BEN BERNIE: Good Neighbor

A MBASSADOR of good-will and good music is a title Ben Bernie has well earned. The Ol' Maestro made a flying trip to our Canadian allies last month, boosting the morale of war workers and fighting men. He also gave a strong boost to the Canadian warbond drive.

Ben and his troupe felt right at home during their visit to Canadian war plants, for their daytime radio show is slanted to assembly-line workers.

Highlights of the trip were a special show for thousands of R. C. A. F. men in Toronto, a presentation of Ben's regular CBS program from a Victory Loan Rally and another broadcast aiding Canada's Air Cadet League. Gale Robbins, Jack Fulton, Yogi Yorgesson and the King's Jesters accompanied Bernie on his tour.

Thanksgiving Litany-1942

N THIS momentous year of 1942, we must, as individuals and as a nation, search deep within our souls and the great heart of America to know and truly realize the blessings that are still ours in a world torn by war.

We cannot bring back those brave men who have given their lives in the cause of freedom for all peoples. Nor can we lessen the grief of their loved ones as they gather round their Thanksgiving tables this year and bravely try to carry on in the face of heartbreak.

But on this one truly American holiday-Thanksgivingwe do praise and give thanks for those courageous men who still work for the cessation of war and for world peace. Those men who are thinking of the next generation, and not merely of the next election. Those men, and women too, in whose hearts there is no greed, no lust for power, but only an earnest prayer that their work may make possible a better world tomorrow, a world where the laughter of little children will be heard in the homes of all nations.

Because the following Thanksgiving prayer by Don McNeill of radio's "Breakfast Club" expresses many of the things we, as Americans, can be grateful for this year, we give it to our readers.

—The Editors.

For a job to do—a task I love—a chance to talk to parents, relatives, sweethearts and friends of the boys in service-to help America smile in the morning when a smile is needed most —I THANK THEE, GOD!

For the firm belief that America's homes are America's future—a family of my own to work for—so that when victory comes they may reap the harvest of freedom—I THANK THEE, GOD!

For men of vision to lead us—for the butcher boy, the druggist, the lawyer,

For the precious right to worship as I please—for a conscience instead of a

Gestapo—I THANK THEE, GOD!

For a rationing of commodities, but not of conversation—a curtailing of comforts, but not of Christianity—I THANK THEE, GOD!

For the great gift of radio, which has brought me neighbors from Coast to Coast—for the thrill of being able to know and thus better appreciate the generous heart and determined spirit of America—this year more than ever when we need THEE most—I THANK THEE, GOD!

Gloriously Filmed in Technicolor Is This Story of a Boy's Love for an Outlaw Horse

3. KEN is broken-hearted when his dad says that Flicka will never get well, and if she does, she will still be wild; but Ken (above) sticks by her. When his pet (center) manages to drag herself to the water, seeking relief from fever that's destroying her, Ken follows. Here his parents find him very ill in the morning. Far right: Happy end for Ken and friend Flicka

"My Friend Flicka" (20th Century-Fox)

Cast: Roddy McDowall, Preston Foster, Rita Johnson, Diana Hale, Arthur Loft, Jeff Corey, James Bell. Producer, Ralph Dietrich. Director, Harold Schuster. Screen adaptation of the Mary O'Hara novel by the same name was written by Francis Edwards Faragoh.

TODAY author Mary O'Hara's novel "My Friend Flicka" is a best-seller. But don't be surprised if tomorrow finds it listed as an American classic a great love-story. Not the sort of love-story, to be sure, that studios usually buy, but nevertheless a true one in a small boy's devotion to the horse that his father had given him. Laid against a background of a 3.000acre Wyoming ranch, it combines a depth of love and understanding with a hard and brutal sense of reality that leaves a reader fascinated to the last paragraph. Now 20th Century-Fox has made a great picture from the book, with Roddy McDowall of "How Green Was My Valley" fame in the role of the boy. The filly that takes the title role of Flicka is owned by Owen Mac-Lean of 20th Century, and the money she earned in the picture will go into training her for the Kentucky Derby next year. Scenes in the film where Flicka gets tangled in the barbed-wire fence will tear at your heart-strings, they are so realistic, even though the barbs were props made of rubber. And movie-goers will remember the words of Ken's father: "Flicka's caused us a lot of trouble, but she has taught us, too, our need for faith, love and patience when things look the blackest."

4. KEN'S mom had a hard time making her husband and son see eye to eye about Flicka. Picture above is proof of her success

First on your list of glamour aids! SILKIER, SMOOTHER HAIR... EASIER TO ARRANGE!

Dress up and vary a simple, basic dress with smart new, hair-dos and change of accessories! The gargenus, beaded collar shown here ties at back. Makes an office dress book like a "date" dress. The lovely new hair-do is suitable for any evening occasion.

New Special Drene with Hair Conditioner added gives thrilling new beauty results! Leaves hair far more manageable, more alluring, too!

Every beauty expert knows that lovely hair, heautifully arranged, is any girl's first step to glamour! So don't put off trying our new, improved Special Drene Shampoo! Because Special Drene now has a wonderful hair conditioner in it, to leave hair silkier, smoother, and far easier to arrange—right after shampooing! If you haven't tried Drene lately you'll be amazed at the difference!

Unsurpassed for removing dandruff!

Are you bothered about removal of ugly, scaly dandruff? You won't be when you shampoo with Special Drene. For Special

Drene removes that flaky dandruff the very first time you use it—and besides does something no soap shampoo can do, not even those claiming to be special "dandruff removers". Special Drene reveals up to 33% more lustre than even the finest soaps or soap shampoos!

This film illustrates how all soaps and soap shampoos dull lustre of hair!

All soaps—and liquid soap shampoos—always combine with the minerals in water, to form a sticky scum. (Bathtub ring.) This scum leaves a film on hair that dulls the natural lustre—and clings stubbornly, no matter how thoroughly you rinse with clear water.

But Special Drene is different! It is made hy an exclusive, patented process. Its action in water is different. Special Drene does not combine with minerals to form a seum—so it never leaves any dulling film on hair. Instead, Special Drene reveals up to 33% more lustre than even the finest soaps or soap shampoos!

An Oriental Expert's Slant on America's War Problems; Upton Close, Writing Before the Occupation of French North Africa, Urges the Concentration of American Offensive Power in the North Pacific

E ARE into the fourth year of the war for Europe and the sixth year of war for Asia and approaching the second year of war for America. But the truth is that we are entering upon the twenty-eighth year of war for a world that went into one of history's recurrent periods of violent change in August, 1914. We have had some peace in the diplomat's technical sense since 1914, but no peace in the common man's sense—the sense of stability—the only sense that has any meaning.

has any meaning.

We are in the violent historical period that means the end of European empires built since the age of discovery. In this sense it is comparable to the age of violence and chaos that marked the passing of the ancient Roman Empire. The French, Portuguese and Dutch empires, what's left of the Spanish Empire, whatever existed in the nature of an American empire and the non-self-ruling parts of the British Empire are being liquidated through this modern thirty years' war. This is as much in the nature of the case as the supremacy of air force over battleships or the complete regulation of industrial profits once left entirely to competition. Kiss our empires good-by.

The burning question for us and our children who shall survive the slaughter and impoverishment and disease of the war is, What's taking their place? Will it be the new-style, twentieth-century totalitarian empires, which are really a throwback to ancient despotism, or will it be shapeless chaos such as followed the fall of ancient Rome, which might cause even greater suffering than the brutalitarians; or will it be a truly humane global order, a federation in which all men treat others as citizens of a city now treat their fellow citizens of the same city, and in which all states respect other states as much as one member of the British Commonwealth at present respects other members, although some are big and some little, some richer and some poorer?

We are fighting to prevent the rise of the new tyrannies of Germany and Japan. Some minds among us which pride themselves on being hard-boiled and practical think that this alone should be our concern. They would let everything else shape itself up so long as we beat down Hitler and Tojo. But let it be borne in mind that another enemy-chaos-is hovering over the battlefield like a monstrous vulture. It will be a horrible reward, indeed, to our sons who bleed and ourselves who pay and our grandchildren who inherit the debt we cannot pay if we beat down the foe only to leave our sons and our grandsons and ourselves exhausted and disorganized on the field of battle—to have hearts and and entrails eaten out by the vulture of chaos. That evil bird is at this moment hovering over the battlefield chiefly on two wings. One of them is the wing of mistrust over the real purposes of this war, which has arisen from the bitter, largely hidden, tussle between the people of India and their rulers, and which is now spreading doubts through millions of minds in Europe and America as well as Asia as to the honesty of application of President Roosevelt's high principles. The other vermin-infested wing of the evil, defeatist bird is the wing of dismay sprouting among our sacrificing people and fighting allies over the interference with American production of the tools to win the war by greed and lust for power. And against the bold exhibitions of such greed and power, the long-suffering American people are grumbling more and more loudly, as I have graphic evidence in thousands of letters they take time to write to me.

The Man Who Played With Death

Thrilling Story of a Man Who Plays a Gruesome Game With Death Trying to Cover Up One Crime with Another

An Inner Sanctum Mystery

ARREN HOWARD, a mediumsize, intellectual-looking man with sardonic eyebrows, first heard the tune on the night he prepared to murder Mitchell Gilbert, his partner for fifteen years in the book-publishing firm that bore their names. It was a tinkling tune, played by a little toy merry-go-round with gaily colored horses and spangled riders. To Howard it became a death dirge.

On that stormy night, Howard was startled in the basement of Gilbert's home by the woman he loved—Mitchell's wife, Drina, who came to dissuade her lover from the gruesome undertaking he had planned. Before she could say anything, Howard asked her about her small son, David.
"Does he suspect?" Howard asked.

"Of course not, Warren. He's just a child."

"I know, but he's his father's child and children are strange . . ."

"You're frightened, Warren, you

Howard walked toward the woman, put a possessive arm about her narrow shoulders. He attempted to kiss her.

"Why do you turn your head away,
"Are you suddenly Drina?" he asked. "Are you suddenly losing your courage? Is it that? Don't worry, Drina. It'll go all right. The boxes are ready. The pit I dug near the pear tree is filled with lime."

"Don't talk about it," Drina sobbed.

"Warren, for heaven's sake, listen to me! There must be a better way out of this. Let's speak to him. Give him a chance."

"You know what he's like, Drina.

DRAMATIZATION reaches climax when Warren (Claude Rains) curls up in death pains after swallowing poison. Drina (Betty Winkler) stands by for cue as Raymond Edward Johnson ("Your Host, Raymond") gloats

LAST-MINUTE instructions, and the cast is ready to broadcast. L. to r.: "Your Host, Raymond," Dolores Gillen (David), Betty Winkler (Drina), Horace Graham (Mitchell), Claude Rains (Warren), producer Hi Brown

You can't give him a chance. I've been his partner for so many years; I know him even more intimately than you do. You don't reason with a scorpion. You kill it!" Howard pulled a knife from under his coat. Its keen, cold blade glistened under the naked bulb of the basement light. "Look, Drina," he said. "You see? All I have to do is slip it under my coat when he comes home. I'm showing it to you because I want you to know what I'm doing. I want you to know how much I love you!"

Drina shrank back, rubbed her cold hands together nervously. "Warren," she whispered hoarsely, "I've never seen you like this before."

"I've never planned to murder a man before," he replied coldly.

They were interrupted by the pitpat of bare feet in the kitchen above them. It was the boy, David, who had come downstairs in his flannel pajamas to seek comfort from his mother. The thunder and lightning of the storm frightened him. He was a strange child, with something of the pixy in his wide, serious eyes.
"Darling," said his mother, "you

Frost in California, natives will tell you, is unusual, but the recent freeze in stars' salaries by government order is nothing short of colossal, especially in the way those top-drawer players are responding to the situation. To date, not one star under contract in this wage-freezing list has left his job, nor is there any indication that he will. Some studio officials felt that there might be an objection to work without pay, and were astonished at the spirit of cooperation and loyalty evinced by players. Which all adds up to another victory for Holly-

Those who know him best believe he has finally found the place that eases a little the tragedy which entered his life when his gallant wife, Carole Lombard, was killed ...

Original story by Melville Crossman. Director, William A. Wellman.

Type of Picture: A stirring portrayal of the battles men must win on the ground before they win their wings.

This Is the Story: Background of film is the Thunderbird Airport in Arizona, where American, Chinese and English boys are training for the armed air forces of the United Nations. There's a thread of love-interest, but the principal idea focuses on the courage shown by these men and the democratic feeling that is being cemented by this intermingling of different races and nationalities in a common cause.

NEW YORK By E. KAY

There's a Blue Network studio where for some months men of all nationalities have been telling tales of the horrors of war on the high seas. Each day these men would relate how they torpedoing and bombing. George Hicks, announcer, would listen to these stories, and having been a man of the sea in his youth decided he had enough of second-hand information. That was over two months ago. Hicks went to sea. He spent four weeks aboard a convoy vessel, but he accomplished his mission. He saw. He participated. "I know now what I wanted to know," he says. "Next time I talk to one of these men on my program, I'll understand what he's talking about"...

Howard Petrie, WEAF and NBC network announcer, was chosen as the winner of the 1942 H. P. Davis Memorial Announcers' Award for the East. These awards were established in 1933 by Mrs. Davis in memory of her late husband, who was known as "The father of broadcasting." Winners are selected on the basis of personality, diction, adaptability, voice and versatility. The contest is exclusive with NBC-owned, operated and affiliated stations. Any one person who is endowed with the above traits warrants an award and from where we sit Howard Petrie was a good choice.

Hanley Stafford, who as Daddy to Baby Snooks has his hands full, is today in real life a very proud daddy, even if for a while a very worried one. Stafford's son, who is a sergeant pilot in the Royal Canadian Air Force, is coming home a war hero. Son Graham is the sole survivor of a forced landing on the cold, bleak North Sea; it happened when a German fighter silenced one motor of the R. C. A. F. plane and damaged another. Young Stafford and another member of the crew floated five days and five nights on a rubber raft before being rescued. Unfortunately, shortly afterward his companion died from exposure. Twenty-year-old Graham is coming to Hollywood to visit his father and has joined the ranks of other illustrious fighting men interviewed on the air

According to Harry W. Flannery, of "Assignment to Berlin" fame, the Nazi spies are reported to be trying to get pictures of the collegiate gold-fishgulping craze of a few years back. If you are one of the few that haven't heard "Der Fuehrer's Face" as played by Spike Jones and his City Slickers, we suggest you sit down by your radio and just wait until you do. No need to ask if it's worth while waiting for, either. Spike, who is a drummer for John Scott Trotter's band, organized this little group, made recordings like "Siam," "Clink, Clink, Another Drink," and by the time "Der Fuehrer's Face" was released people wanted to know who this Jones fellow was. It has swept the country like wildfire and Spike has become na-tionally known. Now and again the smoke of the studio lobbies gets in your eyes, and you get sick of publicity men and chrome furniture and the sad faces of the old-timers who are on the skids. The control-room tension at broadcast time loses its appeal, and you find yourself snapping at people who want to help you out with news just after you've written a column.

At that stage you go for a walka long one. You get out of town and find a hilly stretch of woods. You let the blessed rain and fall sun of the Middle West slap you awake and you let the cold wind kick you around. You find a place where a log fire burns evenings and the wind whines with a threat of winter coming. You pick up some of the calm of cornfields yellow in the November rain and some of the life of the pines glaring green against the background of brown hardwoods.

That wakes you up and knocks the cynicism out of you. You come back to the chrome and glass and the time tension and the lobby chatter-and you feel that it's all new and all wonderful . . .

You find a glow of satisfaction when you find on your desk word that Franklyn MacCormack got that "Hymns of All Churches" emcee job as you had urged. He starts November 23... And you sense the fitness of the choice

STOKOWSKI CONDUCTS NBC SYMPHONY . . RODZINSKI DIRECTS PHILHARMONIC

Landowska's Recitals Meccas of Distinguished Musicians; Rodzinski Schedules Shostakovich's "Fifth"; Stokowski Offers Beethoven, Wagner

By ROBERT BAGAR

New York World-Telegram Music Critic and Associate Program Annotator for Philharmonic-Sym-phony Society of New York

HE utter charm and simplicity of Wanda Landowska's conversation are disarming. The interviewer, discerning as he may be, soon finds himself before a "presence." In her most casual talk Mme. Landowska conveys impressions of great artistic strength, amazing penetration, subtlety and an authority that, to say the least, is challenging.

This little giant of music, about whom legends have grown, whose harpsichord-playing is one of the times' wonders, is most eager to express her ideas. She plays with ideas in fact, but only because she is a true intellectual whose mental sport is the word of musical gospel.

In her apartment facing Central Park she seems to have found a haven for her thoughts, for her music. She communes here with the great of antiquity—Bach, Couperin, Rameau and the others. A grand piano and two harpsichords occupy the prominent places in the large living-room. There is a classical atmosphere about the place. Essentially, one can see, this is a house of music, a shrine, the shrine of a great art.

Here Mme. Landowska now imparts her lore to many pupils. Here, too, she works everlastingly at those deceivingly simple pieces of another era, shaping the phrases that eventually fall into their proper slots with unexcelled "Old music is a misnomer." Mme. Landowska said. "What people call old music is really more modern than socalled modern music. That is not a mot, it is a fact. You have to listen keenly to the old music in order to recognize that.

"Why, as far back as Gregorian music the pieces show the most daring harmonies, venturesome devices that some of our contemporaries would be loath to attempt. In the ancient polyphonies sometimes there are implications of extraordinary compass. Their composers, besides, did not make tours-de-force of their innovations. These came about logically, with the utmost preparation, you might say."

I asked Mme. Landowska if it were true that she possesses a secret of harpsichord-playing that she will not divulge to others. She immediately replied, "No, it is not true. I am flattered, of course, that such legends do crop up about my playing, but that is exactly what they are—legends.

"As in every form of expression, the performer must practise without let-up. He must work and work and work. When he has put a composition completely at his finger-tips it is then that he improvises. Knowing intimately every detail of a work is not enough. That is only the beginning, and the true artist uses his knowledge as a springboard to a tasteful interpreta-

Mme. Landowska's recitals over WABC-CBS are of momentous importance. I know it to be a fact that they are the Meccas of many distinguished musicians. Not only do they offer harpsichord performances such as are not available anywhere else in the world, but the programs themselves carry compositions of uncommon in-

Symphonic Wagner

One notes that the NBC Symphony Orchestra, under Leopold Stokowski's direction, promises a program consisting of the Beethoven Seventh Symphony and the prelude and Liebestod from Wagner's Tristan und Isolde.

The story concerning the composition of this music drama is much too complicated and too long to warrant a complete telling here. At any rate, the idea for such a work came to the composer in 1854, right smack in the middle of his labors on the Ring. Three years later he started on the actual composing and in 1859 it was finished.

The prelude, A minor, 6-8, makes a very gradual and long crescendo to mighty fortissimo, followed by a briefer decrescendo, which leads to a whispered pianissimo. Free as to form and ever widening in scope of development, it offers two chief themes. A phrase uttered by the cellos is united to another given to the oboes, both forming a subject called the lovepotion theme or the theme of longing. Another theme is also announced by the cellos. It is known as Tristan's love-glance and it is of a sensuous

After the Prelude the orchestra enters into the Liebestod, or Love-Death, that passionate flow of phrases taken mostly from the material in the sec-ond act love-duet Isolde (in the opera) sings her song of sublimated desire. It was Franz Liszt who used the term Liebestod to describe that portion of the music which Wagner had originally named Verklaerung.

Shostakovích Again

Unquestionably Shostakovich has made the grade in this country. No composer of our time has known greater accolades here and elsewhere than this young and unassuming Russian, whose works, he wishes us to believe, are expressions of a Soviet philosophy in terms of music.

The Fifth Symphony—which is on the program of the Philharmonic-Symphony, Artur Rodzinski guest-conducting—has made much headway here. There are those among us who consider it superior to the much-touted, endless Seventh.

Shostakovich, it so happens, found this composition of his to be the one to restore him to the good graces of the "powers." He had made a little mistake, it appears. His opera, "Lady Macbeth of Mzensk," which a first struck responsive chords in the Soviet hearts, was suddenly condemned for being a "concession to bourgeois taste." A ballet, "The Limpid Stream," based on the subject of communal farming, had to be withdrawn because of the thumbs-down attitude of officialdom. In short, Shostakovich was in a stew -and he knew it. However, he threw out a fourth symphony, for fear that it might not meet with approval, and began work on the Fifth, which he wanted to be the symbol of his "turning toward Soviet reality.

Be all this as it may, the Fifth Symphony is, in my opinion, a first-rate piece of writing. Throwing all the ideology aside, the music has the power to make its appeal immediately, which is no more than one can ask of any creation. When that appeal stays with one, it is a sure sign that a composer has struck it symphonically rich.

(Artur Rodzinski will be guest conductor of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Sunday, CBS.)

POPULAR MUSIC

Gershwin: Might have profited by more schooling?

YOU will be hearing a lot from a wistful-faced, attractive young: blonde by the name of Ethel Smith. She is a new acquisition of the "Hit Parade" and she promises to become a fixture there.

Miss Smith plays the Hammond organ. She plays

Latin-American music in the grand manner, with much zest and spirit and feeling. She knows this music because she has learned it at its source-in Latin-American countries.

Not long ago, while she was performing at the Copacabana in Rio de Janeiro, an executive of the "Hit Parade's" tobacco sponsors heard her. He liked her music—and more's the power to him-and he engaged her for a series of appearances.

At the Iridium Room of the Hotel St. Regis in New York, where Miss Smith may be heard of an evening, she told me, between sessions, many interesting things about her education, her career, and the like.

She was born in Pittsburgh. She was educated at Carnegie Tech, specializing in music and languages. Soon she became attracted to the organ and, being a person who goes out and does things, she took up the study of it.

She mastered the Hammond organ and decided to make a career of it. A trip to Cuba was prolonged into an eight-month stay, during which time she studied not only the people but also their music. After that came the long engagement at the Rio night-spot.
"I'm all for serious music," she said,

"even though most of my work now calls for me to play the popular type. The one thing I've never regretted is my sound training in music. But, as you can see, my tastes are pretty varied. I go for the better popular tunes and I'm simply wild about Latin-American music.
"Gershwin is a great favorite of mine, but I wonder whether or not he might have profited by more schooling. His was a natural talent, and sometimes natural talents become inhibited by too much concern with form and rules. As a matter of fact, a lot of our modern serious composers are so concerned with that stuff that they don't write music any more; they write equations, mathematical formulas. They just forgotten how to whistle. have That doesn't seem to be progress to me."

It didn't seem to be progress to the writer either, but, after all, he had no idea which "modern serious composers" Miss Smith had in mind.

The Man Who Played With Death

"Daddy says a man can do anything he wants, and he's a big darn fool if he listens to any woman." The child looked thoughtfully at Howard. "Hello, Uncle Warren."

Howard nodded curtly. He disliked this child, feeling that the child had inherited part of Gilbert's disposition. Drina prepared a glass of milk and a cookie for the boy. David looked at the milk distastefully.

"Did you have to drink milk when you were a little boy, Uncle Warren?"

he asked.
"Yes, David," Howard replied, as Drina put the glass on the kitchen table. The child looked at Drina.
"If it's good for me," he said, "why don't you take some?"
Drina poured herself a glass of milk from the guest bottle and closed the from the quart bottle and closed the refrigerator. She came back toward the table where the child was seated. He pushed his glass toward his mother. "Yours looks better," David said.

"Let me have yours, Mummy."

"David, you must stop always asking for everything I have. Your milk is the same as mine."

But she let David switch the glasses, and Howard frowned as he saw how easily Drina surrendered to the son her husband had spoiled. Abruptly he became tense. He heard the sound of a car's motor in the drive and saw its lights flash across the wall on the far side of the kitchen. Mitchell Gilbert had come home; they must get David off to bed.

The child went after a little coaxing, and Howard insisted that Drina lock the door leading from the kitchen to the stair hallway. In hurried final instructions, he told Drina to offer Gilstructions, he told Drina to offer Gilbert food in the kitchen.

"Make him sit there," he said, pointing toward the table. "Then I'll come up behind him with the knife."

"No, Warren. You—"
But she was interrupted by the banging of the outside kitchen door. Her husband had been drinking again. Her husband had been drinking again. Mitchell Gilbert, a tall, overbearing man with an athletic figure and a red face, looked quizzically at Howard and his wife. Drina explained that Howard had come over to fix the furnace. Gilbert nodded curtly and walked across the room and put a parcel on the table.

"What do you have there, Mitchell?" Drina asked.

"A toy for David." He unwrapped the parcel, throwing the paper carelessly on the floor. It was a toy merrygo-round, which he held up and examined before winding it and placing it on the table. The painted tin horses and painted tin men and women went spinning around and around in an endless circle in time to the tinkling

"I think I'll go in and give it to David now," Gilbert said.
"No, Mitchell," said Drina. "He's asleep."

"Then I'll wake him."
"Please don't," Drina begged.
"He's my son, and I'll wake him if I choose. What if I am drunk. He's seen me this way before. If he were only old enough, we could have some roaring times together.

"Have something to eat first," Drina

Gilbert sat down and wound the toy again. Howard walked casually toward the back kitchen door and locked it. Gilbert didn't hear the bolt slide into place, but Drina did. She turned a white, startled face toward her lover. "What's the matter with you, Drina?" her husband asked, suddenly noticing her agitation.

"Nothing," she said, trying to cover her nervousness. "I—I just slipped. Here, Mitchell-a sandwich."

Howard walked slowly to a spot behind Gilbert's chair. Drina saw him reach under his coat where she knew the knife was hidden.

"You know, Warren," Gilbert said suddenly, "I checked over the books at the office tonight. I found some curious things—"

Howard drew the knife from under his coat. Gilbert's back was still toward him. He had talked without turning around. Drina's eyes bulged with terror. Howard raised the knife to the level of Gilbert's neck and— "No!" cried Drina. "Stop!"

"Drina!" Gilbert leaped to his feet and stumbled toward his wife. "What's wrong?" he asked, as Howard slipped the hand holding the knife behind his

"Mitchell, listen to me," Drina said. "Warren and I are in love with each other. We have been for years. You've got to give me a divorce."

"So that's it," Gilbert said, laughing coarsely. "I thought I noticed something strange about the way you both acted tonight. As for the divorce, Drina, will you give me David?"

"You can't bring him up," she re-

"Then I won't do it. And don't think that I don't know about you and Warren. I'm not blind, and I'm not stupid. You're going to stay right here in this house with me until David's twenty-one years old." He spoke quietly and with conviction. "Then I'll tell David about you and Warren. But why wait? I think I'll tell him now."

"No, you can't," wailed Drina. "No, won't let you."

Gilbert moved toward the hall door, but Drina barred his way. He tried to brush her hands from his shoulders, but she clung tightly. With an abrupt movement he slapped her with the back of his hand, and for a moment there was silence in the small room except for Drina's sobs. Gilbert turned to Howard and grinned drunkenly.
"Well, Warren," he taunted, "she's the woman you love. Why don't you come to her rescue? You've always been a weakling, Warren. That's why you didn't get her when we first met her. You-

Howard pulled the knife from behind his back and walked toward Gilbert, who, startled at first, retreated toward the hall door. He tried to turn the knob, found it locked. He knew he was trapped.

"You—you really aren't going to do it, are you, Warren?" He was begging for his life now. "I—I know why you're doing this. It's because I found out you've been stealing money from the firm. That's why, isn't it? But I won't report it. I swear I won't. I wasn't going to do a thing about it. Believe me, Warren. . ."

The toy merry-go-round whirled in an endless circle on the kitchen table. Its tinkling tune became the only sound in the room. The murder was over in a minute.

Howard, steeling himself against the horror of his task, packed the body into the boxes he had prepared in the basement. The heavens blasted thunder like cannon all that night. The gray morning crept through the rain as Howard finished burying the boxes in lime under the old pear tree at the south side of the orchard. He was going to give the toy merry-go-round to the child but saw that it was covered with blood, so he buried that, too.

INAUGURATE NEW PLAN OF OPERATION FOR U. S. SHORT-WAVE STATIONS

Why Army Banned Messages From Troops in Australia; New Schedule for Rome Station; "On the Spot" Trend in London Programs Noted

International Broadcasters and Government Agencies Unite

N NOVEMBER 1, with but little fanfare or publicity, a new phase of international broadcasting was inaugurated in the United States. On that date the war-time union of international broadcasters with government agencies, the Office of War Information and the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, was formally effected.

"We have but one aim," Mr. Cowan of OWI told me. "That is to tell the truth. We intend to tell the truth to the peoples of the world about what is happening from day to day; about America's part in the war effort."

There will be no radical changes in program footures now being radiated program features now being radiated over United States short-wave stations. Many of the regular features now heard will be continued. Other new ones will be built to fit the united effort. There will naturally be a transition period during which the changing over of schedules will be accomplished. While there will be only four programming sources, namely NBC, CBS, OWI and CIAA, other shortwave broadcasters will contribute in various ways to the common cause. No more commercial programs will be broadcast over short wave for the duration, although it is hoped that provisions can be made for the continuance, in some form, of rebroadcasts of such popular network shows as Bob Hope, Red Skelton and Kate Smith to our troops abroad. In addition, new variety programs, some of them probably similar in style to the popular "Command Performance," are planned for our troops.

Unfortunately all has not been a bed of roses in this unification effort. Take for instance the case of short-wave station WRUL, operated by the World Wide Broadcasting Foundation. The trustees and Mr. Walter Lemmon, president of this organization, feel that their group should definitely be considered as one of the primary programming sources, and they have further asked for some reasonable assurance whereby WRUL can keep alive its own hard-won individualistic style now and in the period of world reconstruction. The World Wide Broadcasting Foundation, a non-profit organization, has been producing fine educational, cultural and public-service features of notable value for many years.

Mr. Bates, director of NBC international division, and Mr. John Royal, vice president of NBC, both endorse the unified broadcasting set-up and feel it is a much-needed and genuine forward step in international broadcasting right at this time. They feel that with more and better programs, more and higher-power transmitters,

By CHARLES A. MORRISON

and thus play a greater part than ever before in the war effort.

The nerve-center of the unified set-up is the large but unimposing building of the Office of War Information 224 West 57th Street, New York City. Here remodeling is proceeding at a rapid pace in order that the needs of the expanding organization may be met. Programs will originate from studios in this building, from NBC and CBS studios and possibly from other points as occasion demands.

Movie-Radio Guide believes its readers would like to know more about the new short-wave programs and features that are now being planned, and just as soon as schedules have been rearranged and stabilized we have been promised complete de-tails to pass on to you. Watch for this feature soon.

Why Yank Voices Were Banned

Many of our readers have written in asking why the popular and appreciated feature "American Voices from Australia," heard daily up until recently, was suddenly dropped without explanation from Melbourne's broad-casts to this country. At least part of the story can be told. The feature was banned not by Australian broadcasting authorities, as many thought, but by

One of the reasons advanced was the fact that many letters had been received from parents of boys who had not broadcast messages home inquiring why they had not appeared on the program, or inquiring as to whether their boy would be heard and if so when. Obviously it would only be possible for a very small percentage of the Yanks stationed in Australia to actually go on the air. Naturally every mother or father is anxious to hear the actual voice of their own loved one, but since it is not a question of favoritism or singling out of any particular soldiers, parents should be able to appreciate the general feeling of contentment, good health and satis-faction, expressed by most of those who spoke, as also probably applicable to their own son, husband or father stationed there. At any rate, the practical and good-will value of this little fea-ture was enormous, and it is to be hoped that Army authorities may see fit to allow it to again be aired.

More "On the Spot" Broadcasts

The present trend in broadcasts from London seems to be toward more "on the spot" and special features. A new one of this type may be heard Sundays at 7:15 p.m. EWT. It features J. B. McGeaghy as the pivotal per-the voice of America will be intensified officials of the United States Army.

"SOMEWHERE IN ICELAND" a company of U. S. troops gathers around the radio in the recreation room to enjoy a program of swing music from the States. Soldiers in Iceland like their music "hot," stop card and ping-pong games to listen in. Note heavy fur caps on some of the boys sonality and direct pick-ups from Moscow, Cairo and Sydney, or any other current "hot spots" . . . Another feature that should be of particular interest to those defense-factory workers on the night shift is "Worker's Playtime" which, rebroadcast by WOR (710 kcs.) Mondays at 4:05 a.m. EWT, is actually originated in England from a war factory and transmitted on short waves Fridays at 7:30 p.m. EWT.

The British Broadcasting Corporation is always glad to get positive suggestions as well as criticism and appreciation from its listeners. Tell them what you want to hear and give them concrete suggestions and you will find them extremely responsive. The aim of British radio is to provide raw material of fact on which free people can form their own opinions. Write to the British Broadcasting Corporation, 630 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Rome Makes Schedule Changes

The Rome short-wave station has been making a lot of changes in frequencies and program schedules. The first daily transmission to eastern North America now goes on at 7:20 a.m. over 2RO6 (15.30); the second transmission at 1:00 p.m. EWT over 2RO6 (15.30). The evening broadcast to North America is still heard from 8:30 p.m. to 12:00 mid. EWT, but 2RO22 (11.95) has been dropped in favor of 2RO11 (7.215). Other frequencies in use include 2RO4 (11.81) and 2RO3 (9.63). English news bulletins for England are broadcast over the Rome station as follows: At 10:00 a.m. over 2RO21 (15.047), 2RO22 (11.95), 2RO11 (7.215); at 4:00 p.m. over 2RO6 (15.30), 2RO4 (11.81), 2RO11 (7.215); (13.30), 2RO4 (11.61), 2RO11 (7.215); at 4:40 p.m. over 2RO6 (15.30), 2RO4 (11.81), 2RO3 (9.63), and at 6:00 p.m. EWT over 2RO6 (15.30), 2RO4 (11.81), 2RO3 (9.63), 2RO19 (10.33), 2RO22 (7.215) and 2RO23 (6.29).

Notes About the Stations

Another mystery station is now being heard on 15.22 megs daily from 9:30 to 9:45 a.m. EWT. The identification is "The Hague Calling." Presumably this is the same transmitter—believed to be the old Huizen, Holland, station—which broadcasts on the same frequency starting at 10:00 a.m. using the identification, "The Voice of Free India" . . . The Japanese-con-trolled station at Parao, in the Caroline Islands, may be heard occasionally on 9.565 megs from 5:00 to 8:30 p.m. EWT broadcasting in Japanese . . . Nazi-operated station "Debunk" (10.35) is still polluting the air with its vicious propaganda, 8:30 to 9:00 p.m. EWT. Don't be fooled by the opening selection, which is the "Star-Spangled Banner."

The Secret's Out

Ursile Twing, who sneaked into the Chase and Sanborn cast without a billing a few weeks ago, is Pat Patrick, popular Los Angeles night-club entertainer. Be careful, or you'll get him into a snit.

Paris in Lights

Betty Garde, who plays Mrs. Nielson on "The O'Neills," is famous for her collection of unusual jewelry. She prizes most her miniature replica of a street-lamp on the Rue de la Paix in Paris. The lights are pearls.

Low Man on a Totem Pole?

Charlie McCarthy was wrinkling his knotty brow over a new tribute to his wit today. Jack Horton, seventeen-year-old high-school student, arrived at the NBC studios in Hollywood recently with a foot-high "totem pole" he had sculptured of the entire cast of the Chase and Sanborn program—Charlie, Edgar, singer Dale Evans, Don Ameche and maestro Ray Noble. Young Jack designed the likenesses from pictures of the artists.

Ringed by Remote Control

Luise Barclay, who plays Alice Tobin on "The O'Neills," has just become engaged to Lieut. Bruce Banyard, U. S. A. bombardier, who is overseas.

Grace Valentine, St. Louis, Mo .-Yes, CLAYTON COLLYER'S nickname is "Bud" . . . Actor John Raby says he was born in New York City on June 1916, then his family moved to Mamaroneck, where John went to school. Though John says his child-hood ambition was to be a cowboy, he became a runner for a Wall Street brokerage house after his graduation from high school. He had taken parts in local productions while he had his job, and when he told his fa-ther of his desire to go to the American Academy of Dramatic Art he was given every encouragement. John says he sold candy between acts of his first show-just to augment his salary of five dollars a week, plus room and board. It was during his appearance in the Broadway success "Brother Rat" that a radio director spied him and gave him the audition which led to his role in the serial "When a Girl Mar-ries." Later he was heard in a prominent part in "A House in the Country."

John's married, stands five feet eleven inches, weighs about 160, has brown hair and blue eyes. He likes to fish, play golf, do a bit of writing now and then.

QUESTION SERVICE

HIS LAW CAREER was forgotten when radio beckoned Mel Allen, WOR-Mutual sportscaster. Starting as an announcer on Birmingham stations, he landed a network job in 1936 while visiting New York on a vacation born on St. Valentine's Day in 1913. Though he spent his early youth moving from city to city, his love for baseball hasn't changed since he was old enough to carry a score card. After he got his law degree at the University of Alabama, Mel remained on at the school as an instructor in speech. Mel intended finishing out his contract as a college professor before beginning law practise, but at one of the school basketball games he took over the mike and broadcast the game. An audition at a Birmingham radio station followed, and the law career was overlooked. Mel began to climb the ladder of fame from the time of his very first job. In 1939 he had his first crack at real big-time when he won the job of broadcasting the Yankee and Giant games. His ability as an announcer, his knowledge of sports in general and baseball in particular, have stood him in good stead—and made him popular.

CARVING'S a man's job, traditionally. At least that's what the boys insist when Linda Darnell, 20th Century-Fox star, ushers in the turkey with all the fancy trimmings. However, with so many men in the service, the carving-job has become milady's holiday task. Linda's helpers (l. to r.) are Sgt. Leonard Wheeler of the Marines, Corp. Kendall Man of the Army, Navy Yeoman William Watter, Coast Guard Yeoman Alexander Swan

WHAT'S COOKING!

By GEORGIA SCOTT

Carving Is an Art!

OW many women actually know how to carve? Very few indeed. In fact, women have always passed the job on to the first available man, be he husband, brother or friend. And traditionally speaking, carving is a man's 'job. However, in these days when the men in our lives are scattered here and abroad, carving the Thanksgiving turkey will become your holiday task. The question is, Where are you going to start and how are you going to do it?

In the first place, you must have the proper tools. Even the most expert carver would be at a total loss without the standard equipment. The carving set would include a knife, fork, and steel. The knife must have an eightor nine-inch blade and the fork should be equipped with a guard to protect the carver's hand when cutting toward the fork. The steel is used to true the blade-and nothing is more disconcerting to the carver than a dull or nicked blade. So by all means, take care of your equipment. Keep your tools in a separate box away from your other cutlery. Sharpen the blade from time to time, and always steel it before each carving!

The carver's place is, of course, at the head of the table. You will occupy this throne of honor, so by all means do that turkey justice. Place the turkey directly behind the dinner-plates, and as a matter of convenience to you make sure the breast points toward the left. This will be a great help when you start manipulating your tools! Small platters can be placed at one side to hold the removed leg, wings, and garnishing. Most people find it convenient to have the fork placed at the left of the platter, while the knife is at the right.

Assuming you know the position of the joints and bones, your objective should be neat, even slices. Draw the full length of the blade with one grand sweep—and never, never use the see-saw method. This is the true indication of the amateur-and plays havoc with the appearance of your turkey.

So with your turkey well cooked and your tools in order, you are all set to dissect Mr. Gobbler. Proceed in this order:

1. LEGS: Grasp the nearest leg with your left hand and cut the skin around the leg just where the thigh joins the body, from left to right. Then continue down through the joint. The hip joint is easily dislocated if you force it away with your left hand. It may be necessary to sever the thigh from the back with the point of the

2. WINGS: Remove the wing which is on the same side by the same method as used for the leg. Cut through the shoulder joint and remove.

3. BREAST: No joints to worry about here. Firmly insert the fork astride the breast-bone just beyond the highest point. Then simply slice by starting at the breast-bone and continuing downward.

4. SEPARATE LEG AND THIGH: With the left hand, hold the end of the drumstick and locate the spot where the thigh-bone and drumstick meet. Then to the right (on the thigh side) cut through the ligaments.

5. DARK MEAT: If the bird is large, slice the dark meat from the thigh and leg. However, if the fowl is rather small, simply serve it as one portion.

6. DRESSING: Remove the chestnut dressing from the vent of the bird and serve with each portion of turkey.

hood ambition of becoming a concert pianist. A well-received musical debut in a great hall would have been considered acclaim after twelve years of piano studying, but for Luise it was the turning-point in her life as she felt that certain flaws in her playing would be with her always. A while later, back in her home town of Philadelphia, she modeled for twelve dollars a week before she could get her first opportunity to join theatricals. Her stage work led to her radio debut in Philadelphia as an actress. Since her audition for a part in a Chicagoaired radio program, Luise has been heard over the airwaves in divers radio roles. She was born May 23, 1912, speaks French fluently, is five feet eight inches tall, weighs about 130, has brown hair and eyes, likes to swim and ride horseback. Right now Luise is free-lancing in New York.

Mrs. Marie Johnson, Oswego, N. Y. -NBC's "The Remarkable Miss Tuttle" is not due to return to the air. The same goes for the "Blue Theater" and Brent's House."

Mrs. A. Greek, Findlay, Ohio .-You've been hearing Lanny Ross singing on the "Camel Caravan" on Friday nights at 10 p.m. EWT over CBS. XAVIER CUGAT'S orchestra backgrounds the show, and you'll also hear Margo and HERR SHRINER.

Mrs. F. M. Swift, Benton Harbor, Mich.-You'll be able to hear messages from soldiers read over the Mutual network at 10:30 a.m. Sundays. An-other broadcast comes from London on Saturday night at 8 p.m. EWT, though this does not go over the entire network.

Mrs. J. H. Brand, Elmira, N. Y .-"Command Performance" is produced by the War Department solely for short-wave broadcasting to our boys abroad, and thus far no top-notch star has ever refused to play, nor has any of them ever received any remuneration. Because the show is strictly short-wave, it is difficult for many to hear it, but on Sunday at 11:30 a.m. EWT it is beamed toward Europe via WCBX and WCDA. At 9:15 p.m. EWT Sundays the show is beamed toward the Canal Zone, the West Indies and points south. At 10:00 a.m. EWT Sundays the program can be heard over short-wave stations WRCA, WNBI and WBOS.

Miss Mary Rosproy, Abilene, Kans.
—In the five-a-week "Young Widder Brown" serial, FLORENCE FREEMAN has the role of Ellen; the role of Joan in "When a Girl Marries" is handled by MARY JANE HIGBY; in the story of "Young Doctor Malone," the role of Ann is taken by ELIZABETH RELLER; LUCILLE WALL is Portia in "Portia Faces Life" and also plays Belle in "Lorenzo Jones"... Due to the war it has become a problem to stars as to how to handle the picture situation, but you might try writing to the studio of your favorite to secure a picture. You're welcome.

of Ben Bernie as eulogist for George M. Cohan at the grand trouper's memorial in Chicago. Cohan was first abbot of the Friars Club. Bernie reigns in that post today . . .

Ben's gal singer, Gale Robbins, leaves us for Hollywood picture work. Her sweetheart will drive her west, then return to Chicago to enter active service with the Air Forces at Chanute Field. The often-postponed wedding seems definitely off for the duration. Elisse Cooper, a southern gal, replaces Gale on the gum opera...

Art Kohl, busy actor of these parts, has been vacationing, too. On his return to his studio chores he auditioned with a new production director, Martin Magner, Vienna-born refugee from Germany. The men met in the control room. The director clicked his heels, bowed and announced, "Magner is the name." Kohl, used to the give-and-take of Chicago studios, thought it was a gag and replied, "Kohl iss der name. Ve ready now, jah." All, of course, to the accompaniment of heel-clicking and exaggerated bowing. As the audition proceeded, Art woke up to the fact that Magner's accent was genuine. The actor dropped his script and silently stole away.

When he returned to the house, the kitchen had been cleaned—spotlessly. David was asleep. He looked at Drina, but she did not embrace him as he expected. She didn't look at his face. She never looked directly at him again. . .

In the weeks that followed, Howard began drinking—a thing he never had done before. Drina was hysterical and frightened when the police bade her make frequent visits to the morgue to look at unidentified bodies. The police suspected nothing. Then came the evening when Drina asked Howard if he had been stealing money from the firm and he had to tell her the truth.

"If that's what's been troubling you, the answer is yes," he said. "I took is several thousand dollars. I took it when we decided to go off together and you backed out because you were afraid that, if we were ever found, David would be taken away from you. But what difference does it make now? That's all been cleared up."

"Yes," said Drina in a toneless voice.
"It's all cleared up. You insisted on murdering him so that he wouldn't turn you over to the police. You didn't kill him because you loved me! You lied and robbed and murdered. Do

I love you? You wanted me to answer that question. Well, I will. You're a vile beast and I loathe you!"

He struck her and she fled weeping from the room. It was then he heard the tune, the tinkling melody of the toy he had buried with the body of his murdered partner. There could be no mistaking it. At first he believed he had gone insane, He leaped from his chair and ran to the kitchen door.

The child, David, was carrying the grime-smeared toy!

David told Howard he had found the merry-go-round while digging for buried treasure, and Howard, cold with fear, asked the child if he had told anyone else where the "buried treasure" was hidden.

"No," David replied. "Do you want to keep it a secret?"

Howard knew the child must be prevented from ever telling anyone what he knew. His mother's life and his own depended on that. There was poison—rat poison—on the shelf above the refrigerator. It was easy to slip it into a glass of milk Howard poured for David as the child played with his new-found toy.

"Here's your milk, David," he said,

"Here's your milk, David," he said, handing the child the poisoned glass. "You have some, too."

David poured himself a glass and sat down with the child.

"Yours looks better than mine," David said. A doorbell rang. "Oh," David cried, "maybe that's Daddy." "You sit there," Howard ordered, "and I'll answer the door."
It was Drina. She had forgotten

It was Drina. She had forgotten her key. She and Howard came back into the kitchen, and Drina almost screamed when she saw the toy on the table and heard its tinkling melody. The story of the buried treasure was repeated.

"Did you find anything else?" Drina almost shouted. The child began to sob and Drina looked at Howard. Then, intuitively, her eyes glanced to the refrigerator shelf. The poison was gone

"Warren," she cried. "The shelf!"
That arsenic! You've—I've got to call a doctor."

She ran toward the other room and managed to lock the door behind her. Howard beat on the panel. If a doctor were called, the whole truth would come out. But Drina made the call, and when she came back, Howard looked at her with madness in his eyes. She looked at him suspiciously.

eyes. She looked at him suspiciously. "What're you going to do, Warren?" "It will be very simple," he said coolly. "The police will say that you went out of your mind when your husband disappeared and that you killed your child and yourself. You will be found hanging, the child will be found poisoned—"

His voice suddenly broke into an anguished scream of pain. He slumped to the floor clutching his stomach. Drina knew he was dying. With eyes wide with wonder, she looked at her son.

"David, tell me something," she said. "Did you drink the glass of milk Uncle Warren gave you?"
"Why, no, Mummy," the child replied innocently. "I changed mine for

"Why, no, Mummy," the child replied innocently. "I changed mine for his like I always do with you. I drank his and he drank mine. I changed it when he went to the door!"

Drina broke into mad laughter. She knew the doctor would come and learn the truth. She was beyond inventing a lie to explain the situation. Besides, there on the table was that telltale, bloodstained toy whirling around and around and around and playing its gay little tune that might well be the last music she'd hear on earth.

Thanxgivin' Letter to Daddy

because I gotta write a composition on 'em for my teacher. I'm writin' that turkeys is overstuffed chickens that are too lazy to lay eggs, an' they argue with other turkeys all day long like you an' Mummy. Only they can't throw dishes around.

But they do scratch each other, don't they, Daddy? Does Mummy scratch you that much? An' you once told her to go lay an egg. Can she, Daddy?

Anyway, I hope you're not mad at me now. Red and me was wishin' the other day that we could have Thanx-givin' and Christmasse every day in the year. So's Red said that if you wished on a turkey's wishin' bone, it'ud all come true. So we pulled all of Rudolph's feathers out lookin' for the wishin' bone and couldn't find nothin'. If you want to put the feathers back, Daddy, they're in the baby's crib. You should see him sneeze and make noises just like Rudolph. Gee, it was fun,

So please, Daddy, don't be sore at me now. I'm here stayin' late at school as I write this letter 'cause the teacher says I'm a bad girl an' I have to be punished. Six times is enough, Daddy. She spanked me five times tonight. Now her hand is sore. I had my spellin'-book under my dress the last one.

An' you don't want to hit me, too. You always say it hurts you more than it does me. That's what the teacher said after she spanked me, too. I guess you're write.

Very truly truly yours,
