WHO IS RADIO'S BIGGEST STAR?

WHO is radio's biggest star?

We don't know. We haven't any idea! Only you can tell—by your votes in the Star of Stars election. You owe it to your favorite star to vote—and to do it now!

Radio stars live on their popularity with you—their listeners. Without that popularity, they cannot rank as stars for long. And—unless you demonstrate, in some concrete way, your admiration and appreciation, their popularity must diminish.

Too many radio fans consider that they owe nothing to the men and women who entertain them on the air. They wouldn't think of trying to enter a theater without paying admission; but somehow they support the half-belief that radio entertainment is as free as the air they breathe.

In a way, it is. In America, unlike most foreign countries, you don't have to pay a stiff license fee merely for the privilege of owning a radio receiving set. But by your purchase of the radio sponsor's products, you say, you support the programs? True enough, and in that way, too, you support the stars.

Fred Allen: He ranks No. 10

BUT that isn't enough!

Sales charts of a commercial sponsor may be a barometer of the star's popularity, but you'll agree it's not a very warm or inspiring barometer!

The stars need more than that. They need your active, personal support—and you owe it to the stars, and to yourself, to give it to them.

Don't put it off. It's important that you vote now! Everybody else is doing it!

Vote in the Star of Stars election—and do it now! Your vote may put your favorite star up there on top!

(See Star of Stars standings on page 18)

THERE is no sadness or fear or self-pity; there is only courage and cheer and hope—always hope—in the strangely assorted clan that lives in the Chateau of the Condemned.

They—a family that the kind fates forsook—live and laugh and love in the Chateau where radio is a blessing, where a song is something to remember, where a bit of news is a morsel to taste and pass along, where death is never mentioned, and yet death is the captain of the clan and each clansman is keeping a tryst.

For this family is cursed with cancer, and the Chateau is a besieged fortress of turrets and iron fences where doctors and nurses fight day and night against a gnawing enemy that man doesn't understand, asking nothing of life except a chance to keep on fighting until the mystery is solved and the enemy is beaten back and imprisoned or exiled with yellow fever and other conquered plagues which once harassed mankind.

And unless you have been in the Chateau and met the family that has been doomed without benefit of trial or verdict of jury, you never will know just what radio really means to persons who ask so little of life and who get even less than they ask.

THE Chateau—its proper name is Memorial Hospital for Treatment of Cancer and Allied Diseases—stands in the center of Manhattan's fashionable uptown residential area. It doesn't look like a hospital. Ivy clings to its turrets. Over to the right is Central Park. Rocks, with patches of moss clustering on their sheltered sides, poke out of the earth. Trees droop toward the mall. Children play—policemen patrol, swinging their sticks. Lovers meet. Paupers beg. The drama of life is played in the park. The family of the Chateau can see it—life passing in review, yet there is no bitterness because they are not parts of the parade. Though to the world their roles may be tragic, they never feel sorry for themselves.

They have radio, and the masters sing to them; they have radio and their wards are arenas and gridirons, ski-jumps and diamonds; they have radio, and their X-ray rooms are forums and their beds are reserved seats to the greatest shows of the world. They call the stars by their first names and argue over their favorites.

"Did you hear Bing last night?" asks one. "Sure," says another, "but give me Gracie and George."

Fifty-three years ago when consumption was a horrid word and science had to combat superstition, the hospital was built—the first special institution of its kind in the nation. Cancer was ravishing mankind. Yellow fever was still a curse. Malaria was a plague. Smallpox was a scourge. The Civil War was still fresh in the nation's memory. There were no automobiles, no radio, no airplanes. But even then the founders of the Chateau determined that cancer had to be conquered. So the first monument to the cancer war was erected.

The Chateau depends for support upon voluntary contributions. More than 90,000 persons a year are treated in its clinic and it has nearly 11,000 cases under care or supervision—that's how large the clan is.

Pick out 1,000 persons. One of them has cancer. Shrink from the screaming news of automobile accidents and sudden death, then shudder and remember that every time an automobile kills one man, cancer kills five!

I MET a man in the Chateau the other day. He had a suitcase and he had come to join the family. There was a bit of gauze on the side of his face. There was a smile on his face. I smiled back. And then I saw that he had to smile—his lips were drawn that way! What irony—a disease that kills and makes its victims smile!

The scientists who have devoted their lives to the Chateau and its clan do not say they can cure cancer, but they will tell you that "records of the hospital show a substantial proportion of permanent cures in many of the major forms of cancer."

Get treatment for cancer soon enough—and there's a chance!

It is not a hospital for incurables. The patients come from every state, join the family, are treated and go away—many to certain death, some back to the normal paths they trod—until the cancer appears again. Then they return to the Chateau. But from each patient the doctors learn something, and many patients have been sent back to their homes and business to live their normal lives again.

Picture a big rambling building with turrets—condemned men and women chatting and laughing, children playing, the low hum of X-ray motors—that's the Chateau. It is not gloomy. It has not that creepy hospital atmosphere or those somber white walls. The rooms are gay with bits of color.

MONEY is no barrier. Even the nurses don't know who are paying patients. Step into the front door and there, emblazoned in gold letters, are the names of donors who have kept the Chateau open. Then through a swinging door and down a corridor. On each side are semi-private rooms. Each has a radio. The huge X-ray machines make reception uncertain, but so eager are the patients for music that they keep their radios on and strain to hear above the static.

Each ward has a radio and at 5:00 p.m. daily the X-rays are cut off so the patients can have four hours of good reception. The programs are selected by common consent. In the women's wards, the radio brings music. In the men's wards, it brings news and sports events. There are three wards for men; three for women.

The Chateau would like to have more radios—beside its 112 beds—but radios cost money and the Chateau (Continued on Page 19)

NO Glamor Girl Is She!

The voice counts, says Elizabeth Lennox—glamor doesn't. She learned that lesson early, long before she saw a microphone! Above: Everett Marshall sang with her on "Broadway Varieties" last year

G LAMOR!

What a lot of magic there is in that one word! Makes you think of languorous women, exotic places, the kinds of things you read about or see in the movies. And—it's the thing that nine out of ten women would give their souls to have.

Well, let me present the tenth woman. She's convinced she hasn't got it, and what's more, she doesn't want it. Her name? Elizabeth Lennox.

"Believe it or not, glamor is a responsibility. Definitely so. And living up to it must take an awful lot out of one. I'd much rather be myself."

This "myself" that Elizabeth Lennox prefers is all right, too. She's a forthright person, unusually honest and clear-visioned with regard to herself. She looks more like a capable young executive rather than a singer. She's tall and chic, distinctly the type for whom tailored clothes were made. Not mannish-tailored, though, for she is a feminine person, warm and lovable. You feel nice and cozy when you're with her; you know that comfortable feeling that some people give you.

We were talking about singers and how much glamor had contributed to their success, when she said: "I'm not a glamor girl. I never was or will be, and I'm mighty glad of it."

And that, according to her, was that. Not a word about her own success. You could interpret that as you chose. Simply, she was not a glamor girl. Of course I wanted to know more. You see, I'd always thought that, along with learning how to trill the scales, a girl automatically took a course in glamor. It seems I was wrong.

"Glamor," said Miss Lennox from the depths of her chintz-covered wing chair, "is one of the most abused words in the dictionary. I looked it up once and found out that Webster called it a charm on the eyes causing them to see things differently from what they are in reality. It's a sort of fascination or witchery. After I read that, I was convinced that my feeling about myself was true. I know that I'm not a glamor girl because I am a contralto and have a contralto personality.

CONTRALTOS, you know, have deep feelings and emotions. They go about quietly, doing their work, but they don't wear their hearts on their sleeves. Most of the old ballads are contralto songs. And the late Mother Schumann-Heink was probably the best example of a true contralto personality. She was a soothing person, entirely without dynamite. She had no visible, tangible glamor; she was rather a homey person, the kind you could tell your troubles to."

Looking back at the roster of world-famous singers, I could see what Miss Lennox was driving at. The sopranos—gals with high-ranged voices like Geraldine Farrar, Mary Garden and Luisa Tetrazzini—were always getting themselves into the papers, and not entirely on the strength of their music. It seems that they just couldn't keep out of romantic and other escapades. On the other hand, Louise Homer, a contralto, has always represented a high ideal of American motherhood. She is still married, to the only man with whom she went to the altar. "Tis said of her that she never got her name in the papers except to announce when she was going to sing or to announce the birth of another child.

In order to play a glamor role consistently, you've got to have a wide streak of selfishness in your make-up. Glamor and publicity go hand in hand and glamor girls are no shy, shrinking violets. They are showy orchids and the limelight is the sun that lights up their activities. Naturally they want all attention focused on themselves.

They will not share the spotlight—without a great deal of protest.

"Well," continued Miss Lennox, "I was brought up in a parsonage and my father had the usual handicaps in the form of a large family and a limited income. Just you try to get glamorous in that kind of a setting!"

As a matter of fact even in those days Elizabeth didn't give a hoot about glamor. She was more interested in getting ahead. She grew up, as she put it, "practically all over the state of Michigan," for her father's church rotated its clergy, never permitting one to remain long in any pastorate. Even college was an installment affair. She attended three before she finally graduated from the Cosmopolitan School of Music in Chicago.

Her career as a "professional" began with a $2-a-Sunday church engagement. Then, at nineteen she gave her first concert in Chicago. Stage fright? Not a bit. She was so exhilarated with her new dress and slippers to match that she was bursting with confidence in herself. And she got good notices, too.

ARMED with these clippings, plus $150 she borrowed, she went to New York. She arrived around breakfast time and by dinner time she not only had a room, she had a job as well! A choir agency sent her to a church to audition, and according to her, "the committee was sick of listening to sopranos. I guess they hired me because I sang contralto." That's her story. Anyhow, she was hired.

"You see," she added, "I don't even have the glamor of starving or struggling to get a job."

Of course if glamor depends upon starvation and a struggle to get a job, then Elizabeth Lennox hasn't got glamor, because practically every one of her jobs was handed to her. In all the ten years she's been appearing before the microphone she has never been off the air for more than a month at a time and that was for vacation.

To show how naive she was, she laughingly tells this story on herself. She had been singing at the church a few months when a man approached her after services one Sunday. He said he had enjoyed her singing so much that he wanted her to call at his office to discuss some work and gave her his card. She took the card, but with tales of city slickers fresh in her mind, she decided to forget all about it.

Not so this man. He approached her again a few weeks later. She stammered a lame excuse, and when he sensed her embarrassment, he explained he was a talent scout for a phonograph company and he knew she had a perfect recording voice. Reluctantly, and with some misgivings, she agreed to make a test. The rest is record history. Her voice recorded so well that at one time she was making records for twelve different companies under as many different names. Finally, Brunswick signed her to an exclusive contract and she made records for them alone for seven years.

A bit of near-glamor in the form of romance did touch her at this time. An English cousin, a handsome officer in His Majesty's navy, came to this country for a visit and promptly laid siege to her heart. Naturally she was flattered by the attentions of this older, worldly man. On his part, he thoroughly approved of her singing, at home or at a private concert for which she was engaged and where Caruso was a guest. But one day they were out walking and came upon an advertising card bearing her picture and announcing a concert. When he saw that the card was in the window of a Chinese laundry, his rage knew no bounds. And so she finally admitted to him what she had come to realize to herself: that her feeling was merely youthful fascination but not love. Love to her meant perfect understanding of and sympathy with her music and her desire to share it with the masses.

Such a love did come to her a few years later. Her husband is George Hughes, an advertising executive, who has a keen appreciation of her musicianship.

But that's getting ahead of our story. When Brunswick turned to radio, they naturally used their recording artists.

THIS was her introduction to the microphone and they've had a long and sustained friendship since. Having given concerts, been guest singer with leading orchestras, and with radio success to her credit, I naturally expected her to be interested in opera.

"No, thank you," was the surprising reply, and she lightly dismissed the ambition dear to practically every singer. "I am a contralto and there are very few good contralto roles in all of opera. The rest are witches and hags and I will not be a hag even on the Metropolitan stage. I sang a witch role once and I felt unclean for a week. I know it's imagination, but I have a way of becoming the character I am singing and it is an eerie feeling.

"Incidentally, in opera you get the best example of what I mean by a contralto personality. Have you noticed that all the glamorous parts in opera are for sopranos? The composers recognized that sopranos are more volatile and they created roles to match the fireworks in their make-up. So much so, that practically the only glamor role left to a contralto is Delilah. Carmen was originally a contralto role but has been taken over by sopranos and is sung by them more often than by contraltos themselves!"

AS ELIZABETH LENNOX talked, I could see that she did not possess glamor in the sense that we know and use the word. She is too real and vibrant a person to want to bewitch you into believing she is something she isn't. Trained in the days when phonograph records sold like hotcakes, she is a product of the school in which only the voice counted. So-called glamor, or personality, didn't project itself on the wax platters. Only the goldentones did that, and that was what sold records. Remember the fads and fancies in radio? The crooners and scat singers who had to speak half the words of a song because they couldn't carry a tune all the way through? They were called "personality performers," but for all their so-called glamor, many sought jobs.

Not so with Elizabeth Lennox. She gets along nicely, thank you. Maybe that's because the best way to describe her is not glamorous, but gracious.

Elizabeth Lennox may be heard Fridays on Broadway Varities over a CBS network at 8 p.m. EST (7 CST; 6 MST; 5 PST).

GLAMOR IS JUST ANOTHER WORD TO THIS YOUNG LADY! SHE NEVER HAD IT, AND SHE DOESN'T WANT IT NOW!

BY RUTH ARELL

Hearing

is

IF EAVESDROPPING shocks you, don't read this story, because watching Pepper Young's family in action is eavesdropping. Me, I like it. I'll confess right now that I listen to people on subways, busses and elevators. If I'm in a room when someone is phoning, no amount of will-power can deafen my ears, or keep me from wondering what the other end is saying. If a quarrel is going on within ear-shot, I'm drawn irresistibly to my window to hear better.

That's why I love Pepper Young's Family, and, I suspect, that's why so many other people do, too. They are a family . . . made for us to overhear.

For four happy years they have been together. True, their names have changed from time to time. That is the only radio-ish thing about them. As a sustaining program it was "Red Adams" for a year. For three, it was "Red Davis" for one sponsor, and last year it became "Pepper Young's Family" might have been the kind of red wallpaper you used to see years ago and sometimes still see in old-fashioned homes. It was a homey, snug little room with a pretty girl knitting a red sweater, another reading a letter. A stout middle-aged woman sat at one end of a table reading some papers (her script, really) and, at the other end, a tall middle-aged man sat and pondered. Three young men stood by the grand piano, talking and laughing.

IT WAS, of course, rather a strange room for a family to gather in. There were no windows except one that didn't look outdoors but into the faces of two men. There was a door standing in the middle of the room . . . leading nowhere . . . just a big black door. A small organ was perched high off the floor. There was a telephone without a wire and black boxes which I knew were sound-machines. And, of course, there were the two ily" for another. But that doesn't matter. They are the same. The same people play—I should say are—father, mother, big brother and kid sister. And their parents are the same.

This is getting rather involved, but that's the way it is.

I used to listen to "Red Davis" and was sorry when it went off the air. Then one day my radio happened on to "Pepper Young's Family." "If that," I snorted, "isn't plagiarism, I'd like to know what it is! How can people have the nerve to do things like that?"

That's how I came to be there. But you can't just drop in on this family. (How would you like a total stranger sitting goggle-eyed in your house, watching everything you did?) They don't allow studio guests, but when I said I was going to write a story about them they said it was all right.

It was 9:15 in the morning when I got off at the eighth-floor NBC studios. It wasn't a studio I went into now . . . though I'd been in that same little studio before. The red-draped walls (slightly faded in places) microphones very much in evidence.

I poked my nose into this room and asked for Mr. Wolfe. (He's the director.) At that moment he blew in behind me, found out that I wasn't an intruder, took me by the arm and said, "Boys and girls, this is Miss Pomeroy. She's going to write a story about us." Then he rattled out their names so fast that I couldn't catch any of them. But you could see they were pleased . . . as the Youngs themselves would be, at getting their names in the papers. I didn't know, then, how very much they were the Youngs.

The girl who was knitting moved over so I could sit down. "I'm Peggy Young," she said, "I mean I'm Betty Wragge." She pointed out the others, mostly forgetting to use their real names.

There wasn't time for more talk now. They rehearse for an hour before the morning broadcast at 10:30. At least it is called a rehearsal, but it was unlike any rehearsal I've ever seen. Of course, lines had to be cut to fit into the fifteen minutes, but no one had to be told how to act, because they weren't acting.

That brings us to another part of this story. During rehearsal and broadcast, naturally, there was no chance to find out about this family, except by watching. When it was over they all rushed out for coffee downstairs. If I'd known that I'd have tagged along, but I didn't know it, so I raced after Ed Wolfe. He had another rehearsal immediately, so he couldn't stop to talk to me. "Come on," he said and pushed me into an elevator. "What do you want to know?"

"Everything," I answered weakly.

"Ask questions," he said. The elevator shot down to the third floor before I could think of one. There were so many to ask. What I did manage to find out was the phone number of Elaine Sterne Carrington, who writes the story. I had found out by then that she wasn't some two-faced villainess who had "stolen" Red Davis' family for this program. She's written "Red Adams," "Red Davis," and "Pepper Young's Family" . . . every word of every program.

"Come right over," she said. From her voice you knew she'd be nice.

She talked about "her family" . . . and a little about herself . . . about the family parties each Christmas in the studio, and birthday surprises; about the one year that the family was slightly changed when Burgess Meredith played Red Davis and how wonderful it was for one of "her boys" to become so successful. She talked, too, about the realness of the family. How in one program Mrs. Young was supposed to collapse with appendicitis. Before Marion Barney (Mrs. Young) could leave the studio a woman had phoned and said: "Oh, Mrs. Young, don't hesitate a minute. Have it out. Have you got a good doctor?"

THINGS like that are real triumphs to Mrs. Carrington. About five years ago she decided radio was terrible. So, being a forthright person and a successful fiction writer, she stalked into the continuity department of NBC and told them so. "There isn't an honest, real program on the air," she said to an astonished continuity man, and plunked down on his desk her one-act play, "Five Minutes From the Station," which Henry Hull and Edna Hibbard had made famous in vaudeville.

"I didn't expect a thing from it," Mrs. Carrington explained. "But I was mad. You can imagine my surprise a few days later when I got a call to come over to NBC. They said they liked my dialog and asked what kind of program I had in mind. Good heavens, I hadn't any program in mind! I thought fast and said that I'd like a serial about an American family that didn't nag! They said that sounded fine, and asked me to write some installments."

She went home and wrote the first episodes of "Red Adams." The continuity department accepted them. The production department found actors and a director for them. It was a momentous occasion for all of them, but they hardly realized that on the morning they met. Ed Wolfe, director of many Broadway successes, was jittery. This was his first radio show, but never would he let these radio people know his qualms. Elaine Carrington pretended a nonchalance she didn't feel.

THE actors alone had no fears. They were old-timers . . . even down to little Betty Wragge, in her gawky, young teens. She'd been on the stage "for years." Jack Roseleigh, the father, had just finished a Broadway show as Ethel Barrymore's leading man. Marion Barney, the mother, had been weeping backstage when her native San Francisco was being destroyed by earthquake and fire in 1906. Curtis Arnall, "Red Adams" himself, was a well-known juvenile with umpteen Broadway shows to his credit.

Long ago they ceased to act on this program. Elaine Carrington knows them too well to make that necessary. The characters she writes about are no longer figments of her imagination. They are Jack and Marion, Curtis and Betty and those "friends of the family" who have been with them from the beginning, Johnny Kane as Nick, Jean Sothern as Edie, Eunice Howard as Linda. Things that really happen to them soon become part of the script.

Marion Barney lost her birth certificate in the San Francisco fire. She has to have affidavits and all sorts of things to prove her existence legally. It was not a coincidence that Mrs. Young was having similar trouble with a lost birth certificate when I watched the program. As Betty grew up . . . well, all the things that happen to young girls happened to Peggy. (And Marion Barney almost wept the first time she saw Betty in an evening dress. Her little girl had grown up!) Elaine Carrington doesn't have to worry about plot. "Her family" takes care of that for her. When they are worried or ill they come to her, because she understands them better than any real relative could.

It's a strange and confusing relationship that radio has created. I thought about it . . . rather enviously . . . as I rode back to NBC.

Their afternoon broadcast over WEAJ (the morning one is over WJZ) was about to start. In this vast third-floor studio (into which Ed Wolfe had disappeared that morning) they looked a little lost, like a family waiting in a railroad station. Another fifteen-minute program had to go on first. Ed Wolfe directs both and hasn't time to rush from one studio to another.

This afternoon Peggy had trouble in crying . . . or rather, in sniffing her recovery from tears. It went fine in the morning until Peggy's (I mean Betty Wragge's) pretty nose was genuinely red. Ed Wolfe and the engineer were in the control room. I watched from there, this time, and you should have seen me tiptoe past that mike when Ed came out after the show had started and beckoned to me! A mike is such a terrifying thing to us outsiders. How far can it really hear? Even inside the control room I find myself whispering. They sat there like demons, mimicking Betty's facial contortions. She saw them and shook her fist and went on crying . . . a bit hysterically, perhaps; she was very near laughter.

That is the kind of "parlor charades" charm this program has. There is a lot of kidding (it's one of Ed's ways of eliminating any stiffness), and the simplest kind of production.

That afternoon and the next morning I managed to talk to each one of them . . . and each talked only about "the family" and not about himself! That, believe me, is somepin. Perhaps, though, it's natural, because they're together so much.

A REAL program of real people was Elaine Carrington's ambition. She got that, all right. Jack Roseleigh and Marion Barney find it hard sometimes to realize that Pepper and Peggy aren't really their own children . . . and find it even harder to convince other people that they are not.

Marion told me of their appearance at a parent-teachers' meeting. After they had done a program, hands were raised in the audience and questions asked . . . not about radio, mind you, but about children.

"Mrs. Young," a smartly dressed matron spoke up, "what would you do if you were in my place?" She then told what her problem was.

Marion laughed, "But, my dear, I'm not Mrs. Young. I'm just an actress. I am married, but I have no children."

The woman wasn't to be put off so easily. "I know that, of course, but as Mrs. Young, what would you do?"

Marion Barney turned to me: "What could I say? I tried to explain, but you could see she wasn't believing a word I said. I just couldn't tell her that, 'as Mrs. Young,' I settled no problems at all. That Elaine Sterne Carrington did all that for us."

Pepper Young's Family may be heard Monday through Friday over an NBC network at 3 p.m. EST (2 CST; 1 MST; 12 noon PST).

Still in her twenties, Rose Bampton has sung leading roles with the Philadelphia Grand Opera Company and appeared with the Philadelphia Orchestra under the direction of Leopold Stokowski, at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, and at the Bethlehem Bach Festival. A hit in London, Vienna and Munich, a sensation at the Hollywood Bowl, concert, opera and radio are happy to claim her as their own. Hence it is all the more important that she should be—as she is—an All-American product. She has had no foreign teachers. Her name is still good, plain "Rose," rather than "Rosita."

If you want to sing, she can be an inspiration to you. No foreign schools! No huge sums of money! She did it—and you can!—Ed.

I AM twenty-six years old. That means that I am still close enough to my years of longing and discouragement and hope and struggle to know that there are two kinds of successes. One is that of the person who succeeds and forgets. The other is that of the person who succeeds and—remembers.

I remember. I remember there was a day not long ago when I was just one more American girl who wanted to sing and was told that she didn't have a chance. I remember what a kindly word, a bit of encouragement and, above all, a little guidance would have meant to me then. And so my heart is full of gratitude at the thought that I may be able to help some other girl—you, perhaps—by telling some of the things I have learned. If you want to sing, you must learn the ropes. I will try to teach you what I have learned about them, or, at any rate, about those I have found in my own path.

I am afraid as I go along I will tell you the story of my life at the same time; but if you are bored with life stories, please forgive me, for it will be necessary for me to sketch in my background. I think you will find my life to have been much like your own life. And I hope it will prove encouraging to you that mine has not been unusual. Now, to begin—scream at the top of my lungs, saying that I was a prima donna. Where I had ever heard the word, I can't imagine; I know I'd never heard any opera.

When I was about seven years old we had a flood in Ohio—much like the one there this year. My father's plant was washed away. He lost everything. He had to look for a job, and he found it with a steel company at Massillon, Ohio. We moved there, and it was shortly after we moved that I heard my first concert. I tell this because it is usually true of artists that they get their first stimulation toward their life work through imitation. Probably your first desire to sing came to you when you heard someone else singing. You wanted "to be like her," or him, as the case may have been. It was the same with me. I think it must be so with all of us, no matter what we do, or how, or when, or where we do it. Always, and whether we know it or not, our lives must be patterned after someone else's.

ALMA GLUCK was the artist. She sang in a huge auditorium thirty miles from Massillon, and my mother took my brother and me to the concert because I was taking piano lessons and

"NO career," said Rose's parents. But she grew up, won world fame!

BY ROSE BAMPTON

An All-American Singer's Life Story

I was born in a city which was neither more nor less musical than your own home town—Cleveland, Ohio. I can't recall what my father was doing at the time. My mother played the piano, and I can remember her singing me lullabies. Probably that was my first experience with music. It was yours too, I imagine. I was still very small when we moved to Cincinnati. My father went into business for himself there, manufacturing dry-cell batteries, and for the first time our family finances were in good condition. We had a governess, and I took elocution and dancing lessons. I did all the little, normal things that make life—outwardly, at least—a formalized, standard pattern for the little boys and girls in moderately well-to-do American families.

As a child in Cleveland and Cincinnati, I am told, I used to stand on a footstool at the age of four and he was taking violin lessons, and she thought we were old enough to hear some real music. I don't think I'll ever forget that first, heart-choking moment when Miss Gluck stepped out on the stage. She sang "Little Gray Home in the West," and I thought it was the loveliest thing I had ever heard. I suppose she sang a dozen other songs, but "Little Gray Home in the West" was the one that talked to me.

But there was no thought that I should have a career. Perhaps your family isn't the kind that believes in careers. Neither was mine. My mother had studied piano just as she had learned to sew the traditional fine seam, but that was because a little knowledge of music went with a refined education in those days. It was a social gift. As for a career—well, that was something nice girls just didn't do. It was practically as bad as going on the stage, and ladies simply didn't go on the stage in that day and age!

In fact, ladies didn't do much of anything! They stayed at home, and behaved themselves, and left the world to the men—who ran it pretty much as they pleased. "Worldly," in fact, was almost a naughty word!

But nevertheless, because my mother really did love music, I grew up in a fairly musical atmosphere. There is one place that the Europeans do have the edge on us. There is music in every European household. Mama plays the piano, and Papa plays the trombone, and all the kids play violins and cellos and cornets and flutes, and they get together in the living-room after supper and tootle away for dear life. You can grow up in a home which isn't like that and still become a singer, true. But it is an advantage, just the same. In a home like that you absorb a lot of knowledge which otherwise you will have to learn out of books. It develops taste, a background which it takes a long time to develop if you do not have such unconscious schooling from childhood. A person must have good influences around him to be able to believe in art and produce something fine—just as another person, raised in an environment of dirt, thievery and drunkenness, is bound to have some of that atmosphere influence his whole life.

Another thing we do not realize in America is that the artistic impulse is such a sensitive thing that misunderstanding or cruelty will kill it, like acid poured on a flower. There is one thing that happened at this time that stands out in my memory. Our teacher gave a recital, and my brother and I played. It was our first public appearance. The teacher rented a room at the City Hall, and all of us young hopefuls appeared in our best bibs and tuckers. The fond parents were out in front. When it came our turn, my brother played his violin and I accompanied him. We were getting along very well, when suddenly he forgot. He simply came over to the piano and I pointed out the place in the music and he went on. It was a small thing, but my father met us as we came off the stage and gave us a terrific scolding. We ought to be ashamed of ourselves, he said; we oughtn't to try to do anything unless we could do it perfectly. We both left the hall in tears. My father had the best of intentions. He was hurt because his children hadn't played perfectly, and he hoped the scolding would help us in the future.

But the result was that the scolding was the turning-point in my brother's career as a violinist. Whether he would ever have made anything of it, if he hadn't been scolded, any more than I should have made of the piano,

I shall never know, because he never played again.

I have often wondered, since that day, how many great musicians, how many great artists, have been lost to the world because of an unnecessary scolding, a harsh word at the wrong time, the unwitting refusal of encouragement when it was most needed. I suspect the number is unpleasantly large.

WHAT I am trying to say to you is this: From now on, you will find that my story is largely one of shocks, disappointments and failures. That is true of the life of every singer. And, because you are an artist, a sensitive person, blows will strike you all the harder because you feel them more intensely. There are two ways for you to react to these blows which Fate will deal you. One, you can let them destroy you. Two, sensitive though you are, you can bite your lip grimly and say, "I will learn from them!" I do know that the incident of my brother's scolding affected me in such a way that, ever since that time, anything I do has to be perfect. It taught me that I must let nothing shake me; that I must be above and apart from anything personal. Today, if I saw someone make a face at me from the audience while I was singing, I shouldn't let it bother me in the least.

That is your first lesson. Learn it thoroughly, learn it well. It is the most important single thing an artist must know. For no matter in what direction an artistic career is pointed, it cannot succeed until the artist has learned to stand apart, as it were, and see himself and his work objectively, impartially.

That thought may be at variance with your own established ideas on the subject. You may point to many of the great geniuses the world has known, men—and women—who appeared to be so wrapped up in their work that it was hard to believe that they ever thought of anything else, or that they could possibly live without it: Chopin, Mozart, Sarah Bernhardt.

And there lies the secret! Genius thinks first of the things that are to be done, and of self only second. And these are two entirely separate matters. So it must be with all artists, great or small.

If you want to sing, I know you are impatient for me to get on to practical advice, but there are a couple of other disappointments I suffered as a youngster which I want to tell you about, because you must have suffered disappointments like them. My second year in high school at Massillon, some company or other held a national beauty contest. You know what high school girls are for fads. The contest was all that the girls in our school could talk about. All of my friends were having their pictures taken and sending them in. (We must have made the local photographer happy!) One afternoon I went upstairs to my mother's room and borrowed the "rats" she still wore in her hair. I stuck them in my hair a la Gibson Girl and floated gracefully, suavely downstairs, looking—so I thought—at least thirty-four. My father took one horrified look!

"Rose," he said, "go upstairs at once and make yourself presentable for dinner!"

But I begged and begged, and at last he and Mother agreed to let me have my picture taken, although they told me I wasn't to submit it in the contest under any circumstances. Once I had the picture, though, I begged some more and wore them down until they finally told me I might send it in.

To me, that was the end of the matter. I felt that if only I could enter the contest, I'd be sure to win!

For the next few weeks I walked on the clouds. I dreamed of waking up and seeing the newspaper full of headlines about "Rose Bampton, the Most Beautiful Girl in America." You can guess what happened. I didn't win. I wasn't even mentioned. It seems funny to me now, but then I thought my life was over. For the first time I realized that I wasn't beautiful, wasn't even pretty. If I was ever to get anywhere I wouldn't get there on my looks, that was certain.

To any girl, that is a hard blow to take. For after all, beauty is important to women—even to little women. When a girl is very young, the importance of beauty hasn't yet been impressed on her mind; and when she's mature, there are other things to take its place.

They say it never rains but it pours. I was still quivering from the realization that I wasn't the Most Beautiful Girl in America when the dramatics club and the music club at our high school put on a play and an operetta. All of the girls were trying out for those, too, so little Rose put her head into the noose again.

DETERMINED, full of high hopes once more, I tried out for both. Not just the dramatic club; not just the music club—no, I had to try both.

And once again, of course, inevitably, my only reward was failure—two more glaring failures to add to a list that was looming large, out of all true proportion, in my mind.

The dramatics club said I was so tall that, if I wanted to be in the play, I would have to put on trousers and play the part of a man. There simply wasn't a feminine part I could play—and, the girls intimated, with that careless cruelty so typical of their age—there probably never would be!

The music club—I think the operetta was "The Bells of Beaujolais"—said if I wanted to sing I would have to sing in the chorus. And even that concession was granted without grace. The impression was obvious: I could certainly not be expected to aid the singing society, but if I were in the back row of the chorus, at least I couldn't hurt it much!

If you are still young enough to remember your own school days, you know about how I felt. Later, when we grow up, the discouragements and disheartening adventures of our teens fade away into insignificance, but at the time they spell heartbreak. I think I was really ready to commit suicide. I wasn't pretty—nearly six feet tall, I was so anything-but-girlish that men's parts were the only parts I could play on the stage—and, finally, my voice was so atrocious or, worse still, so utterly mediocre that if I wanted to sing I must sing in the chorus.

Was there anything I was good for? I asked myself. And the answer was all too plain. It was, "No. Nothing."

A tall, thin, gawky girl realized she was not pretty, couldn't act, couldn't sing. She never suspected that a great voice lay hidden within her. Read how Rose Bampton found herself, in the second installment of this inspiring story, next week in RADIO GUIDE!

Rose was told she'd have to act a man's part in the school play, and sing in the operetta chorus!

BUT NOW SHE TELLS YOU THE SECRETS BY WHICH SHE WON GLORY!

CARLETON SMITH

RICHARD STRAUSS is certainly one of the most, if not the most, renowned of living composers. His career extends back many decades. Even before the turn of the last century, his name was famous in concert halls. Since then he has added many operas and tone-poems.

To him, more than to any composer since the death of Richard Wagner, we can credit the change in operatic form. He is the last great minstrel of German lieder, whose touching and exquisite melodies will never die. He is certainly the most accomplished master of the tone-poem, which he developed to its present state by a succession of brilliant works ranging from "Till Eulenspiegel" and "Don Juan" to "Death and Transfiguration" and "Also Sprach Zarathustra."

The Straussian meteor flashed across the sky with such brilliance that, for a time, it appeared he might outshine Wagner. The daring Richard II described physical and psychical phenomena other composers would have thought it impossible to set to music. Strauss took the Muse to the bowels of the earth and escorted her into the far corners of the nether regions. He clothed his heroines and heroes in ravishing dress that has not now, after thirty years, lost its glamor or gone out of fashion.

Strauss has had his name in headlines in practically every newspaper in the world. It is known in some forty languages. When Mary Garden, some years ago, started removing Salome's seven veils, one by one, the Chicago police rebelled and stopped the show. The biblical opera was forbidden at the Metropolitan before it reached public view. All this kept Richard before the public.

His name is now so familiar that uninitiated listeners think him dead. They put him along with Beethoven, Mozart, Haydn and Brahms and the other masters of legendary fame.

Yet, with this staggering record of accomplishments behind him, opinion about the work of Strauss is divided. In the early days, when he was less well known, it was the fashion in certain circles to say: "When I want Richard, I'll take Wagner. When I want Strauss, it'll be Johann." Some people still confuse Richard Strauss with the waltz king.

Only three years ago that great English critic, Ernest Newman, named for me the four greatest living composers. Strauss was not one of them, and when I inquired why, he replied: "Oh! Strauss? He died at the age of forty." It certainly is true that the last operas, "Arabella" and "The Silent Woman," cannot compare with the "Rosenkavalier," for example. The great man's talent seems to have lost its early vitality and vigor. It is not, however, easy to pass judgment on his latest works, as they are never performed in our country.

"I wouldn't bother going to see the old fellow," said Mr. Newman last fall as I started out for Garmisch-Partenkirchen. "I don't believe he likes music." He referred also to the penuriousness of Mr. Strauss and his grumpy, obnoxious manner. Strauss is probably the richest living composer. From the beginning he drove a hard bargain and insisted on full pay for every performance of his works. He was popular. Well, people could pay for it! No one can blame him for that.

He was more cordial than I had expected and exhibited more response than usual to my prodding. Of all his remarks, none were more provocative than those about program music. As might be expected, he said: "It is foolish to speak of writing abstract music. Such music doesn't exist, and, if it does, it isn't any good. No great composition was ever written that does not tell a story or have some basic elemental program. Take the symphonies of Beethoven, the masses of Bach . . . take any great work you want to name: it tells a story.

"I find I am never stimulated to write my best music unless I have some program in mind, some external image or phenomena. I am sure it is the same with other composers."

Be that as it may, Strauss' work certainly shows that he is honest with himself. Even his symphonies are programmatic, though that word must be used in its largest sense. If you don't agree, think up your arguments and let's have them.

Listen Sunday to the New York Philharmonic-Symphony's concert version of "Elektra," conducted by Artur Rodzinski. The opera, first performed 28 years ago in Dresden (where all Strauss operas are baptized), is an ancient Greek tragedy leading to dire consequences. The book is by Hugo Hofmannstahl and the music matches the horrors of accumulated murder climaxed by matricide. It is anything but an agreeable subject for contemplation of Palm Sunday, but Mr. Rodzinski has carefully selected the excerpts we are to hear and it may be bearable.

Rosa Pauly, soprano of the Vienna State Opera, has made the trip across the Atlantic merely to sing three performances of the title role in New York. Frederick Jagel, Charlotte Boerner, and Albert Mahler are also in the cast.

Apropos of the early rehearsals of "Elektra," a famous story is told about Madame Schumann-Heink, who sang the cruel and taxing role of Klytemnestra. Mr. Strauss, conducting, shouted at the Elektra, who was at the back of the stage, and asked her to be more vengeful, more cruel and horrible in her attitude on the stage. The singer could not understand, and Schumann-Heink, who was near the front, relayed the maestro's message. "He's saying," she said, "to be more like a colleague."

Holy Week brings us the customary annual religious offerings. If you want to renew your acquaintance with seldom broadcast masterpieces, glance through the program details in this issue. Practically, every hour is filled with works relating to the Passion and the Crucifixion. Bach-lovers will not miss the four special programs planned for them: the Passion of Our Lord According to St. John will be sung by the Schola Cantorum on Palm Sunday evening; the Westminster Choir will inaugurate its series of six Bach afternoons on Columbia, Thursday afternoon at 4 p.m. EST (3 CST; 2 MST; 1 PST); the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Serge Koussevitzky conducting, will present excerpts from the "St. Matthew" Passion on Thursday evening and Good Friday afternoon; and the Chicago Symphonic Hour, Roy Shield conducting, will give a condensed version of the same work, Good Friday evening.

It makes quite a difference when a conductor like Fritz Reiner takes hold of an orchestra. Did you notice the spectacular improvement in the Sunday Evening Hour orchestra these last two weeks. It will be good news to discriminating listeners that Eugene Ormandy is taking over this program for its final eight weeks, that is, beginning with the broadcast of April 25.

If you have wondered what has happened to the renowned Stokowski, mark down that he has returned to his old podium for a few weeks practicing and then he will return to Hollywood. On the lot out there a conservatory has been erected for him. Offices, dressing-room and study are included in the bungalow in addition to a special recording device for constant use in selecting the vocal and instrumental music for his forthcoming film, "100 Men and a Girl," in which he will be co-featured with Deanna Durbin.

In the hands of the poetic genius, Goethe, the legends which collected about Doctor Faustus became a source of rich and splendid imagery.

In the first scene, the bargain between Faust and Mephistopheles is made. Faust is found in an apartment in a medieval German house. The dying flame of a single lamp flickers over the walls to show his student's paraphernalia.

Faust is tired. He is discouraged. Brilliantly clad in red, Mephistopheles appears. He is rather a gay, cynical fellow who makes Faust a proposition.

In return for youth and its lightheartedness and delights, all Mephistopheles asks of Faust is his soul! When Faust hesitates, the demon allows him a vision of Marguerite.

The wavering Faust is won. He signs the agreement in letters of fire, drinks the magic potion which is to bring back his lost youth. With a song on his lips, his new-found friend's hand on his shoulder, he starts in search of youthful adventure.

As Act II opens, we are taken to the public square of a German town. Valentine, one of the merry-makers, knows that, since soldiers are leaving that night, he too must leave. He bids his sister, Marguerite, farewell, warns her against danger. As Wagner is singing a somewhat coarse song about a rat, Mephistopheles pushes his way through the crowd, offers to sing a better song. He amuses the crowd. Then Mephistopheles disappears, leaving Faust to follow his own inclinations.

Faust meets Marguerite, makes an impression upon her. She refuses to let him take her home, but she is impressed with the young-old stranger.

Scene III takes place in Marguerite's garden. Valentine has left Siebel, who adores her, to watch over her. When he leaves, Faust and Mephistopheles appear from behind a bush. Faust is in love with Marguerite, Mephistopheles is in high spirits.

They hide as the innocent, virginal Marguerite enters the garden. She seats herself at her spinning wheel, tries to spin, but her thoughts are too full of the romantic stranger. She sees the flowers Siebel has left, then her attention is drawn to the box of jewels. Martha joins Marguerite, to talk about the jewels.

Martha forgets the jewels when a stranger dressed in red appears to inform her of the death of her husband. He behaves so nicely that she forgets her dead husband, too—and becomes interested in the stranger. While Mephistopheles occupies Martha's attention, Faust busies himself with Marguerite.

Suddenly, Marguerite realizes it has grown late. Promising Faust to meet him on the morrow, Marguerite leaves. Faust is filled with blind, adoring, youthful passion.

Mephistopheles persuades Faust to wait in the garden. His faith in the night is rewarded. Marguerite opens her window and sings her happiness. Faust rushes to her. She faints in his arms, to Mephistopheles' delight.

A year and a half has passed as the fourth scene opens. Marguerite has been deserted by Faust. Hers is the old story. She is shunned by all except the faithful Siebel.

Valentine, Marguerite's brother, returns with his troops. He enters his sister's house.

Faust and Mephistopheles appear. Faust is grief-stricken; Mephistopheles is delighted at the way in which things have turned out.

In the combat which follows, Valentine is mortally wounded. He dies, cursing his sister.

Deserted and scorned by all, Marguerite goes to a cathedral for solace.

As the fifth scene opens, Marguerite is in prison. She has killed her child.

Faust, led by his master, Mephistopheles, has entered her cell. She is singing of her past, of their love. Faust tries to get her to flee with him, but she cannot understand.

Mephistopheles brings her back, for a moment, to the world of reality. But even as she returns to understanding, hoofbeats of the horses that are to bear the demon and Faust to the nether regions are heard approaching.

As Marguerite sings a hymn, heavenly voices chant. The heavens open and a company of angels gathers her in their arms.

CHICAGO.—Mikeman Dick Wells, heard on the "Northerners," "Fireside Theater" and many network programs, is in Michael Reese Hospital recovering from serious injuries sustained recently when his roadster crashed into a traffic safety island to avoid hitting another car. Wells, just off crutches from a bad horse-fall, this time suffered an amputated finger, a cut lower lip and injured jaw, a brain concussion and a broken collar-bone . . . Fibber McGee and Molly will follow Burns and Allen—starting April 12—a half-hour later on the same network if you tune in on the eastern or midwestern version, but the gap will be two hours between the West Coast rebroadcast versions of the two laugh-provokers . . . NBC Jamboree's Optimistress Sylvia Clark left the Windy City last week for a two-week vacation in Atlantic City and New York. While there, movie shorts and a possible Vallee turn are up for discussion . . . Will beer go on the networks? An unconfirmed tip is that a Milwaukee brewery has signed a New York orchestra for a thirty-minute show to start in May . . . Lulu Belle and Scotty are authoring a book of "Home Folks Songs" for sale April 1, no foolin'. Many of the tunes are previously unpublished mountain songs smoked out in South Carolina last Summer by the couple.

Clap hands for NBC! The net is breaking the monotony of those late dance orchestras by slipping in a few variety acts and symphonies. Plums, Messrs. Strotz and Royal, are on the way for adding this entertainment for persons who may not be in the mood to dance!

Romance Corner: Love recognizes no musical styles! While Louise and Donna King are respectively engaged to Alvino Rey and Charlie Goodman of the Heidt band, Horace's Alyce King accepts the company of Harry Johnson, trumpeter for Ozzie Nelson, and Yvonne likes the things that Ozzie's press agent, Jack Egan, says.

The movie producers are miffed no end over radio airing too many of their new picture plots . . . and after hearing most of the plots, so am I!

More Dog Tales: Contented Hour's Vivian Della Chiesa wishes her dog "Flash" would appreciate her more. When she sings, he hides under the piano—but he also does that when anyone else sings . . . Dog-lemma! A fan recently sent a Scotch terrier to the Vagabonds, NBC male quartet, so to keep peace, the dog stays a week at the home of each of the four in turn . . . Vivian ("Backstage Wife") Fridell is having a bad case of puppy insomnia. Her gift cocker spaniel insists upon sleeping beside her bed—but every hour the pooch whines and Vivian has to pat it back to sleep.

Something new—the Manuel and Williamson harpsichord ensemble. Tune it in Wednesdays on the NBC-Blue . . . Also worth an audition, Betty Olsen, newcomer with The Escorts of the same net. Betty's a plumful trick with e-nun-ci-a-tion just like that!

Out of the Hollywoods: National Barn Dance's 19-year-old blond Sally Foster is being lured, 'tis said, by three motion picture studios . . . Cliff Arquette, Luke Ferguson of "Welcome Valley," who went west and became Grandpa Sneed on the Astaire hour, as a result of his recent work has been signed to play the part of Bob Burns' grandpap in Paramount's "Mountain Music" . . . Since Lum 'n' Abner mentioned building a mythical poorhouse, hundreds of letters of advice on building have poured in—and even one complete set of plans for an ideal institution.

Absent-minded Professor (Bruce Kamman) Kaltenmeyer is doing his Fall bulb planting late. In cleaning out his office the other day, he found the package of bulbs he intended to set months ago in the garden of his new home.

Podium Pothooks: Ben Bernie replaced by Joe Reichman at Los Angeles' Cocoanut Grove . . . Abe Lyman replaced by Leon Belasco at the Hotel New Yorker . . . Ted and Eleanor Weems sprung a new one last week by entertaining their program mates with a spiced shrimp party. The shrimp were made according to a secret recipe known only to the wives of the members of the band, but involving the cooking of potatoes and onions with the shrimp. It is served with strong spices . . . Jack Jenney, the batoneer and trombone player, says that his instrument has more nicknames than any other—a total of seventeen, in fact! Among them are slip-horn, push-pull, wah-wah, pooshemout and dragger.

Among this week's wearers of the green at NBC in Chicago were Don McNeill, Pat (Uncle Ezra) Barrett, Marian and Jim Jordan, Producer Bucky Harris, Harvey Hays, Mercedes McCambridge (whose twenty-first birthday St. Patrick's Day was), Bernardine (Sade) Flynn, Hugh Studebaker, Roy Shield, Pauline and Evelyn Morin, Bob (King's Jesters) Casey, and Don ("Today's Children") O'Malley—the only one of the lot who was born in Ireland!

Dramatically Speaking: The weather guides Joan Blaine in her choice of perfume for the day. On rainy days, she uses "Tweed," on cold days gardenia, and when it's warm she prefers carnation . . . Elizabeth Reller wants you to know her hereafter as Betty—after her title role in "Betty and Bob." The abbreviation was a bad luck antidote the other day when, after breaking a mirror, she auditioned for a new program and won the role!

THIS is the time of the year the radio schedules are juggled. Some programs shift time, some networks and then again some programs change their stars. In the latter classifications we note that Floyd Gibbons will leave the "Speed Show" the end of this month and the new set-up will include Grace Moore with the Vincent Lopez orchestra remaining.

The Sunday night Motors concerts shift from the NBC-Red network to the Blue network on April 4 and will be heard two hours earlier than usual, which means that it will compete for listeners with the "Do You Want To Be An Actor?" program . . . Rumor has it that the "Chateau" airing now heard on Saturday nights, may move into the spot to be vacated by the motor concern mentioned above.

Victor Moore and Helen Broderick leave NBC and shift over to the CBS net starting April 4, taking over the time now occupied by Nelson Eddy, who leaves the air after next Sunday's (March 21) broadcast. This means that Helen and Victor will do two broadcasts that week within three days—and movie work on the side!

The Warden Lawes series expires period which ends this month. Instead of a new show starting in September with Nelson Eddy at its helm, such a show may find itself in the Sunday night spot before hot weather comes.

Bob Ripley goes off the Bakers broadcast the latter part of June and will not return to this program in the Fall. He'll be back on the air, however, for another sponsor.

Tony Martin is likely to replace Fred MacMurray on the Hollywood Hotel show any week now . . . When Burns and Allen shift to NBC, Nick Foran will be the new vocalist in place of Tony Martin . . . Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt returns to the air for a new series some time next month. The talks will be informal discussions of Mrs. Roosevelt's interests and comments on current subjects of news interest. Her salary will be paid to a charitable organization.

When the Metropolitan Opera broadcasts from Boston on April 3 and 10, and from Cleveland on the 17th, it will be heard on the NBC-Red network instead of the Blue. "Rheingold" by Wagner will be heard on April 3, "Hansel and Gretel" and "Cavalleria Rusticana" the following week, and on the 17th, "Carmen" will be aired.

The first General Mills show to originate from the sound-stages of the Hollywood movie studios will come from Twentieth Century-Fox. Don Ameche will be one of the first celebs to appear on the program.

Although Milton Berle didn't want it publicized, the truth of the matter is that he DID pay the expenses of his troupe to California. He felt that since he had to go out there to make a picture, it was no more than fair that he pay for the expense of moving his troupe for the air show.

Don Wilson hated to leave Hollywood for New York, and gave as his reason the wonderful climate he had to leave behind. It really doesn't matter so much to Don, as far as that goes, but we found out that he is losing quite a bit of money on programs he had to give up in order to be able to go to New York for the Jack Benny show. Benny, you know, has first call on the genial mikeman's announcing services.

GRACE MOORE ON 'SPEED SHOW'

Crooks, Jepson To Star In 'Faust'

Opera enthusiasts and admirers of Richard Crooks and Helen Jepson are looking forward to Saturday when these two radio favorites will sing the leading roles in the Metropolitan's presentation of Gounod's "Faust," to be heard over NBC.

This well-known story of the aged and weary scholar who sells his soul for youth, and the innocent girl who is his victim, lends itself especially to the talents of Crooks and Jepson. Ezio Pinza will play Mephistopheles.

Because of the inherent popularity of Gounod's masterful work, as well as the popularity of the air favorites who will star in it, this performance is expected to prove one of the most widely enjoyed of NBC's present operatic air series.

Richard Crooks, who began his career as a church soloist, grew steadily in favor after 1922 when he appeared nine times with the New York Philharmonic Symphony. When he returned from triumphant concert tours and operatic work in Germany to make his Metropolitan debut three years ago, he was ready for leading roles.

Oddly enough, Helen Jepson also began her career in a church choir. She made early radio appearances over WTAM in Cleveland. She was graduated from the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia and made her operatic debut with the Philadelphia opera. She was the first important soprano to reach the stage of the Metropolitan through the medium of radio.

In addition to Richard Crooks as "Faust," Miss Jepson as "Marguerite," and Ezio Pinza as "Mephistopheles," Richard Bonelli, Wilfred Engelman, Helen Olheim, and Ina Bouskaya will be heard in supporting roles. Wilfred Pelletier will conduct.

Milton Cross, dean of NBC announcers, and Marcia Davenport, opera commentator, will again be at the microphone to interpret the music and relate the opera's story.

'Met' Tenor Guest For 'Hammerstein's'

Opera may not be popular with Americans, but if it doesn't become popular very soon, it won't be because American opera stars haven't tried!

Until someone from the Metropolitan has appeared, a radio program today isn't counted in the swim of things.

Hammerstein's Music Hall will get on the band-wagon Tuesday, March 23, when Thomas Chalmers, "Met" tenor, comes as a guest star.

Illiana, European singing sensation, will also appear.

Succeeds Floyd Gibbons On April 3

Grace Moore, one of America's great singing stars of opera, screen and radio, will be on Floyd Gibbons' Speed Show, aired over CBS, as guest artist Saturday, March 20.

Miss Moore will appear on the Speed Show again on Saturday, March 27, as a guest star.

And when the curtain rises on the program Saturday, April 3, standing before the microphone will be Miss Grace Moore! But this time, she will appear not as a guest but as mistress of ceremonies and first ranking star on her own program. On that date, Floyd Gibbons, adventurer and journalist who throughout an exceedingly busy life has never been content to stay long in one place, will leave the Speed Show and Grace Moore will take over the program.

It will be a case of adventurer replacing adventurer, for Grace Moore and Gibbons have both led extraordinarily colorful and romantic lives. Gibbons, famous for his inability to stay away from the world's most dangerous places, has had a spectacular career, but there are those who will argue that Grace Moore's rise from a humble home in the Tennessee hills to world-wide fame is as breath-taking as the famous war correspondent's legendary life.

The nature of changes in the program when Miss Moore takes over have not been decided.

Virginia Verrill, Ed Wynn In Operetta!

Virginia Verrill, pretty blues singer who started on the road to fame by singing offstage while Hollywood stars were making pretty faces before the camera, will come to Ed Wynn's show as a guest star Saturday, March 20.

Miss Verrill, who left Hollywood two years ago to go on the air, will sing two current songs in the distinctive blues style that no one has ever successfully copied: "Sweet Is The Word," from Bing Crosby's new picture, "Waikiki Wedding," and the perennial favorite, "Stomping at the Savoy."

In keeping with his boast, "I can do anything my guest stars can do," Wynn has announced he'll co-star with Miss Verrill in an original romantic operetta, "Romeo Meets Juliet." Not only will Wynn tell the story of the opera, but he'll sing a love aria—in swing time—as a duet with his guest. Dispensing with Don Voorhees' orchestra for the performance, Wynn will play the accompaniment himself.

Holy Week to Bring Services, Music to the Air

Nearly a score of special programs will be originated by the leading networks and key stations throughout the country in observance of Holy Week, from Palm Sunday, March 21, through Easter Sunday, March 28.

Religious broadcasts which will be supplemented by other airings in keeping with the season will include the following:

Bach's oratorio, "St. John's Passion," by the Schola Cantorum of New York; a daily program titled "Holy Week Vespers," bringing church speakers and organ music by Lowell Patton; the Paulist Choristers in a presentation of "Behold the Man"; Brahms' "Requiem" by the NBC Symphony Orchestra and 80 voices from the St. Thomas Men and Boys Choir, the Juilliard School of Music and the Aeolian Choir of Trenton, New Jersey; a special Good Friday program with the Right Reverend Fulton J. Sheen and the Paulist Choristers, and Choral Easter music by the St. Francis Seminary Choir. All of these programs will be aired over NBC wires throughout Holy Week.

On Columbia's schedule for the week we find programs by St. Gregory's Church Choir of Brooklyn; the Broad Street Presbyterian Choir and Orchestra; the Moreau Seminary Choir of Notre Dame; Church of the Heavenly Rest Choir; Beethoven's "Mount of Olives" by the Cornell Music Department, and Easter music by the Brooklyn Lutheran Choir.

As the climax of its Holy Week services, NBC will broadcast a special program of sacred music and an Easter sermon over its Blue network, and to Oslo, Norway, over W3XAL via short-wave on Easter Sunday.

Oakie Guests Will Be John Boles, Frank Fay

John Boles, movie singing star, and Frank Fay, veteran entertainer of vaudeville, screen and radio, will co-guest on Jack Oakie's College March 23.

Boles, who scored his first big success in the movie version of "Rio Rita," will probably be persuaded to offer the college lads and lassies a singing lesson, and Fay, a fast and resourceful ad-libber, will trade gags with Prexie Oakie.

Famous Notre Dame Choir to Broadcast

Notre Dame University, as has often been remarked before, is justly famous for other things than football teams.

Not the least praiseworthy of Notre Dame institutions is the great Moreau Choir, composed of theological students who specialize in the ancient Gregorian chants, which will offer a special broadcast Saturday, March 27.

Although long regarded as an outstanding Notre Dame institution, the Moreau Choir did not achieve wide recognition until it was heard at the funeral of Knute Rockne.

English Pianists First Played Together Because They Were Lonely When Apart!

Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson, whose decision that they both wanted careers, but didn't want to be separated by them, resulted in their becoming one of the finest two-piano teams in the world, will be featured on the Ford Sunday Evening Hour March 21.

Professional as well as domestic partners, Mr. and Mrs. Robertson never so much as glance at each other during their performances. But whether it's Bach or Bax, classicist or romanticist, the exact mood of the music is always achieved.

They were the first to attempt two-piano recitals in England, and in the genesis of their offering mere chance plays a prominent part.

"It all happened in London about ten years ago," says Ethel Bartlett. "We were both playing, and both fed up with being separated all the time: one away from home on tour, or both away at once and traveling in opposite directions.

"So we thought it would be an amusing novelty to give a joint concert. But our offering aroused so much enthusiasm that we decided to develop our two-piano idea. Then we could be together and still follow our music.

"Of course, we had to do plenty of research to uncover music written for two pianos, but we dug right in and discovered many works so old that they were really new. And Arnold Bax, Hubert Foss and others have since written music especially for two pianos."

This is the Robertsons' ninth American tour.

Bette Davis Stars On Hollywood Hotel Show

Bette Davis, dynamic blond screen star famous for her interpretations of "hard-boiled" modern roles, will present another one Friday, March 26, when she comes to Hollywood Hotel for a preview of Warner Brothers' "Marked Woman."

The first film Miss Davis has made for Warners since her recent trans-Atlantic battle, "Marked Woman," is a grim story from beginning to end, with Bette the leading figure among a group of dance hall hostesses who find themselves helpless under the crushing rule of a mob of gangsters.

Involved in a murder trial, Bette outwits the police, but is finally caught in the maze of her own plotting after her sister is killed by a racketeer. As the price for taking the stand to testify against the killer to insure his punishment for the crime, she finds herself marked down by society, deprived of love and a normal life.

"Of Human Bondage" was the picture which first revealed Bette Davis' exceptional talents. Since then she has scored a number of triumphs in so-called "unsympathetic" roles. One of her notable successes, however, came when she played a naive, unworldly young girl in "Petrified Forest."

Ethel Shutta, well-known singing star, will be Bernie's guest on March 30. Her appearance with George Olsen's musicians is appropriate. She's Mrs. George Olsen!

Berle To Welcome The Spring, Tra-la!

With a twinkle in his eye, somebody else's joke in his heart, and premeditated quips in his mind, Milton Berle will herald the coming of Spring on March 21—the first day of that particular season—from Hollywood.

Berle, Tommy Mack and Bert Gordon will do their very worst, no doubt, they say, in a triple portrayal—or betrayal—of the Three Graces of Spring.

Of course there will be the usual Community Sing, but it will be a bit lighter, "A bit Springy," in Berle's own words. At the moment, the script hasn't been written, but there will definitely be a program, script or no script.

Sunday, March 21
3 p.m. EST (2 CST) CBS

THIS is the bizarre adventure of a little man named Dreska Fiore—who was taken for a ride and didn't know it.

Dreska Fiore was a dignified little man of 50—plump and dark. It is on a Spring night in 1935, that we meet him in Philadelphia. He is walking stolidly across the intersection of Cambria and 22nd Streets. His head is up, his glance straight ahead.

And suddenly, without rhyme or reason, an old, big sedan sweeps around the corner and knocks Fiore down.

Sad—but not bizarre. Just one more knock-down among the thousands that take place each year. Just another disastrous accident in the course of a big city's day.

The big sedan traveled a few feet after hitting Fiore. Then it stopped with a howl of rackety old brakes.

Down 22nd Street, somebody shouted. In the darkness, running feet slapped on pavement. A small crowd grew. Excited voices babbled.

And out of the old sedan a heavy-shouldered Negro stepped. The dim lights shone on his frightened eyes, on his face, sweaty with anxiety. He walked around and looked down.

"You—you all right, boss?" he asked timidly.

Dreska Fiore, naturally, said nothing.

"Of course he ain't all right!" somebody yelled. "He's dead."

"No! No!" cried the Negro. "He ain't dead. I—I guess I better take him to a hospital."

His face working, the big man stooped, picked up plump Dreska Fiore as if he'd been a bag of feathers. Tenderly, he propped the limp figure in the front seat.

And then he ran around the car, jumped in behind the wheel, started the engine, and drove away.

"He didn't waste any time," somebody in the crowd remarked, "taking that fellow to a hospital."

"I wonder," said a man back in the shadows. "I wonder. Anyway, I got the number of that guy's car. I think I'll—"

AND so Dreska Fiore was started on his ride—the ride he didn't know anything about.

The driver turned off on a side street. He stole a glance to his right, just as the slanting rays of a street light fell on Fiore's face. The limp body was jiggling slightly with the motion of the car. The driver swallowed.

"Hey—hey, speak to me, boss," he said softly.

Fiore's body jiggled.

"I never meant to hurt you, boss. I don't never hurt nobody. You—you can't be hurt bad. Not real bad?"

Fiore bounced slightly as they went over an intersection.

"This ole bus—she only hit you a little tap, boss. That's right. Just a little tap. Say somethin'—oh-h-h-h!"

The car lurched dangerously as the driver yelled. For Fiore was sliding

VOICES in the NIGHT

FEAR WHISPERED,
"RUN!" BUT RA-DIO SAID "STOP!"

Frightened, the Negro whined, "I ain't no murderer! Don't shoot!"

gently to the left. Gently—then faster—his limp body slid towards the frightened driver.

"Straighten up, boss! Oh boss, for God's sake, straighten up. Say you're all right!"

Fiore straightened up because he was pushed up. But he didn't say a word. And the crazy ride continued.

"Boss, when you stepped out in front of me, I like to died. Ain't it funny how scared you kin get?" Again that frightened glance to the right—that frightened flash of white eyeballs, contrasted so strangely with the intimate, coaxing tone of the driver's soft voice.

It was gruesome. It was horrible—this strange ride through the night. With the man behind the wheel talking, talking, talking—knowing his words were not heard. Fearing—but refusing to acknowledge to himself his fear—that he was driving a corpse. Talking, talking, talking as he drove.

And Dreska Fiore's plump, stocky body sat there. Sat there and quivered when they drove over bumps.

"Talk back to me, boss! Please!"

Fiore jiggled.

"Gawdamitey, I guess you ain't ever gonna talk again. What's gonna happen to me? I guess I better—"

WHAT was in the fear-crazed Negro's mind? He didn't know himself! All he did know was that he somehow had to get away from the awful, blood-chilling specter bobbling on the automobile seat beside him. Gone was all thought of taking Fiore to a hospital. He wanted only to get away from him! And suddenly that was all there was in the man's mind—get rid of him! He didn't want to harm Fiore—he only wanted to get him out of sight, away, some place where the harried voice of conscience wouldn't shout so loud. And suddenly, an idea came to him.

Voices in the night. The voice of the badly frightened colored man driving that car—and a far more powerful, searching voice which even then was pushing out across Philadelphia to locate him.

"Calling all cars . . . Calling all cars . . ."

The voice of Philadelphia's police radio was speaking. North, south, east to the Delaware and west to the city limits and beyond, it was spreading an alarm.

Weaving in and out of the city's streets, back and forth, like lonely but deadly little shuttles on a mammoth loom, police cruisers started the search. The search that would not end until they had found their man!

For the skeptical stranger—the police did not reveal his name, for they never reveal the names of those who help them—that skeptical stranger who had "wondered," who had got the sedan's license number, had called the station at 22nd Street and Hunting Park Avenue.

"Calling all cars . . . all cars be on the lookout for a large sedan, Pennsylvania license number . . . driven by a Negro . . . carrying a dead or badly injured white man in the front seat . . ."

So ran the flash, detailing the accident. And in dozens of police cars, trained police eyes took up the search.

AND so it wasn't at all remarkable when Patrolmen Edward Simon and Herbert Hammell, out of all that cruising network of radio-joined cars, caught sight of the big car, speeding noisily at 17th Street and Greenwood.

Apparently unaware that he was being followed—probably half insane with fright—the sedan's driver swung from 17th to Somerset. Around corners he went until he came to 19th. In the middle of the block he stopped. Again he ran around the car, opened the door.

"C-come on, boss," he said. "I-I'm sorry!"

Shrinking, he was in the very act of removing the limp form of Fiore from the car. He didn't even notice the police car as it crept up behind him.

"So long. I can't do you no good. So long."

He was talking to Fiore when Simon and Hammell leaped out of their car, ran up with guns drawn.

"Hold it!" rapped Hammell. "Don't drop that man!"

But he did drop him.

"Don't shoot! I didn't mean to do it!"

THEY took him to the police station.

But first Hammell took Fiore to Temple University Hospital. He wasn't dead, as the Negro had so mortally feared. Physicians diagnosed his condition as serious, but not fatal. And oddly enough, his injuries had not been seriously aggravated by his wild ride through the Philadelphia streets!

In his cell, the colored man, booked as Henry Scott, 34, of Philadelphia, beamed when he heard this.

"I ain't no murderer!" he said.

No charge of murder faced Scott, but a miscellany of lesser counts, including assault and battery by automobile, hit-run, reckless driving, operating an automobile while intoxicated and failure to stop at the signal of an officer.

But Scott still beamed.

"I thought sure that little fellow was a dead man," he said. "He just sat up there on the seat and jiggled around, and he never said nothin'. I thought he was dead for sure. But he ain't. And I ain't no murderer!"

"But you might have been," said Officer Simon. "If it hadn't been for police radio helping us locate him so quickly, he might have died. It certainly isn't your fault that Dreska Fiore is still alive. The next time you knock anybody over with that big covered wagon of yours, you'd better not take so many detours on your way to the hospital. You're likely to detour yourself right into the Big House!"

"I thought he was dead," said Scott. "And—was I scared!"

Many Meals Fall Short On Vitamins

People Don't Know Whether They Are Getting Enough Vitamins—Until Ill Health Shows It.

But Add ONE FOOD to Your Diet EVERY DAY and You Can Be Sure of a Regular EXTRA Supply of These 4 Vitamins

D MISSHAPEN, poorly formed teeth (like those in plaster cast at left) can come from a lack of Vitamin D—the BONE VITAMIN. Growing children, especially, need plenty of Vitamin D to help in the formation of strong, attractive teeth. Fleischmann's fresh Yeast provides a rich supply of this BONE VITAMIN. Children from 5 to 12 years can be given 1 to 2 cakes each day.

Ample Vitamin B—the NERVE VITAMIN—is needed to help keep your nerves, intestinal tract, stomach and bowels normal and healthy. Eat Fleischmann's fresh Yeast to add to your daily supply. It is one of the richest known natural food sources of Vitamin B.

INCREASED SUSCEPTIBILITY TO COLDS can occur when you are getting too little Vitamin A. Lack of this vitamin weakens the membranes lining nose and throat. Eat Fleischmann's Yeast daily to add to your regular supply of Vitamin A.

EVERYDAY MEALS are often uncertain in providing enough of all the vitamins the body needs to keep it really healthy!

As a result, there are many people today who suffer from some degree of vitamin deficiency.

By adding just one food—FLEISCHMANN'S fresh YEAST—to your diet, you can increase your daily intake of these 4 essential vitamins—A, B, D and G.

Fleischmann's fresh Yeast is the only natural food that gives you such a rich supply of these 4 combined health-building vitamins.

Eat 3 cakes regularly, every day—one cake about ½ hour before each meal. Eat it plain—or dissolved in a little water. Begin right now to secure an EXTRA supply of these important vitamins in addition to what your meals provide. It's a good plan to order two or three days' supply at a time from your grocer. Fleischmann's Yeast keeps perfectly in the icebox.

THIN, nervous children are often found to be undersupplied with Vitamin G—the GROWTH VITAMIN. A generous supply of this vitamin is needed by all growing children to aid in the proper development of a strong, healthy body. Fleischmann's Yeast is rich in Vitamin G. Children from 5 to 12 years can be given 1 to 2 cakes daily.

ROBUST HEALTH, a sturdy, well-built body like that of Red Rolfe, brilliant Yankee third baseman, show he receives his full daily quota of the 4 essential vitamins, A, B, D and G.

AT LAST, Ruby Taylor has been given a voice and a personality. That character you've heard about so long, if you listen to the Amos and Andy program, has become a woman to be reckoned with—a woman with a home and a husband and a baby.

For eight years she wasn't anything but a disembodied spirit—a nebulous character that existed only in the minds of fifty million radio listeners. To her creators, Charlie Correll and Freeman Gosden, she was a mental image too precious to materialize into human form.

But all that is changed now. Ruby Taylor is a flesh-and-blood woman who became a corporeal being over a year ago when she stepped up to the microphone and pronounced four words that made her famous from the Mexican mesquite to the Maine woods. She said "I do" and "I will" and promptly became the wife of Mr. Amos Jones.

Since that memorial night, the name of Ruby Taylor Jones has become known in millions of American homes.

"Ruby Taylor," of course, is Elinor Harriot. Elinor's been on the Amos 'n' Andy program only a few times in the course of a year, yet today, she's one of radio's best-known performers. Her fame is of that left-handed variety which critics find difficult to analyze. She has a professional reputation of her own, of course, because of the nice fat part she played in the popular "Mary Marlin" show. On the other hand, lots of people don't know who Sally Gibbons is and never heard of Elinor Harriot. Yet if you say to them "This is the girl who plays Ruby Taylor on the Amos and Andy show," they recognize her immediately.

Playing Ruby Taylor's part isn't easy. In the first place, Amos and Andy debated a long time before they ever decided to bring Ruby to life, and certainly they debated much longer before choosing a girl to play her. The choice wasn't an easy one. For eight years the two of them had been speaking of this woman over the radio. They had described her in detail and quoted her at length. They had held one-sided telephone conversations with her. The public knew what she looked like and how she thought.

"So," the petite little brunet told me excitedly, "you can imagine how I felt when they decided on me. It was the biggest thrill I've ever had in my life." Amos and Andy had heard of Elinor Harriot before they hired her to be Ruby. A year or so earlier they had auditioned dozens of girls and women for the part of Henrietta Johnson and she had been just one of the many they turned down. But when they got around to the point of introducing Ruby, they remembered the girl with the southern accent.

She was, in her own words, "scared to death" at first. She knew that each one of the millions of fans numbered in the Amos and Andy public had an individual conception of what Ruby Taylor was like, and she knew that to please all of them she would have to be: one, a wizard, or two, so natural and human that there could be no possibility of disappointment. Since it was easier to be natural than to turn wizard, she decided on the former. And shortly afterward, she said "Ah do" and "Ah will" so convincingly that she not only won Amos but fifty million radio fans as well. "Those four words were my only lines on that first show," she says now, "And I don't mind saying I was as nervous as a cat. But it was all right, because Ruby was supposed to be a bride and everybody knows that brides are nervous."

But I'm sure that Elinor, who had had enough stage and radio experiences to fill a hundred lives and twice that many diaries, would have been perfection itself in any part, nervous character or calm one, because she's the whole show. Cool as a cucumber, she was ad-libbing so cleverly that even their regular lines made sense!

"After the show, the author, Will Cotton—he's the caricaturist," she told me, "came to congratulate me. He said we'd have to collaborate some day."

BUT, even so, Elinor Harriot has as many faults as you or I do. For instance, she says forgetfulness is her worst weakness. Once in Norfolk, Virginia, where she was appearing in stock, Elinor put on her street clothes and was on her way out of the theater when suddenly she heard lines that had a familiar ring to them. It was her cue to go on and she had completely forgotten the third act! "I threw my clothes off, and luckily my scene was in negligee," she explained, "so I was only two or three minutes late."

No one in the audience would have known the difference except for the fact that she came on stage wearing one black shoe and one white one!

Respecting the wall of reticence which Amos and Andy have built around themselves, Elinor won't talk about the two comedians. But if real life tendencies dictated her part in their radio scripts, I think Ruby Taylor should be the wife of Andy instead of Amos, because, like Charlie Correll, Elinor Harriot loves to fly and never travels by train or motor if she can go by air instead. Her first flight was been trained to take last-minute assignments.

Once, during her high school days, she dieted rigorously, lost fifteen pounds in a month, made a last-minute bid for the lead in the senior class play. She got it and a Summer stock contract both at once. She's been falling into parts ever since. "What I've got has been the result of breaks," she says modestly, "instead of perseverance."

Well, maybe so, but another time, in New York, she took a last-minute assignment which was certainly a break but which she couldn't have attempted if it hadn't been for her perseverance.

This incident happened several years ago when Dorothy Gish and Henry Hull were appearing in "The Bride the Sun Shines On." Elinor had a minor role in the show. She had begged the director to let her understudy the star, but an earlier applicant had already been engaged. "So," she says with a toss of her pert head, "I just followed the part along just the same."

THIS stubborn perseverance paid her off one day when Miss Gish was suddenly taken ill. The understudy refused to go on. At 1:30 in the afternoon the harassed director approached Elinor. "Do you know the part?" he pleaded. "Can you possibly go on?"

Promptly at 2:45 the curtain went up on the matinee performance with Elinor Harriot in Miss Gish's role. The first two acts, which she knew letter-perfect, moved smoothly, but when the curtain rose on the third act, her colleagues were at first dumbfounded and then delighted to realize that this little substitute was calmly ad-libbing from Chicago to Louisville for the Kentucky Derby last Spring and she's flown more than ten thousand miles since. "I died more times in the hour and a half between Chicago and Louisville than I did in the 24 hours to California and back," she said. "We were first grounded because of a mechanical difficulty, next stuck in the mud on a take-off, and buffeted by the worst rainstorm I've even seen."

Out on the West Coast, where she went for a vacation recently, she flew a lot. In Hollywood her greatest thrill—though she didn't tell me—was when Charlie Correll took her up in his private plane, showed her the sights and the sites of Filmdom's great and near-great, then as a fitting finale, swooped so low over his own place that Louise Suma, the quiet, efficient secretary who's almost as prominent as her celebrated bosses, came out on the sunlit patio and waved a towel at "Ruby" and "Andy."

In Chicago, lots of people are saying that Elinor Harriot is married, and they mean the real thing, not the radio ceremony. "But don't you believe them," she says, crumpling Melba toast into millions of crumbs. "I've never had time to marry. I went into stock when I was just out of high school and I've been going ever since. I'd like to fall in love, but when have I got time? Often I have as many as seven shows a day."

It's not very hard to see how this Elinor Harriot Ruby Taylor Jones would appeal to the fun-loving young actors, writers and directors she meets and has met during her years in show business. Here is a girl with an al-

VOICE OF THE LISTENER

The "Voice of the Listener" letter-forum is a regular feature in Radio Guide each week. These columns are offered to the readers as a means of exchanging opinions about radio.

Radio Guide will pay prizes for fine letters as follows: $10 for the best letter each week; $5 for the next best, and $1 for others.

SIX-MINUTE COMMERCIALS ($10 Prize Letter)

Editor, RADIO GUIDE: Am very much interested in several of the daytime programs and have always purchased the products sponsoring my favorite programs. But lately I have stopped buying several of these because the commercials on their programs are so long. I timed a couple of fifteen-minute programs and the commercials took six minutes. — Mrs. F. A. Rossetter, Bloomington, Ill.

ABOUT WORDS ($5 Prize Letter)

RADIO GUIDE: The two most over-worked words heard on the radio are "glamorous" and "outstanding." Are there no synonyms for these words? I quote the dictionary: Glamor, n. The influence of some charm on the eye, causing it to see things differently from what they are, perhaps contrary to facts, etc. Outstanding, a. . . prominent, conspicuous, salient, important, notable, memorable, cardinal, etc.

Every actress or songstress mentioned by announcers is "glamorous." And every actor or singer is "outstanding." It is quite tiresome. — Alexander Macomber, Ashland, Mass.

Editor, RADIO GUIDE: I am one of the many high school students who have found that "pet words" are not proper English, but I have also found that my pet word, "swell," suits this subject perfectly.

Personally, I think all the popular orchestras offer the swellest programs, but I can see the side of those who like Major Bowes' "Eighteenth Century Original Amateur Hour." "Swell" is the swellest of all words to describe the radio, radio programs, and last but not least, RADIO GUIDE, which I subscribe to now.—Hammond Harris Brister, Yazoo City, Miss.

Editor, RADIO GUIDE: Will you cooperate with me in my campaign to retire the word "swell" from the vocabulary of radio programs? . . . Some of the boys in my class in English have discovered 500 synonyms. Couldn't the radio broadcasters find at least five substitutes?

I encourage my students in English to listen to the radio. They have been inspired by the almost flawless articulation, enunciation and diction of many of the radio announcers and artists on the air. But even the students, once it is called to their attention, are weary of that word "swell" . . . —Cyril J. Neville, Boston, Mass.

"JUST THINK . . ."

RADIO GUIDE: Think of it—a sponsored variety show where the master of ceremonies doesn't try to be funny! Where the music is soft, sweet, and tuneful! Where the gags are clean, fresh and original! Where the gang plays to the mike and not to the studio audience! Where the guest artists are artists as well as guests!

Where? I dunno. No place, I guess. But just think of it!—C. M. Thomas, San Francisco, Calif.

Solution to Puzzle Given Last Week

Blue songs, moaning out a hopeless wail,
 True songs, happy faith that will not fail,
 Telling of a love that is to be.
 New songs, thrilling with the joy they bring,
 Old songs, memories of a vanished Spring,
 This is my network symphony.

Dear songs, giving comfort to the heart,
 Fear songs, saying "Best of friends must part—"
 This is what the network says to me.
 Long songs, boredom on the air-waves flung,
 Wrong songs, words that never should be sung,
 Such is the network symphony.

Crude songs, coming thru my radio,
 Rude songs, swiftly come and quickly go—
 Such songs surely must not be!

Sweet songs, to the heart a thrilling call—
 Love songs, happiest music of them all,
 Make a perfect network symphony.
 —Mrs. Sara A. Rich, Glen Rock, N. J.

HITS OF THE WEEK

SPRING'S almost here—and sentimental songs seem to echo the fact with plenty of changes in this week's "most often played" list of popular music.

"This Year's Kisses"—and there's a title and a song for you—has climaxed its steady rise to the top tune of the week, pushing "When My Dreamboat Comes Home" right off the top of the ladder down to the sixth rung!

In second place, passing "Goodnight, My Love," which gave the new leader such a tussle for second place honors last week, is "May I Have the Next Romance?"

Just to show how this approach of Spring motif—if there is such a thing—has influenced popular music's popularity, consider "I've Got Love to Keep Me Warm," fourth on the list, and "Trust in Me," which slipped, but not badly, from fourth to seventh position.

"What Will I Tell My Heart"—another title we might mention as long as we're on the Spring-love theme—spurred from fifteenth place to ninth, which is not a bad week's work for any tune.

And—a final observation—that number "Boo Hoo" (cynics might say it went hand-in-hand with "This Year's Kisses" and "May I Have the Next Romance?")—jumped from fourteenth position to fifth.

That's the one to watch out for! This week's favorites are:

- 1. This Year's Kisses
- 2. May I Have the Next Romance?
- 3. Goodnight, My Love
- 4. I've Got Love to Keep Me Warm
- 5. Boo Hoo
- 6. When My Dreamboat Comes Home
- 7. Trust in Me
- 8. On a Little Bamboo Bridge
- 9. What Will I Tell My Heart?
- 10. Serenade in the Night
- 11. Gee, But You're Swell
- 12. Moonlight and Shadows
- 13. I Can't Lose That Longing
- 14. Swing High, Swing Low
- 15. Smoke Dreams

CHATEAU OF THE CONDEMNED

needs every penny for its necessities.

Every Saturday, the women tune their sets in to catch the Metropolitan Opera. Every set is supposed to be silenced by 9:00 p.m., but if there is a "special" on the air, the Chateau sort of winks at the rules and allows the family to stay up.

A prize fight always is a "special" for the men in the Chateau.

These radio fans never listen to lectures on medicine.

They want joyous programs, funny programs, sweet music! Never once is death mentioned. The word cancer is never used! Many of the patients do not even know they have cancer. Of course, if a man joins the family and his physician has told him the dreaded news, the Chateau advises him of the true status of his case.

But the children—they never know. Take the child of two who joined the family. You'll never know his name. He stayed nine months. He became such a pet that the clansmen cried when he went home. He's still alive.

Or the lad of eight. Somewhere down inside of him, the disease is working. But he was never told. He had the run of the Chateau. He played in a ward whose walls are made of lead and where X-rays flow continuously. There's a radio there, too, and the X-rays are of such low voltage that they do not interfere. Patients loll in this room of leaden walls, discuss the news, turn their radio on and off just as you do, gossip about the things you do. Their radio does not disturb anyone else. You can't hear through lead.

IN MOST cases when a new clansman joins the family, he is told he has only a tumor. The Chateau hopes that's true. Then he's treated with X-ray, radium or surgery. And although he may have cancer, he always feels sorry for the other fellow because he does not realize his own plight. He's an individual in the Chateau. He's never regimented. He walks and talks just as you do. He drinks lots of fruit juice. He may be a pauper, but his comrades do not know it. Even his nurses never know.

He goes to the clinic first, and if he needs hospitalization, he joins the inner circle of the family. He arises when his comrades do, dresses himself. He undergoes treatments during the day, and in the early evening hours he gathers with his friends around the radio. He is very kind to his comrades—he feels sorry for them. They have cancer, he thinks. He mustn't tell them. He mustn't even mention the word. Poor fellows, he thinks.

And at the same time, they are feeling sorry for him.

He laughs to make them happy and they laugh to make him happy.

"Turn on the radio, boys," he says. "Turn 'er on loud! Let's get some good music."

So they dial a cheerful program to please him.

Sometimes they laugh so loudly and have so much fun that the nurses reluctantly call them down. Sundays are real holidays. At 3 p.m. there's a special program. Walter Keisewetter, an organist, and his wife, Eleanor McClellan, have been directing the program for 20 years. They give their time to the Chateau, their time and their talents. Artists sing and comics cut up.

"WHAT song do you like?" an entertainer asks.

"Give us 'Ol' Man River,'" echo many of the patients.

That's a favorite. The family may not know it, but somehow there seems to be an affinity between "Ol' Man River" and the scourge that brings the clan together. It seems as though nothing can stop the river—or cancer.

The average stay in the Chateau is only eighteen days, but many come for a brief visit and stay for months. As long as there is a chance to help the victim, the Chateau keeps him. He comes to accept the place as home. His birthdays are remembered. There is a special dinner and presents and even a cake with candles. On that day, he's more or less a master of ceremonies at the ward's radio and gets any program he desires.

In the Chateau's long history, no program ever has touched King Edward VIII's farewell speech for general approval.

All during the crisis, the family huddled around the radios, absorbing every word of the drama, and when news came that the departing king would speak, the family forgot all else.

The women wept as he began that famous "At long last—"

MEN swallowed and looked away so that their comrades could not see their tears.

"I feel so sorry for him," said one woman, a mother who forgot her own agony and gave her sympathy for a man who has wealth and health and a chance for happiness.

"That's a brave speech," said a man, never thinking of his own courage.

The family enjoys sitting around on Sunday evenings, talking and laughing. The lights of midtown Manhattan shimmer to the south. You can hear traffic swirling by. Automobile horns blare a few blocks away, then are strangely silent as the machines pass the Chateau, for drivers are considerate of the condemned. But children play in the streets. The world seems very much alive. Death seems such a stranger.

The family likes soft music on Sunday evenings—spirituals and lullabies. One song particularly is loved—"Swing Low, Sweet Chariot."

The family just sits and listens, or hums the spiritual, as though the choir were singing it just for them. Often they sing it, too.

Some man pitches the tune and they all join in with the radio—

"Swing low, sweet chariot—"

The basses go low; the tenors high.

"Coming for to carry me home—"

There's a sob in one voice. Still thinking of the other fellow.

"A band of angels—"

Softly, very softly they sing. It's almost a murmur.

"Coming after me—"

There is no sound in the Chateau except the song.

"Coming for to carry me home— swing low, sweet chariot."

And the chariot is waiting for them just beyond the horizon.

BY CHAS. A. MORRISON, president, INTERNATIONAL DX-ER'S ALLIANCE

(Figures in Parentheses Are Megacycles)

ACCORDING to R. E. Richardson, astronomer at the Mount Wilson Observatory, the sun is experiencing the greatest magnetic storms since 1900. This unusual activity is ushering in the best season on record for short-wave reception.

Bearing out this theory, notice the phenomenal signal strength from short-wave stations on the higher frequencies. In the evenings, DJB (15.2) of Zeesen, Germany, is the loudest ever recorded, at times actually blocking the speaker with its power. GSF (15.14) of Daventry, England, is almost as good, and even DJQ (15.28), which is beamed on South America, is being received with excellent strength.

A further indication of abnormal activity may be found on the 20-meter amateur band, which is wide open for 24 hours daily. Short-wave reception will improve steadily until some time during the year 1938, at which time peak reception for the present sunspot cycle will be experienced.

According to the Radio Manufacturers Association, the American broadcast from Czechoslovakia over OLR3A (9.55) is being heard Mondays and Thursdays on a new schedule of 8 to 11 p.m. EST (7 to 10 CST).

THE experimental Tunisian broadcaster, "Radio Tunis," is now working on a new frequency of 13.955 megs, according to Short-Wave Service of France. This station, using its amateur call of FT4AJ, was heard by John Barre, New York City, on February 24 from 4:43 to 6 p.m. EST (3:43 to 5 CST), testing on an announced frequency of 14.065 megs. The station is operated by Henry de Matteis, 20 rue Es Sadikia, Tunis, Tunisia.

Starting Saturday, March 20, at 7 p.m. EST (6 CST), the regular weekly program radiated from Geneva for the benefit of Swiss citizens abroad will take place on the following new frequencies: On HBJ (14.535) beamed on North America and on HBO (11.402) beamed on South America.

Richard Verbrugge, Detroit, Mich., reports a new station announcing as XEYU, "The National University of Mexico," at Mexico City. The announcer requested reports and promised answers to all letters. The transmission, which was badly marred by interference from HJ1ABP of Cartagena, Colombia, terminated at 10:30 p.m. EST (9:30 CST).

HJ1ABP (9.618), Cartagena, Colombia, is conducting a contest in connection with its English broadcasts on Saturday nights from 10 to 11 p.m. EST (9 to 10 CST), the object of which is to name the correct nationality of the announcer. Your reports should be addressed to P. O. Box 37.

An official communication received by Lyle Nelson, Yamhill, Ore., lists the new French government telephone stations as follows: For communication with Algeria, TYA (12.215) and TYA2 (9.037); with Morocco, TYB (12.25) and TYB2 (8.075); with Soviet Russia, FYC (15.93) and FYC2 (9.84); with Egypt, TYC (13) and TYC2 (7.7); with Madagascar, TYD3 (18.776), and with the United States, TYE (18.09), TYE2 (13.76) and TYE3 (10.43). There is also a phone service between France and Corsica on 7 meters.

George Moore, San Francisco, Calif., informs me that the "Hawaii Calls" program has been shifted to Saturday nights, where it is fed to the Mutual network by KKP (16.03) of Kahuku, from 10 to 10:30 EST (9 to 9:30 CST).

EXPERIMENTAL station PCJ, formerly located in Eindhoven, Holland, has been transferred to Huizen, and all reports should now be addressed to PCJ Studio, Hilversum, Holland. Transmissions over PHI (17.77), Huizen, are now being made daily except Wednesdays, starting at 8 a.m. EST (7 CST).

On Thursday, March 18, at 4:30 p.m. EST (3:30 CST), the CBS network here and the BBC stations in England will carry a half hour of Tommy Dorsey's swing band music. The program is one of CBS' exchange series.

XEUZ (6.12) relays broadcaster XEFO, Mexico City, nightly until about 2:30 or 3 a.m. EST (1:30 or 2 CST). Reception reports should be sent to the latter station and those writing will be enrolled as members of The Radio Friends Club, thereby becoming eligible to participate in a DX contest sponsored by the station, writes Harry Kentzel, Averill Park, N. Y. George Moore, of San Francisco, adds that this station broadcasts experimental programs in connection with the National Network of Mexico on Saturday nights starting at 11:15 p.m. EST (10:15 CST). The special frequency used is 9.4 megs.

GEORGE EBBECKE, Philadelphia, writes that despite the fact that some newspapers are reporting EAQ (9.86), Madrid, off the air, it is still pounding in daily from approximately 5:30 to 9:30 p.m. EST (4:30 to 8:30 CST), although some of its recordings are "punk." E. D. Nicholson, New Orleans, says: "I got my big thrill on February 18, at 8:05 p.m. EST (7:05 CST), when listening to this station there must have been an air raid, as I could hear anti-aircraft guns firing."

Latest advice from South Africa is that CR7BC, of Lourenco Marques, Mozambique, testing recently on 11.72 megs, will now conduct similar tests on the 31-meter band.

We Applaud

FOR BRINGING US FINE MUSIC,
GREAT SONGS—THESE AIRLANE
STARS WIN OUR LOUD "BRAVOS"!

... Yehudi Menuhin and Little Sister Hephzibah. Yehudi, because he has lost nothing that made him famous as a child—and Hephzibah, because she's following in his world-famous footsteps!

... Walter Damrosch, musical counsel for NBC, whose brilliant career has brought him now to his seventy-fifth birthday. To lovers of fine music everywhere, he's a modern master conductor

... Robert Armbruster (left), who looks like a dapper Broadwayite—but loses himself in his music like the dourest of composers! A Philadelphia prodigy at eight, he has been an NBC conductor since the organization of the company

... Lauritz Melchior, for giving strength to his Metropolitan roles, and Kirsten Flagstad, for her sensational Wagnerian interpretations. America has learned new appreciation of Wagner because of their masterful efforts

Below: An NBC production man's palm may itch, but when he makes this signal during a broadcast, it indicates to the artists, "Come up closer to the mike!"

Left: A director's menacing fist means "Stop the music!"

Above: For the studio orchestra, this is the production man's order to "Fade out and cut!"

SAY IT WITH SIGNS

"SILENCE!" YOU'RE ON THE AIR! YOU TALK IN SIGNS—OR DON'T TALK!

Above: Radio "timing" must be perfect—and this is a director's way of telling the cast that the show is being timed "on the nose"

Above: In the studio sign language of NBC broadcasters, this message is "Move this far from the mike!"

Above: "Scissors," signalled by a director, means that a program must be cut off the air

Left: While a program is on the air, the director signals to the musicians with upraised hand and bent fingers—"Fade it down soft"

Helps you hit the high ones...this
FRIENDLY STIMULATION

"OK ON THAT!" SAYS WINI SHAW
 singing star of Warner Bros. pictures. "The best friend I know when I'm tired is a sparkling cup of Maxwell House! It's so refreshing!"

TRIPLE TAPS FROM HAL AND MAY RAYMONDE, two of the brightest stars in the entertainment world. "A strenuous life—this dancing!" says Hal. "And believe me, many's the time the friendly stimulation of Maxwell House has been a real life-saver!"
 "Right!" chimes in May. "Maxwell House is one grand coffee! It's always so marvelously fresh and full-flavored!"

"GANG-BUSTER" MAN, PHIL LORD, ace radio writer, author of "Gang-Busters" and "We, The People," enjoys, after a strenuous rehearsal, a refreshing cup of Maxwell House with Jean Ellington, one of radio's most sought-after actresses.
 "Yes, sir!" Phil says. "When it comes to real, rich coffee goodness, my hat's off to Maxwell House. It's got 'em all stopped!"

Rich, mellow coffees, the choicest in the world—blended with the utmost skill and care to bring you the finest, most delicious coffee you've ever tasted . . .

Kept truly roaster-fresh—as fresh as the very hour it left the roasting oven . . . with every bit of its incomparable full-bodied goodness . . .

THAT is Maxwell House, one of the world's truly fine coffees. It comes to you in the super-vacuum, Vita-Fresh can you open with a key—the only way science knows to bring you truly roaster-fresh coffee—always!

MAXWELL HOUSE COFFEE

GOOD TO THE LAST DROP

Above: Phil Spitalny getting a musical effect from his all-girl orchestra. Not only does he have the last musical word with his girls, but he also selects their clothes, arranges their coiffures, picks their beaus, and gets away with it. He's the king of musical queens!

Right: Southern beauties form the "Three Little Words," harmonizing vocal trio on Maestro Spitalny's "Hour of Charm" program. They sing sweet rhythm numbers with a bit of a drawl. Far right: "Three Little Words" —when they desert harmony for the mirror!

PHIL SPITALNY—and His Girl Orchestra

LOVELY TO LOOK AT—LOVELY TO LISTEN TO! THEY'RE WEDDED TO THEIR CAREER BY A CONTRACT WHICH FORBIDS MARRIAGE!

An added attraction to the brass section is this "Hour of Charm" charmer, who blows her own trumpet!

Above: Evelyn Kay, concertmistress, playing a difficult passage. She's Spitalny's assistant and head of the governing board of this unique group

Above: Introducing Rochelle and Lola, Spitalny's two-piano team, who are starring performers on this all-girl vocal and instrumental ensemble

Above: This brunet beauty with a deep contralto voice is known as just Maxine. She is the featured chantress on the "Hour of Charm" broadcasts

At right: "Billie" Blue, tuba player, toots her own horn on the "Hour of Charm." Like the others, "Billie" also has an anti-marriage clause in her contract—and knows it!

Right: Phil Spitalny and his band. They laughed when he said he could make an all-girl orchestra one of radio's top attractions—but the skeptics admitted he was right when his "Hour of Charm" unit became a big airline feature

WE GO TO

Lovely Olivia smiles as she reads an amusing line during rehearsal. No star in Hollywood is better liked than Olivia, who cooperated with our photographer and made it possible for RADIO GUIDE to bring these pictures to you—here!

Left: The triangle in the production of "Captain Blood." Left, the man who fought and lost (Basil Rathbone). In the middle, the girl (Olivia De Havilland) who was loved by two men. Right: Errol Flynn who as "Captain Blood" won the lady!

Left: It's Olivia again, folks! These same hands are clenched into two tight little fists as she goes through her lines before the mikel

"Don't take a picture of my cigar, my mother doesn't know I smoke!" That's what Director Woodruff said when our cameraman snapped this

A RADIO THEATER REHEARSAL

LINE BY LINE—SCENE BY SCENE—THAT'S HOW A RADIO SHOW IS BUILT—FOR YOU!

The feet that have trod the road to fame. They are Olivia's, and she crosses them, even as you and I, while she studies her lines in the radio play

Even a movie star, Basil Rathbone, wears a hole in his sole—though the day previous he received $50,000!

The ear that hears, blends, smooths, and works miracles with a raw script to bring you the finished version. Its possessor—Director Frank Woodruff!

Above: Rehearsals are necessary because of this little watch. It is responsible for the exact timing that gives you an hour of thrilling entertainment—and finishes on the dot!

Left: Here you see the "Captain Blood" cast—just as they are—hard at work in the rehearsal hall. The show must be a polished product before it goes on

The new expanded program of "Musical Americana" will feature a large, modern male chorus under Lynn Murray, with orchestra directed by Leith Stevens. Program: Three songs arranged for voices by composer-commentator, Deems Taylor. These are: "Waters Ripple and Flow"; "Johnny Was a Shoemaker"; and "Song of the Drummer Boy." Next the chorus sings LaForge's famous solo, "Before the Crucifix," arranged especially for the program, and Grofé's tonal work, "Three Shades of Blue." Orchestra: Four selections from the Monroe Collection of Bayou Ballads, the unknown airs of the Delta Negroes of Louisiana, and "Campdown Blues" by Foster. Chorus concludes program with Enders' dramatic vocal arrangement "Daniel" from the Biblical story.

The NELSON EDDY concert in Chicago has

MAN CAN NOW TALK WITH GOD

Says Noted Psychologist

"A new and revolutionary religious teaching based entirely on the misunderstood sayings of the Galilean Carpenter, and designed to show how we may find, understand and use the same identical power which Jesus used in performing His so-called Miracles," is attracting world wide attention to its founder, Dr. Frank B. Robinson, noted psychologist, author and lecturer.

"Psychiana," this new psychological religion, believes and teaches that it is today possible for every normal human being, understanding spiritual law as Christ understood it, "to duplicate every work that the Carpenter of Galilee ever did"—it believes and teaches that when He said, "the things that I do shall ye do also," He meant what He said and meant it literally to all mankind, through all the ages.

Dr. Robinson has prepared a 6000 word treatise on "Psychiana," in which he tells about his long search for the Truth, how he finally came to the full realization of an Unseen Power or force "so dynamic in itself that all other powers and forces fade into insignificance beside it"—how he learned to commune directly with the Living God, using this mighty, never-failing power to demonstrate health, happiness and financial success, and how any normal being may find and use it as Jesus did. He is now offering this treatise free to every reader of this magazine who writes him.

If you want to read this "highly interesting, revolutionary and fascinating story of the discovery of a great Truth," just send your name and address to Dr. Frank B. Robinson, 403-3rd Street, Moscow, Idaho. It will be sent free and post paid without cost or obligation. Write the Doctor today.—Copyright 1935, Dr. Frank B. Robinson.—Advertisement.

LOG OF ALL AMERICAN STATIONS ARRANGED BY CALL LETTERS

EXPLANATORY NOTE:
The small figure given in parentheses, as (1/4), following the location of a station is an indication of its power in kilowatts—which means thousands of watts.

Where no figure is given, the station has less than 250 watts power. Thus the figure 1/4 means 250 watts; 1/2 is 500 watts; 10 would be 10,000 watts, etc. Part I of this log, showing Canadian stations and the start of the U. S. list, was given last week. Back copies are available at ten cents each. The log will include Mexico as well as the U. S. and Canada.
