☆ Recently on television, Magpie has been taking a look at stamp collections belonging to some well-known personalities.

For both boys and girls, stamp collecting, or philately as it is known, is a fascinating hobby that most of us adopt at some stage or other.

or other. However, if you start in the right way you will find that there are many other sidelights to the hobby. A well laid out album page gives you a chance to be artistic and writing up stamp details on crisp, good quality paper provides its own satisfaction. ☆ Geography is an essential part of philately and it is surprising how much we can learn from those little bits of coloured paper. And it's a very pleasant way to gain knowledge. ☆ In our Magpie pages this week we have taken the opportunity to run over the basic points of how to begin a stamp collection. I've just finished reading one of the most enjoyable books on soccer ever! (I only started it last night.) It's called '100 Years Of The F.A. Cup' and if you're a real soccer enthusiast, you just must have this in your collection. It's the official centenary edition and traces the history of 'the cup'

from the original year in which fifteen clubs were entered, to the four-hundred-plus total today. (Did you know that only two of those fifteen clubs came from north of Hertfordshire? And whatever happened to clubs like 'Harrow Chequers', 'Reigate Priory' and 'Hampstead Heathers'?)

New Stamp News!

Three new British stamps in the 'Anniversaries' series recently appeared on April 26th. The ninepence value, portraying the composer Ralph Vaughan Williams conducting an orchestra—with a background showing part of the score of his 'Sea Symphony'—is the first-ever British stamp with a musical theme.

The three-pence value marks the 50th anniversary of the discovery of Tutankhamun's tomb. The seven-and-a-half pence value, marking the 150th anniversary of H.M. Coastguard, illustrates a 19th-century coastguard against a background of a shipwreck in a stormy sea.

From now until July, visitors to the National Postal Museum, King Edward Street, London, can see a 'Ships on Stamps' exhibition. The subjects pictured on the stamps on display range from ancient Egyptian galleys to atomic warships.

I Should 'Cocoa'!

Dear Stewpot,

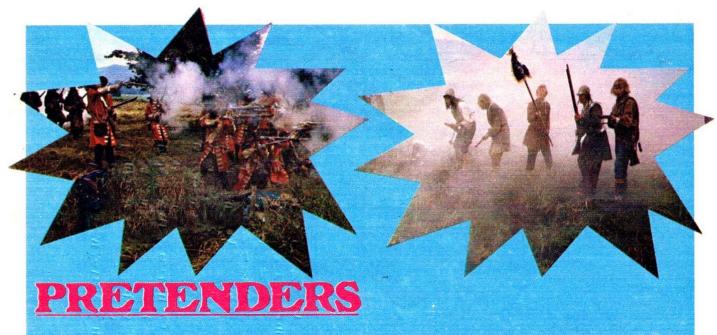

One night I went to bed early and asked my mum if she would make me a drink of cocoa. Next thing, mum came upstairs with a drink in her hand. She gave it to me, then went into the bathroom. When I looked at my drink it seemed as though it was setting. I tasted it and it was ghastly!

My sister saw it, and when she went downstairs again, she noticed there was gravy powder on the cabinet with the sugar and milk!

★ That's a bedtime story to tell your friends, all right, Gillian! Well done, you'll be receiving a small prize, shortly.

Don't miss episode ten this week □ The Battle of Sedgemoor is under way—with the peasant army of the Duke of Monmouth fighting against the king's dragoons, led by Colonel Kirke. It can only end in a routing for Monmouth's men—with Elam and Perfect fleeing from the battle area to find themselves alone on the moor. But Joachim falls captive to Colonel Kirke, who plans a grisly fate for him in revenge for the damage inflicted by the guns under the German mercenary's command...

travels safely underground, until Rumpo's nerve gives out under the series of mysterious attacks from his invisible adversary.

A wildly funny Western which many of you may remember, 'Carry on Cowboy' certainly is a film which Rumpo-none other than comedian Sid James -can easily recall.

"Out of all the 'Carry On' series so far, I think I liked this one most of all. 'Rumpo' was the sort of part I enjoy," he reminisced with a slight chuckle.

And Sid certainly has a large variety of rôles to choose from -having appeared in a total of eighteen 'Carry On' films to date (the nineteenth, 'Carry On Matron' will be released shortly).

From a very early age, variety has been the spice of life for this popular comedy actor from Johannesburg, South Africa.

Before entering a theatrical career, Sid had put his hand to everything from boxing and beachcombing to being a masseur, diamond polisher, electrician's mate and hairdresser.

His Australian father and London-born mother worked in variety in a double song-anddance act and so Sid was literally brought up in the wings of the theatre.

But it was several years before Sid took up acting himself. It was within a week of his arrival in England in 1946, after being demobbed from the army that a chance meeting with a South African playwright led him to his first film rôle, a Cockney character in 'Black Memory'.

After that, things snowballed and Sid found himself in a 'heap of British films'. Then came 'Carry On Constable' and the start of a series, which for Sid, was to establish him as a household name.

It's dad and daughter from Bless This House.

"Making those films was just a lot of giggles," he explained. "The 'Carry On' crew are just like a family."

But today, Sidney James's track-record puts him in the league of the 'greats'. He appears regularly on British TV screens in 'Bless This House' of which a film is shortly to be made-and he is also equally well-known in South Africa, Australia and many other countries.

Does he ever get time to himself and his family? Very little. "You've got to keep working," he says. But when he can fit in a holiday he likes to go 'wherever it's hot and sunny."

Sid's hobby is fishing-preferably deep-sea-and he enjoys good food.

"My wife's just about the best cook in the world!" he happily

But, as a contrast, one thing he hates is bad manners.

"I can't bear people who push past without apologising. The same with driving-it makes me mad!

"I do have an awful temper," he added. "But I control it. Though when I get mad-I get awful mad!"

Nonetheless, Sid hastily explained that usually he is a 'very relaxed sort of bloke'.

Sidney James is married and has a son, Stephen, and a fourteen - year - old daughter named Susan. Understandably, a family man, he is very fond of youngsters. "I don't know what I'd do without kids," he says, "they're the bulk of my fans!"

Not so surprising when you consider him in such fun-filled rôles as The Rumpo Kidthough, on that occasion the last laugh was on him!

This Saturday, Augustus J. Honeybun can turn the tables and wish himself a happy birthday! Better known to Westward TV viewers as Gus, this mad but merry 'hairbrain' rabbit is always sending out birthday greetings and cards during his regular series of short programmes.

But now it's time for his own celebrations! Born on April 29, 1961, it is rumoured that Gus knew no home other than the wilds of Dartmoor when Westward TV's out-and-about scouts found him lost and frightened. Fortunately for him, he was adopted.

Today, this extra-rare rabbit has been involved in every kind of special campaign for youngsters, from safetyfirst and animal care (of course!) to pointing out the importance of cleaning your teeth regularly. And who better to do that? after all his are big enough. Gus, nonetheless, likes his portion of icecream, sweets and rabbit pie (a pie for rabbits)-besides good ol' carrots.

THE JET

How many of you have been abroad for your holidays? You have-then there's a good chance that you travelled by aircraft. Perhaps you've even been lucky enough to fly on more than one occasion!

But whether or not you've ever been off the ground here is your chance to join a really exciting 'jet-set' organisation -the BOAC Junior Jet Club.

The club was set up to enable passengers under the age of sixteen to keep up with various interesting news items about BOAC and their aircraft.

Details of joining

OW to join? It's very simple. If you travel by BOAC you will automatically become a member of the Junior Jet Club and receive an enrolment card, log-book and badge. (See coupon).

The mileage of your first journey will be entered in the log book as will be all subsequent journeys you make by BOAC or its associate companies. On completion of the first 25,000 miles, members receive a mileage certificateand subsequent certificates for every other 25,000 miles completed. Many members have clocked up more than 250,000 miles. In all the club has over half-a-million members!

In addition to all this, club members will receive a magazine called Fleetwings free of Sinatra as 'the next major singer in Show Business' can't help but be good. But in the case of Jack Jones, it didn't need Sinatra to convince me-and Jack's millions of fans-of that fact.

Jack's father was a famous musician, Allan Jones, who recorded his biggest hit disc-the legendary 'Donkey Serenade'on January 14th, 1938, the night Jack was born.

Jack Jones-with microphone in hand as usual.

Jack is a sophisticated singerbut not so much so that he leaves the pop world behind. After several moderately successful years, his first real taste of fame came in 1963, when he appeared on comedian Jerry Lewis's TV show in America. Since then, it is claimed, Jack has made more guest appearances on American TV than any other singer.

For his British fans, Jack has just finished a highly successful tour over here, including an appearance on the 'Englebert Humperdinck Show', and has released a new album on RCA Victor. Let's hope he's back soon.

YOUR WIEW

Singer, comedian and artist, ROLF HARRIS is a man of many talents. And now he turns his attention to this week's Look-in postbag, selecting letters, jokes, pictures and the £2 Star Letter . . .

STAR LETTER

In LOOK-IN number 10, you began a 'Timeslip' story about the 'Flying Dutchman', and in the next episode you stated that the Dutchman was doomed to sail the seas until the end of time. I thought readers might be interested to know a slightly different version of the story, used by the composer Richard Wagner in his opera 'The Flying Dutchman'. According to Wagner, the Dutchman was allowed to land once in every seven years. If, while on shore, he could find a girl who-would fall in love with him, without knowing who he was or what he had done, then the curse would be lifted from him. In the opera, the Dutchman does find the girl, and is forgiven.

Joanne Harris, London N.W.II TNA.

Here is Rolf's selection of photographs sent in by Look-IN readers.

AAAAAAAGH!

At school, we are doing a project about nature, so would you please put a picture of a bat in LOOK-IN for me?

Clive Hayter, Totton, Southampton.

★ You asked for it, Clive! Here's the dreaded vampire bat. (Actually, it's quite harmless to humans.)

PONY PROBLEM

One morning, my mother woke me up very early and told me that my two ponies were missing. Just as I was coming downstairs, the telephone rang—it was the police, to tell me that they had found both ponies in a yard behind a public house. When I got to the yard, the ponies came straight up to me. The policemen were very surprised—they said that they had been 'playing cowboys and Indians all night, trying to catch them'. Then they said that if the ponies escaped again, they would get me up in the middle of the night to catch them.

Gillian Warne, Braintree, Essex.

★ Better heed the warning, Gillian. Ponies running loose could endanger themselves—and others, especially if they got on to a busy road.

Win £2 for the Star Letter and £1 for any other letter or joke! Plus, a special signed photograph of the Your Yiew Star to the sender of every item published! If you'd like to see your photograph in LOOK-IN, please send in one when you write, and we'll try to print it. However we regret that photographs cannot be returned.

WINTER IN REVERSE

My mother and I have had a bet. She says that winters in Australia are warm and that it doesn't snow there. I say that they are cold and that it does snow. Which one of us is right?

Stephen Eglin, Padiham, Lancashire.

★ I'm always happy to talk about my native land, Stephen—but this is a hard one to sort out. It does sometimes snow in Australia, but not very often and usually only in mountainous regions. Over lots of the country, the winters are fairly warm. And remember, the winter months in Australia are June, July and August.

In this special alphabetical series on soccer, we come to 'H' for HURST . Geoff Hurst, striker for West Ham and England, spoke to LOOK-IN in a special telephone interview.

Q: What is the most memorable goal you have scored?

A: This is a very difficult question, but probably the one I scored from a left-foot drive against West Germany in the World Cup Final of 1966. It brought the score up to England 4—West Germany 2.

Q: How did you start your career?

A: . . . When a friend of my father's wrote to West Ham and recommended me as a future player. I started as left-half but I later moved up to centreforward, which suits me better.

Q: What is your ambition?

A: I would like to win the League Championship with West Ham. We're a good tip for the League in the near future, Q: Can you give any tips on heading a ball?

A: You must always keep your eye on the ball, right up to the final moment. Also you must head the ball with the forehead to get the best results.

Q: Can you give any advice to someone who wishes to become a professional footballer?

A: No matter how good you are you must prove your natural ability to the club. Also, many youngsters don't realise how hard you train. You must give onehundred-per-cent in training.

Remember that left-footer from Hurst in 1966? It certainly caught out the West German goalkeeper, who stood no chance of stopping it.

This week, Cyril Littlewood looks at what's happening during the month of May.

The coming month is the one for nests and eggs and baby birds, with the parent birds busily trying to satisfy the immense appetites of their young. Some years ago a pair of blue tits were observed taking no fewer than 2,000 caterpillars and other small animals to their young in a single day! Only one or two of our summer migrants have not yet arrived in Britain; the nightjar and swift, for example, may not arrive until early in May.

But all our song-birds should now be at their best and if you listen to all the varied songs you will realise how still and silent the world would seem without them.

Mammals

May is also the month for young mammals to appear. Young foxes, badgers, otters, moles, shrews, rabbits, hares and squirrels are among the animals you may be lucky enough to see in field and woodland. And you may see the long-eared bat flying with her single baby clinging to her fur for dear life as she pursues moths and other insects. However, most young mammals will stay close to the nest, not venturing out until June or July.

It seems as though Douglas Rae has been with Magpie for ages, but Murgatroyd remembers the day only last year that Douglas helped present his very first programme in the Magpie studio. There to welcome him on the 31st of August, was Puff, Magpie's pony, for whom Douglas had a surprise. If you remember, Doug had already been on a summer trip to the Lebanon with Tony and Sue and he brought back with him a very special Arab bridle which he gave to Puff as a present. You can see Puff wearing it in the photograph and no wonder he looks proud! It is made of plaited webbing and silver chains, and it has just one reinon the left-so when Puff is supposed to turn right, his rider must take the rein over his neck and bear down on the righthand side.

Sticking to

. . . Collecting them can be a fascinating and rewarding hobby—if you go about it in the right way. When you start a stamp collection, the stamps are the last thing you should buy. First, you must give some thought to the equipment you will need.

A stamp album is the first necessity. Unless you decide to limit your collection to the stamps of one country only (in which case you can buy a readyprinted 'one country' album) the best kind of album is one consisting of loose-leaf pages. ruled with faint lines, kept in a spring-back binder. This allows you to re-arrange your collection whenever you wish and to add new pages as they are needed. Loose-leaf pages cost around 30-50 pence for a packet of fifty; a spring-back binder from around 50 pence.

Never touch stamps, especially unused ('mint') stamps, with your bare hands, however clean. Stamp tweezers with round, blunt ends cost around 30 pence from any dealer, and you will soon learn to handle stamps quickly and gently with them.

To fix stamps to your album pages, you need stamp-hinges, which cost around 25 pence a thousand. Do not use glue—and never stick in 'mint' stamps by licking their gummed backs, for this destroys their value. In fact, it is best to use transparent 'strip mounts' for 'mint' stamps: you can buy these in a variety of lengths and widths for around 50 pence a packet.

It is not much use having an album full of stamps if you can't identify them. You need a catalogue—and for the beginner and medium collector 'Stamps of the World', published by the famous stamp dealers Stanley Gibbons, is invaluable. Published each year, this lists every stamp that has ever been issued, with date of issue, colour, value and the price at which Gibbons will sell it. It is expensive—the 1972 edition costs £3.50—but you may be able to borrow it from a Public Library or buy a second-hand copy from a dealer.

You are still not ready to buy stamps. You must yet decide what kind of collection you intend to make. It's probably best for a beginner to collect whatever comes his way at first, starting off with a big 'bargain packet' from a good dealer. Then, when you know a little more about stamps in general, you may decide to specialise in a single country or group of countries.

A 'thematic' collection is especially suited to a collector with only a limited amount to spend. This means that instead of collecting by country and making up 'sets' of stamps, you collect by subject. For instance, if you are interested in sport, you might collect only stamps which show sportsmen in action—and there are literally hundreds of 'themes', from battleships to beetles, to choose from. And 'thematic' collecting means that you can limit your purchases to low-priced stamps and still build up an interesting and attractive collection.

Whether you collect by country or 'theme', you should arrange your collection to look as attractive as possible. Space the stamps out well on the album page, in order of date and face value (or according to subject in a 'thematic' collection), and write neatly beside each stamp or 'set' of stamps brief details of its date of issue and subject, as shown in the illustrations on this page.

Two rarities and the one that began it all!

(Centre) The 'One Cent' British Guiana of 1856, the only one of its kind in existence and the world's most valuable stamp—recently sold in America for £165,000.

(Below) Bearing the portrait of King Edward VII, this British 'Twopenny' in a colour called 'Tyrian Plum' was to have been issued in 1910. Because of the king's death, it was withdrawn and all stocks were destroyed—but one used stamp and six 'mint' specimens survived. It is the rarest British stamp, valued at around £3,500.

did Australia get its name?

Bethan Williams, Allerton,
Liverpool 19.

The name comes from the original name for the continent —Terra Australis the Southern Land, 'austral' being a modern word derived from a Latin one meaning southern. The Dutch called the continent New Holland. Finally, though the name Australia had been suggested down the years, it was the great explorer and navigator, Matthew Flinders, who really publicised the idea, and the name was officially used from 1817 on-do contact lenses work and when did they originate?

Keith Harris, Carterton, Oxon.

Contact lenses, which are plastic lenses lying against the eyeballs, are used by some people instead of glasses. They are particularly handy for models, actors and sportsmen. The idea goes back to 1827 when a great British astronomer named Herschel thought how useful such lenses would be. The first ones were made 60 years later by a Swiss called Fick, who gave them their name.

The trouble with early ones was that they were uncomfortable. Even the first plastic lenses of the 1930s, which were moulded to suit the shape of the wearer's eyes, needed a special solution between them and the eye which had to be changed a number of times each day. Then, in 1950 a lens was invented which floated on the actual moisture, or tears, of the person wearing it. Since this breakthrough contact lenses have become very popular and, for most people at least, very comfortable.

did Rome get its name?

Kevin Grieve, Chingford, E.4. Legend has it that it was named by Romulus, a son of Mars, god of war, who founded the city in 753 B.C. Now we are not going to state that there wasn't an actual (completely human) Romulus and that the date isn't roughly right, but the word actually has a straightforward meaning. The ancient Greek word for 'strength' was rhoma, and this was very probably the origin of the city's name. The other name by which Rome was known was Valentia -and that came from the Latin word for strong, valens! Either name was suitable, for Rome became the greatest city of the Win a prize for Your model!

Here's another little competition. See if you can fold this paper pig from Terry Ann of Acton, who will be receiving a one pound postal order. Post your fold to me, to Paper Pig Competition at the address below, and I will award an autographed copy of Paper Magic to the senders of the best three.

You can win £! for your new model!

If you feel you can invent a new Origami model, write down the details (together with your own name and address) and send them to Do-It-Yourself Origami, LOOK-IN, Junior TYTimes, 247 Totten am Court Road, London WIP OAU. I will send a £1 postal order for any item I select to publish. So, hurry and get your paper thinking-cap on now!

DESIGN A SPACE EMBLE

The prizes: Following the recent activity in LOOK-IN concerning the Apollo Mission Badges, we offer as prizes this week 500 special sheets (pictured below, about one quarter actual size), featuring replicas of the emblems used on the Apollo Missions from 7-16. These beautifully designed, full-colour images are reproduced on vinyl and can be individually removed from the backing sheet and applied to a variety of things such as school bags, clothing, felt or card for an attractive wall picture, etc.

* All you have to do to win one of these exciting Apollo sets is to design your own space badge.

Imagine you are an astronaut going on the first flight to Mars. Like the Apollo astronauts you will need a special insignia that sums up the atmosphere behind your mission. Using the blank circle below (or if you represent your mission.

wish you can draw your badge on a separate sheet of paper), design in fullcolour the badge you would want to Complete the entry form, cut it out, and send it with your badge to the address shown on the coupon. Entries must arrive not later than May 12, 1972.

Rules: Entry is free. All entries will be examined and 500 Apollo sets awarded to the winners. The competition is open to all readers in the UK other than relatives or agents of employees of Independent Television Publications Ltd., Independent Television Authority or any other company connected with this competition. Neatness, age and standard of design will be taken into consideration. Winners will be notified by post by Monday June 5th, 1972. A list of prizewinners will be published in a future issue of LOOK-IN. Closing date: Friday, May 12th, 1972.

Send your painting and completed coupon to: Mars Mission Badge, Look-In, 247 Tottenham Court Road, London W1P OAU, by not later than Friday, May 12th, 1972.
