CLIFF ADAM BILLY

HELEN JOE * BRENDA

A S we near the end of 1962 here's a toast from DISC on behalf of Britain's musical stars for making this the greatest year yet in pop music.

You've set new records, created new stars and lent support to those who have found international stardom this year. You've made it a great year for pop films too.

So at DISC we raise our glasses to you all and wish you the warmest of greetings this Christmas. And here's looking forward to a New Year that holds even greater promise.

On behalf of Cliff, Elvis, Billy, Adam, Helen and everyone else here's wishing you A HAPPY CHRISTMAS.

NOW that the record companies have increased their prices, perhaps they will give a little more consideration to the buyers.

There are two things they should keep in mind. First, it is the public who buy the discs, NOT the DJs, so how about making discs a little longer?

I am talking of the fabulous shows he sends on tour, I find that every package I have really enjoyed has been presented by Larry, and surely one of the reasons for this must be his policy of presenting at least four one big one and a few small ones. For instance, the sieeve could have pointed out that "Skinny Jim/Half Loved" were commercial recordines done at the beginning of Eddie's career, and that Eddie played piano on the first title.

"Anyway, towards the end of the year Jean was expecting their first child and it was decided that she should have it at a cottage hospital near Pensford.

"Acker was working at the time and he probably couldn't have afforded the fare down anyway. Almost on Christmas I dug my way through the snow to the hospital to see how Jean was feeling.

"It seems that everybody in the ward thought I was the husband and had deserted poor old Jean—you should have seen the looks they gave me. A fellow whose wife was in the bed next to Jean's gave me a lift back, but he wouldn't speak to me for half the journey!

Now, of course, the picture is a different one. Acker's children are sure of a bumper Christmas, and despite the stardom he's shot to, the clarinet king devotes a lot of time to his family.

With the Christmas incident of four years ago now fully understood. Acker is regarded in his

FOSTERS AGENCY . PICCADILLY HOUSE . LONDON . W.1

HELEN: SHE'S FULL OF HER NEW HO

Big party plans

HELEN SHAPIRO just can't wait to move into the new home which she has bought in Hendon, North London. When I spoke to her earlier this week she was full of her plans to decorate it, and as far as I can gather she would like to tear it apart and re-design it to her own tastes!

"But don't expect too much." sa'd Helen. "Remember, I haven't had too much opportunity to develop any ideas interior decorating. But it's found working things out, and there's plenty of scope."

The house has four bedrooms and is 35 years old. Moving date is expected to be found about Easter. In the meantime Helen and her family are still-living in a council flat in Hackney.

KNOCKING DOWN

"At the moment, the builders are in the house," said Helen, "They're knocking down walls and putting in a new door and porch. In fact, it's all in a horrible mess!

horrible mess!
"The colour outside is ghastly.
A kind of red brick effect. However, we're getting rid of all that, although we haven't decided what the new colour will be.
"The house has a big hall, dining room and a lounge which leads out on to a patio and a huge garden.

HELEN - She should be moving in around Easter.

"This is something I really appreciate, and in the summer I plan to throw hig barbecues, weather permitting, with coloured lights all round the house and garden.

"I'm having a stereogram specially built for me. I'm going to have speakers in every room and then if I do throw any parties, in the garden or anywhere else, there won't be any lack of sound.

"I'm leaving most of the decorating to my mother, but I've got all sorts of plans for my own room.

FITTED CUPBOARDS

"First of all, I'm having fitted cupboards put in all along one wall. I need these for all my clothes. In the flat my bedroom looks exactly like a junkshop because there isn't enough room to get everything in.
"Then I'll probably have brackets built to take my colection of stuffed animals given my by fans. For the moment, these are just put down anywhere and left to gather dust.
"What I'd love to have, if I've got from, is either an upright piano or a baby grand. If I can't get this into my own room, we'll put it somrwhere else. In any event, we'll be having a piano in the lounge.

"And I must get a desk for all my papers,"
I suggested that maybe Helen would be better off keeping her bedroom feminine and taking over another one and using it as a den.

"No." she said, "I don't need a study yet. Later, when I can turn my attention to writing songs and need somewhere for business a counte of hours a day. I may do this, but for the moment I find it unnecessary.

A GOOD OLD BED

"What I might do. though, would be to get a kind of put-up instead of a bed. Depending if I can find one that's out of the ordinary. If not, then there's nothing quite like a good old fashioned bed for a night's sleep!

"I've decided on a colour scheme for my bedroom. It sounds messy I know, but I'm having a very pale green velvet paper and peach paint.

"I didn't like the combination either until I saw it, but actually the colours are great together."

The first thing Helen wants to do when she and the family finally move in is make friends with her neighbours.

"I'll also at last have somewhere to entertain my own friends," she told me. I've been to so many people's houses in the past that it'll be nice to invite them back to mine.

"But really I guess that top of my list is a big, big party. A sort of housewarming cum return shindig, because this 'is something I'll get a real-kick out of doing."

Happy Holidays to you all! Love

You see, Mark has no outward way of displaying his emotions. You never know whether he's happy or sad, because he always keeps the same cheerful front, but at the same time he always regards everything very seriously.

Probably the best mannered star Tve met so far (and, believe me, some of them could do with a little self respect). Mark has that wonderful talent of putting you at ease from the moment he's in the room.

The first time I ever met him was a good example of that. You may remember that when "Roses Are Red"

Mark was chosen, and on the day he came down to sign his contract I was standing at the back of a rather crowded room. As Mark made his way in he spotted me and came straight over to say, "You must be Cherry—I'm Mark."

From that moment on I was more than glad they'd plumped for Mr. Wynter.

As well as a wonderful voice, he really is relaxed when he sings. There are no fits and starts in his movements—everything is so natural. And you can't put Mark off balance.

When he eventually gets married I'm sure he will make a wonderful husband—he's so considerate. If anybody hurts himself in the smallest way on the set, he does all he can to help—and worries about it if he can't.

Two smash hits

Satisfaction is all that really counts

FOR Frank Ifield this has been a Golden Year, but all this success, as I discovered when I spoke to him recently, isn't measured by money in the bank. IN FACT THAT SIDE OF IT MATTERS LEAST OF ALL,

"The only important difference it's made," said Frank "is to give me a great deal of personal satisfaction. Money, never has, and I hope never will, mean much to me. Success is what I've been fighting for all along, but not for what it can buy. It has made a tremendous difference to me, though really counts.

Name 1 ve been against for an atong, but not what the can buy. It has made a tremendous difference to me, though not, I imagine, in quite the way some people expect."

Reluctantly at first, Frank explained to me exactly what stardom did mean, "I guess that basically I'm one of those guys who wants to be liked," he said.

"I'm sure everybody has this feeling to a certain extent, but to feel people. Loo, This is what success really means to me.

"When I know I'm making people happy... that's what really counts."

In cold type Frank's attitude might sound glib. I can assure you it's not. He is one of the

A Christmas message from Professor Brian Innes of The Temperance Seven.

Temperance Seven.

Will the approach of Christmas, we fondly recall the many ancient English seasonal party games which we feel should not be forgotten. It is our policy to revive one such game every Christmas for the benefit of young England and this year have selected a game known as "The Three Cocca Spoons," The rules are simple and to the poin, wager any sum with another happy soul that you will give him three cocca spoons to hide and will be able to tell him where he has deposited the last spoon. Give him each of the spoon separately and be agreeable that be allowed to hide them outside the room.

Having hidden the first spoon in secrecy, the sambling gentleman who has accepted your wager will return for the secont. Whilst he is depositing this put the remaining cocoa spoon into the fire—discretely removing it and handing it to him on his return.

Since the spoon will be somewhat heated, he will doubtless deposit it on the floor.

At this point, confront your opponent with the words: "There it is —you have deposited the last spoon on the floor. Sir, you have lost the wager!"

cially, as I hope I've tried to explain, they're not important. "Look at it this way." he con-tinued, "I'm making good money now, but then I've never had financial troubles.

"I've only got myself to look after and provided I've been able to afford one meal a day that's all that has really mattered. And you know, it hasn't been too tough all the time I've been over here.

"I've not been out of work anyway.

"Surrounding myself with ex-pensive possessions doesn't mean a thing to me. I still share the same flat with a friend and I like it there, so I don't see much point ia moving into somewhere more grand.

"About the only thing I have done with the money is to buy some really good stage suits and a nice guitar. I don't even think

says FRANK IFIEL

I've bought myself any clothes. I don't really need them."

Frank also revealed that, from his own point of view, "I Remember You" wasn't his most important dise.

"This is only a personal thing, of course, but in a way 'Lucky Devil' was my big break.

"It was only a small hit, "It was only a small hit, and the state of the course of th

"I Remember put an end to the pessimism."

But two smash hits have neces-sitated changes, Not in Frank, but in the way the public now visualises him.

Hotels now

He told me: "I'm now expected to stay in hotels rather than digs. This is all right, of course, but I'm not sure I didn't have more fun when I was in digs with my friends from the show.

"Now it wouldn't look too good if I left the stage door in pouring rain wearing a tatty old mack and foot-stogged it back to the boarding house.

"They wouldn't like it at all, but I can't honestly say it would make much difference to me. I have had to rough it enough previously and I didn't particularly mind then. But I do feel I have certain responsibilities now."

On stage Frank has changed.

On stage Frank has changed. From "also ran" spots, as he puts it, he's now become an extremely polished performer.

polished performer.
"But I still don't feel polished or confident," said Frank, "I don't really think I ever will.
"I'm sure that the only reason people think I'm not nervous is because there's a couple of spare inches in my trousers and you can't actually see my knees knocking.
"But there are least to the polished or the polished o

"But they do. I get really terrible nerves every time I appear before an audience. And the more success I attain the worse it seems to get.

Nervous on stage

"There are times, you know, when I'm so nervous that I come off stage and haven't a clue how I went down. So I'll ask some-hody and this can get you an unfortunate reputation...especially if you're told you took the roof off. They just think you want to hear them say how good you were. They find it hard to believe that you honestly don't know.

believe that you honestly don't know.
"Not that this automatically makes things easier. The fans still know exactly what they want.
"On stage appearances they are more ready to accept you, but far more critical if you make a mistake.
"I suppose I should have got used to this by now, but if just one person in the audience is disappointed by me, then I get terribly upset.
"Everybody tells me you can't please all the people all the time but you can have a darned good try!"

That's what Frank is out to do.
"I don't count myself a success
yet," he said. "A lot of people now know my name because of my two hit discs. That's wonderful. But there are still an awful lot of people who don't know me. When they ALL do then I'll say I'm a success."

CONNIE keeps to the up-tempo and you'll go twisting with her to keep warm this winter, all right. Double tracking on voice as orchestra lays down an infectious beat. A first-rate disc for parties around this time of the year—and early next year, too.

Miss Francis is in happy romantic voice as she hands this one out. Some good instrumental moments, too, will please the dancers.

"Pretty Little Baby" on the other side has a quieter but no less happier rhythm. Connie goes into the Latin field for this pleasant ballad, and there will be many individual sales for this half. In fact, with these contrasting dance rhythms the disc may become a double-header.

Follow, Follow: Canal Street Blues (Decca F 11560)*

POLLOW, FOLLOW is the theme song of supporters of the Glasgow Rangers soccer term. Here, it's played by Smith and bis Back o' Town Syncopators. . no lytic sung, but a happy trad baid down for those followers who aren't dejected by the deteat suffered at the feet of Tottenham Hotspur!

Produced by Denis Preston and Hotspur! Produced by Denis Preston and Pstude by Decca under the Ritz mark of Buony Lewis, it ought to sell well.

Canal Street Blues captures a good earthy feeling for the other side. But I think it wrong that Alex Allan, the bearded tuba player from Ayrshire, should get no credit on the label. he blows a fine fat wind on both halves.

Sol Raye

I'm Wonderin'; The Evergreen Tree (Oriole CB 1773)

TED TAYLOR directs the accompanients for SO Raye on this disc, which is why the organ punches so prominently through the ballad I'm Wonderin'. Raye sings this huskily and fluently for young lovers. On the turnover, The Evergreen Tree is a little more dramatic, with something of the western feeling in its treatment.

I don't know; the man has been the subject of too much controversy as to his real worth. Personally I like him immensely, in spite of the polished manner of his performance.

The singing of Sam Itall is incredible and I'm sure it's only this that let the blasphemy get past the censor, if there is one for artistic records?

MERRY OILDE SOUL (12in. Riverside RLP 366) ****.
These 1960 tracks, available again, the 1960 tracks, and the world's top modernists. As vibesman, pianist and composer four of the originals are his, including the wonderful "Lisa"), Vie swings incessarily on all the tracks and his solos are well constructed.

Expert support comes from Hank Jones, Sam Jones and Lou Hayes, Here's a British boy who has really made good. A well-above average LP.

CERRY MULLIGAN'S new LP for Columbia will be his first Go figes, with a conventional rhythm section (plaints Tommy Flanagan, Ben Tucker, Dave Bailey). The same label is working on its first release by Thelonious Monk's Quariet featuring Charlie Rouse on tenor.

Grant Green

GREEN STREET (12in, Blue Note BLP 4071)*-If you haven't heard guitarist Green yet, you're really missing something! For my money he's the best since the late Charlie Christian. Especially on blues and ballads.

This L.P has plenty of each, Grant is backed only by bassist Ben Tucker and drummer Dave Bailey. A beautifully relaxed L.P.

Very different from the usual Blue Note albums, But one of the label's most enjoyable, Recommended !

Les Spann

GEMINI (12in. Jazzland JLP 35)##—Spann splits his duties between flute and guitar. He is more effective, as a soloist, on the latter. The ensemble sounds he gets with French hornist Julius Watkins are unusual and interesting.

But the album as a whole is remarkably dull. Despite tasty Tommy Flanagan piano solos and a good rhythm section. The slower tempos are the most successful.

Eddie Harris

JAZZ FOR BREAKFAST AT TIFFANY'S (12in. Stateside SL 1000)* — The Chicago-based tenorist goes much "further out" than on his previous Leg getting away from his Stan Gett sound.

He makes the eleven mainly bitty Henry Maneini themes (except, of course, for "Moon River"—a great tune by any standards seem better than they are. Harris is going in an interesting direction, Good for late-night listening.

Ray Bryant

HOLLYWOOD JAZZ BEAT (12in, CBS BPG 6.289)
The much praised pianist enters the "pop jazz" field with an LP of 12 top movie themes. He plays well, if without much inspiration, on the tunes most suited to jazz treatments—i.e., those with interesting changes.

VINTAGE Elsis for his hordes of Ians, as RCA Victor sweep out their vaults and reigs some of Presley's earliest gold disc winners.

All of them, except "Old Shep" and "Any Place," have been out of circulation here since 1957, when the Victor catalogue switched from EMI to the Decca group. The resisvae is to catch the cars and coins of the younger set of Presley addicts who missed out on these the first line round. But I'll bet that most of the veteran Preslegites will buy these tunes again as well.

It's interesting to hear the Presley approach of that era. Signs of is coming predilection for ballads pure and simple were already apparent, although the belting incoherence of "Long Tall Sally" and

"Ready Tedd," was what originally started him off to stardom.

It's hardly all "Rock 'n' Roll" by any means, but it's a must for the Presley legions. Having listened to those again, I appreciate his present policy of song selection even more.

The RCA engineers have processed the original tapes to give them the depth and clarity of sound achieved by stereo recording, although, of course, the originals were done monaurally only.

Joe works, and wins a £50 bet

A BOUT the only pop music star in the business who A will be working on Christmas Day is IOE BROWN—"Im always lumbered"—but the day's efforts will bring, him in a bonus £50 as the result of a bet he had with his manager, George Cooper.
"I've been working so flippin' hard this year that I bet George he would have me grafting on Christmas Daytoo. He bet me £50 he wouldn't and I took him on. Now it seems that I'm in one of the very few pantonnimes in BrItain that runs on Christmas Day," Joe told me.

So next Tuesday he will report at Stockton Globe complete with Wishee Washee costumes for his part in "Aladdin"—and the following day he'll collect.

Off to U.S.

WITH the prospect of a lengthy pontamine season in Manchester. KiRl, DENVER is hoping hell be able to fig admerical for a week's horday at the cond of it. But Karl is lucky to be able to return to the U.S., for on a merich and seamon he skipped ship there a less years ago.

"Aktyped ship there is properly early ago."

"All sorts of strings were pulled to save me from being deported and I was evenually sent home ev a dwitter was though been the other way I should have been denied emig again," he told me. * * *

like a dream coming true.

Here would be the chance to meet the world's greatest popsar at his home in the fabulous Brentwood mansion, high up on the Hollywood hills. You'd expect champagne and rooms filled with glamorous people in show business.

YOU'D BE: IN FOR A SHOCK!

YOU'D BE IN FOR A SHOCK Elvis never throws parties in the traditional Holly wood fashion. When he's home, he follows the American policy of "open house" get-togethers, and anyone who knows where he lives, or happens to be "in" in with any of his friends or acquaintances, can just drop in, which is probably what will be happening all the time at the Presley family home in Memphis on the Christmas.

"Nobody does very much, least of all El, who welcomes you, offers you a drink and then leaves you to your own devices.

"We were invited out to the house one night with an old friend of El's from Memphis. There were no security guards on the gates. We just drove in and walked through the front door.

"There were quite a few people in the place, but then, like any normal guy, Presley likes to be surrounded by his friends.

anyone who knows where he lives, or happens to be "in" with any of his friends or acquaintances, can just drop in, which is probably what will be happening all the time at the Presley family home in Memphis this Christmas.

I have a couple of American Friends who have been lucky enough to attend a few of these Presley gatherings, and they were just as surprised as I was to discover that here's at least one star who throws glamour to the wind once he's outside the studios.

"Flyis is a great host," they confided, "but housed hour cars, and the girls had to one side of the room and talked about cars, and the girls had to be content just sitting and waitting for their dates to get through with chatting!

• car talk

"We got into a conversation about cars, and although Elvis has the edge on everyone, all the would do was comment on what other people were saying, rather than discuss any of his own cars.

"There were quite a few people in the place, but then, like any normal guy, Presley likes to be surrounded by his friends.

"And that's another thing. All these people were friends. Of course, some of them had never been there before, like us, but he soon put them at ease, never once acting like a great star.

"We didn't meet one other star at the house, although Elvis knows many in show business, Even his so-called security guards seemed to have the night off.

"Everybody meets in the main living room, which has a bar in one corner, and a 100 disc selector juke box. This is bang uptodate with all the current hits, and a few Presley discs thrown in, El prefers playing other people's records in preference to h's own, could have been a party at anyone's home!"

ADAM—Christmas Day at home, but on Boxing Day it's back to "Aladdin" at Bournemouth Pavilion,

Adam Faith PRESENTS-THANKS MATE, I NEARLY FORGOT ALL ABOUT 'EM

A DAM FAITH was relaxing in his dressing room at the Pavilion, Bournemouth, with his feet up on a chair. He wore one of those close-fitting suits that accentuate his slight, small figure. He held a cigarette in his right hand.

Suddenly he slammed a fist on the table beside him. "Crumbs, I've forgotten, mate. Haven't bought a single present. Must nip round to the old shops in the morning and see what's left. And then they ask me why need a holiday—I don't even get time to remember! "used." I have Christmas Day to a Boxing Day morning it will be say a few years ago when I was doing the old paper round—was doing the old paper round—was doing the saye to have plenty of parties to keep the spirit going."

Brenda Lee family

TOURDE THE BOOKING ON the day itself his family will lock up the house he bought them last year and travet down to Adam's own manor-type home in Esher, Surrey.

There they will have a family gathering with all the trimmings. Adam's mother, Mrs. Nelhams, will be able to sit back for the while able to sit back for the served to her.

Thou i magine Christmas in the recording empire of Nashville, Tennessee? A lot of stars will be spending the Yuletide there, but I reckon Brenda Lee has been looking to the served to be.

She has done everything to ensure an authentic Christmas in the forward to it most.

"... Oh, and my elder sister
Linda—she's 21—will be with us as well. That makes for a cosy party, with my ma, too."

tome bog

Christmas at home must be a happy time for firenda, for there the tomboy instincts in her can run wild.

Dub Albritten, the man who noticed the talent behind her pile-driving voice and built her into a star, often has to chastise Brenda for behaving in an un-star-like manner.

into a star, often has to chastise Brenda for behaving in an unstar-like manner.

"She does so many things a star shouldn't do—things like chewing gum at important receptions and shopping in dirty slacks. She often lets people step on her, and gets pushed into the background when she shouldn't be.

"I wish she had a little more temperament," sights Dub.
But Brenda's natural talent is probably one of her greatest assets. She's friendly to people she likes and takes no notice of those she doesn't—no matter how important they are.

That's why there'll be no star complexes in the Lee household this Christmas, Just good fun—the young way.

AND A HAPPY NEW YEAR from KENNY AND THE BOYS

MERRY CHRISTMAS

Said Billy: "I can't explain why, but I'm usually very pent-up. As soon as I get home I begin to feel everything easing up inside of me. It's a wonderful feeling."

Billy has had a pretty heetite time this year, but 1963 is going to be much easier.

"My manager Larry Parnes has left me a lot of free space... and man, I need that time off. I love one-night stands and meeting all the fans, there's nothing like it but, unfortunately, it means learing all the fans, there's nothing like it but, unfortunately, it means learing all over the country, and I ret pretty tired doing that,"
