WALT SAYS ...!

with Elvira Caprese

Let the war begin!!! While the DVD revolution will kick in just about Xmas time this year ... we have to expect a war of configurations. Remember, the stereo war had to be settled ... Beta and VHS fought it out ... cassettes and CDs set the industry back, and minidiscs entered the picture. So why should it be any different now? DVD is already taking over the video movie market and the new audio DVD players are the dream of record buyers. Can a war be far off? What system will do battle with the DVD? (EC: I hope it gets resolved!!!) Not in our lab!

Truly Canadian!!! The Miguel Rios version of Song of Joy broke in Canada back when ... (EC: In RPM if I remember correctly! July 1970!!!) ... whatever! So powerful was that hit ... that many in the world think Song of Joy is Canada's national anthem! Recently in the U.S. they actually played Song of Joy instead of our real national anthem! (EC: Good choice!!!)

Playing with the Big Boys!!! When Canadian culture was a joke south of the border, Canadians didn't have anything to worry about! Now with the music biz threatening the world ... and movies in Canada and a lot of the other cultural industries being led by the music explosion ... we're at war! Wow! Stupid Canadians! What do you know? The sleeping giant rears its head! You want to play with the big boys? Just watch it! (EC: Just watch it!!!)

The Grand Old Lady was cool!!! This year's CNE media team brought more press to the annual fair than I've seen in years. It was like the old days when every day and the last remaining days were a cause for excitement by the dailies. And this is interesting ... the team showed exactly what woman power can do. Yes! They are all women: Alison Abbott as manager/publicist, with publicists Marcia Schryer and Emily Young and receptionist Kate McKenna. I hope they're back next year. And, the Ex? The best year I've seen it ... which goes back to the days when I lived on Strachan Avenue and sneaked under the fence ... every day. Those were the days. Now! About the board of directors! (EC: One step at a time!!!)

JR is in the loop!!! Nothing to hang my hat on just yet, but it looks like JR is going to head up the UK operation of a major MAJOR label. It must have been a GREAT offer. Now, he can rent ... maybe buy in Hampstead ... maybe even be a neighbour to PB. By the way, those rumours of PB coming back to Canada to head up you know what, are not true. But he did tell me he had seriously considered throwing his hat in the ring and that I could print it right here. (EC: What a challenge that would be!!!)

And, how about this!!! Our old friend David Munns, who was recently treading the barren in Northern Canada looking for polar bears with nature guide Deane Cameron, has been voted to the board of directors of OD2, a Bristol, England online music distribution company. We first met David when he helped shape EMI Records back when it was Capitol Records. Later he took on the job as a senior executive for PolyGram U.K. He's also co-manager of Bon Jovi, something I didn't know. (EC: You have friends in high places ... all over the world!!!)

The void will be filled!!! Watch for very important news of an appointment that might surprise, but certainly will disappoint a few. The headhunters have been busy and you'd be surprised at how many Canadians outside the country have made a pitch for the job. And that leads me to wonder out loud ... why look anywhere else but inside where there is someone with all the knowledge and expertise and a hands-on working arrangement with all the important people? Anyway, ours is not to reason why et cetera, et cetera. And when the dust settles the reasons will be buried. As for who it's going to be ... or who is the most mentioned ... can't even use initials on this one ... that would give the secret away immediately. (EC: Well, how about one initial???)

No regrets!!! Remember away back when ... when Stompin' Tom Connors returned his Juno Awards? The guy has a story that should be told. When he first started out there's a little known fact that he funded a record by classical guitarist Liona Boyd, among other things. But then he fell on hard times ... bad management et cetera and eventually no label. And then along came Deane Cameron who signed him to Capitol/EMI and then the fun began. Without radio play ... no station, country or otherwise, would touch him ... over his career he has sold more than three million albums. Interesting too is that he used to receive his performance cheques ... all marked 00.00, but this year he received a royalty cheque for the playing of his records in NHL arenas ... a cheque that would knock your socks off. And he's still just plain Stompin' Tom who pulls capacity houses on his annual coast-to-coast-to-coast tours. (EC: A Canadian achiever eh???)

Mike Arsenault moves on!!! How's this for a nice positive change in professional direction: "It's time for me to take a hiatus from the music business.

The last six years and nine months have been a remarkable experience for me. Thank you for welcoming me into this very special industry. I've enjoyed working with and getting to know each of you as friends," so eloquently put by HMV's director of marketing as he takes on a new challenge, same managerial position, for The Second Cup Coffee Co. His challenge is to lead a major brand re-positioning for his new company. And, even as he exits HMV, he does what he does best, promotes the new company as "Canada's largest speciality coffee retailer with 400+ locations across Canada." Mike's a pretty aggressive kind of guy. He'll do well. He can be reached at the head office in Toronto 416-975-5541 after Sept. 25. (EC: And what a competitive industry that is!!!)

Canada's unsung hero! Last Canada Day, a friend asked me to go for a walk through Toronto's historic Mount Pleasant cemetery. He walks there four times a week for exercise. There, beneath a large maple tree, he showed me the grave of Alexander Muir who wrote The Maple Leaf Forever. He wrote the song in 1887 and won second prize in a contest to find a patriotic song. It was thought of for years as Canada's "other" national anthem. I learned it in public school but now it is seldom heard. On the grave was a small Canadian flag which was placed there some time ago and is maintained whenever it is dirtied by the rain or knocked over by squirrels. It's one of those flags that Sheila Copps gave out to school kids not too long ago. Once in a while the flag has to be replaced because it gets worn or taken by a souvenir hunter. The grave is easy to find because it's about ten metres from the grave of William Lyon Mackenzie King which is marked with a forty foot flagpole with a large Canadian ensign and two large bronze plaques. Very impressive in comparison to the grave of Muir which is only distinguished by the small paper flag. (Read on.)

Sidebar! Many people in the industry know my friend who maintains that small flag on Muir's grave. He buys the flags at a dollar store and does it because he says The Maple Leaf Forever is Canada's first genuine Cancon song. In Mike Filey's book, Mount Pleasant Cemetery, he writes "...it was suggested to Muir that his song should be published. Taking his copy of the music to The Guardian newspaper office, he had 1000 copies run off. He sold $4.00 worth and then got a bill from the printer for $30. Thus, the first printing of The Maple Leaf Forever cost Alexander Muir $25. Sadly, this rousing song is now seldom heard." My friend says he'd probably recorded the song, but Berliner still hadn't invented the disc. I couldn't find any mention of Muir or the song in the 1999 edition of the Canadian Global Almanac. (EC: What a nice couple of articles. Now WHO is the friend with the flags???)

BMG Canada enjoys a record sales year

by Ron Rogers

Now in her third year as BMG Music Canada president, Lisa Zbitnew has been in the fortunate position of heading up a company that's enjoyed a terrific run of success over those three years. But like others in her position, she's smart enough to know that you have to keep it all in perspective.

The record business is as cyclical and unpredictable as any business out there, so maintaining that proper perspective is vital. Things may look great in April, but by September, it's easy to find yourself right back to square one.

For BMG, their past fiscal year (which ended in June) has been a good one – yet another year of record sales. The company thrived via their distribution agreement with Zomba, which has produced monster numbers via the Backstreet Boys, *N Sync and Britney Spears. But BMG themselves also produced significant sales with surprise hits from the likes of Santana (now at 1.1 million in Canada), Christina Aguilera (500,000) and Lou Bega (500,000).

The last few months may have seen overall record industry sales stumble, however, which is why Zbitnew continues to remain humble about BMG Canada's overall success.

"We just turned the corner into this year, and everyone's a bit concerned that we've gone into a series of months where we've seen double digit declines. So we're certainly not being cocky, but I think we're cautiously optimistic about the release schedule that's coming."

That cautious optimism over the coming months stems partially from the introduction of Clive Davis' new J Records label, the new BMG imprint created by Davis following his controversial retirement from Arista.

While Zbitnew isn't expecting anything significant to emerge from the new label immediately, she does recognize the benefits of having another label to draw potential hits from.

"We're not likely to see too much from that before Christmas. But, it means that BMG now has a third major label to be pulling repertoire from. The first single we'll be releasing from it is the first single from O Town, which was the group featured in the Making Of The Band. So we have the ability to tap into that much more (with J Records), and clearly it's Clive Davis, so our expectations are high."

Domestically, BMG has just released new records from both treble charger and Love Inc., both of which will likely be top 20 records. And the just-released Planet Pop 2001 compilation debuted at #6 on the RPM 100 CDs chart three weeks ago.

And things should continue to look good into the fall, with new releases expected from Christina Aguilera (both a latin album, and a Christmas release), Dave Matthews, and Usher, as well as another highly-anticipated release from the Backstreet Boys via Zomba.

Currently, BMG Canada continues to fight domestically with McMaster & James. The Winnipeg duo's latest single, I Understand, was the hottest mover on the most recent RPM Hit Tracks chart (#42, up from #56/RPM – Sept. 4/00), and the pair continue to enjoy good radio support in general. But the fact is, the radio and video support (via Much) haven't translated into strong sales.

BMG have struggled with the fact that consumers immediately decided to slot M&J into the entire teen pop field, rather than consider them in a slightly more mature vein. But Zbitnew stresses that the company is sticking with M&J for the long haul.

"If anything, McMaster & James to us was kind of a contemporary Hall & Oates. They're great singers, songwriters and musicians, and I don't know that in the teen pop market that distinction is important. But I do know that with a slightly older demographic, it does become an important difference. So the first singles we released, we definitely went in the pop direction, to make the connection with that critical mass of music consumers.

"But with the last Planet Pop record, we included Love Wins Everytime, and stations started to add that song off the compilation, we didn't even have the record done. So we released the record, followed up with the second single (Thank You), and what we've found is that we have solid radio support, from both top 40 and AC radio, but our call-out research was showing it was much more about women 18-34. Would I like to see it at 300,000 by now, absolutely? But the long-term development of McMaster & James, to me, means we've got an artist we're going to be talking about three records from now."

The success of artists like McMaster & James from a radio perspective, but not necessarily from a sales standpoint, is a point of ongoing frustration for all the labels. Getting significant radio airplay for Cancon artists isn't a problem – but translating that airplay into sales is something else.

Record companies and radio stations have never enjoyed a wonderfully symbiotic relationship, and the labels will always express some sort of concern about the direction radio is heading.

But Zbitnew is one record label executive who likes the way things are headed in radio right now. What seems to be a homogenization of the various formats may be a good thing for the industry in the long run.

"There's a bit of a convergence that's happening, that is healthy, and we haven't seen at radio in a long time. It's not happening to the extent that I'd like to see it happening, and music is driving it a little bit. But when was the last time you heard Moby on both CFNY and KISS 92 at the same time?"

"But there's two things happening that I find really interesting. One is that dance music has become the alternative. That new Madonna song is kind of leading a wave of a very cool, more commercial, progressive house sound. And secondly, what's also happening now, which I hope radio pays attention to, is that last I checked, nine of the top 30 records were rock records. When you see that kind of chart dominance with rock, it's clearly coming back very strongly. Does that mean we'll get treble charger on top 40 radio – maybe not. But I think the lines are blurring, and what's exciting is that the kids are really driving what's going on musically."

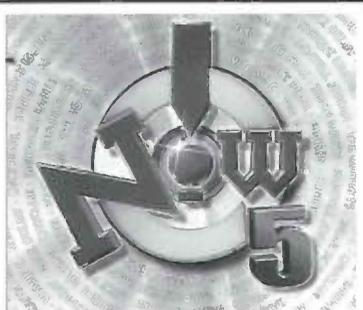

BMG continues to enjoy strength in numbers via their deal with Zomba. The million-selling successes of BSB, *N Sync and Britney have clearly helped BMG Canada's bottom line.

And Zbitnew has nothing but respect for the job Zomba Canada president Laura Bartlett has done in assembling her staff and creating a record company division from scratch.

"I think the relationship (with Zomba) is going great on both sides of the border, and I anticipate we're going to continue a great relationship. I think Laura has assembled such a great team. She's built up that staff with a lot of really keen, enthusiastic people, and it's exciting. And it's exciting not just from a standpoint of the big three acts, but I think when you look at something like this Groove Armada record, they've really made a mark from an international perspective. But I'm really proud of what Laura's done, I don't know too many people who could have started with nothing and built up something so quickly and so successfully."

This weekend is supposed to be the year's biggest celebration of country music in Canada. Canadian Country Music Week has, for the past ten years, been one of the highlights of the year in Canadian music.

But the country music genre has been hard hit over the past few years, and few record companies have felt that hit more than BMG, which has traditionally been one of, if not the strongest country record company in Canada.

One of the most commonly heard complaints about today's country music is that it's trying too hard to sound like pop, and that the biggest country stars (Shania Twain, Faith Hill) are having their greatest success in the AC market. But Zbitnew doesn't feel that more pop-driven country is a bad thing. And the movement of country music into a more mainstream direction could help create more new Shania's and Faith's, which could provide an overall boost to the genre.

"Lonestar is a triple platinum album, and how many acts went triple platinum this year? That's a pretty significant thing for an artist that's been around for some time. And it was driven by a hit that, yes, was an AC hit as well. But you talk about things being cyclical, let's look back at country twenty years ago. Kenny Rogers and Dolly Parton didn't just have hits on country radio. Tanya Tucker had significant pop hits. And yet today, people are saying, 'well Shania did it but nobody else has done it'. Well yeah, it's been Shania and Faith Hill and Lonestar. But I don't think there's a huge amount of difference between country songs and songs that are being played on AC and hot AC.

"And some artists are core country artists and continue to thrive. Alan Jackson will have a new record in the fall, and he continues to sell really well. We've got an artist named Carolyn Dawn Johnson - she's from Alberta and signed to Arista Nashville. She's a great songwriter, and if you listen to this record, there's all kind of formats that could play it. The Warren Brothers are totally cool - they've got a song on their record that to me, sounds like Crowded House. So in terms of the country sound, it is becoming a more mainstream sound, it is going to be embraced. The fact is, I don't think country needs to be ghettoized. We have a series of new artists that are going to come out strong, and if they have the song that's going to connect, the way Lonestar did, then they'll be able to sell records."

Still, though, Zbitnew remains concerned about the ability to sell Canadian country artists, and the inability of the industry to create a Canadian country star system. As she notes, it's difficult to justify spending hundreds of thousands of dollars promoting a country artist, when you don't foresee making the money back.

"But the industry's tough right now, it's tough for retail, it's tough for radio, it's tough for record companies - so it's a little difficult to get everyone to lobby around and say 'let's throw money in this direction'..."

"With the money it costs to sign an act these days, we have to think globally. So with the Love

Inc. record, we already know that all the major territories in the world are going to put that record out. But with country music, there's only so many different places you can take it. So you have to manage your expectations, but you also don't have to make million dollar videos and be stupid about the process when you manage your expectations.

"But the great thing about country music is that there's still an audience out there, and when you find it, you can connect. When you look at an artist like Julian Austin right now, he is touring constantly, and he's in front of thousands of people on a regular basis. So he's making money on the road. So if it has to go back to selling 50 records at a time, then that's what it has to be, and we're going to have to go back to being a little bit more patient."

BMG is experiencing some difficulty building their own country star with Julian Austin. The east coast native, now relocated to Calgary, has, like McMaster & James, earned solid radio and MuchMusic airplay with the first couple of singles off his latest album, Back In Your Life.

But like M&J, Austin hasn't been able to translate that radio and Much airplay into sales. Zbitnew feels that the country fans, including Austin fans, are still out there, but it's just that much harder to locate them.

"Julian did an in-store at HMV at First Canadian Place, and he sold 60 records at that in-store. At that point I thought, let's take him off the road and do every single office building in North America, and we'll get to 60,000 records. But the fans are out there, that hasn't changed. It's just really hard to get to them. The root of the word momentum is moment, and you've got to think about the moment before you can build the momentum. And with country music, it's not going to cyclically turn itself around. What's going to happen is, there will be more Shania's and Lonestars and Faith Hills, and one by one we're going to build a connection again. "But the industry's tough right now, it's tough for retail, it's tough for radio, it's tough for record companies - so it's a little difficult to get everyone to lobby around and say 'let's throw money in this direction', if it's not coming back. But I hope by this time next year we can talk about the next Lonestar that's selling 300,000 units and connecting on a broader basis. And maybe there'll be two or three of them, and maybe the other labels will have two or three as well, and that will be the starting point to get it back."

Of course, the health of the Canadian country scene goes hand-in-hand with the health of the Canadian Country Music Awards, which takes place September 11th. It's no secret that the CCMA has experienced some difficulty with the awards this year, specifically in getting the show on television.

Just two weeks ago, the CCMAs happily announced that the show was being picked up for simulcast by TNN and CMT, meaning that, not only will the show be broadcast live, but it will also be seen by the millions of TNN viewers in the US.

Despite this last-minute salvation, the CCMA has been under fire from many in the Canadian music industry, with some feeling the association has dropped the ball in terms of the awards.

For her part, though, Zbitnew feels the CCMA organizers should be praised for their efforts in keeping the awards alive. As far as she's concerned, it's so typically Canadian for people in this country to damn the efforts of others, rather than pitching in themselves.

"Do I wish there was still a major Canadian broadcaster behind the show? - absolutely. I think it's really unfortunate, and I'm not naive to suggest that it wasn't a signal of concern. We have Jill Snell on the board of the CCMA, and I know how hard those people work, and I know that they all do it on a volunteer basis. Unfortunately, in Canada, there isn't a lot of people that are stepping forward to champion anything at the moment. So I have tons of respect for people like Tom Tompkins and Sheila Hamilton, who are doing it out of a labour of love, because they're not getting anything back. For the people that are now bashing the CCMA - if you think it's not working, then why not volunteer a day or week out of your time to make it better - otherwise, shut the fuck up!"

When the name BMG comes up within the industry these days, it's liable to be part of a much-talked about rumour concerning a merger/takeover involving BMG and a certain other major multinational.

"I've got an exceptional staff, so I never feel it's lonely at the top. . ."

Rumours of such a merger/takeover have been circulating throughout the business for months, and there are many who still believe that it's only a matter of time before it occurs.

As BMG Canada president, Zbitnew obviously knows about the rumours, but she's wise to avoid even speculating on the possibility, preferring instead to leave it in the hands of those higher up.

"It's a big business, but it's a small business as well. There's going to be a ton of speculation. I'm not sick of it, but I don't personally hear about it all that much. And I can't dwell on things over which I have no control. My focus has to be to keep BMG thriving, and I feel quite fortunate, with a privately owned company with a long-term vision, that we have managed to focus on doing business, and not had to deal with all the constant threats and concerns that other people have had to deal with. At the end of the day, those are things out of my control, and they're things that I count on people like Strauss Zelnick to deal with, and I know they'll do the right thing for the business."

Again, it's important to maintain that perspective. As Zbitnew reminds herself constantly, this is a great business to be in, and she keeps waiting for the day when she'll actually have to "go out and get a real job."

What's important is that she's surrounded by good people, many of whom have been in the business for decades. And the great track record the company's enjoyed over the past three years has made her job that much more enjoyable.

"I've been at BMG four years this October, so it's been close to three and a half years since I've been president. I'm certainly comfortable in where I'm at. I've got an exceptional staff, so I never feel it's lonely at the top, because I have a whole bunch of people around me who are watching my back. It's a lot of hard work, and it's not always glamorous, but it's been good. And because we've had such a great run over the last three years, that makes it easier to pack up at the end of the day and go home and think about something else."

PLANET POP 2001 - Pop
Various Artists
Ariola-74903-N

Let's face it, there really isn't a great deal of thought required in putting together a CD like this - bring together the biggest names in the teen-pop field, pull together some of their biggest hits, and voila, you've got what will likely be one of the biggest sellers heading into the busy fall, back-to-school season. There's not a lot of explanation required here - this is, after all, a compilation, and most, if not all of these tracks have been heard plenty of times before. In terms of the previously unreleased material, there's a new cut from Five, a funky little number called Don't Fight It Baby, as well as some cute little interview excerpts from Westlife, and song snippets from Westlife and Girl Thing (where do all these groups come from?!). Otherwise, it's a bunch of big, big hits from a bunch of very hot artists: Larger Than Life from BSB (that's the Backstreet Boys to the uninitiated), Tearin' Up My Heart from N Sync, What A Girl Wants from Christina Aguilera, Bottom Of My Broken Heart from Britney Spears, TLC's No Scrubs, LFO's Girl On TV, Mytown's Party All Night, The Vengaboys' Kiss, B*itched's Jump Down, M2M's Mirror Mirror, Swear It Again from Westlife, etc., etc. There's a nice slice of Cancon as well, with McMaster & James (Thank You), D-Cru (I Will Be Waiting, featuring Craig Smart) and the newly-discovered Jake (Let Me Know). BMG has tossed in some stickers and a locker-sized calendar with the CD, so the kids should eat this one up. Look for Out Of Your Mind, by the True Steppers and Dane Bowers, featuring Victoria 'Posh Spice' Beckham, which has become a monster dance hit in the UK. -RR

TREBLE CHARGER -Rock
Wide Awake Bored
ViK-77599-N

If straight-ahead, no-nonsense, reasonably mind-detaching Canadian guitar rock is up your alley, then you've come to the right place. Treble Charger isn't going to chart any new territory in terms of dramatic art, but they're able to put their slightly dirty finger on the kind of sound that the kids dig - three or four guitar chords, crashing cymbals, thumping bass, and primarily regulation melodies and harmonies. That's not a slag at the band - what they do, they do well, and the instant success of their album on the charts is proof of the fact that the group has built up an impressive loyal following of fans. But as impressive as that first week out of the box was, it's still questionable as to whether the album will be able to sustain any type of longevity on the charts. Lead single American Psycho has inched along nicely at rock radio, but there are plenty of other single choices to follow up with, including Brand New Low, Business, Favorite Worst Enemy, I Don't Know, and Another Dollar. The Charger sound may seem monotonous at times to the more adventurous musical listener, but it's got just the right frenetic intensity for the kids. Add in some of that fine, lost-generation, teen-angst kind of lyrical slant - and you've got a winner on your hands. -RR

AARON TIPPIN - Country
People Like Us
Lyric Street-65014-J

While some country artists are setting pop as a priority in their countrified projections, Tippin remains solid as a country rock with 11 of the best tracks he's shot down the shoot and they fit that instantly-recognizable vocal signature. Kiss This, a song he wrote with wife Thea and Philip Douglas, has already become a favourite with country radio programmers and a Top 10 (#9) on the RPM Country 100. An excellent follow-up would be The Best Love We Ever Made, written by Tippin and his wife and which features Thea as a guest vocalist. They work together vocally like hand to glove. Tippin runs the full gamut of country from honky-tonk to ballads to country with a slight rock edge. Also key is the Mark Collie and Leslie Satcher penning of I'd Be Afraid Of Losing You and Always Was, written by Tony Colton and Bobby Ray Wood. Tippin also puts an interesting spin on Big Boy Toys which he wrote with Buddy Brock. Tippin produced the album with Biff Watson and Mike Bradley. -WG

DARRYL WORLEY - Country
Hard Rain Don't Last
Dreamworks-0044-50042-J

Here's a modern country guy with a penchant for things that smack of traditionalism. He's having a bit of a struggle at country radio with When You Need My Love the first single from his debut on Dreamworks. He wrote the song with Wynn Varble and it could still kick in. There are a couple other tracks that have a better feel to them, one being The Way Things Are Goin' which he wrote with Mark D. Sanders, no stranger to hit-writing, and the Tony Martin, Mark Nesler penning of Who's Gonna Get Me Over You. Worley isn't too shy when it comes to projecting his vocal property, which he serves up beautifully on the above. But don't overlook Feels Like Work which he wrote with Steve Leslie. To say Worley sounds like someone else would be a disservice. He's his own man, maybe influenced by some of the past country greats, which isn't a bad thing, gently mixed with some of today's top country names. As a songwriter, even using copyrights by others, Worley displays a deep-rooted respect for the song message that puts him in a balladeer class of his own. And not too many of today's discoveries can fly that flag. Produced by Frank Rogers and James Stroud. -WG

LAURANCE TAN -World Spiritual
Sounds of the Tyger
MoonLake Tiger-81688 (Independent)

Publicist Peter Ashworth suggests that Tan's sound "blends eastern and western instrumentation to develop a world spiritual sound ... using classical techniques and his interpretation of traditional Arias, western pop, Japanese 'Enka', Chinese folk songs and chants of people from the First Nations to create his own vocal style." Pretty heady stuff, and right on. Not much more can be added, except perhaps that Tan's sophomore release reveals a much more relaxed and confident performer. The mix of western and eastern instrumentation is ingenious and impacts immediately. His vocal property transfixed the listener with his projection that must be credited to his musical theatre association. Next Plane To Tibet, a song he wrote with Kevin Nelson, is the first focus track, and well chosen. Tan's solo-penning of Angelheart is uncanny and, again, his musical theatre experience kicks in and, although one shouldn't make comparisons, sounds very much like it was influenced by Phantom of the Opera ... very cleverly done however. Heart of the Tiger, a song he wrote with fellow producer Bryant Didier and Bringer of the Light, a Tan original, which he claims is "a message with music from God," are also key tracks. It's an unusual album with a built in mystique where some tracks actually conjure up visual fantasies. Quite an accomplishment. There's also an interesting take on Schubert's Ave Marie and the Otis/Benton/Hendricks penning of Looking Back. Recorded at B Musique, Didier's Toronto studio. -WG

LENNIE GALLANT - Pop/Folk
Live
Revenant-08622 (Independent)

Rustico, Prince Edward Island is his home and the world is his oyster and it's nice to have him back ... because Gallant is a rare breed of singer/songwriter ... more poet than anything else. Hearing him live adds that extra ingredient of salt-sea feel to his liting and cleverly-underdone offerings. Prince Edward Island should acclaim him the province's poet laureate ... not that sea shanties come to mind. But, patch into The Pull Of The Fundy Tide, a blistering folk rocker that should get the teeth grinding. He even reveals his Acadian roots with a very pensive rendering of La vaise des vagues with John Gordon on accordion and fiddlemaestro Chris Church. Church is a member of Mir (formerly Big Picture), which is travelling with Gallant. He is joined by drummer Adam Dowling, Asif Illyas on electric and acoustic guitars, bassist Shehab Illyas and, of course Gallant on acoustic guitars, bodhran and harmonica. All the bandmembers are heard on background vocals. Five of the 13 tracks here are previously unrecorded songs: those mentioned, plus Part Of Me, Coal Black and Pieces Of You ... pretty tantalizing stuff. The other tracks were released on his four previous albums that are still active. Gallant also supplies short and very interesting anecdotal snippets on each track; Destination, for instance, was written on a train trip Gallant took across Canada. The conductor wouldn't let him play his guitar, so he wrote the song to the rhythm of the train, and very successfully recreates it on the bodhran with an assist by Asif Illyas on electric guitar. Slow Boat was written while crewing aboard a 47-ft wooden schooner on an ocean passage. Clever too is Gallant's ability to create mood swings ... different strokes for different folks comes to mind. The album was produced by Gallant with Al Strickland. The live sound and recording was grooved by Strickland and Dave Hillier with mixing at Halifax's Groove Deluxe Studio. -WG

ALBUM PICK

HED PLANET EARTH - Rock Broke

Volcano/Jive-44173-N
And now, for those looking to bash their forehead against the wall and remove some brain cells, there's Hed Planet Earth, a warm, peace-and-love type of group that spends most of this record ferociously ripping the strings of their guitars, bashing big holes in their snare drum, and screaming profusely and profanely into the microphone. HPE is a California-based group that had some surprisingly strong success with their first EP release, which sold something like 100,000 units out of the box in the states, primarily thanks to a good street buzz and plenty of live gigging. Thanks to that good buzz, the group has already sold more than 25,000 out of the box with this new album in the states, and that buzz should translate over into Canada, once the kids pick up on it in this country. The music is, well, loud, and abrasive, but it has that kind of rock/rap/metal combination which has worked so well for Limp Bizkit, Korn, Rage Against The Machine and others. HPE consists of Jahred (vocals), Chizad (guitars), Westyle (guitars), DJ Product (tableist), BC The Mizak Diza (drums) and Mawk (bass). First single Bartender features some nice desperation in Jahred's potent vocals, while first track Killing Time is appropriately deadly. Swan Dive is equally despairing, while Feel Good is churn-and-burn metal/rap at its best - check out Kittie's Morgan Lander on the call-and-answer chorus. Jesus (Of Nazareth) is decidedly mournful, while The Meadow features an almost seventies-ish melody. Jive/Zomba has largely been known, up to now anyway, as THE teen pop label, with artists like Backstreet Boys, 'N Sync and Britney Spears. But the teen pop wave can only last so long, and it's good to see Jive expanding their borders and opting for something a little more hardcore. -RR

Mel Shaw heads up Nashville's Key Entertainment

Mel Shaw has been appointed general manager of the Key Entertainment Group's new Nashville office. The announcement was made by the company's president Greg Thomas from the company's head office in Calgary.

The expansion is aimed to widen the scope of Key's U.S. activities in agency booking, artist management, record production, videos, music publishing and songwriter production.

Calgary-born Shaw, a Juno-award producer, has been a Nashville resident for the past eight years, during which he has been involved with record production, music publishing representation and industry consulting. In the mid-nineties he also produced Moments of Meaning, a sixteen week TV series and an award winning long form video production.

In Canada, Shaw produced a number of successful records released through his own MWC label. He was also a major industry contributor; the founding president of the Canadian Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences (CARAS), president of CIRPA and a former executive director of FACTOR.

Shaw has already been effective at Key in expanding the reach of the company's roster in obtaining placement of songs in motion picture soundtracks and television programs by establishing a special arrangement with Chromatic Records in Los Angeles, a motion picture soundtrack label.

The Nashville office has a full multi-track recording studio on the premises which has led to a working relationship with some of the top Nashville tunesmiths. Key is already in pre-production with three of the artists they represent. Underway is a Country Legends project that will include a one hour music documentary TV special, a two album set, and a touring production using video, audio and live entertainers. The album is now in pre-production and will include historic #1 hits that were originally recorded by Hall of Fame stars. Already firm are several legendary musicians who recorded and performed with artists ranging from Hank Williams, Hank Snow, Ernest Tubb and Johnny Horton to Patsy Cline and Marty Robbins.

In making the announcement of Shaw's appointment, Thomas pointed out that "The direction of the Key operation is a natural progression of the company to have a focused fully developed career for the artists we represent. Key Nashville will have strong representation, full record production capabilities with access to several record producers and a centre point for our acts in the U.S. marketplace."

Marketing and major project coordination will be handled by Linda Bakken from Key's Calgary office, who noted, "This professional approach in artist representation is not a luxury but a necessity. The marketplace is always changing and it's global. To compete an artist must establish a high line of professionalism reflected in promotional packaging."

Thomas founded Key with Bakken and Paul Biro who comes from an artist management and promotion background. Thomas has helped develop the success of Calgary as a home base for country music after successful industry associations with his Studio City Company (15 years) and Greg Thomas Productions (12 years). Thomas emphasizes that "Having a strong representative with a great deal of industry knowledge and contacts has already been helpful in strengthening our relationship with artists and agents in the U.S. Key has current plans involving corporate sponsorship of tours and special events, TV production projects and the continuing development of a closer working relationship with the Nashville music business community," summing up with "The expansion to Nashville with Calgarian Mel Shaw was a natural that has already paid dividends.

Key's Nashville office is located at 500 East Iris Drive, Nashville 37204. Shaw can be contacted at 615-298-7781.

Jason McCoy: just a Honky Tonk guy

by Ron Rogers

Three years can be a long time to wait between albums, and in the country genre, it's an especially lengthy duration. Fans can quickly forget about you, styles can change, and radio can be very fickle.

Thus, Jason McCoy has taken something of a chance by waiting three years since his last record, Playin' For Keeps, to release his latest, Honky Tonk Sonatas. But both he and his label, Universal, believe the wait will be worth it.

The change this time out is in the material. For his first two records, McCoy wrote or co-wrote most of the tracks, and he admits that while he was writing, he was trying to write songs that he felt would be radio-friendly, rather than writing from his emotions.

"I was chasing radio before, now I'm chasing me, finding out what I do best. Past records were a little more pop influenced. This album, I finally got to put together all traditional tunes."

The past couple of years have been fulfilling ones for McCoy. Spending a great deal of time in Nashville recording Honky Tonk Sonatas, McCoy also squeezed in enough time to marry his longtime sweetheart Terrine, who he's known for more than a dozen years. McCoy admits that the settling effect of his new marriage added to his peace of mind in recording the new album.

"On this album I relaxed a little more. All the 11 songs made sense to the album. It was nice to go around and find songs I liked. I just had some tunes I'd known of around Nashville, then went and fought for them."

After finding and choosing the songs he wanted to record, the actual recording process was actually a rapid-fire process. McCoy says the final recording began in April, and was completed by the end of the month. Since then, it's been the usual hectic schedule of video shoots, single releases, and press and promotional touring. He also worked in several gigs into the schedule, including the Calgary Stampede and a number of dates in Northern Ontario.

McCoy notes that an actual tour in support of the album may not work out, due to the timing of the release. But he's still more than happy to perform whenever and wherever he gets the opportunity.

"It's been three years since the last record, and we've been doing so many dates in that time, we've just been making money playing dates. The problem is, we did some festivals last year, but with the album coming out now, we're gonna be poised for the festival circuit next year. So right now we're really just doing secondary stuff."

As with most Canadian country artists, both McCoy and his label are hopeful that this may finally be the record that turns the tide for him south of the border. Again, McCoy is not afraid to admit that his first two records didn't make much of a dent in the US, with Universal Canada unable to secure a distribution agreement with a US label.

Thus, with this new album, McCoy chose to record songs that made sense to him, and might make sense to more traditional country programmers. This more mature sound could be the key to getting that all elusive US recognition.

"We tried to release it down there. We shopped it out to the Universal labels and had some bites from the major independents. But after that didn't work out, we thought we should do another record. My sound is maturing a lot more, not only vocally but the whole package. So we thought we'd hold off, give it another shot, and then work that one. I just want a record out down there so I can work the market, because what I do best is perform. So if I can just get into the market and play, I think that'll be where I'll win, as opposed to just falling out of it. But I know the way it works."

Honky Tonk Sonatas features only a couple of songs actually written or co-written by McCoy, including the country shuffle Ten Million Teardrops (with Tim Taylor), the ballad Fix Anything (with Denny Carr), and The Band-esque Broke Down (with co-producer Odie Blackmon). But the remaining eight tracks were written by a stream of Nashville writers, including Jim Lauderdale, Buddy & Julie Miller, Sean Michaels, James Hardie McGehee, Frank Dycus, and several others.

Again, McCoy was concerned that with his first two records, written largely by him, he was trying too hard to sound like other artists, and trying too hard to fit into the parameters of the then-popular new country sound. At this point, he realizes that what's more important is to record the songs that make sense to him, and songs that are more in keeping with his more traditional country roots.

"Everything I ever released before was all me, and I did pretty well with it. But I was always chasing success, as opposed to doing what I do best. I was drawing on my own influences and creating my own thing, but I always wanted to have success at radio. Now, I'm not saying I don't want to have success at radio this time, but with this record, I was given the chance to go in and cut 11 tunes, whether I wrote them or not, and they were the tunes I sang the best so I came up with these songs.

"I have all these tunes that I could have cut on the last record, but they just didn't fit, because the last record was more pop-oriented. I love a lot of the poppier stuff I wrote – I love Dixieland, I'm proud of that and proud of that whole record. But this album is more traditional – that's where I come from, that's what I do best. But, that's not to say the next record won't be more pop. It's just that, at that time, this is what I recorded, this is what I felt."

Like others in the country business, McCoy is dubious of those who argue that the problem with the new country sound was that it was too close to pop.

Looking back over the years, he argues, and looking back at the hits of artists like Kenny Rogers and Dolly Parton, one can see that those songs were as successful on the pop charts as they were on the country charts. It was music he enjoyed himself, but he still leans more towards the more traditional artists.

"I don't know if you remember when country music went through this pop thing in the seventies – the stuff Dolly Parton was doing, Crystal Gayle at the time. People now talk about Eddie Rabbit as being a great country guy – when I was growing up, Eddie Rabbit was a pop guy on the radio. So I grow up with that in mind, but I grew to love it. But at the same time, I still loved Ernest Tubbs and Merle Haggard."

One of the better experiences McCoy had in recording the album was working with hot country star Gary Allan on the obvious future single, Doin' Time In Bakersfield.

McCoy says he met Allan via his co-writer/producer Blackmon, and the two immediately hit it off. Naturally, when McCoy began picking and choosing tracks for his new record, the thought of recording with Allan came up.

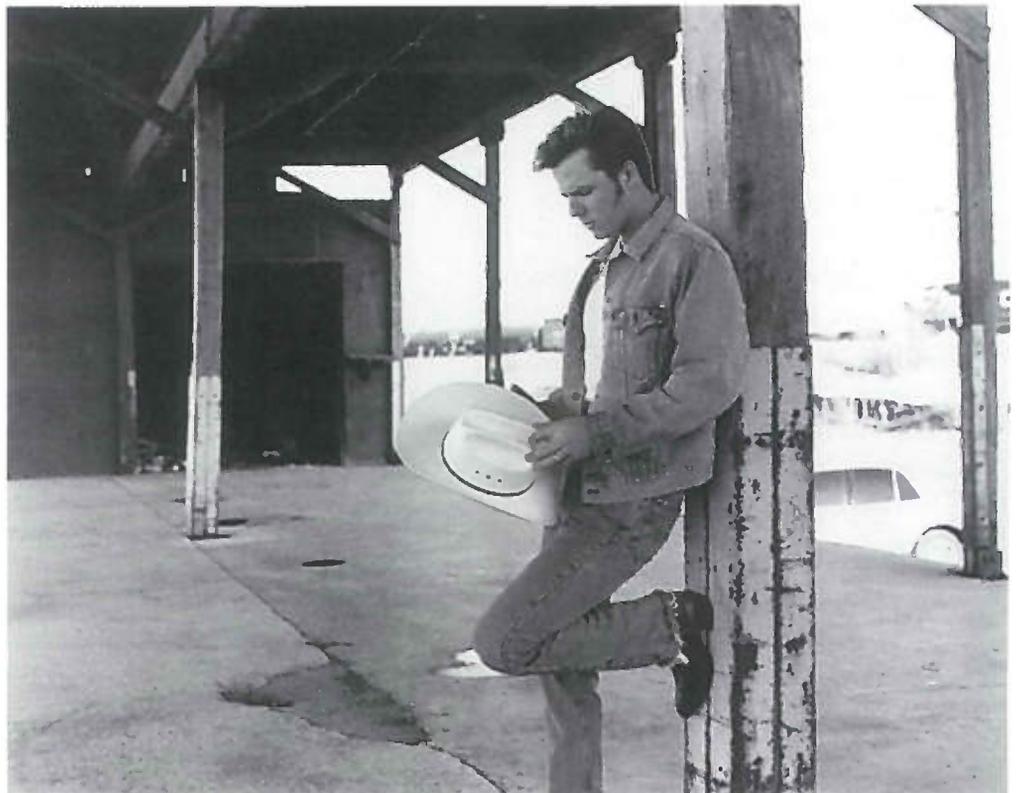

"I was introduced to Gary, and Gary and I wound up talking about our influences. And when we were in town, we'd always go out and do something, and I went out on a couple of gigs with Gary and played guitar with his band. And Gary at one time talked about doing this song Bakersfield, and I did too. So I asked Odie if Gary and I could do a duet, and it wound up being pretty cool."

The timing for the release of Honky Tonk Sonatas couldn't have been better, what with the industry heading into its most consumer-friendly period, and radio hopeful for another Cancon hit.

The lead single from the new record, Kind Of Like It's Love, has already raced up to #4 on the RPM Country 100 chart, after 11 weeks at radio, which is a good omen for the future success of the album in its entirety.

McCoy has no doubts about Honky Tonk Sonatas being his best work, mainly because it came from the heart.

"I think Honky Tonk Sonatas is the first time I sat down to do what I do best. Before, I was just running with it, with whatever had a cool rhyme, a cool melody, whatever. Now, I don't know if this is gonna be a big album, small album, whatever, but it's the best I've done."

*Veteran country band releases Best Of compilationPrairie Oyster: gathering up a String Of Pearls

by Ron Rogers

After 15 years in the business, Keith Glass finally seems to have it all in perspective. Through the heydays of the whole new country phenomenon, up until today, with country struggling to find its audience, Prairie Oyster has just kept on truckin', putting out a string of solid, traditional country albums, carving out their niche, and touring whenever and wherever they could.

The latest chapter in the Oyster saga is their current release, String Of Pearls, a greatest hits compilation made up of some of the finest cuts from their decade-and-a-half long history. The new release, as is the case with most Best Of packages, marks something of a turning point in the band's career. Glass readily admits that, at this point, the group is unsure what happens next.

As is often the case, the Oysters planned "a ton" during 1999, according to Glass, mainly because the group had played about everywhere they could play in Canada, and "there wasn't really a market for us in the states at the time."

That elusive US market may be opening up somewhat, however, with the String Of Pearls release. The album has quietly slipped into the top 30 on the US-based Americana charts, and the first single from the album, a re-recorded version of their former hit Man On The Moon, reached the top of the Americana hits chart.

The Americana charts are likely something of a mystery to folks north of the border, but the format is starting to receive some serious recognition in the states, and it's just the kind of radio format that's tailor-made for the Oyster sound.

"It's a new radio format that seems to be almost like a backlash against mainstream country," notes

Glass. "There aren't a lot of them, but they're spreading out throughout the country like crazy, and I wish they'd come here. They're playing stuff like us, or Robert Earl King Jr., or Emmylou Harris, Daniel Lanois, Los Lobos – anything that's not mainstream country that has a country appeal, real rootsy stuff."

Glass doesn't pull many punches when it comes to talking about country radio, and the effect that the 'new country' movement had on the genre as a whole.

As far as he's concerned, the reason country is in the sour state it is today is because of the 'new country' sound. The new audience that picked up on the sound quickly tired of it, and the traditional country listeners were soon turned off. When the dust settled, the core audience for country had evaporated, and artists like the Oysters suffered because of it.

Glass is, needless to say, somewhat bitter about how the whole thing transpired, and distressed as to why no one recognized the frailty of the trend, and the consequences of it suddenly disappearing.

"Why didn't anybody foresee that, when the entire thrust of the thing was to slash and slag the real country music, the traditional country artists, and just completely stop playing them cold? One day you're listening to an old Merle Haggard track, the next day the policy is 'nothing recorded before last Tuesday'. But they didn't win the new young audience they were hoping to get, and they totally pissed off a loyal generation of fans.

"I think it hurt everybody, because as I said, it just destroyed the whole scene. Many stations just switched formats, because they lost the new listenership. So they went from being country, to new country, to being an oldies, gold format, because that's safe, and you don't piss anyone off."

Again, as a veteran of the business with a ton of perspective, Glass also realized the bad karma attached to the idea of a greatest hits package. Traditionally, the Best Of package can often mean the end of a contract, or the end of a band altogether.

But that wasn't entirely the case in this situation. Glass notes that the group as a whole felt the time was right for a Greatest Hits package, particularly after looking back through their recorded history.

"We weren't sure what we were gonna do with our next recording project, and the record company felt it was time to do one. And it did feel like the right time and the right place. I know there's all kinds of stigma attached to that, but that's not the scene here. To be honest, I don't know where we go from here either. It is a bit of a jigsaw puzzle out there, there's a lot of question marks as to where the music's going."

When it came to deciding which of the group's songs should be included, each band member submitted their own list, with the entire band coming up with 20-25 songs.

But then came a more rational approach – why not consult the fans, and let them pick the tracks?

"Through the fan club, we polled all the members for their favourites, and the 15 they came up with wound up essentially being the song list. It hadn't even occurred to us to do that, and it sort of got done on the side through the fan club, and when we all looked at the list we thought, 'yeah, this makes perfect sense'."

Although the Man In The Moon re-recording has done nicely on the US-based Americana charts, the song has, not surprisingly, made little noise here in Canada.

Glass says he and his bandmates have gotten used to the difficulties with radio. They occasionally tried to record something that would make the music more attractive to programmers, but eventually, they gave up, and stuck to their own sound. As Glass puts it, they just didn't know what radio wanted.

"But you know, we've had this same thing for years. We'd release a song like One Way Track – 'well it's too long'. Or Canadian Sunrise – a number of stations wanted the guitar solo taken out, because it was too rocky. And meanwhile, the next three songs you hear are a Garth song, with some horrible, seventies-sounding guitar, or a Shania song with the same. So it was okay for them, but it wasn't okay for Prairie Oyster. You just throw up your hands and say 'fuck 'em.'"

And if it wasn't the difficulties with radio, then it was difficulties with the record companies.

The Oysters tried for years to get some sort of action happening with their records in the US, but inevitably, something would happen to mess things up. Quite often, the person who had initially shown faith in the band would immediately turn around and leave the label, leaving the group high and dry.

And then there were those programmers who wouldn't play the Oyster's music because of their name.

Having watched it all happen, though, Glass is content to contain his bitterness. Sure, he would have loved to have seen a couple of the Oyster albums sell millions south of the border. But the band maintained their integrity, and Glass sleeps a little better at night because of it.

"It doesn't really concern me. I mean sure, I'd rather be rich, but at least we're still doing what we do. It was suggested many times that we change the name, it was suggested we change our look, it was suggested we change our musical leaning a little bit – but we never did."

The decision to stick to those guns and not change their style may have cost the group a few zeros in the bank account, but it doesn't mean that Glass will be busking on street corners in the near future.

He does admit, however, that the amount of touring they do, and the size of the crew they require, does tend to keep their ambitions modest.

"And I mean that honestly, it is a modest living. I probably make half as much as the lowest paid employee on this record company."

While the future of the Oysters is undecided, Glass is hopeful that the group will move on soon and record a new album. And he himself is dabbling with a solo project, recording an album of his own material, which may involve the help of a couple of the Oysters.

There will also be more touring, of course, which the group never seems to tire of. Glass notes that the five weeks of touring the band did recently was some of the best work they've done. While there were a couple of fairly sparse crowds, the reception at the packed houses was exceptional. And in his own words, the Oysters are "stronger than ever."

"We've got dates throughout the summer, and right now we're working on American tour dates for the fall. Because, here we are, sitting on the edge of a number one single on Americana, so it's just a matter of reconnecting with some of our contacts down there, and getting something going."

Randy J. Martin caps busy summer

PEI's Randy J. Martin has kept up a hectic pace of jamborees, casinos, clubs and one-niter dates across western Canada over the summer months. Included were three dates at the Calgary Stampede.

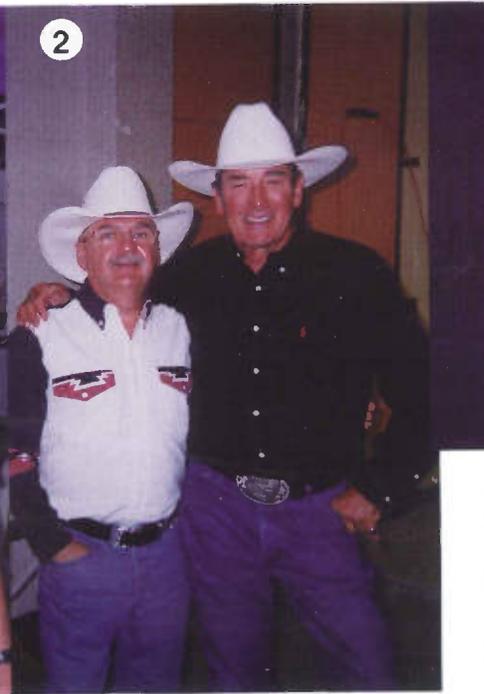

Martin took advantage of his tour to drop by more than 25 radio stations where he was afforded an open door welcome as he promoted his latest single, I Want My Forever Now, a short 2:48 track already receiving effective spins (see photos).

Martin also played the Backroads County Jamboree (Aug. 25-27) where he shared the billing with a number of other Cancon artists, including Julian Austin, Jamie Warren, Thomas Wade, Amanda Stott and Adam Gregory. He will also be at the Songwriter's Cafe for the CCMA's Canadian Country Music Week in Edmonton on Sept. 8 beginning at 5 pm.

The Ottawa Valley's (Bourget) Colin Amey, has parleyed his summer tour into a win-win situation for the release of his new single, What My Heart Don't Know, the title track of his upcoming Makin' Tracks CD. The album, to be distributed by The Song Corp, is scheduled for release in the fall.

The single moves up to #19 this week on the RPM Country 100 after only nine weeks.

During Amey's tour dates of Ontario, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and PEI he dropped by a number of radio stations promoting his new single (see photos).

Amey moved west Sept. 4 where he was scheduled to visit stations in the western provinces along with a stop in Edmonton for Canadian Country Music Week. He will also be taking part in the Songwriter's Cafe on Sept. 10.
