Social Security Most Important Problem

THE Labor Institute held at Birmingham, Ala., recently, sponsored by the Birmingham Trades Council, with the co-operation of the faculties of Birmingham-Southern and Howard Colleges, was the third in the series of Southern labor institutes held on the subject of Social Security, under the direction of the Workers' Education Bureau of America. Before an audience largely composed of the union leaders of Alabama, that comfortably filled Trade Union Hall, John Temple Graves II, columnist of the Birmingham Age-Herald and a well-known Southern journalist, said in his opening address that social security was the most important problem before the Roosevelt Administration and that it was of especial importance that labor should understand this question because upon the security of both labor and the farmers depended our contemporary civilization. With the passing of the older types of individualism and the growth of a wider sense of social responsibility, he asserted, the ideals of safety and freedom have come to occupy a new place of importance as substitutes for the old ideas of self-reliance and initiative.

Prof. T. F. Debnam of the Economics Department of Birmingham-Southern College, in considering the "Validity of the Plea for Social Security" thought it was incumbent upon us to think of this concept of social security not as a radical proposal, but as a conservative, common-sense approach to a problem which has long since required some intelligent solution. For people on relief and for those in need, he pointed out, charity has for long been recognized as a poor substitute; that what we need as a part of social justice is a wider provision for social security.

George Googe, Southern organizer for the American Federation of Labor, in his discussion of "Labor's Attitude Toward Causes of Present Insecurity," said that this labor institute's approach to the problem of social security was part of the larger educational program for labor in the South carried out in co-operation with the Federation of Labor; that the reasons for social security legislation had been amply set forth by the Federation of Labor, but that in the South especially, the question of health insurance is one which requires a prior interest.

A lively discussion followed these opening addresses, which were presided over by Mr. I. C. Finch, representative of the American Federation of Labor.

Jobs for All Doubted

At the second session of the conference on Saturday morning, under the chairmanship of W. O. Hare, secretary of the Alabama State Federation of Labor, Spencer Miller, Jr., director of the Workers' Education Bureau, spoke on "Unemployment Insurance or Jobs for All." "There is no immediate possibility," said Mr. Miller, "of providing jobs for every man in the United States of America. Indeed, it is more accurate to say that with our advancing technology we face the problem of more rather than less unemployment than we have in normal times. We may look with hope to find some help through a wider distribution of leisure-time opportunities, as well as a distribution of work opportunities, to supply a more balanced life for the average American citizen.

Mr. Miller further pointed out that one of the reasons for considering unemployment insurance today was the recent disclosure of the fact that, even at the peak of prosperity, there was not an adequate income for everybody. "Sixteen million American families lived on $2,000 or less in 1921," he said, "which is an amount less than the budget, as suggested by the United States Department of Labor. Of this number nearly 10,000,000 had $1,000 or less. Of the people in the income group of $2,500 or less, which represents 75 per cent of the families of America, more than three-fourths were unable to save more than 2 per cent of their income a year. Such are the facts. On the other hand, if we utilize our plants and equipment we can produce enough to raise our national income to 135 billions of dollars and have an average of $4,400 per family, according to the recent report of the National Committee on Potential Productive Capacity."

After outlining the general principles of unemployment insurance, Mr. Miller emphasized three labor principles, which he said are necessary, in any scheme: First, that there should be labor representation on the administrative board of such a program; second, that the scheme should be national in scope and provide for workers in every section of the country, and, third, that there should be, as a necessary condition of its wise functioning, a national system of labor exchanges or employment offices.

Growing Older as a Nation

Dr. Paul W. Shankweiler of the Birmingham-Southern College, in discussing "Security for the Unemployable," especially for those dependent because of ill health or old age, pointed out that a recent study on "The Cost of Medical Care" showed that those in the low income group pay twice as much as do any other group for their services and receive half as much. For the aged, he insisted, the problem has become one of increasing seriousness because we are growing older as a nation, due to preventive medicine, and, on the other hand, he pointed out, we are witnessing workers being dismissed at the age of 40 or 45 because they are presumably too old to work. In discussing the various private and public plans for the aged, he said that the most helpful suggestion yet made for the dependent aged was some kind of pension scheme similar to that which has already been adopted in 28 states of the Union. He also analyzed briefly the present social security legislation and stated that it marked a significant beginning in the development of a national concern for the aged.

The afternoon session consisted of a jury panel discussion under the leadership of Prof. Louis W. Lohr of Howard College. The panel, which included representatives of labor, the employer, the church, and the university, consisted of Mr. George Googe, Prof. O. S. Causey of Howard College, E. Q. Hawk, Prof. J. E. Bathurst, Mr. James E. Mills, Jr., and the Rev. Stewart Meacham, together with Mr. Terence McCarthy of the British Labor Party. The subject of social security and the contribution which the various groups within the community could make to it was the subject matter of the panel discussion. Prof. U. S. Causey of Howard College spoke of the part which adult education might perform in providing a wise employment for the use of leisure time as one way of coping with the problem of the socially insecure. Prof. J. E. Bathurst of the Birmingham-Southern College also suggested that secondary schools were prepared to teach what the public demanded and might therefore teach the need for more social security. But, he warned, they will not take the lead. Mr. Googe in his consideration of the subject insisted that labor would do no less effective work even though they knew that the spectre of fear had been removed. Mr. James E. Mills, Jr., representing the employer and the press of the state, asserted that business was waking up and that it was a significant departure to have unemployment considered as an insurable risk, chargeable against the cost of production.

Church Should Be Interested

Mr. Meacham, representing the church, insisted that it must be interested in this subject; that the church had always flourished when it was on a crusade and that it must count this as one of the modern crusades. Prof. Hubert Searcy spoke of the new and developing functions of social security as an insurance against revolution. Terence McCarthy added that in England increased security had increased the measure of efficiency of workers put in this position, but more particularly, he insisted, that what was necessary was a new emphasis on the need for production of goods for use.

A lively questioning period followed this jury panel discussion, during the course of which the question was raised as to what group, if any, was opposed and why it was opposed to this program. It was pointed out that this extension of the function of the state was regarded by employers as involving a greater domination of economic life by the state. In discussing the utilization of trained experts in connection with governmental affairs, it was pointed out also, that it was significant that this Administration had called in these experts to advise in connection with important affairs of government.

At the closing session on Saturday evening, under the chairmanship of Mr. Bowen, one of the older trade unionists of the city, Prof. E. Q. Hawk of Birmingham-Southern College argued on the necessity of looking at the world realistically. He first traced the causes of unemployment and pointed out that no formula or remedy was adequate. He feared that unemployment insurance would meet seasonal changes only and not cyclical or technological changes. He urged as a proposal the removing of women from industry and cutting down the number of children employed. In general, he said, he felt that this entire problem would have to be worked out as a co-operative undertaking.

Terence McCarthy, in his stimulating address on the subject, "A Britisher Looks at the American Scene," asserted that the reason the industrialists had moved South in America was to get cheaper costs and, secondly, to increase profits. He felt that it was not going to be possible to effect any kind of (Continued on Page Two) change until the profit motive had been eliminated. As an example of production for use, he suggested the Co-operative Wholesale Society, which was the largest enterprise of co-operative production and distribution in England. The problem, he said, was not to find more employment, but how to get more work out of the machine. In a word, he thought that complete social reorganization was the only answer to the questions with which we were confronted, although unemployment insurance and other forms of social security were very desirable. We can, he declared, make the world what we want it to be.

Miller Suggests Educational Program

In his summary of the Institute, Mr. Miller insisted on the necessity of starting any program for social security by beginning where we were, with our existing laws and political habits. In this regard we are a generation behind Europe. Social insurance, however, is not a panacea but a social invention for using our collective intelligence on a common problem. He outlined also a series of six steps for the development of an educational program to be conducted, including classes for organizers and newer officials, forums, week-end conferences and labor institutes, a speakers' and information bureau, and the establishment of co-operative relationships with the Emergency Educational Program of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

"Workers' education is an activity," he said, "which must begin with small groups and not with the mass. It must also proceed upon the recognition of the long-time need for a more disciplined intelligence on the part of labor to deal effectively with its complex problems."

NEW!

NOW—for the first time—all reed artists can have the advantage of a genuine BONACIO mouthpiece. Identical with those made by Bennie Bonacio, famous 1st saxophone and 1st clarinet with Paul Whiteman, for his own use. The unique lay, throat and tone chamber produced such a marvelous tone that he was soon besieged by discriminating artists to make mouthpieces for them. But he could not begin to supply the demand. Many artists had to be disappointed but NOW all can be supplied.

Bonacio
MOUTHPIECES

STEELAY

For Bonacio has licensed C. G. Conn, Ltd., exclusively, to make and sell his complete line. Conn laboratories developed STEELAY—a new and ideal material for their manufacture. A new type hard rubber, almost as shrink-proof and warp-proof as steel. Permits extreme accuracy in cutting and shaping. Takes high "black glass" polish. Perfect acoustical properties for producing the finest "reed" mouthpieces in the world.

CHOICE OF 6 POPULAR LAYS

FOR CLARINETS AND SAXOPHONES

Furnished for Eb Alto, Bb Tenor, and Eb Baritone Saxophones; and for Bb Soprano, Eb Alto, and Bb Bass Clarinets. Choice of 6 popular lays including the lay used by Bonacio himself. Wide range in opening and length of lay to meet all requirements. All have the exclusive Bonacio tone chamber; hand-cut, and finely calipered to insure scientific accuracy. Try these marvelous mouthpieces and be convinced of their striking superiority. Ask your music dealer or write for new free literature, just off the press.

Beginning of the End

THE industrial managers of the country are asking for industrial peace; but they are hatching more industrial war.

They have been drawing the last of the "docile tribes" from the southern Appalachian hills of Kentucky and Tennessee; and these are being run through the mills which make men ready to organize their own unions against the greed and unreasonable demands of the employers.

For many years there was a supply of new industrial man-power released from the farms of the nation by the increasing mechanization of farming operations. Most of these have now learned their first lessons, and know a little of how to use the alphabet of organization. Some of them made good raw material for the communists at first, in their red-hot rebellion against the cold-blooded extraction process through which they were being run. Later, they came to understand some of the other angles of communism, and refused acceptances of its further logical implications.

Soon even the automobile producers will find that they have exhausted their sources of innocent, unintelligent man-power. There will always be the big reserve of the unemployed to draw from hereafter; but most of these will be former and experienced employees of industry, familiar with its mass processes, aspects, and managerial outlook. They will not then be so easy to prey and impose upon. That day will mark a new day in the industrial policy for labor.

Even the slight improvement which has been gained in the southern industrial and farming life by the comparative equalization in standards of living brought about under the codes, has reduced the pressure which has been turning out the past supply of docile labor from the southern hills.

In these circumstances, for the managers of industry to try to evade the intention and the implications of Section 7A—in whatever form it may ultimately be crystallized—is a labor of Sisyphus. It can't work. It just won't work indefinitely. Let the man on top beware.

The Clearest Success of the New Deal

THE number of young men in CCC work will be doubled as soon as camps can be built for them. There are, roughly, 300,000 in camps now; there will be 600,000 before the close of the year. And apparently everyone approves.

The CCC is the most perfectly successful of all the New Deal measures. The danger that it would compete with ordinary labor and the fear that it would be used as a military school both have vanished. As for military training, they don't get it; and so far from competing with ordinary workers, these lads, for the time they are in the camps, are off the labor market. Meanwhile, they are doing useful work which no one else would do, living under healthy conditions, and getting a zest in life which is impossible for the unemployed in a slum.

William James, probably America's foremost psychologist, outlined many years ago a scheme which has many curious resemblances to the CCC—and many differences. James, one of our earliest pacifists, wanted to preserve the military virtues while abolishing war, and he also wanted to make the young of the prosperous classes realize that this earth is only "a partly hospitable planet," and that there is a "permanently hard and spur" foundation for our higher life.

There is nothing to make one indignant," says James, "in the mere fact that life is hard, that men toil and suffer pain. The planetary conditions, once for all, are such, and we can stand it. But that so many men, by mere accident of birth, should have a life of nothing else but toil and pain and hardness and inferiority imposed upon them while others, no more deserving, never get any taste of this campaigning life at all—this may well rouse indignation."

James suggested conscription of all able-bodied youth to a season of the hard and often unpleasant work which, for all our machines, still remains to be done; and he was particularly anxious that the youngsters born to luxury should be put through this course of training. We are many miles from this goal. There is no conscription to the CCC, the competition with labor, almost inevitable under James' plan, is avoided by the simple method of putting the CCC at work which otherwise wouldn't be done; and it is the boys with no privileges at home instead of those with too many that fill the CCC camps. But in the direct grasp of facts and meeting of needs, the two plans are one at bottom, however they may diverge.

Liberty League Opposes Wagner Bill

THE American Liberty League, subsidized and dominated by interests pronounced in their opposition to the New Deal, charges that the Wagner Labor Relations Bill would strike a serious blow at various sorts of freedom which labor exploiters enjoy and desire to retain.

The Wagner bill, in fact, is nothing but a conservative statement of the fundamental principles which motivate the workers in their struggle to realize the rights which progressive citizens of all schools know are essential to build up an approach to justice in our system of wealth production and distribution.

The measure asserts the indisputable principle that equality of bargaining power between employes and employers is the basic element in securing the rights of the workers, and declares that collective bargaining by the workers through representatives of their own choosing is the necessary machinery to realize this equality.

The bill, therefore, positively legalizes collective bargaining and provides for elections, supervised by a government board, by which the workers shall choose their agencies to carry out the bargaining idea.

In addition, the bill prohibits certain well-known subversive practices which employers use to victimize trade unionists and prevent collective bargaining. The practices include interference with the right to organize and bargain collectively, domination or interference with the formation and administration of labor organizations, financial support of labor organizations, and the use of discrimination to keep workers out of bonafide unions. To administer the proposed law provision is made for a National Labor Relations Board.

These principles of fundamental economic rights for working men and women constitute the substance of the Wagner Labor Relations Bill.

And the Liberty League has the effrontery to declare that writing these principles into the statute law of the United States and strictly administering them by a government board constitute a serious invasion of American liberties!

Out Beyond the Surf

Where thought, un-hastened by necessity or trepidation, sometimes penetrates to truth. Here, where the shallows throw no spray, let us ponder and enjoy the lessons of the art and the work and play of life.

Mad world. That would be a good title for a movie thriller, or for a play, or a book.

Perhaps if the world as it is could be pictured in a movie thriller it would be better understood, because the eye records impressions faster than the ear, for most folks.

And there is a tendency to believe what's in the pictures, just as there is to believe what is seen in print.

It is still almost impossible to wash out the effects of a lie in print.

It is a mad world. Strangely enough, the same persons who today follow mad leaders, only yesterday followed other leaders, some almost as mad, but many quite the reverse.

Perhaps it wouldn't do to say that Hitler and Mussolini and Stalin are mad from the viewpoint of a doctor. But from the viewpoint of democracy they are utterly mad.

The face of Mussolini is the face of a man who loves power for the sake of power. There is brutal domination in that face.

The face of Hitler is the face of a man who is after something and he loves autocratic power because that is the way he believes he must arrive at his destination.

The face of Stalin is perhaps a combination of the two, meaning he combines the two purposes.

The lesser lights among the barbarians—the despots of today's Europe—follow one of the two main patterns pretty much.

And all of them one day will pass from the stage, resolving themselves back into the clay from whence they came, but having left a terrible impress upon the peoples over which they rule for a flicker in the long eternity of time.

Observing these brutal manifestations of perverted human purpose there seems to stand forth with more force than ever before the conviction that in human affairs only one thing is worth while and that is to teach those things and do those things that bring back to the people the intelligence, the mechanism and the authority to govern themselves.

There is some point to helping, as best one may, toward the making of a state of freedom for the human race.

There is nothing except a vast futility in the creation of power for one man, or for a little group of men. And that futility is made criminal by the misery that is brought to the victims, the oppressed.

These things apply to all autocratic authority and to those who build it and wield it.

In his little way, Weir, of Weirton Steel, is of the pattern from which the Hitlers and the Mussolinis are made.

No nation has yet achieved its freedom from dictators. If they are not political dictators they are financial or industrial dictators.

American industry is full of them, Section 7A to the contrary notwithstanding, and many other laws to the contrary equally notwithstanding.

Shakespeare told us that all the world's a stage, and so it is, but millions of people have no voice in the part they shall play during their whisper of time on earth. While a few stalk across the boards in the role of commanders, millions sink in fear or are driven in a mad scramble to arrive at a destination which they have not selected and do not want, traversing the route meanwhile in pain and anguish.

These things need not be always so. But it will be so until peoples learn to think together, to agree upon a purpose and to act with intelligence as well as in concert. Today the trade union movement is the greatest and most cohesive to that end. It is the model upon which mankind must build for final mastery over itself.

Every cent spent for foreign-made products decreases the payrolls of American workers.

Whether we are on the gold standard or not, every union-made dollar we spend for UNION LABEL goods makes the American dollar rise on foreign exchange.

The lesson of the last twenty months is clear. Only by a compulsory increase in wages and consequently in purchasing power of workers can there be business revival.—Father Francis J. Haas.

Union Labels assure you that the products are American-made. Increase employment in our own country by buying Union-made goods.

OVER FEDERATION FIELD

(By CHAUNCEY A. WEAVER)

In the traditional musical atmosphere of Cincinnati, Ohio, the sixth annual convention of the American Bandmasters' Association was held March 7-10 and proved to be about the most successful one of the entire series.

This is a growing organization. It has ninety-one active members and twenty associate members.

The late John Philip Sousa was one of the originators of the association idea and its first honorary president. Franko Goldman of New York was its first active president; Herbert L. Clarke of Long Beach, California, was president last year, and his successor is Frank Simon of Cincinnati.

One of the notable features of each convention is a monster concert with many conductors participating. A goodly portion of the concert proceeds is turned over to the A. F. of M. Local of the entertaining city. The association is something more than an annual social convale. It responds to the urge of serious purpose. It seeks to foster worthwhile musical development. Bands and band music are naturally the dominant theme. The association gives scholarships to deserving students. Requirements for admission are rigid. An exalted standard of ethics is maintained. Earnest effort is made to bring about a spirit of co-operation between professional bands and high school bands to prevent overlapping, eliminate friction, and promote harmonious community sentiment in behalf of true musical development.

We are indebted to Bandmaster Karl King of the Community Band of Fort Dodge, Iowa, for a copy of the official program and other data showing the high character of this interesting musical event.

Referring once more to the concert feature, Local No. 1 furnished one hundred Cincinnati musicians, who rendered a concert which lasted four hours, under the direction of thirty-two different directors.

At the regular Arco Sunday afternoon broadcast in charge of Frank Simon (which we are happy to have heard), Director Simon graciously handed his baton to various visiting band directors, after which all the conductors went to Middletown, where the big concert program was repeated. The band directors were also guests of the fine Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra and later were entertained at a banquet tendered by the Symphony Circle, a ladies' group representing the Cincinnati Club, Musicians' Association and the Simon and Fillmore Bands.

We believe this association means much to the American band of the future. With the seed properly and intelligently sown, and the soil systematically cultivated, out of the evolutionary days ahead, the idea of a permanent community band should germinate and spread until cities large and small should become sufficiently band conscious to insure permanency for the enterprise.

Band music lovers of a past period will recall Weber's Prize Band of Cincinnati, which played concert tours extending from coast to coast. They will be interested to learn that a feature of the concert program above referred to was the rendition of "The Eagle," a march composed by John Weber of the old-time Prize Band directed by the author, who now lives in honored musical retirement in Cincinnati.

Space does not permit review of the entire concert programs which bore the names of eminent composers and distinguished directors. It was a symposium, however, rich in content and personnel, and impressively suggestive of the enjoyment which the great audiences must have experienced.

One of the notable features of the Cincinnati Bandmasters' convention was the playing of the "Stars and Stripes Forever"—the number being directed by a moving picture screen depiction of the lamented Sousa himself. It was an impressive demonstration of what inventive genius has accomplished in these latter days. It was so realistic that many personal acquaintances of the great bandmaster were deeply moved.

Answering an official Federation call eastward incidental opportunity was afforded to contact the Ohio-Kentucky-West Virginia Tri-State Federation Convention last month. All three States were represented at Columbus and the chance to meet so many old friends gave an exhilarating touch to an otherwise strenuous week. The delegates were alert to hear everything from their co-delegates which might offer solution to vexing home problems. We have not yet received an official report of the entire proceedings, but feel sure that far-reaching good is going to flow from the activities of this mid-continent organization.

The Denver Musician announces the death of Edward Coe of Pueblo. In his prime Coe was a notable trombone player with Pryor and Sousa bands. His widow before her marriage was Madame Cessler, a talented cornet player. Coe had been a member of the Denver Local forty-five years.

The Hollywood crowd talks of removing to Florida. Do they imagine the divorce courts can be any more liberal down there than they are in California?

The Hitler obsession is a terrible disease.

Judging from the reported attendance of the baseball craze has survived the depression.

One of the wheel-horses of the Federation, Brother Thos. E. O'Shea, many times a convention delegate from Local No. 60, contributes the following card to the Pittsburgh Musician:

I take this means of thanking my many friends and well-wishers who supported me at the past election for Delegate to the National Convention. I understand there was a nice turnout for the meeting, and that day by day the members are taking a greater interest in Federation affairs. Before long I'll be down to say "hello" and "thank you" in person as the sickness which confines me to the house is slowly but surely leaving.

THOS. E. O'SHEA.

We trust the advent of Spring will have a tonical effect and that this veteran of the cause will soon be in his accustomed haunts again.

For those interested in knowing, the ride from New York to Asbury Park is less than two hours either by the Pennsylvania or the Central Railroad of New Jersey line. The run is longer from Philadelphia, but all three lines are pleasant and interesting.

Prediction—1936 the most spectacular political year this generation has ever seen.

To many International Musician readers, far and wide, will come as a distinct shock the announcement of the passing away of William J. Douglas, which occurred at his home city of Seattle, Washington, Wednesday, April 3. Pneumonia, supplemented by acute heart weakness, brought a fatal termination after only a two-day illness.

"Bill" Douglas, as he was known to all his friends, was fifty-five years of age. He was a native of Montreal. He came to Seattle in 1909. He played trombone with Wagner's Band, one of the notable musical organizations of the Northwest, and also played in the Seattle Symphony Orchestra and served as business manager under the direction of Henry Hadley. He early became active in musical union affairs and after serving as sergeant-at-arms for several years was elected secretary of Local No. 76 in 1917. In 1919 he attended his first national convention at Dayton, Ohio, and each subsequent convention until 1933. In 1935 he retired from office. He was married to Marion Allert in 1925. He was a member of Daylight Lodge No. 32, Free and Accepted Masons; Commandery No. 2, Knights Templar, and Nile Temple, Order of the Mystic Shrine. Survivors are his widow, Marion Douglas, 935 North 82nd Street; his mother, Mrs. Ida F. Douglas, and a brother, Hamilton Douglas, all of Seattle.

William J. Douglas was possessed of much force of character and was a leader in the movement which brought the six-day week to Seattle. During his long period as secretary he had the valued assistance of his wife in the office for eleven and one-half years.

The year now passing marks the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Camille Saint-Saens—one of the great French composers, noted for his originality in orchestral composition, and brilliant and effective in his instrumentation. His symphonic poems, "Phaeton," "Le Rouet d'Omphale," and "La Danse Macabre," are a few of the numbers which have enriched the musical literature of the world.

Depression cures are thicker than the autumn leaves which strew the famed Vales of Volumbrosa, but one in particular has been suggested which seems to be worthy of more extensive exploitation than it has thus far received. The original promulgator of this panacea, for whatever industrial, commercial or economic ill it is that ails us, suggests: "Let's start leveling off the Rocky

A NEW KING STRING BASS

Dear Mr. White:

It is with a great deal of pleasure that I write you regarding the new Recording Bass which I have just purchased.

You have carried out an idea that I have had in my mind for over fifteen years. Four rotary valves, small bore, and of the light metal which you have used. It is the greatest improvement made in basses in my time.

I have tested it in our recording room at the studio and found it to be in perfect tune, and the quality of tone is just suited to our type of recording. The entire music staff, as well as the sound department, are delighted with the improvements.

I feel that I cannot recommend this instrument too highly and it deserves all the success in the world.

With best wishes, I remain

Yours very truly,

Mountains. We could give jobs to 10,000,000 men out of work. We would have to build homes for them at $4,000 or $5,000 each. We would pulverize the rock and spread it a foot thick over the area in which dust storms have been prevailing, thus putting an end to that type of agricultural disaster. We could pay for the project with the gold and silver our workers would uncover. We would mint the gold and silver right on the spot and pay the workers while on the job. With the surplus left we would pay off the national debt, and have a large amount left to loan Russia, England, France and other countries able and willing to put up the usual gilt-edged (?) security."

Isn't it a grand and glorious feeling! As we meditate upon the possibilities outlined by this brain-truster, hitherto to fortune and to fame unknown, we catch a vision of every band and orchestra, at least between the Mississippi River and the Pacific coast, playing concerts up and down all over that mighty Rocky Moun-aim range infiltrating the atmosphere with such stirring melodies as "Back To The Movies" and "Drill Ye Terriers, Drill!"

By the way, which one of Shakespeare's characters was it who observed—"We are such stuff as dreams are made of."

Hitler seems to have changed the peace beauty to so as to read—"Blessed are the war-makers."

It is reported that a Spanish prince is coming over to this country to study agriculture. His education, however, will never be complete until he has learned the art of plowing under every third row as a magical method of producing a larger crop.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Benton Field of South Norwalk, Conn., announce the marriage of their daughter, Lillian Mary Ketham, to Mr. John Ridgely on Saturday, March 16, 1935, at the rectory of St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York City. The Field family are frequent attendants upon national conventions of the American Federation of Musicians, representing Local No. 52, and have a host of Federation friends who will extend their felicitations and best wishes.

Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago has been made an honorary member of Local No. 10. Celebration of the event brought a record-breaking crowd to headquarters at 175 West Washington Street. A handsomely engraved gold card, emblematic of his affiliation, was presented the Mayor by President James C. Petrillo. After which His Honor went forth and captured 750,000 votes at the city election. Two other candidates for Mayor "also ran."

The month of May brings relief from a lot of legislative sessions; and, perhaps, the weather will soon be hot enough to send Congress home.

The fishing promises to be unusually good this season.

As a summer resort Asbury Park is said to belong in the Exhibit "A" class.
