Our Surrey Nightingale.

On May 22nd this "light-winged Dryad of the trees" (or a near relative) broadcast to all England and beyond his midnight song from "some melodious plot" in the heart of a Surrey wood. It is hoped that he may be persuaded to perform again before the microphone one evening in June.

*Slept upon his bed,
All Spring he'd never heard
The Song of any bird—
Naught but the hunk and clatter of cars that whirled
For ever through his head.*

THE NIGHTINGALE IN HOSPITAL.

*And then he reached the 'phone . . .
And suddenly in his ear
A bird's note rich and clear
Out of the darkness welling, as by the weir.
Once more he stood alone.*

*As he had stood that night
Enraptured by the river,
Watching the moonlight shiver
On the dark stream, his boyish heart
aqualer
With the song of love's delight.*

WILFRID GIBSON.

What is a Scientific Mind?

By the Earl Russell.

THE informative lectures and educational talks which now form such a valuable feature of the programmes of the B.B.C. have stimulated an interest in scientific subjects in many thousands of listeners who did not formerly realize how interesting science could be.

I have endeavoured in the following lines to give some idea of the basis of all science.

Science is the knowledge of the material universe about us. That knowledge consists very largely, if not entirely, in the appreciation of differences, and that mind knows most which can appreciate the greatest number of differences.

Let me give an illustration or two. To a really colour-blind man the colours of the spectrum are all alike—he cannot separate them—but the ordinary man can and does appreciate the differences between them, and the painter appreciates still more clearly differences of colour and their values. The person who is tone deaf has very little appreciation of the differences between notes, whereas your great musician, who knows most about it, has an extraordinarily keen apprehension of these differences.

The Increase of Knowledge.

Ultimately, we have to depend for knowledge of the external world upon our five senses, and the increase of knowledge depends upon the realization of differences in weight, in colour, in texture, in hardness, or in action upon some other substance which is revealed either to our eye or our ear. The discovery of argon, for instance, was due to the fact that Lord Rayleigh noticed a difference in weight between nitrogens prepared from nitrates and nitrogen prepared from the air. The unscientific, careless, or indifferent person might not have noticed this.

A naturalist is one who can tell the difference between one moth or another; a geologist one who appreciates the differences in rocks; and so it will be found in every branch that the man who knows is the man to whom a series of facts does not seem vaguely alike, but sharply differentiated. The whole science and art of metallurgy consists of the study and use of the difference between various alloys so as to produce the best steel, the strongest aluminium alloy, the best gun-metal, or whatever it may be you are seeking for industrial purposes.

Reason and Experiment.

Fortunately, in physical science no special ability of the senses is required, as most of the things that have to be observed are such things as obvious changes of colour or quality, readings of a chemical balance, readings of various electrical or other instruments, or of lines of light upon a fluorescent screen, all of which are within the capacity of normal persons.

The pursuit of science requires, however, more than mere observation. To an observed fact reason must be applied, and a theory, even if only a provisional theory, must be constructed either to connect it with, or to differentiate it from, other observed facts, and when the theory has been constructed, it must be tested by experiment, that is by the production of facts to be observed. Even in astronomy, which might be regarded as in the nature of the case dependent on pure observation, such things as the laws of motion and of reflection are capable of being tested by experiment. The only other form of experiment available is the making of predictions, followed by observation as to whether they are verified.

Medicine, on the contrary, as we know it, is almost entirely the result of hit-and-miss experiments, or what in scientific language we call empirical.

In these days it is frequently urged that science should be the main item of education, and that time devoted to the classics, to history, or to humane letters is time wasted. I am not disposed to agree with this view, which would only be true if your object were to turn out the best artificer, the best technician, or the best scientific man, as a sort of Robot, without any regard to his human qualities and his human relations.

It has to be remembered that we are not composed of pure intellect, but that this intellect is encased in a human body which has human relations both with the family and with the world at large, and with the historical tradition behind it, and that the atrophy or starvation of this natural human part of a man will necessarily leave him less of a man, even if more a man of science.

The Teaching of Science.

It is true that Sociology is itself a science which may be more developed, and so, of course, is what we eat and drink a science; but over and above this there are the emotions and the feelings and the general moral content of a man which make up personality and which cannot be neglected with impunity. Moreover, although science answers the question "How?" in an increasing degree, it never answers the question "Why?" and so long as people have religious feelings of any kind, or speculations as to the future of themselves, or of the world, there will remain questions outside the realm of science to which they have to try and find some sort of working answer. It is in these matters that a general education helps.

Although this must be said and insisted upon, it is no argument against the teaching of science, but indeed an argument in its favour, for there is a scientific habit of thinking which can be cultivated, and which must be cultivated if thinking is to produce any adequate result.

Moreover, superstitions of one kind or another have done much to retard the progress of the human race, and science is the enemy of superstition, for it is generally able to show the superstition to have no foundation.

To take one of the simplest and most vital instances, there is the old superstition that mothers know best how to bring up their babies: the decrease in infant mortality coincides exactly with the overthrow of this superstition. There is the old superstition still existent among the poor that fresh air is harmful and that night air is poisonous: it is the destruction of this superstition that has enabled us to cure many consumptives who would otherwise have died. So strange are the workings of superstition that Franklin, a very pious man, was denounced for impiety by his contemporaries when he advocated the erection of lightning conductors, because he was held to be interfering with the wrath of God.

The Road to Freedom.

Temperaments vary and are somewhat unaccountable, and there are men of science who are not always controlled by the dictates of pure reason, but the true scientific mind is a well-balanced mind, accepting nothing without proof, and the greater its knowledge, the more ready it is to admit the limitations and the fallibility of human intellect.

I am, therefore, most strongly of opinion that the scientific mind should be cultivated from earliest youth, but I should like to emphasize that this is something totally different from merely acquiring a certain amount of science as book learning.

If this mind prevailed universally, we should have right thinking and clear thinking, instead of prejudice, and we might, in a generation or two, hope to find the civilized world free of disease, free of poverty, and free of war.

THE ALDERSHOT SEARCHLIGHT TATTOO.

TWO sections of the Aldershot Command Searchlight Tattoo, which takes place on Tuesday, June 15th, are to be broadcast, the first from 9.20 to 10.40 p.m., and the second from 11.22 to 11.40 p.m. Exact details of the programme will be given in our next issue, but for such an important transmission we are this week giving listeners a skeleton outline of the Tattoo which will be heard at 9.20 p.m.—Entry of Massed Bands; 9.30 p.m.—First Post and Bugle march; with band accompaniment; 9.36 p.m.—Massed Bands; 10.14 p.m.—Pyramid of Searchlights and lighting of words; 10.15 p.m.—Massed Drum and Pipe Bands; 10.23 p.m.—Massed Drive by First Brigade R.H.A.; 10.33 p.m.—Massed Trumpeters; 11.22 to 11.40.—Entry of Massed Bands and Trophy Bearers, Massed Bands will then play a march, Attila With Me, Last Post and God Save the King. The interval between 10.40 and 11.22 will be filled by items from the Studio.

Summer Dance Music.

THE only alteration in the arrangements to broadcast late dance music from the London Station during the summer months is that there will be none on Friday evenings. Dance music will, however, be given from Daventry every evening until midnight. Broadcast dance music has now become so much an institution in British social life that it may not be redundant to set out the full week's programme as it affects the London Station: Monday, Wednesday and Friday—no dance music; Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday—dance music until midnight. At present, dance music is relayed through the London and Daventry Stations from eight outside halls and restaurants and it is intended, with a possible increase of this number, to alternate regularly between one and the other.

Royal Air Force Pageant.

It is proposed to relay the band from the Royal Air Force Air Pageant at Hendon on Saturday afternoon, July 3rd. It is unlikely that any attempt will be made to repeat the experiment of last year, when instructions transmitted by wireless by the King to aeroplanes were spoilt, so far as broadcast listeners were concerned, by violent interference in the neighbourhood of the aerodrome.

"Hearts Adrift."

A new and original musical burlesque operetta, entitled Hearts Adrift, or Who Killed the Old Squire? will be broadcast from the London and Daventry Stations between 10 and 11 p.m. on Monday, June 14th. The burlesque is an old village-arena style of comedy, and takes the place of a broadcast version of Irma, which it was formerly intended should be transmitted that evening.

A Dominion Day Programme.

Dominion Day, July 1st, will be marked by a special programme which is being arranged for transmission from several British stations, including London and Daventry. It will portray in music and prose Canadian life from the days when the old settlers took their wives and families to the Red Man's country down to present times, when the vast prairies have become the most important corn-raising centres of the world.

Independence Day.

A contrast to the usual Sunday afternoon programme will be found in that for July 4th, which is Independence Day of America and, incidentally, the centenary of the deaths of John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, the second and third Presidents, respectively, of the United States.

A. J. Alan Again.

Mr. A. J. Alan, whose quaint ideas of telling stories are so popular with listeners, is paying a visit to the London Studio on Tuesday, June 29th, when he will unfold a new tale about "what happened on April 1st." This story promises to eclipse all his others for undisputed veracity.

The New Savoyards.

The staff of the B.B.C. will carry out their long-standing threat to provide a programme of their own on Saturday, June 26th. It is a long time since they gave their last entertainment to listeners, and they think that half an hour between 10 and 10.30 p.m. will be enough for the next occasion.

A Lady Organist.

The first broadcast organ recital by a lady organist will be heard by London listeners on Friday, June 18th, when Miss Marjorie Henton, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., organist and director of the Choir, Chelsea Congregational Church, will preside at the organ of the Church of St. Mary le Bow, Cheapside. Her programme will last from 12.30 to 1 p.m.

The Seven Seas Club.

No one can sing sea shanties better than members of the Seven Seas Club, who meet once a month in London at dinner, after which they exercise their lungs by singing nautical melodies exactly as they Blackie, Canon and Precentor of the Cathedral and Chaplain to the King, will give the address.

The Anniversary of Waterloo.

The anniversary of the Battle of Waterloo will be commemorated by the Birmingham Station on Friday, June 18th, by a special programme of music, beginning at 8 o'clock.

Chamber Music at Manchester.

An hour of Chamber Music by the Dan Hyden String Quartet will be broadcast from the Manchester Station on Sunday afternoon, June 13th. These talented young local musicians have already achieved success in the Manchester musical world, and on this occasion they will play movements from Glazounov's Slav Quartet and Grieg's Quartet in G Minor.

Hungarian Songs.

Mr. Herbert Hrynner, the popular baritone, will be heard at the Manchester Station on Monday, June 14th, in a recital of Hungarian songs, old and new. Mr. Hrynner's successful career was interrupted by the war, when he was wounded in the Somme battles in 1916 so seriously that he was in hospital for two and a half years.

Bach's Cantatas.

Bach's Church Cantata No. 34 will be given from the Newcastle Station on Sunday, June 13th, by the Station Orchestra and Station Choral Society. The vocalist will be Miss Rosa Burn, contralto. This cantata was composed in 1740. We have the statement of Carl Philipp Emanuel Bach, confirmed by Forkel, Bach's earliest biographer, that his father composed five cantatas for every Sunday and Festival of the ecclesiastical year. Complete music was sung at Leipzig annually on forty-three Sundays and sixteen week-days. Bach, therefore, must have written at least 285 cantatas.

Hans Andersen's "The Nightingale."

The Nightingale, an operetta in two acts, the libretto by Edith Veitch and the music by Norman Veitch, will be included in the programme from Newcastle on Wednesday, June 16th. The operetta is a version of Hans Andersen's Chinese tale, "The Nightingale." It may not be generally known that the greatest of all fairy-story writers was an actor, singer, and dancer during his youth, and that his ambition was to write a famous five-act tragedy.

A Cornish Programme.

All Cornishmen within range of the Cardiff Station will look forward to a special programme, which is being arranged in co-operation with the Bristol and District Cornish Association, to be broadcast on Saturday, June 19th, when members of the Association are paying a visit to Cardiff. During the evening they will contribute a number of items representative of their native county.

From Chester Cathedral.

The many listeners who expressed pleasure at the relayed service from Chester Cathedral on April 18th, particularly the old Cestrians in the London area, who were able to tune in to should be sung. Arrangements have been made to broadcast the singing by members of this Club when it meets at Anderson's Hotel, Fleet Street, on Friday, June 25th. The broadcast, which will be sent out from London and other stations, will last from 9.40 to 9.55 p.m.

National Union of School Orchestras.

Several thousand school children will take part in the Annual Festival of the National Union of School Orchestras at the Crystal Palace on Saturday, June 19th, when, between 8 and 6.30 p.m., a number of items in connection with the Festival are to be broadcast from London and other stations.

From Lincoln Cathedral.

The first service to be broadcast from Lincoln Cathedral will be transmitted between 8.10 and 8.55 p.m. from London and other stations on Sunday, June 20th, when the Venerable Archbishop

The Nine Types of Listeners.

By K. P. Boland.

NO two persons listening to music hear the same thing and receive the same impressions. These impressions are all subject to the listener's previous experience and knowledge, environment, heredity and personal qualifications. Speaking broadly, however, all listeners can be divided into nine classes, but these cannot be separated into watertight compartments. On the contrary, one merges into another, so that it is difficult to say to which type or types any particular listener belongs.

It is, however, the outstanding characteristic which gives its name to each of the following classes.

1. MELODY-LOVERS, or those who like a good tune. The harmony matters little to these people, since it is only the melody which reaches their ears. They like music which is old and familiar, such as folk tunes and national dances, and they dislike classical music because, as they say, "there's no tune in it." There is, of course, no shame in liking a good melody, and these people are in good company since some of the greatest composers have been melody-lovers. But the listener to whom melody is the only attraction is like the man who enjoys the plot of a story, but cares nothing for the manner of its telling, its choice of language or its technique and form.

A good melody, as understood by the untrained musician, is one whose rise and fall, intervals, cadences and progressions are familiar to the ear. Anything which departs from these accepted traditions is termed "modern" and ugly. This does not mean that the familiar and accepted melody is necessarily a bad one. The permutations and combinations of sounds in their infinite variety give ample scope for the composer's originality without making it necessary for him to depart from tradition.

2. LOVERS OF RHYTHM. These are the people who beat time with the foot when a strong rhythm is being played. They are usually fond of dancing. People of this type need not be highly developed musically, rhythm being one of our earliest instincts. Savages usually have a good sense of rhythm, though their melody sense is primitive. In a musical person, however, the rhythmic sense is always present.

3. THE SENTIMENTAL TYPE. Here the emotion of the music is of paramount importance. Such people escape from the monotony of possibly prosaic lives by entering into a world of romance and colour through the door of romantic literature, drama, cinema and music. They like songs better than instrumental music, and revel in "The Rose Tree" and "In a Monastery Garden." If these people become developed musically, they transfer their affections to such things as Wagner's more emotional dramas.

4. THE VIRTUOSO-LOVER. The lover of names and celebrities—who will go miles to hear a well-known musician, but will ignore really good music played by a lesser artist. These people swell the audiences in concert halls and their demands for encores are loud and long.

5. NON-HEARERS. These people are not deaf, but music seems to pass them by without making the slightest impression. It simply tickles their ears and provides a background for conversation, for meals in restaurants, reading and sewing and sometimes for their thoughts. Never do they concentrate on listening to the music. They can never tell what item has been played, but they honestly believe that they have enjoyed it. When asked if they like music, they say that they love it and beg their friends to play or sing. But immediately the music starts, they enter into conversation with their neighbours, or, if more polite, they lapse into thoughts of other matters until the music is finished, when they thank the performer profusely and, as they think, sincerely. Few who read this will admit, or even believe, that they belong to this type. Yet it is a very numerous class. Such people rarely improve, but go through life just touching the fringe of the art of music.

6. MUSIC-HATERS. That such people exist is amply testified in literature and by the victims themselves. To these people music is mere noise, formless, harsh, and meaningless. Dante, Gabriel Rossetti, Gautier, Balzac and Victor Hugo confessed to this dislike and, in our own day, among others, Lord Bickenhead. But given the desire, the patience and the opportunity, these people can be transformed into true music-lovers—in fact, in the art of listening they are a far more promising type than the "non-hearers."

7. LOVERS OF MODERN MUSIC—that is, for the sake of its modernity. Anything unusual, discordant, departing from tradition or striking out on a new path is admired by listeners of this type, and the old masters are despised for their clarity and simplicity.

8. THE INTELLECTUALS. These are the people who dissect music as a botanist does a flower, making a fetish of details of harmony, form and technique. These experts intellectualize music and squeeze it dry of the life and sap which is its reason for being.

9. THE COMPLETE MUSICIAN. This is a blend of types 1, 2, 3, 7 and 8. With a proper sense of proportion the complete musician delights in the interweaving of melodies, in the development of the theme, in subtle shades of harmony and tonal effects, in orchestral colouring, in the blending of instruments and voices, the niceties of form and emotional effects. These listeners have the true artistic temperament which need not take a creative form. Music, and all that it means, is a part of their lives woven into the very texture of their beings. Without it, this world would be to them a hard and stony road to travel, without a glimpse of the life-giving sun.

HANDEL AND GRIEG FOR CHILDREN.

WE are beginning at London, on June 11th, a series of concerts for children which will introduce us to two composers whose names are familiar to everybody—Handel and Grieg. George Frederick Handel was a German who came to England rather more than 200 years ago and made a great success by composing Italian operas especially for the British public. This may seem very strange, but in those days Italy was thought to be the real home of fine music, and everything that was labelled Italian was accepted as good. Opera was a new style of entertainment that was becoming very fashionable, and Handel, who had been in Italy and learned a good deal about Italian methods of composition, arrived in England just in time to make himself famous as an operatic composer. He wrote over forty operas, which were very popular in his time, but have been long forgotten; they contain some very charming solo items, or "arias." "Where'er You Walk," from the opera Berens, is a good example.

In his later years, after many troubles with operatic productions, Handel took to writing oratorios, or sacred cantatas for choir and solo voices. Handel is remembered chiefly for these works, which are still frequently performed, the "Messiah" being a particular favourite for Christmas and Easter.

Edward Grieg is the best known of several Scandinavian composers of modern times, and their music, which is largely based on the folk music of their northern countries, often seems to express something of the sadness and solitude of great pine forests and snow-covered heights which abound there.

Official News and Radio Gossip.

Manchester, will welcome a repetition on Sunday, June 13th, when the Bells and Evensong Service from that Cathedral will be again broadcast from the same station.

Liverpool's New Radio Play.

The first broadcast performance of Sal Mague, a new play by Oliphant Down, the author of The Heart of a Cluck, will be given from Liverpool on Wednesday, June 18th, by the Station Repertory Players. Mr. William Armstrong, producer at the Liverpool Playhouse, will take the part of a White Pierrot. During the same programme, the Station Octet will contribute a number of items.

Winners All at Stoke-on-Trent.

A programme, in which all the artists are winners of various classes at the Competitive Musical Festival organized by the North Staffordshire Royal Infirmary Governors last March, will be broadcast from the Stoke-on-Trent Station on Wednesday, June 18th. The adjudicators at the Festival were Sir Richard Terry, Mus. Doc., F.R.C.O., and Mr. A. Rawlinson Wood, Mus. Doc., F.R.C.O. The artists—there will be soprano, contralto, tenor, bass, soprano and contralto duet, solo violin and solo pianoforte—will include in their selection the best pieces they had to perform at the Festival.

"An Evening With Frederick Humphries."

The Civic Week programme at Stoke-on-Trent, entitled, "An Evening With Frederick Humphries," which had to be cancelled owing to transport difficulties in consequence of the General Strike, has now been arranged to take place on Wednesday, July 14th.

The Liverpool Bach Choir.

One of the most important events in the past musical season in Liverpool was the formation by Dr. J. E. Wallace of the Liverpool Bach Choir. This talented body of singers is to give a performance of Vaughan Williams's Mass in D Minor from the Liverpool Studio on Sunday, June 20th. Dr. Wallace will be heard in a pianoforte recital of works by modern composers from the Liverpool Studio on Wednesday, June 23rd, following which, the "Duds" Concert Party, who are very popular in Liverpool, will take charge of the programme.

Another holiday excursion talk in his series of "Delightful Days in Devon and Cornwall" will be broadcast from Plymouth by Mr. F. Johns, on Monday, June 14th. This talk will have an interesting contrast two days later, when Mr. H. J. Draper will tell listeners some of his impressions of Sweden.

The Canterbury Choir Festival.

Arrangements have been made to broadcast some of the music of the 30th Annual Festival of Parochial Choirs of the Canterbury Diocese and Choral Union, which takes place at Canterbury Cathedral at 5.30 p.m. on Wednesday, June 18th. The music will include psalms, canticles, hymns and anthems.

"THE RADIO SUPPLEMENT" CHANGES ITS NAME.

AS most of our readers are aware, the British Broadcasting Company, in its desire to extend its service to listeners, decided last year to produce a weekly journal dealing especially with the international aspects of Radio. While the title chosen for the new journal, "The Radio Supplement," seemed to express well enough the original scope of the journal—an addendum to The Radio Times—giving Dominion and Foreign programmes and news, it is now generally felt that the time has arrived when a change of title is desirable. With the issue of June 18th, therefore, "The Radio Supplement" will become "WORLD RADIO." It will continue to embrace in its interests broadcasting the world over, with the exception of this country, which is, of course, the special field of The Radio Times.

PEOPLE YOU WILL HEAR THIS WEEK.

Miss DOROTHY BENNETT (Soprano) will sing at Newcastle, Aberdeen and Glasgow during the week.

Miss EVA MOORE, the popular actress, will take part in "The Woman in Chains," to be broadcast from London on Thursday, June 10th (S.B. to other stations).

Miss MARJORIE SCOON, who is to sing at Cardiff on Monday, June 7th.

SOLOMON, the brilliant pianist, will broadcast from London on Monday, June 7th (S.B. to Coventry and Manchester).

DAME NELLIE MELBA, the world-famous prima donna, will be heard by London and other listeners during her farewell performance in "La Bohème" at Covent Garden on Tuesday, June 8th.

Mr. GORDON BRYAN (Pianist) will contribute the 7.25 p.m. Week's Musical Feature, when he will play works by Haydn.

Mr. HUBERT CARTER (Tenor) will sing at Manchester on Tuesday, June 8th.

Miss NORA DELMAR (Soprano) will be heard by Aberdeen listeners on Monday, June 7th.

Mrs. ANNA ELISCHER (Pianist) will play at Bournemouth on Sunday, June 6th.

Mr. GEORGE PIZLEY (Baritone) is to broadcast from Glasgow on Tuesday, June 8th.

Listeners' Letters.

The Rhythm of Bird Song.

Listeners are reminded that we do not consider anonymous letters for publication. Preference is given to letters which contain different and healthy. The Editorial address is 30 Mary Hill, Strand, London, W.C.C.

A LITTLE while ago, your musical critic, Mr. Percy Scholes, told us that Charles II. preferred the kind of music that he could beat time to with his cane: which means, I suppose, that he did not care for rhythmless compositions. I think the Merry Monarch was right, and that all music should have the quality of rhythm, and yet it must be allowed that the song of birds has little or no rhythm. I should be glad of enlightenment on this subject.—A. BARROUR, Kingsley Road, Kilburn, N.W.

[I don't agree that the song of birds is without rhythm. The calls of birds are mostly highly rhythmic little fragments. In the continuous song of such a bird as the lark we find a sort of wave-of-the-sea regularity of rise and fall that gives much the same kind of rhythmic effect as we get in plain-song. In discussing literature, we speak of "prose rhythm," as well as of metrical rhythms, and I should suppose that the rhythm of the song of nightingale or lark would come into the former category. Three books in this connection which would interest your correspondent are Garstang's "Songs of the Birds" (John Lane, about 3s. 6d.), Darwin's "The Expression of the Emotions in Man and Animals," and Herbert Spencer's volume of essays in the "Everyman" Library, particularly the one "On the Origin and Function of Music."—PERCY A. SCHOLES.]

The Champion Radio Village?

IN THIS village of ninety-six occupied houses and cottages there are fifty-six with wireless installation.—F. LUDINGTON, Newnham, Northants.

IN Lichborough, Northants, I was told recently on good authority that, with a population of about two hundred, there are forty licensee holders. This seems a very high average, if we reckon four people to a house.—E. L. GRILFORD, Station Director, Nottingham.

IN our issue of April 23rd it will be remembered that Mr. J. W. Robertson Scott gave particulars of Fifeeld, a little village in Oxfordshire, where sixteen houses out of forty-one are equipped with wireless. We invite our readers to send us news of other villages where listeners form a large element in the community.—EDITOR, The Radio Times.]

Words, Idle Words

AT this moment, I am listening to an opera being broadcast, but all I can hear is a woman screaming, and now and again a man does his best to equal the lady, but not a word of their cries can be understood.—R. J. W., Weymouth.

ONE of your correspondents recently complained that he could not hear the words as sung in opera when broadcast. I am myself a great lover of opera and can truthfully say that in some of the best performances I have witnessed upon the stage the singers were not more intelligible than they are when these operas are broadcast.—"TERRY ANDER," Coole, Yorks.

I KNOW what Mr. St. John Irvine said in his recent Talk on pronunciation. It is often impossible to distinguish what speakers and singers are saying in their broadcasts. Their style is what we in Lancashire call "murd," which is a Lancashire word meaning to talk like a spoiled child.—A. LANCASTER LISTENER.

Radio for the Deaf.

BEFORE having the wireless installed last summer I sometimes wondered if life was worth living. I am so deaf that I cannot join in any conversation unless spoken to direct. I have been obliged to give up all social functions, and have even shunned meeting neighbours on the road. Books were my one big comfort, but my eyes were giving way to the strain of reading. But now I can and do enjoy the best of music and lectures at my own fireside, thanks to wireless, the biggest boon the poor and handicapped could possibly have.—"A COUNTRY WOMAN," Aberdeenshire.

I DO not think enough stress is put on the importance of wireless to deaf persons. I feel so intensely what a boon it has been to my son, who has been very deaf for years. It is such a joy to him to listen—especially to lectures, public speeches, etc. Of course, it is splendid for the blind, too, but, after all, they are not nearly so cut off from intercourse with others as are deaf persons.—H. M. J., Walls.

An Appeal from North Wales.

AT last the B.B.C. has found out that there is such a place as North Wales on the map, for we have had two or three hours of a Welsh programme lately. Cardiff gets a Welsh programme very often, but we in North Wales cannot pick up Cardiff. Could not these programmes sometimes be relayed through Daventry? More than half the population of South Wales cannot understand Welsh, yet North Wales, where nine out of every ten speak the language, cannot get a Welsh programme.—W. J. JONES, Plas Pafyl, Llanllechid, near Bangor.

Some Memories of the Strike.

AS an example of the wild rumours circulated during the recent strike—and nipped in the bud by the B.B.C.—I should like to quote the one about the drivers of lorries who had been thrown into the Hyde Park "milk pool" and, in one case, drowned.—A. T. HUGHES, Elmwell, Hawkhurst, Kent.

A FEW days ago, an old lady in this neighbourhood asked a friend to fix her up a crystal set, which was done with a temporary indoor aerial and a water-pipe earth. The operator tuned in and said: "Here is 'ELO', just listen." For the first time in her life the old lady put on a pair of headphones and at once exclaimed: "The strike is over!" Surely, a dramatic first experience of broadcasting.—G. C. H. A., London, S.W.5.

ONE afternoon, at 1 p.m., I took up my 'phones in a mood of grim apprehension to listen for the latest strike news. The first thing I heard was a piano playing some simple, but emotional tune; it fell like balm upon my spirit, soothing and speaking peace; over the clangour and the strife it dropped like a heavenly benediction—a gracious prelude to stern business! In those majestic syllables spoken of old it seemed to say: "Let not your heart be troubled." What power has music to restore the sanity of the soul, to shake off the tyranny of fear, to enlarge vision and inspire hope!—GEORGE COULTER, Camera House, Belfast.

POINTS FROM LETTERS.

TO-NIGHT I have heard Professor Donald Tuvey speak and play. That bit of Bach is worth more than a year's licence to me. So I am content, and the "unka panka" of the dance bands can go on for another ten months without my writing to complain. Thank you!—OWEN WILLIAMS, Heathfield Rectory, Taunton.

IN a recent issue of The Radio Times it was stated that the Minnehaha Minstrels, of Manchester, is probably the only remaining minstrel troupe, either amateur or professional, in the country. I beg to state that the Hugh Oldham Lads' Club Minstrel Troupe has been in existence since 1922, and has given more than a score of entertainments for charitable objects.—J. H. RATHBON, The Hugh Oldham Lads' Club, Liversay Street, Manchester.

BRAHMS' FOURTH SYMPHONY.

(GLASGOW, SUNDAY.)

DURING the summers of 1884-5, when Brahms was writing this, the last of his four symphonies, he was reading the tragedies of Sophocles. Perhaps, therefore, these may have influenced his music a little. There is something austere in the Fourth Symphony, that has kinship with the models of Greek tragedy; but also there is (as always in Brahms) deeply felt, if restrained, emotion: something, too, we may not inaptly suppose, of the complexity of life and of man's questionings about it. The work is in the usual four Movements.

I.

The wide-stepping First Main Tune, heard at the beginning, is a good deal elaborated, and the music soon becomes more animated.

A subsidiary theme for Woodwind and Horns has that urgendo progress (the melody leaping from note to note of a chord) that was one of Brahms' distinguishing marks in tune-making.

From this and the First Main Tune a great deal of the Movement is built up, though a group of Second Tunes (instead of one Main Tune only) is also utilized. The opening melody of this group is easily recognizable—a smooth tune on 'Cello, and Horns, starting with an upward leap.

II.

This is a tender, lyrical Movement in reflective almost elegiac mood.

Four bars lead us to the First Main Tune, very softly played by the Clarinet.

Some ephephical matter derived from this brings us to the Second Main Tune, that flows gravely from the 'Cello. The opening melody reappears on the Strings, Woodwind decorating it, and with well-knit representations of its material the Movement dies away.

III.

Here is an atmosphere of rather bolsterous jollity, which the percussion instruments notably help to create.

The Movement is a Rondo, the Main Theme coming round several times, with other matter between the repetitions.

After the vigorous opening, on the Full Orchestra, comes a graceful contrasting tune (Strings starting and Wind continuing).

Transformations of these melodies (portions of which appear in different rhythms and in various parts of the Orchestra) keep the Movement bowling along.

A long passage for the Drums enters in the Coda, or tail-piece, in which we hear fragments of the opening melody.

IV.

This takes a form rare in symphonies—that of the Passacaglia, which was originally a dance with a fixed, recurring melody. Brahms takes the tune of eight notes that is heard at the beginning of the Movement, and, repeating it thirty-two times in varying positions in the harmony, weaves about it a magnificent web of sound and sense.

BEETHOVEN'S "FIDELIO" OVERTURE.

(BELFAST, TUESDAY.)

ONE of Beethoven's finest traits, his persistence in the endeavour to reach a goal that should completely satisfy his artistic conscience and fully express his ideas, is shown in his writing (over a period of nearly ten years) no fewer than four Overtures for his solitary Opera, Fidelio. Three of them are known by the name of the heroine, Leonora, and are numbered for identification purposes 1, 2, and 3. Only the last of the four is called by the Opera's title.

The Opera tells the story of an innocent man's wrongful imprisonment, and his ultimate release.

through the faithfulness of his wife, Leonora, who disguises herself as a lay (Fidelo) in order to be near him.

The Introduction has two themes, an opening lively one, and a contrasting slow, sad one (Horns, with Clarinets carrying on the strain). The quick section returns, and with another slow portion we come to the body of the Overture, which has a First Main Tune (Horns beginning, Clarinet continuing) built upon the opening phrases of the Introduction.

A gentler Second Main Tune (Strings) then appears, and both these subjects are developed very briefly, and duly recapitulated. Afterwards we have another slow section bringing in again the sad theme of the Introduction, and a triumphant coda, typifying the happy reunion of husband and wife at the end of the Opera.

SAINT-SAËNS' "PHAETON."

(CARLISLE, THURSDAY.)

The dashing youth Phaeton, having been permitted by his father the Sun to drive the fiery chariot, loses control of the horses. The car of flame is approaching the earth, and must set it on fire if nothing can intervene. At the last instant, Jupiter hurls a thunderbolt, saving the universe, but destroying the rash youth.

This is the story Saint-Saëns illustrates in his Symphonic Poem.

A dignified introduction of four bars prepares us for the magnificent scene of Phaeton's ride. The galloping horses are heard, and a bold, imperious theme on the Trumpets and Trombones presumes to stand for the youthful ardour of the charioteer.

A broadly melodious passage, played by four Horns, may suggest either the Sun, or the lament of Phaeton's sisters (who had harnessed the horses and so had a part in the disastrous adventure). The pace quickens and the excitement is worked up. Phaeton's theme is again heard, agitatedly, and then the thunderbolt falls, and the end comes with the Sun's lament for Phaeton.

SINIGAGLIA'S "PIEMONTESE DANCE."

(NEWCASTLE, FRIDAY.)

Leone Sinigaglia, one of the older contemporary Italian composers (he is nearly sixty), has long been interested in the folk-songs and dances of his native Piedmont, few of which have been collected.

He was a pupil of Dvorák, whose affection for the popular tunes of Bohemia probably aroused the pupil's early enthusiasm for those of Piedmont.

A few years ago, at a Symphony Concert in Turin, some rather snobbish fellow-countrymen publicly protested because he introduced some of these songs into his Piedmontese Dances.

(Another of his pieces, the Piedmontese Rhapsody for Violin and Orchestra, played at Birmingham on Tuesday, June 8th, may interestingly be compared with this Dance, because, although its method is somewhat similar, its melodies are only in the folk-style, not actual folk-songs, as are the tunes in the Dances.)

The First Piedmontese Dance is a piquant affair. It begins in an easily-flowing fashion, the Oboe having the First Main Tune, to a plucked String accompaniment.

Clarinet and Flute continue the melodic line. Before we come to the end of this section there is some dainty bantering about of little bits of tune by the Woodwind.

The speed increases, and we come to a middle section, in which a sprightly new Tune is played by the Strings and followed up by the Clarinet.

The gaiety is kept up, the Woodwind again disporting itself with great enjoyment, and then the First Main Tune comes back, this time newly decked out, on the Cellos.

[NOTE.—Descriptions of other pieces in this week's programmes have appeared in the Radio Times as follows: Choralini's Anacreon Overture (London, Monday), April 28th; Smetana's Vltava (Newcastle, Sunday), May 7th; Liszt's The Prelude (Belfast, Thursday), March 20th.]

Daventry Sees It Through.

A Tribute by Fred M. White, the Famous Novelist.

WHEN the tumult and the shouting of the captains shall have died away and we come to the contemplation of recent cataclysms in the cold light of reason, is it too much to say that, but for the powers that be at Savoy Hill, we should not to-day be pursuing our lawful vocations after the outbreak of the greatest strike in industrial history? It may be that the stupendous upheaval was doomed to failure from the very moment when, late on Monday, May 3rd, the Daventry Announcer told the British Isles that negotiations had broken down at the eleventh hour and that "chaos had come again." But with that side of the question this article has nothing to do. History will do it proper justice and hold the scale equally with both propagandists. I am only concerned with the part played in the Great Strike by Daventry and the B.B.C.

Just think of it! Within a few moments of the great disaster—for disaster it was, and is—at a moment when most telegraphic offices had closed down and the telephone was only partially available, a single voice speaking into a little black box somewhere in London indicated to something like ten millions of anxious listeners that industrial war had been declared. For that is what it came to.

One of the most sinister features of the situation was the almost complete paralysis of the Press. A country in the dark with no news of what was going on behind the veil! A Government that seemed powerless to communicate its orders to the blinded nation! It needs little imagination to visualize what panic and alarm might have arisen, what wild rumours leading to national hysteria.

But all the time there was the man in front of the little box standing there to "speak comfortably to Jerusalem"—an almost Jovian voice telling the King's subjects from Scilly to Shetland to take heart of grace, for all was well and none was going to suffer. And he, or rather they, of the little box told the story well, "nothing extenuating, nor setting down aught in malice."

Three and four times a day we millions outside the heart of things listened to the machinery running more and more smoothly as the black days went on, never, after the first shock, doubting what the ultimate issue would be. We heard everything we wanted to know. And we had it red hot from the foundry, so to speak, sometimes sooner than the man of the big city. And we knew that every word of it was true. The man in the small town knew, the man on the land knew, as did many a solitary watcher on his lighthouse tower. We knew that our food was safe, we knew that the police and special constables everywhere were holding the wilder spirits in a firm grip and that nearly half a million stalwart citizens were keeping the vital trade arteries clear.

And—perhaps the greatest service of all—the B.B.C. took red ramour by the throat and struggled it almost before its ugly head appeared above the surface. Amazing rumours were some of them, especially in the distant countryside. The Government, it was said, had closed the banks and martial law had been proclaimed. A whole township that I know of trembled for hours in the grip of this terror, but with the one o'clock bulletin from Daventry came relief.

To observant people reading between the lines, the amount of information contained in those bulletins was marvellous. In remote as well as contiguous districts they told of supplies on the way or already arrived, they told of industrial disorder nipped in the bud and order maintained even in centres of unrest and that with no sign of a military uniform in sight. And they must have relieved Government departments of endless work and worry. It is only, therefore, when history comes to be written that the blessings of wireless in time of national emergency will come to be fully recognised. It has become a new arm of the State—Navy, Army, Air Force and Wireless.

And, finally, the incredible swiftness of it! Let me give a case in point. On Wednesday morning, May 12th, at 1.10, I was listening to the second London bulletin from Daventry. Within five minutes, Downing Street had telephoned the good news to Savoy Hill and it was known all over the country. Some minutes later, I was listening to the lunch-time music at Frasnall's and minutes after that I heard the break off in the programme and a voice announce the Downing Street message, followed by cheers—and such hearty ones—for the Prime Minister. So here is the miracle—I, over 200 miles from London, actually knew the end of the Great Strike before it was common property in Oxford Street!

In conclusion, let everybody recognise the comfort and consolation that the B.B.C. has been to the community during those terrible days. We shall know, perhaps, how to thank them in time. As for me, I am grateful that I have lived to see the miracle of it.

How Londoners heard the news during the Great Strike, according to Low, the famous cartoonist of the London Star.

The Children's Corner.

Pussy on the Loud Speaker.

FROM Cardiff there comes the true story of a wise cat who listens to the Children's Hour and who can recognize the voice of Auntie June, her mistress, when she broadcasts to the children. Auntie June often went to the Studio to broadcast, but pussy did not know where she had gone and she just sat down and wondered in that quiet old way of hers. One day, when her mistress had gone out on one of these mysterious errands, pussy was delighted to find that she recognized the voice of her mistress coming from the loud speaker, which was usually switched on.

Pussy thought this over for a moment, and then decided that it demanded further investigation. Up she jumped up to the table where the loud speaker stood, and, after walking around, she decided that her mistress was certainly not hiding behind there. So she must be inside the horn, thought pussy, and she put her head in as far as it would go. Still pussy failed to find her mistress, and yet the voice was certainly there. The mysterious voice has puzzled pussy ever since, and she is still trying to solve the problem.

Whenever Auntie June broadcasts, up goes pussy into the loud speaker, and she stays there listening to every word until it is all over. There ought to be a moral to this story, but there isn't. But it has taught pussy that there is more in a loud speaker than meets the eye.

Aunt Molly's Troubles.

Poor Auntie Molly had a very trying experience in the Studio during the Edinburgh Children's Corner the other day. Uncle Dick and Uncle Jim had to go away to keep appointments which they had made, leaving her alone, just when two artists were due to arrive for auditions. The first to arrive was a Mr. Auchtermuchty, who claimed to be able to play reels and strathspeys on the piano, but who proved to be a very poor performer indeed. Auntie Molly kindly gave him two or three trials, and then, by the exercise of much tact, eventually managed to bow him out of the Studio.

Immediately afterwards, Mr. Catkins, a singer with (according to himself) a high reputation for singing Scottish songs, arrived and offered to give a rendering of "The Hundred Pipers," to his own accompaniment on the piano. Mr. Catkins, however, seemed hardly to be a pure-blooded Scot, to judge by his accent and the efforts which he made to pronounce some of the words in the song, and Auntie Molly had some difficulty in explaining to him that she did not think he would be suitable for an engagement. He was just leaving, feeling somewhat disappointed, when Mr. Auchtermuchty came back to say that he also was celebrated for his singing, whereupon he proceeded to perform "Duncan Gray" in the most mournful and wearisome style imaginable. Even when asked to sing faster, his efforts were still extremely painful—so much so that Auntie Molly was reduced to tears, whereupon the two candidates discreetly withdrew.

Auntie Molly herself then went away and the Uncles returned to hear a Lady Reader, who, unfortunately, had completely forgotten the words of her piece. She was bluntly informed that no engagement could be given to her for the Children's Corner, and departed weeping copiously.

This will give you some idea of the difficulties which beset the Uncles and Aunts in trying to discover new talent for the Children's Corner.

A Ride in a Blue 'Bus.

Few children have ever been in such a 'bus as some of the Aberdeen children rode in a week or two ago. This 'bus was painted bright blue with paint that would come off. And the more that it came off, the more there was to come off! So the children and the Auntie and Uncle and the bus were all blue together. They were quite happy, nevertheless, for the 'bus took them a splendid journey through some of the prettiest and most interesting places on famous Decside. And though the usual speed of the 'bus was about eighty-five, it very kindly slowed down whenever there was anything special to see. So that everyone enjoyed the journey tremendously. There's going to be another ride on Friday, June 11th.

Full Speed Ahead at Dundee!

Everything is going along right merrily in Dundee these days. The extra Aunties and Uncles are becoming more popular every day. On Monday, Auntie Adra's happy voice and rippling laughter help to keep up the real Radio Circle spirit; Tuesday finds the boys and girls listening eagerly to Uncle Hobble, describing how easy it is to make neat and useful little articles at home; Wednesday is Auntie Gertrude's day, when she delights all with her quaint little American stories and Negro songs. Thursday is kept apart for special Plays, etc., and on Friday, Uncle Focus is very busy "focusing" the attention of his little Camera friends. The programme on Saturday is always a sort of "Gala Day," when the members supply the entire entertainment themselves.

Dundee Motto is: "Full Speed Ahead!"

Gossip From Our Scottish Stations.

An Interchange of Pulpits.

EDINBURGH Station is to provide the first interchange of pulpits for broadcasting on Sunday, June 13th, when the address at the usual monthly evening service, relayed from St. Cuthbert's Parish Church, Edinburgh, will be given by an Episcopalian, the Rev. W. G. Elliot, who was for a number of years rector of St. James's Episcopal Church, Edinburgh, but is now located in Glasgow. This will be followed later by the service from St. Martin-in-the-Fields, London, when the sermon will be preached by the Rev. Alexander Martin, D.D., Principal of the New College, Edinburgh.

It is a coincidence that this interchange of pulpits between Presbyterian and Episcopal Churches on the same evening should be connected with broadcast services, but it is, nevertheless, a striking instance of the general spirit of unity which is tending to draw the various Churches together throughout the whole country. Perhaps the medium of wireless may lead to developments of a more permanent kind.

Composer of Ninety Operas.

The anniversary of the birth of the famous composer, Offenbach, in 1810, will be celebrated at the Glasgow Station on Monday, June 21st, by a short programme devoted to his works which will be broadcast between 10 and 11 p.m. The items will be given by the Station Orchestra and Miss Wynne Ajello, the popular soprano. Although he was actually a German Jew, Offenbach went to Paris in his youth, and over a period of twenty-five years wrote something like ninety operas, a truly remarkable output.

"The I.T.C."

A short comedy sketch, entitled The I.T.C., which has been written for broadcasting by Ralph Buckenridge, will be included in the programme to be given from the Glasgow Station on Monday, June 21st. Listeners may, or may not, be interested to know that on Tuesday, June 22nd, 1842, the income tax was first imposed, and the sketch deals with the sinister figure known to all possessors of an income of sufficient size to be taxable. A message from Glasgow states that the sketch should not be taken too seriously, and expresses the hope that it will not cause any of the citizens of Glasgow to refrain from disclosing the true state of their incomes!

Novelties at Aberdeen.

The main part of the Aberdeen programme on Monday, June 14th, will be devoted to a radio romance entitled The Wizard of Wireless, which will be presented by the London Radio Players, and two short song recitals by Mr. John Van Zyl (baritone). Later in the evening, something of a novelty is to be introduced into the programmes. At present we will content ourselves with saying that it is in the nature of a competition, with the title "A Musical Romance." On Saturday, June 19th, following the weekly Scottish programme, Aberdeen listeners will have an opportunity of hearing Miss Wynne Ajello in a vocal recital.

Callar Haezin'!

The Fishing News Bulletins broadcast last year from the Aberdeen Station were a beneficial to one of the most important industries in the North of Scotland that it has been decided to give them again during the coming summer. The first bulletin will be broadcast at 4 p.m. on Tuesday, June 15th, when the herring fishing begins. The bulletins are given with the co-operation of the Fishery Board for Scotland and were broadcast last year twice daily at 4 and 6.30 p.m. on four days, from Tuesday to Friday, when they consisted of reports from the various centres of the day's catch, quality, prices, and the area in which the herrings were caught, with a statement of the weather conditions.

GLASGOW NEWS.

ALMOST all the great musical composers have evidence of their own at a very early age. Mozart, for instance, wrote several pieces when he was five, and even attempted a symphony when he was ten. However, he was not a prodigy, as his father was a composer and he was very serious compositions, and before he was out of his teens he had written several operas and numerous vocal and orchestral works.

One of his earliest works is entitled "Don Giovanni" and was composed in 1781 when he was only 17 years old. It was the first of many operas and has been more or less glorified ever since because it has been followed by his greater works.

This opera will be broadcast from Glasgow on Thursday next, the first occasion of its performance. It is by Miss Mary Bennett (soprano), Mr. Herbert Thorpe (tenor) and Mr. Joseph Farrington (bass) will be the soloists.

LEEDS-BRADFORD NEWS

"The Rose of Auvergne."
 THE outstanding event in the programme from the Leeds Bradford Station on Wednesday will be the broadcast of Offenbach's one act comic opera The Rose of Auvergne which was first produced in 1865 and given on May 20th. The opera concerns the story of Pierre, a brilliant young man, who, through a series of misunderstandings, both of which are in the nature of a comedy, meets a young girl, Florette, the pretty landlady of a village cabaret, and their passion for each other produces a series of events. A boisterous dinner party at Florette's cabaret is brought to a happy conclusion partly by the aid of a new stew pan and a pair of dancing shoes. Florette will be played by Miss Bertha Armstrong. Appearances by Miss Albert Underwood and Pierre by Mr. Sam Hempsall. The music will be provided by the Station Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Cecil Moon.

The Police Court Mission Jubilee

An interesting outside broadcast will be given from this station Friday when the official celebrations in connection with the Jubilee Year of the Police Court Mission will be relayed from the Guildhall, York. Listeners will scarcely need to be reminded of the value of the work carried on by this Mission. The Jubilee Celebrations, which start at 11 a.m., will include a speech by the Archbishop of York, and the Home Secretary Sir William Joynson Hicks.

Exide

THE LONG LIFE BATTERY

formed part of the equipment of Amundsen's Airship "Norge I" during its conquest of the North Pole.

Exide Batteries were installed on the "Norge" because of their proved efficiency and absolute dependability.

For the same reason, the other two Polar ventures organised this year, viz., the Byrd and the Wilkins Expeditions are also Exide equipped.

Exide will give YOU the same dependable service.

Film them for your home cinema—it's as easy as taking a 'Kodak' snapshot

Your own moving pictures! Real films that you can show in your own home, as clear and flickerless as anything at the most up-to-date cinema. What a vista it opens up! What a delightful record of events!

With the Ciné Kodak you can make your own films as easily as you can make a snapshot. It is hand-held, fixed focus, spring-motor driven—you simply press a release and it works automatically. And it's so light and compact that you can carry it about with you like an ordinary 'Kodak.'

You send the reel of film to Kodak Limited—either direct or through your dealer—and it is developed and returned to you ready to be shown on the screen. No extra charge is made for developing. In addition to showing pictures of your own making, you can hire pictures from the Kodashope Lending Library—pictures showing all the favourites—Tom Mix, Valentino, Norma Talmadge, etc. . . . Doesn't that sound like a jolly thing to bring into your home?

That was no mood in which to re-connect his H.T. battery and accumulator, but he did the job, and then switched on. His four valves brightened, flashed—and went out. What had William done? He had connected his H.T. leads to his L.T. terminals and burnt his valves out Moral:—The next day William bought a Dobrescon.

THE AUDIO TRANSFORMER

Are you building? Do you want more power without choking the purity of those smooth, level tones? The Brandes 1st stage Transformer has a high voltage amplification ratio of 1.5. This, together with a straight line amplification curve, means that the amplification is constant over a wide band of frequencies, thus eliminating resonance. The 1-3 Transformer amplifies over speech, pianoforte and harmonic ranges equally well. Mechanically protected and shielded against interaction. Terminals and outside soldering tags.

Have you alternating current electric light in your home?

If so, write to us to-day and order a Fellow's Accumulator Charger. You simply plug it into any lamp-socket, give a volt or two and you have your accumulator recharged and leave it until it is good.

This charger will save its own cost in a few weeks. In fact, you need only have one accumulator because it can be recharged when not in use.

Secondly, you will be saved all journeys to the charging station and you will always have a fully-charged battery at hand. Plus, the charging cost is extremely low, working out at about 1d. for 16 hours charging at 2 to 3 amps.

This charger is perfectly safe; it avoids all mess, it is entirely automatic and has no expensive parts to renew. It is designed to charge 4 or 6 volt L.I. accumulators, but 2 volt L.I. accumulators can be charged if two are connected in series to be recharged delivering 4 volts. Sent packing free, carriage forward on SEVEN DAYS APPROVAL against cash. It can also be obtained on the C.O.D. system.

If you have Electric Light

you should send to-day for a Fellophone High Tension Unit. It is a safe and perfect simple device which will fit in any amp holder readily as you would a regular bulb. It is the most efficient and the High Tension Battery is in the middle of your set, you switch on and do not exhaust the supply of High Tension current as at your service. The current consumed is less than that of the smallest lamp in your house, and these units are as safe as a High Tension Battery.

If you are at present using a High Tension Battery of approximately 100 volts, order a 40-volt H.T. Unit. If your H.T. Battery is 60 to 100 volts send for a 100-volt H.T. Unit.

If you have Alternating Current please state the Voltage and Frequency you wish to use (insert in form, but never at 100 volts or 100 cycles per second). If you have Direct Current please state the voltage.

Remember that these Units are guaranteed to give Perfect Silent reception (provided that the correct type is ordered) and that you can have them on "SEVEN DAYS" APPROVAL, packing free, carriage forward against cash. You can also obtain them on the C.O.D. system.

They are fully described in our new 48-pp. Free Catalogue No. 70. Have it sent to you free.

The leading wireless journals of to-day have endorsed in the strongest of terms the claims of Six-Sixty Valves—in fact, our sample statements are modest compared with the exceptionally good results obtained.

For the radio enthusiast who uses a small or medium-sized Loud Speaker, we can confidently recommend the S.S.2 L.F. (green disc). For real purity of tone this valve is second to none, and in addition to its low current consumption—only .3 amps.—it works at such a low temperature that the life of the valve is immeasurably increased.

Then there's the S.S.7—a real Power Valve, combining a wonderful purity of tone with unequalled volume, and consuming only .1 amps. filament current. With this valve there is absolutely no glow whatever from the filament when operating at the correct voltage, indeed there is no valve that can boast of a longer life because there is no valve that operates at a lower temperature.

Louden Valves

"My Louden gave at least 30% greater volume, and I was able to make a big reduction in the H.T. supply a welcome economy."

There must be some very good reason why, week after week, delighted users of Louden Valves sit down and write us these spontaneous letters of appreciation. If you inspected these letters at our offices, which you can do at any time, you would be struck by one fact which is apparent in nearly every one of them, and that is the delight and surprise of the writers at finding Louden Valves not only better than they had expected them to be, but even better than any other valves they had tried. When they find that Loudens, besides giving them greater volume, clarity and current economy, actually cost, as the result of our direct through-the-post policy, one third to one half the price of other valves, it is then that they feel they must write us a letter like the one shown below, which comes to us from Clepton.

"The FER Dull Emitters purchased from you in July last is working splendidly. I must admit I was a bit sceptical about its being better than the valve then in use, which was a bright valve of very well known make. To my surprise, however, it gave at least 50% greater volume, and I was able to make a big reduction in the H.T. Supply also, a further welcome economy. You can rest assured therefore that it will be 'Louden's' every time in future for—Yours faithfully, HARRY S. ASHROFT."

There is a Louden Valve for your every need: Bright Emitters, Dull Emitters, Detectors, Power Valves.

You will find them fully described in our new 48 page illustrated Catalogue No. 80, which we will gladly send free on request.

We give below prices and voltages of the various types.

Remember that Louden Valves are British in material, are backed by British capital and are made throughout in London by British Labour.

All you have to do is to send us a Postal Order for you can, of course, order by the C.O.D. System, for the valves required and they will be posted to you fully guaranteed in sealed cartons.

Another man who had never known really good Broadcasting

"NOW that's what I call a good Set" exclaimed Simpson enthusiastically, after he had heard Chopin's beautiful Mazurka in A Minor. "And yet"—here a note of doubt crept into his voice, "it seems very much like the Set you were using before Christmas." "It is the same Set," I conceded, "but with different valves. You'll remember Clarke who was with our crowd in Mesopot?" "Yes, rather, good old Nobby!" "Well, I dropped across him in the City the other day, and as he mentioned that he now had a job with a wireless firm, I asked him to come over and look at my Set. He said the Set was fine but that I was using the wrong valves."

"But I thought all valves were very much alike," cut in Simpson. "And so did I until Clarke enlightened me," I replied. "First of all he gave me an explanation as to how my Set worked. He showed me how the first valve had to act as a high frequency amplifier, the second as a detector, whilst the third valve, he explained, was responsible for obtaining good volume and pure tone from the Loud Speaker. And then he proved to me why these three different jobs required three different types of valve. He had brought with him three Cossor Wuncell Dull Emitters. Taking out the first two valves from my Set and inserting in their places a Wuncell W₂ and a W₁, he asked me to compare the difference. It was startling. But the most amazing thing was still to come. He substituted a Cossor W₃ for the third valve, increased the H.T. voltage, and literally the Loud Speaker leapt into life. I remember a piece called "In a Monastery garden" was being broadcast at the time."

"Oh, Yes, I know it," interrupted Simpson, "it has lots of little trills among the high notes to imitate the birds in the garden." "That's the piece," said I, going on with my story, "the moment he put in that third valve I realised that I had never really known how good Broadcasting could be. All the time I had been blaming the makers of my Set when it was the valves which had been at fault."

"There certainly is a tremendous difference," admitted Simpson, "turn the Set round and let's have a look at these remarkable valves." I did so. "Why," he cried in amazement, "you can't see any glow from them!" "No," I answered, "that is another advantage. They consume so little current and work at so low a temperature that Clarke swears that they will last longer than any other valve on the market. He says that the filament which the Cossor people use is quite different—being made of wire having a very thick coating of some special substance which produces lots of electrons at a very low temperature."

"That must be an advantage," suggested Simpson, "for the extra coating must make the filament stronger and thicker." "Yes," I agreed, "even when one rolled off the table last night it came to no harm. Quite frankly I'm very much indebted to Nobby Clarke for the good advice he gave me." "You can include me in that," said Simpson with a smile, "for it is a long time since I spent such an enjoyable evening."
