HAND THAT FEEDS

BROKEN DOWN -

IN last week's MM artists and agents launched a violent attack on the small, but dangerous, minority of shady promoters. But are the groups themselves blameless?

Do they play fair with promoters? One promoters: One promoter who is cer-tain they don't — or some of them anyway — is Kevin Donovan, well known in the Midlands.

SUING

The was particularly ang-ered by Dave Dee's sugges-tion that promoters should be licensed "Why not li-cence groups," he fumed. "And just how many of them are members of the wasperience there are a great many who are not. How wasperience there are a great many who are not. How when they fail to turn up and leave the promoter fac-ing the paying customers? "Most agents have contracts which state that they are not personally responsible and it's which state that they are not personally responsible and it's provide that they are not personally responsible and it's the fact that they are not personally responsible and it's provide the state few months are groups failing to turn up. Some of them will let you has they complaining about them.

"Agent Tony Howard com-plained in the MM about pro-moters who moaned if a group came off after 24 minutes. What he says is nonsensical. The promoter has every right to insist on the 30 minutes in the con-tract — and so has the audi-ene. If you go to a shop and ask for 6d worth of chips you have every right to complain if you only get 5d worth.

"The groups seem to think they are doing the promoter a big favour, but he is the one who is paying them. And he's entitled to get what he paid for.

entilled to get what he pair for. "I'll agents and groups were to take more notice of the contracts they sign there wouldn't be so much trouble. I always have a barring class, forbidding a group to play within so many miles of my club within a certain time of their appearance there. How often I find they are playing a mile away the next night.

"As for the complaints about dressing rooms — ask any promoter about the dis-gusting condition in which they are left by the groups. Why should we allocate valu-able space for the complete able space for the complete able ment by groups? I can't in dressing rooms Tve found in dressing rooms Tve found in dressing rooms. IT shook the pop world. And until the MM blew the lid off, the Paul Jones-Man-fred Mann split Was the worst-kept secret in showbiz history. For months rumours that Paul wanted to leave the world famous Manfred Mann and "go it alone" were discussed and cussed in clubs, pubs, bars and the length of Fleet Street. For months the rumours were denied by Paul and the length of Fleet Street. For months the rumours were denied by Paul and immediately the group called a press conference to confirm our report with the national press and other musical papers.

ORIGINS

Now the echoes of the explo-sion have ded away, they will be a loud silence as both Paul, the solo singer, and Manfred, with his new front man, 22 yeared Michael D'Abo, prepare for the first post-split singles. But meanwhile there is a lot of clearing up to do and a lot of questions unanswerd. Can Paul and Manfred retain an oven segment of fand will one lose out to the other? How will Paul far alone? What is to be the fate of unknown Michael, suddenly thrust line the tabees of pop idds? This week I talked to Manfred Michael D'Abo, tracing the origins of the split and assessing their future. Says Paul: "I feel relieved." Says Manfred The feeling anknous." Says Michaels "There's a lot to make me nervous."

CHERRY'S REGULARS BRING OUT THE BEST OF HIS FEY CHARM

DON CHERRY lived in the shadow of Ornette Coleman for the earlier part of his career when he was a mem-her of the altoist's original quartet, and it was only on his subsequent departure when Coleman "retired" in the early Sixties that he started to broaden out into a major solo voice voice

Cherry's melodies tend to be abort, attractive things will dashes of the childlike simplicity which often marks ornette's compositions. In fact, the style within which the four men work is akin to the original Coleman group. Cherry is a remarkable the original Coleman group. Cherry is a remarkable soloist, with a kind of fey charm which brings Miles Davis to mind, and his play-ing has certainly acquired assurance. Several times here he skates away in a skind of personal cestasy, full of twists and turns but always with an of furm:

of form. Barbieri is a real find, Drawing from the obvious current influences — Ayler and Ornette especially — he has moulded a personal style which is powerful and aggress-sive. Like Cherry, he has an inbuilt sense of form which allows him to utilise bizarre Are offect.

The real strength of this music is that it is group music, This is a very tightly knit combo, propeled by the magnificent drumming of Blackwell who comes close to stealing the show at times.

Nevertheless, the solos are of a high order and Young has a refreshingly legato ap-proach to the organ which is in stark contrast to the pounding it usually gets. He does sound a bit spong when comping behind the soloists however.

A routine record with several fine solos as its only saving grace. — B.H.

KANE: confident, competent

K NOKKE-LE-ZOUT, Belgium, Tuesday. — "Swinging UK" has been the battle cry of the British team and their enthus-iastic support during the 8th European Song Contest here.

In fact, there has been very little musical swinging during this seven-day contest between six countries. "Europe" is basically square and dated and the British team — Eden Kane, Engelbert Humperdink, Truly Smith, Cloe Walters and Jinmy Wil-som-have diplomatically toned down the swinging image, with excellent results so far.

CHAMPAGNE

In the first match at the opulent Casino they presented a well-balanced programme of "quality" material and beat the French by over 40 points.

Beat was there, but not so Rabe-laisian as to offend the dress suit and champagne set.

Said British Arthur Greenslade, who did 27 arran-gements for Our team: "Last year NOT MUCH it e rribt Not NOT MUCH SWINGING -BUT IT

E d e n Kane, confi-dent and dent and competent, kicked off the match with num-bers like "La Bam-ba", greet-ed with up-roarious ap-proval by the eight-man British press contingent who consistently made more noise than the rest of the Casino audi ence put together.

Cleo Walters (18) sang in French. Then came Engelbert Humperdink who proved to have a powerful voice-in the Tom Jones tradition and was outstanding on "What Now My Love"

JUBILATION

Jimmy Wilson, from Belfast, shool a tambourine, smiled and bounces through "I'm Going Home" and "Don" Answer Me."

Then Truly Smith became the tall of Knokke with "My Colouring Book" and "Second-Hand Rose".

When the result came through there were brief scenes of jubilation among the British who then made hasty dash to the Free Bar, thought fully provided by the organisers.

RAVING

Later everybody, in the Swingin UK tradition, went raving in the loci discotheque,

The following day Unit Four Plus who had been playing in Ostend, cam to congratulate our team.

Jansch digs back into tradition

THE ballad the young man sang was long but the Audience hung on every word. In his own in-dividual way he managed to project some of the ballad's atmosphere of doom and destruction and when he finished there was a moment of almost stunned silence before the applause.

A strictly traditional singer at a traditional club? Not at all. The young man was Bert Jansch, one of Britain's leading contemporary songwriters, a brilliant guitarist in the "folk baroque" school whose two records for Transcitionitis have action whose two records for Transatlantic have estab-lished his as a truly individual voice in the folk revival. Bert laughed when I asked him how it came that he was singing so much traditional material these days.

Friends

"I've been exposed to traditional music since I was 16," he pointed out. "I've done so many gigs with Jimmy MacBeath that we are quite old friends.
