EDITOR'S COMMENTS

What better way to start the New Year than to look forward to a new book! Especially when our lead article introduces a book about Trans-Oceanic radios — certainly a popular set with today's collectors. The Zenith Trans-Oceanic: The Royalty of Radios by John H. Bryant and Harold N. Cones will be available by March 1995. Meanwhile, in this issue, Bryant and Cones give us a preview of over two years of Zenith research. Collectors will at last have a reference for these nostalgic and still reasonably priced sets.

Our Collecting Foreign Sets series continues with Ian Sanders' article on the British Thomson-Houston Radiola I valve-crystal receiver. This unusual 1923 radio is similar to the B.T.H. Type C, Form A crystal set described in the April 1993 issue of A.R.C. However, this set also contains a vacuum tube in a reflex circuit where the valve acts as both an RF and AF amplifier.

Stephen Imms has furnished an article describing his experience restoring an RCA Radiola Regenoflex receiver. He also describes a recovery procedure for those of you who may have inadvertently burned out a full set of expensive WD-11 tubes.

The Gateway Gallery Auction in Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, has provided a report on the sale of Jack Hortman's collection. Ludwell Sibley and Ray Chase sent reports on the New Jersey Antique Radio Club auction in Hightstown N.J. Next month we will print reports on Eric's Auction in Olney, Illinois, and on auctions by the Nebraska and Colorado clubs.

Dave Crocker contributed a review on Marty and Sue Bunis' third edition of The Collector's Guide to Antique Radios. As the Bunises continue to expand and refine their data, their books have become the definitive guide for collectors, and all three make a valuable reference set.

Our Photo Review includes several plastic table radios this month and the rare and unusual Telmaco horn (see A.R.C., April 1992). Radio Miscellanea includes a follow-up on the question raised by Bill Harris in last month's issue about the 4th RCA chime.

New Advertising Rates. To correspond with the increase in subscription rates, an increase in advertising rates is posted this month. The increase to 22¢ for extra words in classified ads is the change affecting most of you, but if you use photos in your ads or have a boxed ad, please refer to the inside rear cover for details. For display and business card advertisers, the new rates are on the inside front cover.

We appreciate the understanding of readers and advertisers alike regarding these increases, but with everything from postage to rent going up in price, these increases are necessary to keep A.R.C. a comprehensive and quality publication.

New Media for Old Technology. A.R.C. is considering distribution by one or more of the new media: by E-Mail through the Internet and on-line services, and by computer disk, fax, and alternate delivery services.

Our mail increasingly contains requests for these options. In addition, others are beginning to offer these services, and A.R.C. readers don't want to be left behind the times. Articles in AARP's Modern Maturity, newspapers, and national news weeklies, many of which already use the new media, suggest that A.R.C., must also consider new methods of distribution.

In considering these new methods, it is important to remember that the magazine will be printed and mailed by first or second class mail as always. A subscriber can elect this service only, or choose to pay for an additional new-media service.

No service will release information before any other; that is, new-media subscribers will not have a time advantage. Our intent is to insure that they receive A.R.C. on our "target" day — the first day anyone should receive A.R.C. and the day on which the maximum number of subscribers receive their issues. As many of you know, this goal is not always achievable through any service offered by the U.S. Postal Service.

Initially, it might appear that new-media users will benefit the most from A.R.C.'s expansion into these services. However, those electing only the printed media will have access through A.R.C. to the activities of the new-media users.

We will be carefully analyzing how the costs of these services can be configured so that they can be equitably borne by those using the services. Fairness to all is our priority.

In 1990, our inquiry about interest in such services received only 22 replies (yes, we still have your deposits on file). With telephone/computer connections growing each year, I expect the response will be greater this time around. A.R.C. may offer other enhanced services also, such as ad submission, renewals, and book orders by E-Mail, and the option to search automatically through articles, auction results, indexes, etc.

Please send in your thoughts, both pro and con, to help us decide if and how A.R.C. should proceed with these new-media options.

Coming Radio Events. Thirty-three events, including a multiday "Mega Auction" in Houston, Texas, fill the radio collector's calendar in January. It is not too early to plan for the Greater Boston Antique Radio Collectors' February 26th Radio XXVI in Westford, Mass. — A.R.C.'s backyard. More than 450 people browsed through 72 tables of radios at last year's Radio XXV. Also, the editor's collection of over 600 items will be open for viewing in the afternoon. A full page ad in this issue gives details on Radio XXVI.

Happy New Year and happy collecting in 1995.

ON THE COVER

Our cover photo from the Zenith archives indicates the popularity of the Trans-Oceanic in the post-World War II years. These men on expedition in North Africa are listening to a Model G500, but throughout the world, whether in homes or on safari, other Trans-Oceanics met the great demand for quality radios.

WITH THE COLLECTORS

The Story of the First Zenith Trans-Oceanic

BY JOHN H. BRYANT AND HAROLD N. CONES

Professors Bryant and Cones are the authors of "The Zenith Trans-Oceanic: The Royalty of Radios," published by Schiffer Publications, Ltd., to be available by March 1995. The following article provides background material for this important book, which tells the story of the world's most romantic and expensive series of portable radios. Through interviews with industrial design consultants and with unprecedented access to the Zenith corporate archives, Bryant and Cones have been able to settle many points of controversy concerning the sequence and number of Trans-Oceanic models. Their book includes a series of photographs covering each model, including original print advertising. As collectors and restorers, the authors also provide advice about collecting and restoring tube-type and transistorized models. Here they add to the storehouse of information that their book offers. (Editor)

We began our two-year-long Trans-Oceanic research project innocently enough. We were both fascinated by this fabled line of radios and were frustrated by the lack of information about them. The little information that did exist was in conflict. About the only part of the Trans-Oceanic story that seemed well founded was the development of the first Trans-Oceanic model — the 1942 Trans-Oceanic Clipper — shown in Figure 1. Several articles had been published in respected hobby journals which purported to document the "invention" of the Trans-Oceanic by one individual or another.

During our research, we were most fortunate to receive exceptional cooperation from the Zenith Electronics Corporation and from many retired Zenith employees. We were able to examine the Zenith corporate archives thoroughly, and, most importantly, we found the Trans-Oceanic files of Commander Eugene F. McDonald, Jr., the founding president of Zenith.

We examined in detail McDonald's papers relating to the development of the first Trans-Oceanic from its inception in 1939 until 1946. The story of the creation of the first Trans-Oceanic was thoroughly documented in these files and was very different from what has been accepted, until now, as "fact."

For forty years, the Zenith Trans-Oceanic was a benchmark for the American electronics manufacturing and design industry. In the Trans-Oceanic, science, technology and consumer acceptance came together to provide a product that so impacted society that the name is still recognized by radio enthusiasts everywhere and by most of the American public.

Through much of its existence, the Trans-Oceanic was also the most expensive portable radio offered for sale to the general public. In spite of its high price, the Trans-Oceanic is believed to have been the single most popular radio marque produced during the first 50 years of radio. Many people now involved in the various radio hobbies heard their first shortwave broadcast on a Zenith Trans-Oceanic.

COMMANDER EUGENE F. McDONALD, JR.

Today, few people know that the Trans-Oceanic was a direct outgrowth of the lifestyle and the shortwave broadcast listening interests of Commander Eugene F. McDonald, Jr. By the late 1930s, Zenith Radio Corporation was a giant of the new radio industry, and Commander McDonald was one of America's wealthiest and best known men.

He was a member of the jet set before there were jets, and he lived aboard his 185-foot yacht, Mizpah, which was moored most of the year near Zenith headquarters in Chicago.

Well-known for his Arctic explorations and for his leadership of Zenith, "The Commander" entertained world-renowned celebrities with cruises aboard the Mizpah and took many of them to his summer fishing camp on the Canadian shore of Lake Huron. With McDonald's adventuring background and radio pioneering knowledge, his desire for a high powered portable radio to accompany him on his far-flung adventures was almost inevitable.

On June 27, 1939, McDonald received patent number 2,164,251 for the Wavemagnet, an external loop antenna that allowed radio reception in trains, airplanes and metal enclosed buildings. This antenna was attached to a window glass by suction cups and connected to the radio by means of a cable. Although the Wavemagnet greatly enhanced signal strength under some circumstances, the fact that Zenith and all other existing portable radios tuned only the standard AM broadcast band still prevented good reception in remote locations.

McDonald's yacht Mizpah was one of the largest on the Great Lakes, and it traveled for extended periods of time on the lakes, often to remote locations. Reception on the Zenith portable that McDonald carried was almost nonexistent in some of the areas he frequented, and he became interested in finding a portable that would work. Not only did he want to hear the radio news from Europe, where Hitler was assuming power, but he wanted to keep abreast of the weather.

Since his Zenith broadcast band portable did not prove powerful enough for his needs, he asked the Zenith staff to develop the ideal travel radio. In a November 9, 1951, memo, McDonald recalled the final incident that led to the development of the industry's first shortwave portable as simply: "Standard broadcast reception at my Canadian fishing lodge was extremely poor...."

The Commander's response to this poor reception, although alluded to many times in his files, is best detailed in a personal Christmas letter to friend Herman Staebler dated December 18, 1942. This letter recounted the entire history of McDonald's involvement with the founding and development of Zenith and specifically addressed Trans-Oceanic development:

I ordered our laboratory to make this shortwave portable on August 2, 1939. I sent a radiogram from my yacht when in McGreagor Bay telling our chief engineer (G.E. "Gus" Gustafson) exactly what I wanted. The laboratory built about twenty different models and submitted them to me, all of which I rejected until I received two of the final laboratory samples a year ago last June. I sent one of these sets north with Comdr. Donald B. MacMillan into the Arctic. I took the other one to Canada with me. I received a radiogram from MacMillan saying that in his twenty years in the Arctic with radio he'd never been able to keep in touch with the outside world as he had with this little portable. I had the same success with it in Canada. I then authorized them to go into production. We were not ready for deliveries until January 1, 1942; over two and one-half years of laboratory work is behind this job that I'm sending you.

The Zenith design team responsible for the first shortwave portable included engineers

Gustafson, Passow, Striker, and Emde; this team, plus Brown, Sharp and Thompson, were cited as having major roles in refining the design. McDonald's files credit engineers G.E. Gustafson and G.O. Striker, and McDonald himself as the originators of the Trans-Oceanic.

THE 1942 TRANS-OCEANIC CLIPPER

At the time of McDonald's directive, portable AM radios were themselves a very recent development. The Zenith design team produced a series of prototypes for the Commander based on the new Zenith AM (medium wave) portables. Figure 2 shows Commander McDonald with one of these prototypes (left) and the 1953 Trans-Oceanic Model H500.

After the first few general coverage shortwave prototypes, the Commander complained of needing "micrometer fingers" to tune in shortwave broadcasts. He suggested developing a multi-band "bandspread" prototype that eventually led to the first Trans-Oceanic, the 1942 Zenith Trans-Oceanic Clipper.

Commander McDonald not only field tested the Trans-Oceanic prototype in Canada, he also tested it in early October 1941 on the Baltimore and Ohio's Capitol Limited and on Eastern Airlines planes on Washington to Miami and Miami to Chicago flights. He reported that over southern states, standard radios could not bring in the World Series reports, but that passengers were treated to the score through a shortwave link of WGEA, Schenectady. He also provided reception from London, Berlin, Rome and Moscow.

The Zenith Trans-Oceanic Clipper containing McDonald's additional patent 2,200,674, the short-wave WaveMagnet, a tuneable antenna, went into limited production in October 1941. Deliveries to the public began in early January 1942.

In late December, just before Christmas, Commander McDonald sent "a copy of my latest baby" to many of his business and personal friends along with a letter detailing the history of its development. He received enthusiastic responses from the recipients.

The new radio was introduced in a media splash in early January 1942. In Chicago, the radio was introduced by filling a window of the Zenith downtown showroom at 680 North Michigan with a

A Miss Kelsey, the originator of the display, rendered assistance to retailers in town, and soon Hudson-Ross had a duplicate window at its Randolph Street store. Marshall Field and Saks Fifth Avenue also installed Trans-Oceanic windows. Pictures were taken of these windows and sent to dealers for promotional purposes, and the window display pieces were offered for sale to distributors.

The Clipper was produced for only a few brief months before Zenith shifted to full war production on April 22, 1942. Figure 4 shows the Commander performing final testing on the last 1942 Trans-Oceanic to come down the production line. The few thousand Trans-Oceanics marketed were wildly popular with the troops and on the home front.

After World War II, Zenith manufactured tube model Trans-Oceanics by the hundreds of thousands, eventually offering four main postwar civilian models and two special military versions. These sets were popular with the geographic and anthropological expeditions of that era, as shown in Figure 5.

In late 1957, Zenith produced the first transistorized model Trans-Oceanic, the Royal 1000. Zenith went on to produce three other solid-state models before closing out the marque, bowing to overseas competition. The company ceased radio production altogether in the early 1980s.

We are at a loss to explain the wide gap between the story of the first Trans-Oceanic that unfolded from the Zenith archives and those previously accepted as factual in the hobby press. All that we can say is that the voluminous internal Zenith correspondence and the personal letters of the Commander thoroughly and consistently describe the events leading to the first Trans-Oceanic exactly as outlined above.

As we researched the Zenith archives, a very different picture of Commander McDonald also began to emerge. Rather than the gruff, demanding, uncaring boss of bosses who never said "thank you," the documents record an extremely innovative leader who was both caring and civic-minded. He was also very mindful of the other members of the Zenith team. The following memo is but one of many which led us to a new understanding of the Commander:

January 16, 1942.

Mr. Gustafson, Mr. Passow, Mr. Striker, Mr. Emde, and all the other men who have worked on the shortwave Deluxe portable: You should with great pride read this letter from Walter Damm of the Milwaukee Journal. He is a good technician and certainly the others he mentioned are also good. This is a nice tribute to the work that you have all done.

Congratulations!
McDonald

AFTERWORD

The many early Zenith documents which we have included in The Zenith Trans-Oceanic: The Royalty of Radios are evidence that we have become fascinated by the history of the entire Zenith radio line and the people who created it. Along with well-known Zenith collector Bill Wade of Pennsylvania, we have recently signed with Schiffer Publications to undertake a multiyear research and writing project which will document the Zenith story in several books.

We look forward to hearing from interested collectors who might be able to help us document areas of the Zenith story which, unfortunately, are missing from the Zenith archives. We are especially interested in finding information, preferably copies of original documentation relating to the Chicago Radio Laboratory, the precursor to Zenith. Interested A.R.C. readers are welcome to contact us at our research address: The Radio Professors, P.O. Box 592, Stillwater, OK 74076.

We should also note that our publisher, Schiffer Publications, Ltd., would like to publish other books of interest to radio collectors. If you feel that you might like to share your expertise in book form with other radio enthusiasts, drop Peter Schiffer a note at: Schiffer Publications Ltd., 77 Lower Valley Rd., Atglen, PA, 19310. Fax: 610-593-2002.

The Zenith Trans-Oceanic: The Royalty of Radios, published by Schiffer Publications, Ltd., is available (for March 1995 delivery) from The Radio Professors, P.O. Box 952, Stillwater, OK 74076, at $24.95 plus $2 shipping. It will also be available from A.R.C. and other A.R.C. advertisers. Be sure to check with these suppliers for ordering information.

The B.T.H. Radiola I Valve-Crystal Receiver Type VC Form 'B' [1923]

BY IAN L. SANDERS

In 1923, British Thomson-Houston of Rugby, England, produced a range of battery-valve receivers under the Radiola trade name, complementing its successful Radiola crystal set which had been introduced the previous year. The crystal sets made by the British Thomson-Houston Company (B.T.H.) — an original member of the British Broadcasting Company — have been described in a previous article [A.R.C., April 1993].

The battery receiver line consisted of the Radiola I, a single-valve, crystal reflex receiver, the 2-valve Radiola II and the 3-valve Radiola III. All of the sets used the B.T.H. B5 type valve.

The B.T.H. Radiola I, also known as the Type VC, Form 'B', is shown in Figure 1. In Figure 2 the cabinet is shown with the lid closed. The receiver is arranged on two panels — one sloping and one horizontal. The set is basically an extension of the earlier Radiola Type C crystal set. The sloping front control panel is the same size and has an almost identical layout to that of the Type C crystal set, as shown in Figure 3. Manufactured during the Post Office registration period, the set carries the registration number 0373. The sloping panel also bears the label "Regd. No. 696058," the significance of which is not known.

The receiver is constructed in a highly polished, but rather cumbersome, walnut cabinet with lid, measuring $11\frac{1}{4} \times 10\frac{1}{2} \times 8\frac{3}{4}$ inches. The "B.T.H." logo is printed in gold letters on the top of the lid, and the BBC approval stamp is located on the frontpiece below the clasp.

Access to the valve and the internal high-tension (B) battery is provided by a door at the back of the cabinet. Spacing is so tight that a circular recess was cut into the door to prevent damaging the tip of the valve! (The internal location of the valve is a somewhat unusual feature for British battery receivers of this period, which typically had the valve(s) mounted externally on the control panel.) A printed card with tuning and operating instructions is mounted inside the lid.

The control panels and control knobs are made from the same distinctive chocolate-brown ebonite found in the B.T.H. crystal sets. Ivorine tuning scales are mounted around the tuners, and all of the fittings are nickel plated. The same dual detector arrangement and changeover switch as in the Type C crystal set are used in this set.

The circuit, shown in Figure 4, is of the reflex type, in which the single valve acts as both a high-frequency and, following rectification by the crystal, low frequency amplifier. This circuit configuration was popular with British manufacturers in the early 1920s because of the economical use of valves. (In addition to the reduction in the cost of the valves themselves, between November 1922 and July 1924, receivers were subject to a BBC royalty which depended on the number of valves used.)

The B.T.H. B5 valve is a general purpose "dull emitter" type with a filament rating of 0.06A at 2.8-3.0 volts, intended for use with dry batteries. The recommended anode voltage is 30-60 volts.

Filament current is controlled by a rheostat mounted on the top panel and designed for a 4½-volt dry battery, although a 4-volt accumulator (storage battery) could have been used. The brightness of the filament can be observed through an inspection window, consisting of a circular arrangement of holes in the top panel behind the rheostat.

The tuning arrangement is similar to that used in the Type C crystal set, except that there is a second variometer in the anode circuit of the valve. The standard wavelength range is 300-600 meters which, like the Type C, is covered by means of a 3-position condenser switch (S, OFF, P) used to switch a capacitor in series with, out of the circuit, or in parallel with the aerial circuit variometer.

Two external long-wave coils are required to extend the tuning range and are connected to the two sets of terminals, one set on each panel. This arrangement provided coverage of the Paris station on 2,600 meters, and later, coils were made available for the long-wave BBC station 5XX on 1,600 meters, which opened in 1924. The advertised range was an impressive 100 miles from the local BBC broadcast station.

The price of the B.T.H. Radiola I in 1923 was eleven pounds which included one pair of 4,000-ohm headphones and the B5 valve.

The B.T.H. Type B5 Valve

The B.T.H. Type B5 was a general purpose valve introduced in 1923 and used by British Thomson-Houston in its "Radiola" series of battery receivers. The B5 was designed to be run from two dry cells requiring a modest filament current of only 0.06A at 2.8-3.0 volts. Depending on the application, the recommended anode voltage was 20-80 volts.

Tubular in shape, the early versions had nickel-plated bases and a tip. Later examples do not have the tip, and eventually the nickel-plated base was replaced by Bakelite.

A variation, designated the B5H and intended for use as a high-frequency amplifier, was also produced. The B5H was generally similar to the B5, except that it operated at a higher anode voltage (40-120 volts) and had a higher amplification factor (17.5 versus 7.0).

Tube Substitution — The WD-11 Blues

BY STEPHEN F. IMMS

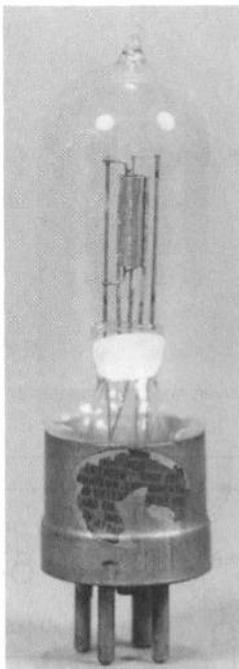

If you think this article is about blue-tinted WD-11s, read on!

I had just bought an RCA Regenoflex and a Type 103 speaker, both of which were in very good condition, and I was very happy to add them to my small collection. After finding a nice place to display my latest find, I got to thinking about how this set would perform, and resolved to make it happen. I wrote a letter to RCA's Consumer Products Division in Indianapolis, Indiana, hoping to be able to get some information from its archives, but was unsuccessful. However, Alan Douglas found some information, including a schematic, in his own files and sent it to me.

The set looked as if it had been in careful storage for many years, the cabinet having all of the original finish, with nary a scratch. Hmmm? Furthermore, I was quite pleased upon opening the front panel — right in front of my eyes was a complete set of Type WD-11 tubes. My heart skipped a beat.

Up to this point, I had seen only pictures of the WD-11, such as on the cover of A.R.C. And here were four of the beauties, just waiting to perform! Breaking out my trusty ohmmeter, I discovered intact filaments in each! Two of the tubes were of the early vintage type, having lime getters, while the remainder were of the flashed variety. All were Bakelite-based, no tip.

Circuit tracing soon revealed that both audio transformers were bad, which, in retrospect, was to be expected. As coincidence would have it, one had an open primary and the other had an open secondary. I thought about having them rewound, but purely by accident, I found a vintage radio shop in lower Manhattan. The owner just happened to find one good transformer in his stock, and I was whistling a happy tune as I journeyed back home to Rhode Island.

I continued to trace the circuitry and discovered no other opens; the rest of the circuitry appeared to be OK. Removal of the first audio was easy, and I continued by touching up the solder joints. Well, the touching up had a real benefit, as I discovered that the previously "open" transformer was now OK!

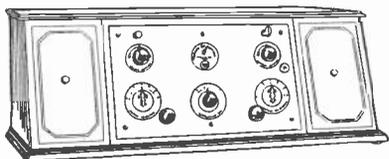

So, I had what appeared to be an operable set, except that I had no source of power. The set's instructions call for the use of 4 Eveready #768 plate batteries (22 ½ volts each) wired in series. The modern equivalent is available from some distributors, but the delivery times are bad — 10 to 14 weeks, and it is pretty expensive.

Luckily, I happened to spot an advertisement in the Sunday paper news supplement. AA and C cells were on sale for just $1.99 for an 8 pack. I purchased enough to make up the 90 volts for B+. I used a homemade jig to hold the cells in place and, with about 6 feet of buss wire and my 200-watt soldering iron, soon had a battery pack that would fit nicely into the set's battery compartment. The grid bias supply was easy, just three D cells in series. The A supply was easier still, with a quick run down to the local automotive supply for a couple of #6 ignitor cells.

I was ready, having run up a long wire antenna of about 120 feet and having driven a 4-foot section of copper tubing into the soil just outside the room as a ground. Carefully following the instruction for hooking up the batteries, antenna and ground, I felt the tension mount as I prepared to bring the set to life.

The battery setting control was adjusted to its proper position, and I observed the dim glow from the vintage tubes. The applied voltage was OK, and I monitored the current consumption, getting ready to react instantly at the first sign of trouble. I began the search for those elusive radio stations hiding somewhere out there in the ether.

I heard a faint scratching noise coming from the speaker, and thinking that one of the tubes might be a little loose, decided to investigate. The first three seemed to be OK, but that last one — I just didn't know.

I was not prepared for what was to follow. As I wiggled the tube, there was a bright flash from inside each of those lovely WD-11's and they were history. Apparently, the filament of the last tube opened up, and as it sagged, it contacted the plate. Well the whole thing was over in a millisecond.

I must have had quite a look on my face as my wife came to investigate the loud groan coming from my radio room. I couldn't believe it! Now I know why a lot of radio aficionados are satisfied with a nice looking, but inoperable, set. How was I to know just how rare those little tubes are? I really had the WD-11 blues.

EPILOGUE

I was not prepared to just let that pretty set collect dust; I had to make it play. Well, Alan Douglas came through again. He had a small supply of war surplus VT-24 tubes, and he provided me with some. This tube has some of the characteristics of the WD-11, as well as the advantage of being extremely quiet. Disassembling the Type VT24s is simple, and the fragile wire leads can be "grafted" into the original pins of the WD-11 bases. This makes for an acceptable substitute. Oh, yes, I took one other step — I colored the bulbs — and so I do have some WD-11 blues.

Acknowledgments: Thanks to Alan Douglas for his technical help, and to Jim Newton for his excellent repair of the filament lock/switch.

(Stephen Imms, 51a Old Shannock Rd., Wakefield, RI 02879)

At the age of ten or eleven, Steven Imms built his first crystal radio set using a Type 1N34 diode and a hand-wound coil from a roll of waxed paper. By dropping a long wire antenna from the window of his third floor apartment in Long Island City, N. Y., he received several local radio stations. Steve has fond memories of his Saturday morning pilgrimages to the "Radio Row" area of lower Manhattan. A collector since 1984, he enjoys restoring 1920s battery radios and attending radio-related auctions and meets in New England.

WD-11

Radiotron WD-11 is famous as the tube that really made possible the swift growth of radio in the home, as we know it today.

Inexpensive to operate—using but one 1½-volt dry cell—doing away with the need for storage batteries—it has lowered the cost of radio.

TELEMACO TELEPHONE MAINTENANCE CO. MODEL TH-1 – Utilizing a type of folded horn design, the driver faces the inside of this horn. The driver adjustment knob is easily accessible, and the cast-iron base includes a provision for raising and lowering the listening angle. For the space-conscious buyer, this little horn measures 11½" long x 10½" diameter. (Robert Bailey – Jacksonville, FL)

AIRLINE MODEL UNKNOWN – This 5-tube mantel radio appears to be circa 1933. Its tube complement is (1) 6C6, (2) 6D6, (1) 43, and (1) 25Z5. It has a heater strip resistor mounted to the back of the chassis instead of a line cord resistor. (Robert and Shirley Schafbuch – Carrollton, KY)

TREGO RADIO MFG. CO. –
This 1922 Trego battery set uses three tubes. The Trego Company, owned by Mrs. Nellie Trego, operated illegally under Tri-City's Armstrong license. (Ed Bell – Raleigh, NC)

AUCTION REPORT

Gateway Gallery Auction The Collection of Jack Hortman Chambersburg, Pennsylvania — October 15, 1994

CONTRIBUTED BY KAY KOHLER

On October 15, 1994, the Gateway Gallery Auction, just off Interstate Rt. 81, Exit 5, in Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, auctioned the collection of Jack Hortman of Biglerville, Pennsylvania. Sixty enthusiastic buyers from eight states made the sale of over 500 items a lively event. All items were sold to the highest bidders with no reserves.

Highlights included Rider's Perpetual Trouble Shooters Manual, Vols. 1 through 23, complete with indexes, selling at $375, and two RCA framed advertising fans at $70. The popularity of Nipper, as indicated by the response to our November cover article, was reaffirmed by the sale of a paper on wood reproduction of His Master's Voice for $110.

Although prices for floor models were rather low, tabletops, parts, and literature sold very well. Buyers were complimentary about the fast pace and the manner in which auctioneer John F. Kohler, Jr., conducted the business of the day.

Jack Hortman's interest in radio was a natural adjunct to his work in radio electronics at the Naval Research Laboratory where he was an electrical engineer. His collecting began fifteen years ago with a Zenith Trans-Oceanic and grew to include about 375 radios, as well as radio-related items. Gradually, he developed a small repair and sales business. His move to a retirement community precipitated this auction.

New Jersey Antique Radio Club Meet and Auction Hightstown, New Jersey — November 5, 1994

CONTRIBUTED BY LUDWELL SIBLEY AND RAY CHASE

The New Jersey Antique Radio Club (NJARC) held a swap meet and catalog auction at Hightstown, New Jersey, on November 5, 1994. This event was comparable to the spring event reported in the July issue of A.R.C. Favored with excellent fall weather, sellers at 67 tables were active outside, while another 20 sold indoors. One seller, Peter Grave, offered sets from his former bookmobile, converted into a traveling antique radio showroom.

Auctioneer Walt Buffinton, previously seen in action at Hightstown and at Rochester, conducted a fast-moving sale. The final catalog offered 314 lots (about 50 lots more than the preauction listing), and members brought in 40 additional items. The buying audience consisted of 102 bidders from 10 states. Sales totaled $8,200.

Prices were realistic. Top material commanded strong interest, while boxes of parts and common magazines were relatively cheap. Twenty flats of general purpose and TV tubes, as well as 10 boxes of late 1950s Photofacts, brought only $5-$10 each, giving some bargains to those willing to sort them out.

By contrast, eight 1946-49 TV sets drew relatively strong bids. A DeForest VT-21 tube was the hottest thermionic item of the day, backed up by a Western Electric 205D and other WE devices. Several rare magazines turned up, like Radio Industries and RCA's internal organ, The Scanner. There were many groups of unique papers and 1920s photos from the estate of George Beers, an early receiver designer and later vice president of RCA Victor in charge of color-TV development.

Another rare item was a Hammarlund SP-400 Super-Pro in great shape, with speaker and power supply, selling at $160. (SP-200s and -600s are common, but the late 1940s Model 400 is almost unknown.) A further rarity was a Radiola VII-B (AR-907) regenerative receiver panel; even without tubes or cabinet, it fetched $375. A very good AK 10C breadboard sold at $850.

Overall producer of this event was Marv Beerman, while Ludwell Sibley made the auction preparations. Sammy and Mitch Cohen handled the main finances for the auction.

The following is a list of selected items.

e=excellent, vg=very good, f=fair, p=poor, NT= no tubes, WT=with tubes, N.I.B.=new in box, xfmr=transformer, xmtr=transmitter, BT=brass-tipped.

The Collector's Guide to Antique Radios — Third Edition

By Marty and Sue Bunis

REVIEWED BY DAVE CROCKER

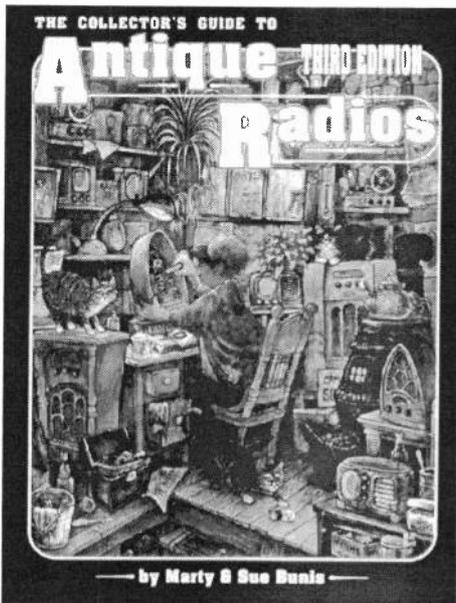

Good news! My Amrad doubledecker has doubled in price! Bad news! My Belmont 6D111 went down $75. These facts are what I discovered as I flipped through the pages of the newest edition of Collector's Guide to Antique Radios by Marty and Sue Bunis.

More good news! The second edition of this book has 216 pages, 550 photos, and 7,800 prices. This new third edition, which covers radios from 1920 to 1960, has 280 pages, over 600 photos, and more than 8,500 listings! Like the radio hobby itself, the Collector's Guide is growing. It is bigger and more exact, and it has become the definitive radio price guide, used by more collectors (and dealers) than any other guide.

As stock brokers have their Wall Street Journals, radio collectors have their Bunis Collector's Guides. These books are used not only as a way to watch the rise and (sometimes) fall of their radio investments, but also as catalogs to "wish lists."

This edition has lots of big, clear photos, and many of the radios shown are truly unique. I was quite surprised to find some models that I have never seen before. Something to note is that all the transistor radios have been omitted from this guide. Instead, transistors can be found in the Collector's Guide to Transistor Radios, also by Marty and Sue Bunis.

My "wish list" would call for lots more listings of battery sets and, hey! — when is somebody going to publish a price guide for crystal sets? A few minor errors include the wrong dial on the Crosley 50 and the incorrect spelling of the Crosley "Widgit" (without the "d"). Also, since the term "Sky Terrier" in reference to the Crosley Pup was mentioned only once in an advertisement, I believe it should be dropped. However, I tend to be a Crosley nitpicker anyway.

A nice touch would be to mention the number of tubes in battery and early AC sets. It does make a difference.

The cover for the third edition has the same Bill Bell "Ace Radio Repair" color illustration that was used for the first edition, but this time it has a green border and back cover. Inside is the information the hobby thrives on. Whether because of the prices or the photos, this book will not disappoint you — unless the only set in your collection is the Belmont 6D111.

Readers should be aware that the radio club listings on pages 276-278 are subject to change. Check A.R.C.'s Coming Radio Events pages for updated information.

The Collector's Guide to Antique Radios, Third Edition, by Marty and Sue Bunis, is published by Collector Books, P.O. Box 3009, Paducah, KY 42002-3009. It has 280 pages in a softbound, 8½" x 11" format. Priced at $18.95, it is available directly from Marty and Sue Bunis, RR 1, Box 36, Bradford, NH 03221, as well as from the publisher, A.R.C., and other A.R.C. advertisers.

RADIO MISCELLANEA

"Antique Radio Classified" invites its readers to contribute letters and information for inclusion in "Radio Miscellanea" and elsewhere in the magazine. The topic should be of general interest and sent to A.R.C., P.O. Box 2, Carlisle, MA 01741. Problem — Odor, Not Termites

Dear Editor:

I was reading in the December 1994 issue about the cure for termites. I don't have termites, but I do have an old wood cabinet radio which has a bad odor. It may have been in a flooded basement. I would like to know if there is a way to eliminate the bad odor.

More Vintage Music

Dear Editor:

What a surprise to see Vince Giordano's "Quality Shout" CD reviewed in A.R.C. (Dec 1994). I have this CD and love it!

I recently found another CD of music from this period, and this one was a dream come true. It's an album of music from the early "Our Gang" and "Laurel & Hardy" movies composed by Leroy Shield. Performed by the Beau Hunks, it's called "Little Rascal Music," and it's on the Koch-Screen label (#3-8702-2). Vince also wanted to record this music and had been searching for original scores. The Beau Hunks did it by transcribing the music note-by-note from the movie sound track.

The Beau Hunks have captured the sound of the original music perfectly. Although there is a temptation to listen to it in mono to give it a more old-fashioned sound, I prefer stereo, as it makes you feel as if you were in the studio when the music was first recorded for the movies.

Full Name Policy In Ads

Dear Editor:

Although I did not want my full name in my recent ad, you did print it that way, as per your policy. I do this so as to avoid conversing with telephone sales people who always ask for "Mr. Starks." As a result, several collector/callers were given the brushoff.

Dennis R. Starks, Cross Timbers, MO

A.R.C.'s policy of requiring full names and addresses in ads is based on the principle that our readers should know from whom they are buying and selling. We are sorry that we cannot honor individual requests for exceptions to that rule. (Editor)

E-Mail Word Count

Dear Editor:

I see Internet and E-mail addresses starting to show up. How are they to be treated when counting words? They are almost always written as one word, albeit sometimes long. My E-mail is fifteen characters long, but I have a friend whose e-mail address is 26 characters long. Maybe you can respond in the next issue.

James F. Crews, Arborvale, WV

An E-mail address is like an extra telephone number and is counted as one word regardless of length. (Editor)

Chimes & Wireless Record Players

Dear Editor:

Doug Houston's article about wireless record players and Bill Harris' inquiry about NBC chimes sure brought back some memories. Before the war, in Nome, Alaska, I bought a Lafayette turntable with built-in wireless. It worked best if I connected the wireless player antenna directly to the radio aerial terminal, which, in turn, was connected to a long outside wire. No need to hunt for a blank spot on the broadcast dial. In the daytime, it was all blank. I found that I had listeners all over town, about a 3-mile radius. Everyone loaned me their records so I could play them on Nome's "pirate" station.

Back in the 1930s, my youthful shortwave listening in Austin, Texas, was with a 2-tube regenerative home brew. Up all night to try for VK2ME (Sydney, Australia) and VK3ME (Melbourne). Their "chimes" were the raucous cackle of the Kookaburra "laughing jackass" bird. Those stations could be identified by even the weakest signal. Then I could brag all week that I had "heard" Australia!

Bud Richter, Quartz Hill, CA

The Fourth Chime

In response to Bill Harris' question about the 4th NBC chime (A.R.C., December 1994, page 11), both Mark Pathe and Jim Davison sent copies of Rod Phillips' article published in The Michigan Chronicle, Vol 6, #4, 1991. Rod Phillips himself also wrote to report that he has written several histories of the NBC chimes, one of which was published by NBC in 1976. He tells us that the original pattern of the chimes was seven notes, reduced to four, and finally, in 1929, to three — G-E-C. The 4th chime was a second strike of the C-note.

The first use of this 4th chime was on May 7, 1937, recording the crash of the Hindenburg a day after it happened. The final use was on September 2, 1945, before the report from the U.S.S. Missouri of Japan's surrender to General MacArthur. However, on November 22, 1963, several NBC affiliate stations used the 4th chime to signal half-hour breaks during coverage of the assassination of President Kennedy.

Rod reports that there are several recordings of the use of the 4th chime. Over the years, all seven notes have been recreated by NBC programs outlining the network's history. These recordings also survive.

The chimes became a registered trademark and service mark of NBC in 1950. In fact, the 3-note sequence was the first audible trademark to be filed with the U.S. Patent Office.

Regular use of the chimes on both radio and television ceased on September 12, 1971. However, Rod later sparked the interest of the staff of Saturday Night Live with his set of the original chimes made by the J.C. Deagan Co. This company also made 4-note dinner chimes now often mistaken for the NBC chimes. (Editor)

Radio Restoration Parts

Vacuum Tube Repair Wafers

These tube repair wafers are solid-state devices for quick and easy repair of early vacuum tubes. The wafer is installed by simply sliding it over the tube pins and reinserting the tube into its socket. If the filament is intact, but there is little or no emission, the filament may be lit for best visual effect. However, the tube can be open filament.

No change in radio operating voltages is required. Any number of tubes may be repaired in a radio. If wafers are installed on all tubes, the B+ voltage may usually be reduced without sacrificing volume or sensitivity. Performance will vary between radio models.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING POLICY

ONE FREE 20-WORD AD for subscribers in each issue; additional words are 22¢ each. See details below. Classified ads sent by mail, fax or by any other method must be received (not just postmarked!) by Noon Eastern Time on the classified ad deadline date to guarantee inclusion in the current issue. Late ads are held for the following issue. Please enclose correct payment with all ads. Stamps or cash are OK for small amounts. (Canadian and other foreign advertisers, please see "Payment" on page 2 for methods.) "Free words" cannot be accumulated from month to month; free words must be requested when ad is submitted.

Faxed ads: Please see additional information on the inside front cover.

Please write each ad on a separate sheet of paper, especially when included with other A.R.C. correspondence. Include SUB# with ad. Ads may be sent in advance; but, write each ad on a separate piece of paper and indicate the month (or successive two months) you want the ad to run.

To minimize our typing errors: Please write legibly. Use both capital and small letters. Do not use a dash between words. Carefully write the following numbers and letters (especially in model numbers) since some can look alike; for example 1, l and I (the number one, the capital i and the small L.) Also: 0, O, o, Q and D; r and n; 6, b and G; V, U, u, v and Y; A and R; 5, S and 3; 2, Z and z. We try to correct spelling errors, so when using an uncommon word or manufacturer which we might mistake as a more common word or manufacturer, note it so that we do not "correct" it. Editor's annotations are in [brackets].

Advertising is accepted only for early items related to radio, communication, etc. All items must be described fairly; reproductions, reprints and not-original items must be so identified. Advertisers must agree to respond promptly to inquiries and orders, to resolve problems promptly if the buyer is not satisfied, and to comply with a buyer's refund request on unaltered returned items.

The publisher reserves the right to edit ads without notification to the advertiser and to reject ads for any reason. Names other than the advertiser will be edited out of ads. Ads with non-radio-related items will be returned or edited unless the non-radio-related items are for trade of radio-related items, or they are incidental to and appear at the end of an otherwise acceptable ad. The publisher is not responsible for errors due to illegibly written ads or for any other reason.

Clubs: Since club activities receive free coverage on the Coming Radio Events pages, the free 20 words may not be used for club activity ads. See inside front cover for additional information.

CLASSIFIED AD DETAILS

Deadline: NOON ET- 10th of the month!

Classified ads must have a standard heading such as WANTED, FOR SALE, FOR TRADE, FOR SALE/TRADE, SERVICES, MESSAGE, HELP, AUCTION, MEET, etc. This heading is the only bold or all-capitalized words allowed in the ad. Capitalize only manufacturer names, model names, etc. This standard ad format makes scanning the ads easier.

Before writing your ad, please look over the ads in a recent issue of A.R.C., and try to write your ad in the same style. Full name (or company name) and address is required in all classified ads; we will add it if you forget.

To encourage varied content of the ads, the same classified ad may be run only once per issue and for only two consecutive months. (To run an ad longer, use a boxed classified or display ad.)

$14.00 per month for each photo or drawing (If ad is canceled, this amount cannot always be refunded.)

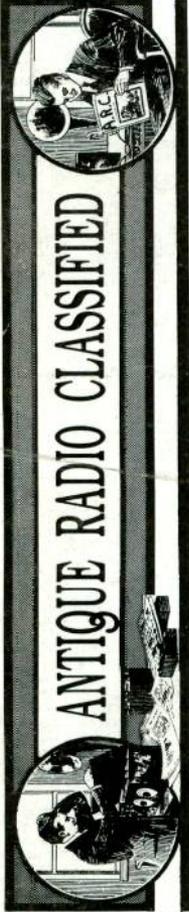

CHANGES & CANCELLATIONS

Please check your ads carefully before sending them in. Once ads are received, it is not always possible to refund the amount sent, pull the ad or make changes.

IMPORTANT — COUNTING WORDS — IMPORTANT

The standard headings: WANTED, FOR SALE, etc., count as one word each time used in an ad. Name, address and (one) telephone number, count as 6 words, regardless of length. Ham call letters and business name can be included in the 6 words and do not count extra. Full name (or company name) and address is required in all classified ads.
