Universal to test commercial downloads via bluematter

Universal Music Group has announced that, beginning this week, it will begin a series of trials involving bluematter, a new digital music product. The announcement of this new commercial download initiative comes on the heels of earlier announcements from both Sony and EMI. The two other major record companies, BMG and Warner, are expected to announce similar initiatives in the coming months.

Songs in the newly-developed bluematter format will come with enhanced media content such as biographies, photographs, lyrics and liner notes. The tracks will be culled from the extensive Universal music catalogue, with the initial 60-odd tracks featuring artists such as Blink 182, George Benson, Live, Luciano Pavarotti, 98 Degrees, Marvin Gaye and Smash Mouth, among others. More tracks will be added as the trials continue.

The bluematter tracks will be available at various online affiliates, including audiohighway.com; excite@home; LAUNCH.com; Lycos Music; Music.com; and RollingStone.com. Later on, bluematter tracks will be available at BestBuy.com, Checkout.com and GetMusic.

Universal partnered with a number of companies to pave the way for the secure delivery of bluematter music, including InterTrust Technologies, one of the leading developers of digital rights management technology; Magex, a digital commerce service; and RealNetworks, a specialist in internet media delivery and creator of the RealJukebox 2 internet music jukebox.

"Universal is embracing multiple digital music strategies, beginning with our multimedia download product, bluematter. Gaining insight into consumer preferences for accessing and enjoying legitimate digital music is an important first step in being able to develop other new and compelling products and services for music fans," noted Heather Myers, executive vice-president and general manager of Global e. "The bluematter trials are part of several options that we are developing to open Universal's vast library of music to the digital consumer."

Throughout the bluematter trials, UMG will offer consumers a $4 credit in a Magex digital wallet, to encourage the trial of the new product. UMG will monitor consumer feedback to develop enhancements and improvements to the downloads. UMG will also offer customer service and information at bluematter.com to assist consumers with questions relating to the downloading process.

Platinum shuts doors after ten years

Ray Rosenberg, who has helmed Platinum Entertainment (formerly Intersound International) as general manager for ten years, has closed up shop. The US parent company recently applied for protection under Chapter 11, which made it impossible for him to continue.

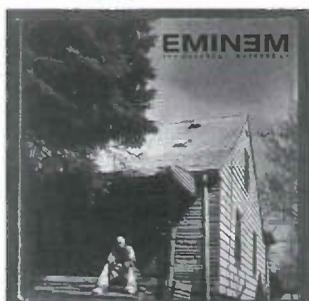

Platinum was the exclusive distributor for Pro Arte, Maxiplay, Critics Choice, Quintessence, Legends, Bon Voyage International, Pro Jazz, D.P.I. and Feels So Good. The company also represented a number of name artists including Canada's Lucille Starr and the late Colleen Peterson as well as Janie Fricke, T.Graham Brown, Hoyt Axton, The Bellamy Brothers, Mel McDaniell and others.

Highly respected in the industry, Rosenberg took over Platinum (Intersound) after an association of 16½ years at A&M. He can be contacted at 905-669-0455.

Serial Joe, 11:30 and McCauley's leading label group's assaultLe Groupe DKD riding next wave of artists into the fall

by Ron Rogers

According to DKD Group marketing director Lenny Levine, his company is giving new meaning to the words 'Canada's biggest, best and hottest indie'. The company posted a series of ads to that effect last year, and now Levine believes the company is starting to fulfill that promise.

Lenny Levine

The DKD Group consists of four distinct labels – Aquarius Records, Tacca Musique, DKD Disques and DKD D-Noy – and have already carved out a

Popstars auditions at cities across Canada

Auditions are set to commence this month for Popstars, a 13-episode, prime-time docu-soap to chronicle the 'real life' selection, creation and development of a hit female pop group. Five young women, between the ages of 18 and 25, will be chosen to star in the television series.

The Popstars series, produced by Lone Eagle Entertainment, will debut in primetime in January of 2001 on Global Television. Universal Music will release both a CD and video from the final group.

Auditions will take place in four cities across Canada at various Famous Players locations. The dates for the auditions are August 6th in Calgary at Silver City Country Hills, August 9th at Vancouver's Silver City Riverport, August 16th and 17th at the Paramount in Toronto, and August 23rd at the Paramount in Montreal. Auditions will run all day, from 8 am to 8 pm.

The search will look for young women who can sing and dance, with 'the confidence and charisma of a successful recording star'. Judges for the auditions will be professionals from the music industry and media, including Lone Eagle Entertainment president Michael Geddes, Universal's senior vice-president of A&R Allan Reid and director of A&R Brian Hetherman, and KISS 92 FM morning host Billie Holiday.

The Canadian rights for Popstar were acquired from Australia, where the concept has been an unprecedented success. The Popstars series has resulted in the highest-rated prime time program in the market in the last five years, regularly beating out the likes of Who Wants To Be A Millionaire? and 60 Minutes. The resulting group, Bardot, debuted at number one with both their single and album in both Australia and New Zealand.

solid track record with artists such as Serial Joe, Bif Naked and Sass Jordan, not to mention successful Francophone artists such as Kevin Parent and La Chicane.

This summer has seen the group release a series of albums to further cement their strength in the Canadian marketplace. June saw the release of Sum 41's album, Half Hour Of Power, which was simultaneously released via Island/Def Jam in the US. The hardcore band is also gaining plenty of new fans as part of both the Vans Warped and Summersault Tours.

June also saw the release of R&B/soul newcomer Jodie Resther's album, Real. Resther's profile was enhanced by opening slots for the Backstreet Boys and TLC, and she made some chart noise with the lead single and video title track.

In July was the debut from 11:30, comprised of 19 year-old twin sisters Trish and Toni Sherwood, the daughters of respected Montreal musician Dorian Sherwood. 11:30's lead single, Ole Ole, has already soared up the charts, currently residing in the top 20 on the RPM 100 Hit Tracks.

July also witnessed the release of Serial Joe's second album, simply titled Serial Joe..., featuring

House Of Blues offers Run Of The House promotion

Matching the spirit of the summer concert season, House Of Blues Entertainment Inc., has announced their greatest-ever ticket giveaway. The 'Run Of The House' promotion will be geared towards all music fans – be the genre rock, rap, hip-hop, alternative, country, jazz, electronic, etc.

The promotion, which began the first week in July, allows guests exiting from any of the 22 participating House Of Blues venues (clubs, amphitheatre, concert venues and/or restaurant) to receive a specially-marked CD-ROM. Content contained on the CD will act as a navigator for participants to enter the contest via hob.com/entry, which can also be accessed directly through www.hob.com. The CD will also include HOB content, such as live concerts, artist interviews, ticket giveaway promotions, digital downloads and more.

Over 4,000 shows will be included in the lifetime of the promotion, including such artists as Phish, Britney Spears, Dave Matthews Band, Stone six new tracks produced by Dave 'Rave' Ogilvie, as well as five previously unreleased remixes, and a special newly-recorded version of Mistake, produced by Don Gilmore, which will be the first US single release. Shortly down the road, an amalgamation of the first two records will be released by Epic in the US.

And then there's McCauley, a group of four brothers ranging in age from 15-25, hailing from London, Ontario. The group has already opened for both Aretha Franklin and The Temptations, and lead single My Heaven (the title track from the album), is also generating some solid airplay at CHR stations throughout the country.

Levine says that, despite the overflow of domestic talent the group now possesses, getting that all-important airplay is still a hefty chore.

"We have to stick with Donald's vision, and scrap it out in the Canadian marketplace. It's very volatile out there, there's not very many independents left – us and Netwerk are kind of like the Last of the Mohicans. You have a lot of majors being swallowed up, and it's not an easy marketplace. It's tough to get your Canadian content out there, and we're just pushing and pushing to make it happen."

CCMA's Tom Tompkins speculates on "winds of change"

It was on a sad note that the announcement of this year's CCMA Award nominees also reminded the audience of the departure of Tom Tompkins who has weathered the storms of change as president of the CCMA for the past seven years. As we have come to know and respect Tompkins, he shoots from the hip and can never be accused of dancing to anyone's tune but his own.

It was a hushed audience who hung on his every word as he painted scenario after scenario of some of the problems country music has and is facing, but injecting his own positives that country music can survive and benefit from the "winds of change."

For those who were not there and to chronicle this landmark gathering, we reprint Tompkins' speech in its entirety.

"First of all, I would like to welcome all of you to this press conference today. In a few minutes we're going to be announcing the nominees for this year's Canadian Country Music Awards, and we do so with a lot of pride. As you will discover, country music in Canada is changing once again, reinventing itself, by introducing new artists while acknowledging the best performers of the past.

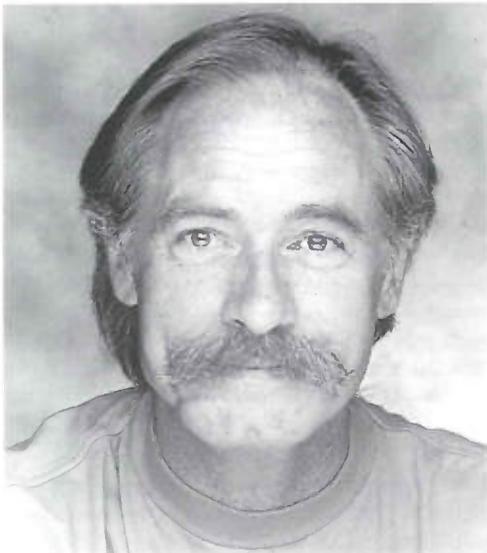

I've had the good fortune to be the president of the Canadian Country Music Association for the past seven years, but I've worked in country music for what seems like a lifetime. I've seen good times, great times and times when nothing much seemed to be happening at all.

Right now, we're in none of those places -- and we're certainly not in a time when nothing is happening. The country music segment, like every other part of the music industry, is in a vortex of change right now. Record companies, now part of massive multi-media conglomerates, continue to swallow each other and rumours abound about new alliances and mergers. Headlines about methods of downloading music have been transferred from the computer magazines and business sections to the front page of daily newspapers and to television news. And now our television networks are buying up newspaper chains.

And yet, in the middle of the winds of change, music still happens. Songwriters still write, musicians still play and singers still tell their stories and evoke moods and interact with their listeners. And as the cyclone of new technology moves forward, people still listen to music, still buy it (much of the time), still consume it on records, on radio, on television, in the car and at live performances at festivals, concert halls, clubs and at the local neighbourhood bar.

The winds of change are certainly blowing in our world at the CCMA. As many of you know, for the first time in 14 years, our annual awards show is not being seen on one of Canada's major television networks, although we are taping it for possible future broadcast. The reasons are apparent: the cost of producing awards shows like ours are rising, exponentially, year after year -- and trying to put the funding necessary to produce a show such as ours has become increasingly difficult. And this despite the fact that our annual show has had terrific production values, starpower, and strong audiences

Tom Tompkins

-- last year almost one million viewers saw our show.

Obviously, awards shows are going to have to change. Obviously, our organization is going to have to join with others to rethink how we honour the best in our respective fields. But we look forward to this challenge -- we look at it as an opportunity and we are moving forward resolutely to meet it head on. As we say in radio, keep tuned!

One thing for sure though is we will be presenting our awards show in front of 8,000 hardcore Alberta country fans at the Skyreach Centre in Edmonton on September 11. Canada's major country stars will be there, and it will be the hottest live concert-cum awards ceremony in Canadian country music history. And I'm happy to say that two great Canadian country stars -- Terri Clark and Paul Brandt -- are going to co-host the show. Both of them have hosted it in the past individually -- they're both very likeable, smart, funny, full of energy and absolutely wonderful to work with -- we're all looking forward to having them with us again.

I mentioned earlier that Canadian country

Sam.com scores Canadian first with MoodLogic

SamtheRecordMan.com has announced a Canadian first, an online partnership with MoodLogic, giving the Toronto-based record retailer exclusive rights to the MoodLogic Browser. Online shoppers can now conduct advanced searches for music titles based on their mood and personal tastes.

The MoodLogic Browser consults what it describes as "the world's most powerful database of perception-based multidimensional music profiles," which contains more than 400,000 songs, and growing, dating back to 1960. Each song in the database has been classified by a number of descriptive and emotional criteria.

Classification is apparently done by a panel of more than 20,000 actual consumers and by hundreds of professional music specialists, who form "a dedicated community" at www.jaboom.com the company's music rating website.

Jason Sniderman, president and CEO of SamtheRecordMan.com indicates that his online community "will love the fact they can search for music titles based on their preference and mood. Imagine the fun of searching for music for the perfect date, or for blowing off steam or just relaxing."

He goes on to point out that his company is committed to creating "the ultimate entertainment destination for savvy online music consumers," continuing with "The licensing agreement with MoodLogic is an excellent example of the types of partnerships we are seeking to continue to build our online presence and to deliver a meaningful experience and content to our visitors."

Tom Sulzer, founder and CEO of the San Francisco-based MoodLogic, says "We are pleased to partner with SamtheRecordMan.com and believe that the MoodLogic Browser will prove to be a powerful entertainment and sales boosting tool."

music keeps bringing forward new stars -- and you'll find at least one strong new contender for honours when you hear the list of nominees for this year. Once again, we're also honouring -- in four different categories -- the artists who work in the independent sector of Canadian country music.

The role of independent artists in the Canadian country scene is an important one to acknowledge. Canadian radio has traditionally been far more supportive of independent artists than is the case in the United States, and many of the artists whose successes we mark each year during our awards show started out as independents with their first records on small labels, many of them financed by the artists themselves. Indeed some of our nominees are still independent artists, which demonstrates in real terms how important this segment of our business is.

These are the artists of the future and proof that it's not always the major companies who can find, nurture, promote and market new artists in the country field.

We are also honouring -- by induction into the Canadian Country Music Hall of Fame -- two significant figures in our music who are not with us anymore, and who are missed by all of us. Leonard Rambeau, who managed Anne Murray's career for a quarter of a century, the man who brought a degree of professionalism to our industry that has since become far more common, but was very rare back then. And Colleen Peterson, as a performer, as a singer, as a songwriter, and as a woman who encouraged so many others, certainly deserves this acknowledgement from her friends and her peers who were among her biggest fans.

Before we close the formal part of this afternoon's activities, I would ask for your attention for a few more minutes.

The CCMA is deeply grateful to its sponsors; their support is vital to our continued existence, and I want to acknowledge them today.

Very special thanks must go to Chevy Silverado for their sponsorship of the Country Music Awards as a whole. They are also the proud sponsors of the Chevy Fans' Choice Award. Canadians everywhere can vote for the five nominees simply by phoning 1-900-870-2262; without the support of Chevy and General Motors it would be very difficult for us to keep this awards show as prominent as it deserves to be.

Next I would like to thank our new sponsors, Kodak Canada Inc. In an exciting new initiative, Kodak will be providing country fans with time access to images from Country Music Week in Edmonton culminating with the awards show on September 11. The Kodak/CCMA Photo Gallery will be available on the net at www.kodak.ca/go/ccma, or at our own site www.ccma.org -- and news media will be able to download high-resolution images, with the use of a password.

The continuous music network, Galaxie, is for the second year, supporting the Independent Male, Female and Group of the Year Awards. It's the organization's way -- in addition to its three country music channels -- of supporting the development of new music in Canada, through the Canadian Talent Development Fund.

The music industry is full of organizations with initials: two of them -- FACTOR and SOCAN -- are always particularly helpful to us. FACTOR lives up to its full name, the Foundation to Assist Canadian Talent on Record, by helping us create the seminars that are the highlight of Country Music Week. This year, FACTOR is also supporting the Rising Star Award, which honours talented new artists.

SOCAN, the Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers of Canada, is the organization which administers performing rights royalties in Canada.

WALT SAYS ...!

with Elvira Caprese

What a mess!!! Like the Emperor's new clothes, no one wants to admit there is a big problem with the recent conquest of media in Canada by Israel Asper and his son Lenny. Either by mistake or by deliberate plan, the CRTC handed them all the jewels of broadcasting a few weeks before they announced they practically controlled the thinking of Canadians from coast to coast with the takeover of the jewels of Hollinger newspapers. And all this just before the federal election! Gosh! Either it was the smartest move in the world or the dumbest. Now the Liberals have a strong and beholden supporter in place, but the broadcasters who were overlooked and the media that is threatened could very well rebel against the party and cause them to lose the election. Meanwhile ... we await how media concentration will be treated now that this is in place. (EC: The rest of the media also...awaits!!!)

Rickâs gone!!! Add one more to the many departures over there. RC says good-bye in a move that might surprise some, but has been predicted in this column for some time. I guess this comes under the heading âtransitionâ. From now till September there will be much speculation about the nationality of the replacement. (EC: Watch RPM!!! We know all, tell all and sometimes make it up!!!)

Nothing will be the same! Allow this monster to exist and everyone else will expect to be treated the same. So now every big player will want to be bigger to compete! What have we done? Whose in charge here? (EC: That's becoming obvious!!!)

Concorde and MIDEM!!! In 1977, 1978, 1979, Many of the people in the Canadian music industry flew Concorde to Paris on their way to MIDEM (which was the truly great international music conference of that era of the record business). Each year I was invited by Bernard Chevry to attend. All this was put together by U.S. PR legend John Nathan. There was no PR man in the world that had the tact, class and professionalism that John Nathan had. In 1979 I flew Air France Concorde New York to Paris and British Airways Concorde from London to New York. Not mentioned in the many stories of the recent Concorde disaster was the fact that in 1977 the U.S. government wouldn't let Concorde fly into or out of New York and in 1977, Stan Klees had to fly Toronto to New York and on to Washington to board Concorde and then to Paris. He was put up by Air France in the Meridian Hotel in Paris overnight and flew to Nice (the airport for Cannes) the next day. It was supersonic, but he could have flown normally in less time. The cost one way was $1000. (EC: But look at what $1000 would buy in 1977!!!)

All dressed up ... but!!! They left the theatre humming the lighting! My spies tell me this show was showmanship but lacked ... Barry Manilow. Many of the people who will be attending the week long run at the Hummingbird will only see a clone on stage and after you get over the lighting and the costumes ... thud! All four critics from the Toronto dailies gave it a cool reception. I would have rather reviewed the PR, but we aren't that vicious! Copacabana at the Hummingbird! Might go on to a smalltown run ... but Broadway??? Maybe a quick medic might bring it back to life! (EC: You're usually so gracious... and you're such a big Manilow fan!!!) Hello Lola? You've got the wrong number! (EC: Move over Kate Taylor!!!)

There goes the neighbourhood! Seems I got it wrong. JR is renting with a short lease. He doesn't have that kind of money ... YET!!! It seems it costs quite a bit to live in the Hamptons. It even costs more to be accepted. (EC: Can't understand you not getting all the facts straight! That ruins the credibility of the column!!!) OH! THAT! Anyway I've got SK to keep me posted! (EC: Oh! That SK!!!)

Take a look inside first!!! Some of the best promotion, sales and marketing people have come out of the stockroom or other low profile jobs. The companies gave these people the opportunity to prove themselves and they did. Now, with some companies, they seem to prefer the raid tactic. It's nice to instill company loyalty at an early stage and recognize this loyalty with a move up the ladder when opportunities surface. (EC: That should work both ways!!!)

The tough got going!!! "BC" BS was always fond of the expression, "When the going gets tough ... the tough gets going", which he adhered to all through his life. After many dashed hopes, he got hold of first one then two and now three franchises that turned out to be cash cows. He's come back from the brink and now, this year, as he turns 60, he's retiring in style with about $6 million to see him through, leaving a financial legacy for his two kids. Don't want to mention his name, he would be too embarrassed, but what a success story. Happy trails BS. (EC: Back from the brink ... only BS could do it!!!)

Free ... FREE??? You know the expression "if it's free it doesn't have any value" or something like that ... and, I like to think it's still viable. But, with the rising popularity of Toronto's new mini dailies; the Star's Today and the Sun's FYI, some are now saying that FREE is good. At least in this case it might keep that outside competition, outside forever. Haven't seen FYI yet, but Today is an incredible piece of work. The stories are tight ... get to the point immediately. Don't know how it will effect sales of the big job ... but I did my own research. Having my morning coffee where all the newspaper boxes are lined up in front of the bus stop, I've noticed more people going for the Today box only. Clever marketing by the Star, which has been lagging in popularity. (EC: How does FREE parlay into more sales for the big one???)

So he's going back to radio eh??? Maybe BM has mellowed in his old age and might even now believe that Cancon is important. I remember a few years back when he was considered an important personality that one morning he told his listeners that Cancon artists "are vultures." The station was bombarded with angry listeners, some even complaining to the CRTC, who asked for the tape of the show. The station claimed the tape had been lost. Fortunately, he was only one of a handful of Cancon naysayers, but unfortunately, he was with a major market radio station. (EC: You can't teach an old DJ new tricks!!!)

Shocking!!! It's a rather sad commentary that one of the top-rated variety-cum-awards shows will not be televised this year. CBC-TV, Canada's national, public-funded television network, says NO! to the Canadian Country Music Awards show, a cultural treasure, which will be held in Edmonton Sept. 11 at the Skyreach Centre before an estimated 8,000 country fans. Politics and cost-cutting efforts aside, the CBC should be breaking down the door of the CCMA for the privilege of televising this very important Canadian cultural event. I remember not long ago, this industry was grandstanding the efforts of Sheila Copps for being "on-side" with the recording industry. Well Sheila! We need you now. A simple phone call to CBC will do. (EC: How about a phone call to IA or LA???) You produce it and they'll buy it!!! (EC: Remember Regina and the BCAs!!!)

Daniel Caudeiron on the mend!!! It would take more than an aneurism to keep Daniel Caudeiron down. So, it's nice to be able to report that he is feeling much better. A tireless fighter for urban music and recognition for African Canadians, Daniel has dedicated his life to minorities and he's going to be honoured on his 60th birthday. Daniel is the founder of the CHEER Pool and CHEER Awards and sits on a number of Juno committees where he has been instrumental in changing the ways of thinking of many. He's in good hands with wife Valerie by his side. He will be hospitalized for a few weeks, so drop him a line at Room 931, 9th Floor, St. Michael's Hospital, Victoria Wing, 30 Bond Street, Toronto M5B 1W8. (EC: It's time to get back to work Daniel!!!)

SpinRecords.com will choose the best bands to perform at a series of live shows, with the ultimate winning band to receive a US recording contract and a grand prize of cash and gear. Hydrofoil continues to tour in support of their debut release, A Big Hand For Wonderboy.

Womack's follow-up a Crowell remake

Lee Ann Womack's remake of Rodney Crowell's classic Ashes By Now, is now at radio, the follow-up to I Hope You Dance, the title track from her Universal release. Dance, written by Mark D. Sanders and Tia Sillers, guests Sons of the Desert. The video features Womack's two daughters.

Womack's album, produced by Mark Wright, has gone platinum in the US and is close to gold in Canada. Womack was scheduled to perform at Agri-Fest in the village of Nelles Corners near Cayuga, Ontario on Aug. 6 (RPM - July 17/00).

Boa's Dan Nash exploding in Europe

Dan Nash, currently promoting Sandy, his latest release on the Calgary-based Boa label, is making impressive gains on the Independent Country Music Association of Germany's European chart (ICMAG), where the single moves up to 16.

Last year, Nash won the ICMAG male singer of the year award and this year he has been nominated in six categories: album, male artist, single for Sandy, single for Promise You Forever, video for A Man Like That and video for Promise You Forever.

Those interested can visit the ICMAG web pages (<http://www.i-c-m-a-g.org/nash/home.htm>) where they can stop by and sign Nash's guest book.

On this side of the pond, Nash and his band The Ramblers turned in a packed six-day engagement at Desperados during the Calgary Stampede where they played to more than 27,000 country fans.

Sandy can be downloaded in MP3 format at no charge (IUMA/Bands/DAN-NASH/index1.html) or call him at 403-274-1654, fax 403-274-0691.

Like most other record companies, DKD is witnessing first-hand the evolving new technologies, and trying to cope with the technology's impact. Services such as the now ill-fated Napster can't help but have an impact on the overall street sales.

But rather than fight the power, Levine says that companies have to embrace the new technology, and utilize it as best they can in their marketing schemes. The internet has become simply another essential element, along with touring, radio and video.

"We just recently totally revamped our internet site, DKD.com, and we're totally making it user-friendly, with regards to promotion of our artists, allowing people to sample tracks, sample videos. We have an artist named Liquid, who was the rapper in Bran Van 3000 - I don't think it will be radio that will break this record. It's gonna be video, it's gonna be a tour scenario, we'll probably release some advance stuff on the internet, perhaps some mixes that won't be on the album, in order to advance promote it. We've started to and will continue to use the internet as a marketing and promotional tool."

As noted, the DKD Group consists of four distinct labels. DKD D-Noy is the dance-oriented, Francophone label headed up by MusiquePlus DJ and Dansexpress guru Daniel Desnoyers. The latest release from the DKD D-Noy label is Dansexpress #5, which was released in April. Upcoming is the first Spin Capsule compilation, featuring more alternative club music, as opposed to commercial dance music.

Tacca Musique is a French label, known for being the home of such popular Quebecois artists as Kevin Parent, Jorane, France D'Amour and Nicola Ciccone. Parent is something of a French-Canadian phenomenon, having sold more than 600,000 units with his last two records, while Ciccone is closing in on a gold record with his latest, L'Opera Du Mendiant

DKD Disques, formed just last year, is home to the popular Acadian act La Chicane, a group that won a Juno last year, and has sold more than 200,000 of their most recent release. Just recently launched on the label was a new artist named Eric Maheu, who's album Roccocobowling has produced the Francophone hit La Legende Du Plateau.

Finally there's Aquarius Records, a label that's been around for more than 30 years, one that started with April Wine, and moved through Corey Hart, Sass Jordan, Bif Naked, and most recently, Serial Joe. Along with 11:30 and McCauley, coming soon on the label is a new band called Rubberman, the aforementioned Liquid, and another project called Vann, all of which are expected in the fall.

"With the success of Serial Joe last year, and Bif Naked kind of bridging the gap between the Sass Jordan years and now, Aquarius has really redefined itself," notes Levine, "especially over the last year when Donald came back into the fold. We've really redefined what our mandate is. It seems like we're going after a lot more youth oriented product. That's not to say we won't be putting out stuff for an older demographic as well. But we seem to be focusing more on youth, because youth are the ones that are buying the records. Selling nearly platinum on Serial Joe's first record is proof of that."

One of the keys for any record label, or in this case group of labels, is A&R. In the case of Le Groupe DKD, the obvious initial focus for their A&R scouting has been in Quebec, but obviously with artists like Serial Joe, it's clear they're looking to expand their horizons.

As Levine notes, the DKD Group's A&R department falls under the realm of long-time industry veteran Terry Flood, who's aided in the area of artist development by Mike Renault, better known as Parkside Mike. They form part of a greater whole that's responsible for what Levine calls a 'great dynamic' within the DKD offices.

"It's this combination of old school vs. new school. The combination of the two really brings out an awesome dynamic here. We have guys like Keith Brown, who's back in a consultant's role. And then we have someone like Mark Lazarre, the company president, who certainly knows talent, and Isabelle Chevrier, who's working in artist development, and working with producers like Glen Robinson or Paul Northfield. I think the dynamic is really great, and when we all sit around a table, banging heads together, we cover all the angles, because of the experience involved."

And overseeing the whole process is the man himself, Donald Tarlton, who forged his musical legacy in the concert promotion business, and only returned to the record fold relatively recently.

Officially, Tarlton's role is chairman, but Levine says that he still doesn't mind getting his hands dirty and participating in the day-to-day workings of the company.

"Since he's come back here, he's involved in every marketing discussion, every A&R discussion, every management discussion. He never stops - I walk into his office and say 'So, are you enjoying your retirement?' He's tremendously involved, and one of the driving forces in this office dynamic. He's been around, he knows what works, and he's into leveraging what's best for his company and his artists. Every day I have discussions with him - he calls them lively debates - but we go head-to-head often, and I learn something new from him every day."

One of the recent industry developments that's likely stirring up some discussion in the DKD offices is the proposed merger between Time-Warner and EMI, the latter of which happens to be the Canadian distributor for Aquarius.

Levine says that there's always concern over a distributor, simply in terms of making sure that their product is being handled properly and is well-situated in the retail environment. But in terms of the Warner-EMI merger and what that might mean to their arrangement, he says no one really knows at this point.

"We have a nice history with EMI, and we want to continue that. Admittedly, it's a little scary, especially if you're EMI, because you're not sure what the future holds. But I'm looking at it positively. EMI Canada has always been instrumental in breaking new Canadian artists, and have made it a priority to develop and break Canadian artists, and I'd like to think their mandate isn't going to change. And because they're good at what they're doing on a record label front, I'd like to think that their infrastructure won't change when this whole Warner/EMI thing happens."

New Releases

SERIAL JOE - Rock
Self-titled
Aquarius-00592-F

Just to show that good things do come from Newmarket, Ontario, Serial Joe is back with a new album (sort of) to follow up on their impressive and highly successful (double platinum) debut on the Aquarius label. The skeptics out there might suggest that the four lads may have rushed into this one a tad too quickly, but there's no time like the present to capitalize on their obvious street appeal. It's also important to note that some of the tracks on this abbreviated record will be merged with tracks from their first record for their upcoming American release on the Epic label. The Serial Joe sound is nothing strikingly new – a standard set of guitar chords, pumped-up bass lines, and reasonably unadorned drums – it's nothing pretty but it works. This album actually contains just six new tracks, once again produced by cohort Dave 'Rave' Ogilvie. Silently Screaming is one of the poppier tracks the group has written, and is an obvious lead single choice. Out Of Hand is a fairly standard rock track, although it doesn't contain the clear-cut hook one radio programmers might want. Absence Of Mind has a tasty Korn-esque guitar riff, and sounds about as down and dirty as Serial Joe can get. What I See has another decent hook in the chorus, although it's not the most distinctive track the band has done, despite the mixing work by Tom Lord-Alge. Another Time is another true head-banger, although this one veers more into Metallica territory than Korn. But False Design again drifts into that Korn-type territory of deep, dark heavy rock, although the chorus tends to lift things up a tad. Following the six new cuts, there's a newly-remixed version of their hit, Mistake, specifically designed for American listeners. Then there's some previously unreleased stuff, including the Brilliant Beast Mix of Face Down, the MetalDog Mixes of Should Have Been Mine and Deep, Jim LaMort's Absinthe Mix of Absence Of Mind, and Malhavoc's 'Help Please Send Bobo' Mix of What I See. Worth noting is the imaginative cover art by Canada's cartoonist extraordinaire Todd McFarlane. A strong continuation in what is turning out to be an impressive Canadian success story. -RR

TRANS-SIBERIAN ORCHESTRA - Opera (maybe)
Beethoven's Last Night
Lava/Atlantic-83319-P

Not sure what to prognosticate for this. The Trans-Siberian Orchestra, which is probably best described as an electronic/symphonic ensemble, presents a concert rendition of a work that could and, we suggest, should eventually become a full scale traditional opera. On the last night of Beethoven's life he is offered immortality in exchange for the oblivion of his works. We'll say no more here since there's an excellent accompanying libretto. Simply ponder over what ever happened to his Tenth Symphony. The singers are strong and the orchestra sufficient to the task of segueing mostly listening pleasure but we're not sure how it will sell without airplay and the likelihood of such could be remote. Granted, the work is broken down into 22 tracks but individually they're not strong. Hopefully our recommendation will carry some weight. -BW

KENNY BUTTERILL - Country/Pop
No One You Know
NBS-757

Armed with what's described as "an earthy, inviting" voice, this Canadian now living in California, impacts immediately with his straight-forward rootsy technique that teases the ear. His voice, his projection and his homespun material gives the listener the feeling of having been there before. Critics are just a little left of centre however, when they compare Butterill to other recording artists. He's not a clone. A second listen will stamp his own musical signature firmly with the listener. His material, his touch of blues and that laid-back vocal personality that's so radio friendly should open the door to both country and A/C formatted stations. How Far Can We Go, taken as the first single and featuring Don Jones on mouth harp, will prop open that door, a bouncy, summer offering that's just the tip of the iceberg. There's a bit of sameness, but that's what creates the appeal for this modern troubadour as he romps through his take on politics and life in general, much of it sounding very personal, like Don't Worry Now My Son, Our Liberty, Back To Canada, Balsam Lake and Where's The Bride. The latter two are standouts with an effective mandolin touch by Peter Morrison. Princess Diana, written one year before her death, is exceptional. The production by Daoud Shaw and James Crandell is just loose enough to add further enhancement to Butterill's vocal property. He is also heard on acoustic guitar. There are no MAPL logos, but it's assumed all tracks are three-parts Cancon (MAL). The album was recorded in the US. Contact: Kelly Mulvey fone/fax 519-451-0895. -WG

DENISE MURRAY - Country
Under The Moon

Loggerhead/Universal-08919-0700-J
New Brunswick Murray is the epitome of country. Named best country artist of 1999 at the East Coast Music Awards and nominated for numerous CCMA and Big Country Awards over the past couple of years, Murray has the sweets, the swells, the pathos, passion and rootsy emotion that keeps the listener on the edge of the seat. She is affectionately known in her hometown as "Metro Moncton's Queen of Country." This is the follow-up to her debut for the Loggerhead label and there's a noticeable shift in direction, more of a free spirit and a locked-in confidence, which is a positive one. (Heart Went) Boom, a song she wrote with Claude Melanson, was the first single taken from the album, which gained her solid airplay across the country. Those Were The Days, the follow-up, written by Murray, Melanson and Keith Brown, is already garnering important spins at country radio and impressive chart action. Murray and Melanson also teamed up to write Thing Called Love which should be considered for a single release. That powerful emotion pull is also nicely worked into End Of The Line, written by Murray, Melanson and Mario Robichaud, and Send My Heart The Bill (For Your Mistake), a song written by Murray, Melanson, Brown, Robichaud and Danny Maillet. A pristine, tight production by Jeff Nystrom, recorded at Little House Studio in Hudson, Quebec. -WG

DANNY GAIN - Jazz/Whistler
Listnin' Whistlin'

A jazz whistler is a little unusual, if not rare. Toots Thielemann did it a few years ago and so did Ron McCroby. Roger Whittaker, although not jazz, peppered up his recordings with incredible whistle inserts. Danny Gain can move to the front of the class with this exceptionally entertaining package of instrumentals (he regards his whistle as an instrument). Those commercials and/or jingles where a whistler is used, that whistle probably belongs to Gain. The material here is well-weathered traditional jazz offerings. Whistling can be shrill and uncomfortable to the ear. But Gain uses his like an instrument, as ear-pleasing as a piccolo (he studied clarinet which gave him the training he needed to read music and understand song structures). Don't mention novelty to Gain. He's serious about whistling which here, remarkably allows for a different spin on some real favourites like Autumn Leaves, Sweet Georgia Brown, Whispering, After You've Gone and You Took Advantage of Me. He also does a beautiful job on Latin works like Tico Tico and One-Note Samba. The CD was recorded at Steve Sherman Productions in Toronto. Gain is professionally backed by keys, bass and drums, which enhance rather than compete with his performance. All tracks are two-parts Cancon (AP). If you're in the market for a whistler, Gain lives in Pickering, Ontario. Call him at 905-420-0019. -WG

MARY SCHNEIDER - Classic Yodelling
Yodelling The Classics
KCM-6650 (KOCH)

For most North Americans, yodelling is wedded to the image of a lonesome cowboy soothing restless cattle by singing "I laid the old lady too" or something like that. In fact, yodelling is a highly structured and classical art form far removed from such new world banalities. European favourite Mary Schneider is a bona fide champion of it and turns her attention here to a mixed programme of classical and light classic favourites. Assisted by a full choir, the Sydney, Australia International Orchestra and members of her family she sings and yodels the music of twenty composers on twelve tracks. They include Rossini, Bizet, Offenbach, Ketelbey (not surprising), Brahms, Beethoven and even, Sousa (very surprising). There's nothing gimmicky about the performance. Indeed, Tosselli's Serenade for example, is charming and to hear a Sousa piccolo obligato yodelled is actually quite stirring. An excellent album that warrants front racking. -BW

WIDE MOUTH MASON - Rock
Stew

WEA-83774-P

The lead single from Wide Mouth Mason's new album, Stew, is called Smile, and it is a great track. If this song doesn't become a huge hit at radio, then there's something very wrong with radio programmers. But Smile is one of several terrific tracks on this record, which confirms the fact that Wide Mouth Mason are one of the brightest young bands in the country. What's nice about WMM is that, unlike seemingly every other young band in the business, the trio of Shaun Verreault, Earl Pereira and Safwan Javed don't just crank up the volume and write a dozen different variations of the same four chords. WMM seem to remember what old time rock 'n roll is, and that it was primarily based in the blues, another little fact that a number of today's bands seem to have forgotten. Watching the band recently at their Toronto showcase at Lee's Palace, it's easy to be caught up in the infectious nature of the music and the obvious joy with which the band plays. Rather than writing endless braying dirges about teen angst, WMM are content to strut along on a series of funky riffs and hook-filled tunes, all of them made that much more uplifting by Shaun Verreault's almost-boyish voice. The 13 songs here are like rapid-fire fixes – only a couple of them range beyond four minutes – and they all have that familiar funkified, bluesy feel to them. These guys should have been born in Memphis rather than Saskatchewan. Alongside the obvious favourite Smile (which is about as close to a standard pop/rock song as the group has), there's a number of other solid tunes here, including Who's There, Bushi Su, Change, the delightfully dischordant Mad Doctor, the bluesy pop of Ease Your Mind, and closing track Fa Na Na (which sounds like an Otis riff). Given their age, and the already mature nature of their music, the future is so bright for WMM, they should be wearing welding masks. -RR

SOCAN has always been particularly supportive of the work of songwriters, and their sponsorship of the Song of the Year Award -- as well as their support of a number of activities during Country Music Week, including the Guitar Pull, is gratefully acknowledged.

CMT Canada -- continues to support our music, and they continue to play a supportive role in the multitude of activities that will come together in September during Country Music Week. As one of our major sponsors, CMT plays a significant part in our ongoing work, and we thank them for their support.

On behalf of everyone at CCMA, I must pay special thanks to the major record companies, whose contributions to the promotion of Country Music Week, and their support of the artists on the awards show, is simply immeasurable. I know that their energy plays a part in selling the records they market, but they give constantly and selflessly on behalf of country music as a whole.

Finally, at this point, I would like to acknowledge all the media people who support Canadian country music. The role of broadcasters, newspaper and magazine writers and television people is vital in keeping country music connected to its audience, rolling.

Country music -- perhaps more than any other kind of popular music -- connects directly with its listeners on an emotional as well as intellectual level. We are proud of our involvement with this music and we thank you for your involvement."

Calgary's Country 105 nominated for CMA

CKRY-FM Country 105 in Calgary is a finalist in two categories for this year's Country Music Association (CMA) Awards: medium market station of the year, and the morning show (The Odd Squad).

The station's program director Phil Kallsen says "The nominations look great on Canada, Calgary and Country 105. What a huge honour."

Says Robyn Adair, co-host of The Odd Squad "In an already exciting year for this format, this is a personal highlight for me."

CKRY is the only Canadian radio station nominated for awards at this year's CMA Awards.

Vince Roy releases Mr. Fixit single

Barrie, Ontario singer/songwriter Vince Roy is currently promoting the release of Mr. Fixit, which is included on a three-song CD that is now at country radio. Roy wrote the song with west coast writer John Peacox. Also included on the EP is Settle For A Dance, which he and Peacox wrote with Kenny Hess, who produced the EP, and What's Wrong With You, a song that was written by Hess, Randy Bachman and Ron Irving. All three tracks are three-parts Cancon (MAL). The tracks were recorded in Nashville.

Born in Quebec and raised in Ontario, Roy has lived as far west as Vancouver where he became an important member of that city's music community. He is currently in Nashville putting the final touches on his debut album.

Loggerhead artist releases second albumDenise Murray: Over the moon with Under The Moon

by Ron Rogers

The lead single, Boom, was out last fall, but New Brunswick native Denise Murray has had to wait until now for the release of her second album, Under The Moon. The thinking is that good things take time, and Murray believes that the extra time taken to complete the album will be worth it.

"We got delayed a few times, you know how schedules work and everyone has different schedules to keep. I was hoping the record would have been out earlier this year, we were hoping for April or May, and now it's August. But I'm excited that it's finally gonna happen."

Murray is, in some ways, the epitome of country music. Married when she was still quite young, Murray already had two children by the time she was 21.

Like her fellow New Brunswick native, Julian Austin, Murray was raised on a cornucopia of music, including rock and roll. The east coast is known for its celtic music, of course, which certainly was a part of her musical environment. But there were numerous other musical genres that filled the Murray household.

"When I was growing up, my mother had a radio on all the time, and it was mostly country music. I had the Acadian roots and French music, but then I also had an older brother and sister who listened to rock. But the way music is today, some of that rock and roll stuff they were listening to then could be country now – look at Julian (Austin) doing Take The Money And Run. Look at The Eagles – if they came out today, they wouldn't be considered what they were back then, they'd be considered country. And I really think that everything goes in cycles, and country music will come back again."

When Canadians west of the maritimes think of the east coast, they tend to think only of celtic music, the music made famous by the likes of the Rankins et al. Fact is, the east coast is home to a wide variety of music, everything from rock, to blues, to country, to celtic.

Murray says she can't understand why Canadians outside the maritimes think of it strictly as a haven for celtic music. But she says that country music has been thriving in the region for years.

"I think country has always been alive and kicking out here. I don't know if that goes back to house parties and gatherings, and people bringing out the fiddles and guitars, starting off basically acoustically. I don't know what it is, but I see as being alive and kicking for many years."

Like most country performers, Murray picked up a guitar at an early age, and was a constant source of musical entertainment for her family. Although her specific goals were still unclear, it seemed certain that she would be headed towards some sort of career in the field of music.

But as is often the case, life has a strange way of throwing large roadblocks into one's path. For Murray, that roadblock came in the form of something called Gillian-Barre Syndrome, a rare neurological disorder that almost ended her life.

The initial onset of the disease came almost innocently, but it wasn't long before Murray was laying in a hospital bed, unable to walk, and not knowing if she might ever walk again.

"It'd started off as muscle spasms one week. And then I woke up one morning, and I had a hard time getting out of bed. Within those 24 hours I was paralyzed – started from my toes, worked it's way up, and I was paralyzed from the waist down in the first 24 hours. The doctors explained to my parents that the casing around my nerves had cracked and enflamed, which led to the paralysis. It took me well over a year to learn how to walk again. I had therapy every day, I had shock treatments on my legs."

Part of that therapy involved music, not surprisingly. When her doctors learned that Murray liked to play the guitar, they encouraged the playing of the instrument as part of her therapy. Playing the guitar enabled her to work through the ravages of the syndrome. Eventually, she had something of a triumphant return, singing and playing guitar at her high school graduation.

Most artists tend to be infused with some sort of inspiration, and in Murray's case, her recovery from Gillian-Barre Syndrome provided her with the inspiration to move on with her musical career.

"I guess after that whole thing, that's when I said to myself, 'Life really is what you make of it', because I could be gone today, having never had the chance. Nobody said this career would be easy, but I had to take a chance, and see where it could go."

As is often the case with burgeoning young artists, Murray had to pay her dues, and then some, in order to bring her musical ambitions to fruition. Her day jobs included working in a fish packing

Warner Music releases Ultimate Classic Country

Alan Fletcher and his Warner Music Strategic Projects dug into the vaults to come up with a 2 CD 32-track compilation of country and pop cross-over hits that has already caused a stir at retail.

Appropriately titled The Ultimate Classic Country Collection, the package is released on Warner's best selling double supersaver series. The CD carries a suggested list of $28.58 and is now in stores where retailers were quick to give it front-rack prominence.

Among the legendary artists included on the release are Hank Snow (I'm Movin' On), Patsy Cline (I Fall To Pieces), Charlie Rich (Behind Closed Doors), Crystal Gayle (Don't It Make My Brown Eyes Blue), Willie Nelson (On The Road Again), a duet of Dwight Yoakam and Buck Owens (Streets Of Bakersfield), Freddy Fender (Before The Next Teardrop Falls), Dolly Parton (I Will Always Love You), Conway Twitty (Hello Darlin'), Marty Robbins (El Paso), Glen Campbell (Rhinstone Cowboy), Randy Travis (Forever And Ever, Amen), Kenny Rogers (The Gambler), Johnny Cash (I Walk The Line), and more.

plant, and as a waitress, and still, Murray continued to write songs, perform in local clubs, and hone her musical skills.

Part of that musical education was a weekly gig at a local hotel, a gig that wound up lasting for more than eight years. While some artists may cringe at the thought of playing the same tunes in the same venue night after night, Murray says it was the best musical education she could have had, and allowed her to meet plenty of interesting visitors.

"People would ask, 'Isn't that boring just always playing in the same place?', and I'd say no, I didn't mind it at all. I had the opportunity of meeting people from all over the world. There were times when we'd go out and tour, and the hotel was more than willing to work with us in that regard. But it's great to have a steady gig like that. Times can be difficult for musicians in all genres, so I was lucky to have that."

In 1993, Murray decided to find out how she stacked up with other musical artists, entering a national country music talent show. Although she finished in third place, behind future Canadian country star Paul Brandt, the third place award provided further inspiration for her to seek out her musical goals.

Two years later, Murray entered another national talent showcase, this one sponsored by the Maritime Broadcasters, and somewhat surprising herself, she won first prize. First prize turned out to be 100 hours of studio time and $10,000 worth of equipment. Using those resources, along with the support of SOCAN and FACTOR, Murray put together her first full-length independent CD.

"I pitched it to Keith Brown, who's now my manager, and who worked out a distribution deal

Damned Old Rodeo focusing for Steele

Montgomery Steele continues to pick up important spins for his release of Damned Old Rodeo, particularly south of the border. He made contact last week with Scott Davis, music director at KOFI in Kalispell, Montana, a 100,000 watter. Davis was on the air at the time of the call, but spent several minutes interviewing Steele, informing him that his single, which was released nine months ago, is in medium rotation at the station.

Steele, who lives in Dawson Creek, BC and who turned 42 on June 12, took the stage at the Pouce Coupé Wee-B-Jammin Music Festival on June 17 where he performed Damned Old Rodeo, The Rancher and Red Wine Kisses. Bands such as the Verna Charlton Band came all the way from Calgary to attend the northern BC event which is hosted by Bernie Steward who wrote Damned Old Rodeo.

Sean Hogan's road trip promotes Angeline single Angeline, Sean Hogan's latest single, has made rapid gains at country radio since its release eight weeks ago and bullets up to #23 this week on the RPM Country 100.

Hogan has just returned from three weeks on the road which included a performance at the Merritt Mountain Music Festival. He also played the Calgary Stampede's Nashville North, the Dauphin CountryFest and the Carleton Jamboree plus one niters in Winnipeg, Regina and Saskatoon. Coming up is a date at the Big Valley Jamboree in Camrose, Alberta.

Angeline, a Hogan original, is included on Hijacked his Barnstorm latest album which he produced with Rick Hutt, this year's winner of a Big Country award as producer of the year.

Blockbuster joins Enron to launch video on demand

Blockbuster, the world's leading home video outlet, and Enron, an energy and communications company with a coast-to-coast fibre-optic network, have joined forces to begin planning for the launch of digitized feature films on demand over phone lines by early next year.

Telus, one of Canada's largest telecommunications companies, will initiate the service in Canada, beginning with trials in BC in early 2001, followed by national commercial deployment in the summer. Service providers in the US will include Verizon, Qwest, SBC Communications and Covad Communications.

Consumers will be able to pick and choose VHS quality videos through their phone lines, complete with VCR-type controls such as pause, rewind and stop. However, Blockbuster and Enron are not the only company planning such a venture. Several US and Canadian cable companies are exploring the area of digital on-demand video, which could be the next multi-billion dollar medium in home entertainment.

The process will see digital films stored on massive Enron computers sent to televisions with advanced set-top boxes, which would be connected to high-speed telephone connections called digital subscriber lines (DSL). According to Blockbuster chairman and CEO John Antioco, "It's the ultimate 'bricks, clicks and flicks' strategy."

According to an article in the Financial Post, about 755,000 homes in the US, and 128,000 in Canada, are already equipped with DSL internet connections.

Some analysts have noted, however, that cable companies may be better suited to deliver digital videos on demand, due to the considerable size of the digital video files. Consumers would require download speeds of at least six megabytes a second to watch streamlined videos. Most of today's DSL services don't exceed 1.5 megabytes.

However, Telus noted that their new compression technology, combined with video servers close to the consumer, would result in download speeds as low as one to 1.5 megabytes.
