used to hit at Marvin as they do with other singers, but Marvin had a particular attraction to girls. He'd say, "Ed, I'm going to go over there" and he'd talk about what he was going to do [with this woman]. I'd say, "Marvin, you always threatening and then, you go home." He never followed through with his threats. When Janis walked in, he looked at me and sang "I ain't threatening! I wants to get it on!" And he did follow through with that. A little later he and Jan became man and wife and they had a couple

In spite of what critics say, what do you think is the most lasting thing or quality about Marvin's music that set him apart from others?

Marvin's foundation was real. He had certain convictions that were religious in nature. Certain political convictions and had the ability to communicate across the board. You can't quite define it because he had "it." Only God can give you "it." Marvin was a much more humanitarian kind of person than is indicated by the stories that you read about him or about the way he passed. That was a very short part of his life that was not indicative of the man. All of us have stepped off the beaten path, it may not have trapped us like it did Marvin. That's what I say, Both men and women were fans of Marvin. The guys on Fifth Street and the guys in the Pentagon liked Marvin if you listen to him. Especially after he did songs like "What's Going On?" How could you not sense in him a kind of understanding and a kind of sincerity and the kind of person that he was? How do you sing "mother, mothers, there are too many of you crying. Brother, brothers there are too many of you dying. We've got to find a way to bring some love here today." You just don't say and do things like that unless there's some depth to the personality. Nobody wanted to give him that recognition. In that day and time I think they always tried to find the frivolousness in black music. And they always wanted to place Marvin as a ghetto singer and they found it difficult to deal with him, really. Except for a few of the college students like at Kent State University who respected him far beyond what the industry itself wanted to say. This is not unusual in America. Not to give the black guy the real credit that he deserves. They don't know him. They never knew him as a person or as a star. It happens a lot because blacks are not invited into the inner circle. No matter how popular they are, especially if they're real men with some kind of sex appeal. The chairmen of the board don't invite them into the inner circle. They know them, they look at the bottom line and have some respect for that. But they never allow themselves to have respect for the human being and that's bad. And that's how some of them really get off on the wrong track. I can name instance after instance where I've seen that happen. They'll do you like they're doing Clinton now. They'll find some reason to crucify you with all due diligence... That's what I believe they did to Marvin.

The Dramatics

Watcha See Is Watcha Get

by Marc Taylor

uring the 1960s, Detroit was a hot bed for top-notch male soul vocal groups. The Temptations, Smokey Robinson and the Miracles, and the during the disco period and become one of Four Tops each recorded a string of hits that helped fuel the musical empire of Motown Records. But by the end of the decade, it appeared that the soul explosion from Detroit had run its course. Then the Dramatics exploded onto the music scene to carry the torch for the Motor City in the 1970s.

A five-man vocal group, the Dramatics recorded some of the finest soul music of that decade. Known primarily for their smoldering ballads, such as "In the Rain" and "Hey You! Get Off My Mountain," this quintet displayed their versatility and were equally successful with up-tempo tracks, notably "Whatcha See Is Whatcha Get" and "Get Up And Get Down." With stunning choreography and stage presence, and featuring a lineup that included three singers who could assume the lead, the Dramatics, unlike many stand-up vocal groups of the era, were able to retain their popularity the biggest soul groups of the decade.

The Dramatics, originally known as the Dynamics, formed at Pershing High School in Detroit in 1964. The original members were Ron Banks (lead and first tenor), Larry Reed (second tenor), Elbert Wilkins (first and second tenor), Larry "Squirrel" Demps (baritone), Robert "Duke" Ellington (bass), and Roderick Davis (bass). All attended Pershing High School with the exception of Banks, who was attending Cleveland Junior High. The teenagers began their career performing in local halls and clubs. Their vocal style was heavily influenced by their idols, the Temptations, while the Contours provided the inspiration for their fast-paced choreography.

Lead singer Ron Banks recalls, "We met at a talent show out on the tennis courts of Pershing High School. At the time everybody was in a different group. We ended up getting together, bringing in a couple of cats out of each group, and we just became a group of our own. I was 12 at the time.

"We were definitely influenced by the Temptations as well as the other groups that came under the Motown stable. We were impressed by how polished they used to be, how determined they were to be successful, and then by the total outcome of the proper ingredients put together by Berry Gordy and his whole staff that he had over there. Eddie [Kendricks] was one of the people I studied when I was coming up. Eddie had the best melody going. Eddie could make a melody out of a song. I studied Curtis Mayfield for pronunciation and the way he could dictate a song, and then Nancy Wilson, probably for performance."

Ellington soon dropped out of the group to continue his studies. In 1965, while the quintet was performing at a local talent show called Mr. Kelly's, they met the niece of Ed Wingate, who owned Wingate Records. Wingate's niece set up an audition for the group on a Sunday and Wingate signed them the following day. They recorded three songs for the Wingate label, most notably "Inky Dinky Wang Dan Doo," but the songs were met with little fanfare. The label folded in the latter part of 1966. In 1967, the quintet signed with Sport Records and had a moderate hit with "All Because of You" (#43, R&B). By now they were known as the Dramatics, a name chosen by Demps. The move to Sport Records came a year after the Dramatics passed up a possible opportunity to sign with Motown for fear of being lost in the shuffle

"That was one of the things we were concerned about even at that young age," notes Banks, "We had an opportunity to go to Motown in '66 when Berry Gordy purchased Golden World Records from Ed Wingate. We had the opportunity to possibly sign but at that time they had 70 acts signed to the roster already. They probably weren't doing anything with them except maybe eight, and five of them would get a song maybe once every three or four years. So we said we'll take our chances another way because there had to be somebody else who was looking for another group that was trying as hard as we were trying, and the Lord blessed us with some great guidance with many people throughout our career."

Despite Banks' youthful optimism, poor record sales and hard times caused some members to become discouraged, and this led to a change in personnel. William "Weegee" Howard (lead baritone) was brought in to replace lead singer Reed, and Willie Ford (bass), a one-time member of the Capitols ("Cool Jerk"), took over for Davis. In 1969, the Dramatics were signed to Memphis-based Stax Records through Don Davis, a one-time session guitar player for the Golden World label, who was now one of Detroit's most successful non-Motown producers. The quintet's first Stax single, the up-tempo, Temptations-flavored "Your Love Was Strange," featured Howard on lead, and the record flopped. The following year Stax dropped the group.

"We hooked up with Stax through Don Davis, who was recording Johnnie Taylor at the time," recounts Banks. "We had an in line with him from when he was at Golden World with Ed Wingate while we were there. He knew of us."

The Dramatics maintained their relationship with Davis and spent 1970 working with former Motown talent developer Dick Scott. In 1971 Davis put the quintet in touch million-seller when that happened and we were just elated and extremely blessed. Then we knew it was really time to go to work."

The album, titled Whatcha See Is Whatcha Get, was released on Stax's subsidiary, Volt. and produced three solid hits. The first release was the mid-tempo title track. Featuring the baritone of Howard for most of the song, "Whatcha See Is Whatcha Get" was a Top-10 pop and R&B hit in the summer of 1971, and the group's first million-seller. More important, the song gave the Dramatics an identifiable sound. Whereas in the past, the group was criticized for being an offshoot of the Temptations, the easy-flowing Latin flavor of "Whatcha See Is Whatcha Get" was unlike anything previously recorded by Motown's famed quintet. Hester's production also utilized the group's multi-lead vocals by having Ford and Banks respectively sing the opening lyrics before Howard assumed the majority of the remainder. Further aiding the success of "Whatcha See Is Whatcha Get" was the timing of its release. The song hit the airwaves at a time when comic Flip Wilson popularized the phrase "Whatcha see is whatcha get" on his variety television show, then the numbertwo-rated program in the country.

"I definitely think that Tony did [the phrase] from The Flip Wilson Show," says Banks, "But he had a clever way that he put it. He put 'Whatcha See Is Whatcha Get' through a love situation, and I thought that was deep."

The Dramatics followed with "Get Up And Get Down," a funk track calling everyone to the dance floor, which became a Top-20 R&rB hit late in 1971. The song has grown in stature over the years, and was one of twelve soul classics chosen for the highly successful soundtrack to the 1995 film Dead Presidents. The group's next single would be their biggest seller. Released in early 1972, the melancholy ballad "In The Rain" featured the tenor of Banks on lead vocal, nown for hits such as his 1994 remake of "Fantastic Voyage," "Gangsta's Paradise" and "1,2,3,4, (Sumpin' New)," Coolio, with his trademark vertical dreads, may be one of the most recognizable entertainers on the planet.

Not suprisingly given his choice of samples, the 35-year-old rapper is also an encyclopedia of '60s and '70s music, so much so that he asked that this be presented as a list of some of his favorite '70s R&B tracks, because he has too many favorites to mention. A vinyl collector, Coolio can still remember most of the words to the first record he ever bought: a 45 of Stevie Wonder's "Superwoman (Where Were You When 1 Needed You)."

Least suprising here is his selection of the Dramatics' "The Devil Is Dope." The Dramatics joined Coolio in the studio for a recasting of the song which appears on Coolio's 1997 release My Soul.

seller. With that type of determination, and definitely through the blessings of Jesus Christ, we had belief that we could do it."

The follow-up to "In The Rain" was the ballad "Toast To The Fool," which became a Top 20 R&B hit in the summer of 1972. The Dramatics were initially reluctant to record this song; the overall feeling being that it a blessing in disguise for us because we had the opportunity with James to perform, where we may have been singing on shows that might have been a sellout, maybe a lot of clubs, we ended up performing in front of nothing but coliseum crowds where every performance you were doing anywhere from 10 to 15 thousand a night. Consequently, that many people got a chance to see you perform and in time, as records got bigger and better for those three years between '71 and '74, the world was really just getting to

In the spring of 1973, the Dramatics

released "Hey You! Get Off My Mountain." Howard and Banks shared the lead on this ballad about a triumphant battle to maintain self-respect, and was the group's third top-five R&B hit. The quintet then followed with the melodic, mid-tempo "Fell For You," which reached #12 late that summer. Both songs were featured on the album A Dramatic Experience. However, the album was more noted for the three Hester-penned songs that condemned drug abuse: "The Devil Is Dope," "Beware Of The Man (With The Candy In His Hand)," and "Jim, What's Wrong With Him."

Banks explains, "[These songs] were antidrug songs which actually were much before their acceptance as far as radio play. We almost ended up going underground with

"We knew overall that the dope was not good for our people... We were saying, 'hopefully you're not using it but if you are, just remember this while you're doing it.' —Ron Banks on anti-drug songs such as "The Devil Is Dope."

with his songwriter-producer associate, the late Tony Hester. This proved to be the turning point in the group's career. Hester wrote and produced a series of songs that got the Dramatics resigned to the Stax/Volt label, and ended up being the material for their first album.

Banks remembers, "We got with Tony Hester and he showed us the songs off of [what would be] our first album, which included 'Whatcha See Is Whatcha Get,' 'In the Rain,' 'Fall In Love Lady Love,' and 'Thankful For Your Love,' and we went back to the studio and recorded those songs. Don Davis took them back and presented them to Stax and they were just truly elated about it, and it just helped us believe in what we were trying to do. At that time we might have been at a young age, but eight years is a long time to try to be successful. We were finally getting ready to get our first national and was highlighted by the use of a thunderstorm for sound effects. This moody soul classic topped the R&B charts for four weeks and was the group's second Top 10 pop hit and million-seller. Over the years, "In The Rain" has been covered by numerous artists ranging from new jack swing sensation Keith Sweat (1987) and Latin vocalist Nerissa (1993).

"We felt like any young kid would feel to see a dream come true," says Banks on the group's initial success. "We were living the dream come true but because of our upbringing we knew it was time for us to establish ourselves beyond just one-hit artists from 'Whatcha See Is Whatcha Get.' And then we also knew one thing, that our work was cut out for us because people were now listening to us. Now we had to make certain that every cut, every song we sang, we sang it like it was going to be a million-was too old for them. However, once they put their vocals to this Don Davis-produced track, the result was a gem that showed off the group's sweet-as-honey harmony, while Banks and Howard shared the lead.

The group added to its newfound success by seizing the opportunity to be the opening act on an eight-month tour with James Brown.

"We actually toured with James Brown for three years," says Banks. "It started out as a weekend tryout and we, along with the Stylistics, ended up with him for three years. That's when the Stylistics and the Dramatics got so close. James was historically known for picking up the new artists with the new hit records. He messed around there and he had us, and then the Stylistics hit up. He looked around and every record that each of us put out was a top hit record, so he didn't have to look any further.

World Radio History

that album. We were lucky to have record smashes and radio play with 'Hey You! Get Off My Mountain,' and then 'Fell For You,' but the message songs were underground and that's why they were buying [the album] so much. All of the cats who were into getting high and the ones who didn't want to get high were buying them, and playing them, and singing them to each other, and then we looked up and damn near had a cult following. A lot of people who didn't know us from our records, or Soul Train, or the James Brown shows, that didn't have the money to do that, got a chance to start hearing us when ordinarily they wouldn't have. We got real close to a lot of the cats in the streets because they understood where we were coming from. We knew overall that the dope was not good for our people so we weren't knocking what they were doing but at the same time, we were. We were saying, 'hopefully you're not using it but if you are, just remember this while you're doing it. Maybe you'll stop quicker so you don't get hooked.' That was the message through all that stuff."

By this time William Howard and Elbert Wilkins had left the group. After leaving the Dramatics, Wilkins registered the group name for himself, and along with Howard, added Dupree Sims and Isaac Reed to form a second set of Dramatics. This group signed to Mainstream Records, but only got the chance to release one single, "No Rebate On Love," which peaked at #26 on the R&B charts in the fall of 1975.

Wilkins and Howard were replaced in the original group by Lenny Mayes and L. J. Reynolds. Prior to joining the Dramatics, Mayes sang with a local Detroit group called Sunrise Movement. Reynolds, a native of Saginaw, Mich., had been a member of Chocolate Syrup, known for the song "Let One Hurt Do." At the urging of Don Davis and Stax Records, the original unit changed its billing to "Ron Banks and the Dramatics." These two sets of Dramatics toured the concert circuit for four years before Banks' group won a court battle, giving them full access to the name.

Don Davis and Jimmy Roach took over production for the Dramatically Yours album, released in 1974. The album contained a second version of "Toast To The Fool," this one featuring Reynolds covering the lyrics previously sung by Howard. The popular "And 1 Panicked" was released almost as an afterthought and resulted in the group's poorest chart showing, peaking at #49. However, at this time Stax Records was beset with financial problems that would soon lead to the label's collapse.

The Dramatics left Stax in 1974 for a short stay at Cadet, a subsidiary of Chess Records. Their one album recorded on Cadet was a collaboration with the Dells entitled The Dells vs. The Dramatics. The Dramatics sang four of the album's nine songs and paired with the Dells on an additional two, most notably the ballad "Love Is Missing From Our Lives," which achieved modest chart success in the summer of 1975 (#46 R&B).

"We wanted to test the waters at Chess," explains Banks. "We really weren't that overwhelmed with what they were doing with some of their artists but we had an opportunity to sign and do a one-album deal with them called The Dells vs. The Dramatics. In all reality this was a young group with an experienced group that took us under their wing and was willing to help us get a little further in our career. We had the opportunity to work with a more established group, and at that time we weren't 'smelling our pee' because we knew we had so much further that we wanted to travel. Us being united with the almighty Dells... hey, let's do it. We did it and it became a great success for us because it gave us an older audience. This was added to the younger audience that we had, plus the ones that were already buying records, not just buying records but would come to your show. Now we got a chance to create a club atmosphere crowd so we could do the concerts and when the concert season was damn near over, we could go back through all those major markets and even some secondary markets, plus some third markets and major clubs and play the club

"That was the key to our whole success because our strong suit has always been our live performance. Now we had a chance to work them from the clubs so when it came to the concerts, we already had a built-in audience that knew about us. All we had to do was serve 'em up right at the concerts. It's easier said than done. It's just a challenge that we accepted because we believe that if they spend the money and time to come see you, then you need to go to work and kill 'em."

Also of significance with the album was the finale of the group's musical relationship with Tony Hester. From the album, Hester produced three singles that charted: "Choosing Up On You," backed with the eerie "Door To Your Heart" in the summer of 1974, and "Don't Make Me No Fromises" later that fall. Recalling the group's collaboration with Hester, Banks says, "Man... the world misses a Tony Hester. He was a genius with a pen and he had his own route of getting what he wanted to get out of you. You had to sing his melodies. You could do your own thing but you had to sing his melodies, maybe 70 percent of the song; and his melodies and his approach were just one of a kind."

Chess Records was in the process of being sold and had virtually stopped producing new recordings. In 1975 the Dramatics moved to ABC Records, home to such soul luminaries as Rufus featuring Chaka Khan and the Four Tops. The group's move to ABC came at the beginning of the disco phenomenon. Unlike their vocal contemporaries who were known strictly for their tenor-dominated ballads, the Dramatics varied the tempo with their biggest hits and featured the baritone of William Howard and later L.J. Reynolds as much, if not more than the tenor of Banks. As a result the Dramatics were able to establish their own identity and did not suffer a decline in popularity during the run of disco.

Banks explains, "[Motown producer] Norman Whitfield taught us something when we were very young, even before we had our first songs out... to create our own identity. Because we came up in an umbrella of five singers out of Detroit, people would always look at us initially and say, 'They sing damn near as good as the Temptations.' You can't run behind the Temptations. The Temptations are an institution. We had to create some diversity and a sound that was the Dramatics' way. Fortunately we were able to do that with the different vocal styles we had. We had a lot of the same arsenal that the Temptations had, but we had to do it our way 'cause there ain't but one Temptations."

The Dramatics began 1975 with the release of "Me And Mrs. Jones," a cover of the 1972 Billy Paul smash. The group again utilized their multi-lead vocals as Ford's bass introduced the song and Banks' tenor was featured nearly as often as Reynolds' baritone. This allowed the quintet to add a doowop flavor to Paul's jazz-infused classic and turn it into something entirely their own. Canned applause was also added to give the cover version a live feel. The remake of "Me and Mrs Jones" brought the Dramatics back to the top 10 as their version peaked at #4 on the R&B charts, a surprise showing considering their version came less than three years after Paul's

"'Me And Mrs. Jones' was a song that we did in our live show for many years and it was very popular with our club crowd," says Banks. "We had turned in an album at ABC and Otis Smith, who was the president of black music there, asked us if we had another song that we could put on the album. We went back home and recut 'Me And Mrs. Jones' and we submitted it. The next thing we knew that was the lead song. They wouldn't even take it off the album for a long time because they wanted to make [the public] buy the album. It was just a great song from the beginning when Gamble and Huff did it on Billy Paul. It was a great performance by Billy Paul and we wanted to do it how a group would do it, the Dramatics' wav.'

The Dramatics followed with "(I'm Going By) The Stars in Your Eyes," a beautiful, mid-tempo love song that peaked at #22 on the R&B charts in the summer of 1975. Next came and "You're Fooling You," a dance track with a slice of funk that was similar in formula to the disco music gaining popularity at that time. Early in 1976 "You're Fooling You" became the group's lifth top 10 R&B hit. Beginning late in 1976, the quintet had three straight top 10 hits, starting with "Be My Girl." This beautiful ballad featured a spoken intro by Ford, a la "Blue" Lovett of the Manhattans. Banks then glided in with a dreamy riff before each member added his magic to this heavenly love song, "Be My Girl" was written and produced by Detroitnative Michael Henderson, who the group worked with as far back as "In The Rain." (Henderson was the bassist on that song). Henderson also recorded "Be My Girl" at the same time for his solo debut Solid and both singles entered the R&B charts at the same time. The Dramatics' version shot up to #3 early in 1977 while Henderson's record stalled at #23. The quintet followed with "I Can't Get Over You," a pleading, heartfelt ballad that reached #9 in the spring of 1977; and the funky "Shake It Well," which became one of their biggest hits, peaking at #4 in the summer of 1977.

"We had tremendous support at ABC," Banks says. "Otis Smith made certain that we got a lot of visibility. The team of Otis Smith, ABC's machinery, our management, our determination, and the people that we had around us who were rooting for us all contributed to our success. All of the cats at the radio stations were really behind us. They gave us an opportunity and that's when it really happened; when we were at ABC. Cats that even promoted the records, their staff was A-number one with us. So many people helped us independently it was just a massive onslaught to make certain things happened for us to keep us competitive because there were so many artists that were hitting behind us like Rufus and Chaka Khan, Earth, Wind and Fire, Maze, the Emotions. There were a bunch of them out there. If you wanted to create some identity, you had to get your own thing, so we brought our fire.'

Love songs kept the Dramatics on the R&B charts in 1978 with "Ocean of Thoughts and Dreams" (#17), the Reynoldspenned "Stop Your Weeping" (#22), and "Do What You Want to Do." The latter was a remake of a 1976 recording by blue-eyed soul duo Hall and Oates. Although this ballad, with its haunting melody, was not a big hit for the Dramatics, only peaking at #56 in the fall, it remains Banks' favorite song. Towards the end of 1978, the core of the group began to unravel. Banks began to turn his attention to the Brides of Funkenstein, an offshoot of George Clinton's Parliament/Funkadelic band. He also became involved with outside production work. In 1979 he wrote and produced "Why Leave Us Alone," a Top-10 R&B hit for the group Five Special, of which his brother Bryan was a

"I wrote ['Why Leave Us Alone'] for us, which as it turned out would've been a monster smash on the Dramatics," says Banks. "The guy we had been with, Don Davis, wanted all of my publishing on the tune. By this time we had gotten somewhat wise, executively. I wasn't about to write this tune and give him all of the publishing, so I decided to cut this on my brother and his group. I knew they had a group that had a lot of talented cats in it. [Davis] had no idea that record would be that big. There's no way in the world he would've let that record get away from the Dramatics, but he did."

In 1980, Demps and Reynolds left -Reynolds for a solo career. Craig Jones was added and the Dramatics continued as a quartet. The Dramatics had their last Top 10 R&B hit to date early that year with the sweet, melodic ballad "Welcome Back Home." The group completed its stay at MCA (which had previously acquired ABC) and signed with Capitol Records. Banks handled production and co-wrote six of the eight songs that appeared on their first Capitol album, New Dimensions, including two singles which charted in 1982: "Live It Up" (#40) and "Treat Me Right" (#62). The following year the group disbanded for five Banks explains, "We just felt that we had become too stagnated and everybody was individually thinking about trying to do other things; producing other acts and solo albums. I think, with the frustration of the business and all of our time and effort, we needed a break. It might've been the best thing that ever happened to us, the fact that we went on a hiatus between '82 and '87, because when we got back together we realized the audience that we had, maybe we took some of that for granted during our later years in the 1970s and early-1980s. Maybe that's why we had become so frus-

"We had forgotten what was really happening. We had already had an audience. But when we got back together we realized the audience that we still did have, and it was just something to realize that the Dramatics will always be the trump card. We don't care whatever else we do individually. whether it be solo albums or producing other artists. That's great but when we know that we can tour and sing in front of hundreds of thousands of people every year without a current record, then we know we're getting ready to serve them right up."

In 1987, Banks, Reynolds, Howard, Mayes, and Ford reunited to record Somewhere in Time. A Dramatic Reunion on Fantasy Records. Two years later they released Positive State of Mind. The legacy of the Dramatics was provided a boost in 1993 when new gangsta rap sensation Snoop Doggy Dogg sought out the group to sing vocals on "Doggy Dogg World," the third single released from his multi-platinum Doggy-Style album. Their appearance in the song's video gave them high visibility and exposed the quintet to a younger audience.

"It's amazing how that happened," says Banks. "We were just going in there to sing some stuff behind a cat who was supposed to be a new rapper. We didn't know this cat was getting ready to sell five million albums in 17 days. This cat is huge. He said he wanted some real singers. He didn't want samples, so he picked us. He said that his mom and dad used to play us all the time in his house, so this brother was down with the Dramatics. It was really a dream come true and a blessing in disguise."

Other rap artists took note of the success of "Doggy Dogg World" and sought out the Dramatics for their own albums: notably Ice Cube and Coolio, who rapped over "Devil Is Dope." The latest release by the Dramatics was a 1997 Christmas album on Fantasy Records entitled A Dramatic Christmas (The Very Best Christmas of All). Fantasy has plans to re-release the album in time for the 1998 holiday season.

The Dramatics today remain a popular nightclub attraction here and abroad and perform an average of two to three times a month, usually in tandem with the Stylistics and the Chi-Lites. In 1998 the group consists of Banks, Reynolds, Ford, Mayes, and Winzell Kelly.

Banks points out, "We locked up with the Stylistics and the Chi-Lites and between the three there's a lot of history and hit records. You can see that everybody takes a lot of pride in what we're doing and we do it as a cohesive unit. It's not a situation where 'let me do better than you.' Our situation is 'let us all do great.' It's the same way when we work with others like Ray, Goodman and Brown or the Manhattans.

"We've gotten to 'he point where we realize that, collectively, we're an equal success; individually, you're standing alone. But the power is being united together and you have to find the right chemistry for what works for you at that particular time. I also think it's important for whichever one of us might break out and have a hit record to watch out for the other acts. You try to help them along until they run up on a smash. Today might be my day but tomorrow might be yours. That's my philosophy."

LUTHER VANDROSS I Know Virgin (46089)

Soul music in the '90s has become such a formulaic commodity that sometimes it's easy to forget that the genre used to be one of music's most positive and vibrant forces. Coming at the tail end of the long golden age, Luther Vandross can be seen as the link between yesterday's R&B nuggets and today's stone-cold soul.

Possessing a sweet, spiritual voice — but not nearly as sturdy as any of the kings he idolized while making his way to the top as one of the industry's most reliable session singers — Vandross, when given the right material, can be one of music's smoothest crooners (check out his albums from the early '80s for proof). But when handed leftover (or bland soundalike) slop, Vandross can just as readily slip into today's sluggish R&B scene.

I Know, his latest album, is a bit of both (a bit heavier on the latter, unfortunately). Vandross sounds refined as ever, but not one of the album's 13 songs breaks out of the factory-like rut it keeps turning itself into. The glossy surface of I Know essentially covers up the fact that there is, oddly, very little soul beneath the soul.

At least Vandross doesn't over-dramatize matters. Unlike most of today's R&B scenemaking love-men, Vandross knows the power of subtlety; he never pushes himself or the songs any further than they really need to go. And when I Know spices up itself with a few supplemental conventions — like a lilting reggae-lite beat on "Keeping My Faith in You," a Stevie Wonder cameo on the title track, a hip-hop vibe on "Nights in Harlem" — they rarely come off as the gimmicks they actually are. But they really don't improve things, either.

LAURYN HILL The Miseducation of Lauryn Hill Ruffhouse/Columbia (CK 69035)

First things first: There's no "Killing Me Softly" on the Fugees front woman/rapper's debut as a solo artist. Yes, Hill burnishes the mix with her arresting contralto, but the point of Miseducation is to educate not showcase Lauryn Hill, superstar. Framed by a series of "lessons" in an elementary school class, the album actually uses the voice of a male teacher as its armature, while Hill portrays herself as a mother, a lover, a student, a believer and, of course, a dextrous MC with complete confidence in her ability to rhyme truth.

Love crops up often on Miseducation as a subject for musical and philosophical riffing, but it isn't the sexual or romantic love of the ordinary pop song. Moving from doubt ("Lost Ones") to self-affirmation ("The Miseducation of Lauryn Hill"), the album is really a spiritual quest, the first step of which occurs on "Ex-Factor," a potent, pleading love song that answers its own question about the strength of a troubled relationship when Hill moans: "Give to me, give to me/Why won't you live for me." From there, she goes on to affirm the central position motherhood has taken in her life on "To Zion," explaining how an unexpected pregnancy opened up a vista on a different kind of life. "I knew his life deserved a chance...," she half-moans, each syllable gaining in strength until she reaches the clinching refrain in full voice: "Now the joy of my world is in Zion."

Hill's vision of the city on the mount (here as much the product of Rastafarianism as the protestant church) isn't an end in itself. Indeed, it's just the beginning of a circuitous musical journey that takes her back to old flames and childhood memories, and forward to reflections on the meaning of power, money, the cosmological necessity of change. Some of the album's brightest moments come on the bluest songs, impossibly rich tunes like her slow, melancholy collaboration with D'Angelo, "Nothing Even Matters," the happy-then-sad Stevie Wonder update "Every Ghetto, Every City" and Afro-empowering disquisition "Everything is Everything." But even her swaggering raps and occasional use of reggae toasting lend themselves to Hill's exploration of a real, equitable love, steeped in spiritual devotion and the deepest sort of understanding. Cameos by D'Angelo, Mary J. Blige, Carlos Santana and several A-list reggae instrumentalist certainly give Miseducation breadth; however, it's Hill's commitment to a version of hip-hop that moves beyond the easy rhyme, the arrogant "truth" that puts her in a class by herself. To put it another way, this is a disc you'll see topping lots of best-of-the-year lists.

TINY TOWN
Tiny Town
Pioneer/Atlantic (92801-2)

As the saying goes, everything old is new again. That has double meaning when it comes to the conglomeration that goes by the amusing name of Tiny Town. For one thing, several of the members are veterans of other musical adventures. Bassist Johnny Ray Allen and drummer Kenneth Blevins contributed to New Orleans' popular Subdudes. Vocalist/guitarist Pat McLaughlin has earned similar success both as a solo artist and as a session player. Producer Bernie Leadon earned his pedigree as a member of both the Eagles and the Flying Burrito Brothers, among others.

However, even those who aren't clear on the players' resumes, will find that the music evokes an unmistakable aura of familiarity. The band offers up a series of funky grooves that alternate between a distinctly southern rock sound, circa the '70s, and a bluesy style that's similar to that of Bonnie Raitt or Robert Cray. The melodies are easy and engaging, the tempos lope along at an easy pace, and the harmonies of McLaughlin and guitarist Tommy Malone are generously dispersed from song to song. In

On first listen, Tiny Town would seem to be most effective in a live setting where they might make more of an impression than they do on record. Based on the groove tunes that fill their self-titled debut, the boys of Tiny Town appear to be one heck of a party band. On the other hand, it's all too obvious that Tiny Town needs to expand its boundaries. While the album boasts a number of memorable moments — the effusive and engaging sparkle of "Hollywood," the cascading choruses of "Pretty Pink Flower," and the reflective sentiment of "New Day" in particular - many of the melodies simply sound too similar to distinguish one from another. What's more, the comparisons to Little Feat, Steely Dan, the Doobie Brothers and, not surprisingly, the Subdudes are so striking and so pervasive, in fact, that they subvert the material's distinctiveness even further.

Hopefully, the Townies will come into their own with their future forays.

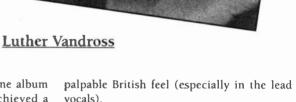

The talent that resides in Tiny Town indicates that that's indeed a likely prospect. In the meantime, Tiny Town is certainly worth a visit.

THE REVELERS Hard Times, Sunday Spirits spinART (spart60)

BILL FOX Transit Byzantium spinART (spart 63)

The Revelers are Cleveland's finest peddlers of highly charged, tightly wound, mid-60s-influenced garage psych. Hard Times, Sunday Spirits finds them honing their signature sound and flavoring it with authentic, hazy, lower-fi production touches and a

A cursory listen to the opening cut, "Meet Me at the Station," might even convince the listener that this was some Nuggets-era jewel, if it weren't for the fact that the Revelers blow their cover by mentioning Elvis Costello's Blood and Chocolate LP in the lyrics. Other easy influences spotted over the course of the record are middle-period Who, a little T. Rex (check the groovy groove to "Radiator Girl") and even Blues Magoos (on "Hey Hey Hey"). Rather than appearing as if they're stuck in some sort of time warp, the Revelers revel in some sort of time warp, the Revelers revel in crafting modern rock that borrows from their '60s heroes, rather than aping them. Most of the tunes here unfold slowly, building to a grand climax and eventually — and this takes a few listens — taking their place in the listener's subconscious. In other words, the hooks don't leap up and smack you in the kisser, but given time, they certainly make a lasting impression

The key tracks that you'll remember after the disc has stopped spinning are the wonderful "Oh My Marie" (the chorus will suck you in), the smile-inducing "Silver Ship" (love that main riff), the urgent "Happy Hunting Gentlemen" and "So Chemical (The Reveler Song)," which shows off the wild man drumming of Tommy Fox. Nice stuff. (P.O. Box 1798, New York, NY 10156-1798)

Bill Fox is the former lead vocalist of the 1980s-vintage, Cleveland-area power-pop combo The Mice (who also counted current Revelers drummer Tommy Fox among their members). In the Mice, Fox's vocals were as sweet and sticky as cotton candy, matching the innocent-sounding material perfectly.

A decade after the demise of the Mice, Fox has been reborn as a low-fi folk troubadour ("This ain't professional recorded stuff," he states eloquently in the disc's press release), with his voice taking on a world-weary, burnished quality. This is sparse music, no doubt about it, but more often than not engaging and melodically stimulating.

Before even listening to the record, a glance at the song titles gives away their folky roots; "Song of a Drunken Nightin-

WHAT ARE UNIT SPACE ADS?

Unit space ads are an affordable option for the small dealer or for the private collector who has a few items to sell. They are based on 8-1/2 x 11 sheets that you create. They are "camera ready," in other words, the ad will look in print exactly how it looks when you send it in, only smaller. We will reduce the sheets to fit the ad space. Optionally, at no extra charge we can create a heading for your ad. We will typeset your name, business name (if any), address and phone/fax numbers on your ad if you so request. The two types of ads are:

- 1. Set Sale Items are sold at the price listed.
- 2. Auction Items are sold to the highest bidder.

FOR A BETTER UNIT SPACE AD . . .

- Use white paper
- 2. Have a new ribbon on your typewriter or printer; avoid low toner on a laser printer.
- 3. Make sure the paper is vertically oriented. We cannot publish a horizontal unit space ad unless you want the reader to turn the magazine sideways to look at it. Most readers won't bother to do that.
- 4. Mail it to us; dan't fax it. Faxes can leave unwanted markings that make your ad hard to read.
- 5. Clearly identify whether your ad is a set sale or auction. Avoid mixing the two in the same ad; if you must, have separate sections for set-sale and
- 6. Include your name, address, and telephone/fax number (and when you will be available to take calls on the cd) and all ordering information, including postage and snipping fees.
- Put your listings in a logical order. If you have several formats in the same ad (LP, CD, 45, etc.), group your items by format. You also may wish to group items by type of music. As for the listings themselves, alphabetically by artist usually works best.
- 8. If you have any questions on how to set up your ad, contact anyone from the GOLDMINE advertising staff.

SET SALE GUIDELINES FOR BUYERS

- First, make sure you are replying to a set sale and not an auction. If an ad mentions minimum bids and deadlines, it's not a set sale.
- 2. Follow the advertiser's directions on how to reply. If the ad says to write first to reserve an item, do it. If the ad says that money orders only are accepted, don't write a personal check. And never send cash through the mail!
- 3. If you write or call to reserve an item and the advertiser still has it in stock, send your payment for the item promptly.
- 4. Set sale ads are "first-come, first-served," so the sooner you reply, the more likely you are to receive what you order
- 5. If you receive the item and it is not as advertised, don't hesitate to complain. Reputable advertisers take complaints seriously and try to do right by the customer. But don't take advantage of this, either; complain only when you have a legitimate reason for doing so

SET SALE GUIDELINES FOR SELLERS

- Only advertise items you have. Because of ad deadlines, some dealers will assume they will have new material based on release dates given by record companies. In the long run, it's better to wait until you actually have an item to put it in your ad-
- 2. State all your policies in the ad. Examples include method of payment, whether (and at what times) you will accept telephone calls, and whether to reserve items or send money immediately
- Send the items promptly after they've been paid for. Federal Trade Commission regulations state that you must ship your items within 30 days.
- 4. Charge only what you pay to send the package. Or charge everyone the same amount, knowing you will lose money on large packages, but will make up for it on smaller ones. If your stated postage rates are unusually high, state why! (Insurance, special handling or
- 5. Take complaints seriously. An unresolved problem is usually a lost customer.

Auction Guidelines For Buyers

- First, make sure you are replying to an auction and not a set sale.
- 2. Note the minimum bid, and don't bid less than that. Also, don't say "I will top all bids" unless the auction allows it and, of course, you really mean it.
- 3. Mail in all bids unless the ad says phone-in bids are acceptable.
- 4. Remember the deadline. If none is stated, then the auction closes one month from the date on the cover. For example, if the auction is in the GOLDMINE dated October 15, the sale closes November 15
- 5. If mailing bids, allow 1-2 weeks for your bids to arrive. And after an auction ends, allow 1-2 weeks for notification. If you haven't heard 14 days after the end of an auction, assume you won nothing unless the ad says that all bidders, win or lose, would be notified.
- 6. Honor all winning bids! If you are notified that your bid has won the item, send the money for your items within a week. Bidders reneging on their winning bids is the No. 1 complaint from those who run auction ads. If you can't honor your bid, at least have the courtesy to notify the advertiser.
- 7. Allow 2-4 weeks for your winnings to arrive.

AUCTION GUIDELINES FOR SELLERS

- . Set minimum bids on any item you won't sell for less. You also can set an auction-wide minimum; different minimums on different parts of the auction; or no minimums at all. Avoid "Ridiculous bids will be rejected" or similar phrases; you can't assume that everyone knows what a "ridiculous bid" is. Instead, take the time to set minimums.
- 2. Run an honest auction. Don't advertise items you don't have; don't artificially force bidders to bid more by claiming there's a counterbidder when there isn't one; don't overgrade your items; and sell all items that meet your published minimum and are the high bid, even if the bid is far below "book" value.
- 3. Notify winners within the first week after your deadline passes.
- 4. Send the winners their items promptly upon payment. (It's OK to wait for checks from unfamiliar customers to clear, which takes no more than a week. If it takes longer, get a new bank.) Federal Trade Commission regulations state that you must ship your items
- 5. Don't use your auction as a way to compile a mailing list unless you state that in your ad.
- 6. In sum: Treat your customers as you would want to be treated if you were the one bidding.

UNIT SPACE AD RATES

GOLDMINE has two sizes of unit space ads:

Welcome to my first ad in 15 years. Some of you may remember my 70's/80's incarnation, The Record Obsession. Now that I've got a bit time, I hope to be in Goldmine regularly, and will update the Now that I've got a bit of Recordmecca website often.

Everything's carefully graded, cover first, disc second, with detailed descriptions of even the most minor flaws. Call, write, fax or e-mail to reserve your order before sending any money. Postage and insurance are extra; 7 day money back guarantee; and feel free to send want lists; I have lots more and am always on the prowl.
