talks about
This Week's Music
—on CBC radio

A musical highlight of this week on CBC radio is the performance of Alban Berg's Violin Concerto (Sunday on CBC Symphony). As I see it, a lively new-music movement in Canada will only come (a) when audiences can hear, frequently and at first-hand, the classics of the modern repertoire (the Berg surely is one of them), and (b) when performers can come to grips, regularly and frequently, with the physical problems involved in playing that repertoire. The announcement of a performance of a work of this stature, by a Canadian orchestra and a Canadian soloist, in itself calls for huzzas of approval.

Moreover, the concerto is unlikely to disappoint a person of normal sensitivity who, for example, loves Mozart. Since it is in some respects complicated, a few notes about it may assist those who will be hearing it for the first time.

Berg's output is small. He often spent years over a single work. Yet the concerto took less than two months to complete. The sudden creative outburst was inspired by an outward event: the death, from polio, of the 18-year-old step-daughter of Mahler, whom Berg described as an "angel." This was in the summer of 1935, and someone has suggested that Berg was at the same time occupied with thoughts of his own death—which in fact occurred the following winter. The concerto became, at any rate, a requiem. The music itself tells us this, if we did not already know it.

The orchestra required is unusually large, for a concerto. As in many works of the Schoenberg camp, it leans heavily on horns and low on clarinets; Berg also uses a saxophone, a harp, and a good deal of percussion. This is 12-note music, but the Reihe (the 'note-row' on which Berg bases his melodies and much of his harmony), though it contains all 12 available degrees of our chromatic scale, is not especially atonal. It opens with a series of common triads—the most everyday sounds in music—and it ends by floating off into space in whole-tone steps, a la Debussy.

The piece has two movements, each containing two contrasting sections. An andante leads to a waltzing scherzando; a stormy cadenza-like allegro gives way to a slow finale. Two quotations, one in the scherzando and one in the finale, reinforce the elegaic mood. The first is a Carinthian folk-tune, played on horn, later on muted trumpet, and still later in distorted fashion by the solo violin. Surrounded by themes and theme fragments which unmistakably suggest the sentimental lilt of the Viennese waltz, this folk-tune (it sounds as if it could be yodelled) symbolizes human warmth, youthful love of life.

The other quotation is a German 17th-century chorale Es ist genug (It is enough). Berg divides its short phrases, question-and-answer style, between soloist and woodwinds, and he uses in the woodwind parts the harmonization given to this tune by J. S. Bach in his Cantata No. 60. The words of the chorale (quoted in Berg's score) are full of mystical longing for death—a familiar strain in Bach.

The borrowed tunes are closely bound up with Berg's note-row, and do not sound out of place. The folk-song starts with a triad, the chorale with four rising whole tones.

But transcending all this originality and concentration is the point, near the end, where a reminiscence of the folk-song high on the violinist's top string coincides with a phrase of the chorale in the stern fatalistic voice of the trombone; a musical representation of the conflict between worldly joy and serenity on the one hand and the mysteries beyond death on the other—and a moving fulfillment of the work.

There is nothing quite like that passage in music; except perhaps in Mozart—which is why I used him as an example earlier. Whether by coincidence or an inspired bit of planning, this week's music listings also promise Mozart's Violin Concerto in G, K.216 (Tuesday afternoon on Concerto). Here an adagio of extreme purity is followed by a bumptious and witty rondo (containing a few homely quotations, too)—an opposition of musical expressions comparable to Berg's . . .

Heading Them Off at the Pass

(or "ten ways not to write a script")

The CBC Script Department at Toronto has made a list of the 10 most common faults a beginner is likely to make in dramatic writing. Here are the 10 examples, followed by the script editors' remarks:

"Space ship 101 will leave at dawn . . ."

And as it moves into outer space, it will more often than not leave behind it the author's powers of reason and logic. He is in unfamiliar territory, just as he would be among Russian scientists or Borneo headhunters (unless, of course, he knows these species). Let your imagination rove, by all means, but know whereof you speak. Your knowledge will convince the audience.

Wife: "Wake up, John, wake up."

Husband: "It was all a bad dream, then . . ."

This is a nose-dive ending. Scores of manuscripts begin promisingly. The trick is to end with the promise fulfilled. Good beginnings are easy, good endings are difficult. Think of a great dramatic climax and make that your drama. If everything you write builds to that climax, the beginning will take care of itself.

"Thanks, coffee will be fine."

Oh, by the way, the dam has burst . . ."

A really dramatic scene contains no more dialogue than is absolutely necessary to carry the action along. Lengthy greetings and social chitchat only slow the pace. The dam has burst; Mr. Smith has come in to say so. Who cares about coffee?

"Even Mrs. Fraser's trying to get into the act . . ."

She's one of the superfluous characters who pad out the plot and leave the viewers trying to figure out a reason for their appearance. Characters such as comic servants, coy old folk, and brash teenagers — introduced solely for "colour."

"Well, let me put it this way . . . the garbage collector earns about 25 bucks more a week than I earn for teaching his son in high school. And what's more . . ."

And what's more, the writer (intentionally or unintentionally) is simply using his character as a mouthpiece for his own opinion. This is in no sense drama. It has no action, and leaves the other characters mere shadows used as padding.

"Oh, so much has happened since you went to Florida, May. Did you know that . . ."

One thing we do know is that all dramatic action comes to a standstill while one character brings the audience up to date on another character or situation. The writer then tries vainly to pick up the momentum of the story. Such exposition should be a constant thing interlacing the dramatic action, not backing it.

"It seems only yesterday that the doorbell rang, and . . ."

Unless you're attempting psycho-analytical character studies of the Death of a Salesman genre, avoid juggling the natural sequence of events and using flashbacks instead of a straight story-line. Flashbacks are the sign of the amateur.

"I dunno, wha' d'you wanna do tonight?"

We have been here before, haven't we? But Paddy Chayefsky's lovable Italian-Bronx butcher is the author's own creation, and a pale carbon copy—presented in the belief that, because the audiences liked "Marty," they're bound to go for your play, too—that just isn't good enough. Your most vivid characters are individuals, not types. They exist because you, their creator, believe in them and understand them.

"So Jackson's out of the pen, eh? Waal, if I was Sam I'd quit town fast him married to Jackson's girl an' all . . ."

It's easy to fill in the story from here on—as in every case where the well-worn outlines of a familiar plot becomes visible in the opening scene.

"Humph! You don't seem to mind working late now that J. B. has a pretty new secretary . . ."

A stock reaction in your play produces a stock reaction in your audience: lack of interest. Successful drama has one essential ingredient: the element of surprise. Keep your audience guessing, and they'll be with you to the last speech in the final act.

It soon became evident that the delay in making long-overdue reforms in keeping with changing world conditions had paved the way for further revolution. SUNDAY

Heritage

This week—"The Royal Door," by Ted MacGillivray. The story attempts to define an Orthodox Christian and the place Eastern art and churches have in Canada. The cameras follow a young man into an Eastern Orthodox church and to his home, examining the beliefs and customs of his church and the religious practices of his family. The possibility of tension in maintaining the ancient ways of the Orthodox and assimilating them into Canadian life is explored.

“Anthology”

Robert Fulford discusses CBC's literary magazine, heard Tuesday nights on CBW, CBK and CBX

Anthology, the CBC's weekly literary program, is a radio version of the traditional literary magazine—a kind of Queen's Quarterly of the air. It broadcasts fiction, verse, critical essays and intellectual interviews, following generally the pattern of the best highbrow quarterlies and monthlies here and abroad.

Like those magazines, Anthology is—in a sense—at the mercy of its contributors. If Adele Wiseman happens to be finishing a novel, then Anthology can broadcast a section of it—as it did with “The Sacrifice,” in 1955, a year ahead of book publication. If Jay McPherson has a new group of poems ready, then Anthology can broadcast them and help to bring one of our finest talents to a wide public. But if Canadian writers happen at any given moment to be producing nothing of much significance—or the “creative” side of it, anyway—is at a loss. Such are the perils of editing a literary magazine.

But every literary magazine has two sides, one perhaps as important as the other. The second side comprises critical essays and what might be called “intellectual journalism.” In Anthology's case, the critical essays have included articles by the best of Canadian critics, including Northrop Frye, Miller McLure, Malcolm Ross and Robertson Davies. And the intellectual journalism has ranged from a half-hour program on the Beat Generation (last season) to a series of brilliant interviews taped by Nathan Cohen in Britain with literary figures like Evelyn Waugh and Joyce Cary (in the 1956-57 season). This sort of thing is perhaps the real measure of the literary magazine, for it can be assigned and to some extent “created” by the editors. In this field, Anthology has been remarkably successful.

This season, the program's fifth, offers, as usual, something from both sides. On the creative side, we are promised short stories by Joyce Marshall, Henry Kreisel, Alice Eedy and Ethel Wilson, and poems by Irving Layton; others will be added to the list later. On the journalistic side, we are promised—among other things—a series of essays on contemporary Canadian writers (on the first Tuesday of each month), another on writers outside Canada (on the third Tuesday of each month), an essay on theatre in Britain by the Canadian actor David Gardiner, and an article on the background of the new British writers by Richard Hoggart.

A previous series on Canadian writers, during the 1955-56 season, discussed those who were either dead or very well established: from Sam Slick to E. J. Pratt, from Grove to Leacock. The new series will concentrate on writers who are publishing frequently these days: Robertson Davies, Brian Moore, Mordecai Richler, Gabrielle Roy and others. The second series this season will cover a group of interesting writers in other countries, including John Osborne, Françoise Sagan, J. D. Salinger, Saul Bellow and Bernard Malamud, at least one or two of whom have never before been discussed at length in Canada.

Anthology can be proud of the fact that it covers so broadly the current Canadian and international literary scene. But what does it lack? Three things, I would say. First: a viewpoint—Anthology, while setting a high standard, is so tolerant of all points of view (no doubt for good reasons) that it seems to lack an editorial personality of its own. Second: controversy, the spice of all literary magazines—Anthology too seldom promotes exchanges like the one in the 1954-55 season in which Miller McLure and Donald Harron debated the merits of Christopher Fry, McLure attacking and Harron defending; but again, of course, this tends to come from contributors, not editors. Third: speakers from outside Canada—I have no idea how other listeners would react, but I would love to hear more often from intellectuals in New York and London and the various countries of the Commonwealth.

“The Strike”

*CBC Wednesday Night drama
by Joseph Schull*

Where did Joseph Schull get the idea for his new radio play called The Strike which will be a feature of radio's CBC Wednesday Night on November 12th? He explains:

“It got started from thinking about one particular labour situation in Quebec where both sides, to put the most charitable interpretation on it, seemed to go headlong after their own interests with very little thought for the people who would be most affected.

“The theorists and tacticians, it seems to me, are much too liberal with ‘the tears of one generation’ in their eagerness to fix things up for the next. They haven't any undoubted right to spend those tears, and they carry no stigmata of infallibility to prove that their aims are the only right ones. Each side has its own interests and, presumably, a conviction of the rightness of its aims, but if there's no room between them for a little patience, a little flexibility, and a little human understanding, then the people they profess to help become mere ammunition for the battle.”

The play's exact locale is not indicated, Schull says, and there has been no attempt to parallel exactly any one strike situation. “I think there is a general condition underlying all the troubles where a pastoral, almost primitive people in some cases, begins to undergo the changes forced by big industrialization. I hope I've managed to see some of the general issues correctly, and put a bit of flesh and blood on the bones.”

J. Frank Willis will be producing—in the Montreal studios of the CBC. Alexander Webster and Robert Goodier will be going to Montreal from Toronto for this production, but all the other players will be bilingual Montrealers.

Television in Regina

First article in an 11-week series on prairie television stations

By W. REES

Promotion Manager, CKCK-TV
Regina

CKCK-TV Studios, Regina

Western Canada's first privately-owned television station, CKCK-TV, sent out its signal on July 28, 1954, to some 10,000 television homes in the viewing area. This flagship of the television fleet opened its doors under the guiding hand of Harold A. Crittenden, Manager of CKCK Television and Radio. Since that time he has become General Manager of Trans-Canada Communications Limited, the Company which operates CKCK Television.

Twenty-seven people were involved at the beginning of television in Regina. Today that figure has been raised to approximately sixty. The first program logs show the station signing on with test pattern at three o'clock and then a film matinee following at four. Live telecasting was scheduled for approximately one hour a day, with network shows coming into the station on "kines." Today, live programming totals fourteen hours and thirty minutes per week.

In September, 1956, the station went from low power to the new generating unit of 100 KW's. This venture increased CKCK-TV's signal strength to approximately one hundred miles, covering many more potential viewing homes. May 1, 1957, the station joined the microwave network system and began receiving its programs on a delay and current basis from Winnipeg and Toronto. July 1, 1958, was an historic occasion, when the Trans-Canada microwave network was completed from coast to coast with a delay pattern for the west from Calgary.

When the station first opened its doors, all departments occupied some 12,000 feet of floor space; today, with the addition of a second storey they now use 18,000 feet. Since 1954, the photographic department has added an Auricon Super Pro sound-on-film camera, a complete positive processing plant; a new Ariflex silent, and Cine Kodak and Bell & Howell silent cameras.

The telecast day on CKCK-TV now commences at 12:50 with a news, sports and weather show. When and if the situation warrants, the telecast day will be lengthened.

Today, there's something to suit everyone's taste on CKCK-TV:

- For the collegiate crowd, The Den, a thirty-minute live telecast every week with the kids talking about vocations and listening to the latest in jazz, and talent being featured from the various colleges.
- A thirty-minute live telecast each day designed for the suppertime viewer with special emphasis on interviews with distinguished guests in the city.
- For the ladies, The Joy Perkins Show, a sixty-minute live telecast every day, directed especially to the women viewers. It includes such items as cooking demonstrations, women's fashion shows, etc.
- Topic, a weekly roundup of the previous week's film news of local happenings in the community, plus interviews with distinguished personalities in the field of business, religion, industry, etc.
- News, Sports and Weather also occupy prime spots on the CKCK Television schedule. The special events department takes on news assignments for feature presentations; the latest of these is a trip to Canada's far north with department officials from Ottawa.

CKCK-TV has also won two awards for local film productions on community problems. It now serves some 60,000 television homes within its viewing area.

(Next week—CFQC-TV, Saskatoon).

Challenge from the Sea

A special CBC-TV investigation of the problems posed by missile-carrying submarines

A special CBC-TV feature scheduled for this Monday (November 10) examines the response and the current thinking of the Western navies to today's naval dilemma—the question of what steps to take to cope with the threat posed by the development of the missile-firing submarine. As evidenced by the recent trip of the U.S.S. Nautilus from the west to east sides of the continent beneath the polar ice cap, atomic-powered submarines are capable of very long voyages entirely submerged. When such submarines—or those without atomic engines, for that matter—are also capable of firing intermediate-range ballistic missiles with atomic warheads, it means that an enemy thus equipped could, for instance, launch an attack from several hundred miles out in the Atlantic and strike industrial cities in the heart of the North American continent. There would be even less warning of such an attack than might be experienced in the case of the ICBM—the intercontinental ballistic missile.

For the last several months CBC crews have been engaged in documenting this challenge. A film unit has been at sea with a hunter-killer anti-submarine group of the Royal Canadian Navy; another has been in Ottawa, getting the views of Admiral Harry DeWolf, Chief of Staff of the RCN; Commodore Frank Freeborn, a prominent naval architect; and Captain Eric Brand, outstanding convoy strategist of World War II. These film units also have been in Washington and Montreal, acquiring exciting film footage—much of it only recently declassified—on all aspects of modern submarine performance and on anti-submarine ships and weapons. The “voice” for this compelling narrative is that of Stanley Burke, CBC's correspondent at the United Nations who served during the last war as a skipper of a Fairmile, and on motor-torpedo boats in the English Channel.

Burke traces the evolution of the submarine through the first World War, then through the savage Battle of the Atlantic in the last war, when German U-boats almost defeated the Allies up to the development of today's missile-firing submarine. This sequence includes historic footage from the National Film Board archives taken during the worst days of the Atlantic battle when ships were being sunk every hour, sometimes within sight of shore. A portrayal of today's anti-submarine weapons includes the great attack carriers of the U.S. and British navies, the missile cruisers with homing weapons, and the ultra-modern destroyer-escorts designed and built in Canada for the Royal Canadian Navy, and said by experts to be the finest vessels of their class in the world. Later sequences are devoted to the RCN hunter-killer group in action, and to speculation on the future of convoys and the future make-up of our navy, and to the larger hope that man has learned at last to solve his problems in the political forums rather than with missiles at 1,500 miles.”

Executive producer of Challenge from the Sea was Hugh Kemp, and supervising producer was E. E. Rollins of the CBC film service. It was written by Anthony Ferry, and sequences were directed by Gerald Richardson and James Swackhammer. In making the film the CBC has had the full co-operation of the Royal Canadian Navy, and has supplemented its own production staff with personnel from Canadian motion-picture production companies. Archives material has been supplied by the National Film Board and the U.S. Navy.

Mr. Fix-It's Manual

Peter Whittall, CBC's “Mr. Fix-It,” has published a handyman's manual. The champion of “Do-It-Yourself” wrote and compiled the book, which went on sale Nov. 1. It contains suggestions for projects and “Do-It-Yourself” kits similar to those given regularly by Mr. Fix-It on his Saturday TV show.

“Stage Door”

New CBWT musical series to bring many well-known local stars to television for the first time

Vocalists Georges LaFleche and Norma Vadeboncoeur will be the stars of Stage Door, a new variety show to be presented on CBWT Friday nights (10:15 p.m.) from November 7 to December 5.

Georges and Norma will act as host and hostess to various Winnipeg singers, dancers and comedians, many of whom will be making their television debuts.

“The obvious purpose of this show will be to entertain the viewers,” states producer Neil Harris. “In the first show we will be presenting our version of the Concert Hour (which will differ somewhat from the Montreal version). In the second show Len Andree and Olie Alto will do a satirical sketch on Mr. Fix-It. It is hoped that in such ways Stage Door will enable us to have some fun from those things which are immediately familiar to CBWT viewers.”

The first show, on November 7, will include Ghosts of Seven Oaks, an original work by producer Harris, first presented this summer at the Rainbow Stage production of Hell's a-Poppin' in Winnipeg. Former Winnipeg Ballet dancer Lillian Lewis, who has appeared in many musical comedies in Winnipeg, will take part in this first show.

A new singing group consisting of Heather Sigurdson, Evelyn Snyder, Ed Ewanko and Doug McIntosh, will appear on each show.

Script for Stage Door will be by Paul Wayne. Eric Wild is musical director, Nenad Lhotka is choreographer, and Mitch Parks will direct the vocal group.

Editor's Note: The film discussed in this article was scheduled for the November 8 "Here and There" program. It has been replaced in western stations' schedules by the first W.I.F.U. semi-final, but will be rescheduled on the western network in the near future.

FOR FIVE DAYS they slogged through thick forest and up the deeply crevassed Fairweather Glacier. For another four days they climbed painfully up the 15,300-foot Mt. Fairweather, including one stretch of 19 hours of climbing with no sleep. Later, one of the party wrote: "On the top it was misty and cold and we wasted no time there. Our boots were frozen stiff and were painful on our feet for quite some time after we had begun our descent."

So much for the summit — dismissed in one line; hard work and danger to reach a place at which they did not want to be anyway. Only a mountaineer can understand why, and after all, only a mountaineer need understand why. But perhaps those of us who spend our lives in the valleys will get some idea of what mountaineering is all about from the CBC-TV film on the climbing of Mt. Fairweather.

On Monday, June 15, CBC producer Michael Rothery and cameraman Kelly Duncan flew into Lituya Bay, a lonely spot about 125 miles north-west of Juneau, on the B.C.-Alaskan border. They sat there in the drizzle waiting for the main party of eight mountaineers and two radio men to fly in. As they waited they gave little thought to the history of Lituya Bay.

That history has been a violent one. In July, 1786, the French explorer La Perouse lost two ship's boats and 21 men in the treacherous flood tide near the entrance. Sometime last century a violent earthquake destroyed an Indian village in the Bay with all the inhabitants except one old woman. In 1936 another earthquake sent a tidal wave hurtling down the Bay and clean across the spit at the entrance, carrying trees and debris for fifty miles out into the Pacific.

But the two CBC men knew nothing of the geological fault that ran along the earth's crust immediately behind them and whose resettlement had caused those earlier earthquakes. To them a fault line was just something geologists hit with a hammer. But they were a little apprehensive of the few weeks ahead of them. Their assignment: to film the party making its way along the coast, then up the Fairweather Glacier and as far up the mountain as possible. The actual assault of the summit would be filmed by someone in the assault party.

"Neither Kelly nor I had done any climbing till the week before," Rothery says. "During that week we climbed Vancouver's 3,000-foot Grouse Mountain every morning, we walked the twenty-odd miles from Britannia Beach to Horseshoe Bay, and we had our first and only climbing lessons on the ice and snow on Mt. Baker down in Washington. By the time we reached Lituya Bay we were stiff and worn out, yet we had not even started."

First day was comparatively easy. The trail—built and maintained by bear whose prints lined the edges—usually skirted the inside of the forest but sometimes moved out onto the long golden beach with the Pacific rollers pounding in. Blue lupins and patches of wild strawberry blossoms lined the trail, which, by the time the party returned, had ripened into juicy red berries.

Then the hard work started and continued for three days. They struggled through dense forest from the coast into the glacier, forest which one day slowed them down to only six miles in ten hours. Then came the glacier and the heat from the reflected sunshine and the 70-pound packs and the icefalls which enforced a climb along the lateral moraine (the rock and debris thrown to the side by the glacier) and the 2,000-foot climb onto the glacier only to find an impossible precipice which made them climb back down those 2,000 feet and back up again at another spot.

Then came the crevasses. The CBC men had some trouble getting used to these cracks which open up in the slowly moving ice. Mostly they are covered with snow, and the expert can often pick a crevasse by the slightly darker snow covering it. But sometimes even an expert fails and has to be hauled out by his companions to whom he is always roped.

"Only one man actually fell right through," recalls Rothery, "but we all at some stage put a foot through a snow bridge. It takes some getting used to, having a black hole opening up under your foot and seeing lots of nothing, maybe scores of feet deep, beneath you. While the eight climbers were on the mountain, Kelly and I had to stick to the base camp—it was suicide for two inexperienced men to wander far on the glacier.”

This danger also made filming difficult. “We were roped in parties of three or four,” says cameraman Kelly Duncan. “This meant they had to take me to a suitable spot, unrope men, go back down the glacier, then come up again so I could film them. Sometimes we spent 30 minutes so I could get 20 seconds film. They were most cooperative but I couldn’t ask them to do this too often.”

Duncan faced other difficulties: lacking a tripod till he reached the airdrop he had to hold the camera steady though often himself unsteady with the exertion. “And loading a camera on a steep ice incline is almost as bad as cleaning lenses and filters with frozen hand,” he says.

(For a amateur moviemakers: Duncan used both a Bell and Howell and an Arriflex. “Film was Plus-X reversible with speed 50, the slowest film we can use for TV work,” Duncan explains. “Under the brilliant snow conditions and the short nights we could shoot up to 11:30 p.m.” Worst technical difficulty facing Duncan was the three-stop difference in exposure between a wide-angle shot of the glacier, bright with reflected light, and a close-up of a man. In the first, at f32, the glacier stood out but the figures became shapeless blobs of black. In the close-up, at f11, the face and figure became discernible but the glacier disappeared into a white haze. “This meant I couldn’t get transition shots of a party moving up the glacier and into the camera,” explains Duncan. “Each shot had to be exposed differently.”)

Climbers Paddy Sherman and Walter Romanes filmed the actual climb of Fairweather which was made up splitting into two parties of four. Both parties tackled the mountain by Carpe’s ridge named after an American who, with one companion, made the only previous successful climb of Fairweather.

The story of the 1958 climb was told in a recent B.C. Mountaineer. It is a story which to the non-mountaineer seems much the same as any other climbing story: it tells of couloir and arete and cornice (i.e. steep sided gully, sharp ridge and the crust of snow overhanging a precipice); it tells of traversing cliff faces and of belaying up vertical ice faces (in which only one man moves at a time while the man immediately behind him uses the rope around his imbedded ice axe as a break in case the first man falls.) But if, to the non-climber, one mountain climb seems much like another, to the expert each climb has its special problems which need special variations of the standard techniques. There was the overhanging ice-fall under which they had to traverse, constantly exposed to the danger of great chunks of falling ice; and there was the ice face, just 500 feet from the summit, up which they had to belay, the last 150 feet taking one hour to climb.

On June 24 Party 1 left the first camp and began climbing Carpe’s ridge at 10:00 a.m.—after waiting for a forgotten stove to be brought from base camp. By 8:00 p.m. they reached 9,200 feet and were urgently in need of a camp. Darkness was no problem at this altitude and latitude (next night they saw the glow of the sunset in the west and of sunrise in the east both at the same time) but the weather was deteriorating rapidly into snow. Another 100 feet brought the party to a small rock platform.

“The ridge was neither wide nor long enough for both tents and it sloped downhill,” says the B.C. Mountaineer, “so some time was spent in extending it by digging out the ice and by building up rock walls, finally levelling it off with snow . . .” Later, Party 2 wrote: “The view from this airy campsite left nothing to be desired . . . on the left a great couloir swept past swinging beneath us to drop 4,000 feet to the glacier which at this height looked smooth and unfurrowed.”

June 25: The party was forced by falling snow to remain all day in the camps. The tents were leaking quite badly;

June 26: Better weather so Party 1 left at 8:30 p.m. By noon they had reached only the 11,800-foot mark. The weather was colder now and the altitude was making breathing more difficult. By 9:30 p.m., 13 hours after starting, climbing solidly all the way, Party 1 reached the summit;

“On the top it was misty and cold and we wasted no time there. Our boots were frozen stiff and were painful for quite some time after we had begun our descent.”

June 27: Party 1 reached the second camp at 3:15 a.m.; they had climbed consistently for 19

From Our Mail Bag

Readers' comments on all matters pertaining to programs and programming are welcomed. Write: "Mail Bag," CBC Times, Box 160, Winnipeg.

Closeup

• I feel that I will be only one among many to complain of the appearance of Miss Charlotte Whitton on the program, "Close-up." No doubt, had the producers been aware that Miss Charlotte Whitton would put on such an ill-mannered display, she would never have been asked to appear. I felt extremely embarrassed and sorry for Miss Maxwell, who is so obviously a lady. I can only hope that the CBC will never make us suffer through another ordeal with Miss Whitton at any later date.—G. W., Portage la Prairie.

Late Movies

• This letter is written to you in regard to the late movies. Recently we have been subjected to a number of war pictures with British, French and American participants. Is it possible to put on some old American films such as "North Star," "Days of Glory," and "Mission to Moscow?" I would also enjoy some Greta Garbo films. I would also like to express my appreciation of the television program, "Symphony Backstage."—L. P., Winnipeg.

The CBC has just recently signed a contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures and there will be some of Miss Garbo's movies coming through in the near future. The other features mentioned are not yet available in Canada.

Prairie Schooner

• I wish to express my pleasure in listening to the program, "Prairie Schooner." Being a westerner, it revives memories of happy years and it is the only program my family and I tune to on Saturday evenings.—R.W.M., Whitley, Ontario.

Rhapsody

• The program "Rhapsody," is one of the finest programs we have seen on television. The choral work is so very excellent that we are surprised when the soloists are good too! We have always enjoyed Ivan Romanoff's radio program but find his work even better on television. My only complaint concerns the authenticity of the dances. This was particularly evident throughout the program devoted to the dances of Czechoslovakia and the Ukraine. The singing was still interesting but the dancing pulled the whole thing down. The flavorless ballet-styled dancing that was done is a poor substitute for the "real" thing done by these people. One more thing we enjoy about the program are the faces and personalities of the singers. It is most enjoyable to see performers who appear to be enjoying their work. P. L., Regina, Sask.

Association Football

• Congratulations to the CBC for televising the Associated Football game between England and Russia. No doubt the weather conditions hampered to some extent the fine style of play, but nevertheless, it was much enjoyed. To many who have been absent from the Old Country for many years, it was a great treat to see the good old game of soccer presented so clearly.—W. S., Norwood.

hours. Party 2 had reached the precarious camp the previous night and were just preparing for the final stage; fortunately, because there was hardly room for eight men on the small ledge. Thirteen hours of hard climbing took Party 2 to the top. "The summit was a windswept and desolate plateau of hard snow, about 300 feet across. Visibility was only about 800 feet and with the cold wind blowing we lingered only long enough to snap the usual pictures. It continued misty down the icewall . . ."

Meanwhile, Party 1 had arrived at base camp where Duncan and Rotherly were eagerly waiting. Soon they flashed the news to the two radio operators installed at Lituya Bay who sent it on to Vancouver. Twenty-four hours later Party 2 also reported a successful climb.

Following the Fairweather climbs, the party spent some time in the area on other mountains before returning to Lituya Bay. On July 9, at about 6:00 p.m. the men were sitting on the beach having supper. Suddenly the RCAF amphibian that was to pick them up roared into the Bay. This was a surprise: the plane was not expected till the next day. The pilot said the weather was breaking up; no, he wouldn't have supper—best they got out while they could.

So the mountaineers spent that evening celebrating in Juneau. They did not listen to their radio. Had they done so at about 10:17 p.m. they might have heard a voice calling, "Mayday! Mayday! This is the Edrie in Lituya Bay. All hell has broken loose here — I think we've had it. Goodbye."

The Edrie was a fishing boat which put into shelter in Lituya Bay that evening the climbing party left. Aboard were the owner and his young son. Unknown to them, two other fishing boats also put in during the evening.

At a little after ten the fault line running up the coast heaved mightily. The owner of one boat in the Bay described the scene in the Alaskan Sportsman: "We watched the peaks which rise steeply from the waters' edge to heights of six and seven thousand feet, with the lofty giants of the Fairweather range behind. These great snowcapped giants twisted and shook and heaved. They seemed to be suffering unbearable internal tortures. Have you ever seen a 15,000-foot mountain twist and shake and dance?"

Owner of another fishing boat said, "The mountains were shaking something awful with huge slides of rock and snow . . ."

Again as in 1936 a huge tidal wave swept down Lituya Bay. Two of the fishing boats were lifted right across the spit at the entrance and dumped outside; the Edrie by some miracle rode it out, the other ship foundered though its crew of two were saved. The third ship and its crew were lost. The tidal wave struck the mountain on the west side of the Bay and denuded it of trees up to 1,800 feet.

And meanwhile, back in Juneau 24 hours ahead of schedule, the climbing party celebrated their conquest of Mt. Fairweather.

Bob Moir on Football

Two rookies to western football, both of whom have done a fine job in their first year, face their biggest tests in the semi-finals.

Melvin (Sam) Lyle, the head coach of the Edmonton Eskimos, has not received as much recognition as George Terlep, the man who calls the shot for the Saskatchewan Roughriders.

Nevertheless, both have done an excellent job.

Lyle's position is not as exalted as Terlep's because he took over a "pat" football team, one which had won three successive Grey Cups and lost a western championship in the third game of last year's final. However, it had been said in many quarters before the start of the current season, that the Eskimos were a group of "tired old men" on the downgrade. If this was true, Lyle, after taking a few weeks to learn about the difficulties involved in preparing a team for two-game week-ends, has done a remarkable job of putting the team back on an even keel. In final league games the Eskimos looked as strong as ever.

Terlep has received more recognition because he almost completely rebuilt a last-place team and made it a threat in nearly every game it played. Terlep moulded a group considered as the finest of Canadian linemen with an entirely new import line and two import backs named Cookie Gilchrist and Mike Hagler. Terlep has only five holdover imports altogether — Frank Tripucka, Kenny Carpenter, Jack Hill, Bobby Marlow and Larry Isbell. The Roughriders' coach concentrated on building a strong defence for the early games until his offence could knit. An early-season injury to quarterback Frank Tripucka set back Terlep's offensive plans.

Towards the tail-end of the schedule Tripucka's passing exploded for points all over the field but the Roughies didn't win many games. Tripucka's passing and the pass receiving of Hill and Carpenter are expected to be the Roughies' big threat in the playoffs.

Edmonton will undoubtedly stick to its famed running game—Johnny Bright and Normie Kwong. They are the backbone of the attack directed by the indefatigable Jackie Parker. Parker will be the key to the series and Blue Bomber coach Bud Grant expressed the thoughts of nearly everyone when he said, at the conclusion of the schedule, "We expect to meet the Eskimos in the final because of Parker. He can kill you with his running or passing and they still have Bright and Kwong."

The semi-final is a two-game, total-points affair and the final a best-of-three series.

R.C.M.P. Series Coming Soon On CBC Television

Gilles Pelletier, an actor highly rated on French-language television and on the Montreal stage, has been signed to play the role of Corporal Jacques Gagnier in R.C.M.P. — a series of 39 half-hour films based on Royal Canadian Mounted Police case histories, scheduled for both U.K. and Canadian television in the fall of 1959. Still to be selected are Canadian actors to play Constable Scott and Constable Munro, the other members of the R.C.M.P. detachment on which the series centres.

A joint project of the CBC, the BBC and Crawley McConnell Ltd., R.C.M.P. is being produced by Crawley Films Ltd., Ottawa, who have fixed November 17th as a tentative starting date for filming, which will be done first in English and eventually also in French.

Bernard Girard, an experienced North American movie and television producer, has been appointed producer-director of the series which will be written and acted by Canadians and will depict the experiences of a three-man R.C.M.P. detachment stationed in "Outlook," Saskatchewan.

For practical reasons "Outlook" also will be located in Ontario since much of the filming will be done at Old Chelsea, about 14 miles north of Ottawa in the Gatineau Hills, where a main studio (63'x 85'x 28') and an auxiliary building (84'x 60'x 24')

TEAM NUMBERS

Within the next few days the W.I.F.U. semi-finals will have been completed and the winner will meet the defending champion Winnipeg Blue Bombers. In order that viewers will be able to identify the players in both the semi-finals and finals, we are listing the three teams involved.

"CBC Folio" Returns Tuesday

Two one-act plays scheduled—"The Dock Brief" and "Sammy"

This Tuesday evening CBC Folio will begin its fourth television season with the presentation of two one-act plays: The Dock Brief by John Mortimer, and Sammy by Ken Hughes. Canadian actor Eric House will perform a tour de force on this occasion by playing a leading role in the first play and the title-role of Sammy in the second.

The Dock Brief was first presented as a radio play on the BBC's Third Programme, won the Italia Prize in 1957, later was produced on BBC-TV, and last April was part of a Wednesday Night program on CBC radio. A dock brief is a peculiar legal defence method still used in England whereby a prisoner in the dock who cannot afford legal counsel is allowed to choose any barrister sitting in court to defend him at the crown's expense. The two retire briefly to cook up their strategy, then return for the trial. The characters in the play are an elderly, unsuccessful barrister and a bird-fancier who admits murdering his wife because her sense of humour jarred on his habitual gloom. To the barrister, the bird-fancier represents a chance to win fame in a cause celebre, and not wanting to hurt the feelings of his ingenious advocate the bird-fancier, co-operates in planning far-fetched defences. As they rehearse their defence in the cell, they unlock each other's wildest dreams. Alone and happy, they make a world which they can control—until called back to the courtroom's harsh reality.

Sammy is set in a seedy flat in a run-down Georgian house in London, England. Sammy, its sole occupant, is a small-time operator and con-man, not exactly crooked, but involved through his varied interests with many who are. He has a quick tongue and considerable charm, and the telephone in his flat is an essential item in his business. As the play opens, Sammy is in a spot, having heard on the radio that the horse he backed to win came in second. The phone rings; it is a ruthless crook demanding full payment by six o'clock of two hundred quid Sammy owes him—or else. Sammy launches operations by telephone, juggling contacts madly to raise the money in time. By five to six he has almost succeeded—his unseen henchman is on the way with the cash—but the phone rings again. It is the crook announcing that his men are on the way (Sammy's watch is five minutes slow) . . .

Next week CBC Folio will present another production of Anne of Green Gables—a musical adapted by Donald Harron from L. M. Montgomery's beloved Canadian classic, with music by Norman Campbell. As in last season's Folio presentation, the producer will be Norman Campbell. Kathy Willard, a New York actress will play Anne. Members of last season's cast to be seen again are John Drainie, Margot Christie, Margaret Griffin and William Cole.

On November 25, Folio viewers will see M. Charles Cohen's first television play, The Hostage — a tragedy dealing with violent internal tension among rebel nationalists in an uprising against the British; December 2—the Canadian TV premiere of Eugene Onegin, an

Cash Award For CBC Stage Script

Esse W. Ljungh, supervisor of CBC's drama department, has announced the establishment of two cash awards for the hour-long radio drama series on CBC Stage.

Now in its 16th season, CBC Stage is heard on the Trans-Canada network Sundays at 10:00 p.m.

The awards, for the current Stage series only, are: $500 to the playwright of the best original hour-long drama to be heard in the series; $250 to the most promising newcomer, actor or actress, appearing on CBC Stage this season.

opera by Tchaikovsky based on a poem by Pushkin, with actor Peter Ustinov speaking parts of the poem to link the scenes; and December 9—the North American TV premiere of Arthur Miller's Death of a Salesman with the veteran movie actor Albert Dekker in the leading role.

R.C.M.P. SERIES

14') are being constructed on 40 acres of varied terrain. The site convincingly simulates the series' Saskatchewan locale. Authenticity will be stressed throughout the series, and for that reason considerable footage also will be shot in Saskatchewan. One episode calls for a spectacular grain-elevator fire, and arrangements have been completed for this to be staged and filmed in Saskatchewan. Another episode calls for the finding of a body in a haystack and this can be enacted effectively at the Gatineau site.

Pelletier, is the brother of Denise Pelletier who was featured in the Plouffe Family cast last season. He currently is appearing at Montreal's Comedie Canadienne in the title role of Marcel Dube's Un Simple Soldat, an English-language stage version of a role he first created on French-language TV last winter. Last May in Quebec City he was named best actor of the year at the "Gala des Splendeurs," which is the equivalent of the "Emmy Awards" for French-language TV. On this occasion he actually took four awards: the Gold Medal as best actor, the Frigon Trophy, the Lafleche Trophy, and the Lieutenant-Governor's Medal.

Girard, newly appointed producer - director of R. C. M. P., has been associated with Paramount Studios and wrote the script for Breakthrough a Warner Brothers film about the Ardennes breakthrough in the Second World War. For television, he directed the first 13 Medic films and he wrote, directed and produced Four Women in Black, a Playhouse 90 presentation starring Helen Hayes and Ralph Meeker. He also directed 48 You Are There films and wrote eight of them.

The CBC Dominion Network is a chain of radio stations to which the CBC makes available a variety of programs each day. Only one of the stations—CJBC in Toronto—is CBC-owned and carries all the programs. The following programs are available to Dominion Network stations in the prairies. Only those marked with an asterisk (*) are carried by all stations; the others may be dropped due to local commitments. The stations themselves will be pleased to inform listeners which programs they carry.

"Farm Facts"

A "short course" for farmers on the western TV network

The CBC will employ the vast resources of network television to give prairie farmers a "short course" on agricultural topics of current interest. The series, Farm Facts, began October 27, and will be seen monthly for six occasions on most television stations in Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan.

With the exception of the opening telecast, all programs will be presented on the third Monday of each month; from 1:00-1:30 p.m. in Manitoba; from 2:00-2:30 p.m. in Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Farm Facts has been prepared by the Farm Department of the CBC with the co-operation and advice of the Directors of Extension of the Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta Departments of Agriculture. The series will give agricultural experts an opportunity to speak to huge farm audiences, using TV as a medium for bringing farmers news and up-to-date ideas on farm practices and techniques.

Topics and participants suggested by the Extension Representatives have led to preparation of the following schedule of broadcasts:

Oct. 27—Feeding Cattle.

Nov. 17—Farm Buildings.

Dec. 15—Farm Safety.

Jan. 19—Farm Home.

Feb. 16—Cereal and Forage Crop Varieties.

March 16—Insects are Ready for '59, Are You?

Farm Facts will be introduced and co-ordinated by Lionel Moore, the CBC Regional Farm Broadcast producer. On the opening program October 27, Lionel had Frank Baker, the Director of Field Services for the Meat Packers Council of Canada and Dr. Elwood Stringam, in charge of the Animal Science Department of the University of Manitoba, as guests.

Three agricultural engineers, guesting on the second program November 17 will discuss various types of farm buildings for housing beef and dairy cattle, grain and forage crops. These engineers, employed by the Extension Service are Ed Hudek, of Winnipeg; Jack Peck, of Regina; and Charley Cheshire, of Edmonton. Details on further programs in the series will be announced later.

Farm Facts will be produced by Don Browne-Wilkinson whose Country Calendar programs have proved extremely popular with farmers throughout the entire prairie region.
