DISPLAY AND BUSINESS CARD ADS - DETAILS AND RATES

The deadline is the first of the month for display and business card ad artwork, payment and repeat requests.

Advertising is accepted only for early items related to radio, communication, etc. All items must be described fairly; reproductions, reprints and non-original items must be so identified. Advertisers agree to respond promptly to inquiries and orders, and to resolve problems promptly if the buyer is not satisfied.

All advertising must be prepaid; see "Payment" paragraph above. Late ads will be run only if space and time permit. Since artwork is reduced to 63% in the printing process, originals must be the artwork size listed below. Do not send in artwork on art board or send negatives. Ads should be typeset or typed neatly with a carbon ribbon, black printing on white. No reverse type if A.R.C. is to make up the ad. If you want us to prepare your ad, include the one-time cost below for A.R.C. to make up the ad.

Photos should be at an 85 line screen; otherwise, add $8.00 per photo for screening. (Do not cut or trim photos or glue photos to artwork; submit separately.)

If you are confused by these requirements and terms,

ANTIQUE RADIO CLASSIFIED

EDITOR'S COMMENTS

This month, our feature article goes back over ninety years, almost to the beginnings of radio and to the early days of wireless in the U.S. Navy. Will Jensby discusses the Navy's efforts between 1899 and 1914 — only a few years after Marconi secured the first wireless patent — to select radio equipment for communication to shore and between ships. The best in state-of-the-art equipment was essential, and the Navy tried several systems before the Wireless Specialty Company became a major supplier.

Will has illustrated his article, including our cover this month, with both recent and early photos of equipment. Part II of this article will appear in a future issue and will cover the SE-143 group of receivers.

Moving forward about twenty years brings us to the 1920s and the do-it-yourself approach to building superhets. Superheterodyne receivers were the best performing receivers then (the superheterodyne is the type of receiver still used in all radios today), but because manufacturers' sets were so expensive, many construction articles and kits became available. Chris Cuff has four such sets in his collection, and this month shows us the Popular Mechanics Superheterodyne Eight.

Moving forward in time another thirty years, Eric Marx shows us how to repair the veneer on the gloss-finished German radios of the 1950s. This article follows our August feature on collecting these attractive and good sounding sets.

More tips for repairing radios come from Ray Bintliff who shows us how to build tube-socket test adapters. These simple devices allow voltage measurement from the top of the chassis while the set is operating with the tubes installed.

Hundreds of collectors attended the four-day Antique Radio Club of Illinois Radiofest '91. This issue's photos of the flea market and contest displays, as well as the listing of auction results, give a hint of the scope of this outstanding meet. The auction drew total bids of over $25,000 with a mirrored radio, a breadboard, a Midwest console, and an unusual RCA sign bringing highest bids.

We also have a report on the first meet held by the Western Wisconsin Antique Radio Club: Nostalgia Radio '91. This two-day meet featured a flea market, an old equipment contest, and seminars.

This month, the Photo Review, in addition to its usual variety of sets, shows a radio with very unusual tuning. The tuning capacitance is formed between the panel and the tuning dial plate itself. As the dial is turned, it moves away from and toward the panel, varying the capacitance and thus changing the tuning frequency.

Hurricane Bob. One story here at A.R.C. this month is left over from last month: Hurricane Bob. Although, the hurricane arrived after we had completed the pages for the September issue, our production manager had to brave the roads, just hours before Bob hit, to check the proofs at the printer 50 miles away. When Bob did hit, it left us without power for two and a half days — the days when mailing labels were to be printed for the September issue. Fortunately, one of our staff had power at her house, so our computer system was moved and a temporary office set up in her basement. The result: the issue was mailed on time, thanks to efforts by the entire A.R.C. staff.

New Books. Crystal Clear is here; the revised edition of Communications Receivers is due by October first; however, the third volume of Radio Manufacturers of the Twenties is still a month or two away.

Crystal Clear — After looking at a copy of this book, I am impressed with the quality of the hundreds of photos. Both the recent photos and the reproductions of old ones are outstanding. As our reviewer said last month, "... this book is one that every collector of radios will want to have."

Communications Receivers — Ray Moore sent me a photocopy of the second edition of his book — over 200 more sets are pictured than in his first edition. Sixty-three receivers are shown for the National Company, for example, compared to fourteen in the first edition. Ray's book is a must for the communications receiver collector.

Club Events. Gatherings of collectors continue with 22 meets planned for October. (No, the meet season does not end with the annual Antique Wireless Association Rochester N. Y. Convention.) The next big meet is the Vintage Radio and Phonograph Society Convention in the Dallas/Fort Worth, Texas, area on November 8, 9 and 10. This traditionally popular and very successful meet begins with programs, auction, and contest, and ends with a half-day flea market. There is a chance that A.R.C. will make it to this one, so watch for us.

All for now.... Happy collecting.

John V. Terrey

ON THE COVER

Our cover this month shows the wireless room on the U.S.S. Nero in November 1916. Seen on the operator's table is a 1911 version of the I-P-76 receiver. In front of the receiver is a set of headphones with the crystal detector immediately behind. To the right, in front of the books, is the operator's telegraph key, and to the far right, a pneumatic tube system.

Two fans are evident, one to keep the operator cool, and the other, to the left facing upward on the transmitter panel, to cool the quenched spark gap.

Will Jensby begins a two-part series this month on early Navy wireless equipment.

VINTAGE MILITARY EQUIPMENT

The History of Navy Radio Equipment — Part I

BY WILL JENSBY

This is the first of a two-part series on early Navy radio equipment. Will Jensby presents us with a wealth of authenticated material on this subject and promises to continue his research on early military sets for future articles. (Editor)

THE EARLY YEARS

As early as 1899, the U.S. Navy was conducting tests of Marconi spark equipment, with some success. In 1902, the Navy bought two radio sets each from Slaby-Arco, Braun-Siemens-Halske, Ducretet, and Rochefort, all European companies, for comparative testing. The Navy was unable to come to satisfactory terms with Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America, who only leased sets, so it was not included in the tests. In addition, two sets were purchased from the American De Forest Company, and two receivers, designed by Harry Shoemaker, from the Consolidated Wireless Company. In 1903, two sets were also purchased from the Lodge-Muirhead Company of England.

Ship-to-shore and ship-to-ship tests conducted in 1903 on all these sets indicated ranges of reception of 25 to 60 nautical miles. Following the tests, the Navy selected the Slaby-Arco equipment and purchased 47 sets. Learning of this purchase, R. A. Fessenden of the National Electrical Signaling Company (NESCO) immediately lodged a protest, asking why his company, whose equipment he believed to be superior, wasn't considered. Fessenden wrote numerous letters to the Secretary of the Navy and others during 1903, without success. In November of 1903, Marconi also failed in its bid to sell the Navy two sets.

Installation and use of Slaby-Arco radio equipment did not go well. In addition, some captains and admirals objected to the idea of receiving orders via wireless while at sea. However, progress continued, and the Navy gained control of the entire government radio system.

The American Marconi Company and NESCO continued to lobby for purchase of their sets, and in late 1904, three sets were purchased from NESCO. In December 1904, the American De Forest Radio Company won a contract to build three land stations with 35 KW transmitters — one in Florida, one in Cuba, and one in Puerto Rico. The Puerto Rico station is shown in Figure 1. All three stations were in operation by March 1906, with a range of up to 2000 miles.

In March of 1905, the Stone Telegraph and Telephone Company of Boston offered to provide the Navy with four stations for test and evaluation based on the patents of John Stone Stone. These stations were installed and evaluated by Cmdr. S. S. Robison, who recommended their use. As a result, eight Stone sets were purchased in November 1905.

In January of 1906, ten sets were purchased from the Massie Wireless Telegraph Company, as well as twenty-one sets, designed by Shoemaker, from the International Wireless Telegraph Construction Company. The Shoemaker set came to be regarded as the best of its time by Naval radio operators. Little of this equipment is known to exist today.

In 1909, Fessenden's National Electric Signaling Company received a major contract to build a land station near Washington, D. C., and supply two sets of shipboard equipment. NESCO continued to be a major supplier of radio equipment for the next several years.

In 1912, the Federal Telegraph Company persuaded the Navy to let them demonstrate their 30 KW Poulsen arcset at Arlington next to the NESCO 100 KW synchronous rotary spark gap transmitter. George Clark conducted receiving tests on board a ship sailing for Gibraltar, and, at the completion of the tests, enthusiastically endorsed the Federal arc system. Clark used the I-P-76, a Fessenden heterodyne, and a Federal Telegraph "tikker" for reception. Technical details and several examples of Federal arc transmitters still exist, but few examples are known of the receivers used for CW reception prior to World War I.

Wireless Specialty Apparatus Company became a major supplier between 1909 and 1914, providing large quantities of their I-P-76 receiver, shown in Figures 2, 3 and 4. The I-P-76 used crystal detectors for spark reception. This receiver, in both the single and double decker versions, is not to be confused with the small I-P-111, as shown in Figures 5 and 6, provided to the Navy around 1907, and also referred to as an "I-P-76." (The nomenclature "IP-76" and "IP 76" are also used in various books; "IP-76" is the more common form.)

Starting in 1912, the various companies were filing injunctions against each other, charging patent infringement. The two largest companies at this time were United Wireless and American Marconi, while the two U. S. firms with the most valid and useful patents were NESCO and Wireless Specialty. American Marconi won a lawsuit against United Wireless and took it over in March of 1912, making American Marconi the largest radio company in the United States.

However, because of the patent controversy, the Navy had no one company that could provide a complete operating system. For example, Federal had the Poulsen patents and provided the majority of the arc transmitters for the Navy, but harmonic problems existed because Marconi had the patent on selective tuning. In addition, Fessenden controlled the heterodyne patents for receiving, forcing Federal to use the less sensitive Poulsen "tikker" detector.

By 1912, the Chief of the Bureau of Steam Engineering was responsible for technical direction related to the research and development of all Navy radio equipment. This responsibility was delegated to the head of the Radio Division, who assigned different tasks to the various Navy yards. The Washington, D. C., Navy Yard (WNY) was given the responsibility for receivers, detectors, amplifiers, frequency meters, and transformers. Some of the work done at WNY, particularly the SE-143 receiver group, will be discussed in Part II of this series.

The Superhets of the 20s — Part I The Popular Mechanics' Superheterodyne Eight

BY CHRIS CUFF

Chris Cuff shares with us his enthusiasm for the superheterodyne kit sets of the 20s. This month A.R.C. features one of the sets from Chris' collection — the Popular Mechanics' Superheterodyne Eight. (Editor)

The introduction of the superheterodyne circuit in the early twenties was heralded as possibly the most important development in radio to date. The superheterodyne had unequalled sensitivity and selectivity as well as clean undistorted sound. There was one drawback, however — the only way to own one of these marvelous sets was to build your own or to buy an RCA. RCA controlled all of the superheterodyne patent rights, and did not release these rights to other manufacturers until several years later when the company had firmly established itself in the superheterodyne market.

“The receiver can be built at a fraction of the cost of similar manufactured instruments, and has many refinements not yet included in the Superheterodyne receivers on the market...”

Fortunately, there were several companies that did provide the plans and parts needed for the radio enthusiast to build his own set. How many of these kit sets survive today is unknown. However, my own collection currently consists of five sets — a Camfield Super Nine, a Samson

Superkit, a Popular Mechanics' Superheterodyne Eight, a Radio Receptor Super Eight, and a small homemade six-tube headphone set.

THE POPULAR MECHANICS' SUPERHETERODYNE EIGHT

In this issue, the Popular Mechanics' Superheterodyne Eight is featured. The radio, shown in Figure 1, is a complete factory kit, composed of Remler components. The design of this set is excellent, featuring complete copper shielding throughout. The loop antenna, shown in Figure 2, plugs into the top of the cabinet; a red pilot lamp warns that the set is turned on; and two separate voltmeters monitor the filament, as well as the B+ voltages.

The set includes an oscillator, a first detector, three stages of IF amplification, a second detector, and two stages of audio amplification. It is interesting to compare the Radio News illustrations in Figures 2 and 4 to the actual photos of the constructed Superheterodyne Eight in Figures 1 and 3.

In 1926, the Radio News Superheterodyne Book contained an article entitled "How To Build the Popular Mechanics' Superheterodyne Eight." Six detail-packed pages give instructions and illustrations for every step of construction. The article tells how to obtain all parts, even the smallest items, such as screws, wires, lugs, etc. It also describes the layout, drilling and engraving of the front panel. A list of parts and materials with prices is included, as shown in Figure 5. In this eight-tube set, the first detector tube is Type C-300 or UV-200, while all the other tubes are Type UV-201A or C301A.

Radio News had this to say about this Popular

Mechanics' home brew: "The Superheterodyne receiver described herewith by F. L. Brittain in Popular Mechanics Magazine embodies all the most advanced ideas pertaining to this circuit. Nothing has been overlooked that would add to the efficiency of the instrument. Every piece of apparatus used in its construction has been carefully selected and thoroughly tested by the author, and the completed instrument seemingly leaves little to be desired in selectivity, range and clarity of tone. All body-capacity effects have been eliminated by simple shielding, and the instrument is easily tuned, even by a novice, after a few minutes of instruction. The receiver can be built at a fraction of the cost of similar manufactured instruments, and has many refinements not yet included in the superheterodyne receivers on the market.

"Any radio fan can build this instrument, with a few simple tools, if the directions are closely followed. All parts are standard, and easily obtained from any dealer in radio supplies."

OPERATION OF THE SET

The article concludes with the following eight-step procedure for picking up a broadcasting station:

1. Set the potentiometer about one-quarter of the way up from the lower-left side.

2. Turn up the four rheostats gradually, keeping all four pointers at approximately the same position, and continue until you can hear a soft hum from the tubes.

3. Set the wave-length condenser at any point, say 30°.

4. Rotate the dial of the oscillator condenser 10 to 15° on each side of this mark, moving it slowly and listening for a sound.

5. If a click or whistle, indicating the presence of waves from a station, is heard, but no words or music can be brought in, turn up the third rheostat from the right-hand end, marked oscillator and intermediate-frequency, and also turn up the first rheostat at the extreme right-hand end of the panel, marked audio.

6. When the point is found at which the broadcast comes in the strongest, it may be that the volume is still insufficient. Then turn up the left-hand rheostat, marked first detector, until the volume is sufficient. If a whistle is heard, turn up the audio rheostat until the whistle is gone.

7. If nothing is picked up at the first setting of the condensers move the wavelength condenser up to 10°, and again rotate the dial of the oscillator condenser from 10 to 15° on either side of the corresponding mark. Continue this process over the entire range of the dial.

8. If nothing is heard when the two dials have been moved over the whole range, it may be that the oscillator tube is not oscillating. Turning up the two rheostats as described in No. 5 should remedy the trouble. Another way of determining whether the oscillator tube is oscillating is to touch its grid terminal with the finger. If it is oscillating, a click will be heard when the terminal is touched and again when the finger is removed.

The articles goes on to say, "If the instrument has been built according to the construction details outlined in this article one will not have long to wait for a station."

PHOTO REVIEW

This column presents in pictorial form many of the more unusual radios, speakers, tubes, advertising, and other old radio-related items from our readers' collections. The photos are meant to help increase awareness of what's available in the radio collecting hobby. Send in any size photos from your collection. Photos must be sharp in detail, contain a single item, and preferably have a light-colored background. A short, descriptive paragraph MUST be included with each photo. Please note that receipt of photos is not acknowledged, publishing is not guaranteed, and photos are not returned.

STEWART-WARNER MODEL 1231 - This compact twelve-inch high superheterodyne cathedral uses four tubes, Types 6A7, 6F7, 41 and 80. The diagram in Rider's Volume 5 was dated 1934. (George Hausske - Wheaton, IL)

SONY MODEL TR74 TRANSISTOR RADIO - This AM/SW set comes complete with a warning on an inside label which reads "caution on polarity of batteries or will give a damage to transistors." The Japanese/English translation may be wanting, but it still gets the message across! (John Neuman - San Marcos, CA)

RADIO-CRAFT RECEIVER -

This is a 1920-21 shortwave regenerative receiving set, 125 to 550 meters, with a quartered oak cabinet. It is a well-built set inside and has a Bakelite panel and an engraved nameplate. (George Potter - Lewisville, TX)

ONE-TUBE RECEIVER - This set, manufacturer unknown, has no visible tuning condenser! I had never seen a tuning arrangement like this and must admit it had me stumped for a bit. I was sure there had to be a condenser for tuning. The secret? When turned, the large, white round dial, on a threaded shaft, moves in and out from the face of the radio, thus acting as a variable condenser which changes the frequency. (David McKenzie - Eustis, FL)

---

ARKAY ART DECO RADIO - This early 1930s radio, made by R. K. Laboratories, Inc., of Chicago, is finished in light wood with black lacquer accents and chrome trim. R. K.'s first radio was the Radio Keg from which the initials "R. K." in the firm name were derived. The name Arkay is a derivative of those initials. (Doug Heimstead - Fridley, MN)

---

MONTGOMERY-WARD AIRLINE MODEL 62-403-B - This 1939 console has thirteen tubes and uses four Type 6F6 G tubes in push-pull for audio output. The movie dial screen projects the frequency (broadcast band to 22 Mc) on a lighted viewing screen. (John Wieczorek - So. Bend, IN)

---

SPARTON MODEL 1486 - Note the stunning cabinet of this 1936 model made with ribbon mahogany and trimmed with brass strips. The speaker grille is accented with horizontal rows of brass tubing. The radio dial and knobs are behind two doors. A fourteen-tube radio on two chassis, it has one twelve-inch speaker and two three-inch tweeters. (Doug Heimstead - Fridley, MN)

PHOTO REVIEW

ZENITH MODEL LH, ZENNETTE - This 1931 superheterodyne cathedral is the pride and joy of my radio collection, and, in my opinion, the prettiest table radio I've ever seen. Judging from a recent A.R.C. cover photo, this is a "gussied up" copy of the Deluxe model of the Philco Baby Grand. Also in my opinion, when this set is used with 200 feet of copper wire for an antenna, it outperforms modern radios. (H. Elgersma - Lincoln, CA)

LEARAVIAN RM 402 B BEACON, BROADCAST & AIRLINE RECEIVER - This portable broadcast-aero band receiver has a nameplate on the front reading "The Pilots Preference." Made by Lear Avia Inc., Piqua, Ohio, this set covers the old air band of 200-400Kc, the standard broadcast band, and a 2-6Mc shortwave band. In the average home you could not fully extend the over ten-foot telescopic whip antenna. The hideous case, white with black painted spots, is original! (Allan H. Weiner - Yonkers, NY)

ZENITH MODEL 6D525 - This six-tube set dates back to 1941. The cabinet is of 3/4-inch solid walnut with machined grooves and slits on the top and sides. It has a fancy handle of brass and plastic on top. (Walter Worth - Wollaston, MA)

ZENITH MODEL 5-S-319 - The cabinet of this unusual Zenith has its original finish, and the speaker grille cloth and knobs are also original. The mechanical components of this 1939 model are in mint condition, and the set plays exceptionally well. Note the oval dial, which departs from the Zenith black, round dial of that era. ## Restoring A German Radio Cabinet

BY ERIC MARX

Eric Marx presents a step-by-step process for revenering a German-built radio cabinet. The accompanying pictures help us to appreciate the extent of Eric's craftsmanship. (Editor)

When the 1950 Blaupunkt MU 680 W came into my possession, I was very disappointed at how time and a couple of thousand miles had taken its toll on this beautiful German radio. The cabinet, which was covered with flat, sliced walnut veneer on the top and front, and with book-matched walnut veneer vertically centered on the sides, had most of its finish worn off. The veneer also was dented and chipped.

The only thing saving this cabinet from becoming a bird feeder was the solid substratum of the plywood. So my choices were to strip it out for parts or save it with complete revenering. I decided to save it. Figure 1 shows the radio completely restored and lacquered, with the chassis installed.

FROM START TO FINISH

First, I stripped the radio of the remaining finish. I left the old veneer on as a base for a new layer of veneer. I filled the gaps with chips of veneer and the dents with wood putty to give a smooth finish. I removed all the wood border trim around the dial and speaker cloth and then sanded the whole cabinet with 100-grit sandpaper for better adhesion.

I covered the sides first, with bookmatched walnut veneer vertically centered. [Bookmatch means to match the grains of two side-by-side sheets of veneer, so that one sheet seems to be the mirrored image of the other.] The veneer pieces were cut 1/4" larger than the sides all the way around. For gluing, I used Titebond carpenter glue spread thinly with a single-edged razor blade held at a 45 degree angle. (However, I now use hide glue or glue sheets because, if the veneer comes loose, the glue can be reheated with an iron so that it readheres.)

To set the glue, I used an ordinary electric iron, setting the temperature at "cotton" or "medium high." I centered the veneer and laid it in place. This process allowed the glue to set up faster and no clamps were necessary. After the glue had dried, I cut the edges and sanded them flush with the body of the cabinet.

Next, I covered the top and front with one piece of flat, sliced walnut veneer with the grain running horizontally, as shown in Figure 2. This made the veneer bend easily around the curves. The gluing and ironing process was the same as for the sides.

The original wood border around the dial glass and speaker cloth was made of three-ply plywood about 1/16" thick. I made the new plywood dial glass border from three 3" x 15" pieces of 1/64" thick white maple veneer with a paper backing. I glued only the center 7", which allowed the ends to fan around the curves. These pieces, forming a single piece of plywood which became the new border, were clamped and allowed to dry.

After drying, the clamps were removed. I centered the piece and glued only the closest layer to the cabinet. I used a jig to hold the piece in place until the glue dried, as shown in Figure 3. This allowed the two outside layers to fan around the curves more easily and prevented the veneer from buckling.

When the clamps and jig were removed, I injected glue between the veneer layers on each end. These were clamped until dry; see Figure 4. I used masking tape to protect the cabinet veneer while the new border was being trimmed and sanded. The borders on both sides of the speaker cloth were made in a similar fashion and secured with clamps, as shown in Figures 5 and 6.

A few internal support brackets had to be made. A support held the front of the dial glass and backed the top grille pillar. In addition, I made the top support for the back cardboard cover on an end mill. As Figure 1 shows, the completely restored radio looks almost like new.

In future articles, I will write on how to achieve the German high-gloss look with the fade on the front and back, and how to releather a portable.

Eric Marx began serious collecting in 1982, although his interest goes back to his teenage years when he found a Belmont 554 in his grandfather's basement. In 1987, he found a Lowe-Opta Meteor at the Salvation Army and became hooked on German radios.

At last count his collection includes over 200 German radios, mostly prewar and portables. He is a member of the Funk Geschichte, a German radio club.

Tube Socket Test Adapters

BY RAY BINTLIFF, K1YDG

Ray Bintliff shares with our readers a practical solution to providing convenient access to tube socket test points. Close-up photographs of his homemade test adapters will help the reader who wishes to make his own. I have seen Ray use these at his workbench, and they do come in handy! (Editor)

Have you ever wanted to make voltage measurements without the bother of removing the radio chassis from its cabinet? Or, having removed the chassis, have you found internal measurement points too difficult to reach?

This article describes test adapters that provide convenient access to tube socket test points and allow voltage measurements to be made with tubes in place. As a result, those measurements will reflect actual operating conditions. Such is not the case when a tube is removed from its socket to make voltage measurements; therefore, the results can sometimes be misleading.

Figure 1 shows three of the test adapters for use with four-, five-, and six-pin vacuum tubes. These adapters plug into the tube socket to be tested and the tube is inserted into the socket of the adapter. The adapters provide convenient test points for each tube pin. Electrically, the adapters consist of an interconnected tube base, tube socket and test points.

The adapters are inexpensive and easy to build. The following components for a four-pin adapter are depicted in Figure 2:

One four-pin tube socket (Amphenol 78S4)

One four-pin vacuum tube base (1 $\frac{3}{8}$ " O.D.)

Four solder lugs

Not illustrated is a 4-40 machine screw which fastens the tube socket to the tube base and keeps the solder lugs in place. Fabrication of a test adapter is not complicated, and the steps are described below.

The solder lugs are bent at a ninety degree angle, as shown in Figure 2, and a two-inch length of #24 tinned solid bus wire is soldered to each lug. Likewise, a length of bus wire is soldered to each of the four contacts of the tube socket. For convenience of assembly, a 3  $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch length of bus wire should be used for the first wire, and each succeeding wire should be about  $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch longer. The staggered wire lengths make it easier to feed the wire into the tube base.

The tube bases can be salvaged from dud tubes or purchased. Tube bases appear for sale at flea markets and in A.R.C. ads. If they are salvaged from old tubes, be careful when breaking the bulb and removing the glass remnants in the tube base. Existing solder and wires should be removed from the tube base. Caution: Do not break the bulb of mercury vapor rectifier type tubes or other gas filled tubes.

To accept the #4-40 attaching screw, both the tube socket and the tube base must have a hole drilled through the center. A 0.120-inch clearance hole (#31 drill) is required for the tube socket. For the tube base, a 0.089-inch hole (#43 drill) is

required and that hole is tapped for a 4-40 screw thread. If you do not have facilities to tap the hole, you may instead drill a 0.120-inch hole in both the tube socket and tube base and use a small 4-40 nut at the tube base.

The next step is to attach the solder lugs temporarily to the tube base by using small strips of masking tape, as shown in Figure 3. For each solder lug, insert the bus wire through its respective base pin, align the lug with its base pin and keep the lug in position with a strip of masking tape. Position the solder lugs on the inside of the tube base with the short bent portion resting on the top of the tube base and extending outward.

Now you are ready to install the tube socket. Feed the bus wire from each tube socket connection to the corresponding pin in the tube base, as shown in Figure 4. Next, attach the tube socket to the base using a 4-40 machine screw. Make sure that the solder lugs are aligned properly with their associated socket contacts. If they are misaligned, loosen the screw, correct the misalignment and retighten the screw.

As Figure 5 shows, there should now be two bus wires extending from each pin of the tube base. Before proceeding further, you should make an ohmmeter test for continuity from each tube socket contact to its associated pin on the tube base. Also, test to be sure that there are no shorts between pins. If all tests are OK, each pin of the tube base can be soldered and the extra wire lengths clipped off. Construction is now completed and the adapters are ready for use.

Although I have described specifically the construction of a four-pin adapter, the assembly of a five- or six-pin adapter follows the same pattern. Caution: Use of these adapters may expose you to high voltages. Use them with care. Always turn the power off when inserting or removing the adapters and remember that filter capacitors may still be holding a charge.

MEET & AUCTION REPORT

Antique Radio Club of Illinois Radiofest '91 — Meet and Auction Report Elgin, Illinois — August 8-10, 1991

REPORTED BY BILL ROSS

The Antique Radio Club of Illinois held its annual Radiofest at the Holiday Inn Holidome and Convention Center in Elgin, Illinois, on August 8, 9 and 10. This meet is becoming one of the largest in the U. S., second only to the Antique Wireless Association Annual Conference in Rochester, N.Y. In spite of a soggy start, a record 235 sellers' permits were issued to an enthusiastic group of collectors and dealers whose spirits were not dampened by the sometimes fickle Elgin weather.

Perhaps the most memorable sight at the flea market was the large number of colorful Catalin radios — table after table, totaling 100 or more. Another highlight was the Thursday night auction where each fall of the hammer averaged over $100. The proceeds of over $25,000 about doubled the auction held last year, and the quality of the items sold can only be described as "very desirable."

The quality of the contest entries also was very high. Most noteworthy were Mike Yurkovich's unusually elaborate Philco Safari store display, Martin Bergen's display of every model and color of the Motorola Catalins, and Nate Alexander's AK breadboard model on a Bakelite base.

Scott Hagerman put together an outstanding display of unusual and rare radios. Most noteworthy was Joe Schroeder's Hallicrafters S-1, circa 1933 — the company's first model, a regenerative TRF receiver, which came in a wooden case. Only one other example is known to exist. Also included were a Climax Ruby Supreme in teardrop shape, a beautiful Grigsby-Grunow-Hinds celluloid horn speaker, and a Canadian Emor satellite-shaped radio on a chrome-plated floor stand.

Working with Lee de Forest in the early days was the subject of Ed Dervishian's interesting presentation, while Jeff Aulik gave an excellent in-depth report on Atwater Kent in the final years. Matt May set some kind of record when his 10 AM panel on electronic restoration and home brewing (radio, that is) finally broke up at 2 PM, only because the room was needed for another event.

Nearly 100 attended the banquet and enjoyed an outstanding buffet, as well as Steve Hofer's wonderful presentation and display on Philo Farnsworth. Farnsworth was honored on a recent U.S. postage stamp for inventing the first electronic television camera.

All through Radiofest '91, the free hospitality suite was a popular meeting place where over 5,000 cans of soft drinks and 750, now traditional, Radiofest cookies were consumed. For Radiofest '92 we are likely to need more of both, as we expect record attendance at the recently expanded Muchow Historical Museum and the soon-to-be-opened, multi-million dollar Motorola Museum. Watch A.R.C. for next year's dates!

Western Wisc. Antique Radio Collectors Club Nostalgic Radio '91 Onalaska, Wisconsin — August 3rd and 4th

CONTRIBUTED BY DAVID WIGGERT AND JIM FARAGO

The first WWARC Nostalgic Radio '91 meet was held in the cool comfort of the Onalaska Community Center on August 3 and 4. The indoor show, protected from the soggy weather, was a big success with people attending from as far away as California.

Among the many fine collectible pieces available for swapping and showing were an Edison console, an L. Tatro console, a Freshman Masterpiece, a Gold Medal, many homebrews, a wide assortment of novelty and regular transistor radios, and even a Philco Predicta TV set. The meet also proved to be a great place to pick up that tube you've been looking for, as well as anything from resistors and knobs to vibrators.

The Old Equipment Contest entries featured a very nice Thompson 3-dialer, a Radiola III complete with UZ-1325 horn speaker, a Fada Neutrodyne and many other fine sets. Top honors went to a Grebe MU-1.

The count of swap items as of Saturday morning was about 260 to 300 sets. In addition, on Sunday, Delmore Zirzow did a demonstration of proper alignment of a radio receiver.

Jim Farago writes that the WWARC meet was a place to "enjoy the small-town friendliness, slow down a little, and take your time... Though I did not sell a lot of items, the tubes I bought there, along with an old jukebox amplifier, made the trip worthwhile." Jim also gave a demonstration at the meet of how an automotive FM converter could be powered by a plug-type, 12-volt DC power supply to get many FM stations on virtually any AM radio.

Nostalgic Radio '92 is already on the planning table.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING POLICY

ONE FREE 20-WORD AD for subscribers in each issue; additional words are 15¢ each. See details below. Classified ads must be received (not just postmarked!) by NOON on the ad deadline. Late ads are held for the following issue. Please enclose correct payment with all ads. Stamps or cash are OK for small amounts. (Canadian and other foreign advertisers, please see "Payment" on page two for methods.) "Free words" cannot be accumulated from month to month; free words must be requested when ad is submitted.

Please write each ad on a separate sheet of paper, especially when included with other A.R.C. correspondence. Include SUB# with ad. Ads may be sent in advance; but, write each ad on a separate piece of paper and indicate the month (or successive two months) you want the ad to run.

Please write legibly and use both capital and small letters. Do not use dashes between words. Some numbers and letters can look alike, for example 1, l and I (the number one, the capital l and the small L.) Write the following characters clearly (especially in model numbers): 1, l and I; 0, O, o, Q and D; r and n; 6, b and G; V, U, u, v and Y; A and R; 5, S and s; 2, Z and z. We try to correct spelling errors, so when using an uncommon word or manufacturer which looks similar to a common word or manufacturer, note it so that we do not "correct" it. Editor's comments are in [brackets].

Advertising is accepted only for early items related to radio, communication, etc. All items must be described fairly; reproductions, reprints and not-original items must be identified as such. Advertisers agree to respond promptly to inquiries and orders, and to resolve problems promptly if the buyer is not satisfied.

Publisher reserves the right to edit ads without notification to the advertiser and to reject ads for any reason. Publisher is not responsible for errors due to illegibly written ads or for any other reason. Since club activities receive free advertising on the Coming Radio Events page, the free 20 words may not be used for club activity ads. See inside front cover for additional information.

CLASSIFIED AD DETAILS

Deadline: NOON – 10th of the month!

Classified ads must have a standard heading such as WANTED, FOR SALE, FOR TRADE, FOR SALE/TRADE, SERVICES, MESSAGE, HELP, AUCTION, MEET, etc. This heading is the only bold or all-capitalized words allowed in the ad. Capitalize only manufacturer names, model names, etc. Wanted and For Sale ads are mixed together to encourage the reading of all ads, including the Wanted ads. This standard ad format makes scanning the ads easier.

Before writing your ad, please look over the ads in a recent issue of A.R.C., and try to write your ad in the same style. Full name and address is required in all classified ads; we will add it if you forget.

To encourage varied content of the ads, the same classified ad may be run only once per issue and for only two consecutive months. (To run an ad longer, use a boxed classified or display ad.)

Classified Ad Rates per Month

Subscribers:

First 20 words: FREE***

15¢ per word for extra words over 20 plus

* Subscribers may take 20 free words on only one ad each month.

Non-Subscribers:

10¢ per word for shaded ad.

Please do not forget to send in the extra 15¢ per word when your classified ad runs over the free 20 words; your payment will be appreciated, and it will help to keep A.R.C. healthy.

BOXED CLASSIFIED AD DETAILS

Deadline: 5th of the month!

Boxed classified ads can run unchanged for three months or more. No words are free. Ads may be shaded and may include bold and all-capitalized words freely. The ad need not begin with For Sale, etc. Minimum run is 3 months, prepaid.

Boxed Classified Ad Rates per Month

Nonshaded ads:

25¢ per word for all words,* none free, plus

10¢ per word for each bold word plus

10¢ per word for each all-caps word.

Shaded Ads (All words are bold at no charge):

10¢ per word for each all-caps word.

Non-Subscribers:

Add 20¢ per word to above costs.

*Three words can be bold-all-caps at no extra charge.

PHOTO & DRAWING DETAILS

Deadline: 5th of the month for classified and boxed classified ads with drawings or photos!

Drawings and photos are encouraged as the response to your ad is much larger and the reader knows better what you want or are selling. Send in your drawing or photograph, and A.R.C. will reduce it or enlarge it as needed.

Photo and Drawing Rates per Month

$8.00 per month for each photo or drawing (If ad is canceled, this amount cannot always be refunded.)

CHANGES & CANCELATIONS

Please check your ads carefully before sending them in. Once ads are received, it is not always possible to refund the amount sent, pull the ad or make changes.

IMPORTANT — COUNTING WORDS — IMPORTANT

The standard headings: WANTED, FOR SALE, etc., count as one word each time used in an ad. Name, address and (one) telephone number, count as 6 words, regardless of length. Ham call letters and business name can be included in the 6 words and do not count extra. Full name and address is required in all classified ads – it does not cost extra! Each additional word, abbreviation, model number or number group, extra telephone numbers, etc. count as one word. Hyphenated words count as two words.
