customers. No other service provider in the radio industry can lock in transmission costs at 1988 levels out to 2000 A.D.

— SCS has been the pioneer in FM² (fm squared) technology. You don't need to know what it is, but you do need to know what it can do for your network. FM² audio transmissions are always interference free and impeccably clean. The complete satellite receive package required to turn on a new radio station to your format usually costs less than $995, even if that station has no existing satellite equipment on site. Instead of those huge antennas currently required for satellite reception, we allow you to choose the antenna size you need, starting out with antennas as small as 29".

— The Associated Press radio network also had the foresight to use Spacenet III for their transmissions. Combined with the 2500 radio stations reached by networks transmitted by SCS, the total number of stations reached by Spacenet III will soon exceed those reached by Satcom F-1R (if it hasn't already).

If you want more information, or want to find out how your network can thrive during the next decade, call me at 1-800-331-4806 to get the facts.

HARD WORDS FOR RADIO NETWORK PLANNERS

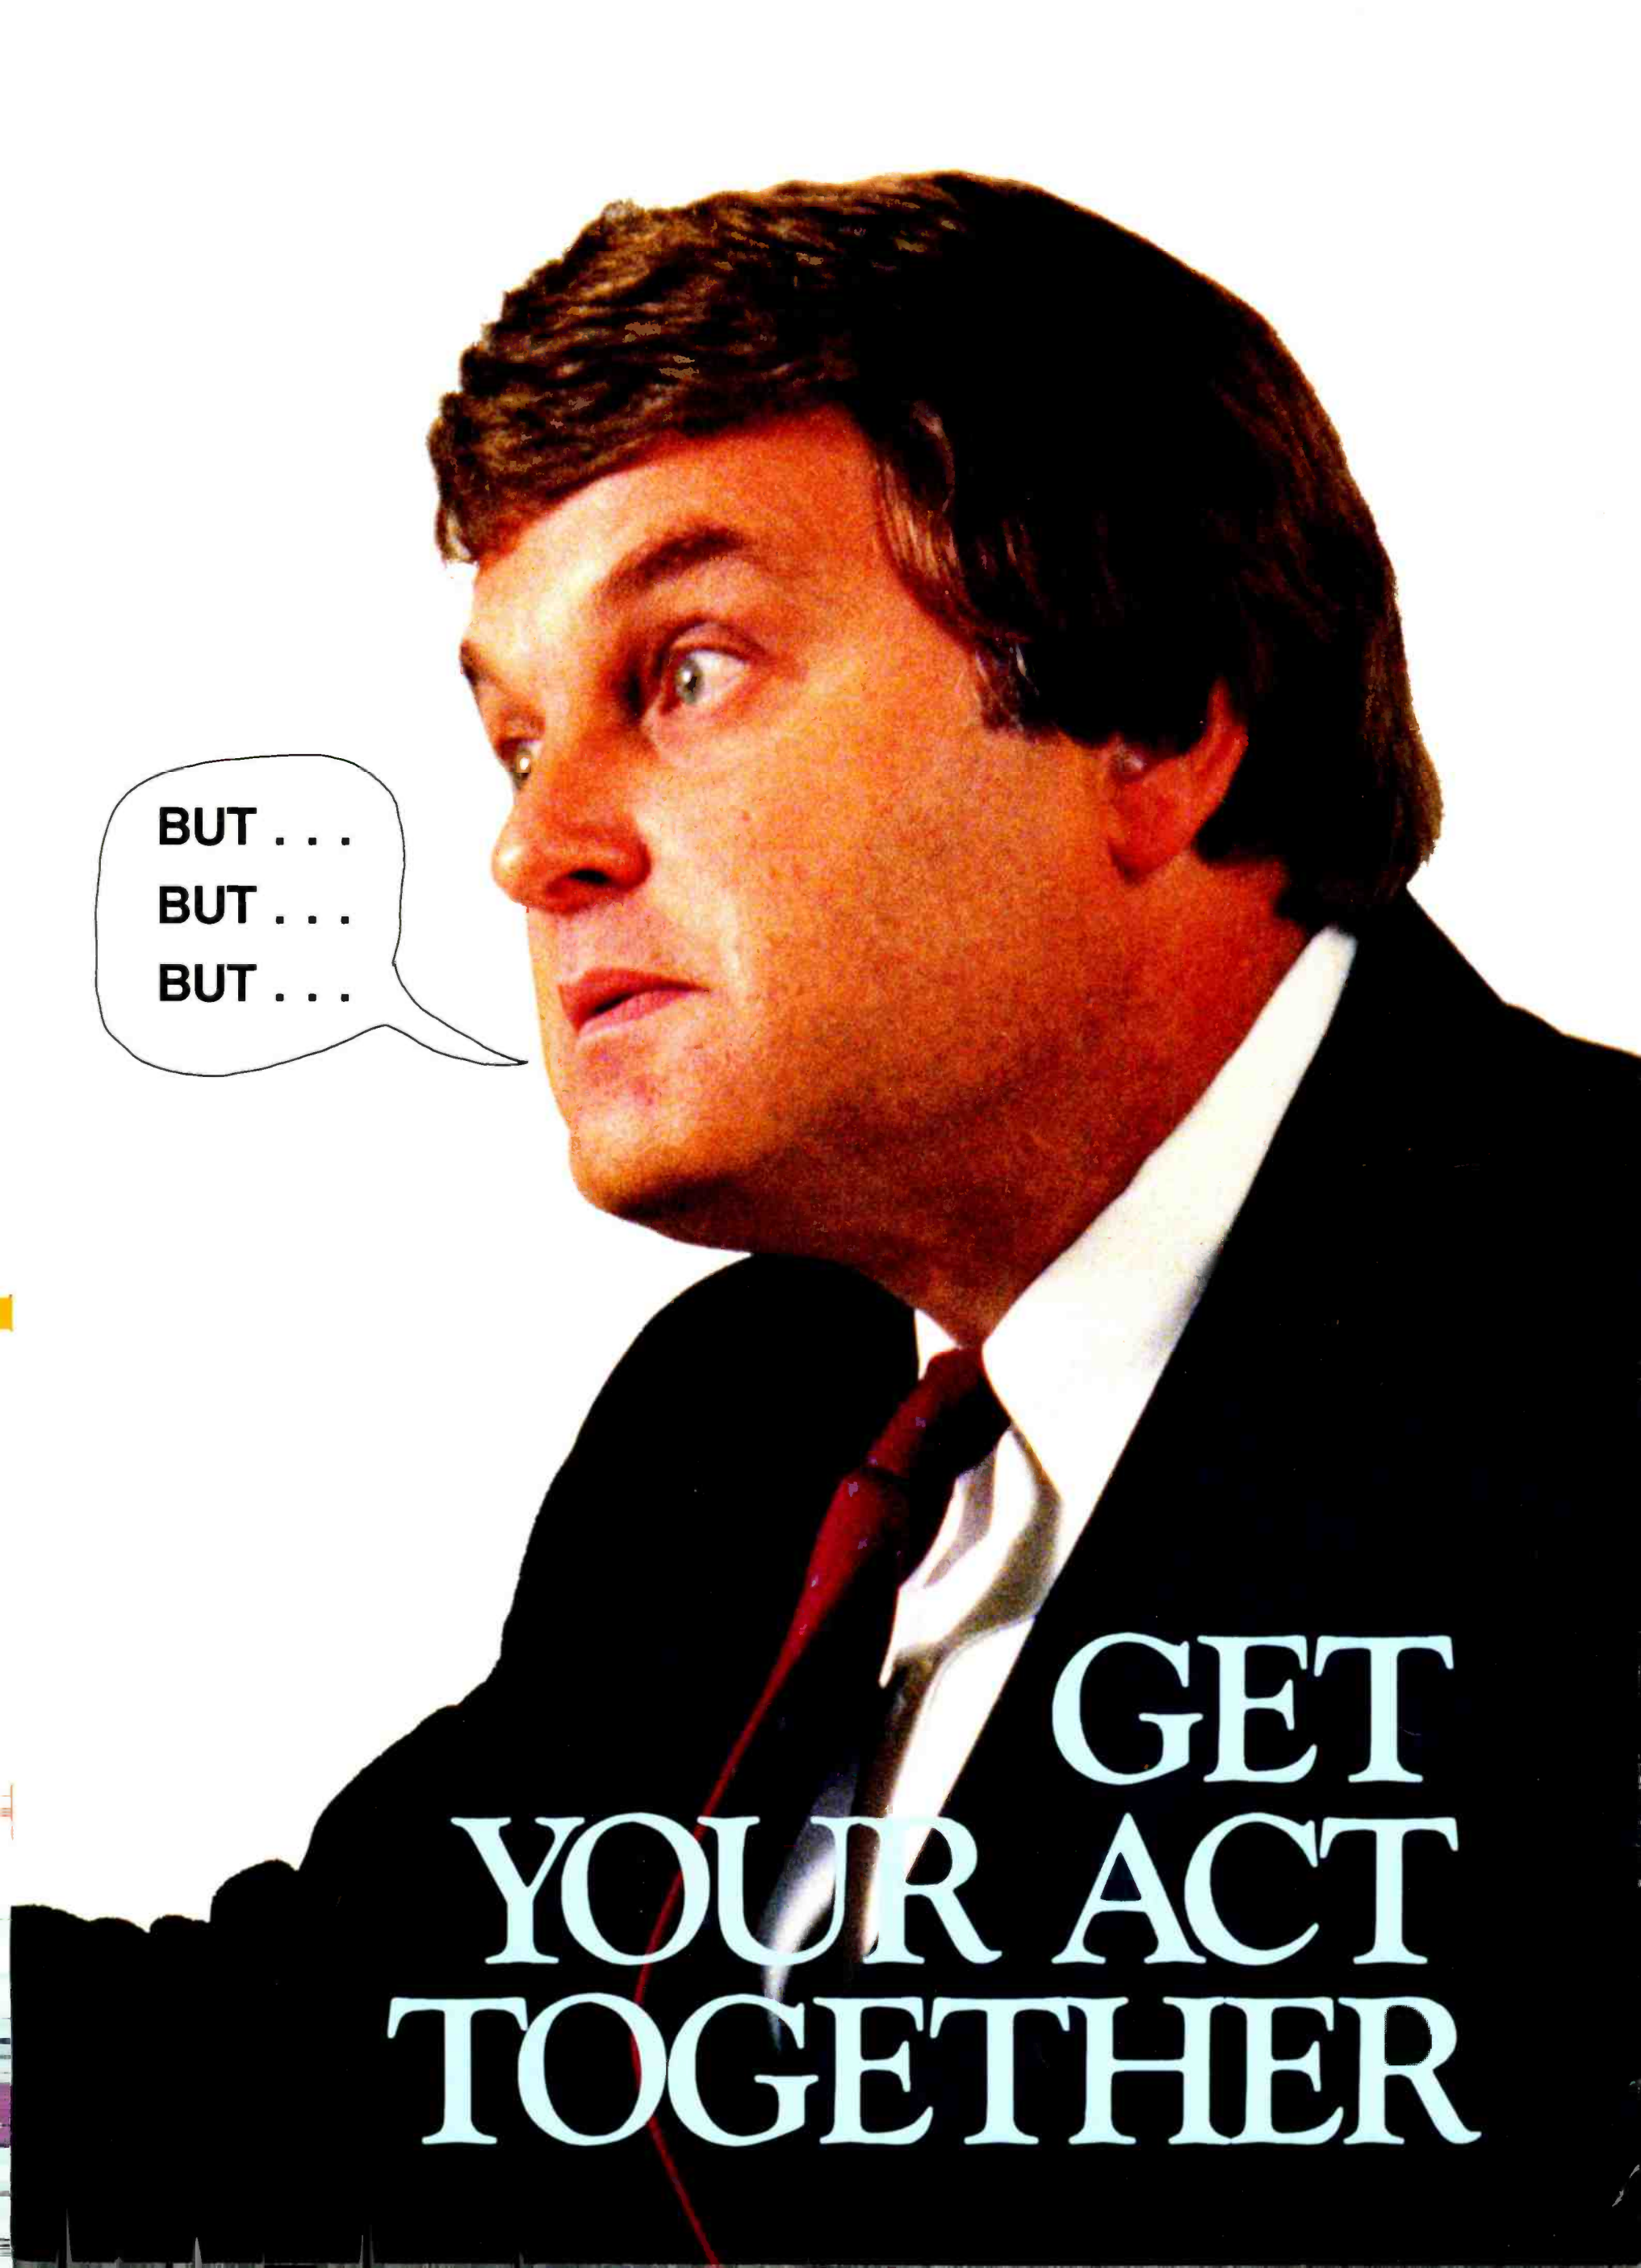

Tough times for the 90's. Satellite transmission costs for many networks will at least double — if space on a bird can be found at all. The "number one" radio satellite will be "number two" very soon. Because of new technologies introduced during the last few years, antenna sizes have shrunk and satellite receive hardware costs have dropped. These factors will cause some networks to fail — not because their programming wasn't good, but because another network could deliver similar programming for less than one fourth of the cost.

Did you know that more than half of all existing satellites will die (including Satcom F-1R, Westar IV, Westar V, and Galaxy III) between January 1991 and December 1994? Did you know that all of the major satellite operators are vowing not to launch any replacement satellites unless they have the satellite pre-sold? These two factors alone will cause a space "shortage" in the early 90's. It could be much worse if, heaven forbid, another catastrophic launch failure occurs and further delays the deployment of replacement satellites.

A much more competitive environment will develop in the 90's for radio networks. Along with escalating operating costs will come a veritable explosion of competing program sources. New developments in satellite transmission technology will allow a new network to bypass "standard" distribution channels and plunk down a 29" antenna at a radio station that can pull in alternate programming instantly.

In view of these facts, SCS has been planning for the 90's for over two years. We're ready.

— SCS has secured satellite space on Spacenet III, which is the only domestic communications satellite successfully launched in the past three years. In fact, the launch was so successful, that there was enough fuel left onboard to conservatively project that its life will easily extend to the year 2000. We have options to take up to 9 transponders in order to insure adequate space for our radio network

EPA SUCCESS

CHEAP TRICK is 1988's major success story with two Top 5 singles, including their first-ever #1 single, "The Flame," from their Top 20 platinum album Lap of Luxury. Listen for their new single, "Ghost Town," to hit the airwaves soon!

LUTHER VANDROSS' success is in the platinum. The new single "Any Love" is already dominating all formats, and with Luther's history of #1 Urban hits and five consecutive platinum albums, look for Any Love to be number six!

RHYTHM CORPS strikes it big with their Top 10 AOR track "Common Ground." Their new track, "Father's Footsteps," will be a highlight on their extensive concert tour with Pat Benatar as the Corps continues to recruit.

MICHAEL JACKSON's Bad album is shattering all records with an absolutely unprecedented five consecutive #1 singles. Watch as his new video and single, "Smooth Criminal" steal yet another #1 spot.

CHERRELLE's Affair with radio has just begun. The hit single, "Everything I Miss At Home" from the long-awaited album, Affair, is already burning up the urban charts, and is primed for crossover pop success.

SURVIVOR releases their long-awaited single, "Didn't Know It Was Love," from their hit album, Too Hot To Sleep. Watch for their exciting new video on MTV and other video outlets.

"WEIRD AL" YANKOVIC's near platinum Even Worse album is his fastest selling album to date. Look for his soon-to-be-released greatest hits album to eat up the charts!!

REO SPEED WAGON's The Hits collection is already gold and contains the A/C/Top 40 hit, "Here With Me." The new single, "I Don't Want to Lose You," is already rushing onto Top 40 formats across the country.

THE FIRST FIFTEEN YEARS

Fifteen Years Of Setting The Standards

In 1973 R&R was created out of a desire to serve the industry with unbiased news coverage and honest, understandable charts. There was a gaping hole for a newspaper with an objective approach.

At the time, trade publications generally had little sympathy and respect for radio. And existing charts lacked supportive information that would allow readers to see for themselves how a record was performing.

R&R put the focus on radio, became the first to publish current music information the same week it was reported, and took the mystery out of national charting. Our airplay-only charts eliminated the built-in time lag of charts using sales figures. Our reporters have always been market leaders, as measured objectively by ratings credentials. Our format editors are successful major market programmers with the experience to relate to their peers in the radio realm.

We set unmatched standards of integrity and depth of information, then began expanding our coverage. We branched out to Washington and Nashville. We covered radio and record news, music, business, government, and in-depth programming, marketing, and sales developments in the most up-to-date, comprehensive fashion the industry had seen.

Today, R&R is truly the information leader. We are still guided by our original principles of honesty, fairness, and high quality.

Thanks to you, the readers who have given your approval to what we've tried to do, R&R stands head and shoulders above our competitors. In survey after survey — by radio research firms and record labels — R&R is clearly the leader . . . by a wide margin. Thank you for making our first 15 years of dedication and hard work so successful . . . your support and friendship means everything to us.

R&R

THE FIRST FIFTEEN YEARS

1973-74

Beginnings

The tail end of 1973 and on through 1974 was a time of contrasts. Early glimmerings of the energy crisis surfaced. The nation's most noteworthy (if short-lived) craze was streaking. While the Watergate scandal showed that even your government wasn't trustworthy, along came a radio/record trade publication that the industry found it could trust.

The very first issue's editorial by Publisher Bob Wilson set the tone for the next 15 years. "There is a definite need for a sheet that serves all facets of the industry, one that furnishes organized factual material, compiled by professionals in a direct, more usable manner than is currently available."

R&R filled a gap, and the news and novelties, history and hi-jinks, were covered. Join us for the first episode in a 15-year look at news headlines as they happened, early careers of industry stars, the hits of the day, and a healthy dose of the humor and fun that makes this business just a little different . . .

The First Issue

Readers knew right away they were getting a newspaper. The logo would change and the Fastest Movers would shift to the top right and become the (CHR) Top 20, then off the front page and onto the back. We'd clean up the typesetting once we fired its perpetrator, a spectacularly inept typographer named Ken Barnes, and we'd even figure out we could use photos on the front page by the next issue. But the immediate information and urgency a newspaper communicates have stayed with us throughout.

The Starting Lineup

Here at the start and still here:

- Bob Wilson, Publisher
- Dick Krizman, Ad Director
- Ken Barnes, Typesetting
- Richard Zumwalt, Production
- Roger Zumwalt, Production
- Nancy (Lecuyer) Hoff, Chart Director

Introducing The Back Page

Until May 10, 1974, R&R's back page featured an advertisement, similar to virtually every other trade publication in the industry. Looking for a well-read location to place the CHR chart, New & Active, and what would later become Significant Action, we hit upon the Back Page, and it became an institution in the industry. (We didn't start calling it The Back Page until June 27, 1975, but haven't stopped yet.)

Hot Streak

For three consecutive issues, streaking — the then-popular indoor/outdoor spectator sport of running nude in public — shot to the top of R&R's news coverage, as stations across the nation decided to display their nose for nudes.

The first week, WPOP/Hartford gave away "Streaker Sneakers" and KEYN/Wichita promoted "Straker Kits" that came complete with "a rosebush warning system."

The second week, WBBQ/Augusta, GA morning man Buddy Carr displayed his shortcomings by becoming the first man to streak a TV show.

The moon finally set on R&R's coverage when KIMN/Denver morning man Mike Butts decided to honor the 1500 people who'd recently streaked the Colorado University campus by cueing up "The Strip-

The NAKED Truth...

WHERE YOUR FRIENDS ARE!

Caught In The Act

WHAT SORT OF MAN READS R&R?

In our wonder years — as in it's a wonder we made it to the printer on Tuesday — R&R found itself practicing the manly art of self-promotion via a series of in-house ads. This "What Sort Of Man Reads R&R" campaign positioned R&R as the alternative to "singled spaced typewritten xeroxed 'magazines'" and publications that devote as much space to pinball machines and jukeboxes as they do news and facts."

Among the adults who consented to lend their personal endorsement to "The Industry's Newspaper": Hugh Hefner, John Lennon, and (pictured) then-Elektra/Asylum VP Jerry Sharell, who was definitely one of those "men on the way up," as he's currently Exec. VP/Entertainment & Marketing for Westwood One.

Energy Crisis

In response to the energy crisis of 1974, several stations, including KLEO/Wichita, WBZ/Boston, and WTOP/Washington, set up carpool promotions that attempted to link listeners via computer networks.

While the US government talked about asking radio stations to conduct voluntary sign-offs as well as decrease their power usage, KDWB/Minneapolis PD Chuck Buell volunteered that the public could cooperate by listening only to 500-watt outlets instead of those 50,000-watt powerhouses. R&R Engineering columnist Andy Laird noted that a 50,000-watt radio station consumes as much power as do 60 or 70 electric irons.

per" and disrobing live on-air. 30 seconds into the disc, he was joined by a nude man and woman, the latter of whom bent over to reveal the message "I listen to Mike Butts in the morning" written on her posterior. 'Twas the brainchild of a pair of local RCA reps, who commemorated the event with photos, which we can't reproduce here as they currently reside in one of our old editors' personal collection.

Meanwhile, at a WEA distribution meeting, Alan Mink's comment that "Warners is streaking up the charts" served as a cue for two nude employees (one male, one female) to run through the room, underscoring the naked truth of his sentiments. This was also the first (and last) week that a snapshot of a man streaking the KLOS/L.A. studios made R&R's front page.

additional programming

The main element of music information that distinguished R&R from dozens of previous trades was the Parallels, a means of grouping together stations with similar formats, market size, and ratings impact. The first design had room for six parallels, soon trimmed to three for simplicity's sake. At right, the first CHR chart, a Top 20 complete with airplay acceptance graphs.

IS YOUR JOCK TOO TIGHT?

As we've progressed through the '70s and '80s, R&R has had both its rate card and its consciousness raised, as evidenced by this ballsy, in-your-face example of the kind of self-promoting ads we've, uh . . . outgrown by now.

The cover-up of the Watergate Hotel break-in was the break-in story of 1974. Among the station promotions that attempted to capitalize on the lies coming out of the nation's Capitol were: WEBN/Cincinnati, which gave away a tape recorder that didn't erase to the winner of a Rosemary Woods lookalike contest; and WNCU/Columbus, OH, which awarded listeners "Watergate Memorial" items that consisted of a framed piece of recording tape, billed as "your very own undeleted expletive."

First in a distinguished line of R&R ratings & research contributors was MTV founder Bob Pittman, then PD at CHR WPEZ/Pittsburgh. He took readers on a guided tour through Arbitron headquarters in scenic Beltsville, MD.

Besides the Casablanca and Arista formations (see Headlines), the following labels formed, folded, or found new partners during 1973-74:

- Larry Uttal forms indie Private Stock
- Led Zeppelin's Swan Song distributed by Atlantic
- George Harrison's Dark Horse goes to A&M
- ABC distributes Sire
- ABC folds Blue Thumb, Paramount, Dot into parent label

R&R

THE FIRST FIFTEEN YEARS

1975

Second Year, First Convention

Radio had an eventful year in 1975. More AM Top 40s bit the dust, while a new L.A. outlet called KIIS debuted and WKYS/Washington became the first major market Disco station. Disco's impact on American pop music became impossible to ignore, with "The Hustle," "Jive Talkin'," and two KC & The Sunshine Band records in the year's Top 15.

The big event for R&R was our first convention, an event still remembered (if not necessarily fondly) by the staff at the Atlanta Royal Coach Motor Hotel. And a suggestion for a human procession of "hands across America" for next year's Bicentennial provoked a torrent of interest — well, a trickle — and went on the back burner for 11 years.

The First R&R Convention

R&R held its first convention March 21-23, 1975, at Atlanta's Royal Coach Motor Hotel, and industry meetings (not to mention the Royal Coach) were never again the same. Clive Davis hosted a Q&A session, Joe Smith chaired a record promotion panel, the leading radio gurus of the day (from Lee Abrams to Jerry Clifton, Scott Shannon to Bill Tanner) appeared. Jay Thomas hosted musical performances by the Pointer Sisters, Jim Stafford, Paul Davis, and more, and John Leader contributed a visitor's guide to Georgia. The radio and record industries met on neutral ground, discovered it was possible to exchange ideas and still have a good ol' time, and an institution was born.

RADIO DAYS

- WRC-FM becomes Washington Disco outlet WKYS
- KKDJ switches to KIIS
- New York AOR WQIV sets return to Classical WNCN
- WCOZ/Boston goes AOR
- Cox buys KOST/Los Angeles

Improving The Ratings

Arbitron was becoming thoroughly entrenched as the ratings standard by 1975, and although we still published stray Hooper or Pulse numbers here and there, we were firmly on the Beltsville bandwagon with our first R&R Ratings Report. This December project, subtly titled "ARBreakout," included five-book 12+ trends and a bit of cume and demo info for the top 59 markets (don't ask us where that cutoff point came from).

THE LABEL SHUFFLE

- Ariola America formed with Jay Lasker President; Capitol distributes
- Chicago manager James William Guercio forms Caribou Records; distributed by CBS
- Pasha formed by Spencer Proffer

R&R's Second Anniversary: Dead On It

Using a striking Grateful Dead icon (by permission), we raised a clawed finger in the direction of industry skeptics who thought a radio-oriented newspaper could never threaten the established trade powers of the day (Billboard, Cash Box, Record World, Gavin, the Ted Randal sheet). A new approach to music data and the grateful dedication of our supporters made the difference.

Full Moon Over R&R

You've Got To Hand It To Him

Artist manager Ken Kragen used good timing when he planned Hands Across America. He proposed the idea for a coast-to-coast human chain while the Band Aid, USA For Africa, and Live Aid projects were still fresh in everyone's memory. And with the exception of a few gaps in remote areas, Kragen was able to pull off the May 1986 event.

It was a great idea — except it wasn't a particularly original idea. A front page story in the September 12, 1975 issue of R&R describes an almost identical promotion, proposed by RKO VP/Programming Paul Drew. He suggested that stations nationwide should encourage Americans to form a coast-to-coast human chain on July 4, 1976 (the country's bicentennial). At a designated time (3pm ET) all US citizens would sing "God Bless America."

The R&R story heralded the idea as "the largest radio promotion in history." However, Drew was 11 years ahead of his time; he couldn't drum up enough support for the project, and it was eventually scrapped.

THE FIRST FIFTEEN YEARS

We Lead The Way In Disco . . . Then Duck

Sometimes you can be a little bit ahead of your time. In January 1975 the disco/dance industry was a loosely organized bunch of clubs playing Gloria Gaynor, "The Hustle," and Disco Tex & His Sex-O-Lettes. Sensing a trend, R&R joined with the late Marc Paul Simon, one of disco's true visionaries and later a trailblazer at Casablanca, to launch a "Disco" section presenting top audience response numbers at clubs nationwide. The section went biweekly, then went bye-bye immediately thereafter, as the whims of club jocks did not seem to be as reliable an indicator as we hoped. When Disco (later Dancemusic) radio became a force in 1979, we reintroduced coverage, but club jock-poll charts had long since become the widespread (if still dubious) standard.

The More Things Change . . .

You Can't Say That (Or Six Other Words) On The Radio

When listener-sponsored WBAI/New York aired comedian George Carlin's now-legendary "Seven Dirty Words You Can't Say On Radio Or Television" routine back in 1973, at least one listener complained to the FCC, which then accused the Pacifica station of "broadcasting indecent language when children are in the audience."

In 1975, the station was appealing a lower court's decision, asking the FCC to either clarify what constitutes "indecent" material and define what hours that children may be listening or to throw the ruling out entirely. But such legal battles cost money, which is why on Columbus Day, 1975 the man himself, George Carlin, headlined a fundraising concert for WBAI before 1500 free-speech advocates at New York City's Town Hall.

FLASH FORWARD

No Cold Cash Calls

WKTQ (13Q)/Pittsburgh got a $2000 slap on the wrist from the FCC for failure to give notice of its intention to air phone calls. The incident that triggered the action dated back to 1973, when a "cash call" contest resulted in some listener-generated profanity assaulting the public sensibilities.

The Heftel-owned station argued unsuccessfully that impromptu listener statements such as "I listen to 13Q" were not conversations and therefore not subject to FCC guidelines. The FCC, however, maintained that "cash calls" are an invasion of privacy, and that broadcasters are required to inform the party to whom they are speaking prior to airing or recording any phone conversation.

The FCC reaffirmed this ruling recently (R&R, 7/22/88), claiming that a person's right to answer the telephone without their response being transmitted to the public in the absence of prior notice was greater than a radio station's right to create spontaneous humor.

Stepping Up The Pace

The United States' 200th year went something like this. Bicentennial promotions abounded, the CB craze went over and out, a financially troubled, eccentric L.A. rock station called KROQ went back on the air after an absence of two years, and consultant Kent Burkhart acknowledged the contributions of a key staffer by changing his firm's name to Burkhart/Abrams & Associates.

R&R was frenetic in '76: a second convention, also in Atlanta; the introduction of Parallel One Playlists, a Black Radio section, and the Picture Pages; a comprehensive Country special set in type smaller than the Parallels; our first Top 40 Editor, J.J. Jordan (previously all Top 40 info was lumped under Radio News); and the ambitious, ahead-of-its-time offshoot publication the R&R Forum.

PATRIOTIC PROMOS

America Celebrates Its Bicentennial

Patriotic fervor was at an alltime high when Americans celebrated the nation's Bicentennial in 1976. While all the flagwaving was going on, stations nationwide did their part to promote the country's 200th birthday.

KUPD/Phoenix's Cleveland Wheeler wanted to develop a "Communications Time Capsule '76," designed to represent the broadcast industry as it stood that year. The capsule would be buried at KUPD's studios, not to be opened until the year of the tricentennial (2076).

Then there was WRKO/Boston PD J.J. Jordan, who suggested all stations play "God Bless America" simultaneously (sound familiar?). However, the project never got off the ground. In a letter to R&R (6/25/76), Jordan thanked the "few stations that volunteered their participation." (Maybe he should have joined hands with RKO VP/Programming Paul Drew.)

R&R Convention II: Let An Industry Come In & Do The Popcorn

The hordes of the industry returned to sack Atlanta in 1976 for the second R&R Convention, this one at the "world's tallest hotel," the Peachtree Plaza. RKO Radio President Dwight Case and E/A Chairman Joe Smith keynoted, Clive Davis, Irving Azoff, and Kent Burkhart were among the panelists, and Ronnie Milsap, Michael Martin Murphey, and the Spinners headlined, hosted unforgettably by Tony Orlando. And who could forget the 27th floor completely carpeted in popcorn?

Listing To The Forefront

Ripped off countless times in subsequent years, the playlists started here July 16 — a chance to see the actual lists of major market CHR stations. The P-1 Playlists originally had to be typeset by hand, eventual computerization coming as a godsend.

A Funny Thing Happened On The Way With The Forum

The idea was to create a lighthearted, satirical, irreverent publication for the industry, using lots of color, slick paper, and heavy participation from record and radio folk. Tragically, we didn't think to combine under-the-table independent promotion services with ad packages for the R&R Forum, so after three wiggled-out monthly issues, lack of revenue (advertisers preferred to put their money where the charts were, in the weekly R&R) impelled its demise.

But not before the Forum presented such priceless contributions to industry lore as:

- a nude centerfold of producer Snuff Garrett
- the debut of Bobby Ocean's "Err-Waves" radio comic strip, which later ran in R&R for years
- a New Products section which presaged both our "What's New" feature and later "R&R Overview"
- the debut of a column by the legendary Gary Owens, also later absorbed in R&R
- a warning about video's threat to radio (in '76, yet)
- and the indescribable exploits of R&R's "Rambling Radio Reporter" (actually, now it can be told, former Editor and noted author Mark Shipper), who hit the road to critique radio stations and demolish their markets' civic reputations in some of the wildest satire ever published.

Street Talkin' Guys

In November we introduced one of our true institutions (just ask any of the mental types who've compiled it). After rejecting titles like Boulevard Banter, Curbside Chatter, Road Rappin', and Chinwag, we named it Street Talk and debuted it as the bottom 20% of a Parallel page.

It was originally credited to its first author, Top 40 Editor J.J. Jordan; later, after it gained enough importance to rate its own page, we turned it semi-anonymous (although anyone who's ever seen John Leader could deduce from the caricature that headed the page that he was the man responsible for several years). Street Talk continues to be the industry's prime source for rumor and humor, whose innuendo and who's out the door, and the hottest up-to-the-minute news.

FCC Probes Innuendo, Double Entendre

After spending a year cranking off angry letters to radio stations that broadcast Fanny's "Butter Boy," Norman Markowitz filed a February FCC petition that charged Washington, DC outlets WRC, WKYS, and WINX with violating the Commission's rules on indecency.

Six months later, the FCC denied Markowitz's complaint, saying that double entendre and innuendo were not patently offensive and that in the future the Commission would limit its view of indecency to "words that depict sexual and excretory activities and organs in a manner deemed to be offensive with regards to contemporary community standards for the broadcast medium." Well, it was clearer than subsequent pronouncements on the subject.

How does it feel to be treated like a commodity?

Not very good, we're sure.

There's no way to avoid this feeling when you're just one of 10, 12 or 20 stations that are being represented by one of the megareps.

So if you're beginning to get that sinking feeling of becoming just a supplier of inventory, we have a way for you to escape the "numbers game."

Move to a place where you don't have to compete for attention.

At Eastman, you're an individual station with a unique personality, not a commodity. We don't blur the competitive differences between stations.

In fact, our people work overtime to understand your individual market, station and audience. They look for ideas and values that contribute to your getting a higher price for your product. In the top 20 markets, where Eastman reps a leading station, the market cost per point has increased 11 percent in two years.

Does your rep really sell your station the way you want it sold...or is it just price and ratings? If you're ready to be sold on quality, not just quantity, give Eastman a call at (212) 581-0800.

AM Stereo

A joint FCC radio/electronics committee announced that it would begin testing at least six newly-developed AM stereo systems later this year.

After the completion of testing (the cynical among us will note that there was no hard-and-fast deadline attached), the committee said it would make a recommendation as to how one uniform system could be used. (The Ghost of Christmas Present also notes that this opened up a whole 'nother can of worms that delayed any formal decision-making for another year or so.)

What's Your Handle, Good Buddy?

Novelty records occasionally inch their way onto the charts. Sometimes they even make it to the top. But the short-lived CB fad abetted by C.W. McCall's "Convoy" went beyond the airwaves and spilled over into the national consciousness. Of course, Hollywood couldn't wait to get into the act; "Convoy," starring Kris Kristofferson, capitalized on the craze. (Even First Lady Betty Ford had her own "handle" — First Mama.)

While people across the country formed CB clubs, stations nationwide fueled the fad with numerous promotions, most consisting of highway-clogging convoy caravans. Some of the more successful station promos included:

- WPLO/Atlanta: An eight-and-a-half mile long, 1500-vehicle convoy from Marietta to Buford, GA; it took three-and-a-half hours to move the convoy from start to finish.

- WAPE/Jacksonville: Over 600 vehicles participating, with C.W. McCall himself leading the way.

- WLAC/Nashville: A line of cars, trucks, and motorhomes circled the city's "inner loop" section of freeway.

By the time summer rolled around, however, Bicentennial fever had replaced CBs as the country's latest craze.

THE FIRST FIFTEEN YEARS

General Tire To Spin Off RKO To Shareholders

In a move designed to protect its broadcast holdings (including eight major market radio stations) from license challenges regarding alleged improper payments to foreign governments by the parent company, General Tire & Rubber Co. announced it would spin off its RKO General Inc. subsidiary to a group of Gen Tire shareholders.

The proposed move would be subject to the ruling that the action would be tax-free to the shareholders and that the deal would clear all regulatory agencies, including the FCC. Twelve years later, RKO's still spinning 'em off.

RIDIN' THE RAPIDS

Raft Races Run Rampant

Though other summertime promotions might fail, stations can rely on an old standby that's sure to generate community interest: raft races. And during the mid-'70s, contestants had plenty of opportunities to beat the heat and show off their homemade rafts. (Some of them actually stayed afloat.)

In 1976, WAPE/Jacksonville held its first Florida-Georgia Raft Race, which featured more than 150 rafts rolling down the border of the two Southern states.

WSAM/Saginaw, MI's fourth annual race included more than 200 rafts. But WQXI/Atlanta pulled out all the stops for its Ramblin' Raft Race, perhaps the biggest annual radio promo in the country at that time. More than 40,000 participants ventured down the 9.2-mile course. (The event was so big, it was designated as Georgia's first official Bicentennial event.)

However, in 1979 WQXI found itself in a promotional battle with crosstown CHR rival WZGC (Z93). WQXI had a financial falling out with the American Rafting Association (ARA), cosponsor of the race. The ARA then hooked up with Z93 to promote the event. (It was the first time in ten years WQXI was not the official radio sponsor.) This prompted WQXI to take legal action; however, the court ruled against the station.

ROLLING STONES' LP

Women See Red Over "Black And Blue"

The Rolling Stones, rock's original bad boys, made headlines in 1976 when a billboard promoting their latest LP "Black And Blue" was defaced by feminists.

The billboard — located on the Sunset Strip — showed a bruised and battered woman, bound and trussed, her clothes ripped, and her legs spread at a rather revealing 90-degree angle. If the visual aspects weren't obvious enough, the ad copy definitely delivered the message: "I'm 'Black and Blue' from the Rolling Stones — and I love it!"

When someone spraypainted a rather pointed commentary across the billboard — "This is a crime against women" — the story generated national press coverage.

Atlantic Records took a lot of heat from various women's rights groups. (Atlantic eventually took down the billboard, a week before its scheduled removal.) By the end of the year, the National Organization for Women (NOW) had spearheaded a drive to boycott all WEA product, just in time for the all-important Christmas retail season. (Sales were not affected, however.)

The issue was eventually resolved two-and-a-half years later; in a joint statement, Warner Communications Inc. (WCI) and Women Against Violence Against Women (WAVAW) agreed WCI would "strongly discourage the use of images of physical and sexual violence against women" on record covers, and in advertising and promotional materials.

The King Is Dead — Long Live . . . Disco?

Elvis Presley died, "Star Wars" was born, and the leadoff single from a forthcoming film called "Saturday Night Fever" propelled the Bee Gees to No. 1 toward the end of 1977. Times were good in the radio business, as major group purchases began to happen, and in records as well, with countless custom label deals going down.

R&R went to Dallas for a smokin' convention in more ways than one, published the definitive "Top 40 Story," added several key staffers, and bolstered its editorial content in a big way, essentially becoming an industry newspaper with the accent on news.

Convention '77 Explodes In Dallas

By February 1977, the R&R Convention had arrived as an industry fixture. When a two-alarm fire broke out in the kitchen of the Fairmont/Dallas, the throngs of registering attendees carried on with their "whenja get ins" and "how ya doins," pausing only to politely applaud the fire department when it came to the rescue. The industryites apparently thought the fire was part of the show.

By convention's end, they were probably convinced it was, after seeing Casablanca President Neil Bogart vanish in a cloud of smoke after his keynote address on new technology. Radio pioneer Gordon McLendon made a rare public appearance as a keynoter, and the reclusive David Geffen's audience Q&A session was a first.

Boz Scaggs and Emmylou Harris provided the entertainment, seminars starred the leading lights of radio and records, and nearly 3000 people went home happy — if a little singed.

Legends Immortalized In Top 40 Story

In our first separate-issue special, we chronicled the history of the Top 40 format in the words of the people who created and developed it. The September '77 "Top 40 Story" featured elaborate displays of station facilities, a music research interview with John Sebastian, record promotion and engineering articles, and a historical essay by Kent Burkhart, but the highlights were interviews with WABC architect Rick Sklar, RKO programming chief Paul Drew, and candid talks with two pioneers who rarely spoke with the trade press, Top 40 legend Gordon McLendon and the man behind Boss Radio, Bill Drake. The special remains a matchless historical perspective and a useful primer for today's CHR programmers.

KMOX Caller Offers To Sell Nuclear Bomb

"Wanna buy a nuclear bomb?" When KMOX/St. Louis talk show host Jim White opened the phone lines on his 9pm-3am segment, the listener who called in this innocent question touched off a potential breach of national security that wound up embarrassing the FBI, the Pentagon, the Strategic Air Command, and the local phone company.

The caller, purporting to be a security guard at Whiteman Air Force Base near Sedalia, MO, said he had a nuclear warhead in his garage that had been stolen from the base and replaced by a fake to point out a general laxity in security precautions at the base.

Claiming that the bomb was being replaced as he spoke, the caller offered to steal another, meet White, and take a photo of White straddling the warhead. Declining the invitation, White calmly informed the FBI, then kept the caller on-line for the four hours it took to trace the call.

The military fed White a series of appropriate questions to ask the caller, while they checked out the story. Although circumstances coincided with the caller's claim, no warhead was found missing. However, the next night, the same man phoned White back to relay the message that the story was all a hoax, but that his brother was a security guard at the base and had supplied him with the pertinent information. The military was decidedly not amused by the prank and promptly instituted tighter security measures. Now about that four hours it took to trace the call . . .

Jello Jumps — Wobbly (And Sticky) Promos

Another tried-and-true station promo is the Jello Jump. One of 1977's best jumps — a charity event sponsored by KINT/EI Paso — was highlighted in the September 14, 1977 issue of R&R.

The "Great KINT 98 Jello Jump" was staged in a huge vat containing 4000 pounds of strawberry Jello. The 198 contestants had to jump into the vat and search for 198 car keys placed at the bottom. One key belonged to a VW Super Beetle, and the contestant with the right key won the car.

CBS, Mottola: The Second Time Around

Tommy Mottola may be the new CBS Records Division President, but it's not the first time the two parties ventured into a business agreement. Back in '76, Mottola's Champion Entertainment Organization struck a production deal with CBS, in which Mottola would deliver artists to the company. (Champion's best-known clients at that time were relative newcomers Hall & Oates, who were already signed to RCA.)

The two companies would jointly determine which CBS label would release the new acts; in addition, the Champion logo was to appear on the records. Can you remember the first CBS/Mottola collaboration? The band was Network, and they were signed to Epic. (The first time CBS and Mottola were affiliated, as recently noted in R&R, was when he was signed to an Epic artist contract as T.D. Valentine.)

What's New At R&R

In August a generalized feature called Business News split into two entities, Mediascope and What's New. The former would disappear after a couple of years, its content going to various versions of Washington and Radio Business or to What's New, which started as a place we could run news of any product, trend, or event that might interest radio or record folk. What's New was a repository for the practical and the bizarre, an unpredictable collection of offbeat novelties and hard facts. In 1987 it evolved into the groundbreaking Overview section of the paper.

THE FIRST FIFTEEN YEARS

America Catches 'Saturday Night Fever'

Little did radio know that when a new Bee Gees single, "How Deep Is Your Love," first entered the R&R National Airplay chart at #27 on October 7, 1977, the entire music industry would soon be stood on its ear.

A musical genre that had been bubbling more or less underground burst wide open with the release of "Saturday Night Fever" and its corresponding soundtrack, extending the trend beyond the clubs and radio into American culture.

For a while, anything the Bee Gees touched turned to gold (and platinum) — on March 3, 1978, they wrote, produced, and sang on the top four songs: "Stayin' Alive" and "Night Fever" by the Gibb Bros. themselves, Samantha Sang's "Emotion," and Andy Gibb's "(Love Is) Thicker Than Water."

Next step: radio took the Disco plunge.

Sci-Fi Movies Inspire Out-Of-This-World Radio Promotions

In 1977, Hollywood — or, more accurately, George Lucas — took the traditional Western movie, used the typical good guys-vs.-bad guys theme, applied it to a futuristic setting, added the latest in special effects, and came up with one of the most influential science fiction movies of all time: "Star Wars."

And, of course, radio didn't miss a beat in cashing in on the "Star Wars" craze. Station promos based on the movie abounded nationwide. In addition, the fad was prolonged when it overlapped with the release of another outer space epic, Steven Spielberg's "Close Encounters Of The Third Kind."

One example of the promotional competition occurred in San Bernardino, where two CHR outlets staged their own mini-battle. KFXM challenged listeners to call in and "speak" to "Star Wars" robot R2D2, which helped direct contestants in trying to torpedo the Death Star enemy spaceship. Callers who made a direct hit won $59 in cash.

However, crosstown rival KMEN staged a contest in which a Princess Leia lookalike was planted somewhere in town. The first person to spot the pretty lady and recite the phrase "I Go For It On KMEN" received a crisp $1000 bill.

Both the quirky "Star Wars" musical theme and the haunting, five-note signature melody from "Close Encounters" inspired quasi-rock renditions that received plenty of airplay.

FLASH FORWARD

Cassette Singles Debut In UK

How's this for a "new" marketing concept: In order to boost sagging sales of 45s — and at the same time expand the tape market into the singles field — why not take both sides of a single and release the tracks on one side of a prerecorded cassette tape? Sounds good, right?!

Well, someone did come up with the idea — way back in '77. (Actually, Liberty Records introduced a variant of the concept in 1968-69.) A British company, Fifth Avenue, issued that country's first cassette singles; the price was comparable to a standard 45 (approximately $1.25 in US currency).

At the time, R&R wrote that this newfangled configuration made more sense in the UK, due to the country's depressed economy, and because British music fans historically showed a stronger attachment to singles. The first UK cassette single releases included three double gold combos by the Crystals, Duane Eddy, and the Coasters.

FATAL SKYNYRD CRASH

Elvis: Gone But Not Forgotten

The most important news story of 1977 — at far as the music industry was concerned — was the death of Elvis Presley. And in true rock 'n' roll style, Elvis became an even bigger star after he died.

The King's passing gave birth to a whole generation of entrepreneurs (read "grave-robbers"), hawking items such as Elvis shampoo and Elvis liquor decanters. In addition, every Elvis impersonator in the Western world came out of the woodwork to perform his (or her) own rendition of Presley's Las Vegas act.

In another tragedy, three members of Lynyrd Skynyrd, Southern rock's premier band, died in a plane crash.

Court Throws Out FCC 'Offensive' Rule

In March, a US Court of Appeals overturned an FCC ruling regarding the broadcasting of "offensive" language while children could be listening. The action stemmed from WBAI/NY's airing comedian George Carlin's "Seven Dirty Words..." routine during a lunchtime discussion of contemporary language.

The court's 2-1 decision found that the FCC's attempt to censor WBAI violated the Federal Communications Act as well as the First Amendment. Furthermore, the court ruled that the Commission's complaint was so overblown and vague that Shakespeare and the Bible could be banned under present FCC guidelines (see Indecency, 1988). Nevertheless, the FCC announced it would appeal the lower court's decision to the Supreme Court as soon as possible.

R&R

THE FIRST FIFTEEN YEARS

1978

Feverish Outbreak Of Activity

"Saturday Night Fever" and Disco radio soundtracked a dance of profit for record labels, which proliferated at a dizzy pace in 1978. Radio had a high-profile year, too: the first serious radio deregulation proposal emerged and was shot down, the medium came to TV on "WKRP In Cincinnati," and the KGB Chicken was all over our pages and the nation's television screens. Keith Moon died and the Sex Pistols made their US debut . . . and promptly broke up. The Supreme Court listed the Seven Dirty Words you couldn't say on the radio . . . and R&R, going where no trade publication had ever gone before (or has often wished to since), front-paged the salacious septet.

We moved to Century City, opened a Washington office, and matured considerably. A black music section was belatedly introduced, to stay, and a marketing research column by Dr. Richard Lutz was introduced. On the lighter side, Gary Owens also contributed a long-running column, providing many a comic nurgle (is there any other kind?) to confused but amused readers. Key staff additions were Washington Bureau Chief - Jonathan Hall and Asst. Editor (now Overview Editor) Don Waller. And Sr. Editor Mark Shipper published the acclaimed novel "Paperback Writer."

R&R Goes To Washington (& Century City)

After almost five years in the heart of Hollywood (mostly at the corner of Sunset & Cahuenga, just above "Gong Show" headquarters), R&R moved to its present Century City location in May, miraculously managing to publish an issue in the midst of the move. In that very issue, we announced the opening of our Washington Bureau, headed by ex-NAB executive Jonathan Hall. Over the next ten years (and three DC locations) the bureau grew to deliver radio's most comprehensive legislative/business news coverage.

McLuhan, Martin/Parton Headline Convention '78

R&R went from McLendon to McLuhan in the course of its two Dallas Conventions, as the foremost media theorist of our day, Marshall McLuhan, keynoted the '78 gathering. New marketing columnist Richard Lutz chaired a marathon music research session, while format panels were packed with heavyweights: Gary Stevens, Lee Abrams, Kid Leo, Randy Michaels, Bruce Holberg, Les Garland, Scott Muni, John Sebastian, and more.

The Alan Freed biopic "American Hot Wax" was premiered during the festivities. Steve Martin, at the peak of "King Tut" mania, opened the Saturday night banquet, with the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band backing him on the hit and performing on their own. Dolly Parton, enjoying her own peak of crossover acceptance, headlined. Later that year, R&R announced the next Convention was finally coming to L.A.

The KGB Chicken: Mascot Marvel

One of the most effective longterm station promos ever realized — and probably radio's best-known mascot — was the original KGB Chicken. The San Diego station hatched the idea for the bird in the '70s, and before too long the Chicken (aka Ted Giannoulas) was garnering national media attention.

Giannoulas became a celebrity in his own right, and began appearing at events other than KGB promos and his regular performances at San Diego Padres home games. He even wrote a 96-page autobiography ("From Scratch"), and was seen in all his full-color glory on the front page of R&R, posing a la Burt Reynolds's infamous Cosmopolitan centerfold spread.

But after the Chicken ran afoul of KGB's appearance approval rules, the station suspended him. KGB won the first round in court; Giannoulas was barred from appearing anywhere in the KGB Chicken costume. However, the court ruled Giannoulas could appear in any nationally broadcast sports event — unless it involved a San Diego team — wearing a chicken suit.

So Giannoulas unveiled a new costume and identity at a Padres home game the weekend of June 29, 1979. The bird of an unknown species bore some resemblance to his distant Chicken cousin, although his color scheme was different. Giannoulas's modest comment on all the hoopla: "I'm my own animal."

AOR Story Charts Format's First Decade

A sequel to 1977's definitive "Top 40 Story," May's separately-published "AOR Story" traced the format's evolution from freeform to progressive rock to album-oriented rock. Raechel Donahue remembered her late husband Tom, album rock's chief architect, while Donahue's East Coast equivalent, Scott Muni, was interviewed at length. Leading group executives (Metromedia's George Duncan, ABC's Allen Shaw, and more) outlined their AOR philosophies, top GMs told their stories, Lee Abrams and other consultants were spotlighted, and the record community had its turn at bat (with a few prophetic complaints about tightening playlists).

Finally, AOR's Top 43 alltime tracks were compiled (there was a big gap between #43 and #44, so rather than arbitrarily cut off at 40, we stayed with AOR's unconventional approach and presented a Top 43. At least that was the excuse at the time) and annotated. What was #1? Surprise . . . "Stairway To Heaven!" "Free Bird" was #2, "Layla" #3, and most of the chart (excepting a few dated cuts) reads like a Classic Rock primer.

'WKRP In Cincinnati'—TV Imitates Life

The day-to-day operations of an ailing 5000-watt station are hardly front-page news to anyone in the radio industry. But when those scenarios are played out weekly in front of millions of TV viewers, then it is big news — and great advertising — for the industry.

And that's exactly what happened in fall 1978 when CBS-TV premiered its new sitcom, "WKRP In Cincinnati." The show's premise was simple: each week's story presented a new problem encountered by the staff of a mythical Midwest outlet, currently in the throes of a format transition from MOR to rock.

"WKRP" 's producer/head writer Hugh Wilson tried to incorporate as much realism into the plots as possible, drawing on many actual situations he had personally encountered or heard about in his dealings with radio. (Wilson was the former head of an Atlanta ad agency that worked with WQXI/Atlanta.)

THE FIRST FIFTEEN YEARS

Supreme Court Upholds 'Seven Dirty Words' Ban

In a 5-4 ruling, the US Supreme Court upheld a government ban on the broadcast of "dirty words," claiming the FCC reacted properly in banning the broadcast of comedian George Carlin's "Seven Dirty Words..." monologue during hours when children are likely to be listening. The case stemmed from one New York father's 1973 complaint after he and his son heard Carlin's routine — which contained the words piss, shit, fuck, cunt, motherfucker, cocksucker, and tit — aired over Pacifica's WBAI/NY during lunchtime hours.

The court's majority opinion rested on the unique characteristics of the broadcast medium, society's right to protect children from inappropriate speech, and the interests of unwilling adults not to be confronted by offensive speech. The dissenting members of the Court argued that Congress sought only to prevent obscene speech — not words deemed merely "indecent."

The decision was attacked by the National Association of Broadcasters as a blow to Americans' freedom of expression. The NAB added that while it did not approve of indecent language on the air as such, the organization feared that the FCC would not stop with the seven dirty words and that where it would stop was anyone's guess. It still is...

Dukakis Declares 'Beaver Day'

WRKO/Boston morning madman Dale Dorman's second annual "Beaver Day" celebration included serving "Beaver Buns" for breakfast and "Beaver Burgers" for lunch. Massachusetts Governor Michael Dukakis joined in the festivities, proclaiming March 2 "Beaver Day," citing the virtues of the beaver and his positive effect on the environment. Touched by the Governor's heartfelt appreciation for the industrious mammal, Dorman enthused, "Groundhogs have their day. Why not beavers? I've been a beaver fan for years!"

Deregulation Starts Here

But Van Deerlin Rewrite Doesn't Get Off Ground

You think the Fowler/Patrick Commissions have pushed deregulation? Recall the sweeping changes Rep. Lionel Van Deerlin (D-CA) proposed in his 1978 Communications Act rewrite plan:

- Virtually permanent license terms
- No government involvement in programming: no Fairness Doctrine, format restrictions, log maintenance, contest rules, nothing (except EEO rules)
- Graduated spectrum fees
- Ownership limit cut to five stations (not very deregulatory, true, but radical nonetheless)
- No FCC. (It would be replaced by the "Communications Regulatory Commission," which would monitor technical matters only.)

It didn't get through Congress, but it set the stage for the deregulatory fever that marked the '80s.

And The Beat Goes On...

Disco danced its way into becoming a radio format to be reckoned with in 1978. Thanks to the popularity of "Saturday Night Fever" and pioneering efforts from WBSL/New York and WKYS/Washington, the format's budding potential caught the eyes and ears of stations and consultants alike.

In February Plough Broadcasting — banking on the success of O&Os WVEE/Atlanta, WXYV/Baltimore, and WHRK/Memphis — announced plans to syndicate its disco format.

Six months later, Burkhart/Abrams & Associates boogied its way onto the floor with a "Disco/Black" format and division, headed by former WBSL MD Wanda Ramos Charres. Initially signed to B/A's dance card were soft-AOR alumnus WKTU/New York and KSET-FM/El Paso; the firm's second major market client, KIIS-FM/Los Angeles, traded in its Top 40 suit in November.

Platinum Platter Special

When did the Big Boy mascot grow a beard, anyway? On closer examination, the cheery visage hoisting the platter of platters turns out to be Eagles manager Irving Azoff, aka (for this E/A ad's purposes) "Big Shorty," celebrating spectacular sales achievements by the group. MCA, sensing a bonanza, agreed to license a chain of "Big Shorty" drive-in record store/burger joints that revolutionized the music retail and fast food businesses and led to an association that continues today.

Records Out Of Shape

Boom times for the record industry, and new promotional gimmicks were the rage. Colored vinyl was revived, picture discs (remember Bob Welch's "French Kiss" and Warren Zevon's "Werewolves Of London") emerged, and records in strange shapes showed up in PDs' mailboxes (usually broken). We highlighted some of the early square and teardrop-shaped discs, and watched as the trend accelerated. In the UK, records cut out in the shape of cars or the silhouettes of artists still command attention, and we still see the occasional US promo item, but it's hardly turned out to be the shape of discs to come.

THE FIRST FIFTEEN YEARS

Cold Winds Of Change

The December 8 death of John Lennon cast a pall on an eventful year. A month earlier Ronald Reagan was elected, signalling, for broadcasters, a new era of deregulation that would kick off in '81. Stations hopped the Country bandwagon in the wake of "Urban Cowboy," one of them being former Top 40 giant KHJ/Los Angeles.

Computerization came to R&R, simplifying and speeding up our processes of data collection and analysis. We lent a hand to the NRBA for their fall Convention in L.A., and introduced the term CHR to the world. John Leader and Ken Barnes became co-Executive Editors, and Joel Denver left the radio wars to be our Washington Editor.

CHR Redefines Format

By 1980 there was widespread dissatisfaction among Top 40 managers and programmers with the accepted name for the format. They felt it connoted, as Top 40 Editor John Leader summed it up, "screaming DJs, nonstop rock music, and a total disregard for anyone over the age of 21."

Having redefined progressive rock with the term AOR in 1975, R&R tackled this new problem by cataloguing all the descriptions Top 40 stations used to image themselves for ad agencies. The two most common words were "Contemporary" and "Hit." Leader accordingly coined the term Contemporary Hit Radio (CHR for short), and the rest is history. (Well, maybe not history, but significant nonetheless — and where else other than in retrospectives like this can you set the record straight on origin of terms?)

R&R Helps Out NRBA Convention

After the 1979 Century Plaza Convention, we swore no more conventions. But the National Radio Broadcasters Association, fighting an uphill battle against the radio-negligent NAB, asked our assistance in planning its fall 1980 conclave at L.A.'s Bonaventure Hotel. R&R editors chaired the format panels, Paul Simon and Barbara Mandrell entertained, and it was judged a "smashing success." And then we really did quit the convention business until 1988.

WONDER PLEDGES SUPPORT

King Holiday Drive

The year following Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s 1968 assassination, a bill was proposed to make his birthday (January 15) a national holiday. Each year thereafter the bill came up before Congress, missing passage by a scant five votes in 1980. In October, Stevie Wonder pledged his personal support, dedicating the "Happy Birthday" track — from his "Hotter Than July" LP — to the cause. The drive picked up momentum in January '81 when Wonder served as a catalyst for a Washington, DC rally. An estimated 150,000 converged on the nation's capital, with Black radio gearing up support by sponsoring buses, staging radiothons, and circulating petitions.

From Boss To Hoss

In 1980, a trend for "Urban Cowboy" stampeded many CHR AMs into jumping horses, among them Top 40 trailblazer KHJ/Los Angeles. The flagship of the RKO chain, KHJ briefly tried rock in the late '50s, but in 1965 under consultant Bill Drake and PD Ron Jacobs it revolutionized the format.

Its "Boss Radio" sound of short jingles and tight jocks spread across the North American continent. The Who's Who of KHJ included Paul Drew, Gerry (Cagle) Peterson, Michael Spears, and John Sebastian as PDs. Air talent included Robert W. Morgan, Charlie Tuna, Bobby Ocean, the Real Don Steele, M.G. Kelly, John Leader, and Rick Dees.

After final CHR PD Chuck Martin resigned, KHJ went "Country-Oriented Rock," which would last until 1983 and was replaced by various "Car Radio" and "Smokin' Oldies" identities. In 1986, RKO dropped the calls, and KRTH became the legal name of "AM 930."

Phony Nuclear Attack Program Causes Panic

"The United States is under attack. This is not a test. The United States is under attack." No, it wasn't one of Ronald Reagan's microphone tests. Those lines were part of a 19-minute dramatization of a nuclear attack, broadcast on WPFW/Washington (4/25/80).

Intended as a promo for an anti-nuclear demonstration, the broadcast literally had some people running for bomb shelters. Although WPFW aired a disclaimer prior to the broadcast, many listeners apparently didn't hear it.

The mock announcement — and resulting panic — was reminiscent of Orson Welles's 1938 "War Of The Worlds" broadcast. (Just as the impending war in Europe fueled America's fears in 1938, the recent aborted rescue attempt of hostages held in Iran had created a tense national atmosphere.)

The station's management said the piece was intended to raise consciousness; instead, it raised a lot of people's hackles. The FCC received enough negative feedback that its Complaints and Compliance Division launched an investigation into the incident.

Another Early Deregulation Effort

The push to deregulate radio was spearheaded by FCC Chairman Charles Ferris in 1980, even before the Fowler Commission took over. The FCC's philosophy that increased competition and marketplace forces would better govern radio stirred reaction on several fronts.

In winter '80 a majority of religious and labor organizations fought against deregulation, citing loss of public affairs time, PSAs, EEO, and the Fairness Doctrine. Broadcasters welcomed the move, pointing out that current public affairs commitments were well above FCC requirements.

NRBA's Board unanimously opposed all four of the deregulatory proposals as not going far enough. Meanwhile, Henry Geller of the National Telecommunications Information Administration approached the issue by linking deregulation with a plan for 10,000 new stations — a thrilling prospect for existing broadcasters.

Cincy CHRs Stage Million-Dollar Giveaways

In what was thought to be the largest one-recipient cash giveaway in radio history, Heftel's WYYS (Yes 95)/Cincinnati made its market debut, offering one lucky listener the chance to win $500,000. (The prize was to be doled out in $25,000 increments over the next 20 years.)

Responding to the ensuing firestorm of publicity, Taft-owned Q102 doubled its crosstown CHR competitor's ante, offering one listener the chance to win one million dollars — an action that forced Yes 95 to add another $500,000 to its original jackpot.

Actually, Taft's million-dollar prize was offered in conjunction with Q102's sister station, WRKC, a tiny detail that seemed to escape most editorial coverage of this battle o' the boffo bucks until the FCC's Complaints & Compliance Branch was asked to investigate the contest in December following the fall ARB.

The biggest influence on Country radio in the past fifteen years has been Ed Salamon's good taste.

Week after week Ed Salamon creates programming for US that treats Country music, and its artists, with the love and respect of a fan. And fans have responded by making our weekly shows and specials the most popular programs in Country music history!

THE WEEKLY COUNTRY MUSIC COUNTDOWN is the #1 place where fans can count on hearing their favorite superstars telling the stories behind their hits. It's also the place to meet people . . . Randy Travis, the Judds, Ricky Van Shelton, George Strait and The Forrester Sisters made their first national radio appearance on THE WEEKLY COUNTRY MUSIC COUNTDOWN.

SOLID GOLD COUNTRY was the first oldies show for Country music radio, and it stays on top by carefully selecting songs and artists who are relevant to TODAY'S radio audience.

COUNTRY DATEBOOK makes every day a special event for Country fans and radio stations across the nation. And six times a year COUNTRY SIX PACK celebrates Country's most special occasions . . . from the golden decades of Alabama, Larry Gatlin and Ronnie Milsap to the silver anniversaries of Willie Nelson, Loretta Lynn and Glen Campbell.

Country music has never had better programming than this. And it's never had a better friend than Ed Salamon.

Stations Cover Mount St. Helens Disaster

In May, radio starred in its Mount St. Helens eruption coverage, including airborne descriptions of the immediate aftermath; "bandana alerts," warning citizens to wear protective facial gear when walking outside in the ash-laden atmosphere; and the last interview with 84-year-old Harry Truman, a lodge operator who refused to leave the lava path after his lodge was buried under 30 feet of mud and ash.

The brunt of the ashfall was felt by Yakima, WA, approximately 80 miles east of the volcano, covered by an inch of ash. KIT/Yakima broadcast live continuously without commercial interruptions, while crosstown KUTI provided five hours of continuous emergency coverage.

As winds carried dangerous volcanic ash hundreds of miles eastward, stations in affected communities suspended regular programming or lengthened newscasts to cover the disaster and ensuing developments.

By midday Sunday, radio personnel in cities farther away from the site reported "pitch-black" conditions. But KMJK/Portland PD John Shomby probably provided the best description of the natural disaster: "It looked like an atomic blast."

Kids Get High By Sniffing Station's Stickers

XL 102 (WRXL)/Richmond received a letter from the Henrico County School Board in which a member of the board complained that several elementary school students were using the station's bumper stickers to "get high." Apparently, some students were seen acting odd immediately after peeling the protective backing off the XL 102 sticker and inhaling the odor of the adhesive. The letter-writer demanded the station either ban the bumper stickers or at least investigate the problem.

Upon contacting the stickers' manufacturer, station GM Gregg Pearson learned that all chemicals used in the stickers' adhesive were nontoxic and, as a matter of fact, had been produced according to OSHA guidelines. He then peeled off a letter to the school board demanding that all bumper stickers used by candidates for Supervisor of Henrico County be submitted to a similar inspection. When last checked, Pearson was still awaiting the results of those tests.

THE FIRST FIFTEEN YEARS

THE DREAM IS OVER

The Death Of John Lennon

The 1980s held much promise for John Lennon. After a five-year layoff from recording, the ex-Beatle had returned to the studio. Geffen Records signed Lennon and his wife/recording partner Yoko Ono, and "(Just Like) Starting Over" was on its way up the charts, with the "Double Fantasy" album just out.

But the year ended on a tragic note when Lennon was assassinated in front of the Dakota apartment building in New York City (12/8).

With the exception of Elvis Presley, no other rock personality was mourned as greatly as the ex-Beatle. And, unlike Presley — who died from the excesses of stardom — Lennon's violent death was an ironic footnote to his continuing efforts for world peace.

The news of his death sent shock waves around the world; the universal emotional outpouring of grief could only be compared to that felt when Martin Luther King and John and Robert Kennedy were assassinated. And, in his own way, Lennon was a leader and spokesperson for an entire generation.

Ono asked radio to pay tribute to her husband with ten minutes of silence. Hundreds of stations across North America responded in kind, and simultaneously suspended all programming beginning at 2pm ET (12/14).

More Movie Music Madness

Movie music saw continued success in the first year of the new decade. Included in the pages of R&R were full-page ads for the following soundtracks:

- "Urban Cowboy" (Full Moon/Asylum) — The ad copy said this two-record set was "an album that is going to change the way you look at music. It's more than just music. It's a way of life." Amen!
- "One Trick Pony" (WB) — Paul Simon's Warner Bros. debut album from the only movie featuring an R&R Convention as an essential plot device.
- "Foxes" (Casablanca) — The LP was produced by '70s disco kingpin Giorgio Moroder. The movie featured the Runaways' Cherie Currie in a starring role; it was also a forerunner to a film (and song) that captured the essence of an entire subculture: "Valley Girl."
- "The Idolmaker" (A&M) — 1960s Brill Building tunesmith Jeff Barry wrote the music and produced this soundtrack. The movie was loosely based on manager Bob Marcucci and his protegee Fabian.
- "Times Square" (RSO Records) — This glossy, sanitized look at the NYC new wave/punk scene featured music by the Talking Heads, Patti Smith, and David Johansen, former lead singer of glam/punk rockers the New York Dolls.

Neither McKinnon nor Cagle, who had been PD at KHJ/L.A., WRKO/Boston, and KCBQ/San Diego under the name Gerry Peterson, was elected. Since then, Cagle has not only resumed his radio career — he's currently PD for WSHE/Miami and WHTQ/Orlando — but also authored a soon-to-be novel titled "Payola."

The Year Of Accelerating Changes

1981 could be characterized as the Year of the Network — six new ones were introduced. It could also be called the Year of Deregulation — half a dozen key regulations were abolished or changed. MTV bowed in August, forever changing TV . . . and the music business. The Urban Cowboy Country bandwagon rolled on. Reggae leader Bob Marley, activist/singer Harry Chapin, and rock & roll prophet Bill Haley were taken from us, and the changes came hot and heavy from all sides.

R&R experienced a microcosmic version, with a raft of key personnel changes, bringing in some of our most important players. We started a Transactions listing, now grown to be the industry's most comprehensive radio business one-stop. We also began a new Easy Listening column, and went to rotations in compiling the AC and the new Black Radio charts. More changes would soon be coming.

HOW BROADCASTERS SPELL RELIEF

Deregulation Wins Approval

"Radio is being treated like an adult." So declared the FCC when it voted to deregulate commercial radio in January. The new rules allowed broadcasters to:

- Determine community needs without standard ascertainment interviews.
- Eliminate time-consuming program logs.
- Dispense with non-entertainment guidelines of 8% for AM and 6% for FM.
- Do away with the 18-minute per hour commercial restriction.

Prior to these changes becoming effective in April, the FCC also gave its blessing to a five-question postcard renewal form. And carrying the Ferris Commission's relief legacy a step further, Congress granted seven-year radio licenses and awarded the FCC optional lottery authority.

Meanwhile, incoming Chairman Mark Fowler and the Commission championed their hands-off, low-profile stance by abolishing the First Class operator's license, streamlining the sales/transfer process, drastically reducing on-air filing announcements, easing the financial showing required of station buyers, granting some EEO relief for sales and major change applicants, and shaving 45 days off the time it took to get a new FM channel assigned to a community. Laying the groundwork for even more relief, Fowler closed the year with a full ledger of unfinished proposals. Among them:

- Abolishing the Fairness Doctrine.
- Narrowing FCC interest in license "character."
- Abolishing annual financial report Form 324.
- Changing multiple ownership limits.
- Modifying the three-year trafficking rule.

Urban Contemporary Catches On As New Format Trend

Networking: An Explosive Year

With the advent of satellite technology, the growth of radio networks exploded in 1981. In April, Satellite Music Network announced it would distribute five full formats. Soon after, RKO bowed with two full-service news networks and a block programming service. Transtar announced the first of its many formats.

ABC started up three new divisions: ABC-Rock, ABC-Direction, and the Talkradio networks, but changed its mind on bowing its much-publicized Superadio project. CBS started up its young-adult RadioRadio network, and United Stations was formed as a partnership of Dick Clark, Nick Verbitsky, Ed Salamon, and Frank Murphy. Long-lasting shows such as "Rockline" and "Live From Gilley's" also made their debuts.

Too Close For Comfort

Politics makes strange bedfellows, as evidenced in this January A&M ad for "Don't Stand So Close To Me," the then-current single by the Police. The picture, taken from the January '81 presidential inauguration, provides a complementary scene for the ad copy: "In a world filled with 'De Do Do Do, De Da Da Da' we proudly present 'Don't Stand So Close To Me' . . ." The ad was highlighted with red spot color — red being Nancy Reagan's favorite color.

Baseball Strike Hits Radio

Stations carrying play-by-play broadcasts of the major league baseball games were severely affected by the lengthy players' strike during summer, facing audience and advertising revenue losses.

However, many stations came up with creative promos and alternatives to fill the gap left by America's favorite pastime:

- KMOX/St. Louis announcers Jack Buck and Mike Shannon revived the lost art of recreating historical games of the past, complete with live organ music. KMPC/Los Angeles resorted to replaying old Angels' games, while WFBR/Baltimore and CFCF/Montreal broadcast minor league contests.

In a satirical gesture aimed at players' salaries and owners' bank accounts, WLW/Cincinnati's morning man Gary Burbank created the "Big Red Band Line." He asked listeners to donate canned goods to players, managerial staff, and owners so they wouldn't starve should the strike continue for an extended period.

KFMB/San Diego broadcast "Fantasy Baseball," fictitious games complete with pre- and postgame shows. The station also gave out "Baseball Fan Survival Kits," consisting of computerized baseball games, stale bags of peanuts, and a check for $4.40 to "cover parking and an overpriced beer and hot dog."

When the strike finally ended, KFMB printed up "I Survived The Strike Of '81" T-shirts, with the final "fantasy" standings. Of course, the Padres won the division, a full 20 games in front of the cellar-dwelling Dodgers. (In reality, the Dodgers went on to win the World Series.)

I Want My MTV!

On August 1, an estimated 2.1 million households saw the debut of MTV, the groundbreaking music cable channel that almost singlehandedly prompted labels to rethink their marketing strategies, as it became automatic for artists to release a single and video simultaneously.

Under the direction of longtime radio innovator Bob Pittman, the channel — offered in stereo to cable systems nationwide — featured music videos seven days a week, 24 hours a day, presented by video jocks (VJs) — essentially, radio programming on TV. The original VJ lineup included three former radio personalities: KLOS/Los Angeles air talent J.J. Jackson (now with KMPC-FM/Los Angeles), WPLJ/New York's Mark Goodman (likewise), and Martha Quinn of WNBC/New York.

When MTV debuted, many people considered it direct competition to radio stations catering to the 12-34 demographic. And while MTV downplayed the competitive angle, the first video aired was "Video Killed The Radio Star" by the Buggles. However, it seems to draw more audience from other TV outlets, and is regarded more as a support vehicle for artist promotion than a rival to radio.

IT'S ADD TIME.
DO YOU KNOW WHERE YOUR LISTENERS ARE?
"AT THIS MOMENT."

A Hit — But Not At This Moment

Alfa Records advertised "At This Moment" in August as "the definitive performance of the Billy Vera song." It must have been. Over five years later, "At This Moment" aired on an episode of NBC-TV's popular sitcom "Family Ties," radio picked up on the song, and it eventually hit #1 on R&R's CHR and AC charts in January '87.

THE FIRST FIFTEEN YEARS

R&R Confronts Paper Adds Problem

Paper adds (records added by stations without actually receiving airplay) was the topic of John Leader's Top 40 column on May 16, 1980. Prime causes (record reps or indie pressure), damage (credibility loss for station, bad information to industry), and the essential pointlessly deceptive nature of paper adds were all outlined.

On July 3, 1981, Joel Denver's CHR column reiterated the same points in response to a new outbreak of paper adds. Joel brought up another reason (paper-adding to masquerade as a CHR when the station's actual list leaned toward another format). Again, the practice was labelled a "no-win" situation.

Not quite true — as long as there are double-digit add mentalities, labels who'll take their adds any way they can get them, the sleazy end of the indie spectrum who are happy to deliver them, and bendable radio programmers who put up with the situation, paper adds will be with us. The remainder of the '80s has proved that to be true.

'Urban Cowboy' Spurs Country Conversions

Was John Travolta radio programming's biggest influence in the late '70s/early '80s? You could make a case if you credited most of the post-"Saturday Night Fever" Disco station conversions and added the stations that jumped on the Country bandwagon after "Urban Cowboy" hit in 1980. Here are ten big Country converts in 1980-81:

- KSAN/San Francisco
- KLIF/Dallas
- KCBQ/San Diego
- WSAI-FM/Cincinnati

People Plus

After years of relative stability, R&R experienced an influx of key new staffers who would help shape the paper throughout the '80s. Moving from within were Gail Mitchell, becoming News Editor, Jim Duncan to GM of our Video Division, Carolyn Parks replacing Duncan as Country Editor, and Joel Denver, transferring from Washington to CHR Editor as John Leader devoted full time to his Executive Editor duties. Joining were Walt Love as Black Radio Editor, Jeff Green as AC Editor, Brad Woodward as Washington Editor, current sales VPs Michael Atkinson and Barry O'Brien, and longtime Asst. to the Publisher Paula Chaltas.

R&R

THE FIRST FIFTEEN YEARS

1982

Eighties Start Rolling Along

Accelerating '80s trends that got off the ground in 1981 moved into overdrive in 1982 . . . with a bit of sputtering. New network efforts mushroomed, some becoming fixtures (Transtar), others fizzling (remember "Superadio?"). Country conversions slowed to a crawl, but CHR, spurred by Mike Joseph's all-current "Hot Hits" approach, became the happening format — on FM. However, one of the last AM bastions of CHR, WABC/New York, finally gave up the rock and went Talk in May.

The industry lost a true star when flamboyant, innovative record executive Neil Bogart, founder of Casablanca and Boardwalk, succumbed to cancer at the age of 39. From bubblegum to disco, Kiss to Joan Jett, Bogart's influence was always strongly felt. Also mourned was legendary New York air personality Murray "The K" Kaufman, and acclaimed artists Marty Robbins and Joe Tex.

R&R was quieter than in 1981 (a hard year to top for activity). We expanded our Jazz information to a Top 30 chart, opened a Nashville office with Sharon Allen as Bureau Chief, and brought on Bill Clark (now Sr. VP/Sales) as VP/Marketing.

Dawn Of A 'New Age'

Long before KTWV/Los Angeles (former AOR stalwart KMET) splashed into existence, two stations on opposite coasts were riding the coming "wave" of lifestyle radio. Transcending conventional AC limitations, WSRZ/Sarasota, FL and KWAV/Monterey, CA molded similar presentations: a 25-34 sophisticated, affluent adult target; music with the right feeling (Urban, jazz, pop, rock, album cuts, oldies); more natural-sounding jocks; "good taste" prizes (boat cruises, dinners, Sony Walkmans); and wave logos to "reflect the ever-changing direction of the music within a consistent overall sound."

Three years later AOR programmers broke out of their narrowcasting shells, warming up to the idea of being cool enough to add jazz and New Age programming. Their aim: tap the emerging 25+ audience, attract new listeners, and enhance the format's image for innovation and diversity. As consultant Lee Abrams proclaimed jazz the "background music for the 'new mainstream,'" a number of AOR outlets (WRKI/Danbury, CT; KAZY/Denver; WBAB/Long Island, KLOL/Houston) block-programmed their way onto the bandwagon.

Another forerunner in the light jazz/new age movement was Easy Listening KOIT (AM)/San Francisco. The facility rechristened itself KXLR ("Excellence In Radio") in July '85, opting to meld new age jazz music with "trendformation" — two-minute summaries of recent events and interviews in place of traditional news. Other twists: no news director or PD, with programming decisions made by committee.

Musicradio To Talkradio

When WABC/New York decided to go with an All-Talk format, it made the national news wires. WABC had been rocking since 1960, when consultant Mike Joseph was hired to make the station a Top 40 smash. With PD Sam Holman and an airstaff that included Herb Oscar Anderson, Jack Carney, and Scott Muni, the station soon ruled the Big Apple.

Later additions to WABC's airstaff would include Dan Ingram and Ron Lundy (who remained to the end), "Cousin" Bruce Morrow, Bob Lewis, and Chuck Leonard. Under PD Rick Sklar the station reached its Arbitron peak in 1972.

Among WABC's better-known promotions were the "Principal Of The Year" and the "$25,000 Button." When the Beatles hit, "W-A-Beatle-C" got exclusive interviews with the Fab Four. WABC was broadcast into Moscow during the joint Apollo-Soyuz mission in 1976.

WABC's music era ended with the playing of John Lennon's "Imagine" and one last ring of its "Chime Time" jingle.

BOMBS AWAY!

Reagan Begins Weekly Radio Show

The "Great Communicator" (and former radio announcer) Ronald Reagan began his second radio career with a 10-week trial run series of live five-minute broadcasts on topics of current interest. It debuted April 3, 1982.

The highlight of these up-close-and-personal shows occurred on August 11, 1984. During the soundcheck for his regular broadcast, Reagan ad-libbed, "My fellow Americans. I'm pleased to tell you today that I've signed legislation that will outlaw Russia forever. We begin bombing in five minutes." Another step forward for East/West relations.

After the network explosion of 1981, new programming offerings kept on coming. Highlights included:

- CNN Radio bowed
- Transtar started up
- NBC's Talknet passed tests and was staffed up
- The Radio Network Association was formed.
- ABC's Superadio CHR lineup was announced in March
- Superadio was "indefinitely delayed" in June

- Monument revived, distributed by CBS
- Constellation subsidiary formed by Solar
- Atlantic America country division formed

Home Taping Hot Stuff

One of the big issues of 1982 was the debate over home taping. At stake, so labels contended, were millions of dollars in lost revenue for record labels and artists.

Bills introduced in both houses of Congress sought to reimburse labels and other copyright owners whose works were aired on radio and/or TV, and then taped by viewers and listeners for home use. The "reimbursement" would come from manufacturers and importers of recording equipment and blank tapes.

RIAA President Stanley Gortikov estimated 255 million LP equivalents were taped each year, and cited economist Alan Greenspan's estimate that the practice of home taping cost the record industry $900 million annually. The Audio Recording Rights Coalition countered these figures with its survey results that indicated the majority of people make home tapes from LPs they've already purchased.

Much of the home taping fear was linked to the record industry's early 1980s financial slump. Although current record sales are much healthier, the controversy has still not been resolved. Another problem that fueled the fire (and raised the ire of record labels) was AOR radio's longstanding practice of tracking albums uninterrupted, a practice that has since mostly dissipated.

E.T. Meets M.J.

The biggest movie sensation of 1982 was Steven Spielberg's "E.T.," as America's science fictional fascination continued to move from latent to blatant. The "E.T. call home" riff was a natural for radio contests, but musically there was a bit of a snag. MCA planned to release an "E.T. Storybook" album narrated by Michael Jackson, whose own alien inclinations would later blossom in "Captain EO." But Epic balked, holding up the album package and making the never-quite-released single "Someone Out There" one of the rarest collector's items of the '80s.

Big soundtrack for the year was Sean Penn's rocket to stardom, "Fast Times At Ridgemont High," which hit #4 and spawned the hits "Somebody's Baby" by Jackson Browne and "So Much In Love" by Timothy B. Schmit.

Radio Marti: Cuba Libre Goes Flat

The idea had an aggressive, patriotic ring to it. Create a giant radio broadcasting facility in Florida to beam anti-Castro messages to the Cuban masses crushed under the dictator's iron heel and just awaiting a friendly word from their American uncle to rise up as one and cast off the chains of oppression.

So in 1981 the idea of Radio Marti (named after early Cuban freedom fighter Jose Marti) was born. In August 1982 the House approved $17 million to build it over the next two years. A month later the gigawatt Voice Of Cuba boomed in with a monster jam blotting out dozens of Florida AM outlets and affecting stations as far away as the Midwest.

The NAB, on behalf of afflicted stations, wrangled on the issue through '83, as did the House and Senate, which finally in September approved a compromise requiring Radio Marti to share Voice Of America's Florida facilities. Paul Drew was appointed Marti's PD, but quickly changed his mind. The station went on the air in '84, but so far as can be determined Castro's control and popularity seem unchallenged.

R&R

THE FIRST FIFTEEN YEARS

1983

A Record Year

The spotlight shifted to the record side of the industry in 1983 — often tagged as the year independent distribution died. While that's exaggerated, the moves of Chrysalis to E/P/A, Arista to RCA, and (six months after Irving Azoff took the presidency of MCA) Motown to MCA forever changed the balance of distribution power. And that's without the WCI/PolyGram merger, proposed at midyear but abandoned in 1984 owing to government uncooperation.

The introduction of compact discs and Michael Jackson's "Thriller" helped boost the record business's profile as well. It wasn't, however, an uneventful radio year: Malrite put Z100 on the air in New York, and AOR WPLJ switched to CHR to compete with it. There was also a minor boom in Rick Carroll's alternative "Rock Of The '80s" format, with WFI/Philadelphia, KQAK/San Francisco, and 91X/San Diego converting. Radio stars B. Mitchell Reed, Don Sherwood, and the nation's first black air personality, Nat D. Williams, passed away.

R&R's semi-placid '82 gave way to an event-packed '83: Dwight Case became publisher as Bob Wilson pursued other projects. Lon Helton became Country Editor, and Steve Feinstein took over the AOR editorship after Jeff Gelb segued into sales here. A strange trivia/statistics/humor column, "On The Records," debuted in June, and our first sports special featured an interview with Vin Scully ("The Voice Of Summer") and the fascinating information that radio play-by-play broadcasts featured such sports as lacrosse, volleyball, community bowling, and fishing.

Radio Under Fire

For no apparent rhyme or reason, radio stations figured prominently in several bizarre incidents in 1983:

• WBLI/Long Island was drawn into a life-and-death situation (5/16) when a disturbed ex-teacher's aide wounded two people and held 18 high school students hostage. During the siege, the gunman demanded a radio. Tuning to WBLI, he promised police he would free a student each time the station read his self-penned "epistle to the world" and played a requested song. The aide remained true to his word, but fatally shot himself at the end of the nearly ten-hour standoff.

• Two weeks later, disgruntled GM Bob Allen hijacked his former station, WUWU/Wethersfield (Buffalo). Terminated when his "more heavy metal" philosophy differed with that of upper management's, Allen took over the transmitter site and interrupted WUWU's regular AOR format with a personal broadcast. Forty-five minutes into his symbolic protest, state police arrested Allen and ex-station engineer John Bunkfeldt for trespassing. Once wasn't enough, though. Allen hijacked the station again in July — this time broadcasting heavy metal for eight hours before being removed by sheriff's order.

• AC KQAV/Monterey, CA made news in October with an incident that seemed straight out of "Play Misty For Me." A transient armed with a 12-gauge shotgun blasted his way into the station's studios during overnight personality Sandy Shore's show. The uninjured Shore coolly crawled under the control console and called authorities. But in the meantime, the gunman's 58-round barrage knocked the station off the air for three hours and caused an estimated $200,000 in damage. The intruder's reason: KQAV was "poisoning his mind."

'Valley Girl' A Totally Bitchin' Trend, For Sure

The 1983 movie "Valley Girl" was the culmination of a yearlong cultural trend, one that originated from an unlikely source: a song recorded by Frank Zappa's 14-year-old daughter Moon Unit.

The song "Valley Girl" was released on Zappa's 1982 LP, "Ship Arriving Too Late To Save A Drowning Witch" (on Barking Pumpkin Records.) Moon's rambling monologue, sprinkled with Valley slang, started an awesome trend.

According to Moon, the song was her father's idea. ("Valley Girl" was Zappa's nickname for his daughter.) "He asked me if I'd improvise some lyrics." Soon, newspapers and magazines across the country began printing glossaries so non-Vals could assimilate terms like "gag me with a spoon" into their everyday conversations. (Omigod.)

SURF'S DOWN!

Watt Gives Beach Boys Bad Vibrations

Although the Beach Boys' Fourth of July concerts at the Washington Monument (in conjunction with Q107) had been hugely successful (drawing record-breaking crowds), Secretary of the Interior James Watt chose Wayne Newton to provide the entertainment at the '83 show.

Defending his decision, Watt said, "We're trying to have an impact for wholesomeness . . . for the family and solid, clean, American lives." He said the Beach Boys attracted the "wrong element . . . We're not going to encourage drug abuse and alcoholism as was done in years past."

Watt couldn't have asked for more trouble. The Great Beach Boys Brouhaha was just another of the famous foot-in-mouth comments that eventually led to his resignation. Radio came to the band's defense. Q107 tried to arrange a free Beach Boys concert for June 12. (The station declined participation in the Newton concert.) WRLX/Richmond offered the band $50,000 to play in the Virginia city either July 3 or 4.

Possibly the biggest vote of confidence came directly from the White House. Watt had to eat humble pie when both President Reagan and VP George Bush defended the group. Even Nancy Reagan gave an endorsement: "I like the Beach Boys. My kids grew up with their music."

YOU CAN FOOL SOME OF THE PEOPLE

April Fool's Joke's On Us

It looked just like a normal R&R front page... well, it was in red instead of the usual blue, and if you looked a bit closer the motto at the top of the page had been changed to "The Industry's Fishwrapper." Our issue for the first week in April happened to fall on April Fool's Day, so we decided to poke a little fun at our industry... and a lot of fun at ourselves.

The stories were intentionally exaggerated parodies of typical R&R style and content — although the proposed "All-Elvis" format preceded by only a couple of weeks the announcement of an all-Beatles format, and five years later a Cincinnati station gained national attention by actually adopting an Elvis-only approach. There was a phony Back Page chart, the first known mention of "EMP-TV" as a music video concept, and a book offering to teach radio and record job-changers the most popular R&R cliches, from "It's really an exciting challenge" to "We had philosophical differences." Evidently the book sold out, because we still get the same kinds of quotes...

Jesse Jackson Lashes Out At Lyrics

"Some lyrics have become so explicit that they simply represent an exploitation of the despair of black people. When people cease to have ambition for economic freedom, political liberation, and cultural uplift and simply become sexual animals of heathenistic dimension — then we've got to do something."

No, that wasn't Tipper Gore talking. That was Rev. Jesse Jackson, Operation PUSH Founder/Director and then-future Presidential candidate, attacking what he perceived to be a new low in suggestive song lyrics way back in January 1983.

Claiming that programmers have an obligation to be sensitive to people's values and that they had no choice but to deal with the problem, Jackson said that in addition to meeting with broadcasters, record industry personnel, and artists, his organization was presently setting up an in-house record review board that would compile a list of lyrical offenders.

'Motown 25' Top TV Show Of Week

On May 16, an estimated 47 million Americans gathered around their TV sets to watch an unprecedented two-hour network television tribute to a single record company.

Highlighted by an electrifying performance from label alumnus Michael Jackson, "Motown 25: Yesterday, Today, Forever" pulled a 22.8 rating and a 35 share, making it the most-watched TV show of the week.

Proving the universal appeal of black American music as well as the lasting impact of the "Motown Sound," the show — which featured a galaxy of past and present label stars — went on to win a much-deserved Emmy for the "Year's Outstanding Music/Variety Program."

15 Years Of Breaking Records Together

Radio Activity Marks New Highs

The FCC's landmark ownership limit expansion to a 12-12-12 AM/FM/TV standard in August precipitated (along with the absence of the three-year trafficking rule) a relative radio trading frenzy. Megadeals involving entire chains included DKM buying nine Plough stations, Pyramid purchasing eight from Associated Communications, Clear Channel buying Broad Street, and the big one, a $75 million divestiture of nine Harte-Hanks stations, seven to Edens and the Houston combo to Gannett for a cool $35 million. Individual station prices took a sharp rise as well.

A quieter record business year consolidated promising trends in new music sales and airplay from the previous year. A number of enduring stars broke through in '84, while the music world was saddened by the shooting death of Marvin Gaye. Longtime radio executive John Bayliss and KMOX/St. Louis personality Jack Carney also passed on.

R&R made significant Black/Urban and Country changes, debuted a recurring column by former Exec. VP John Leader, and brought in Ron Rodrigues as AC Editor, as Jeff Green moved up to Managing Editor and Gail Mitchell to Executive Editor.

Black Radio Pioneer WDIA Saluted

Celebrating Black History Month, R&R Black/Urban Radio Editor Walt Love paid tribute to the first Black-formatted station in the U.S., WDIA/Memphis. A wealth of priceless station memorabilia (subsequent hitmaker Rufus Thomas depicted as the "King of Sepia Swing") included the pictured promotional item featuring WDIA's first air personality, Nat D. Williams, who died at 76 in October 1983.

FCC Sets 12-12-12 Ownership Limit

The FCC repealed its 31-year ownership limit of seven AMs, seven FM's, and seven TV's in August, setting a new 12-12-12 limit (with plans, now looking unlikely, to lift all ownership limits in 1990).

Industry reaction to the new rule downplayed its significance. Brokers said things like "I don't think it will drive prices up too much," "It's not going to bring new parties to the market," and "It will trigger more trading, but not that much more." Shortly thereafter, a trading spree commenced that caused massive price escalations, a new crop of investors, and the most active trading period in radio history.

Countdown To Saturation

CHR's early-'80s resurgence spawned a spate of countdown shows in the format — "American Top 40," which had the field almost to itself in the '70s, suddenly faced four '80s-born challengers by April: "Rick Dees' Weekly Top 40," "Countdown America With John Leader," "Dick Clark National Music Survey," and "Top 40 Satellite Survey" with Dan Ingram. In the fall, "Scott Shannon's Rockin' America Countdown" joined the fray.

Some have changed or faded, others are still battling, and the countdown wars have intensified with a new faceoff between "AT40"/Shadoe Stevens and Casey Kasem's forthcoming program. But no matter how many shows exist, CHR's (and some ACs) like to run 'em — often more than one — as long as listenership doesn't go down for the count.

Facelifts For Black/Urban, Country, Jazz

R&R started the year off by recognizing the growing impact of Urban Contemporary (as a format term and a musical approach), changing the Black Radio section and chart's name to Black/Urban and placing the chart on the Back Page with CHR, AC, and AOR Tracks, creating an instant crossover comparison opportunity.

The same week, Country underwent a revolution. The music data went current, with reports taken Monday processed into the chart compiled that same night and published Wednesday — a two-week edge over other trade charts. Also, the format converted from numbered playlist information to the more realistic Heavy/Medium/Light rotation system, with rotation breakouts published on the chart, removing the mysteries from the Top 50.

Jazz Radio also gained its own page, with an expanded reporter roster for the Top 30 chart.

HORROR KING BUYS STATION

The Rock & Roll Zone

Best-selling horror novelist Stephen King's love of radio is well-documented — he's managed to work a radio station into just about everything he's written. So it was no surprise when he acted on his passion by purchasing a Bangor, Maine outlet. And the timing of his official takeover couldn't have been more apropos — right around Halloween.

Admitting he "would be foolish to monkey around with something I know very little about," King rechristened WACZ as WZON ("You're In The Rock Zone") but retained the CHR format: "AM radio has turned into this hemophiliac that's bleeding to death in front of everyone's eyes. To rock as hard as we do on AM is brave and unusual." Void of any DJ aspirations, he was spooked by one technical problem — why the station couldn't play AC/DC at 8am.

Flynt Ads Raise Free-Speech Issue

Although Hustler publisher Larry Flynt dropped his bid for the Republican presidential nomination in December '83, the FCC resolved the troubling question Flynt's campaign raised anyway. Flynt had vowed to air sexually explicit ads, claiming protection under the law strictly prohibiting broadcasters from censoring ads by candidates for public office.

After months of deliberation, the FCC ruled that the no-censorship clause is not meant "to confer immunity on broadcasters for violations of the federal prohibition against utterance of obscene or indecent speech on air."

What's more, the FCC ruled that WLW/Cincinnati did not break the law by bleeping out profanities during an October '83 talk show interview with Flynt. Flynt was not a legally qualified candidate, the FCC felt, his political activities being only preliminary steps.

In response to Flynt's filing a $100 million suit against WLW and demanding an investigation into the station's broadcast qualifications, the FCC said that the non-censorship clause did not apply in cases where a licensee might not know in advance whether giving or selling time could give rise to EEO obligations.

R&R

THE FIRST FIFTEEN YEARS

1985

Radio's Numbers Hit Stratosphere

Numbers dominated 1985's headlines, with major mergers and station/network purchases coming in an unceasing stream. The Cap Cities purchase of ABC started things rolling, and the transaction action never stopped. Radio also managed to bury the threat of losing beer and wine ads, but record labels (and radio to an extent) took plenty of heat from a new organization called the Parents Music Resource Center, which raised the specter of censorship in regard to song lyrics.

R&R recognized the fragmentation of the giant AC format, and under new AC Editor Donna Brake split the section into Music-Intensive and Full-Service segments, each with a chart of its own. We also added a Records column, written by Adam White. Dick Krizman became the paper's Exec. VP, Bill Clark returned as Sr. VP/Sales, Ken Barnes became Sr. VP & Editor, and longtime sales execs Mike Atkinson and Barry O'Brien received VP stripes.

And in another milestone for the R&R literary set (see 1988), Don Waller, then editing our What's New section (now Overview Editor), saw his "The Motown Story" published by Scribner's.

WARNING STICKERS ADOPTED

PMRC Attacks Sexually Explicit Lyrics

Citing examples ranging from Sheena Easton's "Sugar Walls" to W.A.S.P.'s "Animal (Fuck Like A Beast)," the Parents Music Resource Center (PMRC), an ad hoc group headed by the wives of several prominent national politicians, launched a full-scale media blitz against what the organization described as new lows in "sexually explicit" and thematically violent song lyrics. To combat the problem, the PMRC called for a record ratings system similar to that used for movies, asked retailers to confine certain records to special sections of their stores, and sought to have printed lyrics included with all records.

In response, the NAB asked 45 record labels to begin sending song lyrics to radio stations along with all new releases. Meanwhile, the RIAA endorsed the idea of placing a single, generic warning label on records that contained lyrics that might be considered objectionable. Cooler heads rejected the special retail section as impractical, noting that few kids bring their parents along with them to the record store, and that the decision to print lyrics on an album jacket rested either in the hands of artists or music publishers rather than record companies.

Rockers As Hearing Aides

The issue came to a head at several widely-publicized September hearings before the US Senate Commerce Committee, wherein recording artists Frank Zappa, John Denver, and Dee Snider of Twisted Sister denounced the PMRC's plan to institute a record rating system as pure censorship, while senators rallied 'round the bugaboo, threatening to enact legislation if the record industry didn't apply some form of self-regulation.

By October, the PMRC and RIAA announced that an agreement had been reached either to sticker records deemed potentially objectionable with a generic "explicit lyrics - parental advisory" warning or include the lyrics with the record.

Radio Trading Busts Wide Open

R&R gave its Transactions section a page of its own in May. We had to. The second half of 1984 hinted that radio trading activity might explode, and 1985 was the proof. Consider this abridged list of top deals:

- Cap Cities buys ABC for $3.5 billion
- Taft takes seven radio stations, five TVs from Gulf; total $755 million
- Gannett, Evening News Assoc. merge, $717 million value
- Malrite buys KLAC & KZLA/L.A. plus KSRR/Houston for $75 million
- Keymarket buys three Amarturo properties for $65 million
- Carl Hirsch's Regency buys KJOI/L.A. for $44 million
- Bob Sillerman buys one Metromedia, three Doubleday stations for $38 million. Sillerman, Regency merge into Legacy
- H&W buys KTNQ & KLVE/L.A. for $40 million.

And network transactions ran wild as well. Besides the Cap Cities/ABC deal, Westwood One bought Mutual (and Starfleet), United Stations bought the RKO Radio Nets, Wagontrain bought Drake-Chenault, UPI was sold, and CBS Inc. narrowly fought off a Ted Turner takeover bid. After 1985, radio transactions (and prices) would never be the same.

Year Of The Charity: USA For Africa, Live Aid & More

1985 will be remembered as the year of the charity. And the biggest fundraiser of them all was USA For Africa.

Harry Belafonte, inspired by Bob Geldof's late 1984 single "Do They Know It's Christmas? (Feed The World)," enlisted the help of artist manager Ken Kragen to develop a project that would provide aid for the Ethiopian famine crisis. The result: 45 superstar performers recorded the Lionel Richie/Michael Jackson song "We Are The World."

The Columbia single, video, and subsequent LP were manufactured and distributed at no profit, with all proceeds donated to USA For Africa. The initial money raised from record sales, merchandising, and direct contributions totaled $38 million.

Radio responded enthusiastically to the single and the cause behind it. At 10:50am ET on Good Friday (3/28), stations across North America aired "We Are The World" simultaneously. And the song quickly hit #1 on the CHR chart (4/5).

The African relief effort was furthered by the mammoth Live Aid concert (7/13). Held simultaneously at two sites (London and Philadelphia), the 17-hours-plus "global jukebox" raised an estimated $70 million. Many stations and networks worldwide provided nonstop coverage of the event, and Mick Jagger & David Bowie issued a "Dancing In The Street" single for the cause.

Extra Added Events

USA For Africa also inspired several other charity projects:

- Willie Nelson and Neil Young responded to the economic plight of US farmers by organizing the cross-format Farm Aid concert.
- South Africa's racist apartheid policies were brought to America's consciousness by Little Steven's Artists United Against Apartheid project, the single "Sun City."
- The Cartoonists' Thanksgiving Day Hunger Project - comprising over 175 syndicated cartoonists - mobilized virtually every comic strip in the US to address the world hunger crisis. Garry Trudeau ("Doonesbury") drew a special cartoon that appeared on the front page of R&R (10/25) to help drum up radio support.
- Arista released the single "That's What Friends Are For," by Dionne Warwick & Friends (Elton John, Gladys Knight, and Stevie Wonder), written by Burt Bacharach and Carole Bayer Sager. All profits were donated to the American Foundation For AIDS Research.

In some relationships,
more than one partner
is a crime.

In matrimony, it's called bigamy. In commerce, it's called conflict-of-interest. In research, it's called "business as usual".

Most research companies are promiscuous. They'll have a fling with a station in every format. Which can create problems. What do they do when their research suggests one of their stations should change to the format of another client?

Emmis Research makes a commitment to only one radio station per market. Because we believe in forming partnerships. Lasting partnerships. Exclusive partnerships.

That way, our success depends on only one thing: your success.

Paper Adds — The Stand

Paper adds returned to the spotlight in 1985 with a difference — R&R (essentially alone among trade publications) took a stand against them. In March we announced we'd drop reporting stations proven to be paper-adding as the culmination of a multi-tiered policy involving preliminary discussions with a suspected station's programmer and then management. If subsequent airchecks showed the station not playing records it had reported, reporter status would be revoked.

The idea was not to become a radio "traffic cop," and indeed the warning mostly sufficed — an April CHR column announced, perhaps over-optimistically in the long run, that the problem had "all but evaporated." In June, an NAB memo warned that paper-adding stations could face federal wire fraud prosecution. But the beat went on...

JOYNER'S TWO-CITY SHIFT

Jumping Jock Flash

After inking a six-year contract with current employer KKDA-FM/Dallas, morning personality Tom Joyner went one step further. He signed a five-year deal to handle afternoons at WGCI-FM/Chicago, and convinced both stations it was physically possible to fly gig-to-gig without hurting his performance. So on October 14 Joyner began winging his way between Dallas and Chicago each weekday. Three years later, his precedent-setting commute is still in high gear — but his arms are sure tired.

Dial A Forecast

The winds of change whistling across the AM band over the last several months blew into Minneapolis, where alternative music outlet WWTC was reborn as "Weatheradio" (9/18). Following a survival trend forged by KHJ/Los Angeles ("Car Radio") and Bay Area stations KXLR ("Trendformation") and KFRC ("Game Zone"), WWTC called its fulltime forecast programming "the first public service format of its kind."

In addition to weather updates, the station offered traffic and other travel information, including airline arrivals and departures. The station also predicted it would become one of the first in the country to interface with home computers, but the format was later canceled because of poor numbers.

KFRC Enters 'Game Zone'

"At least we're not sitting on our asses waiting for radio to fix itself." So noted VP/GM Pat Norman after masterminding KFRC/San Francisco's journey into the "Game Zone" (4/18). Inspired by "Wheel Of Fortune"'s success, Norman, PD Mike Phillips, and RKO consultant Walt Sabo created a six-hour (9am-3pm) daily block of audience participation contests sans music. Outside of this midday block, it was CHR business as usual.

Divided into two three-hour segments hosted by Dave "Duke" Sholin and Chuck Browning, the Game Zone hourly featured one of six different contests. Announcing stalwarts Gary Owens and Johnny Olsen provided customized introductions for the highly-produced shows, which sported such provocative titles as "Celebrity Conquest" and "Expose Yourself." With more game show concepts "waiting in the wings" in light of an expected 50% failure rate, Norman and company remained optimistic, giving GZ a one-year commitment (a prize good for six months before the games were zoned out and the format returned to CHR — and then nostalgia).

New Regimes Change Radio, Record Structure

New money and new players took prominent roles in 1986's radio/record business chronicle. Radio transactions approached the $3 billion mark, with massive management buyouts of Metromedia, Viacom, and other radio operators. And GE disposed of its newly acquired RCA Records interests to German entertainment complex Bertelsmann.

Hands Across America, with substantial radio participation, was the year's big charity effort. In a less charitable mode, labels were quick to drop independent record promoters after unfavorable publicity came the latter's way thanks to NBC. Radio pioneer Gordon McLendon died, and programming consultant Bob Hatrik was brutally murdered. DAT supplanted home taping as the record industry's top threat.

R&R moved its Country department, headed by Editor Lon Helton, to Nashville in August, added a number of staffers (including subsequent News Editor Jim Dawson), and debuted the New Artists chart in AOR (later to spread to the other formats) to heighten radio awareness of new music. At the end of the year, Harte-Hanks announced it was putting R&R up for sale.

Station Trading Approaches $3 Billion Mark

Transaction fever hit its peak in 1986, with more than $2.8 billion worth of station trading chronicled by R&R by early December. Brokers predicted a "rest period" would follow in 1987, as the industry cooled off from the frantic speculation in radio stations, often overpriced, that took place in '86.

Below are this monster year's top ten group sales and top five station buys:

Group Sales

- Metromedia to Metropolitan (9 stations) $285 million
- Viacom to management (9) $142 million
- Outlet to management (4) $75 million
- Resort to Telstar (24) $70 million
- Katz to NewCity (11) $68.3 million
- Affiliated to EZ (9) $65 million
- Group One to DKM (8) $59.9 million
- Doubleday to Emmis (3) $53 million
- Josephson to Saga (6) $39.9 million
- Republic to Jacor (5) $34 million

Station Sales

- KROQ/L.A. to Infinity, $45 million
 - KILT-AM & FM/Houston to Legacy, $36.8 million
 - KFAC-AM & FM/L.A. to Classic, $34 million
 - WUSL/Philadelphia to Sharad Tak, $32 million
 - WAVZ & WKCI/New Haven to Noble, $30.5 million
- Forty other stations or combos sold for $10 million or more during 1986's trading frenzy.

Heavy Metal's New Success

As the '70s drew to a close, many AOR stations responded to the aging of the baby boom generation by concentrating on music that appealed to an older demographic, which meant eliminating all that horrible teenage racket (heavy metal, that is) from their playlists.

Into the breach stepped the Satellite Music Network, which began delivery of its syndicated, "Z-Rock" format from Dallas in the summer of '86. It has been only marginally successful, but nowhere near as $ucce$$ful as the music itself, which, radio or no radio, just kept on selling. By the summer of '87 discs from the likes of Whitesnake, Motley Crue, Bon Jovi, Poison, and Ozzy Osbourne accounted for five of the top six best-selling albums in America. Kerrannng!!!

INDIES IN EXPOSURE

No Celebration On Independents' Day

Amazing what a TV newscast can do. After NBC's Brian Ross aired a report February 25 suggesting links between independent record promoters and organized crime, the basic structure of label promotion practices was overhauled.

In the wake of Ross's essentially unsubstantiated allegations, virtually all major labels announced they were severing ties with the indie promoters who had augmented staff efforts to get radio airplay. Independent Joe Isgro, a major Ross target, filed a $75 million restraint of trade suit against the labels.

The climate of fear intensified with the April announcement of a Senate investigation into payola, but this — like most government efforts in this area, including the inconclusive summoning of a few programmers before grand juries and a dismally mishandled arrest of former Isgro associate Ralph Tashjian on tax charges — sputtered or backfired.

Most labels settled with Isgro, but WCI and MCA didn't, and claimed victory in August 1988 when a judge threw out Isgro's suit. Smaller independents, especially in formats other than CHR, were hurt by the '86 pullout, but now appear to be thriving once more. The use of independent promotion in CHR was flourishing again by 1987, as labels found ways of indirectly hiring them through management or under the auspices of certain tip sheets and their affiliated services. The more things change...

DAT Spurs Spoiler System Showdown

Designed to help the record industry stem losses estimated at $600 million per year from home taping, the RIAA announced plans to unveil a "spoiler system" that — when incorporated into a tape recorder's circuitry — would prevent the user from fully recording any music that had been encoded with a special, inaudible signal by eliminating musical passages every 25 seconds or so.

While the RIAA hailed this development as a technological, rather than a legislative, solution to the home taping problem, a new, potentially more troublesome technology appeared in the form of Digital Audio Tape (DAT). Capable of producing master-quality recordings from any CD, DAT machines were roundly attacked by US record labels as the equivalent of handing over the keys to their pressing plants.

Amidst a sea of charges and countercharges, the DAT/spoiler battle made headlines for nearly two years — until an impartial study conducted by the National Bureau of Standards found that the spoiler system or "copycode," as it had become known, was unreliable, had a negative effect on the music's quality, and could be neutralized in at least five different ways by any competent electronics technician with access to $100 worth of components.

Radio Lends 'Hands' A Heap Of Help

The music industry continued to disprove cynics who predicted the numerous charity projects staged in 1985 were just a passing trend.

Ken Kragen, one of the "USA For Africa" organizers, launched the "Hands Across America" project late in '85. This time Kragen's efforts were directed to feeding the hungry in America. Kragen hoped to recruit Americans nationwide (at $10 per person) to become part of a coast-to-coast human chain. As was the case with "USA For Africa," a single was recorded especially for the event. ("Hands Across America," released by EMI America.)

Radio pitched in by recruiting chain participants, conducting donation drives and station promotions, and organizing the line when it ran through a particular station's local community.

On May 25 at 3pm ET, stations nationwide simultaneously played the "Hands" single (many for the only time), followed by "We Are The World" and "America The Beautiful." And although there were a few gaps in remote desert areas, the chain was fewer than 40,000 people shy of the 5,480,641 needed to complete it.

TODAY, YOU NEED THE COMPANY THAT KNOWS RESEARCH AND RADIO

These days, lots of people do radio research. Some have fancy degrees, but little or no experience working at a station. To them, radio's just another product, like toilet paper. They may know research, but they don't know radio.

At the other extreme are "radio guys" who learn a few buzzwords, a couple of "tricks" and all of a sudden, they're in the research business! They may know radio, but they don't know research.

Then, There's Mark Kassof...

He has solid research credentials — an M.B.A. in Marketing Research and years of "real world" experience applying it. But he's got more...

He spent over ten years in the radio business, as a programmer, researcher and on the air, working his way up from the smallest markets to "the majors." Radio isn't an "academic exercise" to him...he's been there.

This rare combination of research and radio expertise makes a big difference...It means Mark Kassof gives you much more than just statistics. It means he understands your problems, "talks your language" and, most importantly, gives you strategies that work.

In fact, Mark Kassof and his associates have conducted research and devised the winning strategies for some of the biggest "success stories" in North American radio.

That's the power of putting research and radio together. Find out what it can do for your station. Call us at 313-662-5700.

THE FIRST FIFTEEN YEARS

Emmis Powers New Breed Of CHR

They said it could be done, and Emmis finally did it. For years Los Angeles had seemed ripe for a high-powered Urban/dance-slanted contemporary station, and in January Hot AC KMGG was transformed into KPWR (Power 106).

The station named Jeff Wyatt, programming architect of the first "Power" station, WUSL/Philadelphia (1982), as PD in February. At first KPWR drew heavily from Urban hitmakers, but added a sprinkling of CHR hits and a healthy portion of dance club artists no other station was playing. The playlist evolved into a dance-beat-heavy mix that was not traditional CHR by any means, certainly not standard Urban Contemporary, but a blend that confused the industry until R&R included KPWR in the CHR universe in its new "P1-A" (for alternative) category.

Whatever you called the format, it was a hit in L.A., taking over the market lead in its third book, beating standard-bearers KIIS (its CHR competitor) and KABC, and cruising on to six straight No. 1 finishes. In KPWR's wake, Emmis switched WAPP/New York to WQHT (Hot 103) in August, and several P1-A's (including WPOW/Miami, which had been working in this vein earlier), flourished.

Birthday Fit For A King

In November '85 President Reagan signed the Martin Luther King Jr. birthday holiday into law, designating the third Monday of January. To help kick off recognition of its first observance (January 20) and underscore that it wasn't just for blacks, Group W Radio President Dick Harris enlisted support for a national radio simulcast of a five-minute excerpt from Dr. King's "I Have A Dream" speech. Reminiscent of 1985's "We Are The World" lineup, "The Dream Forever" lined up enthusiastic commitments from virtually every major radio network.

Besides special syndicated features, PSAs, and local station fundraisers, '86 inaugural holiday events also paid tribute through song. Stevie Wonder — a major catalyst behind the birthday bill — and friends staged a concert at the Kennedy Center. PolyGram Records released 12-and 45-inch versions of "King Holiday." Lifting every voice to sing as the King Dream Chorus & Holiday Crew was a notable array of artists ranging from Whitney Houston to Kurtis Blow.

R&R

THE FIRST FIFTEEN YEARS

1987

Expanding At An Indecent Pace

1987 was a wild one, contrasting cries of widespread indecency on the radio with the mellowest format revolution yet, NAC (New AC) and the "Wave." The record industry's year was sandwiched between a not-quite-consummated sale of Motown to MCA in January and the long-delayed December purchase of CBS Records by Sony.

Controversy over the Fairness Doctrine and condom ads also marked radio's 1987, with more large-scale acquisitions (Taft, Sconnix/Blair, Westwood One/NBC Nets, Summit/DKM) keeping transaction fever high. Cassette singles were seen as a possible savior for the commercially endangered single configuration, and CD singles also made their debut. R&R, purchased in January by Westwood One, entered an exciting year of its own (see below), as the late '80s shifted into overdrive.

CODIFICATION EFFORTS FAIL

Fairness Doctrine's Waterloo?

When the FCC's deregulatory eye focused on the Fairness Doctrine — which it deemed unconstitutional — the push to cement the policy into law hit fever pitch. Supporters of the codification drive were concerned the doctrine's repeal would adversely affect the public interest standard, culminating in broadcasters' unfair and partial treatment of controversial issues. Foes said the measure trampled on free speech and the preservation of freedom of the press.

Among the major events unfurling this year:

- January — US Court of Appeals refuses to toss out doctrine as unconstitutional
- April — Senate passes legislation that would write policy into federal law
- May — House Telecommunications Subcommittee approves similar measure; House Commerce Committee expected to approve bill within two weeks and send to House
- June — House votes overwhelmingly in favor of H.R. 1934, the Fairness in Broadcasting Act of 1987; 16 days later President Reagan vetoes the bill, attacking it as "unconstitutional."
- August — FCC votes to dump enforcement of 38-year-old Fairness Doctrine; Congress promises a showdown.

R&R Begins New Era

With the third issue of 1987, Westwood One, which had purchased R&R for in excess of $20 million, brought the paper's founder, Bob Wilson, back as Publisher . . . and things started to happen.

The Overview section, a one-stop source for the industry to pick up tips, trends, and fast-breaking events from the world outside, debuted in July under the editorship of Don Waller, with Chris Beck's Sales Strategy column following in August. Mike Shalett's "Vital Signs" music marketing/research column bowed in January, and R&R became the most timely source for MTV/VH-1 playlist data.

R&R also made the most far-reaching move in dealing with dance and modern music-oriented stations by classifying them as PIAs in the CHR universe. The first Network Programming special was published in May, and the first of the influential New Music Programming Guides emerged in August.

The paper's Washington Bureau was reorganized under Pat Clawson as Bureau Chief, with Randall Bloomquist joining later in the year. New format editors were Mike Kinoshian for AC and Harvey Kojan in AOR. And if all that activity weren't enough, we announced the return of the R&R Conventions for early 1988.

FCC 'Clarifies' Indecency Standards

In late '86, the FCC directed two California public radio stations (KCSB/Santa Barbara and KPFF/L.A.) to respond to complaints that they aired "obscene or indecent" programming. The action was followed shortly by a Commission review of Howard Stern shows that had been the subject of WYSP/Philadelphia listener complaints.

Responding to the charges, KCSB noted that while under the First Amendment the University of California had no right to interfere with students' free speech, some listeners may have found the lyrics to "Makin' Bacon" by the Pork Dukes offensive and that in the future such controversial programming would be broadcast later at night. KPFF pointed out that not only was the offending language taken out of context, but that the Pacifica-owned station had aired a warning prior to the 10pm broadcast of the homosexual-themed play "The Jerker." As for WYSP, station owners Infinity attacked the FCC's right to investigate in absence of a local finding that Stern's show is obscene or indecent, adding that the entire action stemmed from three complaints by one listener.

'Restatement Of Ambiguity'

By November of 1987, the FCC issued a five-point clarification of its indecency policy in which it said that 1) indecent programs were allowed from midnight-6am, 2) the FCC wouldn't prejudge programs, 3) program context was critical, 4) national, rather than local, standards would determine what was indecent, and 5) there would be no exemption granted for programming that had artistic or literary merit. Critics described the clarification as "a restatement of ambiguity."

This prompted another FCC clarification, which stated that sexual subject matter was OK, unless "patently offensive" — meaning that it was handled in a "pandering or titillating fashion" — and that whether or not children could've tuned in would be a determining factor. In August of 1988, the DC-based US Court of Appeals upheld the FCC's indecency rule. However, even though the court's decision was predicated on children being protected from obscenity, it noted that the FCC couldn't deny adults access to such programming, as "indecent, but not obscene" material was protected under the First Amendment. Well, that certainly clarifies matters now . . . doesn't it?

THE WAVE

NAC Format: Stations Catch 'The Wave'

Early in 1986, a new musical format began to take shape. Incorporating elements of folk, classical, jazz, new age, and soft rock, the mostly-instrumental format appealed to the college-educated, 25-54-year-old, white upscale adult. One of the first labels to see the potential was A&M-distributed Windham Hill Records, which sold a lot of records with little airplay help. But by the end of '86, AOR, Jazz, and AC stations were featuring the new musical genre.

In February 1987, the swelling tide turned into a tidal "wave" when KMET/Los Angeles dropped AOR after 19 years, resurfacing as KTWV. Consultants Burkhardt/Abrams, VP/GM Howard Bloom, and PD Frank Cody debuted "The Wave" with a no-DJs, no-IDs presentation; musical interludes and vignettes were used to break song blocks. The vignettes eventually vanished, tracks were front or back-announced, and in September 1988 the return of air personalities was heralded.

Other notable stations that caught the wave in '87 included WNUA/Chicago, KNUA/Seattle, KKSJ/San Francisco, KSWV/San Diego, KOAI/Dallas, and WBMW/Washington. Some used the "Wave" format, marketed by Satellite Music Network; others devised their own approaches to the difficult-to-define format, labelled NAC (for New AC) by R&R.

Linear Radio Dial Proposed

NAB calls it the "Ultimate Radio," and when it works, the new receiver could put AM on a par with FM, in stereo capability and on a linear dial. The latter concept was given impetus a year and a half before the Ultimate Radio's September '88 debut by consultant Dwight Douglas, who made an impassioned plea for a linear radio dial, similar to television's UHF/VHF solution, in an R&R commentary.

Q105 Zoo Crew On The Boob Tube

The rise in popularity of morning zoo shows across the country piqued listeners' curiosity about the lunacy in the control booths. On May 1, 1987 the AM gang at WRBQ-AM & FM (Q105)/Tampa decided to show its audience the method behind its madness when it began broadcasting the morning program weekdays on cable TV.

Over a year in the planning, the simulcast show was initially beamed to an estimated 40,000 cable subscribers. The Denver-based Jones InterCable invested $500,000 in equipment for a custom-built control room. (A 20-person production crew squeezes into the booth with the 13-member Zoo Crew.)

When the cameras aren't on morning host Cleveland Wheeler and his gang, the music is enhanced with coverage from live remotes, videos, film, graphics, slides, and digital effects.

THE FIRST FIFTEEN YEARS

Singles On Tape

In February, under the auspices of the RIAA, the record industry united to save an ailing member of the family — the 45 vinyl single. The antidote? A cassette single in two formats equivalent to the 45 and 12-inch, priced at $1.98 and $4.98, respectively. Arista volunteered to coordinate details of the summer rollout (40-50 current titles) between record companies and retail, and engineer the creation of a floor dump display unit in the shape of a giant cassette.

As the two-track cassette single continued to play in stores nationwide, rumblings of a three-track version surfaced in November. Again leading the pack, Arista said first quarter '88 releases by Whitney Houston, Billy Ocean, and Hall & Oates would likely be available in the $2.98 configuration. Cassette triples met resistance from CBS and PolyGram, however, recycling concerns raised over the other configurations — financial feasibility.

YULETIDE CHARITY LP

A&M's 'Very Special Christmas'

A&M Records gave Special Olympics International (SOI) a generous Christmas gift in 1987. Toward the end of the year, the label released "A Very Special Christmas," a collection of new versions of classic yuletide songs.

The LP was produced by Jimmy Iovine, and organized with the help of his wife Vicki (an SOI volunteer). Contributing artists included Bruce Springsteen, Sting, U2, Run-D.M.C., Madonna, and John Cougar Mellencamp.

On March 12, 1987 A&M presented SOI with a $5 million check, the first proceeds from sales of the LP. The donation was the largest in Special Olympics history.

*Inter-office memo

At Trumper Communications you won't find a lot of unnecessary formalities or red tape. So when people at our radio stations have an idea, a question, or a problem, they just pick up the phone. No paper chase — just an instantaneous, personal exchange of words and thoughts. Most times, these conversations lead to immediate action ... and ultimately more successful stations.

At TCI we believe that when you hire the best people to do a job you should listen to what they have to say — and be there when they want to say it. It's a simple philosophy that works — our stations and our people are all winners that produce results. And that's something we're happy to discuss anytime.

The TCI logo consists of the letters 'TCI' in a bold, italicized, sans-serif font. The letters are black and are positioned to the right of the company's name in the footer. The logo is set against a background of thin, vertical, light blue lines.

R&R

THE FIRST FIFTEEN YEARS

1988

Signpost To The Future

So far, 1988 seems to embody elements of the old and the new. Atlantic celebrated its 40th birthday, while MCA inaugurated a new era for Motown when, after several false starts, it finally completed its purchase of the legendary label. Radio was looking forward to alternative rock (to some extent), but was pressured to go back to identifying artists and song titles. RKO retreated from radio, Infinity and Malrite reverted to the private sector, and Bob Sillerman and Emis blazed new trails of massive expansion.

R&R had a busy year. Aside from the return of the R&R Convention in March, we debuted the World Music Overview page, incorporating an alternative rock chart from CMJ, a dance track chart from DMR, the most up-to-date UK chart, and unique compilations of top Australian and Canadian-artist hits. The popular "Rock Over London" column came over to R&R in April, and we debuted John Parikhal's futuristic "Competitive Edge" column and a new series of commentaries by industry leaders called "Perspectives." We contracted with the Trapman Co. for airplay monitoring services, and debuted charts for Contemporary Jazz and NAC, the latter term quickly becoming the industry standard for the New Age/light jazz/Wave brand of format.

And finally, AOR Editor-turned-sales-ace Jeff Gelb had his first novel, a horror extravaganza called "Spectres," published, thereby joining R&R's literary fraternity (also including Bill Mohr, Brad Munson, Ken Barnes, the previously cited Don Waller and Mark Shipper, and Joel Denver, whose 1984 R&R column featuring then-station owner Stephen King was reprinted in a King interview anthology called "Bare Bones").

Convention '88: A Triumphant Return

The industry welcomed the return of the R&R Convention after a nine-year absence in the best way possible — by showing up in large numbers and helping to create a new ambience for the event. It was a combination of the high spirits and lavish hospitality of the '70s brand of convention with the new maturity and businesslike attitude of the '80s.

Around 2500 attendees thronged the Dallas site in March to witness FCC Chairman Dennis Patrick; groundbreaking marketing and motivation panels by Ted Chin, Roger von Oech, and Mike Shalett; a unique panel of radio's top advertisers; plus performances by John Cougar Mellencamp, Buster Poindexter, and cameos by Stevie Wonder, Tiffany, and more. The convention's successful rebirth paved the way for an even bigger event set for 1990.

Back-Announcing Comes To The Fore

It's a listener/label gripe almost as old as music radio, a frustration born of hearing a piece of music and not knowing who performs it. This year the issue took on new prominence, as label executives complained loudly about radio's practice of playing 5-10-15 songs in a row and skipping front and back-announcements. NARAS President Mike Greene delivered a strongly-worded message on the subject in R&R in August, while the RIAA at one point contemplated seeking federal legislation requiring artist identification.

Wisely, the RIAA settled for a survey which showed a wide degree of cross-format support among listeners for more song IDs and new artist information. Indications were that radio would take heed.

Orioles' Losing Streak Keeps WIYY's Rivers On Air For 258 Hours

During the Baltimore Orioles' historic 21-game losing streak in April, WIYY/Baltimore MD/afternoon driver Chris Emry dared morning man Bob Rivers to stay on the air until the team won. Little did Rivers know he'd be stuck in the control booth for 258 hours.

Despite catnaps in the PD's office (aka the "Rivers Hilton") during music sweeps, the marathon took its toll on Rivers. But besides being perhaps the only bright spot for the city and its floundering baseball team, the stunt garnered extensive publicity, as Rivers granted hundreds of radio, TV, and print interviews.

The Orioles finally won their first game April 29, and Rivers was able to catch up on some much-needed sleep. He also offered some advice to air personalities planning a publicity stunt: "When you start one, know when it's going to end."

'All-Elvis' Format Debuts

"Oh, Mama, fix me 'nother one of those peanut butter and mashed banana sandwiches 'cause Ahm comin' home to-night!" On August 1, WCVG/Covington-Cincinnati switched from Country to an "All-Elvis Presley" format, playing nuthin' but 300 of the King's thangs.

While PD Steve Parton reported national media coverage and local listener reaction as being nothing short of phenomenal, more than one longtime radio observer noted that the same concept had been suggested in an issue of R&R datelined April 1, 1983.

Ahmet Ertegun (l) celebrated Atlantic's 40th, while Berry Gordy Jr. finally sold Motown.

PARTY OVER HERE

Atlantic's Birthday

Atlantic Records said thanks for the memories with a 40th anniversary "It's Only Rock & Roll" concert at New York's Madison Square Garden (5/14). The 12-hour extravaganza was broadcast live by Westwood One and Home Box Office, with proceeds (an expected $10 million-plus) accruing to the Atlantic Records Foundation, which would make contributions to a number of artist-selected charities. The label, which got its start with the help of a loan from Chairman Ahmet Ertegun's dentist, showcased music plenty of concertgoers could sink their ears into, ranging from the old (Led Zeppelin, Ruth Brown, Rascals) to the new (Debbie Gibson, Levert, Stacey Q).

Alternative — A New Edge For Radio?

If you date the birth of "modern music" at the turn of 1977 and the dawn of the Sex Pistols, it's taken its sweet time to attain prominence. In 1988, there were some signs that it might become a new radio bandwagon format. KROQ/L.A., 91X/San Diego, and KITS/SF demonstrated a solid audience base existed at least on the West Coast.

Later in the year, KROQ architect Rick Carroll reactivated his consultancy under the name "Rock Of The '90s," while 91X programmer Todd "Mad Max" Tolkoff joined "Classic Rock" creator Fred Jacobs in introducing "The Edge," a modern format which found its first client, WBRU/Providence, in September. R&R began publishing the biweekly charts of the respected alternative journal CMJ in January, and consciousness of modern music was generally raised. As for overall radio prospects . . . tune in for the next 15 years.

CHAPMAN'S $20 SCAM

Ask . . . And Ye Shall Receive

In April KVIL/Dallas OM/morning man Ron Chapman proved what the mellifluous tones of a DJ can do. Chatting with a Dallas Morning News reporter, Chapman said he could convince listeners to send in money simply by asking them. That tongue-in-cheek remark paid off in more ways than one — nearly a quarter-million dollars and coast-to-coast publicity, to be exact.

After the station checked with the proper authorities, Chapman asked listeners to mail in $20 checks payable to "KVIL Fun & Games," with no explanation as to the money's purpose. By the time the third day rolled around, 12,000 checks had poured in, prompting a stunned management to scrap its original plan of returning the checks with $2 interest. Instead KVIL opted to use the funds on behalf of several charitable organizations.

April Fool's II

Once again the calendar played a nasty trick on us, scheduling an issue dated April 1, 1988. Discovering this about two weeks before, we decided there was only one thing to do — create a sequel (all men have created sequels, after all) to the infamous 1983 April Fool's R&R self-parody issue.

This one was much more pointed, exposing new FCC rules for terms you could and couldn't say on the radio, the plague of RAT (Recorded in Actual Time) devices, the innovative "Old Age" format, Westwood One's plans for global domination, and for the first time anywhere, easy-to-follow guides to starting your own lucrative consultancy and/or tipsheet.

Berg Bio Inspires Play, Movie

"Talk Radio," based on Eric Bogosian's critically-acclaimed hit play of the same title, will make the transition from the off-Broadway stage to the silver screen in December. Directed by Oliver Stone of "Platoon" and "Wall Street" fame, the film was scripted by Bogosian, who stars as well.

Bogosian's play was inspired by the real-life assassination of KOA/Denver talk show host Alan Berg by neo-Nazi extremists on June 18, 1984. The former criminal defense attorney and recovered alcoholic's life was also documented in Stephen Singular's 1987 book, "Talked To Death."

Music Industry Continues Support Of Charities, Causes

1988 has seen the music industry continue to support causes and international issues, the legacy of the mid-eighties Band Aid/USA For Africa projects.

The anti-apartheid movement received a major boost from the all-star benefit concert honoring South African activist Nelson Mandela on his 70th birthday (6/11). The daylong show, held at London's Wembley Stadium, received extensive US TV and radio coverage.

Another consciousness-raising event with substantial radio participation was the "Human Rights Now!" tour. Amnesty International's 1986 follow-up to its "Conspiracy Of Hope" concerts featured Bruce Springsteen, Peter Dinklage, Sting, Tracy Chapman, and Youssou N'Dour.

And Arista's all-star "1988 Summer Olympics Album/One Moment In Time" featured tracks written specifically for the athletic event. NBC-TV used the songs throughout its coverage of the games, and Arista donated a portion of the proceeds to the US Olympic Committee.

Casey Kasem, Shadoe Stevens: Competition where it counts

Kasem Vs. Shadoe: Counting Down The Battle

After the first rush of countdown shows in 1984, the arena was quiet . . . too quiet. In the spring it exploded — first with the news that ABC and "American Top 40" host Casey Kasem were having trouble agreeing on a new contract. Then in April, Westwood One announced it had signed Kasem for a countdown show.

ABC countered in May by signing — after more than 1000 auditions of replacement prospects — longtime radio/TV personality Shadoe Stevens to host AT40. The first Shadoecast came in mid-August, while Casey's at the bat in January '89.

R&R

THE FIRST FIFTEEN YEARS

AOR Artists

Since AOR is the first format in this section, it's a good place for an explanation of what we did here. To commemorate the 15 years of the "R&R Era," we saluted the most successful artists of that time, in several categories.

Most #1 Hits, Most Top 5, and Most Top 15 are self-explanatory — you'll see the leading 15 artists (or more in case of ties) in each of those areas. The overall numbered lists of the 15 Top Artists and the Next 15 were compiled from R&R's annual year-end chart tabulations. (Note that not all records that reach Top 15 on the weekly charts end up in the biggest hits of the year lists, so you may see artists scoring high in Top 15 hits and not so high in the overall rankings.)

Each year since we've started we've computed the Top 74 of '74, Top 75 of '75, on through the Top 87 of '87. For the purposes of this section, we also ran off the Top 88 of '88 to date. Points were assigned in descending order from No. 1 to the bottom of each year's list to each song (or album, in AOR's case) making the year-end chart, and those points were totaled to produce the overall 15 Top Artist and Next 15 lists.

This system rewards artists who repeatedly place their songs or albums among the cream of each year's hits — becoming a guide to the most consistent historical hitmakers. Artists who are starting out strong or just hitting their peak (AOR example: U2) tend to suffer, but they'll get their chance to shine in future tabulations.

For the AOR section, we used the album chart because of its longevity (1975-88 compared to the tracks chart's 1983-88 span). Because artists release albums far less frequently than singles or designated tracks, AOR artists were not able to rack up the huge totals enjoyed by, for example, the top Country stars. To compensate, we added an AOR-only category, Most Weeks At #1, to recognize the achievements of the leading album airplay artists who racked up massive chart-topping records.

Overall, Bruce Springsteen took the championship over the Starship, whose early LPs were AOR staples, Genesis, Van Halen, and Heart. Bruce also snagged the Weeks at #1 title over the Rolling Stones, who had the most actual #1 albums with seven. Eric Clapton was the leader in Most Top 5 Albums and tied with Neil Young for the Most Top 15 Albums, edging Elton John, another artist with widespread early AOR acceptance.

AC Artists

Based on 15 years of R&R Adult Contemporary chart standings, the winner and still champion is Barry Manilow. Manilow started his AC hit string in 1975 with "Mandy" and continues to score in the format. His 28 Top 15 hits and 20 Top 5s also topped all other artists, while his 11 chart-toppers were beaten only by Lionel Richie's even dozen.

Most of the list is made up of longterm artists — only Richie had his first hit ("Endless Love," with Diana Ross) in the '80s. (His Commodores hits from the '70s don't count toward his solo total.) Kenny Rogers was a relative latecomer, crossing to AC soon after his Country breakthrough with "Lucille" in 1977. AC was highly receptive to Country crossovers in the late '70s/early '80s, and Rogers wound up the prime beneficiary, finishing as runner-up in Top 15s and Top 5s as well as on the big list. (Eddie Rabbitt was a perhaps surprising #30 overall in the AC standings.)

Olivia Newton-John scored high not only for her own hits, but for legions of duets with John Travolta, Andy Gibb, Cliff Richard, ELO, and so forth. Richie's late start kept him from the top spot, but his achievement of 12 No. 1 hits out of 14 Top 15 hits is staggering. All 14 of the Top 15 smashes went Top 5 as well, a mark almost matched by Billy Joel, who went 17 for 19 in that category en route to #5 overall.

Neil Diamond has been an AC staple ever since AC took over from MOR. Elton John's longevity and consistency earned him the #7 slot, ahead of Paul McCartney, who's had hot and cold spells but also teamed with Michael Jackson (who did not make the AC Top 30) and Stevie Wonder (another near miss, although he did qualify on the No. 1 roster) for some megaduets.

Chicago's perseverance paid off in AC, while Barbra Streisand rounded out the Top 10 and was top female artist next to Olivia. Consistent Anne Murray, Air Supply, who were red-hot during their peak, Dan Fogelberg, who releases records sporadically but retains strong AC loyalty, multi-duetters Dionne Warwick, and longtimer James Taylor round out the Top 15.

Some of the hottest '80s AC stars (Whitney Houston, Billy Ocean) just missed the Top 15 solely because they haven't been around long enough to build up the sheer mass of hits necessary to compete with the vets. Whitney's six No. 1s since 1985 is a pace to reckon with, however, and Ocean's placing on the Most Top 5 and Most No. 1 hit lists after just four years is also noteworthy.

CHR Artists

CHR, because of its broad-based mandate to play the hits whatever style they may spring from, is generally regarded as the ultimate scoreboard. So Elton John's achievement of winning top artist of the R&R era honors carries a lot of weight.

Elton has been a remarkably consistent artist, placing hits in the year-end rosters from all periods. He was there in 1973-74, and he's there in 1988. Runners-up Daryl Hall & John Oates have a similar profile since their 1976 breakthrough.

The most remarkable CHR achievement, however — in fact perhaps the most notable feat in this entire undertaking — is Madonna's #3 ranking. She did not score a CHR hit until 1984, so in five short years she's amassed enough major hits (15 songs that made year-end lists) to place higher than megastars with 15 years of CHR hit history. Michael Jackson's story is similarly impressive — he finished fourth essentially on the basis of the single releases from just two albums (plus the odd duet or two). Incidentally, under our Solomonic methodology, credited duets were counted in both artists' tallies.

Veterans dominate the rest of the Top 10, with Lionel Richie another high-scoring relative newcomer. Recent-vintage artists Huey Lewis, Prince, and Whitney Houston also made impressive showings to land inside the Top 15.

Longevity paid off in the Most Top 15 and Most Top 5 hits categories, led by Elton, Hall & Oates, and Billy Joel, although Jackson and Madonna come up strong on Top 5s. Jackson took the Most #1 category, with Richie and Madonna next in line.

Country Artists

Country is not like other formats (from our startling revelation department). The longevity, consistency, and productivity of top country artists are unsurpassed by acts in any other format — in fact, nobody comes close.

A steady regimen of three or four big hits a year (plus a duet or two, which counts for both artists under this system) adds up to formidable point totals. Conway Twitty, who won the Country crown for the R&R era, accumulated more than twice as many points from his legion of year-end hits than the leader in any other format. Similarly, the artist totals for Most #1, Top 5, and Top 15 hits outstrip those for any other format finalists.

In such a structure, longevity is even more important than in other formats, and it's no surprise that the top three overall finishers (Conway, Ronnie Milsap, and Don Williams) have been ultraconsistent hitmeisters for practically the entire 15-year period under study. Conversely, artists as red-hot as the Judds and Rosanne Cash are right now were unable to make the Top 30 cutoff owing to sheer lack of hits — they haven't been around long enough. In the Top 10, only Kenny Rogers and Alabama haven't been scoring blockbusters from the beginning — Rogers broke through in 1977 and Alabama in 1980.

The trinity of Twitty, Milsap, and Williams dominated the other categories as well, although Waylon Jennings (a strong individual hitmaker who at times has been as tireless a duet partner as Willie Nelson) tied for second in Top 15 hits, and Rogers tied for third in Top 5s. Male artists dominated the list, as expected with Country. Dolly Parton and Crystal Gayle battled it out for top female vocalist honors, and Alabama and the Oak Ridge Boys were the top groups.

A few semi-random amazing stats: Alabama had 25 Top 15 hits during this period. Twenty-two of them (88%) went Top 5. 20 (80%) hit #1! Other acts had even higher percentages of Top 15 hits going Top 5: Rogers went 33 for 36 (92%), Charley Pride scored 28 for 31 (90%), and the Oaks nearly hit a perfecto, 29 for 30 (97%).

UC Artists

While the other format champions tabulated in this section cover the full R&R era, Urban Contemporary cannot. R&R has only published a numbered chart in the format since 1982. It's a moot point whether a reliable airplay-only chart could have been devised before 1982; that is when ours came together and immediately set new standards of responsiveness and accuracy.

So the artists in these rankings span the last seven years, something you should keep in mind when thinking of veteran acts who placed mysteriously low or not at all, or noting the number of very recent arrivals on the scene.

Jeffrey Osborne emerged as the premier hit artist from 1982-88, though Stevie Wonder's second-place finish is impressive, considering his less-than-prolific release schedule of late. Freddie Jackson managed to compress a large number of top-rated hits in a very short time (four years) to come in third, edging the unrelated Michael. (Janet was the third Jackson to hit the Top 10.)

Freddie Jackson racked up some notable numbers, putting eight of his ten Top 15 hits in the Top 5 (as did Whitney Houston) and then managing to take all eight Top 5s to #1. Michael Jackson had an even higher percentage of Top 15 hits going Top 5 (11 for 13, 85%), and tied Freddie for most #1s as well. Prince was the leader in total Top 15 hits by a wide margin.

Male artists dominated the list thoroughly, with Whitney Houston and Janet Jackson the only female artists in the Top 10 and Cameo the top group.

THE FIRST FIFTEEN YEARS

BMR Beams Back In Time

The late DJ extraordinaire B. Mitchell Reed, the Florence Griffith Joyner of the microphone, was roasted by the industry during his more mellow tenure at KMET/L.A. As part of the proceedings he was confronted with his speed-rapping past.

Put A Little Cod In Your Heart

In R&R's early, struggling days, we weren't above accepting a thoughtful contribution to the staff larder — it meant Publisher Bob Wilson (right, gratefully receiving Columbia artist Jackie DeShannon's official donation) wouldn't have to spring for Arby's all around that night. Bestowing a sort of distant approval on the stunt is Columbia promotion rep Michael "Sunglasses After Dark" Atkinson. In exchange for the fish, Wilson awarded DeShannon and Atkinson a year's worth of R&R, which provoked a widespread outbreak of fishing for complimentary subscriptions until the policy was discontinued.

The Bucks Stop Here

Do Not Disturb: Consultant At Work

The life of an in-demand Churban-specialist consultant is a topsy-turvy roller coaster ride, struggling to keep dozens of hot hybrid hit radio stations on track, and sometimes you have to take a few minutes off and coast a while. Jerry Clifton catches 40 winks before a meeting with corporate moguls to urbanize another CHR and blur formatic lines further.

Professing The Blues

Brooks Peace-Signs With Elektra

At the peak of his cinematic success, Mel Brooks was signed by E/A Chairman Joe Smith, a move that produced no hit albums but was probably worth its weight in witticisms. Subtle as always, Brooks reminds the photographer of his earlier collaboration with Carl Reiner, "The 2000-Year-Old Man," a success on Smith's earlier label, Warners.

At the height of their campaign to beautify Chicago during the 1979-80 filming of the "Blues Brothers" movie, John Belushi (left) and Dan Aykroyd (right) stopped by WLS in a futile attempt to convince PD John Gehron to trade in his overly bushy 'stache for the now-fashionable chin-fuzz affairs sported (temporarily) by both Blues Brethren.
