LP AUCTION - JAZZ, FUNK, SOUL, BREAKBEATS AND BLACK HISTORY

BID DEADLINE NOVEMBER 20. Highest reasonable bid will win. ALL bids are confidential. Bid by mail, phone, fax or e-mail (vinylrock@aol.com) and MUST include legible name and address(and return fax/e-mail address if applicable) for proper notification. Bid by number, but include ARTIST and LABEL info to be safe. Call between 9 AM and 6 PM Central time to speak to me. Since I never seem close enough to catch the phone, leave bids or message on the machine. Standard grading/abbreviations(TOC = tape on cover. These are radio station copies, marked with a small piece of masking tape wrapped over the spine near the bottom of the cover.) Graded cover, then record. All guaranteed original as noted. Contact me for specifics on breakbeats.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED!

gale," "Mary of the Wild Moor," "Saga of Bus Station Joe and Rag Luck Addie" - not exactly speed metal titles, are they? And the flannel-clad, gloomy-expression wearing photo of Fox on the cover helps to clear things up as well — this is serious, though well intentioned, folk music.

Songs like "I'll Give it Away," the romantic "Lay You Down," the sweet "My Baby Crying" and the swirling "Bonded to You" (also recorded by the Revelers) are the standouts, with "Thinking of You" providing the most food for thought - it sounds eerily reminiscent of Rod Stewart's "I Was Only Joking" (hopefully coincidentally!).

It's certainly not often that power-pop artists make the jump into the folk ring, but Bill Fox has managed to re-invent his musical self tastefully and successfully. (P.O. Box 1798, New York, NY 10156-1798.)

PUBLIC ENEMY He Got Game Def Jam (314 558 131)

He Got Game, the first album in four years from rap pioneers Public Enemy doubles as both a reunion album (the hate-baiting Professor Griff and production team the Bomb Squad are back) and the soundtrack to Spike Lee's latest joint. And it works on both counts.

The entire crew — from Chuck D and clown sidekick Flava Flav to DJ Terminator X on down - hasn't sounded this tight since Apocalypse 91... The Enemy Strikes Black. And although PE still are not quite contemporary (their beats and rhymes often seem stuck in the ol' skool), they come close as they have in the '90s to being a part of the time.

The best cuts here - "Resurrection" (with Wu-Tang cohort Masta Killa), "House of the Rising Son," "Revelation 33 1/3 Revolutions" - are as sonically and lyrically exciting as can be expected from the aging group this late in their game (remember: hip-hop years are measured like a dog's — each year is the equivalent of another genre's seven). And in the summer-soaked title track (which uses Buffalo Springfield's "For What It's Worth" as its starting point) they've got their best single in a long time.

ROGER KLUG Toxic and 15 Other Love Songs Mental Giant (MG9002)

Cincinnati's Roger Klug is a smart-ass. Big time smart-ass. But, hey, ain't nothin' wrong with that; Frank Zappa and Warren Zevon to name just two - have built careers on being wisenheimers. The tough parts about being a smart-ass are A.) Finding catchy, listenable music to back up your nutty rants and B.) Sustaining it over an entire album.

Well, Klug manages to turn both tricks with ease on Toxic. The tone is set right out of the box with "Toxic," a good-timey rant about a failing relationship that likens it to DDT, mercury, methanol and acid rain. among other toxins. Elsewhere, Klug tosses out a few Ben Folds Five-like, piano-fronted goofs ("On the Way to His Wedding" and the autobiographical, sweetly lighthearted

"Dawdling Daughter"), a frantic, almost punky raver (the beyond hilarious "Where Did My Girlfriend Go?") and a balls-out Cheap Trick-like rocker ("She's a Singer," where Klug also mentions that the "she" in question is a model, juggler, hacker, egghead and nomad)

But wait, there's more! Toxic also includes a domestic argument set to (catchy) music in "All Hacked Off," the almost straight-faced ballad "Nothing Better Than Love" (which makes handy use of the phrase "rugburns on my knees," and rhymes "Haagen Dazs" with "angels in their bras") and a swinging, jumpin' jive turn on "Bim Bam Boom." And as a final jab. Klug actually manages to get serious on "When We're Old," a chiming, chummy ode to his life partner.

In short, this is a rare gem of a disc that's as inventive musically as it is lyrically. For all of his smarty pants intentions, Roger Klug still manages to invest Toxic with all sorts of cool little twists and turns that make it a minor classic. (P.O. Box 9400, Cincinnati, OH 45209.)

TOM STEVENS Points Revisted Maia (MR-06)

ABBA THANK YOU ABBA

AIMS GALA-ROYAL ALBERT (J)

AL DI MEOLA LIVE AT MONTREAL

Tom Stevens served a stint as bassist in the country rockin' Long Ryders in the mid-1980s, which ended, if memory serves, a bit acrimoniously. Stevens always seemed like the George Harrison of the group, only contributing a song or two per album, and never really getting much of a chance to step out and shine. (Stevens had previously proved his singing and songwriting mettle on an independently issued six-song 1982 minialbum called Points of View.)

Not much was heard from Stevens after his time with the Long Ryders ended, until Ohio's Maia Records released a new Stevens solo record, Another Room, in 1995. While that release had its moments. Points Revisited - a collection of across-the board-excellent country-rock recorded at various locales in 1981, 1982, 1988 and 1989 - is something of a revelatory experience. Unfailingly melodic and memorable, it certainly rivals anything that the Long Ryders ever laid Basically traveling an "Elvis Costello fronting Rockpile" road ("Friend or Foe?" in particular is a ringer for Mr. MacManus), the 19 tunes here include three from the Points of View EP (and a different version of that release's finest moment, the poppy "Telephone"), some home demos of unknown vintage, and eight tunes from '89 that show Stevens delving even further into the country realm (with violin, accordion and pedal steel accompaniment).

Stevens also wears some Beatles influences proudly, as "Fading Light" procures the opening chords from "Rocky Raccoon," "Keep With Yourself" features a very Harrison-esque guitar solo, and not one, not two, but three (!) songs borrow some guitar shadings from "My Sweet Lord" (or was it "He's So Fine"?).

Stevens' easygoing, friendly brand of country rock - try "Keep With Yourself," "Coming Home Again" and "17 Ways" to

STEVIE NICKS The Enchanted Works Of Stevie Nicks Atlantic (83093-2)

This 46-track three-CD box set focuses on Stevie Nicks' solo output which began with 1981's Bella Donna, songs that lyricwise have served to shape one of the most distinctive personas in all of rock 'n' roll. Bewitching and almost unearthly (check out those ethereal photos of the gorgeous Nicks included in the CD booklet), Nicks' obvious worldliness has always been couched in appealing mystical imagery, making even her most cryptic lyrics (and there are many of those) strangely evocative. As this retrospective clearly demonstrates, she's also a supremely talented songwriter whose creative gifts incredibly have not waned with time, and she's accompanied throughout by her faithful backup singers Sharon Celani and Lori Perry whose lovely harmony vocals serve to heighten the drama of Nicks' often emotionally-charged compositions.

If there is a prevailing theme winding through Nicks' material it is her life as a rock 'n' roll woman which, judging from the sound of things, can be a rather mournful existence. In the exquisite "After The Glitter Fades" (with its touch of country twang) she states her simple truth: "For me it's the only life that I've ever known and love is only one fine star away" and in the wistful acoustic ballad "Garbo" proclaims "when you're waltzing through stardom you miss what you lose." Nicks' problem can be summed up in the title of "Talk To Me"'s B-side "One More Big Time Rock And Roll Star," something she seems to have had quite enough of, thank you ("Just what I need" she sings at one point, then goes on to describe a life that for her has lost its charm: "There were candles, crystals/l was anyone's fantasy/Say l'm not 'cause the work just gets harder").

As a whole Enchanted effectively showcases Nicks' seemingly unstoppable flair for haunting melodies. On "Has Anyone Ever Written Anything For You" she sounds so mournful it can break your heart while "The Highwayman," a rock 'n' roll romance phrased in olde time imagery, is sheer poetry. For all her flair with balladry Nicks can hardly be underestimated as a rocker - her "Edge Of Seventeen" built around Waddy Wachtel's throbbing guitar riff (here done in a live, but faithful to the studio, version), still has the power to thrill, while "I Can't Wait," presented here in an extended rock mix, is all galvanizing high energy.

Nicks was apparently gifted from an early age. The lovely "Rose Garden," about a wealthy, successful woman (told in the firstperson) who has everything she ever dreamed of except a wedding band, was written in 1965 when Nicks was a mere teen.

As a songwriter she's hardly infallible. "Rock A Little (Go Ahead Lily)" is so flat it's almost devoid of melody, while both "Thousand Days" and "Battle Of The Dragon" lack the killer hooks so prevalent in the rest of including "Long Distance Winner," a 1973 collaboration with Lindsey Buckingham from their pre-Fleetwood Mac days (featuring a far less husky-sounding Nicks) that sounds like a long-lost gem from the Rumours session and "It's Late," a 1995 demo of the old Dorsey Burnette chestnut (and a favorite of Nicks' grandfather), interesting for the novelty of hearing her sing some very un-Nicks-like lyrics (i.e., the teen couple faced with parental disapproval over a date that lasts just a little too long).

Disc three deals with less familiar oddities,

Enchanted ends with an updated and unwieldy six minute piano version of Nicks' signature tune "Rhiannon" in which Nicks sounds older, wiser and the song a lot less catchy. It's an unsatisfying end to an otherwise splendidly inspired collection

— Tierney Smith

VARIOUS ARTISTS R&B's Lost & Found Thump Records (TH7600)

This might more accurately be called a collection of soul music, given its emphasis on radio-friendly, urban, '70s era slickness. All 14 selections mine a specific, attractive groove that held firm throughout the disco era, balancing between that Saturday Night Fever thang, Motown's severe styling, and the rougher stuff emanating from Memphis and further south. A fair amount of Philly soul is present, evident in The Stylistics' "Peek-A-Boo," The Delfonics' "Walk Right Up To The Sun," and Harold Melvin & The Blue Notes' "To Be True." What doesn't come from the City of Bruth Luv certainly maintains the tight writing and vocalizing evident in those Bell/Creed and Gamble/Huff tunes offered here, with the nearly seven-minute version of The Isley Brothers' "Here We Go Again" definitely standing out as a highlight.

Some small label collections throw together reissue compilations of tunes that have nothing in common apart from everything having once appeared on flat pieces of plastic with grooves. Not so here, fortunately. R&B's Lost And Found will be appreciated by those who remember this distinct regal soul style for wonderfully balancing a classy bigcity sound with top drawer production

— Dave McElfresh

THE PLATTERS Enchanted: The Very Best Of The Platters Rhino (R2 75326)

BROOK BENTON Endlessly: The Best Of Brook Benton Rhino (R2 75324)

Despite its prime Chicago base and the infamous Dinah Washington on its roster, Mercury Records was no major R&B label in the '50s. Instead, its white singers blatantly copied black hits, while the sepia Platters and Brook Benton crooned heavenly on crossover hits that decades later stand the test of time.

Stevie Nicks

Operatic crescendos were Platters lead singer Tony Williams' trademark as he suavely continued the 1930s-40s Ink Spots sound. The Los Angeles act had previously found little success doing doowop and jump blues for King and Federal — all in print on Federal's fun The Platters: 19 Hits including a whistling-laced early version of their first Mercury blockbuster, 1955's "Only You."

But then manager/writer Buck Ram concluded that refinement, not rhythm, was the key. At the time, Mercury wanted to sign another of his acts, the Penguins, in hopes of cloning their 1954 "Earth Angel" on Dootone. Ram forced Mercury to take the Platters along with the Penguins. Lucky Mercury. Though the Penguins never again cracked the pop charts, the reconceived Platters were instant gold.

Immaculate diction and a gospel-derived sense of drama (or maybe just melodrama) sent their second Mercury single, "The Great Pretender," to the top of both pop and R&B charts. Turning back the hands of time while Elvis and Little Richard ripped it up, the intense yet ever so tasteful Platters revived oldies like "Twilight Time," "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes" and wistful "Harbor Lights."

Enchanted's final three tracks move from pop to a Mo-City sound with a largely new Platters lineup on Musicor. The magic touch was gone with Tony Williams and his sweet reveries "My Prayer" and "My Dream." Basically, the 20-song, 54-minute disc repeats Rhino's two-LP The Platters Anthology except "On My Word Of Honor" and four lesser tracks are dropped. At least we still get Zola Taylor, in one of her rare vocal leads, turning the quintet unusually playful on "He's Mine."

As for Brook Benton (born Benjamin Peay in Camden, South Carolina), he followed in Roy Hamilton's footsteps as a poised black pop crooner. After bouncing hitless from label to label, he eventually hooked up with writer/arranger Clyde Otis to co-author Clyde McPhatter's "A Lover's Question" and Nat Cole's "Looking Back," finally capturing Mercury's attention with his demo of "The Stroll," a 1958 hit for the label's white Diamonds.

Lingering on the single word "roll" to warmly savor it, his strong, romantic bassobaritone caressed his first hit, "It's Just A Matter Of Time." Its brief string-section flights reappeared on later hits like relaxed, note-bending "Endlessly."

Teaming up with oft-married Dinah Washington yielded sassy hits "Baby (You've Got What It Takes)" and "A Rockin' Good Way." Ruth Brown's wonderful reminiscence Miss Rhythm reports that once on stage Brook revised "Baby" lines to fit Miss D's tabloidquality life ("Baby, you got what it takes 'cept I wonder why you can't hold a man") so she chased him out of the club with a meat

As folk became trendy, Brook dug out vengeful murder tale "Frankie And Johnny" and "The Boll Weevil Song" whose refrain Woody Guthrie had borrowed for "Lookin' For A Home." With no Top 20 hits after 1962's "Hotel Happiness," Brook landed on southern-fried Cotillion for his final Top 10 hit, 1970's "Rainy Night In Georgia" penned by Tony Joe White. Spinal meningitis felled Brook at only 56 in 1988.

Sure, adolescent tastes dominated the mid-50s and early-60s airways, but Benton and the Platters proved sophisticated black satin could chart too. It's just a matter of time.

VARIOUS ARTISTS James Brown's Original Funky Divas Polydor Chronicles (31453 7709-2)

Mercury's Chronicles reissue line has come up with one of their most creative compilations in a longtime. The set stars an assortment of the fiery women who backed up and opened for Godfather of Soul James Brown during his sixties and seventies heyday. As Ike & Tina Turner might have said, this album is funkier than a mosquito's tweeter. Thirteen female solo or group acts preside over the 46 songs spread between these two CDs Some of these songs did very well for

#10 pop); "You're Welcome, Stop on By" (#5 R&B, #59 pop); and "Check It Out" (#6 R&B, #91 pop).

Several other '70s hits reflect Womack's interest in broader social issues. "Nobody Knows You When You're Down and Out" (#2 R&rB, #29 pop) speaks to the feelings of isolation behind the good times party scene; "Across 110th Street" confronts the killing tension between life in the ghetto and in a mainstream which is no less vicious; "Arkansas State Prison" presents a stark vision of incarceration as modern day slavery, "Harry Hippie" (#8 R&rB, #31 pop) comments with gentle irony on the aimless lifestyle of many in the counterculture, including Womack's brother Harry, who was found murdered in Bobby's home in 1974. (A girlfriend was later arrested in the stabbing.)

Although Womack's UA records mark a high point in his career, his relationship with the company was never smooth. Womack remembers feeling particularly frustrated by the company's reluctance to assign him a movie soundtrack. "Across 110th Street came about because I was always fighting with my record company," he states. "I said, 'I can't understand why you all would go outside of the company and let other artists score movies. Curtis Mayfield, Isaac Hayes. I mean they're good, but I got the same talent, why don't y'all do it here?' 'Bobby,' they said, 'You never scored a movie before.' I said, 'Right, and I never had a hit record before I had one."

Ultimately, Womack presented UA with an ultimatum. "I told 'em, 'You know what, if you don't let me have the score this time, every time I cut an album, I'm just gonna cut somethin' real silly. "Jingle Bells," anything.' And I was serious. I said I'd burn the tapes. They said, 'Okay, you start on tour in a week. You gonna come by today and look at the movie.' There was no music there, so I looked at the music and I taped the dialog. Every night after the show I would write. When I got a break, I ran down to Muscle Shoals and in four days, we had the whole album cut."

Womack attributes the success of the soundtrack to the similarity between the movie and his life. "You know what's strange about that movie? I lived there all my life. When you talk about the ghetto, I can write that blindfolded. I knew what that was about. I started writing my life story." Womack pauses and recites the first verse of "Across 110th Street," which focuses on the third of five brothers trying to survive life in the ghetto. "It's about what you do when you're put under pressure. I was sayin' that because of what I wrote and how fast I did it," he concludes. "I'd say, 'Across 110th Street was a hell of a test' because bein' in the ghetto couldn't have been no harder than that.

While the hits and his friendships with highly visible stars such as the Rolling Stones and Sly established Womack's place in the '70s scene, his legendary status among soul fans came as much from the extended album cuts and live performances where he drew more directly on his gospel roots. His closing monologue on "Jealous Love," for example, echoes the classic gospel lines, "I went to the rock to hide my face/the rock cried out no hiding place." Almost every UA album includes at least one long cut built around the intimate monologues that earned him the nickname, "The Preacher." Womack's cover of the Carpenters' "Close To You" incorporates a meditation on the unchanging nature of soul music; "Fact of Life/He'll Be There When the Sun Goes Down" touches the places where you can't really tell gospel from the blues. The live recordings of "Laughing and Clowning" (on which Womack is joined by the pioneer R&B songwriter Percy Mayfield) and "The Preacher/More Than I Can Stand" ring with an immediacy straight out of the Temple Baptist Church.

The beginning of Womack's UA period coincided with a marked change in his public image. The covers of his Minit and Liberty albums present Womack smiling and well-dressed, an update of Sam Cooke's crossover style. According to Womack, Sly Stone was responsible for his switch to the funkier, distinctly "black," style that became Bobby's seventies trademark. "Communication, Understanding," he says, thinking back on the beginning of his glory years. "Man, when I'm ridin in the car and I hear one of those songs, someone say, 'Why are you trippin'?' I said, 'I'm back to the day when we was in the studio.' Sly asked me to stay at his house. When he heard Communication, he was tellin' me. 'Man, you're too funky to be walkin' around with a briefcase and a suit and tie on. You're too funky, man, take that Following through on his fashion critique, Sly set about transforming Womack's image. The immediate result was the cover of the Communication album, on which Womack gazes out from behind dark glasses in which the viewer sees a reflected image of his band. "Sly gave me some of his clothes. He said, 'man, let your beard grow out, don't go gettin' no shave,'" Womack says. "Sly said, 'Tell the photographer to come on up to my house. Bring your band up here. Have the guy shoot the band in your glasses.' It was at his pool table. He had a lotta creative ideas. I thought, man, I woulda never took a picture before. Hair wasn't combed, I hadn't shaved in four days. I looked out of it and I was out of it. I laugh about a lotta things he said and I cry about a lot of the things he said and thought."

Contemplating the temptations that threatened to take him down with his friend — Womack reflects: "It seems like everybody comes out here [to L.A.], for some reason they get fucked up. But I can understand how it happens 'cause even the closest people around you, even your parents, become fans. The money becomes the main objective. It's erazy when its like that. You don't have nowhere else to turn cause everybody's tellin' ya the baddest things that have happened and you surround yourself with people who tell you your shit don't stink. Sometimes you can believe it."

During the later half of the '70s, several forces conspired to undercut Womack's mainstream success. On one hand, he acknowledges that the fast living described in "Daylight" (#5 R&B) had begun to wear him down, often contributing to dubious decisions. But it was also true that the hey day of deep soul was coming to an end. Disco, soft rock and arena acts like Queen and Kiss commanded the attention of huge audiences, and the music industry began to resegregate. By the time disco faded from the scene in the early-80s, most soul artists were left with little following outside the black community. Bobby Womack would never again place a record higher than number 90 on the pop charts.

The commercial decline began when Womack moved from UA to Columbia, which released two albums, Home Is Where the Heart Is and Pieces, neither of which charted. Womack attributes UA's willingness to sell his contract to a variety of factors, including his insistence on making the album ultimately released as Bobby Womack Goes Country & Western.

"I wanted to cut a country and western album and UA was sayin,' 'Man, you been around Sly too long, you flipped out,'" Womack says. "I said, 'No, it's not that man, I just don't want you tryin' to keep me in one vein. I wanted to cut a jazz album playin' nothin' but my guitar. You didn't want me to do that. Kept tellin' me cut another song like 'Woman's Gotta Have It.' I started givin' 'em the songs that way, but I never was really happy. So I just broke lose and said, 'I'm cuttin' this country and western album, that's my next release."

UA's response was predictably tepid. "They said, 'You're fuckin' crazy, we'll never get it played. Country and western's not even happenin',' Womack continues. "I said, 'Man, country and western music's gonna be the biggest music and ya know why? It's so true. It ain't no sugar coatin' it. The lyrics are there, the music's simplicity. Country and western's gonna take over.' So they said, 'What are you gonna call the album?'" Womack pauses and laughs. "I wanted to call the album Step Aside Charley Pride, Give Another Nigger a Try. The drugs were taking over."

Womack continues, "They said, 'What? Aw fuck no, you'll never come out with that.' They kept tellin' me that and I kept sayin', 'There's room for another one.' I rented these horses, went out to the stables and said I was goin' through with it. So they called Columbia and said, 'Hey, you want this guy?'" So they sold the contract to Columbia. But when I got to Columbia, they did not know me. And the business was changin' then. I cut some stuff for them, but they thought I was just a guy who'd flipped out. They wouldn't take me serious on anything I did."

In 1976, Columbia attempted to resuscitate Womack's career by sending him back to Muscle Shoals and experimenting with semidisco production, but he never felt comfortable. Although he produced several strong cuts - notably his duet with the Temptations' David Ruffin on "Trust Your Heart" and the sultry soul rap "One More Chance on Love" - he never received Columbia's trust. "They'd say, 'Bobby, this guy's gonna deal with you when you go into the studio. He's gonna watch the budget and make sure everything's cool. You can't have Sly and those guys comin' around.' I could see right then, [UA]'s told 'em, 'He's crazy, he's just slipped,' Womack continues. "They're thinkin' bring me back, but first they gotta learn what the problem is. There was no problem. The talent was there. Hey, man, trust me enough to go out and bring in the music. Tell me to go out and bring in two albums, I'll bring in two albums. But you tell me to go out there and sing a song just like the other one, that's not where I'm at. Once I've sung that song, that happened that day and I'm goin' on with life. I ain't stayin' there too long. That music was just unreal. They didn't understand that, they said, 'We want hits. Why do you fuckin' want to do that? Why don't you fuckin' want to do this? Man, this is what got you here."

Womack's response is to the point. "I said, 'What got me here is me, knowing what I wanted to do, not being controlled by a contract. They got a guy sayin' 'We need to large part because of a new marriage, Womack made a triumphant return to music with two of the classic '80s soul albums, The Poet and The Poet II, the latter of which features a series of brilliant duets between Womack and Patti LaBelle. Both albums were recorded on the Beverly Glen label, founded by long-time black industry professional Otis Smith. "With The Poet album I had really resurfaced, mentally, spiritually and everything," Womack says. "I was happy and I said to Otis Smith, man, if you're ready, I got so much to prove. I got a good wife, I got a family, I love being home with my kids.

"I'd just done the guest shot with Wilton Felder. Otis was promoting the Crusaders' record and he said, 'Who is he signed with?' And they said, 'He ain't signed with nobody.' So Otis came in and he said, 'Hey, man, the white man been takin' the money from us long enough. They promised I was gonna be the next president of Motown, then they promised me I was gonna be the next president of NBC. So I got me my own label. Man, you can be part of this. All we gotta do is distribute. You can sell records, I can get out there and promote it.' And he did."

Despite the success of The Poet albums, Womack's relationship with Smith soured. An extended legal battle over royalties lead to a courtroom showdown during which Womack reportedly attempted to punch Smith. The Poet II was released on Motown and a third compilation of material from the Beverly Glen sessions, originally titled Someday We'll All Be Free after Womack's stirring cover of Donny Hathaway's gospel soul anthem, was released without Womack's consent. Womack comments tersely on his

of the material released on the MCA albums

So Many Rivers, Womagic and The Last Soul Man makes it clear that, once again, the lack of commercial success had more to do with the listening audience than with Womack himself. It's hard to imagine why pop audiences showed no interest in "Only Survivor," 'When the Weekend Comes," which features a rare guest appearance by Sly Stone, and especially the deep soul classic "I Wish He Didn't Trust Me So Much" (#2

"The whole thing is to make music feel real... It's always gonna go back to that."

get more Womack outta there, tell him to rap more on this one.' Had a black guy said, 'That's the only way he can communicate with the audience.' It got to be no fun anymore. They was sellin' me around like a piece of meat. They didn't even see me as a

The commercial failure of the Columbia material and a final '70s album, Roads of Life (released on Arista), combined with Womack's need for a time of serious personal reflection, lead to a period of withdrawal.

"I took off the road, stopped recording, stopped makin' music and playin' the guitar for about five years," he says. "I hate to use the word burned out, but I was burned out cause I was goin' from company to company and they kept sayin' 'you got any more of them hits?' I said, 'Man, I'm tired of showin' these people I got hits.' When do you stop havin' to have hits?."

For the next several years, Womack's recorded work was limited to providing the lead vocals on Jazz Crusader Wilton Felder's single "Inherit the Wind" (#35 R&B). Womack would later reunite with Felder on the 1985 album Secrets (#91), singing on the number two R&B single "(No Matter How High I Get) I'll Still Be Lookin' Up to You."

Personally and creatively rejuvenated in break with Smith.

"He looked at me as a worn out junkie, somebody who had talent but didn't know who they were. I didn't know he disrespected me that way."

Nonetheless, The Poet albums include some of Womack's very best songs: the lovely "So Many Sides of You;" "Secrets" (#55 R&B); "Where Do We Go From Here?" (#26 R&B); and the heart-breakingly beautiful "Just My Imagination," which invokes without copying the Temptations' classic. As consistent as any albums since Communication and Understanding, The Poet albums were highlighted by "Love Has Finally Come at Last," which features LaBelle, and "If You Think You're Lonely Now," both of which reached number three on the R&B charts.

The Poet albums represent a kind of epitaph for '70s soul. As the '80s progressed, a variety of complex political and cultural changes undercut the cross-generational, interracial audience that had supported artists from Sam Cooke and Aretha Franklin to Al Green and Bobby Womack. Many of the artists continued to record, but they would never again command the attention and respect they had during the early and mid-70s. Womack moved from label to label (MCA, Solar, Continuum). The high quality R&B). Womack believes that the explanation breaks down to the racism at the heart of the music industry.

"Rod Stewart has a song that starts slow and they'll keep playin' it, give it some time to catch on," he observes. "Black record better hit right away. If it doesn't, they say it ain't makin' it. They ain't gonna give it a

During the late-80s, Womack released one album Save the Children, the title cut from which appeared briefly on the R&B charts (#83). Discouraged, depressed and suffering from the break-up of his second marriage, he descended into an even deeper depression than he had been in at the start of the decade

"I was broke, living from door to door, hotel to hotel," he recalls. "I was totally out of gas. Through all of my years in music I suffered many tragedies, causing me great pain. One of my brothers had been killed and one of my sons committed suicide. I was no longer able to write and felt that I had nothing more to contribute."

Encouraged by Ron Wood, Womack shook off his depression and returned to the studio to make Resurrection, the first release on Wood's Slide label. Featuring guest appearances by Stevie Wonder, Rod Stewart, Gerald Albright, Ron Isley and the surviving members of the original Valentinos, Resurrection represents a kind of retrospective on Womack's thematic and stylistic concerns. Most importantly, it helped Womack regain a sense of his own strength. Although he has not released new material since Resurrection, he is busy recording new material in the home studio of collaborator Michael Thomas. He expresses particular satisfaction with a version of Sam Cooke's "A Change Is Gonna Come" — "I finally got it right," he says — and a new ballad titled "Time Heals All Wounds," which he considers one of the best songs he's ever written.

Recently, he videotaped a stripped-down retrospective on which he tells the stories behind each of the songs he's written and performed over the years. While he has no distributor for the fascinating project, he is considering finding a way to release it over the internet.

The real center of Womack's musical life in the '90s, however, has been live performance. Like many other veterans of the '70s soul scene. Womack continues to attract enthusiastic audiences, especially in Europe.

"In Europe, people listen to me very closely," Womack observes. "It was almost shocking because they would ask me to sing songs that nobody'd ever asked me to sing in the States. I said, 'You help me sing the lyric and I'll sing it.' And they'd be singin' it loud. They knew every song and when I cut it and who I cut it with. I said 'Oh my God, I can't believe these people are into me like that. I gotta go home and practice. The only thing I sing in the States is the hits, that's the only thing people care about."

Through the success and the hard times, Womack has retained his basic sense of what gives soul music its lasting power.

"The whole thing is to make music feel real," he observes. "You've got two or three minutes to connect and it's important that you have a story, a good hook line. It's always gonna go back to that. '70s soul was the real deal.'

he 1993 Chicago Gospel Festival wasn't quite prepared for Rev. Al Green's extremely esoteric definition of the genre.

Generally, the annual free weekend event in the Windy City's spacious Grant Park is quite a traditionally minded gathering, spotlighting black gospel talent ranging from choirs to quartets to contemporary acts incorporating funky hip-hop-flavored rhythms. No matter what the musical approach, however, the message remains unwavering. That all temporarily changed when Green and his orchestra hit the Petrillo Music Shell stage.

Kicking off his presentation with a brasspowered rendition of his rousing 1975 hit "L-O-V-E (Love)," Green commenced to daringly blur the line between the secular and the sacred with no thought whatsoever given to the effect it might have on his peers (truth be told, more than a few were put off by Green's worldly repertoire). Over the course of his generous concert, Green delved into his voluminous 1970s stash of gold records for heart-warming revivals of "Let's Stay Together," "Love And Happiness," even a tremulous reading of the Bee Gees' "How Can You Mend A Broken Heart" that opened with Green dropping to his knees in devotional fervor, just as he did in front of screaming crowds at the Apollo Theatre prior to his celebrated religious conversion.

The charismatic singer managed to mix in a few spirituals in keeping with the festival's sanctified theme, including an inspiring "Jesus Will Fix It." But this was much the same show that Green had performed during his 1970s heyday, when he was the top male soul singer in the world. He was still bestowing roses on lucky front row patrons, just as before. Much of the crowd was bedazzled by Green's performance; a few were appalled.

Controversy has always been a part of Al Green's strange but intriguing career. He walked away from the secular arena in 1979 at the height of his popularity to offer his life wholly to God, refusing to perform his secular hits for Memphis-based Hi Records for quite a few years. Slowly but steadily, Green has embraced his soul legacy once again. Now he combines the two sides of his persona in a package as unique as the man himself.

"My life is like a book," explained the notoriously enigmatic Green on a 1978 episode of the hour-long PBS-TV concert series Soundstage, speaking of himself as he often does in the third person. "It's like a movie — a guy asks for something, he gets it, and then after he gets what he's supposed to have, then he starts to run, not doing what he's supposed to do."

It's been quite a race for Rev. Green, and it's not over yet. Not by a long shot. His Church of the Full Gospel Tabernacle has become a Memphis tourist destination on the same must-see par as the legendary Sun studio at 706 Union and Elvis's landmark Graceland home. Folks from around the globe eagerly descend on Rev. Green's house of worship on Sunday mornings to watch its celebrated pastor preach his dynamic twohour-plus sermons.

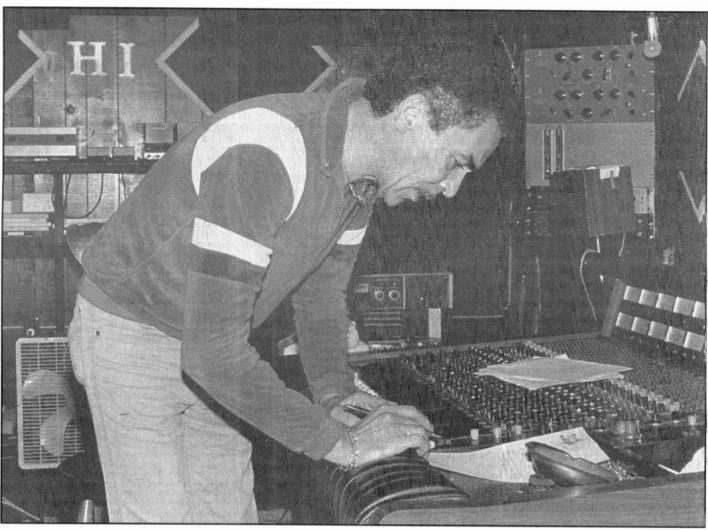

A far cry from 1968, when a young singer who still spelled his surname with an extra "e" on the end had to talk his way onto a bill in Midland, Texas, just to have his melismatic cries heard by the public. Broke and stranded, the young singer was attempting to find a way back home to Grand Rapids, Michigan, when bandleader Willie Mitchell, then riding high with his hit remake of the elegant King Curtis instrumental "Soul Serenade," hit Midland to play a nightclub date with his groove-generating combo.

"He wanted to get his fare back home," said Mitchell. "I told him he could do a couple of tunes with the band that night. and I would help him get back. When I heard him sing, I said, 'Well, he needs to go back to Memphis with me.' So I asked him if he would like to go. I said, 'You can be a star.' He said, 'How long would it take?' I said, 'About 18 months.' He said, 'I don't have that long to wait.' Anyway, he did come back to Memphis, and we started working, trying to figure out a new style for him.'

Even then, Mitchell heard something extraordinary in Green's airy, ethereally floating vocal delivery, something unique that convinced the veteran producer for Hi Records to take a chance on him by loaning the singer $1,500 that he might have never seen again. But Greene, as he was then known, was hardly an amateur. He had already scored a Top Five R&B smash in December of 1967 with his slinky "Back Up Train" for the Hot Line Music Journal label with his then-vocal group, the Soul Mates.

It's safe to say that Mitchell's $1,500 gamble paid off handsomely. Green's astounding hit-making run at Hi Records encompassed 14 Top Ten R&B smashes from 1971 to 1976 that Mitchell produced, six of them topping the list. There were five Top Ten pop hits as well. Green scored one more huge seller in '77 with "Belle" that the singer produced himself, but basically it was the musical marriage of Green, Mitchell behind the board, and the sublime Hi house rhythm section (brothers Mabon "Teenie" Hodges on guitar, Leroy Hodges on bass, and Charles Hodges on organ, along with alternating drummers Howard "Bulldog" Grimes and Al Jackson, Jr.) that made musical magic that sparkled and shone like cut diamonds under a blazing sun.

Born on April 13, 1946, in Forrest City,

Willie Mitchell at work in his celebrated recording studio.

Arkansas, Albert Greene grew up in a strictly sanctified household. At age nine, he and his large family moved to Michigan, where sneaking a listen to pop music was grounds for physical discipline at the hands of his father. Still, alongside the heavenly harmonies of the Soul Stirrers and the Swan Silvertones, the youngster found himself entranced by the worldlier subject matter projected by Jackie Wilson, Sam Cooke, and James Brown.

Since he came from a such a huge brood (he had five sisters and four brothers), assembling a family gospel group was a snap. The Greene Brothers — initially comprised of Robert, Walter, and William - made a bit of a name for themselves around the Midwest. Al joined the aggregation when he was nine and remained in the ranks for seven years. But R&B coursed through his veins too, so when two members of a local group called the Creations approached him about joining them as their lead singer, he gambled that his father wouldn't skin him alive and took them up on the offer.

Soon the Creations (in addition to Al, Palmer James, Curtis Rodgers, and Gene Mason) were gigging regularly around Michigan. Their first booking in Battle Creek found them accompanied by tenor sax squealer Junior Walker & the All Stars, just around the corner from serious soul stardom themselves. (Incidentally, contrary to numerous published reports, these were not the same Creations who waxed "Foot Steps" for the Chicago-based Zodiac logo in '67. That Ric Williams-produced Detroit trio, consisting of Fred Bridges, Richard Knight, and Robert Eaton, soon became known as the Brothers of Soul and went on to score a hit for Boo Records with "I Guess That Don't Make Me A Loser" in 1968.)

With James and Rodgers sticking around to serve as their producers, Greene hooked up another group called the Soul Mates (those mates were his brother Robert and Lee Virgins). James and Rodgers wrote "Back Up Train," a plaintive mid-tempo piece, for their young charge, the choir-like response of the Soul Mates and the placid musical backdrop framing Greene's fragile vocal beautifully. The result was an out-of-left-field #5 R&B hit for Greene's group on James and Rodgers' new Hot Line Music Journal label (almost immediately shortened to the less unwieldy Hot Line) at the end of 1967.

Greene rode "Back Up Train" all the way to the stage of the Apollo Theatre and similarly famous venues, but its locomotive momentum was short-lived. Neither the silky-smooth "Don't Hurt Me No More" nar the considerably tougher upbeat entry "I'll Be Good To You" exerted the same hypnotic effect on record buyers, though in retrospect it's difficult to understand why.

Unfortunately, Arista (current owner of Al's Hot Line catalog) has yet to make the Back Up Train album digitally available. That's a pity; the young singer was already summoning up a melismatic allure on the dreamy "Guilty" (written by Grand Rapids composer Robert Williams) and his own "Stop And Check Myself." On the up-tempo material — "Hot Wire," "I'm Reachin' Out." "That's All It Takes (Lady)" - he laid on the beat in much the relentless manner of Otis Redding (clearly one of his major influences). The Soul Mates made their presence felt on the flute-enriched driver "Get Yourself Together," which suffered from a weird mix that dropped the drums out drastically.

One hit will only take a singer so far. In Al's case, to Midland, Texas, and no farther. Guitarist Teenie Hodges remembers that initial meeting between Mitchell's band and Green a little differently than his then-boss, enough so it's worth hearing his version of the tale too.

"He was on the show, but we didn't know until we left town " recalled Hodges. "We were on the highway, and Willie said. 'Oh, by the way, there's this guy we're gonna have to play behind - the guy that did "Back Up Train," Al Green. We're gonna have to rehearse with him when we get there.' So we did. That was really the first time I met him.

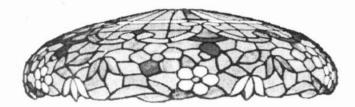

"We had been looking for a singer," continued Hodges. "After the rehearsal, we didn't think very much of him. But when the show came, after the second song of the first show, Willie and I looked at each other on stage. We didn't say anything, but the minute we took the break, I went back by the dressing room, and Willie was sitting at a table. And I said, 'Willie, you're saying Hi Records needs a singer — this is the guy right here!' And Willie said, 'What do you think I'm sittin' here with this pen and paper for?' He was waiting for Al to get his address, and invite him to Memphis."

Whatever the particulars of the fateful meeting, Green took a bus ride back to Memphis with Mitchell's crew, then turned right around and went to Grand Rapids with the bandleader's $1,500 burning a hole in his pocket. But he wasn't gone for long; after all, Mitchell's earnest promise of stardom in a year-and-a-half was surely ringing in his ears. And wouldn't you know it — that bold timetable proved uncannily accurate.

Mitchell certainly knew how to produce hits, though not on the gargantuan level that he would with his new signing. Born in Ashland, Mississippi, he came to Memphis when he was two. Six years later, he picked up a trumpet, and in 1946, still in his teens, Mitchell hit the road with his 10-piece band. After an Army hitch, he came home and put together another combo in 1954, building a huge following through regular gigs at the Plantation Inn and the Manhattan Club. He made his first single for the tiny House of Sound logo in 1957, then got his feet wet producing and arranging for Reuben Cherry's Home of the Blues logo in 1960. There Mitchell worked with Roy Brown, the "5" Royales, and Larry Birdsong, as well as waxing his own "Willie's House Party."

In 1961, Mitchell moved over to Hi, a label formed four years earlier that was bestknown in its early days for a series of smash instrumentals by the Bill Black Combo. saxist Ace Cannon, and Mitchell himself. Willie debuted with a chunky "The Crawl" and hit big in 1964 with the punchy "20-75" (its odd title was actually the Hi 45 release number). More chart entries - "Buster Browne," "Bad Eye," the aforementioned "Soul Serenade" - followed. As the decade progressed and Hi issued album after album of his easy-going grooves. Willie eventually phased out his cadre of trusty Memphis sessioneers in favor of the youthful Hodges brothers, who joined the organization in rapid succession.

"He actually hired me first to join the group," said Teenie Hodges. "And then about a month later, he hired Leroy. And a couple of months later, he hired Howard Grimes.

And then a couple of months later, he hired Charles. We had really been playing together all the time though. Except for Charles — I'd never played with Charles I didn't even know he could play because I left home at 18. But he started playing with O.V. Wright at 14. But I never knew it, and when he told me. I didn't believe him. When Willie suggested hiring him, I told him, 'But Charles can't play!' He said, 'Well, I hear he's the best keyboard player in town.'"

Mitchell's stepson, pianist Archie Turner, also became an important cog in the Hi house rhythm section. Mitchell's Royal Recording Studio was a huge facility, a former movie palace with singular sonic properties.

"It had its own unique sound," admitted Mitchell, who performed wonders with a simple eight-track mixing board.

Why was the former theater so special?

"Because of the way the ceilings were made," replied Hodges. "The ceilings were so tall, but they had baffles to close sound out from the other instruments. I think it definitely had an effect on it. because you could get a live sound or a dead sound, any way you wanted to."

The grooves flowed hot and heavy as Willie whipped his young recruits into world-class shape, though it took a little while for them to jell with Green's strengths. The first tangible product of the collaboration, released in April of 1969, was an unlikely one — a hard-charging remake of the Beatles' 1964 number one hit "I Want To Hold Your Hand" that Green (his surname now one "e" poorer) attacked with Reddinglike vengeance, complete with a few guttural grunts thrown in for good measure.

Though Mitchell's value judgment ("That was a joke!") seems a tad harsh, it wasn't the direction that would propel Green to the very top of the charts and keep him there for years. Its flip, a mid-tempo outing called "What Am I Gonna Do With Myself" that bore scant resemblance to Brill Building fare despite Mitchell's co-writer's credit, was closer to future exploits.

A month later, Hi tried again with "One Woman," a sensuous ballad penned by Charles Chalmers and Sandy Rhodes (two-thirds of the trio that added gorgeous vocal backing to most of Green's Hi hits, along with Sandy's sister Donna), flipped with a Green/ Mitchell collaboration, "Tomorrow's Dream," that presaged the intricate chord structures at the heart of Green's success.

Green Is Blues, the singer's first Hi album. followed in July. Its song list may have mirrored Green's live repertoire, judging from the preponderance of covers (Jerry Butler's "I Stand Accused," Little Willie John's "Talk To Me," the Temptations' "My Girl," the Box Tops' "The Letter"). But in every case, Mitchell and crew took care to devise a new concept, whether via a catchy hook or a tempo change. Green doubled his Beatles cover quotient with a spirited "Get Back," which confusingly came directly after a Green original titled "Get Back Baby" that traveled funky one-chord terrain over punchy horn interjections (Green even manages to slip in a mention of "Back Up Train") The Gershwin warhorse "Summertime" served as the finale, receiving a languid reading.

Another album track, the inspiring midtempo 'Gotta Find Me A New World," was pulled for Green's next 45 before the year was through as the B side of "You Say It," a call-and-response rocker with Teenie's guitar out from that became Green's first Hi R&B charter, peaking at #28 in early 1970. A funk-dripping "Right Now, Right Now" bettered that showing by five slots during the summer, though the sinuous flip "All Because" was just as assured a showcase for the rapidly maturing singer.

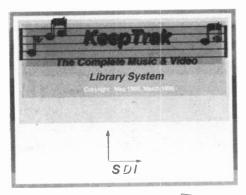

It took guts to challenge the Temptations on their own turf. But that's precisely what Green did when he waxed a blues-soaked cover of their "I Can't Get Next To You." The radically reworked reading (Green slowed it down to a raunchy grind, buttressed by Hodges' distorted lead axe and sizzling horns) vaulted to #11 R&B just over a year after the Temptations had paced the same charts with the Norman Whitfield/Barrett Strong copyright. "Ride Sally Ride" adorned the flip; it was pure sweaty unsanitized Memphis funk with a nod in the direction of an ancient nursery rhyme.

Green was in a bluesy bag as 1971 broke, digging into the Roosevelt Sykes pre-war perennial "Driving Wheel" with rip-roaring gusto (Green's cousin, blues harpist Junior Parker, nad scored a smash with the number in 1961 for Duke). Paired with "True Love"

(a hellfire-and-brimstone rocker that Green gave one of his fiercest vocals, complete with assorted yelps and groans), Al's version only managed a #46 R&B showing, so it was high time to revert to original material.

And that was when the full-fledged breakthrough commenced. Constructed around a devilishly clever chord progression, Green's own "Tired Of Being Alone" (a song that came to him in a dream) returned him to the R&B Top Ten for the first time since "Back Up Train" in the summer of '71 (peaking at #7), and crossed over to the pop hit parade, climbing to #11. Suddenly Al Green was his own man vocally, not beholden to any of his idols stylistically, in possession of his first gold record (there would eventually be seven more decorating his mantle).

The recording marked the inauguration of another Memphis institution: the meticulously blended vocal backing trio of Rhodes, Chalmers, Rhodes, Chalmers, better known then as a saxist (his scorching tenor solo matched Wilson Pickett's banshee scream for unadulterated excitement on the Wicked One's '66 hit "Land Of 1,000 Dances;" Chalmers had also waxed his own instrumental LP for Chess, Sax And The Single Girl), joined sisters Donna and Sandra Rhodes in the studio to provide luscious vocal harmonies behind Green. They would be a permanent fixture after that, cushioning Green on the great majority of his Hi clas-

Mitchell had achieved his goal of making Al Green a star, right on schedule. "You could see the prettier music from 'Tired Of Being Alone," said Mitchell. "Different changes, the nice bouncy rhythm on the bottom. So you could see that Al's voice was changing. I was trying to get him to sing softer.

The trademark horn treatments by Mitchell and his baritone saxist brother James were crucial to the Hi sound and Green's seminal output; their careful placement inevitably benefited and never clut-

Al Green Gets Next To You, the singer's Hi encore LP, contained his last five R&B chart hits, along with a cover of Freddie Scott's powerhouse "Are You Lonely For Me" and an intimate reworking of the Doors' "Light My Fire." Green's first writing collaboration with Teenie Hodges, "I'm A Ram," was a lowdown blues that contrasted dramatically with the sanctified "God Is Standing By," originally introduced by Johnnie Taylor with the Soul Stirrers before being secularized by Ben E. King as "I'm Standing By" for Atco.

"From the beginning, every album we did, he had to do a gospel song," said Hodges. "Because he sang in church first. He made that known when he first came that there had to be a gospel song on every album he did. He kept telling them that God was calling him to preach."

Green's already soaring fortunes took a quantum leap upward with the emergence of his third Hi album, Let's Stay Together. The LP went gold and rightly so: it was an unalloyed masterpiece, each of its nine songs making it obvious that Al Green was now America's pre-eminent R&B voice. The title track was the ultimate example of Mitchell's campaign to soften Green's approach; his silky-smooth vocal flights presided over a brilliantly concise arrangement filled with highly imaginative chord changes (the province of Mitchell, who wrote it with Green and Al Jackson). Not only did "Let's Stay Together" rise to the top of the R&B charts as 1971 ended and remain there for nine weeks, it paced the pop lists as well.

The album of the same name was packed with gems that could easily have become hits had there been sufficient space on Hi's 45 release schedule. "It Ain't No Fun To Me" slithers on a down- and-dirty bluesy kick, Teenie picking his way through some elastic seventh chords. "La-La For You," "What Is This Feeling," "Judy," and "So You're Leaving" are breathtaking displays of the rich, thick Hi sound, Green floating atop the multi-layered backdrop (James Mitchell usually arranged the Memphis Strings). A faster rendition of Eddie Floyd's 1968 Stax hit "I've Never Found A Girl" extended the hook to maximize its impact, and when Green sank his pipes into the Bee Gees' "How Can You Mend A Broken Heart," he blessed it with an angelic shimmer that could shatter even the most cynical curmudgeon's ticker into a million pieces.

Green made it two gold albums in a row with 1972's I'm Still In Love With You. This time there were two monster hits aboard, both of them products of the prolific triumvirate of Green, Mitchell, and Jackson, whose wet-bottomed drums were another integral factor of the singer's success (Jackson was still switching off with Grimes on traps). In much the same intimate mode as "Let's Stay Together" but boasting a slightly more propulsive beat, "Look What You Done For Me" came first in the spring of '72, sailing to #2 R&B and #4 pop. In mid-summer, the glistening "I'm In Still In Love With You" came up right behind it, topping the R&B lists and stopping at #3 Pop. Both singles sold a million copies for Green and Hi.

The singer must have been in a very happy phase in his life, judging from the marvelously inspiring "What A Wonderful Thing Love Is" and "Simply Beautiful." "I'm Glad You're Mine" was built around Grimes's complex syncopated rhythms (a takeoff on the second-line feel of Lee Dorsey's "Working In A Coal Mine") and punctuated by elegant horn lines supplied by the Memphis Horns: trumpeter Wayne Jackson, tenor saxmen Andrew Love and Ed Logan, trombonist Jack Hale, and James Mitchell on bari-

Somehow one of the LP's most essential tracks, "Love And Happiness," avoided single release at the time (it belatedly came out on a 45 in 1977 to negligible response). The obscure Stone label, instead, grabbed all the single sales in 1973 with a vastly inferior version of the song by one Ernest Jackson (it went to #22 on the R&B chart). From the eerie moaning intro (Al testifies over Teenie's precise chording before the guitarist stomps off the beat on a soda crate and peels off seven stinging notes on his axe that bring in the rest of the band) to the unstoppable groove of the song itself and the piping horns building the minor-key vamp towards the end, Green's "Love And Happiness" rates with the greatest of all his waxings (and is certainly one of his two most memorable

As DJ for the popular hip hop group Cypress Hill, DJ Muggs (née Lawrence Muggerud) has been largely responsible for the slick, bouncy rhythms and creative samples that underpin the group's tight raps.

Named for the street in South-Central L.A. where they met, Cypress Hill mix rhymes about street life with pro-weed raps, and are active participants in efforts to legalize marijuana. Since releasing their debut album in 1991, Cypress Hill have become one of rap's most enduring groups, maintaning their street credibility while crossing over into the mainstream and enjoying multi-platinum

A Goldmine reader and vinyl collector, Muggs credits rap, and the constant search for samples, for leading him to explore the music of artists he might otherwise have never found. He also readily agrees that sampling has put food on the tables of older songwriters whose royalties might have otherwise dwindled.

"We're not only paying for food, we're making the house payments, too," Muggs says. "I used a chip of 'Duke Of Earl' [On the hit "Insane In The Brain"]. Man, they got me for like 50 G's."

"I had the idea of the title for 'Love And Happiness,' and 'It'll make you do right and make you do wrong," says Teenie Hodges, Green's co-writer on the song. "Then he took it from there. But I explained to him, every song we wrote together, I would have the title and the catch-line — the line for the

Once again, Green's taste in covers was quite intriguing. "For The Good Times" was a Kris Kristofferson copyright that country crooner Ray Price had made into an acrossthe-board hit in 1970, but Green escorted it to new and uncharted territory with his frisky falsetto musings. Roy Orbison's 1964 smash "Oh, Pretty Woman" would seem an even more unlikely piece of material for Green to work his melismatic magic on, but with a throbbing backbeat from either Jackson or Grimes to prod him on, Green made it his own against all odds.

A telling indication of just how huge Green was becoming: in September, he opened a two-week stand at the Copacabana in New York, following in the hallowed footsteps of his idols Sam Cooke and Jackie Wilson. Bell Records, who controlled Green's old Hot Line material, took note of Green's unbelievable string of smashes, digging into its archives to issue the spacy, Marvin Gayetinged ballad "Guilty" as a single. Bell also tacked some abstract artwork onto the Back Up Train LP and reissued it under the rudimentary title of Al Green. Both sold respectably, if not on the same exalted level as the singer's cutting-edge Hi stuff.

1973 brought two more gold albums for the mercurial singer. Call Me contained three more gigantic hits. "You Ought To Be With Me" was first out of the box, an R&B charttopper (#3 pop) crammed with unexpected twists and turns devised by the prolific Green, Mitchell, and Jackson. Next up was a gorgeous "Call Me (Come Back Home)," a #2 R&B smash (#10 pop) written by the same trio, fired by the whoosh of Charles Hodges's organ and the bright and tight Memphis Horns. The pounding, strutting "Here I Am (Come And Take Me)" rounded out Green's LP hit parade, matching the exact chart figures of its predecessor in both

"There's a group on London Records, the Indian group, it really came from them, Redbone," explained Teenie Hodges, whowrote "Here I Am" with Green. "I was trying to make the music sound like Indians, like that type of dance. That type of feel."

The Call Me album comprised two impossibly delicate ballads, "Have You Been Making Out O.K." and "Your Love Is Like The Morning Sun," both penned by the singer himself. "Stand Up" brought a solid up-tempo Memphis groove to the proceedings, while sensitive remakes of two country classics, Hank Williams's immortal "I'm So Lonesome I Could Cry" and Willie Nelson's "Funny How Time Slips Away," hinted that Green surreptitiously listened to hillbilly radio during his formative years (the innovative use of double tracked vocals made it sound as though Al was at times answering himself on both). After a one-LP hiatus, the singer revived his practice of including a gospel song, penning "Jesus Is Waiting" expressing his spiritual commitment.

Before the year was through, Hi issued Livin' For You, yet another gold album harboring two more major sellers. The gossamer-streaked title cut, scribed by Green and producer Mitchell, made it to the peak of the R&B charts (his fourth trip to the top), while the irresistibly grooving "Let's Get Married" went to #3 R&B (the superior longer album take finds Green bringing the sinuous tempo down to whisper-level, then building the momentum back to a sparkling crescendo).

As usual, the album was an extremely solid affair, James Mitchell pouring a little violin-enriched syrup on a devotional "So Good To Be Here." The minor-key strutter "Sweet Sixteen" drove steady with some of the same swagger as "Love And Happiness," and when Green sang about the joys of being "Home Again" and "Home At Last" over Charles Hodges's churchy organ, the experience was nothing short of cathartic.

Green may well be contributing the sparse acoustic guitar lines himself to the eight-minute-plus "Beware" (one of seven tunes he had a hand in writing on the set). Once again, the singer's sanctified side was on display with an earthy rendition of "My God Is Real," and his fascinating eclecticism surfaced with a lovely "Unchained Melody" reflecting his personal idea of a song associated with Roy Hamilton and the Righteous

The name of Al Jackson, Jr. was conspicuously missing from the credits to 1974's Al Green Explores Your Mind (both as composer and drummer), but his longtime protege Grimes had absorbed his timekeeping lessons well, enough so Jackson's absence wasn't discernible. Jackson would be tragically murdered in 1975, a baffling case that remains unsolved to this day.

"Every time I would have a session, Al would be there and Howard would be there." said Mitchell. "We'd see which one suited the best for the drum kit. Sometimes Alwould play, and sometimes Howard would play. Al was teaching Howard. Howard was one of Al's students."

Only one legitimate smash graced the set, the surging Green-penned "Sha-La-La (Make Me Happy)," which vaulted to #2 R&B and #7 pop in late '74 and proved the last gold single of Green's secular career. But ironically, the best-known tune on the all- original album wasn't even pressed up as a Hi single. "Take Me To The River" was another collaboration by Green and guitarist Teenie Hodges, one the singer dedicates to his cousin, blues harpist Junior Parker, who had died in 1971 of a brain tumor.

"When we did the song, we went to Poplar Tunes, Al and I did, looking at records," recalled Hodges. "And Junior Parker came in. Junior was from Forrest City, Ark, also, I knew Junior, and I introduced Al to him. He told him, 'We did one of your songs ("Driving Wheel").' And Junior listened to it, and he thanked us. So from that, 'Take Me To The River' came after that, from meeting him."

The religious undercurrent at the heart of

"I told him I didn't really know gospel music. I had no idea he was gonna becaome a preacher, but he was always religious. I know that." -Willie Mitchell

"Take Me To The River" inspired one of Green's most passionate performances. Hodges' explanation of its meaning is almost as cryptic as the song itself.

"The title came from me also," he said. "But that's what I meant, it's like being baptized. It's like with women, it's just like a religion, so whatever you want, do what you want to do. Just take me to the river. Do whatever you want to do."

Instead of releasing it as an Al Green single, Mitchell had Hi labelmate Syl Johnson cut a bluesier interpretation complete with his own harp solo. It became Johnson's biggest hit during the spring of 1975.

Other highlights on Explores Your Mind included the lovely doo-wop-tinged ballad "God Blessed Our Love" (its melody highly reminiscent of the Impressions' 1958 classic "For Your Precious Love") that found Green and Mitchell collaborating with house writer Earl Randle; a nostalgic "School Days," and two worldly treatises, "The City" (penned by Green and organist Charles Hodges) and "One Nite Stand," that were about as lyrically removed from Green's gospel leanings as could be imagined.

As "Sha-La-La" climbed up the popular charts, a tragedy struck Green that would profoundly change his life, moving him nearer to the day when he would renounce the secular arena. On October 18, his married girlfriend, Mary Woodson, grew distraught and hurled a boiling pot of cereal on the singer's back as he relaxed in the bathtub. She then blasted a .38 caliber bullet into her head, ending her life. Green suffered second-degree burns to his back, arms, and chest that sidelined him for months.

But the singer wasn't quite prepared to abandon the enticing world of rhythm and blues yet. The Grammy-nominated Al Green Is Love, his eighth collection of fresh material for Hi, kept his astonishing string of uninterrupted successes intact. Its joyously romping, horns-and-strings-leavened title track "L-O-V-E (Love)" triumphantly restored Green to the top of the R&B lists during the spring of '75 and provided him with an uproarious houserocker for live

No extraneous covers sullied the program; Green had plenty of time to devise a slew of achingly beautiful melodies while convalescing, the rapturous "Could I Be The One," "I Didn't Know," and "The Love Sermon" waxing rhapsodic about love and its sweet permutations. "Rhymes," co-penned by Teenie Hodges, found Green spreading nursery limericks over a bluesy setting, while an uplifting "Oh Me, Oh My (Dreams In My Arms)," the collection's other hit (#7 R&B), placed Charles Hodges' bubbly organ high in the scheme of things. A surprisingly strong African influence distinguished "Love Ritual," Grimes's stickwork augmented by one Conga Lou, and Green seemed to presage the immediate future with his simmering "I Gotta Be More (Take Me Higher)."

"Full Of Fire," Green's final R&B charttopper, arrived in late '75, its elastic ambience floating like a puffy cloud on a breezy afternoon. All the elements were still in place to create something of superior musical value on the singer's album of the same name: Willie and James Mitchell split the horn and string arrangements (James imparted a cool, jazzy appeal not previously encountered in Green's work to the horn lines within "Always").

Sandra and Donna Rhodes (the nieces of country artist Slim Rhodes, who dabbled in rockabilly at Sun during the mid-50s) and Charles Chalmers still contributed angelic vocal harmonies, and the vaunted Hi rhythm section (with Archie Turner and Michael Allen sharing piano duties) cooked up grooves like no one else on the grinding "That's The Way It Is" and a brassy "Let It Shine" (the LP's other R&B chart item, peaking at #16). There was also another country exploration, as he transformed Buck Owens's honky tonk weeper "Together Again" into something sleek and velvety.

But change was on the horizon. There was one more Mitchell-produced #4 R&B seller, the audaciously arranged "Keep Me Cryin'," and Green's Have A Good Time album to savor in late '76. But sadly, it was time for Green and Mitchell to part company. Green had purchased his Memphis church and was at last ready to devote his life to a higher calling. He discussed his ambitious plans with his longtime producer, but Mitchell couldn't quite share Green's enthusiasm for recording spirituals exclu-

"I told him I didn't really know gospel music," explained Mitchell. "I had no idea he was gonna becaome a preacher, but he was always religious. I know that." So Green assumed the added task of producing his next LP (he had shared co-producer credit with Mitchell on his last several albums

The Belle Album was a radical departure from what had preceded it, spiritually rooted but not entirely a gospel album either. Hailed as a masterwork by the critical elite when it emerged in November of 1977, the album spawned the placid hit "Belle" (Green's final trip to the R&B Top Ten at Hi). But after that one triumph, the public seemed less enthralled by Green's new musical direction, giving "I Feel Good" a lukewarm reception (at least by Green's lofty standards).

In retrospect, the self-indulgent The Belle Album simply wasn't in the same exalted league with the uniform magnificence of Green's Mitchell-produced work. His band wasn't the equivalent of the Hodges brothers and Grimes (Green was now handling some of his own guitar work), and his brand-new $500,000 recording studio didn't possess the same aural magic that Royal did.

Truth n' Time, Green's last 1979 foray into anything resembling pop music at Hi, was similarly schizophrenic. One got the distinct impression that when Green wrapped his feathery tenor around the unlikeliest of vehicles - the cloying "To Sir With Love" - he was envisioning a higher power than the idyllic schoolteacher portrayed by Sidney Poitier that Lulu sweetly sang to in the 1967 film of the same name. The track barely cracked the R&B charts; its flip, "Wait Here," fared marginally better. Perhaps Green's heart was simply no longer in it he retained his secular repertoire in concert throughout his gradual religious conversion, but 1979 marked the end of that practice

The transformation of one of the greatest R&B performers of the 1970s into Rev. Al Green was complete. The Grammy Award that had eluded him as an R&B superstar came with his first gospel release, The Lord Will Make A Way, in 1981. After that, the voters anointed him with statuary on a regu-

The singer's soulful legacy was celebrated in deluxe style last year when The Right Stuff, an EMI imprint, assembled a four-disc Al Green Anthology. It featured his many Hi hits along with rarities from MCA's 1989 Hi outtakes LP Love Ritual, four early Hot Line gems, and excerpts from director Robert Mugge's revealing film documentary Gospel According to Al Green. All his original Hi albums except Have A Good Time are also available on compact disc from the Right

Today, Rev. Green finds it entirely feasible to perform his seminal soul classics while remaining true to his religious vision. That enlightened outlook might have offended a few devout believers at the '93 Chicago Gospel Festival, but his vast and devoted legion of fans are mighty glad he feels that inging soul music simply doesn't interest Joe Simon anymore. He's got a more important crusade to undertake. Simon, who placed no less than 49 songs on Billboard's R&B charts between 1965 and 1981 — making him one of the top-selling soul artists of all time - now prefers to save souls instead. As the associate minister of the Cathedral of Joy Church in Flossmoor, Illinois (a southern suburb of Chicago), Simon intones the praises of the Lord exclusively (no waffling between the secular and gospel fields in the manner of his peer, Rev. Al Green).

"I'm an evangelist, so I travel across the country," reports Rev. Simon. "What I do, 1 sing and preach. Singing and preaching the word of God." Sometimes his evangelical activities land him in the midst of controversy: his brother's Simon Foundation, Inc., filed suit Aug. 17 for the sum of $100,000,000 in damages against Moreno Valley, Calif., after the town canceled a permit— allegedly at the last moment — for a Praise Celebration Gospel Concert slated for Aug. 7-9 that would have headlined Rev.

At least his flock of disappointed southern California followers can hear Rev. Simon sing spirituals on his new CD. The Ripete label has released This Story Must Be Told. Simon's first pure gospel album (Simon released several years earlier an LP that focussed on his preaching.) The new CD features a rousing Soul Stirrers medley and sanctified selections penned by veteran R&B artists Paul Kelly and Clifford Curry along with a half dozen Simon originals. Several tracks on the gospel CD recall the seminal country-soul sound of Simon's earlier work.

"When I heard about Ripete Records, I went down to Carolina and set with them for about two days, to let them know that I didn't mind recording for them if they allowed me to be a Christian," says Rev. Simon. "That means I don't want to sing 'The Chokin' Kind' sideways, or 'Drowning In The Sea Of Love."

Simon's many R&B hits for the Vee-Jay, Sound Stage 7, and Spring labels haven't lost a bit of their appeal over the decades (Simon always sang as if his collar was a bit 100 tight, adding to their emotional tension), even if we're unlikely to ever hear him sing them live again. Both Rhino Records and the British Ace logo recently released retrospectives of his R&B material that make it abundantly clear what an underrated soul giant

The end of Simon's secular career came in 1987, although he had pondered exiting the R&B arena for some time before his final curtain call. "When the Lord called me to the ministry, I rebelled three years, because I didn't see any need in preaching," he says. "1 had full pockets of money, and a carload of women in every town. And I was still

"When the Lord called me to preach, I just couldn't understand that. I rebelled three years, because I didn't see any need in that. That was my rebelling, trying to negotiate to see if it was possible for me not to preach. As I was studying the Bible, I seen that I could not serve two. I had to make a decision. That's what I was rebelling about, trying to talk to the Lord, trying to negotiate. Because I didn't want to do no preaching, man," he says. "I didn't want to give up what I had."

Simon's last R&B concert was held in New Orleans. "I was in the auditorium," he says. "I'd been singing 'The Chokin' Kind' and 'Drowning In A Sea Of Love,' all of these rhythm and blues songs, for many years. I had made an announcement to the public that Joe Simon was going to retire. And people was wondering what I was going to do, because I was not telling people that the Lord was dealing with me.

"When they came to the auditorium, there was thousands there. And when I walked out on the stage, I couldn't sing the songs anymore, because I couldn't remember the words. So we told them to come get their money back. And I told them that I'm sorry, but I can't sing these songs anymore, and that I had to go to church. They began to cry.

"As they walked out of the auditorium, a lot of them said, 'If Joe Simon's going to church, I'm not ever going to another night-club.' Well, that kind of made me feel good, but it put something on my mind — that if people loved me that much, then if I am a Christian, that I should not mislead them.

"After that, I preached my first sermon."

To hear him tell it, Simon was a reluctant R&B luminary. "I'm very happy now. I was not happy when I was in rhythm and blues," he says. "I never wanted to sing rhythm and blues. Maybe this was on me for years. But I was able to sing rhythm and blues over twenty-some years because I learned how to do it. You serve Satan with your mind, and you serve the Lord with your heart. My heart was never in it, but yet I could sing rhythm and blues.

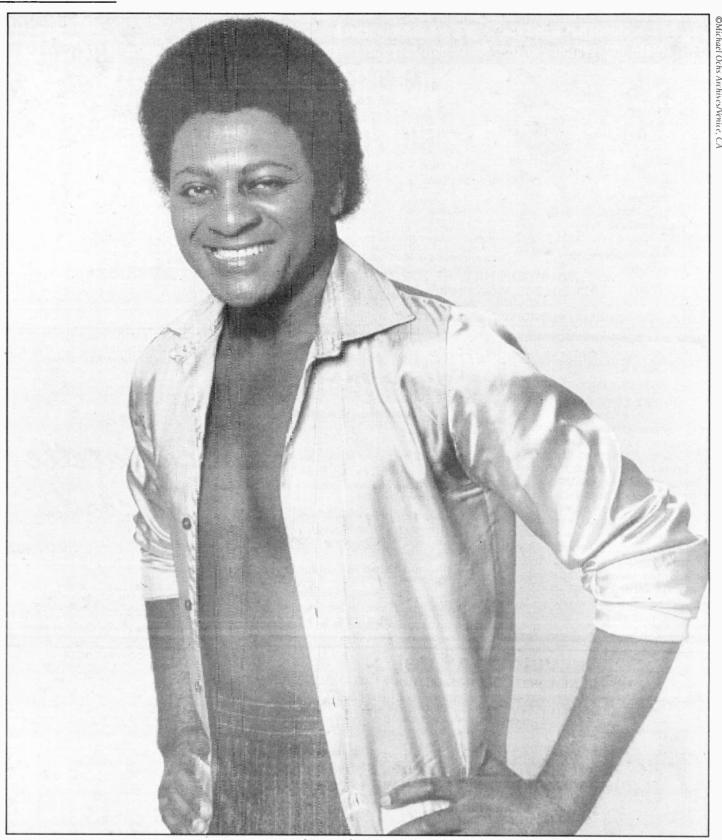

"I was a big artist. We can use that term," he continues. "But one of the reasons I was not as big as a lot of people was because I didn't like that lifestyle. And that was against me. Because in order to really make it like the Beatles or Marvin Gaye, those type of people, you have to give up yourself. And I never gave up my manhood. Out of twenty-some years, I went to three parties, because I hated that lifestyle.

"I didn't drink, no. I was never — no drinking and drugs. That was never me," he says, quickly adding, "I liked women!"

Born in Simmesport, Louisiana, on September 2, 1943, Simon's upbringing brought him into contact with the church early. "When I was a kid, I was a gospel singer," he says. "I was raised up in church. And I heard about the Lord, but I never knew Him. What church did for me was it gave me good moral values. But as I was singing in church when I was a youngster, I was never saved. And I went through life — because if I had been saved, I never would have sang 'The Chokin' Kind' or 'Drowning In The Sea Of Love' or 'Cleopatra Jones,' or none of that, or 'Your Time To Cry.'"

Simon and his family moved to Oakland, California in 1959.

"When I got to Oakland, one of the reasons that I sang rhythm and blues was because I didn't want to pick cotton," says

Simon during his secular days.

Simon, who sang spirituals before joining a Bay Area R&B outfit known initially as the Echo Tones. Consisting of Simon, James Spells, Lynn Foster, Lawrence Thompson, and leader Bill Johnson, Jr., they gigged around Richmond and Oakland. By the time they inked a pact with Garrie Thompson's Hush label (headquartered outside of San Jose), they had changed their name to the Golden Tones. Keeping it all in the family, Thompson's folks managed the group.

"The Golden Tones was a group that I started singing with when I got to Oakland, California," he explains. "When I got to Oakland, California, I was still singing in church, and in choirs. But when I got to California and was starving to death, I discovered that people would pay to hear me sing. I didn't know that at first." Bob Geddins, a prime force on the Oakland blues scene (he helmed classic sides by Jimmy McCracklin, K.C. Douglas, Lowell Fulson, Jimmy Wilson, and Tiny Powell), produced the Golden Tones' Simon-led Hush debut, "Doreetha," in June of '59.

Pronounced local exposure for 'Doreetha" — a gospel-influenced grinder that sounds a bit like the work of a teenaged version of the "5" Royales - on local R&B radio won the group better bookings. Mr. Shout, the British Ace label's essential examination of Simon's early recordings (Alec Palao's exhaustive liner notes were invaluable in preparing the first third of this article), reprints a poster promoting an October 3, 1959 concert at the Veterans Building in Petaluma headlining the Golden Tones over teenage rocker Benn Joe Zeppa, pompadoured R&B piano pounder Esquerita, Bay Area mainstay Johnny "Haunted House" Fuller, and the saucy duo of Sugar Pie DeSanto (who would much later cover Joe's "The Whoo Pee" for Brunswick) and Pee Wee Kingsley.

The single's promising sales figures also got them an encore Hush session in January of 1960. Versatile Oakland-based Johnny Heartsman, best known for his "Honky Tonk"-inspired two-part 1957 hit instrumental "Johnny's House Party" on Ray Dobard's Music City logo, served as bandleader for the Golden Tones' bouncy "You Left Me Here To Cry Alone" (Simon indulges in some melismatic Sam Cooke-style yodels, though his cries twist and turn quite distinctively), coupled with the doo-wopping "Ocean Of Tears."

A fleeting taste of success led to the group's dissolution.

"The Golden Tones and me, we stayed together for a while," says Simon. "And we made a little record. And after we made that record, we broke up because of jealousy. We had a little record, and a disc jockey, when it came out, he played the record and he said that 'the guy singing lead on this particular record, by the way, his name is Joe Simon.'

"When I got to rehearsal that night, the group was there before I got there. They was having a meeting concerning that statement that the disc jockey had made. And they told me, they said, 'Joe Simon, who authorized that disc jockey to call your name?' I said, 'I don't know who said that, but I know I didn't.' They said, 'Well, we're not gonna be Joe Simon & the Golden Tones. We're not gonna be like that, like Hank Ballard & the Midnighters.' That was their words: 'We're not gonna do that.' That was the first time that I discovered that they was jealous. And I said 'Well if these guys are lealous, then I need to make a decision about myself now." And that's when I started singing by myself."

Simon signed with Hush as a solo, the firm issuing his "It's A Miracle" b/w "Land Of Love" in July of '60. The plug side was a bubbly ditty similar to what Sam Cooke was doing, earning Bay Area spins but no national recognition. The nursery rhyme theme of "Land Of Love," however, was a tad mundane — the exact opposite of Joe's followup single, the blues-soaked gem "Everybody Needs Somebody." Its flip "Just Call My Name" proved Simon could convincingly shout rock and roll when the opportunity arose.

Three more Simon singles on Hush were local phenomena at best. "Everybody Needs Somebody" was a decent enough mid-tempo outing, but its B side, "It's All Over," struck a solid upbeat R&B feel with some churchinspired fire at its core. Heartsman led the combo for an organ-dominated up-tempo "Troubles" and its lounge-tinged platter-mate "I See Your Face," and worked again with the singer on "I Keep Remembering," where Simon's youthful voice (he sang in a much higher range early in his career than the assured baritone he employed during his heyday) soars to the heavens on a minor-key blues that could have fit snugly into Bobby "Blue" Bland's repertoire (a flute, perhaps Heartsman's, Cirts about behind Simon's

"Just Like Yesterday," Simon's next offering, was cut in August of '63 and issued on Hush's Irral subsidiary (a vanity logo established by the Thompsons for elderly songwriter Irral "Swingin' Granny" Berger). Its driving beat inspired a fine performance from Simon that convinced Dot Records to grab it and its ballad flip "Only A Dream" for national distribution.

"During that time, I was trying to find myself," says Simon. "But I couldn't find myself, because still that something within me kept on telling me that even though I'm getting ready to start out a rhythm and blues career, that this is something that I don't want to do. But I had all these things against me. So it kept me confused, so I could never find myself.

"We weren't making any money. We was selling about 1400 records a year. There was a lady about 65 years old. She told Garrie Thompson's father one day, 'You know, I like that young man's voice. I sure would like to write him a song.' So I said, 'Man, that old lady can't write no songs!' So my manager said to me after talking to me several weeks, he said, 'Well listen, Joe man, you're starving to death!' Because I was sleeping in chicken coops out in California.

"He said to me, 'Joe Simon, you're starving to death. Why don't you sing the lady's song?' So I sat down and I listened to the old lady's song. And she had a title called 'My Adorable One.' But I didn't like the words. So she gave me $1100 to go to the studio and record her songs. So I sat at the piano which I could not play a piano, but I could make enough noise to write a song. I sat at the piano with a friend of mine. He would play the piano, but I would do a lot of noise. I wrote this song out called 'My Adorable One,' and I used that old lady's name. Her name was Berger, I think her name was. That song set my style across the country. That's the style that I used, because it was me. I had found myself."

Singing in a lower register that gave his delivery an extra measure of eternal devotion and would become his trademark, Simon's aching soul ballad "My Adorable One," initially issued on another Hush subsidiary, Gee Bee, was snapped up by Vee-Jay for, national distribution and became Simon's first hit in August of 1964 (an indication of its endurance: Joe lip-synched it on Bill "Hoss" Allen's Dallas-based syndicated TV show The!!!!Beat in 1966, long after he had moved over to the Sound Stage 7 label). Its flip, "Say (That Your Love Is True)," was a gospel rouser with Simon's voice pitched much higher. There were two different versions of the song; Vee-Jay apparently had Simon re-cut it with a phony live feel.

The sales figures on "My Adorable One" (it bubbled just under Billboard's Hot 100) formally catapulted Simon onto Vee-Jay's roster. His first followup, "When I'm Gone," was done in Los Angeles under Richard Parker's direction and sounded too much like "My Adorable One," relegating it to non-hit status despite Simon's heartfelt vocal. Its flip, the torrid "When You're Near," was a tremendous stormer that could have easily been interpreted as gospel (there's an ambiguity as to whether he's referring to a woman or a higher power). A fine cover of Sam Cooke's "Bring It On Home To Me" from the same date was exiled to LP-only status.

The singer's third and final Vee-Jay single proved his first legitimate national smash. "Let's Do It Over," a splendid ballad that was one of the initial collaborative triumphs by young songwriters Dan Penn and Spooner

Oldham, was waxed in June of '65 in the emerging soul capital of Muscle Shoals, Alabama, with producer Rick Hall's house band in support. The song sailed up to #13 on Billboard's R&rB lists, but that wasn't enough to halt Vee-Jay's flagging fortunes. Its platter-mate, "The Whoo Pee," was an infectious if lightweight dance raver modeled on Junior Walker's sound, and apparently features a brief Simon organ solo.

"That record was released on Vee-Jay, but Vee-Jay was in bankruptcy court, and they couldn't press it," he says. "So that's how I got with John Richbourg. John Richbourg was on WLAC. John Richbourg and myself, we did a shake-hand agreement. He told me, 'Well, son, what'cha doin'? Well, I'll see if I can help you. Why don't me and you get together?' And we did a shake-hand agreement."

Richbourg wasn't just some anonymous platter spinner. He was a revered deejay who went by the handle of John R on Nashville's 50,000-watt clear-channel WLAC, where the lives of countless young musicians were forever changed by his nightly broadcasts. He produced records for the Sound Stage 7 label on the side. Simon quickly became Richbourg's top artist on a roster that boasted southern soul standouts Sam Baker, Ella Washington, Roscoe Shelton, Roscoe Robinson, and Sir Lattimore Brown.

"John Richbourg, being a disc jockey, played 'Let's Do It Over' for two years to keep my name alive," says Simon. "When I got back from California, Atlantic Records, Motown, and many other record companies was trying to get me to come with them. And they was offering me money. But I turned the money down because I had made an agreement with John Richbourg. And John Richbourg and myself, we became partners. That was the beginning of Joe Simon's national and international career."

Simon's first Richbourg-produced hit at SS7 was a curious cover choice: a dreamy ballad called "Teenager's Prayer" that was first waxed back in 1956 for United Records by a Chicago vocal group, the Moroccos, as "What Is A Teenager's Prayer." "That was kind of a doo-wop tune," notes Simon. Cliff Parman's violin-cushioned arrangement and Simon's decidedly non-teenaged vocal helped propel "Teenager's Prayer" to #11 R&B and #66 Pop during the summer of 1966. On August 13, he made his first American Bandstand appearance to lip-synch the tune.

The pronounced country flavor that permeated the majority of Simon's SS7 offerings first surfaced on the plaintive "My Special Prayer," a #17 R&B smash in early 1967.

"Most of my records was country songs," notes Simon. "I took 'em out of country and put 'em in rhythm and blues. That's when the country folks began to hear about me."

"See, when I first started singing, when I first started getting my national hits, a lot of people thought I was going to be a country singer, with songs like 'My Special Prayer.' They was trying to hook me up to be someone like Charley Pride, because I was in Nashville. But they didn't know I wasn't going to be no country singer. Plus they didn't know that I wasn't gonna continue singing rhythm and blues forever."

Simon Pure Soul, his debut SS7 microgroove offering, was an extremely solid collection anchored by "Teenager's Prayer" and "My Special Prayer." They were surrounded by "The Girl's Alright With Me" (not the Temptations hit, but a Motownstyled baritone sax burbles under the relentless tune all the same), a poignant "Travelin' Man" (not Rick Nelson's chart-topper), and covers of Percy Sledge's "When A Man Loves A Woman," Dee Clark's "Nobody But You," and Brenda Lee's "Too Many Rivers."

Like his equally successful R&B compatriot Joe Tex, Simon sounded entirely comfortable mixing country elements into his gospel-rooted soul stew. Under Richbourg's A&R direction, the hits flowed hot and heavy: the churning, horn-powered "Put Your Trust In Me (Depend On Me)," from Simon's own pen, was arranged by Memphis producer Chips Moman (likewise its flip, a Stax-like "Just A Dream"). The magnificent Dan Penn/Wayne Carson Thompson composition "Nine Pound Steel," cut at Moman's American Studio in Memphis, finished out 1967 by climbing to #19 R&B. Simon's vocal bears a stern chain-gang conviction that bleeds believability - making his ambivalence toward its lyrics a surprise.

"'Nine Pound Steel' was a song that I went to the studio and stood up and looked at the paper and sang it," he says. "Never did know it. I never knew a song out of twenty-something years. And I always hated to go to the studio to sing."

Nevertheless, 1968 was another banner year for Simon, beginning with "No Sad Songs," a brass-leavened pounder that was again cut in Memphis (its #22 R&B showing earned him another visit with Dick Clark on national television). The country-soaked "(You Keep Me) Hangin' On" brought out all the tremulous emotion in Simon's delivery. resulting in a #11 R&B smash in the spring (its B-side, a raucous "Long Hot Summer," came from the pen of New Orleans-bred Allen Orange, a SS7 staffer who started out as a singer at Minit Records), and the weepy epic "Message From Maria" further strengthened the growing country connection. Nat King Cole had enjoyed a smash with the stately ballad "Looking Back" a full decade before Simon revived the Brook Benton/Belford Hendricks/ Clyde Otis start - rubs elbows with some more ominous-sounding bits (the angry, Dylanish wail of "I Can't Hear You" and the vaguely psychedelic "Silence"). There's also a bunch of tunes that today's alt-country or powerpop young-uns could do up nicely (Walter Clevenger should cover the propulsively poppy "Sad Sad Songs," while Wilco could certainly do "Years Long Ago" proud).

All in all, Points Revisited is certainly a welcome surprise. Not as self-consciously retro as the Long Ryders were, it's simply emotionally honest, extremely "real" music. (P.O. Box 372, Wickliffe, OH 44092) lightly, but in a world which insists we've never had it so good, his rage is a harsher jolt than ever. Abandoning his normal sympathy for the underdog, now he's looking at the dogs which are under them, then tells their stories with vicious sympathy.

"Expensive Being Poor" ("the car is off the road, but I never had a car"); "Momentous Changes" ("a room without a view where the clock has stopped"); and "Happy Homeland" ("we thought of our neighbors as the shelling began") set the scene, but "I Know What You Want" is the key to the album: "Oh, TV! Stop depressing us and give us a specimen grin," he instructs himself, before trotting out a few new reasons to be cheerful, like "they're tearing all our houses down to build a shopping theme park." Which, of course, gives us some place to go while we're looking for an alleyway to leave our cardboard boxes in.

Yet Generation Y is not a depressing album really, because while Smith is short on positive answers, sometimes just asking the question is enough. There again, the fact that he had to go to Germany to find a release for the album (JKP is owned by punk heroes Die Toten Hosen) suggests that not everyone agrees with that.

Neither should it come as a surprise that you're unlikely to read about Generation Y in the mainstream alternative papers - you know, the ones which wouldn't exist today if Smith and a bunch of likeminded fellows hadn't decided to raze the world with punk, way back when. But it's not the cozy veneer of "this caring, sharing, world" alone which Smith is defacing, and that's where the dichotomy lies.

Lyrically and, indeed, musically, Smith is as true to those original punk principles as he ever was back then. But with modern rock basking docilely in the same heatwave of complacent self-contentment that made punk itself so necessary in the first place, his commitment - and that of a handful of soulmates elsewhere on the scene - is not simply unfashionable, it is positively treason-

TV SMITH Generation Y JKP/EAST WEST (JKP 16) (German import)

It's been a long time in the making, and just as long in the waiting, but TV Smith's first solo album in three years (and only his third in six) slams in with a homemade feel which is as powerful as any roar he's made before... and with a pedigree which includes the punk classic Adverts and the demolition derbying of Cheap, that's quite an achieve-

Powerfully melodic and determinedly independent, Generation Y finds Smith plowing the same essentially unplugged furrow which has sustained him through most of this decade. More than on either of its predecessors, however, he fills in the electricity with lyrics that get tougher, and a voice that gets better every time.

Smith has never looked at modern life

The only things rocking the musical boat these days are the gentle waves of backslapping applause... and in those terms, Smith is a tsunami, Generation Y is a shockwave, and if enough people pay attention to it, it could bring everything crumbling down. And if that happens - well, like another mournful doomsday bard once warned, close to 35 years ago, "I'd hate to be you on that dreadful day:

BELA FLECK AND THE FLECKTONES Left of Cool Warner Bros. (9 46896)

If the Dave Matthews Band ever decided to go completely instrumental and abandoned some of their limited pop chops, they'd probably sound a lot like Bela Fleck and the Flecktones. It's little surprise then that Fleck plays banjo on Matthews" latest album or that Matthews himself shows up on Fleck's first studio outing in five years, Left of Cool.

Blessed with a fluid proficiency of the banjo (Fleck is more or less top of the banjoplayer list by default; not to take anything away from him - he's very good at what he does - but banjo pickers really aren't much in demand these days, especially ones with such solid jazz roots). Fleck often overloads his albums with mini-jams that often come off as semi-bloated, self-indulgent affairs.

And Left of Cool certainly isn't immune to this. Clocking in at a whopping 76 minutes, it settles into its groove early and then beats its bounded versatility into the listener's brain for 15 songs. Saxophone/clarinet/flute player Jeff Coffin is particularly rampant. He flows over the tunes in a manner that's as subtle as a jackhammer in church. When everyone else is added to the mix, frequently playing fills rather than melodies, the bouillabaisse is as thick as it is flavorless

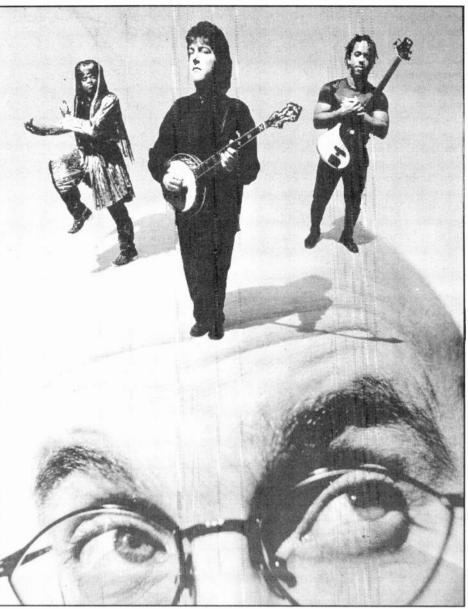

But Left of Cool is paced well. Two of its best songs - "Slow Walker" and the Matthews-sung "Trouble and Strife" — show up near the end, while the schizophrenic "Communication" (Matthews-sung again) simmers during the first part of the set. But in between these few shining moments are inflated world jams with Amy Grant, a few spoken-word proclamations from member Future Man (which are as pretentious as his name) and a whole lotta noise about nothing. Fleck may be vying for a place on Matthews' audience's mix tape for the drive home, but Matthews has never been this coyly precious. Or this boring.

THE 2 LIVE CREW The Real One Lil' Joe Records (XR231-2)

It's been years since Luther "Luke Skywalker" Cambpell and his sex-crazed funk machine, 2 Live Crew, roused the ire of Tipper Gore and the PMRC with their noholds-barred depictions of man-on-woman grooving on As Nasty As They Wanna Be. In the interim, Campbell has been cranking out salacious party tunes that during the last decade that have been squarely aligned with "Miami bass," a rap-cum-dance movement that's defined by Mach II tempos, a brainrattling low-end and, in many cases, the kind of up front sexuality that made 2 Live famous

The Real One doesn't feature Campbell

Bela Fleck and the Flecktones: Future Man, Bela Fleck, Victor Lamonte Wooten, and Jeff Coffin (forehead).

BANG ON A CAN

Brian Eno: Music for Airports

Point Music (314 536 847-2)

This recording is at once stunningly beautiful and, at the same time, a bit unsettling philosophically and aesthetically. Members of the new music group, Bang On A Can, which includes composers/artistic directors David

Lang, Julia Wolfe and Michael Gordon, plus a member of the performing unit, the Bang On

A Can All-Stars, Evan Ziporyn, himself a composer and clarinetist, each tackled a transcription and arrangement one of the four sections that comprise Eno's pioneering classic of ambient music, Music for Airports.

(currently only Mark Ross and Chris Won-Wong work under the 2 Live moniker); it also dials back the bass rumble. Still, it's very much in the old 2 Live mold. Celebrating everything greasy, sleazy and forbidden, Ross and Wong confront straights from every quarter with non-stop references to bitches," pot and other key elements of 2 Live's rump-shaking fantasies about the party life. Is it wrong for the duo it lure the kids with an irresistible 4/4 beat, then let loose with a nose-thumbing refrain like, "Do you wanna get fucked up? Do you wanna get

Is it a high crime or just a misdemeanor that he dips into the history books and showcases Florida's greatest contribution to disco. Harry Wayne "K.C." Casey, on a tune that's all buttered butts, over-sexed girlies and freak nasty funkin'? Man, I don't know. Years ago, Cambpell's attorneys argued before the courts that his work was comic, not pornographic and, therefore, deserved full protection under the First Amendment. They had a point; on the other hand, it's easy to imagine how the teenage boys who form a big chunk of 2 Live's audience might confuse their blue comedy with reality, and take hard-core groovin' like "Freak Ho" and "Bring that Money to Me" as legitimate instruction manuals on the art of living.

Although The Real One is one bell of a party record, 2 Live Crew's gun-toting boasts and dick-wagging comedy are just to ) strong for hormone crazed adolescents. Note: A "clean" version of The Real One (XR232) is also available, although Goldmine was not provided with a copy for comparison.

its attitude of fixity whereas Eno's approach was one of a mysterious process. Eno used pre-recorded tape loops for each layer of sound. However, each loop had, in addition to the recorded material, a duration of silence which was arrived at according to an indeterminate process. Since each loop was of different length, the relationships of sound and silence between the layers was in a state of constant flux. Even Eno could not determine what the resulting music would be like in all of its detail. The music seemed to emerge by way of alchemy or magic according to this gradually unfolding process which is at once serendipitous and coherent. Bang On A Can took this wisp of musical ephemera and made it concrete and fixed, as if turning a gossamer sound into a solid sculpture. Aesthetic differ-

LUCINDA WILLIAMS Car Wheels On A Gravel Road Mercury (314 558 338-4)

Lucinda Williams Koch (KOC-CD-8005)

"I asked for water, he gave me gasoline," Lucinda moans as Howlin' Wolf did before her. She'll need that gas as her song lyrics like road maps roam the Deep South's highways. Those miles she traveled as a child with her poet father, itinerant academic Miller Williams, are a core of her writing.

Thanks to record label problems and her own obsessive perfectionism, she's put out only five full albums since her 1979 trad debut Ramblin' (now on Smithsonian Folkways). The simultaneous arrival of longdelayed new Car Wheels and Koch's reissue of her eponymous 1988 Rough Trade LP (here with six bonus tracks — most live trad blues plus "Something About What Happens When We Talk") are especially welcome to fans of her rock/blues/country/folk fusion she was doing long before Americana was a market-

With pared-down writing as lean as her frame, she reduces relationships to the basics ("I Just Wanted To See You So Bad"). Those hook-friendly refrains helped her win a Grammy for "Passionate Kisses." The voice is tough but brittle. For all her insisting that she's gotten over that guy in "Changed The Locks" and new "Jackson," you know she's in denial of her own heartache no matter what she tells us and — more importantly — tells

On Car Wheel's "I Lost It" (a revamp from Smithsonian Folkways' 1980 Happy Woman Blues, her songwriting debut), the voice sounds a tad ravaged, while the original's buoyant arrangement is replaced by a slower metalized approach. Baking in the Deep South's heat, her voice turns languid — at times even limp - maybe thanks to a destruction-bound "Drunken Angel" or relationship of "Concrete And Barbed Wire."

The transcriptions were meticulously made, even to the point of using stopwatches to capture the precise timing in this pulseless music, as Eno composed directly onto tape using the studio as a compositional tool. As this is for live performance, each arranger tackled the issue of orchestration in his or her own way. In some instances, the attempt was made to follow Enos original timbres rather closely, in others, the instrumentation was significantly altered. As an example, Wolfe employs the Chinese pipa, a lute-like instrument, the brittle, plucked attack of the electric guitar, and pizzicato bass, in addition to the long tones of the keyboard synthesizer, the pure, bell-like tones of the vibraphone, and female voices, to create something that both Eno and something quite different. Even more dramatically, Ziporyn also uses the pipa, but in a more authentically idiosyncratic way, with bent notes and tremolo techniques. Ziporyn combines this very non-Western sound with the passages domi-

World Radio History

October 23, 1998

Three years in gestation, Car Wheels has had both Steve Earle and ex-E Street Bander Roy Bittan in the producer's seat, not to mention Lucinda's own input. Fortunately too many cooks didn't spoil this strong broth. Moving the backup to the front of the tracks, "Can't Let Go" and angry "Joy" become slinky juke joint blues straight from her native Louisiana's steamy backroads. Amid "Joy"'s ominously jagged guitar notes, Lu the Drifter heads to Slidell, then on to West Memphis, vainly seeking what her heart's lost again. It's the same nomadic spirit as on 1979's Ramblin'. Only now Lucinda herself, not Robert Johnson, is in the writer's seat.

KORN Follow the Leader Immortal/Epic (EK 69001)

The Korn koncept is a pretty simple one: Make loud, aggressive music for loud, aggressive kids by combining the best of both loud, aggressive worlds - that would be metal and hip-hop — cop an attitude the size of Oklahoma and toss in a lot of "fuck"s. That's pretty much all you need to make a Korn record.

Follow the Leader, the third album from the Los Angeles-based quintet, tops it all by being the loudest, brashest and most aggressive alterna-metal album ever made. When in doubt, the loud, aggressive rule has always been: throw in some authority-defying sloganeering, mechanically abrasive guitars and, of course, a bunch of "fuck"s.

Blame hybrid pioneers Faith No More for all this. Their epic single "Epic" at the beginning of the decade more or less opened the floodgates for every hip-hop-cum-metalhead out there. Korn singer Jonathan Davis even has that mumble-to-a-scream thing down pat. Not a minute goes by on Leader where the band doesn't slide into some type of cartoon stereotype of what it is they're all about (which, in the end, turns out to be cartoon stereotypes).

Biggest offender is "All in the Family," a homophobic, anti-gay duet between Davis and Limp Bizkit's Fred Durst that casually slings ratty insults in the air for nearly five minutes (don't believe the cop-out excuse that this is just street-talkin', good-natured stuff between the guys, or the half-assed attempt at redeeming itself with its end joke, this is ugly stuff). If you haven't figured it out: Korn is komplete krap.

DISHWALLA And you think you know what life's about A&rM Records (44004-4135-2)

After making a name for itself in alt-rock circles with the success of Pet Your Friends and its breakthrough single "Counting Blue Cars," Dishwalla returns to offer And you think you know what life's about. Life's meaning notwithstanding, what the album is about is a rock of juxtaposition, a uniform assembly of ethereal, sweetly gentle verses which crash into thundering, anthemic choruses. As a whole it comes off a bit like a magician doing the same trick twelve times.

The method works like gangbusters when it finds its mark, as on the hook of the roaring "Once In A While." Yet whether they hit their marks or miss entirely, the problem is that every piece of ammunition is alike, so much so that any drama is eroded by the knowledge of what is certainly coming when things begin to ramp up. "Healing Star" has a lot to recommend it on its own, but set among a forest full of numbers just like it gets lost in the formula, just another tree.

Processed sounds, from distorted vocals to the echoed piano of "Until I Wake Up," offer what passes for variety on the set. As artistic achievement goes, that is not terribly inspiring. The band sounds fine, but used the same way over and again its style becomes repetitive, as bland and sickly warm as (wait for it...) Dishwatta.

themselves such as Lyn Collin's "Think (About It)" which has been heavily sampled in recent years by hip-hop artists such as Patra. Others such as Anna King's "If Somebody Told You" and Marva Whitney's Isley Brothers answer song "It's My Thing (You Can't Tell Me Who To Sock It To)" were marginal hits. But, most of these songs are unfamiliar to the masses because they were not well promoted or because they were never released.

The James Brown Revue's infamous sidemen such as Maceo Parker on sax, Bobby Byrd on organ, Bootsy Collins on bass and the J.B.s played on several of these tracks. When Brown commands Marva Whitney to call Maceo as Brown did in several of his own recordings, you feel the electric interplay on "You Got To Have A Job (If You Don't Work, You Don't Eat)" that made many of Brown's own recordings so powerful. These funky divas, if you will, were Brown's disciples and these tracks illuminate the unique sound he was pioneering: the heavily syncopated beats, the long single chord passages, the urgent horn patterns and the repetitive vocal layers. That's the James Brown sound and these are the feminine sides of that sound. As Brown had affairs with a number of the women here (Yvonne Fair and Tammy Terrell among them), the romantic connection between artist and producer probably added another emotional nuance to these very emotional appeals for love, respect and to have a good time.

The finest moments here tend to be light on funk. Bea Ford 's "You've Got The Power' duet with Brown has a '50s waltz ring. Yvonne Fair's "I Found You" was the original recording of Brown's renamed "I Feel Good." Even better are Fair's pretty "If I Knew," the euphoric "You Can Make It If You Try- and the ferocious "Say Yeah Yeah." The Jewels' "This Is My Story" is a gorgeous gem. Tammy Montgomery's (better known as Tammy Terrell) sweet soprano is perfect for the tender "1 Cried." Anna King's "If Somebody Told You" is a coy blues while her "Make Up Your Mind" is much gutsier. Elsie "T.V. Mama-Mae's "All of Me" is a throaty big band jazz vocal. The rest of her selections have a casual jazz swing too.

Shirley Jean & the Relations' "People Make The World A Better Place" is pretty while gospel singer Kay Johnson turns the church hymn "The Lord Will Make A Way Somehow" into a standard James Brown dance track. In spite of those highpoints, Montgomery's "If You Don't Think," Sugar Pie

DeSanto's "A Little Taste of Soul" and most of Marva Whitney's many tracks are subpar.

Vicki Anderson and Lyn Collins were Brown's party girls. Most of their tracks were percussive dance tunes, heavy on brass, bass and tambourines. According to the notes, Brown thought of Anderson as his best singer. Her thunderous alto was mostly wasted on songs that did not require much singing ability. Her true skills were obvious on the superb ballad "Wide Awake In A Dream."

Otherwise, Anderson came across as a no nonsense gal offering advice to ladies on how to handle men such as "Don't Throw Your Love In The Garbage Can, "Super Good (Answer To Superbad)" and "I'm Too Tough For Mr. Big Stuff (Hot Pants)." On a mellower note, she and her husband, Bobby Byrd, did a fine cover of Bobby Womack's 'You're Welcome, Stop On By" which was originally issued on the Identity label in 1975. In Anderson's song "Answer To Mother Popcorn," she sings, "I'm not a girl with skinny legs and all," a direct response to Joe Tex's hit of the same name. She was calling her shots and establishing her own rules for romantic relationships.

Lyn Collins was an equally exciting performer and became known as the Female Preacher for her black church testimonial style song delivery. With her lightly raspy vocal and aggressive delivery, Collins performs the more appealing of the dance tracks included on the set such as "Mama Feelgood" and "Think (About It)." She also turns in a pleading gospel-ish rendering of Dionne Warwick's "Don't Make Me Over" and performs a light, popish duet with Brown on "What My Baby Needs Now Is A Little More Lovin."

On the down side. Although, the liner notes are attractively laid out as a stage bill from the period might have looked, esteemed essayist Alan Leeds'commentary is well written, but skimpy on detail of these divas' history before and after Brown. With the exception of Vicki Anderson and Marva Whitney, Leeds skimps on the detail of how many of these obscure women interacted with Brown and his coterie while they were a part of his organization. Even if some of these women (such as Yvonne Fair) are deceased or untraceable, there must be other people who could shine light on these sessions. Like much of Brown's own recordings during this period, a lot of the songs sound the same.

Considering that they are not all good songs, this may be a little taxing for the casual listener who tires of having to keep skipping songs to get to a good one. But Brown aficionados would probably prefer this set, as would people who like militant female retro dance music in the vein of Laura Lee's 'Rip Off," "Women's Love Rights" or "Crumbs Off The Table." However, there are songs that are really good and there's enough of them here to make this a very engaging addition to any record collection. It would have been easier if they pushed all the best songs to the first CD and all the rest to the other one. That way we'd all have our cake and eat it too.

VARIOUS ARTISTS Motor City's Burnin, Vol. 1 Alive/Total Energy (NER3014)

Motor City's Burnin, Vol. 2 Alive/Total Energy (ER3014)

As regional compilations go, this one's higher on concept and hotter in execution than most. Rather than some hit-and-more-often-miss collection of contemporary local yokels who are friends with the money man behind the project, the two volumes of Motor City's Burnin' aim to draw the lines that connect Detroit bands from the late '60s, '70s, '80s and '90s. The only membership criteria for the ratty frat: hi-nrg, and 'tude to spare.

Collectors familiar with Bomp! Records, Alive, and Total Energy imprints will need no convincing, as a number of artists either featured on or mentioned in the liner notes of those labels, releases over the last several years turn up here. You get hard-hitting slabs of psych and boogie from the pre-punk era by the likes of The Up, Rationals, SRC, Rockets, Mitch Ryder's Detroit and Sonic's Rendezvous Band — the latter three with previously unreleased tracks, of which the Sonic's track, entitled "Electrophonic Tonic" and penned by the seemingly ubiquitous Scott Morgan, is a blistering revelation and an essential addition to any Fred "Sonic" Smith fan's collection. And of course there,s no denying the enduring potency of the MC5's explosive '68 single "Looking At You" and Iggy's punk blueprint "Death Trip" (from '73, it also appears on the Bomp! Year Of The Iguana CD).

For those who were terminally bored teenagers during the dawn of Punk and on into the New Wave era, there's a healthy sampling of Motor City Madness that,ll have you scrambling for those well-thumbed back issues of Creem and Trouser Press. Snidepunks Cinecyde's "Tough Girls," from 1980, remains an anthem of vim 'n' swagger; Destroy All Monsters' previously unreleased "GoAway," while somewhat lo-fi (it's live, from '84), offers the ever-engaging, and occasionally in-tune, punk-diva vocal poutings of the legendary Niagara, not to mention ex-Stooges Ron Asheton making with the flamethrower guitar; plus assorted punk and powerpop gobbling, some unreleased, by The Sillies, Ramrods, The Boners, Va Voom and Coldcock. Interestingly, another late '70s veteran. The Mutants, reconstitutes itself with a '96 recording, although the glam-punk sound and the song title ("Boogers On You") is vintage, and if the track brings back fond memories of an earlier collection of Michigan rock yahoos also featuring The Mutants, 1981's Detroit On A Platter, go directly to the head of detention class.

As the inclusion of a new Mutants tune suggests, the Alive/Total Energy mafia hasn't overlooked the contemporary '90s Detroit scene either. Whether you're into the funk of Big Chief, the femme-metal of the Motor Dolls, the surfin'-on-Lake Erie stylings of The Silencers, the dragstrip rock of the late, great Gories, the lo-fi garage of The Hentchmen or the no-fi noise of The Dirtys, there's a little bit of everything for everybody. And, in fact, these two discs represent just that: something for anyone who's ever fallen under the spell of the Motor City, one of THE prime cradles of essential rock 'n' roll. With excellent booklets (rare photos, detailed notes) rounding out each volume, color them "highly recommended." (Alive/Total Energy, POB 7112, Burbank CA 91510)

VARIOUS ARTISTS Millennium Funk Party Rhino (R2 75467)

When you think of funk, you think of end-of-the-millennium blow-outs, right? Big explosive parties, phat-ass beats, rump-shakin' rollercoaster rides. Big boom, party-peopleonthefloor, y'all. That's what funk is all about as we end the 20th century — moving our butts until we can't move 'em any more.

Prince hit on this idea 16 years ago with the post-funky "1999," calling for a dance-floor of outta control kids burnin' up and burnin' out cuz we're all, oops, outta time. And the people assigned to putting together end-of-the-decade/century/millennium lists, facts, compilations, etc. realize this too. There's no better way to go than with a handful of itemized essentials in your brain to carry you over to the next big wave.

nium Funk Party, a 20-cut comp of the '70s and '80s greatest funkathons. And it pretty much sounds like what that last millennium party's gonna play with before it gets around to the inevitable Prince spin. Are you gonna want Elvis or Dylan or the Beatles or Nirvana or any of the other century musical icons revolving around the final showdown? Hell no! We want the funk, gotta have some funk and it's all delivered here.

Listen: Ohio Players "Love Rollercoaster," Parliament's "Tear the Roof Off the Sucker (Give Up the Funk), Earth, Wind and Fire's "Serpentine Fire, AWB's "Pick Up the Pieces," Curtis Mayfield's "Superfly," George Clinton's "Atomic Dog" and — most appropriately — the Gap Band's You Dropped a Bomb on Me" are the soundtrack to the end of the 1000 years that brought us Gutenberg (Johann not Steve), Shakespeare, Galileo, Bach, Coca-Cola, Einstein, penicillin and the Spice Girls. Prepare now to party like it's 1999... before it's too late.

VARIOUS ARTISTS Utom: Summoning the Spirit: Music in the T'boli Heartland Rykodisc (RCD 10402)

Hypnotic in their exotic simplicity, these 1985 field recordings come from the T'boli people of the Philippines' Mindanao - a rustic people whose way of life is now endangered as much by encroaching foreign corporations as by other local tribes who've been dispossessed of their own turf and now want to take over the T'boli region. Utom means the translation of the natural world's sounds into music. It's the musical interpretation of the rhythm of women pounding rice, the call of a nightbird, the droning of a cicada-at times accompanied by actual cicadas. Resonant bronze gong, reed pipe, a shaman's airy flute, bamboo mouth harp and wooden drum are their pretechnological instruments.

From the sharp-voiced a cappella singer/shaman Mendung Sabal, we hear some of an epic poem imparted to her by her spirit guide while she lay in a trance following a snake bite. The spirit has warned her that if she forgets a single word of the epic, she will die.

As part of Mickey Hart's The World ethnomusicological series, the disk boasts excellent notes to place the tracks in the context of their culture—a culture still innocent of global media homogenization. But will it be for long?

THE MONKEES Anthology Rhino (75269)

Does the world need yet another repackage of the Monkees' greatest hits? Well... yeah, it probably does. We've already heard some grumbling on this subject, both from those who think that no one could ever conceivably want more than the group's hits, and from those who already have the hits and album tracks and everything else, and want some previously-unreleased goodies rather than another repackage. This set is clearly not intended for either of those camps.

But the two-disc Anthology does fill a legitimate niche for the slightly-more-than-casual Monkees fan. Sure, the casual fan will probably be content with Rhino's 20-track, singledisc Greatest Hits. And the more dedicated fan may want the four-disc Listen To The Band

Book and CD Box Set Review

AMERICAN POP: From Minstrel to Mojo: On Record 1893-1956 by Allen Lowe Cadence Jazz Books 9 CD set: (1893 — 1946) West Hill Audio Archives (Book dist by Cadence/Redwood, NY; CDs dist by Koch International)

VARIOUS ARTISTS

This book and 9-CD set by Allen Lowe deserve the full attention of Goldmine's readership. There is unlikely to be another project of this intention, scope and competence. Taken in its entirety, which is to say considering both the book and the richly annotated 9 CD box, there is no match for what these items offer the serious collector and music scholar. The goal they set - to understand and document the progression of American pop music from the late 19th century until 1946 (the book covers the next decade as well) - is arguably too much for any one author or project. Yet, with 278 pages and nearly 11 hours of music, Lowe comes close.

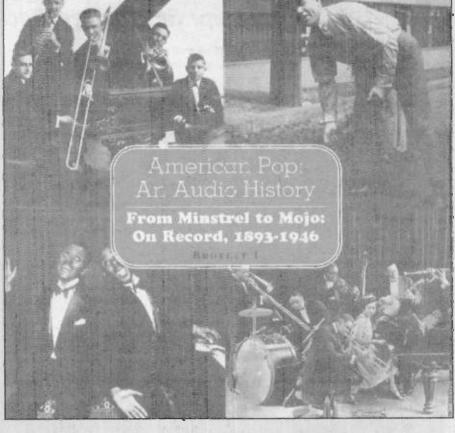

But there is a caveat here, and it is a massive one. It is by no means damning, but this review wouldn't be worth the paper it's printed on without stating it clearly at the outset. Here it comes: Lowe's book is not about Popular music at all. It is about the ROOTS of pop music. What that means in practical terms is that we get a stunning survey of developments in hillbilly music, blues, gospel, jazz, etc. You name it. Just don't name the first 50 artists or titles you might think of if asked to survey American pop for the period in question. Few are here, and those that are often do not appear in the styles for which they became most famous. Bing Crosby, for example, does not croon, and Nat King Cole appears as a jazz pianist with sax legend Lester Young.

Let me give you some examples of artists whose music is NOT included on these discs or featured in Lowe's book (remember the book outreaches the disc set by ten years into 1956). Dean Martin, Les Paul & Mary Ford, Glenn Miller, Perry Como, Vaughn Monroe, Patti Page, Ames Brothers, Four Aces, Eddie Fisher, Guy Mitchell, Andrews Sisters, Ink Spots, Jo Stafford, Frankie Laine.

Xavier Cugat. Kay Kaiser. Judy Garland. Kate Smith. Dick Haymes. Sammy Kaye. Bob Eberle. Nelson Eddy & Jeanette MacDonald. Want to push it back further? How about Ruth Etting? Betty Hutton? Henry Burr? Missing, too, are the traditions of ethnic pop (odious as some of it might have been), and the Broadway stage. Richard Rodgers, Cole Porter, Victor Herbert hardly wrote at all, from the offerings here. And Helen Morgan and Ethel Merman never sang a note.

You get the idea? These are not trivial omissions. Consider just the first two omitted artists. Dean Martin: There is a direct, if surprising, connection between Martin's crooning and the ballad style of Elvis Presley, an observation made by many critics as well as by Presley, himself. Regarding Les Paul, Ralph Gleason, the dean of American music critics, has written that no one has had a greater impact on the history of American popular music than Paul. Yet there is not a trace of him here, from his earliest trio work, to his years with Fred Waring, to the famous hits of the early '50s with Mary Ford.

Moving beyond artists, here are some song titles that were massive Popular hits between 1900 and the 1940s, the primary per od covered by Lowe's project. You'll know many of these titles. They have been recorded countless times over the years by artists in many musical genres. They sold in the mill ons when sheet music outsold records. Yet none of them put in an appearance on Lowe's discs. "Shine On Harvest Moon." "Melancholy Baby." "A Pretty Girl Is Like A Melody." "Margie." "April Showers." "Yes Sir, That's My Baby." "Bye Bye Blackbird" "My Blue Heaven." "On The Sunny Side Of The Street." "Night and Day. Stormy Weather." "I Get A Kick Out of You." "Blue Moon." "Glery of Love." "My Funny Valentine."

"Fools Rush In." "Sentimental Journey."
"You'll Never Walk Alone." And there is virtually no acknowledgement of the many pop songs whose tunes were "adapted" from classical composers like Chopin or Ichai-kovsky.

To many of us, and by most rational definitions, these are prime exemplars of Pop music. But again, Lowe is really not writing about Pop music (and bless him for it!). It would have been so much simpler if his book and CD box title didn't set up expectations. So instead of all these familiar pop artists and titles, what do we get? Fair question. Reaching randomly into discs 1-9, here is a sampling of some of the artists we meet: James P. Johnson: Carl Sprague; Arizona Dranes: Barbeque Bob; Hoagy Carmichael; Emmett Miller: Deford Bailey; Skip James; Riley Puckett; Patsy Montana; St. Louis Jimmy Oden; the Soul Stirrers; Woody Guthrie; Lil Green; Texas Ruby; Charles Mingus and Cowboy Copas. Instead of Rudy Vallee we get Allison's Sacred Harp Singers Instead of 'Sweet Adeline" we get the Giddens Sisters singing "There Is A Fountain Filled With Blood" (1927).

Before you assume I've just damned Lowe's epic work in some kind of snotty, pedantic way, bear in mind that the majority of Goldmine's readers will find his biases much to their liking. Certainly, if you had original 78 rpm copies of everything that appears on this set, you could retire comfortably to a tropical island. On the other hand, a comparable number of Perry Como and Guy Lombardo singles wouldn't buy your cabfare to the airport. Lowe is really asking questions like "What was going on out in the boonies when mainstream urban white America was listening to and buying Tin Pan Alley songs and lesser innocuous drivel?"

And he proceeds to show us, documenting a wealth of minority music. 60 years of offerings from the back porches, white and black, from the regional dancebands, whose names have faded into the mists of time. From the black church and sanctified snake handling white pentecostals. It's a show, loks. An utterly engrossing encounter with musical forms and examples you probably never heard before, much less heard OF. For many of Coldmine's readership, this will be a lesson in humility.

For most of us, there will be discoveries of two kinds. I found I loved the music of Doc Boggs, Willard Rebison, Alex Wilder and Geeshie Wiley — artists I had never given serious attention to before. On the other hand, I discovered that I really dislike the flowery mannerisms of Art Tatum's piano playing, and found myself wincing at Roy Acuff's out-of-tune vocal on "Mule Skinner Blues."

I should make it clear at this point that I'm not going to be very critical of Lowe's work. I like it. I admire it. I think Lowe was nuts for taking it on, but I'm glad he did. Because I've worked on close to a hundred reissue projects, I couldn't help but reflect on how I might have done it differently. In fact, I think anyone who gives this book and CD box the time and attention they deserve will have passing pangs of "Why didn't he include this artist? Or this track." But these are really not criticisms, although they often masquerade as such in the pages of this and like-minded magazines. Almost as an exercise, I forced myself to suspend judgment. I boxed set, while the true daydream believer will want each of Rhino's 1.5 individual Monkees albums, including the nine original 60s albums, the Live 1967 album, the three Missing Links odds-and-sods collections, and even the 1987 and 1996 comeback attempts. And that fan will still crave more.

Still, although the above choices satisfy the needs of the casual fan who wants the hits and the dved-in-the-woolhat Monkeemaniac who wants everything, Anthology is the first set since Arista's 1986 Then And Now...The Best Of The Monkees to address the needs of the in-between market. The "in-between market" we're referring to here would be anyone who likes the Monkees enough to want more than just the hits, but not enough to wanna buy a boxed set or a bunch of individual albums: someone who wants a disc with the hits and, say, "What Am I Doing Hangin' Round?," or "She," or "For Pete's Sake," or "(Look Out) Here Comes Tomorrow.

The 50-track Anthology includes all of the above, and certainly fills the bill as your onestop Monkees shop. Armchair CD compilers — no names please — always love to argue over track selections, but Rhino's acquitted itself pretty well in this regard. An early report of Anthology indicated that it would be a simple repackage of Greatest Hits, bolstered by a second disc of key album tracks Happily, this is not the case, as Rhino has dropped two tracks that appeared on Greates: Hits ("D. W. Washburn" and "It's Nice To Be With You," which are missing but not missed) and integrated the additional tracks into a chronological running order.

All of the tracks are previously-released, though the set does include several '60s tracks that had remained in the vault until being exhumed for the Missing Links series, or as bonus tracks on the individual album reissues. So you've got your "Last Train To Clarksville," "I'm A Believer," et al., rubbing shoulders with the TV version of "I'll Be Back

Up On My Feet," the jarring, incendiary alternate version of "Mommy And Daddy" (mis-identified in the track annotation as the more familiar version from The Monkees Present, but correctly 1D'd in Andrew Sandoval" fab liner notes), the live version of "Circle Sky" (from the Monkees' movie Head) and, best of all, the aborted third single, "All Of Your Toys," which takes its rightful place in the Monkees truckload o' hits here. A judicious selection of superb album tracks and lesser-known single sides complete this essential picture of a popular band that, in spite of its many detractors, produced a body of work that is well worth preserving and enjoying anew.

Following the group's final chart single, 1986's "That Was Then, This Is Now," the set concludes with one track apiece from the two reunion albums. 1987's Pool It! is represented by the amiable 'n agreeable "Heart & Soul," while 1996's Justus is represented by "You And I," a Micky Dolenz/Davy Jones song originally recorded in the mid-70s by Dolenz, Jones, Boyce & Hart (not to be confused with the Instant Replay track of the same title, which is also included here). "You And I" wasn't really one of the strongest tracks on Justus, and one wonders if perhaps the more rockin' "Regional Girl," "Admiral Mike" or "Dying Of A Broken Heart" might have been a better choice for Anthology. On the other hand, Justus was far enough removed stylistically from the rest of the Monkees' canon that even its best tracks might seem out of place here, or at least inappropriate as a closing track. Maybe the disc should have stapled on the TV version of the theme song to follow the Justus track?

The sound quality is fine (though no reissue has yet recaptured the vibrance of the original "A Little Bit Me, A Little Bit You," and the tracks used here from the Monkees' best album, Pisces, Aquarius, Capricorn & Jones, Ltd., are said to be the first-ever use of the first-generation masters. Fans who already own everything élse can skip this, and non-fans stopped reading this in the first paragraph; anyone else, looking to grab a representative Monkees set in one shot, need look no further.

The First Take Is The Deepest: Previously Unissued Alternate Versions From The Vaults Of Ace Records

West Side (WESA 811)

Why the fascination with alternate takes when the artist and label have generally agreed upon and released the best version? It seems we want to crawl even further inside legendary music styles, and hearing Southern R&B patriarchs like Earl King or Huey Smith in the process of constructing their not-yet familiar hits is the equivalent of sitting in the control booth hearing tune-cocoons turn into hutterflies. Those who drop deniro on the catalog of Ace Records (whose final product always remained raw stuff, bless 'em) may be even more inclined to appreciate the rougher than usual developmental process, since these undeveloped Southern rhythm 'n' blues cuts reverse the mechanics of radio and deevolve the regional hits back into their original role as not pop, but populist, cheap bar entertainment.

There seems to be an aurally pornographic mindset at work: hearing Geri Hall flub and restart "What I Learned About You" is basically a nekkid thing, maybe even preferable to the released version since this stop/restart, thinner version brings her rhythm 'n' blues down to nextdoor-neighbor, Saturday night drunk-jam level.

While a handful of obsessive collectors will salivate over comparing released versions with these outtakes, the rest of us can use this sandpaper-rough collection as an introduction to formidable but forgotten artists like Bobby Marchan and Calvin Spears. That their throw-aways merit release decades later attests to the grassroots strength of Southern rhythm 'n' blues. Another helping, please, preferably in box set form.

COUNT BASIE Live At The Sands (Before Frank) Reprise (45946-2)

Frank Sinatra's live album from the Sands Hotel, cut with Count Basic, is regarded as a sufficiently great recording, that perhaps it might've been better if the record company had left well enough alone. Instead, Reprise has released this 53-minute CD compiled from the Basie band's opening sets on three nights in early 1966. And while there'e nothing embarrassing here, there's also little that matches the Basie band's repuation, either.

Under the best of circumstances, it would've been difficult for the band to live up to the quality of the Sinatra album. The Sinatra set was an occasion where everything clicked - singer, band, and audience all started on the same page and finished that

In its own set, represented by 14 tracks, however, the band sounds like it's walking through a lot of the material. The only exceptions are Basie himself and drummer Sonny Payne, who are involved and pretty intense. There are some good moments — "1 Needs To Be Bee'd With," "Flight of the Foo Birds," 'Satin Doll," "Blues For Home," and "This Could Be The Start of Something Big," the latter worth hearing for Eric Dixon's and Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis's solos. But that's a weak case to be made, considering the number of complete Basie shows around that are nothing less than superb through and through.

It's also understandable that the Basie band's set would be disappointing. It was made it a point to sit back, shut up, listen and learn. I gave Lowe the floor, so to speak. He programmed the music and his text was the accompanying lecture.

I learned a lot. I had some old biases confirmed, and some others challenged. Eut mostly. I learned about artists and styles about whom I was truly ignorant. About the only critical thing I can say is that I wished Lowe had spent more time projecting his musical analysis forward. Let us hear how the nearly forgotten music of Blind Willie Whoever or the Four Whatevers ultimately led to Stevie Wonder or the Beach Boys or the aforementioned Perry Como. Obviously these recordings are not unconnected. Hell, if they were, Lowe would be wasting our time uncovering them for us in a book about Pop music. So I wish he had made the connections a little more explicit.

There's a lot of speculation in this book, and even more opinion. I found Lowe's style both readable and very likeable, but quite confrontive. He's assertive and damn near arrogant at times. He made me laugh quite often. He provoked me. He pissed me off. He impressed me. You don't produce those effects by keeping a low profile and steering a polite middle-of-the-road course.

The project is not technically perfect. At the outset I should say that Lowe is an audio engineer and sound purist and he has done a magnificent job of restoring these old 78s, most of which have never been reissued before. The technical glitches (relatively minor, all) appear largely in the written material. For instance, numbering of the footnotes, all 81 of them, is off by 1 in the book's appendix. Track sequencing on the CDs occasionally does not follow the book. In some cases (e.g. Johnny Mercer on Disc 9) the track is simply missing.

One of the most delightful properties of the discs are the transitions Lowe has programmed. It's like the most extreme FM station you ever heard. Totally non-formulaic. Let me give you a couple of actual examples of track sequencing. On disc 8 we go from Memphis Minnie to Frank Sinatra to Arthur Crudup to the Claude Thornhill Orchestra. On disc 7 we segue from Sonny Boy Williamson to Count Basie to Gene Autry Immediately before, there is a couplet of Robert Johnson and the Chuck Wagon

This inspired lunacy is more than coincidence and it works like a charm. Lowe makes a number of very interesting points that may surprise some of Goldmine's readership. Perhaps most notably he argues that by focusing on the blues, we have missed or even misunderstood a major component of black music's legacy. Some of these alternative musical styles (by black artists) are on display here. Many will not sound as engaging as the blues we have grown to know and love (and expect). It is thus quite easy to reject these alternatives in favor of familiar forms. But, as Lowe notes, we do so at risk of misunderstanding the history of black music in America.

And here is an interesting quandary: many of the collection's most interesting tracks were recorded by jazz artists. This is especially apparent on disc 9, with selections by Lester Young, Coleman Hawkins, Don Byas, Charlie Parker and Lennie Tristano. As enjoyable as this music may be, it again raises the question of the purpose of Lowe's project. It's one thing to include large numbers of hillbilly and blues, even gospel selections. These forms of music have been assimilated into the fabric of American popular music. But jazz? Arguably, modern jazz, which is certainly the genre into which each of the artists mentioned above belong, has become an essentially isolated musical form which does not lend itself to wide popular acceptance. With some notable exceptions, modern (progressive) jazz exists as a separate form from pop music. Its venues, its artists, and its essential nature are different from those of pop music. This is in no way an indictment of jazz. It is merely an observation, and a defensible one at that, which calls into question the inclusion of some of the most enjoyable music on this set. If it ain't pop, and it never evolved into pop, what is it doing here?

Do you need both the book and the boxed set, which includes extensive notes? Yes, you do. Although the book and the CD box were made to stand independently and sell separately, you'll be better off buying both of them. The book is simply worth having. It's a great read, every bit as engrossing as a novel. The CD box does come with a series of booklets edited down from the book, but the truth is, it's not enough. Space limitations will result in a second rate experience if you don't read the unabridged text as you listen. In fact, on too many occasions it is the funniest or wryest of Lowe's observations that have been deleted for reasons of space. And remember, the book covers the next 10 year period after the discs stop providing examples in 1946.

The simple truth is that the more you know, the more you'll get out of Lowe's book and disks. Despite how it looks from afar, this is no entry-level project. It is thus ideal for Goldmine's readership. Lowe's scholarship and keen sense of the obscure will delight and edify you. Someone who just got off a spaceship and wanted to learn everything possible about popular music in America in the first half of this century would end up with a very skewed view of things. On the other hand, if you already have a passing knowledge of American pop, this will put the music you know in a much richer context. No matter what your background, this book and series of CDs will rank high on the list of "keepers" in your library and record collection. (Simon from page 134) composition for his final hit of the year.

Along with the title track, "(You Keep Me) Hangin' On," "Nine Pound Steel," and "My Special Prayer," 1968's No Sad Songs LP contained several standouts. "Traveling Man" (not the 1961 Rick Nelson charttopper), the fevered R&B raveup "Come On And Get It," and a mellow reading of the popstandard "I Worry About You" spotlighted Simon's versatility.

Simon Sings followed close on its heels. This time the hits (including "Message From Maria" and "Looking Back") were joined by a sensational version of Johnny Burnette's 1960 hit "Dreamin" that was invested with an pronounced measure of downhome soul, covers of Joe Hinton's 1964 smash "Funny (How Time Slips Away)" and the 1967 Eddy Arnold hit "Misty Blue," and an after-hours blues, "It's Too Late," co-written by one "C.G. Brown." (Could this be Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown? All Joe remembers is that he learned it from an Arthur Prysock record.)

By 1969, Richbourg had fully assembled his own house band. Guitarists Troy Seals and Mac Gayden, harpist Charlie McCoy, pianist Bob Wilson, bassists Tim Drummond and Wayne Moss, and drummer Kenny Buttrey stoked the grooves when Richbourg booked time at Music City Recorders, situated behind the Nashville offices of Monument Records (Sound Stage 7's parent company). The facility was run by Elvis Presley's legendary guitarist Scotty Moore, then concentrating on engineering instead of picking.

Simon nailed his biggest SS7 smash of all in the spring of '69, the million-selling "The Chokin' Kind."

"I got it from a guy named Harlan Howard. It was a country song. I took it from a country song, and made a rhythm and blues out of it," says Simon. "Even though I was trying to find myself and still proving to people that I was going to make it, just as I got disgusted with the whole thing, even though I had nice records, I found this record called 'The Chokin' Kind.' They put it on my desk. And we listened to it, and went in the studio. This record enlightened me again, because I was disgusted at that time.'

Waylon Jennings had done quite well on the country charts with "The Chokin' Kind" in 1967 on RCA, but driven by a snaky bass line from Moss and Bergen White's punchy horn arrangement, Simon's resolute reading struck a universal chord that propelled it to the very top of the R&B charts and #13 Pop. Instead of those angelic Cooke-inspired yodels, Simon swooped low in a quirky vocal move that became his signature. Joe Simon was now officially a major force to be reckoned with on the pop front, and when the Grammys were handed out, "The Chokin' Kind" won for Joe as Best Rhythm & Blues Vocal Performance by a male.

The Chokin' Kind, Simon's fourth LP for SS7, was a polished showcase for Simon's mature vocal charms. It also confirmed that the pop market was now a target, with the MOR-oriented titles "Wichita Lineman" and "Little Green Apples" receiving the smooth Simon treatment

The singer also grabbed hold of meatier fare: Otis Redding's posthumous smash "(Sittin' On) The Dock Of The Bay" (Joe had only recently sung a heartrending "Jesus Keep Me Near The Cross" at Redding's funeral in Macon, Georgia) and the Five Satins' "(I'll Remember) In The Still Of The Nite" were dusted off.

But the LP's less familiar material was even better. The upbeat "Help Yourself (To All My Lovin')," "Lonely Man," and "Don't Let Me Lose The Feeling" (another Orange original) were first-class productions spotlighting Simon's assured approach.

Also aboard the album was another gem by prolific country composer Harlan Howard, the mid-tempo "Baby, Don't Be Looking In My Mind." It proved a successful followup to "The Chokin' Kind," peaking at #16 R&B during the summer of '69 but failed to make the same massive inroads into the pop market as its predecessor.

Simon is quick to cite the late Richbourg's mentorship as a prime factor in his rise. "John R, to me, was one of the best men in radio. And he was a very good person. John R, I don't know anybody that knows him like I know him, other than his family," says Simon. "To me, he was awful nice. And he always was humble and nice to people."

"Now the only guy John R used to argue with was me. And you know what we'd be arguing about? These songs. 'Man, how come you don't know this song?' I'd say, 'Man, I don't know this song!' And I'd get up and read it off the paper and sing it. But that's what we'd be arguin' about. And he didn't argue with anybody but Joe Simon."

"But he would sit up there sometimes and he'd just talk to me sometimes for a whole hour in the studio. 'Man, Joe, how come you don't know the song, man?' And that's when the arguments started, because he didn't know I was fightin' that something inside of me that didn't want to sing those songs. See, he didn't know that, because I never discussed it with him. And that's when we'd start arguin'."

Before the decade was history, Simon scored a two-sided hit with "San Francisco Is A Lonely Town" b/w "It's Hard To Get Along." The first was uncharacteristically melancholy, but its flip was an irresistible churner written by the singer and Orange blending a one-chord upbeat groove, hearty backing vocals, and surging horns behind Simon's impassioned vocal. Better Than Ever, Joe's fifth SS7 LP, contained both sides of that hit, along with stirring versions of the Mac Davis-penned Elvis Presley smash "In The Ghetto" and Arthur Alexander's heartbreaking "Rainbow Road."

So you think Michael Jackson had a brainstorm of his own when he introduced his famous dance, the Moonwalk? Hardly. Simon's first hit of 1970 was a two-part slice of broiling Nashville funk by the same title ("Moon Walk - Part One" rocketed up to #11 R&B). But there was one small problem.

"I put a record out called 'Moon Walk,' and I tried to create a dance, and I couldn't dance, and people used to come out to hear me and see me do the 'Moon Walk.'" he laughs, "But I couldn't dance, so I never could create a dance. So Michael Jackson created a dance called the Moonwalk. But I'm the first one got the record called 'Moon Walk,' when the guy got on the moon in 1969. The first time they got on the moon, that's when we put my record out."

Simon reached out to Taj Mahal's thenrecent Giant Step album on Columbia for his next hit. "Farther On Down The Road (You Will Accompany Me)" worked well decked out in an extra coat of Nashville polish; Mahal's original was built around a chunky R&B groove anyway, so it wasn't much of a stretch for Simon. His infectious cover went to #7 R&B during the spring of 1970, making it the second biggest hit he enjoyed at SS7. Flip it over to reveal another harddriving gem, "Wounded Man," which was the compositional work of house bandsmen Bob Wilson and Mac Gayden.

Harlan Howard had previously supplied two of Simon's most memorable hits, so why not tap his prolific pen again? That was the strategy behind the easy-going "Yours Love," and it paid off with a Top Ten R&B entry that summer. The hit parade continued with a delicious change-of-pace; "That's The Way I Want Our Love," from September of '70, sported a swinging Bergen White arrangement spiced by piping horns.

At the top of his game, Simon left SS7 before 1970 was through. "When I was with Sound Stage 7, it was costing me so much money to sustain my career," says Simon. "The company that was distributing Sound Stage 7, Monument, they didn't want to pay me to promote records, and they didn't want to pay my telephone bills. They always said to me that they had someone to promote records, that I didn't have to promote Joe

"But I didn't never trust nobody, and I didn't wait on anyone. And after that, my contract was running out. And I told John Richbourg, because John Richbourg and myself, we had an agreement. See, John Richbourg and Joe Simon, we owned Joe Simon, and we leased Joe Simon to Monument. That's how it was. And I told John Richbourg that I was leaving. He said, 'Man, what?' I said. 'I'm leavin', man, because these people won't support me.' He said, 'Whatcha gonna do?' So John Richbourg went to New York, and found the people who owned Spring Records through some lawyer. We began to sit down and discuss the deal."

Initially, Richbourg retained the producer's chair for Simon's output for New York-based Spring, often sharing credit with the singer. Right away, they emerged "Your Time To Cry," a recriminatory ballad framed by Bert DeCoteaux's stately strings-and-choir arrangement. Simon was one of its three writers, and the same backing cast - the Music City Five, Scotty Moore at the board - contributed to a #3 R&B hit at the end of Country music was still a primary facet of Simon's repertoire. He picked up the pace of Kris Kristofferson's "Help Me Make It Through The Night" substantially, giving it the R&B edge (#13 to #38) over O.C. Smith's subsequent Columbia reading. "To Lay Down Beside You," the intimate Tim Drummond-penned ballad flip of "Help Me Make It Through The Night," managed some spins of its own through Simon's gorgeous vocal.

Simon broke out his pen to write his next hit during the summer of '71, the surging minor-key "You're The One For Me," benefiting from another suave DeCoteaux arrangement. But those enduring country leanings resurfaced for Simon's next twosided hit, an inspiring reading of Joe South's "All My Hard Times" and a mellow "Georgia Blue." The Sounds of Joe Simon, the singer's first hit-laden Spring LP, boasted an eclectic cover list: the Bee Gees' "I Can't See Nobody," Marty Robbins' "My Woman, My Woman, My Wife," and B.J. Thomas' "Most

Sensing it was time for a change in direction, Richbourg relinquished the production ing arrangement, resulting in a prototypical

Gamble-Huff sound.

"It was very nice working with Gamble and Huff, and we had a great time," says Simon. "But they had their own thing going and we couldn't stay together. After 'Drowning In The Sea Of Love' and doing an album with them, they went their way and I went my way. 'Drowning In The Sea Of Love' is the only record that I sang that I didn't do anything but sing. I didn't write it, I didn't write the music. That was the only record I did not involve myself in. Just went in and sang to the track."

Actually, "Pool Of Bad Luck," the singer's next smash (#13 R&B) during the spring of '72, was ostensibly manufactured in much the same manner, since Gamble and Huff wrote and produced the moody track. Drowning in the Sea of Love offered an entire LP's worth of Simon in Philly and included a version of "You Are Everything" reportedly predating the Stylistics' Top Ten version from around the same time (their producer, Thom Bell, co-wrote the song with Linda Creed). Simon sings at his absolute lowest, the ultimate antithesis of Russell Thompkins Jr.s sky-high falsetto with the Stylistics. Simon rode the majestic peaks of the lush Philly sound on "Glad To Be Your Lover," "Let Me Be The One (The One Who Loves You)," and "Ole Night Owl."

Simon joined Gamble and Huff in the composers' column for his second R&B chart-topper later that summer. "Power Clf Love" was one of the crowning achievements in Simon's long hitmaking run, a sensational dance outing that eschewed the usual swirling Philly strings in favor of an unstoppable bass line and a skin-tight horn chart. Once again, the single went gold.

"I Found My Dad," a moving treatise written by Philly soul singer Bunny Sigler and Phil Hurtt that came from Drowning in the Sea of Love, found its way onto the R&B charts before year's end, but its co-charting flip (#5 R&B), the smoldering soul ballad "Trouble In My Home," signaled a fresh face in the Simon camp. Newcomer Raeford Gerald, who co-wrote the song and produced it as well, would play a major role in shaping the Joe Simon sound.

"He produced me, and he produced a lot of other folks. He did a great job," says Simon. "During the time I picked him up, he was making $150 every two weeks. But I took him up from about $150 to about $20-30,000 a year working for the company. So he had a good salary. He was great for the company." Gerald wrote and produced "Step By Step," another mid-tempo groover that made a #6 R&B racket in early '73.

Simon was cranking out hits so fast that he couldn't crank out LPs quick enough to meet the demand. The Power of Joe Simon was largely a greatest recent hits compilation, featuring "Your Time To Cry" and "Drowning In The Sea Of Love" alongside the later best-selling material. A couple of exceptions: the Gerald/ Simon-penned "Talk Don't Bother Me" and a Simon original, "You Are The One," that resembled B.B. King's "The Thrill Is Gone."

Having made his indelible mark on the recording industry, Simon turned his sights to film themes in 1973.

"They had a movie called Cleopatra Jones, and they needed a singer, somebody to sing the song," says Simon of the blaxploitation flick starring statuesque Tamara Dobson. "So I had a contract to sing this song to whoever writes the music.

"They all went to see the movie. All the big time producers and writers. They went to see it. And nobody could come up with some words and music for their movie. So when I went to see it, I sat there and I looked at it, 'cause you go in a little old room and look at it. I told the guy, 'Man, I've got some music for this movie.' Because I had did the music when I was out traveling with my band. I used to rehearse with them at a nightclub down in Monroe, Louisiana.

"We went in there, and I sat down and I wrote some music. I told my guys, 'This music here is gonna be in a movie!' Well, we all laughed about it, you know. But when I went to see that movie Cleopatra Jones, that was the music that I was talking about when I told the producer, 'Man, I've got some music for this movie!'" "Theme From Cleopatra Jones," a #3 R&B and #18 Pop entry, was credited to "Joe Simon featuring the Mainstreeters," and his involvement with the band didn't end there; he produced sides by them for Event Records, a Spring subsidiary.

Veteran soul producer Brad Shapiro momentarily pickèd up the reins for Simon's next three hits, taking him back to Muscle Shoals (Mood, Heart and Soul, Simon's Shapiro-produced 1974 LP, also credits studios in Chicago and Miami and featured some solid southern soul, notably "Covering The Same Old Ground" and "What We Gonna Do Now"). The upbeat "River," a #6 R&B smash in late '73, boasted spirited calland-response action between Joe and his female backing singers, while a heartfelt "Carry Me," another standout mid-tempo outing co-written by southern soulster Phillip Mitchell, made it to #12 in the spring of '74. "The Best Time Of My Life" (#15 R&B) featured a touch of percolating reggae zest.

The market-savvy Simon made the leap into overt disco territory in 1975. But "Get Down, Get Down (Get On The Floor)," written and produced by Simon and Gerald, was no formulaic dreck rigidly tethered to a predetermined number of beats per minute; it flowed with a genuine R&B glide, Simon sounding utterly convincing in his exhortations to do the "kung-fu bump" in front of an insistent male vocal group and a buzzing synthesizer. For the third time, Simon topped the R&B lists during the spring of 1975 with the raveup, notching a best-ever #8 pop slot.

So triumphant was the track that Simon's followup, "Music In My Bones" was a virtual carbon copy — same writers and producers, same groove — and very nearly the same commercial result (#7 R&B, though a disappointing #92 with the fickle pop crowd).

"It was nice," says Simon. "I didn't know about disco, and they claimed I helped to open the disco market. But I was not a disco artist, because I was known as a ballad singer. When I came out with the record 'Get Down, Get Down (On The Floor),' everybody was in a way surprised that I could sing a record that fast, with a fast style like that. People could dance."

The Gerald/Simon-produced Get Down album wasn't a total disco inferno. "It Be's That Way Sometimes" and "It's Crying Time In Memphis" were strong ballads, while the upbeat "Still At The Mercy Of Your Love" benefited from an exceptionally passionate Simon performance. "You Don't Want To Believe It (My Man)" and a rolling "In My Baby's Arms" were linked by a thunderclap or two borrowed from the sound effects department.

After that, the disco rhythms that so dominated the era were often at the heart of Simon's hits. "I Need You, You Need Me," his last Top Five R&B entry in early '76, struck a compromise between commercial danceability and Simon's hearty vocal abilities. But the solid-selling "Come Get To This" didn't uphold the same standards, falling prey to a "groove first" mentality.

A reunion with old mentor Richbourg produced "Easy To Love," a vast improvement on what immediately preceded it: still worthy of disco play, Simon had something hardier to wrap his pipes around. His fans agreed, propelling it to #12 R&B in late '76. But "You Didn't Have To Play No Games," another disco-flavored romp overseen by Simon and Richbourg, was a commercial setback in the summer of 1977. (The pair had reteamed a while before for Simon Country, an LP that fulfilled its title with versions of Freddy Fender's "Before The Next Teardrop Falls" and Eddy Arnold's "You Don't Know Me.")

Enter Teddy Randazzo, ex-lead singer of the '50s pop group the Three Chuckles, teen idol movie star (Rock, Rock, Rock, Mister Rock and Roll), and writer of several major '60s hits for Little Anthony & the Imperials. Randazzo injected even more disco ambience into Simon's next chart entry, writing and producing "One Step At A Time" in New York. He also devised "For Your Love, Love, Love," an engaging return to a less frantic approach. Both did respectably, but apart from "Love Vibration," a #15 R&B hit in late '78, Simon's tenure as a hitmaker was winding down fast.

That didn't mean he was ready to chuck it all just yet.

Three minor chart items for the Posse logo in 1980-81 kept him in the spotlight and returned him to Nashville to work with rhinestone-studded country star Porter Wagoner as his producer. A last reunion with a cancer-stricken Richbourg in 1984 proved disastrous; they lost a bundle attempting to launch their own label. After one more LP for Nashville's Compleat logo in 1985, Simon heard a higher calling and abandoned R&B forever.

No secular comebacks loom for Simon.

"I ain't never gonna sing those songs no more," he says. "I've had a lot of people try to get me to come back to rhythm and blues. I said, 'I ain't gonna do that.' I had a guy offer me $20,000 a night and 50 percent of the bar if I came back. I said, 'Man, I ain't gonna do that.'"

Soul music's loss is the Lord's gain.

Comprehensive and cutting-edge compact disc news for consumers and collectors.

ICE provides collectors and enthusiasts with a monthly dose of unrivaled CD coverage. Each issue is crammed with exhaustive release schedules and the first word on new albums, upcoming box sers, reissues and industry news. Add to that coverage of special collector's issues, promotional discs, imports, European live discs, and the CD Watchdog column — which allows readers a dialogue with record label executives, who scramble to explain mistakes and you have ICE covering CDs like no other publication.

- •"ICE is probably the best source for CD news in the world . . ." - New Musical Express
- "When ICE arrives . . . every month, there's always a fight to see who reads it first, and there are few higher recommendations than
- "ICE isn't afraid to name names of poor-value discs, or single out the praiseworthy ones."
- •"ICE digs up scoops and raises issues . . opinionated, frisky and fun." - Los Angeles Times

AA008 Mott the Hoople - Mott PRE-ORDER PRICE $45

AA008 Mott the Hoople - Mott PRE-ORDER PRICE $45

The band was never happy with the final mixes of the original release of "Mott," thus the inclusion of drummer Dale Griffin's input in the remastering (of the original master tapes!) was crucial. Griffin succinctly summed up this project as follows: "The sound of it (the original mixes) was a great disappointment. In mastering it for this disc. Ray Staff (engineer) has attenuated some of the worst aspects of the original master's sound and accented the better aspects, so that the result is closer to that which we had anticipate and desired back in 1973." To preserve the sanctity of this instant collectable, the original UK die-cut (limited) gatefold sleeve with attaching transparency and innersleeve with lyries will be included, but strictly limited to the first 1,000! Recollections of these LPs, the sessions and times exclusively for these releases by all of the band members will be included as an added insert. Cuts include "All The Way From Memphis." "Honaloochie Boogie," "Violence," and "Drivin' Sister" and the LP is pressed on 180-gram vinyl subject to stringent quality control standards.

AA009 Mott the Hoople - All The Young Dudes PRE-ORDER PRICE $25

Adoly Mott the Hoople - All The Young Diddes FRE-ORDER FRE, 2825

For the LP that finally put Mott The Hoople on the rock a 'roll map, the original master tapes were used in the remastering process, which was aided and abetted by drummer Dale Griffin. From the title track, given to the band by David Bowie and which still stands out as one of the all-time classic rock songs, through "Ready For Love" (which ultimately became a hit for Mick Ralphs later band. Bad Company) and "One Of The Boys" this is your chance to find out what Mott fans already know- this hand could rock as guitarst Mick Ralphs states, "The vinyl dises are probably as close as one could get to the original sound of Mott." The original UK cover art has been reproduced and includes an inner sleeve not seen on the US pressing. This release is pressed on 180-gram vinyl and subject to stringent quality control standards.

AA001 Miles Davis - Sketches of Spain
The peak of Miles' collaboration with Gil Exans. Includes the arrangement of the slow movement from Joaquim Rodrigo's "Concierto de Aranjuez." Not exactly a straightforward jazz' album, but undoubledly one of Miles' very best.

A003 Miles Davis - Kind of Blue
The best jazz album ever? Probably the best loved. The culmination of experiments in modal improvisation, freeing the music from a chordal base and using scales to form the modal improvisation, freeing the music from a chordal base and using scales to form the basis of solos. But who cares about technical explanations when the results speak for themselves. Great musicians - John Coltrane, "Cannonball" Adderly, Bill Evans, Paul Chambers, James Cobb, Wyn Kelly - with astonishing results. This version is deliberated in the format of the original release, with no "speed correction" and excluding the alternate take of "Flamenco Skerches." So What? So this!

D4 Bob Dylan - Blood on the Tracks rate this his best album ever, it certianly ranks with his mid-sixties peak. With a yacoustic band backing him, Dylan pours it out "Trangled Up In Blue," "Simple
Of Fate," "Idiot Wind," "Lily," "Rosemary And The Jack Of Hearts," "Shelter
The Storm." This fully deserves its "all time classic status.

15 Stevie Ray Vaughan and Double Trouble - Couldn't Stand the Weather
Brow Vaughans, second album following bis debut Traces Flood with brother lim-ic Ray Vaughan's second album, following his debut Texas Flood, with brother Jim-helping out on rhythm guitar. This is where the Hendris obsession first rears its, on "Voodoo Chile (Slight Return)". Better still is the killer version of Jimmy, d's "Tin Pan Alley." a long time hi-fi favourite. The legendary John Hammond satt in he session and this was his favourite track, which only goes to hsow his imprecable

A006 Bob Dylan - Highway 61 Revisited

A006 Bob Dylan - Highway 61 Revisited
There are a few contenders for Dylan's best album and this is one of the strongest. Carrying on from where Bringing It All Back Home left off, this extends Dylan's "electric" work. The album appeared in 1965, following an appearance at the Newport Folk Festival where folk purists had bood Dylan for turning in a set backed by the Paul Butterfield Blues Band. Butterfield's guitarist Mike Bloomfield appeares on the album, as does Al Kooper, At the time Kooper was somewhat of a novice on the organ, which only adds to the power of "Like A Rolling Stone," perhaps the quintessential Dylan track. It is difficult today to realize how unusual the album must have seemed when first appeared - Like A Rolling Stone is six minutes long (and that was a singlet) and there are over eleven minutes for Desolation Row. Some of the songs have been desorbed as allegorical but there's no missing the punch as Dylan hits home - "Because something is happening here, but you don't know what it is, do you Mr. Jones?"

something is happening here, but you don't know what it is, do you Mr. Jones?

A4007 Keb' Mo' Keb' Mo'
Surely by now anyone with even a passing interest in blues will have heard of Keb' Mo'.

Since this, his debut album, appeared in 1994 he has received the praise of critics and public alike. Keb' is a blues musician for the 90's and beyond - he's listened long and hard to Robert Johnson but if he sells his soul it is likely to be over a woman. A city boy who wants to be where his soul can run free, he's proud to sing of being in love. The simple recording - sometimes solo (Keb' plays a mean National steel) and sometimes with backing - only enhances the performance. This is a genuine modern blues classic and is now available on vinyl for the first time. When Absolute Analogue drew up a list of the initial titles they wanted to produce "Keb' Mo" was at the top of their wish his took, a while to finalize but was worth it - thirty years on from Muddy Waters' Folk Singer, this is blues as good as it gets.

L.A.M. VICEOS Make Checks Payable to Kevin Sulte 102, 5 E, 41st St., New York, NY 10017 We specialize in finding Original 50s Rhythm & Blues/Rock & Roll 45s and LPs.

Lots of original 60s material also available. Call/fax us with your wants, or send us your wish list. Send all correspondence

(and PLEASE INCLUDE YOUR PHONE NUMBER) to our address below.

We also carry cool, alternative compact discs covering the 60s to 90s. Many titles available to satisfy every R & R taste.

Before we begin, just a brief note concerning the obscene explosion of sub-inferior, limited-capacity, CD-R knock-offs that are currently degrading the collections of countless unsuspecting (and some apathetic) customers: Remember, you get what you pay for. The fact is, with a little effort, you CAN find the real thing, and not have to settle for the basement versions... most of which sport amateurish indexing (or none at all) and copycat packaging that could induce your individual control of the control of the base (and REAL) titles around. With that in mind, all of you VELVET UNDERGROUND fans so impatient for something truly monumental for your individual properties of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the

(Reissues from page 141)

Sinatra's set that was going to be taped for almost certain release, and the band would have been expected to save their best stuff for backing Sinatra. They'd have had to hold back on their own set. On top of which, Basie and company must've realized that this crowd was there for Sinatra, and that nothing they did was likely to impress it. The disc isn't bad, and some of it - "Makin' Whoopee" (especially the call and response on the piano), "Corner Pocket," and "Jumpin' At the Woodside" — is appealing. But this is a somewhat less than legendary set, in support of a headline show that produced a great live album elsewhere. The sound quality is excellent, with crisp, vivid separation and lots of "presence" on the instruments, solo or ensemble.

JOSE FELICIANO And The Sun Will Shine... 1965-75 Raven (RVCD-70)

This disc delivers exactly what it promises a rather unorthodox mix of hits ("Light My Fire," "She's A Woman," "Rain'), rarities (the British hit single "And The Sun Will Shine") and so-called "classic tracks" ("Chico and the Man" as well as the perennial Christmas hit "Feliz Navidad").

As is so often the case, the likelihood of a collection like this originating outside of the US is all too high. True to form, compiler Glenn Baker has licensed these 24 RCA tracks (a generous 78 minutes of music) for the Australian Raven label. Perhaps the biggest selling point of this collection to American collectors is the inclusion of several tracks issued only as singles in Australia. To a lesser extent there are a number of titles originally buried as LP filler during the downturn of Feliciano's career in

The story of this deeply talented and blind musician, and the eventual wide market acceptance of his music (including TV soundtrack and acting gigs) is well told in the accompanying 12-page booklet. The sound quality is high all the way, although differences between studios and locales is really evident, resulting in a somewhat cavernous sound on the title track (recorded in the UK), as well as "Adios Amour," of similar origin. The track selection, while idiosyncratic to say the least, gives a good cross section of Feliciano's output during 1965-75, arguably the peak of his career.

The real question is whether you like Feliciano. His style was certainly assertive, making the obviously large size of his audience doubly impressive. Feliciano was best served by arrangements that allowed space for his free-spirited vocal phrasing and acoustic guitar work. To the extent that either of these qualities was hemmed in, the results suffer and veer toward the ordinary. If you number among Feliciano's fans, this is both a deeper than average entry level collection, as well as an opportunity to pick up on some of the aforementioned rarities.

For those a bit less enthralled with the charms of Feliciano, this intense dose of his musical mannerisms or those of slickly produced late '60s pop soul might prove a bit much. (Raven Records, P.O. Box 2027, East Ivanoe 3079 Australia)

DUSTY SPRINGFIELD The Very Best Of Dusty Springfield Mercury (314 558 208-2)

This 20-song retrospective covers the early career of the British songstress (1964 to 1970) with the conspicuous absence of any tunes from Springfield's masterwork Dusty In Memphis save the indispensable "Son Of A Preacher Man." (Rhino will be reissuing the album in January 1999, along with a collection of Springfield rarities. — Ed.) It begins with the giddy exuberance of Springfield's first hit, 1964's "I Only Want To Be With You," which garnered Springfield the distinction of being the first British female singer to score on the U.S. charts in the modern pop era. If that song has on the surface a certain girlish nuance, Springfield's voice possesses the dusky timbre of maturity.

As emotionally expressive a singer as they come, Springfield's songs more often than not require her to plumb the depths of her stormiest emotions, whether she's heartbroken beyond tears ("All Cried Out") or tortured by memories of lost love ("All I See Is You"). Though the production values utilized here leave some of these songs sounding hopelessly dated the quality of the material itself is virtually beyond reproach, be it the majestic Phil Spector-ish girl group sound of "Stay Awhile," the soulful tale of seduction "Son Of A Preacher Man" or the cool, languid feel of the Burt Bacharach/Hal David number "The Look Of Love."

Despite the fact that some of this material is glaringly pre-feminist, i.e., how to win a man's affection by doing things his way ("Wishin' And Hopin'") or wanting a certain man so desperately as to gladly take as little as he's willing to give even if real love isn't a part of the equation ("You Don't Have To Say You Love Me"), Springfield doesn't exactly come across as a doormat. Two of her more upbeat numbers, "Little By Little" and "I'll Try Anything," have her vowing with a selfassured determination to win back the man whose memory is driving her to distraction.

The record ends with the reflective Goffin/King number "Goin' Back" which finds the singer feeling awash in nostalgia, much like the listener will probably feel hearing these songs from the days when Top 40 radio seemed so much more enticing.

THE BEST OF AUSTIN CITY LIMITS: Big Blues Extravaganza (Columbia/Legacy CK 65324)

For the past 23 years, Austin City Limits has been without a doubt one of the very finest music programs on national television; by now, they're also the longest running series of them all - a miraculous feat considering the ultra-short life-span of most music TV series. For most of that time, producer Terry Lickona has been at the helm, and it's been his leadership as much as anything that's ensured the show's survival. Lickona's main thing has always been good songs, not particular musical styles. Consequently, there's been a remarkable range and depth of musical styles, considering that many will readily categorize the show as a country music show. The artists play for practically nothing; it's a PBS show with an annual budget less than a single episode of most network TV series, and funding's so hard to come by, each year may be it's last. The artists appear because of the show's reputation for quality picture and audio recording, easygoing professionalism, and high quality musical content. Fans have been clamoring for nearly two decades for CD's and home videos to be made available, and KLRU, the Austin PBS station at which the show is produced, is deluged by requests for copies of shows. However, for many years the logistics of getting the necessary funding and artist releases to do anything have made this a pipe dream, nothing more.

For the third year in a row, Austin City Limits has managed to release a CD compilation of some of their best performances, roughly grouped by genre (the first two were Country Music's Finest Hour in 1996 and Legends of Country Music in 1997). This fifteen track compilation, produced by Terry Lickona and one of Austin's better known music producers, Mike Stewart, is an unqualified success, and comes highly recom-

The music is not strictly blues by definition - no one would really call artists like Dr. John, The Neville Brothers, or Delbert McClinton blues artists, and the one Stevie Ray Vaughan track included, "Love Struck Baby", is a rock 'n' roll tune, and an awesome one at that. But it's all music that is derived from the blues, by artists that love the blues, and it all hangs together really well as a collection. The album plays like a dream start to finish, as good to play at parties as it is for getting the ironing done, and best of all, I find myself listening without missing the video accompaniment. Included are classic degrees in arranging and producing and writing.

When Gamble and Huff went away, it usually meant to Jamaica, away from the noise and the hustle and bustle - where the duo could concentrate on their writing.

We wrote a lot of Teddy's stuff in Jamaica," Huff said. "when we would go hide out in one of those villas down there. We'll come back with 20-30 hit songs, because the atmosphere was away from a lot of everyday distractions. By being away, me and Gamble were into ourselves. We'd go into this room down there. We wouldn't do nothing but eat and sleep and wake up and write, go back, lay down. That's like being in an area where there's nothing but songs, good food, good conversation, just laying around, you'd be surprised what kind of songs you could write.

"No stress," added Gamble, "no phone calls, no nothing. Completely cut off. We'll come back with some songs that people today have been dancing to for 20 years."

"And we were writing songs in Jamaica, writing songs for Teddy Pendergrass for his next album," Huff continues. "That's when we heard about the car crash, on the news."

In March 1982, Teddy Pendergrass was involved in a single-car accident, when his vehicle hit a road divider outside Philadelphia. Although he was able to recover from the accident with his voice intact, his body was mostly paralyzed from the neck down.

"A lot of people had called us by that time," said Gamble. "That was a shock, but then again, it was not totally unexpected he had been having some reckless activity before then. At least two car crashes before then. We didn't know how serious it was until a friend of ours told us how serious it was. We came back the next day. We flew back in, went to the hospital and checked him out.

"I knew then he was in bad shape," added Huff, "this was not no joke. That was 16 years ago. But he's been pretty strong about it, I think it was a wake-up call for all of us. It changed everything, it changed a lot of things.

Teddy Pendergrass was one of our biggest artists," said Gamble. "Perceptionwise, it created a new perception for the label. Even with our business dealings, it was different, because Teddy's not being able to perform, Teddy not being able to record, and the uncertainty that was happening. We had to readjust ourselves after that accident. That's why you never know what's going to happen tomorrow."

"After Teddy's accident," said Huff, "our deal with CBS was terminated, and we went with Capitol-EMI. At that time, we still had the O'Jays, we picked up Phyllis Hyman and Shirley Jones from the Jones Girls, and Patti Labelle (who had a #1 R&B hit with "If Only You Knew"). That's about it, we had cut our roster all the way down. And then, we had a couple of good albums with EMI - and when that was over, we basically tried to readjust and the industry changed so much, the music changed, rap music was in, and sampling, and we basically were just trying to adjust.

"After Teddy's accident," remarked

Gamble, "it seems like all the soulful male vocalists were waiting for Teddy's momentum to slow down, because here comes Luther Vandross, and Prince, and Michael Jackson. If it hadn't had happened, if it was still going on, we would still be kicking out songs for Teddy. Because Teddy was one of the greatest solo male entertainers I've ever seen on a stage.

While Gamble and Huff were out of the public eye, their hits weren't. In the last fifteen years, their songs were re-recorded by the Communards ("Don't Leave Me This Way"), Simply Red ("If You Don't Know Me By Now"), Heavy D and the Boyz ("Now That We've Found Love"), Nas ("I Remember," using the melody from "Cowboys To Girls"), and Daryl Hall and John Oates ("Love Train"). Meanwhile, Gamble and Huff continued to produce albums for groups like Third World, the Young Soul Rebels, and Peaches & Herb. And today's R&B producers, from Jimmy Jam and Terry Lewis, to L.A. and Babyface, to Puff Daddy and the Family, can all trace their musical roots back to Gamble and Huff.

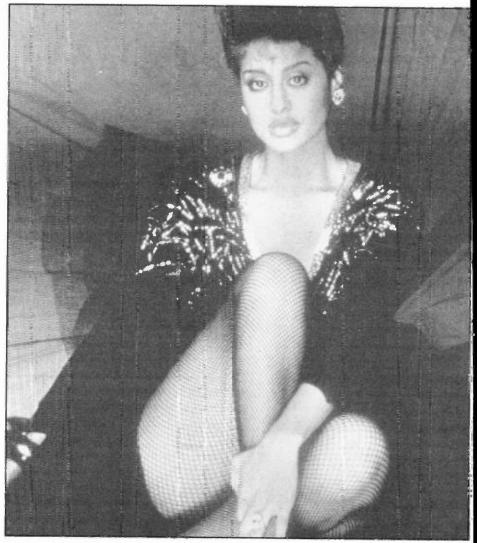

For years, it may have looked like the only activity on 309 South Broad Street was in an art supply store on the first floor of the building. But Gamble and Huff were just getting their second wind.

In 1988, Gamble and Huff, along with several other Philadelphia-based music industry colleagues, co-founded The Philadelphia Music Foundation, whose goal is to recognize the music makers from the City of Brotherly Love. Today, there are bronze plaques along both sidewalks of Broad Street, each with the name of various artists and bands that once called Philadelphia their home. Dick Clark has a plaque; so does Eugene Ormandy, conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra. There's one for the Intruders, and Joan Jett has her name right over there, next to Boyz II Men. And three of the architects of "Philly Soul" - Kenny Gamble, Leon Huff and Thom Bell - have plaques next to each other, across the street from the Philadelphia International studios.

The awards kept coming - in 1989, Gamble and Huff received a Grammy when the Simply Red rendition of "If You Don't Know Me By Now" received R&B Song of the Year accolades. In 1995, Gamble and Huff were inducted into the National Academy of Songwriters Hall of Fame. Call up the BMI website sometime (www.bmi.com) and look up "Gamble" or "Huff" - there are more than 28 pages of songs they have written or co-written together.

1997 saw the release of The Philly Sound Kenny Gamble, Leon Huff & The Story of Brotherly Love (1966-1976) (Epic/Legacy Z3K64647), a 3-CD set of some of Gamble and Huff's classic material.

In April 1998, Philadelphia International signed a new deal with EMI Distribution. Along with greatest hits packages and previously unreleased catalog material from Teddy Pendergrass, the O'Jays and Billy Paul, PIR was ready to release its first new recordings in a long time. First up is Forever With You, a collection of unreleased recordings from the late Phyllis Hyman. Besides the songs that were written and/or produced by Gamble and Huff, Bunny Sigler, Dexter Wansel, Narada Michael Walden, Linda

Phyllis Hyman

Creed and Michael Masser — Phyllis Hyman herself co-wrote such songs as "Strength of a Woman," "Come Right or Not At All," and "Tell Me What You're Gonna Do."

"Songwriting was the greatest vehicle which Phyllis found to best express the depth of her innermost self," said Gamble. "If you walked into a room with closed eyes and heard her sing one note, you knew that is was the voice of the great Phyllis Hyman. It was her unique voice resonating, as she sang from her soul... which captured my attention and attracted me to her as an

One of the songs on Hyman's new album, "Funny How Love Goes," was converted from a solo performance, into a duet with a new Philadelphia International artist,

"Damon is the most refreshing male vocalist to come through these doors in a long time," said Huff. "I was hearing about him through Gamble first, Gamble was raving about him. Once I got to hear him as a singer, then I said yeah, okay. This is the first time Gamble and I have been in the studio to work on a project like this in a while, and this -

"Damon's my man," interjected Gamble, "we've been working close. He's going to be an artist that can compete in the market-

Also scheduled for release this year will be PIR's first hip-hop compilation album, produced and overseen by Gamble and Huff actually, Caliph "Poppa Chief" Gamble, Salahdeen Gamble and Leon A. "Pops" Huff II. That's right, the sons are working in the family business.

"Not only do I cherish what our fathers did back in the day," said Caliph Gamble,

"and currently too, because the music will be here way past our generation, way past theirs. It's music that's a legacy. Our generation and our area is current, it's going to be almost impossible for us to fill their shoes on what they did, so whereas though I respect what they did, I'm taking full advantage of the position that they allow for us. They created this establishment, it's up to us to keep it moving or to let it die. And the only way I feel that we can keep it moving is to come up with new and brighter sounds, like in our hearts. I want to get back into real music, I love the feel of live instruments and real lyrics. I would like to incorporate all aspects of the technology we have current, and the music that people used to groove back to in the day that got you on the dance floor and made you want to buy it 25 years later. I'm not trying to have music where it might sell in '99 and by the time 2001 comes out, nobody remembers my songs. I want that thing to be moving way until my retirement. I want people to still be buying my songs that I made when I first began, to the time when I can hopefully go to Jamaica to relax and write songs, like my father and my uncle.'

"When you've got a kid," said Huff, "when you've got children that grow up into a business, they've been running through these halls since they were babies. I used to bring my son over here before he could even learn how to walk good. A lot of times, when I used to have to baby sit him, I'd bring him over to the studio. It was an environment. My father was a barber, that didn't mean I had to be one. But the music is a different blues tunes like the late, great Lightnin' Hopkins' "Rock Me Baby" (the earliest number here, taped Oct. 9, 1978), Albert Collins' "Travellin' South" (1991), Buddy Guy's "Mary Had A Little Lamb" (1990), and Tai Mahal's "Oueen Bee" (1993), limmie Vaughan turns in a heart-felt vocal on his song written about his late little brother, "Six Strings Down"; I was there for that one, and I'm telling ya there were some misty eyes in the joint by the time he finished it. Appropriately enough, since Willie Nelson is nothing if not the godfather of ACL, two of his songs are performed by other artists: "Ain't It Funny How Time Slips Away" (by perhaps the best blues artist living in Austin who isn't yet nationally famous, W. C. Clark) and "Night Life" by blues legend B. B. King. Houston's best living blues artist, the great Miss Lavelle White, turns in an excellent rendition of "I've Never Found A Man" fronting an all-star Texas band led by Antone's regular Derek O'Brien. You also get one of the greatest entertainers of the lot, Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown, The Neville Brothers, and a few blues stars of the future, Rory Block and Keb' Mo'

Since part of the proceeds go to keeping Austin City Limits on the air, the music's great, and the audio reproduction is nearly flawless, those of you with eclectic tastes and a love of good blues and good tunes would be well advised to seek this one out.

- Kent H. Benjamin

VARIOUS ARTISTS SOUNDTRACK Here We Go 'Round The Mulberry Bush Rykodisc (RCD 10717)

Here We Go 'Round The Mulberry Bush is the soundtrack to the 1968 movie based on the Hunter Davies novel of the same name (the author better known as the Beatles, authorized biographer). The film, about a young boy just dying to get laid, couldn't be more banal — the snippets of dialog included here bear that out ("Knickers! I'm knicker obsessed! It's one of my troubles. I'll have to learn to control it!").

Fortunately, the music - composed for the film by Traffic and the Spencer Davis Group - isn't nearly so painful. The sound, naturally, is pure '60s. Traffic's "Utterly Simple" reflects that era's fascination with all things Eastern with its mesmerizing sitar riffs while the title of Traffic's rocking "Am I What I Was Or Was I What I Am" or the spaced out observations of the Spencer Davis Group's "Taking Out Time" ("My room slips by and I can't see but it's only an illusion created by me") leave no room for doubt as to what decade we're dealing with here.

As soundtrack recordings go, this is a strong one, encompassing the quirky carnival feel of the Traffic title track, the Spencer Davis Group's funky stew "Looking Back" (with more whacked out lyrics, i.e., "I was looking back to see if she was looking back to see if he was looking back at me"), the jumpy percussion piece "Waltz For Caroline" and the melodious pop/rock of "Picture Of Her." All told, Here We Go 'Round The Mulberry Bush is one very entertaining nostalgia trip.

— Tierney Smith

THE ALAN LOMAX COLLECTION World Library of Folk And Primitive Music England, Volume One Rounder (CD 1741)

World Library of Folk And Primitive Music Ireland, Volume Two Rounder (CD 1742)

World Library of Folk And Primitive Music Scotland, Volume Three Rounder (CD 1743)

Though Lomax is primarily remembered for his folk recordings of musicians in the deep South, he occasionally ventured outside the states to document other styles. His ultimate goal had always been to catalog the folk music of the world, and to date no one has done a better job, though he only visited a fraction of the globe before his death. These three volumes are essential companion pieces for the Lomax recordings Rounder has released up to this point, showing very clearly how reliant American southern music was on its British Isle roots.

All three discs offer recordings from Lomax's visit to the three countries in 1951, with some of the cuts trimmed in length by Lomax on the original releases in order to accomodate as many styles as possible. The span is amazing. England contains Christmas songs, children's rhymes, tunes regarding their industrial revolution, worksongs sung by quarrymen and a fair sampling of centuries-old folk music. Ireland moves far beyond the usual jigs and reels with a drinking song, protests regarding the 1880 land reform movement and the wars against Napoleon, and music from an Irish wake. Scotland contains songs for soothing cattle(!), sea chanteys, paeans to the Scottish countryside, and loads nationalistic music born of Scotland's many wars with England.

The three discs present over one hundred examples of regional folk music, consistently distinct enough stylistically to keep the listener's attention. Most of it is exceptionally melodic and memorable, accounting for why so much contemporary music emanating from the three countries via Van Morrison, the Pogues - even Enya - have remained close to their roots. Gorgeous stuff, all three.

"I just took it as an advantage to be in the music business myself," added "Pops" Huff. "I wasn't like, 'oh, my dad writes a whole lot of songs.' I love music. He made me love music, now I'm doing the same thing he was doing back in the day. So I'm him all over again in '98. The thing that makes me feel good, makes me know my skills are up, my own dad, the man comes to me.'

"I take pride in what my dad and Huff did," said Salahdeen Gamble. "They did some very beautiful music. I want to come out with something of my own flavor, and bring it to the world, something that Eve got deep in my heart, because I know that music came from the heart. It came from stuff they experienced in life. So what I want to do is tell people what we've been going through and what we see, and we want to make people dance and have fun."

Athough it may have looked quiet on the outside, inside the building Philadelphia International is back on track. The old guard is still there - Gamble, Huff, Dexter Wansel, Bunny Sigler — while old favorites drop in, like Thom Bell and Billy Paul and Eddie Levert and Teddy Pendergrass.

And throughout all those years of hitmaking and music creation, Gamble and Huff never lost sight of the one driving force - the music was the message, and the message is the music.

"It was destiny," said Gamble. "Destiny pulled us all together, the music just happened. All these different people, you couldn't plan to pull all these people together. It all fell into place, because it was meant to be. The proof of it was, when you look back on it, how did you do all that, in a 15-20 year period, so much music was produced and created. You wonder how all that happened. There was no pre-planning

"This is how I live with myself," said Huff, "when I go back and I'm in my solemn moods and I think about different times spent writing these songs, in this room, it was electricity in here. It was magic — if you want to use all those adjectives to explain the feeling that we generated as humans in a room, putting something on a little tape, it was unbelievable. The feeling between just a piano and a voice and a little tape recorder, was unbelievable. And I could tell basically before the songs really got to the studio that would evolve into a record ---

You could tell before they got there," added Gamble, "that they really had something - you could tell when we wrote them, you could feel it."

"Because the artists used to say," said Huff. "Man, if we called in the artist and Gamble would sing them the song, and I would play them the song, and they would be in awe of what it would sound like - so it was just a natural transition.

"And the music was so nice," replied Gamble. "Pleasant working conditions, everybody was friendly towards one another, and the music was the object of everything, how to make that music sound good."

MECHANICAL INFORMATION:

A. Printed roll-fed offset.

A. Frinted for the offset.

B. 85 or 100-line screen recommended.

C. Emulsion side down.

D. Page size 10" x 13" (60 x 78 picas).

E. Four 2½" (13½ picas) columns per page with two pica gutter between columns.

1 column 2 columns 4 columns ..... 60 picas

Unit space ads are the easiest way for you to self records, tapes, compact discs, books, memorabilia, and any other collectibles you have for sale. Units also work well for want lists, announcements, etc.; the better your unit looks when you put it together, the better it will look in GOLDMINE. You may use any bidding deadline you wish in your advertisement. If no deadline is noted, it will be understood that it will be one month from the cover date of issue in which your ad appears.

cover date of issue in which your ad appears.

One unit space equals one  $8\frac{1}{2} \times 11$  typed sheet. This applies to both regular and super unit space ads.

and super unit space ads. Type your copy legibly onto  $8\frac{1}{2} \times 11$  white sheets. We'll reduce it as is. A regular unit space is one ninth of a page; a super unit space is one quarter of a page. Remember to include your ordering information, postage rates, grades, deadlines, name and address, etc. on your first unit. Do not send any partial units

REGULAR UNIT SPACES .. .$54.00 each Full page of 9 - $414.00 Each additional after 9 - $46.00 SUPER UNIT SPACES Full page of 4 - $414.00 Each additional after 4 - $103.50

We will typeset your name, address and phone number at the bottom of your unit space ad for you, and a heading at the top, if you specify one. There is no extra charge for this. If you ask us not to typeset anything on your ad, we'll do nothing. Otherwise assume the typesetting will appear.

Do not reduce your copy before putting in into 8x11 format. Avoid all caps. Keep the copy clean. Dot matrix printers work terribly for our ads, but if you must use one, print it as dark as possible. All unit space ads are considered to be camera ready, so the 15% C.R. discount does not apply to them.

COLLECTOR'S SHOWCASE ...... $35.00 per box The Collector's Showcase is the most widely read advertising section in GOLDMINE. Each ad is in its own box, consisting of a space two columns wide and approximately 1/2" high, or a multiple of that size. All typesetting is included in the price. We recommend no more than 14 to 15 typed or written lines per showcase box. One typed line across should equal 33 characters. There is no discount for camera-ready showcase ads

STORE DIRECTORY .......$8.00 per issue
This section features listings for retail record stores around the world. Traveling record collectors of all types search for new stores to dig through on their vacations, business trips, etc. Advertise your establishment here, including ten words of miscellaneous description, for only $8.00 an issue. You can buy this space in increments of 13 or 26 issues, for $104.00 or $208.00. Send in your store name, address, phone number, and ten words of description, along with your payment. If you stock GOLDMINE, we'll put your listing in bold face type.

FAXED ADS:

Some advertisers FAX their ads to us and then send the original ad copy to us by mail as well. If you do this, please indicate on the original copy you send that you previously FAXED the ad to us. This will eliminate the possibility of your ad being scheduled to run twice. Any original copy not marked which leads the ad to run twice will be charged for both ads.

Typewritten copy is recommended. The publisher is not responsible for en rors resulting in longhand or illegible copy, or from changes submitted by telephone. The publisher's liability for any error shall not exceed the cost of the space occupied by that error.

ADVERTISING REQUIREMENTS

BOOTLEG POLICY
The advertiser is responsible for ensuring that advertised product conforms with national and international copyright laws. GOLDMINE magazine screens advertisements for bootleg merchandise. GOLDMINE magazine accepts no responsibility for transactions involving unauthorized product.

If delivery will take longer than 30 days from the date the seller received the order, the seller must inform the buyer and offer the buyer the option of a refund or delayed delivery.

Unless otherwise stated in the ad, the buyer has a 10-day return privilege from the time he/she receives an item from an advertiser. The buyer does not have to give a reason for a return and can demand a refund less postage costs. Advertisers must allow buyers to obtain authenticity judgements as the basis for retention provided they notify the advertiser of their intent within the applicable return privilege period.

All advertisers must provide a permanent address and telephone number before an advertisement will be run. If a post office box is used in an advertisement the advertiser must still provide a permanent address for our confidential files.

A completed reference form must be in our confidential files before any buy, sell or trade ad can be placed. See below. Minors are required to furnish a certificate of responsibility from their parents or guardian before their advertising can be accepted.

Payment must accompany an advertisement and must be in the form of a personal check drawn on a U.S., Canadian or Mexican bank; money orders; international money orders; cashier's checks; or with your VISA, MasterCard or AccessCard credit card. Send your credit card number, expiration date, and the name on the card, along with permission to charge the card for your ad, with your advertising copy.
