CRIMSON

26 dates

THE NEW-LOOK King Crimson next month begin a 26-date tour of Britain — marking the debuts with the band of ex-Yes drummer Bill Bruford and ex-Family bassist John Wetton.

Full details are inside together with other news on Joe Cocker — “I’ve been victimised by Australia”, he told NME — and details of a new Groundhogs tour.

CASSIDY TOUR

DAVID CASSIDY HAS been signed for an “extensive” concert tour of Britain next spring by promoter Robert Paterson.

This will be the first shows given in this country by Cassidy — now a phenomenal attraction for thousands of fans — and the roadshow will take in major provincial towns and cities in addition to at least one London appearance.

Cassidy’s “Cherish” album and his “How Can I Be Sure” single are both No. 1 in this week’s NME charts.

SLADE SABOTAGE

SLADE’S NODDY HOLDER injured his left arm during a gig in Brussels last Sunday, when a brick was thrown at the band. He also slipped down steps when leaving the stage and injured his left leg. This happened after power-lines blew and equipment went dead during Slade’s act — allegedly caused by sabotage. They were forced to leave the stage until power was drawn from an outside source.

SLADE VOTED GROUP OF THE YEAR

U.K. SCOOPS LUXEMBOURG GRAND PRIX

SLADE took the top honours of the year, as Britain's Act Of The Year in the eyes of the djs at Radio Luxembourg. Their reward was a special trophy which was presented to them on the stage of the Norveau Theatre in Luxembourg City during the Grand Prix last Thursday night.

After the presentation they gave a celebration show, going mad and delighting the elegantly clad audience.

But even more startling was the fact that in the Grand Prix competition itself, designed to find the best produced records of 1972, that Britain's three finalist entries — picked from 57 records by a panel of judges in London in September — won first, second AND third places, scooping the pool from entries from Germany, France, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg.

First place went to veteran producers Ken Howard and Alan Blaikley for "Manana", performed by the Bay City Rollers, on Bell. Second prize was taken by Miki Dallon, energetic head of Young Blood Records, with his production of Steve 'n' Bonnie's "Eyes Of Tomorrow", and third place was taken by Ellis Elias and Roberto Danova, of the Red Bus company, for the production of Yellowstone and Voice's "Days To Remember".

Give me the venue - and I'll give you Elvis

IT'S NEVER been done before, neither in Britain or Europe, most people in radio and TV had even stopped dreaming about it. An interview with Elvis Presley — huh? Land on the sun baby!

Well I never gave up and my dear sweet Lord after five years of correspondence, waiting by the telephone, reserving air tickets, hope, depression and despair I finally made it.

It's a feat and something which has fulfilled my ego for a lifetime so forgive me if I'm patting myself on the back and whilst hoping I don't sound conceited let me say, "I worked real hard for that pat."

I've been rocking at Elvis Conventions for five years, I'm a fan and have enjoyed each one as much as if not more than all the other fans who pay their annual homage to the King.

As a result I became a good friend to Todd Slaughter a guy who works as hard for Elvis as Colonel Parker.

Nine months ago Todd phoned me at home and said he was trying to organise a two-week trip to the States for the fan club and would I be interested in coming along as a guest? (Enter my answer in the Guinness Book of Records for speed).

Big laugh

One or two people laughed. "What are you taking a tape recorder with you for?" In truth I didn't think for one minute I'd get within speaking distance of Colonel Parker let alone Elvis but let's face it, if those Americans hadn't took sample bags with them to the moon the whole expedition would have been a waste of time.

4 a.m. Monday, August 28 and if you'd been at Gatwick airport you'd have heard this announcement over the public address system: This is yer royal ruler. Would all Elvis fans booked on World Airways flight JS 50054 now proceed to your Boeing 707 at gate number 9. This is your first step on the holiday of a lifetime!

Two hundred Elvis fans cheered, it was to be the first of many cheers.

Nashville: We were interviewed for local TV and radio and later in the evening watched ourselves on TV in the comfort of our air-conditioned Motel rooms. Some folk went round to RCA where Elvis records, some swam in the swimming pool whilst some caught up on sleep lost crossing the Atlantic.

I was busy phoning Las Vegas, "Hello, Colonel Parker's office? This is Tony Prince, my correspondence with Colonel Parker's Assistant Tom Diskin informs me you are expecting the British party, can you confirm this?"

"Yes, you're expected Mr. Prince please make contact with us when you arrive in Las Vegas."

I placed the phone in the cradle and cupped my chin in my hands. The tape recorder laughed at me from the corner of the room.

On Tuesday we travelled by chartered coach to Memphis to the beautiful Sheraton — Peabody Hotel. Route 40 had been a drag until we arrived in Memphis where we cringed at the ghettos and smiled at the fantastic structure named the Baptist Hospital where El's daughter was born.

The hotel was beautiful, even had some crazy black ducks swimming around a fountain in the ultra grand lobby. Had it not been charter it was quite obvious that this accommodation was well out of reach of most pockets.

No messin' in Memphis, more radio and TV interviews for Todd and I and then the next day up and about with two hundred Elvis fans on public transport down Elvis Presley Boulevard to the magnificent home of the King, "Graceland."

Elvis' Uncle Vestor was in charge at the gate and kindly opened up for us.

"No goin' round back you hear?" he yelled after us, "and no goin' by the pool now."

The house stands in what we would term a green park. You walk a couple of hundred yards up a gravel drive through trees offering shade from the hot Memphis sunshine.

For an hour we posed for pics on the veranda sitting in one of the four large chairs which Elvis had sat in many times. After a half hour one of the arms of the chair collapsed — one nut and bolt missing — I looked up at the chimney and wondered how long that would stand?

Uncle Vestor was well trained and answered like a computer, "I don't know any more than what you read in the papers." I left him in peace, there was no doubt that although he wouldn't give any direct answers he was basking in the fame his blood had brought to him.

When I left him he was receiving a kiss on either cheek from two of the Brum girls who'd come along, must be nice to be famous.

Wednesday and things began to warm up to boiling point. We piled into our three coaches specially chartered to take us the sixty miles south down Highway 78 to Tupelo, Elvis's birth place.

We were expecting the local TV cameras to welcome us, but we were not expecting the cavalcade of police cars and bikes at the City limit. A right royal welcome which humbled each of us and made us happy we had erected our Union Jack atop the first coach.

We stopped at last outside what can only be described as a shack. This shack had been the first earthly property to vibrate to the sound of Elvis Presley, the son of a poor sharecropper.

Elvis was a twin, his twin brother died at birth. Without wishing to be cruel or sadistic I must tell you my first thoughts as I walked through Elvis's former home, "Where would a second child have fitted in?"

Imagine two rooms made of wood no larger than twelve feet by twelve feet. In one room imagine an old black stove, a kitchen cabinet and a table and in the other a large double bed which took up two thirds of the room.

Perhaps you can't imagine, I wasn't the only one to feel the sharp pricking at the back of my eyes. Not because it was Elvis's pad but because it had been anyone's.

Today it looks quite pretty, the Womens' Guild of Tupelo have done it up, painted it and placed a shiny white wooden fence around it. But no matter how cute they make it look they couldn't hide the fact that it took me just thirty paces to walk around the "building".

We were met by the Mayor of Tupelo who made a speech about how proud the townsfolk are of Elvis and the way he has withstood the many temptations before him. We were also greeted by the Sheriff who allowed some of us to sit in his cop car and sit astride the huge motor bikes. The cameras never stopped clicking.

Tour of Tupelo

I had to go off again with Todd for another TV interview. The rest of the kids (the oldest kid with us was 58!) nosed to a specially arranged buffet, listened to a radio show recording called the "Elvis Presley Story" (none of us had the heart to tell them we'd heard it all on the BBC) and then were taken on a tour of Tupelo taking in the Church where Elvis first started yodelling, his school where the windows were pushed wide open displaying the fact that even today the building doesn't have air conditioning and finally to a cotton field where Elvis's Dad broke his back surviving. (Don't worry Vernon & Gladys somethin' gonna happen!)

Thursday and into our D.C.8. Destination Las Vegas the gambling capital of the world, Mafia, Howard Hughes, Desert and Elvis Presley live! We ate lunch flying over the Grand Canyon — man that valley is as big as Elvis!

We were supposed to stay in the flashy Circus Hotel. The manager screwed up and after a heated meeting with him admitted he had only been in hotel management two months and with human error had over-booked.

Well, you can't argue with human error especially when you've got two hundred Elvis fans trying to claw their way out of a coach in the hot Nevada sun.

We had been put into the largest Motel in the world right next door and taking things by British standards it was still A.1 accommodation and no one seemed to mind.

Todd Slaughter and I wasted no time and tramped down to the Hilton Hotel, the taxis were on strike and it was 110 degrees, the mile walk seemed ten miles but at last we were standing in the lobby of a building which housed Elvis Presley one eighth of a mile above our heads.

It was 5 pm by the time we got through on the house phone to the Colonel's office. It was regretted that the Colonel had gone to the airport we would have to make contact at 10 a.m. the following morning!

I looked at Todd, he looked at me and we harmonised to a self penned tune called "Runaround."

I hired a flash car, I don't get to Las Vegas that often neither do I drive Chevrolets very often! We were sitting in the Las Vegas Hilton's Press Office at 9.45 am. Some of our gang had been to both the shows the previous evening and had seen the Colonel after the first show selling hound dogs in the hotel showroom entrance.

"Who should we say is calling?" asked the dubious looking press officer.

"Todd Slaughter and Tony Prince," says Todd not mentioning his assistant Jan Bailey who had come along to help us smash a few doors down.

The press officer spoke to someone and then paled a little as she placed the telephone back in its cradle.

"It's unheard of," she said looking at us wide-eyed, "someone's coming down for you. You're to go up to his suite!"

"Don't worry darlin' ", sez me feelin' a bit cocky, "it's only what we'd do for him if he came to Britain!"

A young guy took us up to the fourth floor. There were four armed guards, uniforms, badges, guns, the lot. They moved aside and I put my best Cagney expression on and walked past them.

Down a long long corridor like Alice in Wonderland but instead of Mad Hatters the only tea party here would be hosted by Elvis. The walls said Elvis, the ceiling said Elvis and hound dogs gazed at you throughout the journey until eventually voices snapped you out of it and you were walking into a sunlit office and being introduced to a guy wearing a golf cap who said he was the Colonel and who looked a lot slimmer than his photographs.

Todd was the star of the show, the thing about Todd is that he's no Elvis fanatic, he's a plain fan like myself who will not accept what appears to be bullshit. I can honestly say that had Todd not adopted this attitude in running the fan club we would not have been received so gracefully.

We were introduced to the managing director for every Hilton Hotel in the world, the managing director of RCA records and one or two other guys who could have emptied their wallets there and then and smothered me in bread.

Pleasantries done with I stepped forward.

"Tom Diskin, the Colonel's right-hand man, sat at my right hand, he should have known me — I've licked enough air mail stamps to him."

"Interview!" bellowed the Colonel interrupting my conversation with Tom Diskin. I stood my ground.

"If fifty million listeners in Europe doesn't mean anything to you, Colonel, then an interview for Radio Luxembourg is of no use to you!"

"I don't allow personal interviews Tony," said the Colonel. I looked over his shoulder at the golf course built onto the hotel roof two floors below us, he was boring me!

Sneak a tape

"But," he continued, "if you happen to sneak a tape recorder downstairs when you meet Elvis next Monday and I don't happen to have my glasses with me..." he turned to Tom Diskin (Christ if this continues I'm going to start calling him Tom!)

"Mr. Diskin, remind me not to take my glasses with me on Monday!" Here then was my first view of the side of Colonel Parker I'd never been told existed, unbelievably this was the only side I came across.

The World's 'plus celebre' manager turned out to be completely likeable, uncommonly generous and very humorous. I spent a good three hours in his company during the four days in Vegas and took as much pleasure out of meeting the Colonel as I did his star although both were extremely different and exciting people.

The fairground in the Colonel was apparent throughout Las Vegas, it was impossible to turn a corner anywhere off the seven-mile-long strip without staring Elvis in the face.

Gigantic Elvis/Hilton billboards towered everywhere, taxis (the one company not striking) carried the good word atop their roofs and

LITTLE RICHARD RETURNING FOR NOVEMBER GIGS

LITTLE RICHARD is returning to Britain next month to play three London dates on the Sundown circuit. He appears in concert at Edmonton (November 17), Brixton (18) and Mile End (19). In view of the exclusivity of his Sundown booking, it is not expected that he will undertake any other gigs during his visit to this country, although it is likely that he will be appearing on television.

ROOSTER SCRAP GIGS IN MANAGEMENT ROW

ATOMIC ROOSTER have pulled out of the string of gigs they were currently due to be playing around Britain. Spokesman for the group commented: "The dates were set up by Gaff Management, and we have now severed our association with this organisation. We gave a week's notice, and are surprised to find that we are still being billed at several venues. We are in the process of opening our own office and shall shortly be lining up our own gigs." Gaff Management confirmed the split, and their spokesman said: "We couldn't see eye to eye about the way their music should progress."

COCKER: 'VICTIMISED BY AUSTRALIAN POLITICS'

JOE COCKER and members of the Chris Stainton Band were together in Los Angeles earlier this week, after leaving Australia last Saturday. Cocker — who is due back in London later this week — had played two concerts in Melbourne on Friday night to riotous receptions from 10,000-capacity crowds.

In all, only three concerts had to be missed in Australia following the drugs charges on which Cocker was convicted, and which — according to a spokesman — "became a political issue with the Australian elections close to hand."

Reed extra

A FINAL DATE has been added to the current British tour by Lou Reed, when he appears at London Mile End Sundown next Wednesday (1) with Phillip Goodhand-Tait. After this concert, Reed sets out on a European tour, then returns home to America.

● The New York Dolls withdrew from concerts with Reed at Liverpool and Colchester last week. A spokesman for the group told the NME: "We understand that Reed refused to appear on the same bill with us. We don't know why."

On tour ...

Fanny added to the Ike and Tina Turner concert bill at Wembley Empire Pool on Friday, November 3. ● Heads, Hands and Feet have been booked for London concerts at Edmonton Sundown (December 14) and Mile End Sundown (15). ● Leading German rock group Amon Duul II start a two-month British tour on November 17; full details are in the Upcoming section of this week's Nationwide Gig Guide. ● Tommy Roe and Johnny Tillotson are to tour Britain shortly.

EXTENSIVE SPRING TOUR BY CASSIDY

DAVID CASSIDY was confirmed this week for a major tour of Britain in the spring. His concerts will be promoted by Robert Paterson, who told the NME on Tuesday: "David will be appearing at major venues throughout Britain — it will not be a fleeting visit, but an extensive one. I am also lining up dates for him in Europe, and possibly throughout the world."

Paterson has not yet finalised British venues for Cassidy, but hopes to be able to make an initial announcement within the next few weeks. He added: "This promises to be THE event of 1973, and I am delighted to have secured David for this tour. The only problem threatens to be one of security, but I am confident we shall be able to overcome that."

Ike & Tina: Birmingham club dates

IKE AND TINA TURNER will now be playing two shows at Birmingham Barbarella's on Sunday, November 5, replacing original plans for them to appear at that city's Town Hall on that date. Co-promoter Michael Alfandary commented: "They expressed a special desire to play one club date while they were here, and Barbarella's seemed the obvious choice." There will now be two performances by the Turners when they play Manchester Hardrock on November 6 — at 6.30 and 9.15 p.m.

YES: XMAS CONCERTS

YES appear in concert at London Rainbow on December 15 and 16, and the following day (17) at Manchester Hardrock — and all three performances will be filmed for editing into a 50-minute showcase, for TV screening both in Britain and America. The film will be used primarily to promote the group's first live double album, due for early New Year release by Atlantic. The LP will be recorded during the band's three-week U.S. itinerary starting this Saturday (28) — and there is a possibility that it may be completed during the Rainbow concerts.

NEW MOVIE WITH RINGO, EVERLYS, FURY & MOON

Ringo & Essex recording; Winwood, Bruce in line-up

THE NEW MOVIE "That'll Be The Day" — initial details of which were exclusively revealed in the NME two weeks ago — began its seven-week shooting schedule on the Isle of Wight this week with scenes between David Essex and Ringo Starr. Essex, who has been given special leave from his starring role in "Godspell" to make the movie, is the star of the film in which he plays the anti-hero Jim MacLaine. Ringo plays Mike, his tough Liverpool-born friend who teaches him the ways of the world — a role that is described by the film company as "a strong dramatic part laced with humour." Also featured are Rosemary Leach, Deborah Watling and Kim Braden.

As previously reported, the film covers the period immediately before the emergence of the Beatles, and it features the music of the times. The Everly Brothers are seen in the picture, as are Viv Stanshall and Billy Fury who fronts a mythical band of the period.

It is this band, known as Stormy Tempest and the Typhoons, that is creating particular interest because of its star-studded line-up. The personnel is of a flexible nature and Keith

DAVID ESSEX

Moon, Pete Townshend, Ron Wood, Graham Bond and John Hawkins have already been featured in soundtrack recordings. The NME learns this week that Stevie Winwood and Jack Bruce have now joined this array of musical talent.

Lou Reiser has been producing tracks, some of which will subsequently be released commercially — among them four by David Essex, including Buddy Holly's title track. A joint single by Essex and Ringo Starr is also understood to be a possibility.

FREE GIGS EARLY '73

FREE, whose recent British tour was interrupted when Paul Kossoff was indisposed, are to play another string of major concert dates in this country early in the New Year. Venues are still being finalised, but a spokesman told the NME that they will include an appearance at Manchester Free Trade Hall.

Dylan may join Kristofferson in new movie

BOB DYLAN may co-star with Kris Kristofferson in a new film version of "Billy The Kid" which goes into production next year. Kristofferson has already signed to play the title part, and Dylan is said to be considering a major co-starring role. Kristofferson, who starred in the recent movie "Cisco Pike", has also been signed for another movie in 1973 — it is the Sam Peckinpah production "Blume".

Another London gig by Osmonds — ALREADY SOLD OUT

THE OSMONDS have been set for an additional London appearance at the Rainbow Theatre on Thursday, November 9 — but the extra concert is already sold out. A spokesman told the NME that they had filled the venue from applications left over from the group's first appearance at the Rainbow on November 4. All four Osmonds' dates are now completely sold out.

During their visit, the outfit will be appearing on "Top Of The Pops" on November 2 and 9. They will be interviewed in Ed Stewart's "Junior Choice" on November 4, and Donny guests in Jimmy Young's Radio 1 show next Monday (30). They will also be filming several other TV shows, including their own special, for later transmission. The Osmonds make a personal appearance at London's Swan & Edgar store at 1 p.m. on November 2.

NEWS IN BRIEF

EXTRA TYA VENUE

TEN YEARS AFTER have added an extra date to their British concert tour which opens at Manchester Hardrock tonight (Thurs.) The new venue is also the final date of the tour. It is at Bristol Colston Hall on November 9, and the group return to America immediately afterwards.

GOLD FOR ARGENT

ARGENT have been presented with a Gold Disc to commemorate one million world-wide sales of their single "Hold Your Head Up" which, besides being a British hit, also reached No. 4 in the U.S. charts. In addition to the main award, the four members of the band were also presented with individual Gold Discs.

CRICKETS' FINALE

AN EXTRA date has been added to the Crickets' British tour, details of which have already been reported in the NME. It is the final date of their itinerary and is at Sheffield Bailey's on December 13.

OSCAR FOR DIANA?

DIANA ROSS' first starring film "Lady Sings The Blues" opened in New York last week to the unanimous acclaim of the critics, and she is already being tipped as an Academy Award nominee. The movie is expected to have its European premiere in London before Christmas.

BOWIE EXTENSION

DAVID BOWIE's current American tour is proving so successful that it has been extended by more than twice its original length. The initial plan was for Bowie to play seven selected dates, but already another 17 have been added, and these will keep him in America until early December.

MAN: XMAS PARTY

MAN start a major German tour on November 20 — it runs until December 3 and includes 11 concerts. The outfit begin a Christmas tour of Wales on December 18, culminating in a special cheap Christmas Party concert, which will probably be staged in Swansea.

BOB & EARL VISIT

BOB & EARL, of "Harlem Shuffle" fame, are returning to Britain at the end of this year for a one-nighter tour of clubs and ballrooms. They will be over here from December 1 to 17 and dates and venues are currently being lined up by Contempo International.

TONY SCHEDULE

OSCAR TONEY Jr. pays a fleeting visit to Britain in December for dates at Manchester Village Disco (22), Whitechurch Civic Hall and Tunstall Golden Torch (23) and USAF Burtonwood (24), prior to travelling on to Germany.

CAMEL SETBACK

FRAMPTON's Camel were forced to cancel the last three gigs on their debut U.S. tour when drummer Mike Kellie was taken ill with pleurisy. He returned home last Friday and is at present convalescing. He is almost certain to be fit enough for Camel to open their British tour with Humble Pie tomorrow (Friday).

Dead, Steve Miller, Dr. John to Britain

DR. JOHN

GRATEFUL DEAD, Dr. John and the Steve Miller Band are being lined up for British visits in the New Year. Provided that negotiations are completed successfully, they will be coming over for March Artists and will be playing dates in this country as part of European tours. It is expected that each act will play several major venues in Britain probably including London Rainbow or Sundowns, Manchester Hardrock and Birmingham Alhambra Rock.

Also coming in the New Year for the same company are Joe Tex, Spirit and Ravi Shankar. This is part of March Artists' new expansion policy, following the appointment of Bob Britten to head the agency and its complementary publishing company April Music. March are currently handling the Soft Machine tour of Britain.

were you to sit down on one of the towns many park-type wooden benches your back would rest against a picture of the King.

I wondered why the Colonel had never had an El. likeness carved out of one of the surrounding mountains and posed the question to one of his assistants.

"Jeezus!" he exclaimed, "Don't you dare mention it to him!" I had visions of the Colonel passing round hammers and chisels and packing his boys off to the hills, I couldn't resist it I had to ask.

The Colonel doesn't have to think, about anything.

"I thought about that when we first came to Vegas," he said chipping the end of his cigar.

"Those mountains are too far away and you'll only need to be here a couple days to realise just how far away those mountains are and how the heat mist would veil any detail!"

A break

I wondered why the Colonel didn't have the mountains brought nearer but decided to give the staff a break and anyway there were only three more days, seven more shows and Elvis's season at the Vegas Hilton was over.

The big question then and I took a deep breath for it... "England Colonel? Great Britain/Europe how about it?"

I wasn't prepared for the honesty the lack of evasion as we've become accustomed to over fifteen years of British press rumours. For the first time we weren't being given the runaround, from the horses mouth a long snorting naaaay and a reasonable explanation.

"You've seen the show here, can you supply me with a similar venue in Britain that offers the capacity, the sound, the facilities?"

"When I show Elvis I want the people to see Elvis, I want them to hear Elvis and when they leave that show I wanna hear them sayin' 'That sure was Elvis'."

Suddenly I realised something else, it's not money anymore, sure they've still gotta make bread but even after I told the Colonel about the recent Wembley Rock Festival — the prices charged and the amount of punters who turned out for Bill Haley, Chuck Berry, Jerry Lee Lewis and Little Richard — even when I suggested that one, maybe two hundred thousand Britons would pay possibly twenty five dollars per ticket (it was fifteen dollars at the Hilton including drinks or a meal), even when he'd worked out the gross take in two seconds flat he stated that Elvis would not appear out-door again.

Sell out

I suggested that he had done so on his recent sell out tour of the States but the Colonel retorted that this was why he wouldn't be doing it again.

"Give me a venue and I'll give you Elvis," said the Colonel.

It was a deflating truth.

"O.K.," I said, "So Europe's on the shelf, you've hit America and now Vegas is at the end of its run, you're surely not sitting around until next year."

"See this list..." the Colonel flicked his right fore finger at an efficient assistant and before his finger had reached the cigar hanging from his mouth I was holding a piece of foolscap with a list of countries that stretched from the very top of the page to the bottom. I noticed Great Britain was in there and looked up at him blankly.

"Satellite," he said.

My eyes narrowed.

"Elvis is doing a show in Hawaii next St. Valentine's Day, it'll be seen by more viewers than any concert in history."

I asked him if he found it easier to promote Elvis today?

"Promotion depends on how much faith you have in your product, when you got faith it then depends on what you do with it."

"Yes," I said, "but if you are walking down Broadway with a lion and I with a cat the lion is going to receive more attention than my cat, you have a lion Colonel."

"True, but I could upstage that lion if I had the cat. The cat needs protection from the lion for example."

It was a coincidence that I'd used animals to get my point over for the Colonel immediately embarked on one of his experiences which underlines the way he works and how the cat, or in this case the dog could attract much publicity.

The Colonel once worked for the American equivalent to our R.S.P.C.A. One day a call came through that a small dog had fallen down a manhole and couldn't get out.

The Colonel and his helpers

ELVIS, flanked by TONY PRINCE and TODD SLAUGHTER, with the special NME award presented to him by Prince arrived at the scene where already a small group of onlookers had collected.

"Man, I could have been down that manhole and back up with the pooch in five seconds flat but instead I dillied around, called out the fire department and TV crews.

Within a half hour we had the traffic blocked and local radio was giving out the news and attracting even more spectators.

"When I finally sent a man down he had my instructions to take his time, rub a little dirt on the dog and squeeze its tail to give the impression he was really up against it. When the pooch finally showed up there were fifty flashlights poppin', he made front page news as well as TV and radio. Did us a lot of good, especially when I went round the audience for a collection!"

This type of success the Colonel would probably term as "a snow." Todd and I are now members of the Colonel's exclusive "Snowmen's League of America," any deserving member of this club will have to admit that he is proud and privileged to be in the League only because it cost him nothing to join. This is the attitude of a true snowman. I now have a membership card signed by the First High Potentate Shower, Colonel Parker whose signature both enrolls and expels you all at the same time.

Having received this honour I continued the questioning. "I suppose after all these years you and Elvis have a somewhat father/son relationship?"

"Not at all," said the Colonel, "Elvis's father is with him all the time. Our relationship is manager/artist. I take care of those park benches out there and Elvis handles everything on the music side."

"Everything?"

"Everything!" He chose everyone of those musicians you see on stage, he personally hand picks 'em and I have no say whatsoever in that."

Shortly after this the Colonel presented Todd with the second largest "Hound Dog" in the world. The stuffed animal towered way above us, even the specially printed board leaning against him came up to my chest.

The board read: Thanks to the British fan club from Elvis and the Colonel — Todd Slaughter, President.

The world's largest stood downstairs on display in the foyer, all twenty feet of him, the one we received stood about twelve feet high and had been ordered specially.

Then the business side of the Colonel began to take over.

"Now two hundred is too many to meet Elvis but if you'd like to bring them up to my suite here on whatever day you choose we'll get together a special package of Elvis keepsakes which they can have at cost."

His super efficient secretary began to take notes as he listed the souvenirs he wished to include, an album, four posters, a small stuffed hound dog, a pen, badges; a new single, an Elvis hat and so on.

"That little lot runs fifteen dollars downstairs, tell 'em they can have 'em for seven dollar fifty!"

One of the Colonel's helpers stepped forward to remind him he had an appointment when we suggested we would like to come Monday afternoon.

"Cancel it," said the Colonel, "He's not come five thousand miles!" Monday arrived. It was to be the big day.

At noon the two hundred British fans arrived in the hotel lobby, I waited upstairs with the Colonel who put me in charge of the till. Just before the first lot of thirty came up the Colonel whispered in my ear that they could purchase one of the large 5 ft. high stuffed Hound Dogs for fifteen dollars, "they cost thirty five downstairs".

Two hours later everyone had met the Colonel and I had straightened the money out. I carried it through into his office and proudly told him there was nine hundred and eighty dollars!

The Colonel dipped into his pocket and produced a twenty dollar bill. "Now it's a grand," he said throwing the bill across to me, "Give 'em a party on Elvis and the Colonel!"

Even his secretary was caught off balance, the room went dead

BRITAIN—ONE, TWO, THREE

A GREAT NIGHT for Slade... and comparative newcomer groups Bay City Rollers, Steve n' Bonnie, Yellowstone and Voice. It was winners all the way in Luxembourg, where British record production scored a tremendous triple triumph in the Grand Prix at the Nouveau theatre last week.

The result of the fourth Radio-Tele-Luxembourg Grand Prix International left hopeful German, French, Belgian and Dutch disc producers stunned as judges from their countries voted Britain's three entries first, second and third—an unheard of, never-before feat in this annual contest to find the best-produced records in Europe.

Top honours went to Ken Howard and Alan Blaikley for their production of their own song, "Manana", performed by the Bay City Rollers on Bell. The Spanish word is repeated over and over, while behind some majestic orchestral embellishments are heard, and midway the song seems to end, and then comes powerfully to life again. Reminiscent of Dave Dee, Dozy, Beaky, Mick and Tich maybe, but still acceptable.

Second went to Miki Dallan for his production of "Eyes Of Tomorrow", a strong composition by Manchester's gifted Steve Hamilton and performed by a large orchestra and vocals by Steve himself and his wife

Bonnie, who has a remarkably clear soprano voice, on the Young Blood label. This disc won first place in the National section; as in the International section English judges could not vote for British discs, but in the National section they could.

Coming in third were Ellis Elias and Roberto Danova for producing "Days To Remember", composed by Yellowstone and Schwartz, and performed with haunting appeal by the new song duo, Yellowstone and Voice, on Regal Zonophone.

To complete the award winners, Slade broke into their current European tour to be honoured with a special golden-tower trophy for the Act Of The Year, picked by the English djs at Luxembourg. Slade electrified the audience with a barrage of crazy antics as they powered their way through two numbers, the top-hatted Noddy Holder and the silver-sheathed Dave Hill ogling the TV cameras on stage and becoming firm favourites with the elegantly attired international audience.

Particularly pleased members of the audience were the English judges who picked, last September and from a record entry of 57 discs, the three which scooped the pool. The successful pickers were Brian Mulligan, Ray Coleman and myself, with 208 boss in Britain, Alan Keen, and his programme director, Ken Evans.

The Luxembourg Grand Prix is becoming more and more important with producers and artists alike. Each record selected for the final gets many plays on Radio Luxembourg and is performed on a massive TV show, seen in 12 countries via the Eurovision link (but not in Britain for some unknown reason), and in addition to introducing the dozen records in the competition, Stars Of The Year awards bring another six top acts into the programme. This year we saw, besides Slade, such delectable girl singers as Vicky Leandros (TV award), and Israeli film star-singer Daliah Lavi (representing Germany); double acts Stone and Charon (France), and c & w orientated humorists Mouth and MacNeal (Holland), plus Luxembourg's own C. Jerome.

SPECIAL REPORT BY ANDY GRAY

As happens each year, a big party went from London as guests of Radio Luxembourg, who entertained us royally from the moment of take-off in the specially chartered Luxair champagne flight to the Duchy until touching down two days later at Heathrow airport again.

Alan Keen, aided by Ken Evans, Godfrey Morrow (Sales Manager), Jimmy Parsons (Press Officer), Tony Churcher (Sales) and beautiful June Bryant (Alan's P.A.) proved perfect hosts throughout, and once we got to Luxembourg they were assisted immensely by John Barter, the station manager out there, and his djs—Tony Prince, Paul Burnett, Kid Jensen, Mark Wesley, Bob Stewart and Dave Christian.

The large party comprised, besides those already mentioned, Chas. Chandler (manager of Slade), Zac Lawrence and Mike Alexander (MDs), press people Judith Simons, Mike Ledgerwood, Alan Walsh, Kim Thorne, Fid Backhouse, David Porter and Ben Cree.

Record executives included Colin Burn (EMI), Wayne Bickerton (Polydor), Dick Rowe, Don Wardell (Decca), Johnny Wise (Pye), Geoffrey Everitt (MAM), Dave Most (RAK), Muff Winwood (Island), Don Percival (Phonogram), Dick Leahy, David

Bridger (Bell), Gerald Black, Jan Olofsson (Young Blood), Eliot Cohen (Red Bus), Glyn Evans, Dave Margerison (CBS), and Lyndon Holloway (RCA).

Song celebrities Eddie Blackwell, Roger Greenaway, Tony Hiller and Bill Martin (and Johnny Mercer?) proved very entertaining, along with agent Barry Perkins, business consultant Barry Kirkham, and Bay City Rollers' manager Tam Paton. And let's not forget those important people, the roadies—Graham Swinnerton, Ian Newnham, Robert Wilson and John Jones.

Needless to say parties at the Holiday Inn (where we stayed, sunbathed and swam), at the Cravat, Commerce and Gourmet restaurants, and night clubs like Charleys or the Blow Up disco were eclipsed by the celebrations after the announcement that British records had taken one, two and three in the honours list. Champagne corks really popped that night.

Lynsey, Hollies, Gees, CCS, Drifters—singles

LYNSEY DE PAUL's follow-up to her recent Chart debut will be released by MAM on November 10, titled "Getting A Drag". Issued the same day by Polydor are "Magic Woman Touch" by the HOLLIES and "Alive" by the BEE GEES, both taken from the groups' respective new albums. Among other November 10 singles are "Well Well Well" (Polydor) by the PINK FAIRIES and "One Woman On My Mind" (Island) by HEADS HANDS & FEET from their upcoming album "Khaki".

Newly announced singles for November 3 release include "Living Next Door To Alice" (Rak) by NEW WORLD, "Ball Park Incident" (Harvest) by ROY WOOD'S WIZZARD, "Theme From The Men" (Stax) by ISAAC HAYES and a three-track maxi-single titled "Freedom" (DJM) by HOOK-FOOT.

Among rush-releases this weekend are a revival of the Tennessee Ernie Ford hit "Sixteen Tons" (Rak) by CCS, Paul McCartney's "Everynight" (Bell) by the DRIFTERS, "Spare Some Love" (Sovereign) by RENAISSANCE and the self-penned "Natural Gas" (Maple Annie) by PAUL RYAN. Following the success of his "Ernie" hit last Christmas, BENNY HILL issues "Fad Eyed Fal" (Columbia) this weekend.

● The SWEET's follow-up to their current "Wig-Wam Bam" hit has already been set, even though it will not be issued until January 5. It is another Chinn-Chapman song called "Blockbuster" (RCA).

● The first single by CMU comes out on November 17, titled "Heart Of The Sun" (Transatlantic). This will be followed on December 8 by the album "Space Cabaret".

RECORD NEWS

On Sonny & Cher's U.S. TV show, GILBERT O'SULLIVAN is presented with a Gold Disc for his single "Alone Again" by SONNY BONO. The record has since topped two million sales in America, and world sales exceed three million.

Quo dispute

IN A STATEMENT issued this week, Pye Records say: "Status Quo are under an exclusive recording contract with Pye for the U.K. and the world. Under the terms of this contract, Status Quo are not at liberty to enter into an agreement or contract with any other recording company. To do so would be a breach of the existing contract." This follows Quo's announcement two weeks ago that they were negotiating a deal for U.S. release of their product via the A & M label.

● Despite this dispute, Quo announced this week that they have signed with Phonogram for Britain. Their first single for two years will be released on November 10 via the Vertigo label, titled "Paper Plane".

Dog mix LP

SOME MEMBERS of Three Dog Night returned to London this week to spend time mixing the live album which the group recorded in this country and Germany. As previously reported, the album tapes will be given an exclusive world premiere on Kid Jensen's Radio Luxembourg programme early next month.

Rod: 'I support Python'

ROD STEWART this week slammed Press reports that he was unhappy about the release of the single "In A Broken Dream," which he recorded five years ago under the name of Python Lee Jackson. Said Stewart: "I am very proud of the record and in no way am I dissatisfied by its release or my performance."

"I was paid handsomely for the session, and the question of my wanting a royalty has never arisen, certainly not at my instigation. I should also like to make it perfectly clear that I am in no way upset with John Peel — he is an old mate and if it hadn't been for him the record would never have been released."

JEFF BECK LOVES cars. The first time you meet him he's in his garage working on a new and fearsome automobile creation, while a bright red Corvette — the kind of car Chuck Berry would have a rock 'n' roll wet dream over-stands there gleaming next to a majestic mutation of a hot rod.

"It makes a quarter-of-a-mile in 10 seconds," he mutters to no-one in particular.

Beck has owned a car ever since he can remember. Even back when he was playing bare-foot with the Tridents, his first-ever band.

"I couldn't afford a car and a pair of shoes, so I just owned a car and a guitar."

Up at the house, a 500-year-old cottage populated by 29 cats and numerous dogs, Celia, his lady, is busy working herself with the housework.

Beck surfaces from the garage and, as he walks over the lawn, you realise that appearance-wise he hasn't really changed a bit.

He still possesses the looks of the scrawny, half-starved denim street-urchin, his face locked in its usual sullen, moody pose.

He typifies that type of rock 'n' roller — Keith Richard and Rod Stewart are another two fine examples — of the ugly kid who somehow turned into the pretty-boy rock superstar.

Only Beck never extends the crazed flash of his guitar histrionics to anything further than his music.

His clothes are usually always casual/scruffy — a denim jacket and jeans — while his funky chicken hairstyle never reaches the rooster-like splendour of say Rod Stewart's peacock plumage.

No, Beck looks the archetypal English guitar-hero and deserves the title, if only for his ability to endure all the hassles such a title attracts.

The obvious conflicts that occur when the musician-craftsman ascends to personality star have caused numerous names too obvious to mention to flip out in one way or

Of course, there's still Jimmy Page whose work is now a shadow of its former Yardbirds brilliance and Alvin Lee, the space doodler himself.

Beck has no contact with his electric comrades nowadays.

ABOUT Page and Led Zeppelin he says: "I'm unsure how I feel about them, mainly because I don't like their records, but the only time I've seen them, they were great."

"It was just after my accident — I didn't have a band and everything was in a state, and I went down to the Albert Hall."

"I was sitting up at the balcony, just amazed at what was going on down on stage. And me without a band."

On Alvin Lee: "Well, he's still big in the States mainly because he has this fixed image of being, like, the James Dean of the electric guitar."

Wasn't Beck more in the running for such a title?

After all, everyone has their favourite Jeff Beck story, whether it concerns anything from his groupie prowess to his well-known capacity for being unpredictable. Surely he was aware of this mystique.

Beck shrugs: "I can't imagine that at all. I mean, I'm only unpredictable when I'm placed in a situation that I can't control."

Such situations have arisen constantly throughout Beck's career. His departure from the Yardbirds was precipitated by the fatigue and stress of constant touring in the States — "but I was much younger then in just every respect."

"It's far more under control now — touring and everything. For one thing, I'm a much better guitarist."

THEN OF course there was the notorious Jeff Beck group featuring Rod Stewart, which got completely out of control.

Stories of the mythical hate relationship that supposedly still exists between Beck and Stewart are numerous.

Now in a completely objective state of mind, the former was willing to talk about the partnership.

"I had very definite ideas obviously miscalculated move.

"If we had played Woodstock it would have been good. The band was really hot but we were so weary — there were all sorts of problems and we were just so sick of performing."

Straight after the break, Beck had his motor-accident which messed him up physically and mentally for a year.

The accident's most serious consequence was that it caused the cancellation of plans to form a band with Carmine Appice and Tim Bogart of the Vanilla Fudge.

"One night John Bonham, Pagey and myself were sitting around listening to records when someone put on the Fudge's 'Near The Beginning' album. When it came to the 'Shotgun' track it was a revelation, particularly Carmine's drumming. I just knew I had to work with that rhythm section."

"It happened that soon afterwards the Fudge had an argument and split."

Plans for a Beck-Bogart-Appice band were started immediately with Mr. Rod Stewart supposedly coming in on vocals. The project was hamstrung from the outset by complex managerial problems and eventually Beck's accident.

"When I'd recovered, Timmy and Carmine were in Cactus, while Rod had joined the Faces, all of which left me stranded."

Beck and the Fudge-men attempted a consolidation of their talents again on four different occasions. "All along it was understood by all three of us that we'd be working together. It was just the right time and place we had to wait for."

Beck meanwhile had formed the Jeff Beck group Mark II with Bob Tench on vocals, Clive Chaman on bass, jazz-classical pianist Max Middleton and Cozy Powell on drums. He expresses little feeling when talking about that particular outfit's career.

"It was a good band to get back in training with. It was a safe venture, y'know, they were all good musicians but . . ." he shrugs again.

His unpredictable nature manifested itself once more when the chance came to co-allize with Bogart and Appice. A new band was thrown together with that rhythm section plus Max Middleton and American singer Kim Milford. After a few dates, the latter two split.

All this left Beck with a three-piece band.

"Actually I like it this way. It's better tour-wise — less people to worry about."

"I think the thing got under way at the Oval gig. I mean, we were really nervous, but we just went on and the crowd really liked us. It was a genuine thing — we played badly but they picked up on what we were doing. From then on . . ."

"All I can say is that I'm really happy. This is the best band I've ever been a part of — the dream band, if you like. It's more comfortable than the Yardbirds or the last two bands."

Beck smiled. He looked happy even though the next day he had to fly out to play another American tour — "27 gigs in 28 days".

Quietly he disappeared back down towards the garage to do some more work on his car.

about what I wanted to play after I left the Yardbirds — I wanted my band to sound like this and I wanted Rod to sing and I just didn't want any arguments.

"Rod was without work when I approached him — he was sitting around the 'Cromwellian', just idle y'know. He really didn't believe I wanted him in the band mainly because he had this bad reputation — it was as bad as mine for not turning up."

"I mean Baldrey used to say in the Steam Packet days, 'Well, I don't know if Rod's going to turn up tonight or not'. The first rehearsal worked out O.K. — mostly bum bass-players until Ron Wood, who was a guitarist for the Birds, volunteered his services. Then Nicky appeared and we were all set."

The "Truth" album was recorded just as quickly — as an attempt to duplicate the projected stage-act. Its success was such that Beck claims it to be his most representative album so far.

"It was done when Mickie

Most was away on holiday." (About his business relationship with Most, Beck only stated "I don't think it was a complete disaster, but it was almost complete").

"Our first American tour was really good — our act was really together. We wanted a definite sound — very raucous and tough — and Rod had exactly the same ideas as me."

"I like his kind of vocals — the rough, screeching sound like Buddy Guy and Wilson Pickett. We achieved what I considered to be a perfect blend."

"I mean, Rod's a star. There's no way around it. I mean, I was put off with his image to start with — everyone was saying, 'Well, I like his voice but boy, is he strange', y'know. It's his weirdness that's made him what he is now, I suppose."

THE PRESSURES of the second Beck group American tour were such that the band split just before a projected key-gig, the Woodstock Festival. This was another

TONY TYLER CHECKS OUT THE NME ROADSHOW BAND. . .

GEORDIE—Northern wit and fine music

IT'S ALWAYS nice when you're able to be complimentary about a group; all the more so when they turn out to be something totally different from what you originally expected.

Living in London — and working among yer actual rockanroll stars, national and international — gives one a disproportionate sense of what's actually going down.

Super-smoothies and dolled-up imagemakers are a far remove from music, and it takes the appearance of an honest-to-goodness working band from beyond the metropolis to bring one down to earth with a sense of proportion.

Geordie are such a band.

Home-grown Newcastleers all, Geordie are currently fronting the NME/Red Bus tour — which is, as any devout NME reader will know, throbbing its way from campus to campus in an effort to bring music to the people. For free.

Geordie do it well. At the London appearance of the Roadshow last Wednesday (see review What's On front), they captured the mood of the notorious Marquee audience with a blend of professionalism, northern wit and fine music.

Somehow I'd expected something else — an ultra-commercial neo-Lindisfarne perhaps, but Geordie were a mixture of completely different ingredients.

Guitarist Vic Malcolm, tall and unmenacing, plays not a million miles from Mick Ronson in his filling and expert control of the melodic side. "I've never seen Mick Ronson" confesses Malcolm. So much for superstardom, but his playing don't suffer any.

Perhaps the strongest character onstage is vocalist Brian Johnson, whose Pato-like looks and zaniness quickly establish rapport with audiences. Johnson and bassist Tom Hill were together in a group called Buffalo before meeting up with Vic Malcolm — who writes most of Geordie's material.

They claim — via the dubious authenticity of a PR handout — to be obsessed with "commercial" music. This conjures up all sorts of horrid images but the music certainly is commercial. And good.

Their new single "Don't Do That/Francis Was A Rocker" was released recently and has been gaining much heavy airplay via the good offices of T. Blackburn, who had it as a Record Of The Week. Unusually good taste for Blackburn.

As a working provincial band, Geordie have a few . . . not hard words about the music press . . . but less than flattering. They feel that what goes down in the columns of the major papers bears little resemblance to music as it is understood outside London.

Which is one of the reasons why NME (The Paper With A Conscience) has sponsored the travelling roadshow.

But really, they don't need more than a helping hand. They're a very good band, they've got the right attitudes, they're full of Eastern promise and northern wit and they should make out just fine.

SPECIAL REPORT BY ANDY GRAY

an Keen, and his programme ector, Ken Evans.

The Luxembourg Grand Prix becoming more and more important with producers and arts alike. Each record selected for the final gets many plays on radio Luxembourg and is performed on a massive TV show, seen in 12 countries via the Eu-vision link (but not in Britain for some unknown reason), and in addition to introducing the seven records in the competition, Stars Of The Year awards giving another six top acts into the programme. This year we saw, besides Slade, such delectable girl singers as Vicky Lean-dros (TV award), and Israeli film star-singer Daliah Lavi (representing Germany); double acts Stone and Charon (France), and c & w orientated humorists Mouth and MacNeal (Holland), plus Luxembourg's own C. Jerome.

As happens each year, a big party went from London as guests of Radio Luxembourg, who entertained us royally from the moment of take-off in the specially chartered Luxair champagne flight to the Duchy until touching down two days later at Heathrow airport again.

Alan Keen, aided by Ken Evans, Godfrey Morrow (Sales Manager), Jimmy Parsons
(Press Officer), Tony Churcher
(Sales) and beautiful June Bryant (Alan's P.A.) proved perfect hosts throughout, and once we got to Luxembourg they were assisted immensely by John Barter, the station manager out there, and his djs —
Tony Prince, Paul Burnett, Kid
Jensen, Mark Wesley, Bob
Stewart and Dave Christian.

The large party comprised,
besides those already mentioned, Chas. Chandler (manager of Slade), Zac Lawrence and Mike Alexander (MDs), press people Judith Simons,
Mike Ledgerwood, Alan Walsh,
Kim Thorne, Fid Backhouse,
David Porter and Ben Cree.

Record executives included
Colin Burn (EMI), Wayne
Bickerton (Polydor), Dick
Rowe, Don Wardell (Decca),
Johnny Wise (Pye), Geoffrey Everitt (MAM), Dave Most (RAK), Muff Winwood (Island), Don Percival (Phono-gram), Dick Leahy, David

Bridger (Bell), Gerald Black,
Jan Olofsson (Young Blood),
Eliot Cohen (Red Bus), Glyn
Evans, Dave Margerson
(CBS), and Lyndon Holloway (RCA).

Song celebrities Eddie Blackwell, Roger Greenaway, Tony Hiller and Bill Martin (and Johnny Mercer?) proved very entertaining, along with agent Barry Perkins, business consultant Barry Kirkham, and Bay City Rollers' manager Tam
Paton. And let's not forget those important people, the roadies — Graham Swinner-ton, Ian Newnham, Robert Wilson and John Jones.

Needless to say parties at the Holiday Inn (where we stayed, sunbathed and swam), at the Cravat, Commerce and Gourmet restaurants, and night clubs like Charleys or the Blow Up disco were eclipsed by the celebrations after the announcement that British records had taken one, two and three in the honours list. Champagne corks really popped that night.

Under the Influence

THIS WEEK RAY JACKSON

MY FIRST influence in music was when I was about twelve — a single called "Last Train To San Fernando" by JOHNNY DUNCAN AND THE BLUE GRASS BOYS. It was the first blue grass music I'd heard, even if it wasn't the real thing.

EVERLY BROTHERS: "Cathy's Clown". That and a lot of the early Everlys' records I liked, purely because they had good melodies and harmonies.

Then there was DEL SHANNON with "Swiss Maid". Did you know he was the first guy to do double tracking on a recording? Great single that. After that, it was THE UNDERTAKERS with "Don't Want Much" — that influenced me because it was so different from anything I'd heard before. The first beat music I'd ever heard.

BO DIDDLEY: "Pretty Thing". His harmonica playing really was an influence. I went on from that to BIG JOE WILLIAMS "Elevator Woman" which was written by SONNY BOY WILLIAMSON.

AS FAR AS albums go I have to mention the BEATLES' "Please Please Me" — all the songs on it were great and it was fantastically interesting because it was really just British style rock 'n' roll. I remember buying an album called "Authentic Rhythm And Blues" by various artists including SLIM HARPO and LIGHTNIN' SLIM which was a really great album.

Then there was CHUCK BERRY — who could not include him? Singles like "Johnny B. Goode", "Roll Over Beethoven" and "Oh Carol". I used to include all of them when I was in a small band called the Zulus.

LOVIN' SPOONFUL: "Didn't Want To Be So Nice" and "Didn't Want To Have To Do It". Singles like that were great because they brought all the blues influences together with modern rock. They were good at it all — melodic songs — everything.

JOHN MAYALL: "Bluesbreakers". Especially the track called "Key To Love".

BOB DYLAN: "Blowin' In The Wind", "Don't Think Twice It's All Right". First time I heard Dylan was on Radio Caroline — to me he sounded like one of the old blues guys. I couldn't believe he was so young when I saw his picture.

SONNY TERRY. He's the man who influenced my harp playing the most. If I had to name a track it would be "Beautiful City".

CHARLES SHAAR MURRAY BEMOANS THE STRANDED GENERATION ...

IT WAS rock critic John Mendelsohn who once said that he was too old for the Osmonds but too young for those nice McCartneys. He could just as well have said that he was too old for Grand Funk but too young for Archie Shepp, which is about the way I feel.

This is no time, it appears, to be a 21-year-old rock and roll writer.

No time at all, now that there's a generation of 14-year-olds who haven't heard of the Beatles.

In a sense, your musical tastes are formed in mid-adolescence. One generation grew up on Charlie Parker, Dizzy Gillespie and Miles Davis, another on Elvis Presley, Buddy Holly and Jerry Lee Lewis, the next on the Beatles, the Stones and the Animals (not to mention the Yardbirds), the next on the Cream, Hendrix and Zeppelin (with a brief detour in the general direction of Black Sabbath and Grand Funk). And the next...

So now it's 10 years since "Love Me Do" and there's a whole lot of people who are only just discovering rock and roll music. They don't really know what went before and they don't really care, and why should they? They want to get down and get into what ever happens to be nearest and whatever looks like fun.

So Mama we're all crazee now, and the Starman says let all the children boogie. And that brings us, neatly if somewhat abruptly, to "The Children Of The Revolution".

The whole Rock Generation Gap dilemma was pin-pointed for me a few months back as I was clambering my way out of the pile of abusive letters I received after bombing "The Slider". It ran, in part: "So what if Marc Bolan steals riffs from five of ten years ago? I wasn't around then, and as far as I'm concerned he's the original".

Rock on, Children of the Revolution

So when "School's Out" comes on the radio, today's 14-year-old gets the exact same vibe from it that yesterdecade's adolescent did when he heard "My Generation", and the musical similarity between those two songs is no accident.

So Mick Jagger outraged the parents of the '60s by acting like a spotty inarticulate lout, and these days David Bowie sends the mums and dads of 1972 into a state closely resembling nervous hysteria by swishing round like the Oscar Wilde of the 20th century.

Good ol' rock and roll terror, fear and loathing at "Top Of The Pops", dope, sex, vandalism, treason, murder, rape and terrorism — there's nothin' quite like it for freaking out the elders. But what happens when you suddenly find yourself a freaked-out elder?

What happens when you're bored stiff by Black Sabbath and find T. Rex a joke? What happens when you start telling yourself that Uriah Heep just aren't as good as the original Animals, or that Slade aren't a patch on the Yardbirds? Then, baby, you're a rock and roll suicide, and how do you live with that?

When the children of the revolution find themselves stirred to the depths of their being by music that leaves you cold, when your old heroes are remembered as amusing relics, or worse, forgotten, then where does that leave you?

Do you try hard to get into the new music, or do you go home to your sound system and drag out "The Most Of The Animals", "Five Live Yardbirds" or "Disraeli Gears" and sigh about how there wuz giants in them days?

Maybe I'm being unfair. When there's live groups to be seen, young audiences are going to draw their heroes from the people they can see working for them, playing for them. Few of them are going to care about groups that no longer exist.

A couple of years ago I used to laugh at the Teds for hanging on to the fashions and music of the late '50s. No more for that. Me and too many people I know are still as tied to 1968 as any Ted is to 1958.

I can see myself now at the Wembley Stadium 1982 Psychedelic Revival Show, when Keith West's original Tomorrow will reform for the gig, Eric Burdon and Scott MacKenzie will sing about San Francisco, Arthur Brown will do "Fire" and Julie Driscoll and Brian Auger will rip me apart with "Wheels On Fire". Terrible, terrible.

But rock on, children of the revolution. Keep on doin' it because none of us would have it any other way. Marc gave you a song to give you pride in yourselves, and whether I think it's a lousy song or not, it's still a song which will mean a lot to the new boogiers. We had our songs, you need yours, and whoever gives them to you is owed a debt of gratitude by all of us.

Rock on, children of the revolution. Just you don't forget the revolution, that's all.

TRIUMPHS AND TRIBULATIONS OF JEFF COLLINS

THIS is a tale of dedication, of overcoming all the odds, the barriers, the disappointments and the frustrations. Jeff Collins was a dental technician. He had always sung and his family, particularly brother Larry, encouraged him in his ambition to become a professional singer.

Jeff thought his break had come when an Opportunity Knocks victory gave him a place in Britain's Knokke Festival team a couple of years back. It proved to be something of a disaster.

"I just wasn't ready," Jeff admits. "I had never worked in front of an audience let alone a jury before."

So Jeff came home to learn his trade the hard way. Larry persuaded his parents that Jeff had talent enough to warrant a try at the big time, enough to make Larry give up a fairly lucrative taxi business and devote his time, energy and money to managing his young brother.

What followed was heart-breaking. "When I read about big superstars lighting their cigars with five pound notes," says Jeff, "it makes me sick." We were chatting in a Fleet Street pub, Jeff making a glass of cider last for 40 minutes and Larry making a pig of himself on two orange juices.

"It's not that we don't like drink," Larry explained, "just that we got so used to having to go without one, we naturally asked for soft drinks. In the clubs we'd have to leave right after Jeff's act for fear that someone would ask to join him for a drink. We didn't have enough money to buy one back."

Jeff went out as support cabaret, getting paid as little as £5 a spot some nights.

"People just don't realise how difficult life is for an unknown," he says. "Larry and I are experts now at surviving on five shillings a day. Some days we had a cup of tea and a roll in the morning and that was it for the day."

"When we did have a few bob for food it was the lorry drivers' cafe for us."

But as if the financial hardship wasn't enough, they had to put up with terrible musicians, crooked club managers, drunken, loutish audiences and one stupid social secretary who thought he'd booked an opera singer and docked Jeff's money the second he went into "Jailhouse Rock".

"There was one night," Jeff recalls, "when the pianist was playing the same few bars over and over again whatever I was singing. I went across to him and asked him what was up. 'I'm sorry,' he said, 'I don't read London music'. I looked at the sheet on the piano and he had the bloody thing upside down."

"In the end you begin to think of yourself as nothing more than a gap between the bingo sessions because that's how the clubs and the audiences see you. Imagine in the middle of a number the bingo caller comes on stage, just grabs the mike out of your hand and says to the audience: 'We paid twelve quid for this lad. D'you think he was worth it?'"

"I've wanted to give up after nights like that but Larry has kept me going. He won't hear of admitting defeat and going back to being a taxi driver."

Larry Collins, it would seem, is a hustler of the old school. He sat hour after hour, day after day in the outer office of a MAM agent, making a quiet nuisance of himself until the agent finally got the message.

Too good

Jeff's recording career has been hindered by traumatic experiences. An EMI executive told him his voice was too good.

"He was very nice about it," Jeff tells wryly. "He said I had the looks and the boyish appeal of a Peter Noone but I could sing and that was a bit of a handicap. That knocked me for six, being told you didn't really have a chance because you were good at the thing you were trying to do."

Then there was the time a record company man scarpered with all the tapes of a very promising session. "That was heart-raking too," Jeff says, "but by then I was getting used to it."

Then there was the time in Sunderland where he was paid off, told to vanish after his first spot and given only half his money. "If even the biggest star tells you he's never been paid off, he's either never played Sunderland or he's a liar."

"I don't know what it is about Sunderland but they eat entertainers for breakfast."

There is now light at the end of the tunnel. Jeff's new Polydor single "Only You" — the old Platters hit — is selling steadily. A Former 208 Powerplay, it could well take a nibble at the charts.

"Naturally we're hoping for a hit," says Jeff, "but it's already sold more than I thought it would so I've been given a big boost. I can't give Polydor enough praise either. Up there I'm treated like a star with a string of number one hits."

"They hold the door open for you, everybody's polite and full of encouragement. At last I feel there are other people on my side."

"And they don't take the price of my cups of tea off the royalties." And he spoke that last remark with the sure knowledge of one who has definitely paid his dues.

CASSIDY at least HE sees through all the phonies

Interview by PAUL BURNETT

PAUL BURNETT: David, how's life changed for you over the last two years, since this started to break out for you?

David: I don't think it's changed my personality, I don't think it's really affected me that way, like anything else it's a job, and you have to treat it as that, I think I'm able to adjust to whatever comes my way.

I've had to move a few times because things got a little bit out of control at the places where I was living, I have a really nice situation now, I can't go out too much but I can cope with things like that, I am really not a raver, I'm not out running over town and boogieing a lot.

Paul: It must get a bit frustrating for you though.

David: Sometimes.

Paul: What about in London for example. Here you are, you really can't go into town, else you'd be mobbed. Does this make you annoyed?

David: Not annoyed. I mean for everything that comes your way there is a price to pay. I can't allow it to get me down and depress me, because look at the positive side of it.

Paul: Any star in the world would give his eye teeth for that, and you have got Tower Bridge to gaze at. In Los Angeles, David, do you find that the girls do break in from time to time and write messages in lipstick on mirrors and things like that?

David: You know I've had some incredible experiences with them, they've found my car parked out on the street, just by pictures that have been taken I suppose.

I remember I had a haircut one day, and I came back and inside there was like a poster and on my windshield was written We Love You, We Love You and Here's Our Phone Number, and they wrote it on my windshield.

You know funny things like that happen, I think it's fun, it's all positive.

I have to say this without hyping anybody. I really do love being here, I love the people here, I mean the girls are just beautiful.

Paul: "Cherish" is one of my favourite songs of yours, how does it rate with you?

David: I love it, I loved it as a song when it was recorded in 1967 or so. It was my first solo hit in the States, my first gold record alone, it was the title of the album, and it was released on the back of "Could It Be Forever" here in England.

Paul: David, could you tell us about a typical average day in your life in Hollywood?

David: A typical day, it's usually regulated pretty well. I get up around 6.15 in the morning and I scrub myself up a bit, and I go to the studio. I have to be there by about 7.15-7.30, and we shoot from then on to about 1 p.m., have a little lunch and then shoot until about 6.30.

Then from there I go to dinner for about an hour or I go to the recording studio, and we record usually from three to six hours, it all depends.

Usually I get out about 11.30-12. Then I go home and put my little head on the pillow and start again!

On the weekends I'm usually out on the road doing concerts and things, but I've been doing concerts a lot for the past year and a half, I think I'm going to go back and settle down and just do a few this coming winter.

Paul: What about eating and things like that? Do you find you cause it's so easy to run yourself right down. I try to get two or three meals in a day.

Paul: You have a big hit here now called "Breaking Up Is Hard To Do". How does that rate with you?

David: Well I love it, it was a Neil Sedaka song and it's a good track, and I was really pleased it was successful over here.

Paul: You now have another record out and it's been a favourite of mine for five or six years, ever since the Rascals did it. I mean "How Can I Be Sure".

David: It's one of my favourite songs. It came around the same time as "Cherish" did. The first time I ever heard it I was just glued to it, I mean it really drew me right in and it was favourite song way back then and I always thought I'd like to sing it.

I never thought of recording it really but when it came around of thinking of material to do I said to my producer in the States let's just cut it.

It came out very well and it was a big hit in the States and I guess it's doing pretty well here. It's a beautiful song.

questions at one time. The other day I was sitting on the boat and there were about 15 people, it was like a machine, one after the other. It gets a little rough sometimes.

Paul: Do you have first impressions of people David?

David: Sure, I try to take people on a horizontal, on that kind of level, hold out my hand and if you touch me nice your good and if you touch me cold that's not so good.

It's difficult. I think that everybody without knowing has little prejudices, you know, inside our heads.

If something rubs us up the wrong way we close up and say I'm going to watch myself with that person. I'm very aware of people who woo me because I'm who I am.

Paul: It must be really difficult to put this into the right perspective.

David: It's not difficult doing that because I can really tell. It's just kind of disturbing and it kind of makes you lose faith in people a little bit. There are a lot of good folks out there, but sometimes running into someone who is deceiving, it becomes really a drag.

Paul: When do you think we'll see you back in Britain again?

David: I'm going to do a concert tour here in the spring, early spring hopefully. I'll be finishing work in the States on the television show probably in December, and I'm looking forward to coming back. I'll take a little vacation and then do a big tour here and maybe in Europe and Australia and Japan.

JEFF COLLINS 'ONLY YOU'

JACKSON 5

A little disturbance on the line...

IT SEEMED easy enough: "Phone this number in America at 9.30 pm our time and ask for Michael Jackson in Rehearsal Hall 5."

On the dot of 9.30 I got through. "You want Michael?" asked a suspicious female voice. "Who are you? What do you want?"

I answered this interrogation loud and clear and after about 15 seconds the chirpy voice of Michael Jackson came on the phone demanding to know exactly what I'd told the suspicious voice. I tried to emphasise that previous arrangements had been made by Motown in Britain to interview him.

Jackson M. would have none of it. "I don't know about that. Phone back in an hour. Ask for Reggie Wiggins our road manager. I can't talk to you." I hung up thinking this treatment a bit strong from a 14 year old.

Hanging round for a further hour, at 10.30 I put down my knitting and got through to Mr Wiggins, who was duly apologetic for the inconvenience, explaining that Michael had to wait until he arrived before he could say anything. It put me in mind of suspects being questioned by the police refusing to say a word until their lawyer arrived.

Nevertheless I still wasn't able to speak with Michael. Instead I got two of his older brothers, Jermaine and Jackie.

Speaking first to Jermaine we got talking about their upcoming visit to Britain.

"We're really looking forward to it," he said. "We've never been to England before and are all very excited about it."

"But the most important thing we'll be doing there will be the Royal Variety Show and we're very honoured at having the opportunity of performing before the Queen. Far as I can remember we've never played for anyone so important before.

"Our youngest brother Randy who is only 10 will be coming over with us. But it won't be his first time on stage. He toured with us in the summer so he's quite a professional now."

"As for our schooling we're having to bring a tutor along with us on this tour, and all of us except Jackie will have to spend three hours a day studying which is a drag. But we're not going to miss out on sightseeing because of it."

Suddenly there's a lot of movement over the telephone wires, a voice breaks in and says, "Here's Jackie," taking me completely by surprise because I'd been in mid-conversation with Jermaine.

Anyway, we spoke about the solo careers of himself, Jermaine and Michael.

"Well I'm doing solo recordings now and I've an album called "Jackie" which will be released in the States shortly. Jermaine has one out already."

"As for Michael he's had a great success with the album and single called "Ben" just lately which is the soundtrack for the movie. The single was No.1 in the American charts last week."

"Our last single and album in the States (both called 'Looking Through The Windows') are still selling well. The single has just been released in England."

"And we've a new American single called 'Corner Of The Sky', which was taken from the Broadway musical 'Pippin', and that is just taking off now."

"By the way we're still calling ourselves the Jackson Five even though Randy's joined us."

Then as suddenly as Jackie had taken over from Jermaine, I was told they had to go off to rehearsals and goodbye and hope to see you when we're over. Uhmm...

Sabbath

SO YOU PLAY lead guitar in a heavy rock band and you've just torn America to pieces for the umpteenth time. . . .

And your group is one of the most popular and most controversial ever to set pick to strings in that benighted country and your tours are sell-outs and your records score gold discs with the regularity of a hiccup and the rock press thinks your music is mindless, brutal drivel for mindless brutal people, but your audiences think you're just — uh — far out, right?

And then you announce that you're not going to do any more American tours for quite a while and people come swarming in and they say "Tell me, Tony Iommi, why ain't Black Sabbath gonna tour no more in the States?" and you sit there looking healthy in the palatial offices of World Wide Management drinking tea.

TONY IOMMI'S looking singularly undepraved these days. He's cut his hair down from its previous splendour into a nice Prince Valiant bob (and if that means sweet nothin' to you, then check out some old comic books), and he's trimmed his moustache real horrorshow. He's got this really ruddy tan, and apart from his clothes (velvet scoopneck and pants, and a rather incongruous pair of brown boots, plus of course the inevitable crucifix) he looks as if he spends more of his time in a gym or on a building site than on a stage or in a studio or a plane or a hotel or . . . a management company office in a clean neighbourhood.

In short, the man looks as if he leads a decent life, and we all know how rock stars spend their time, don't we? We all read the News Of The World and Rolling Stone and we know how these depraved degenerates get their diseased kicks, don't we?

Well, he wasn't slitting the throat of a yummy young virgin, so I figured I'd either come to the wrong place or I'd spent the previous evening boning up on the wrong band's records, but the guy was so nice and friendly that I just couldn't bring myself to be nasty.

I mean, how many bands say "Thanks for coming" to journalists?

I'm just a sucker for olde worlde courtesy, but the fact remains: Tony Iommi is a nice guy.

So why this announced two-year lay-off? "Well, two years, what's that? It's just got to the stage where we've done so many tours over there in the last couple of years, so we're just going to take a break 'til April."

"We'll do one in April and after that we don't know. It's

NEWS ON 208

Live-Three Dog Night

A SPECIALLY recorded concert by Three Dog Night will be transmitted on Thursday, November 2, at 12.30 a.m. in Kid Jensen's programme.

The broadcast will last approximately 1½ hours. Special permission has been given by ABC Dunhill and the group's manager Bill Utley to present these tapes exclusively on 208.

The tapes, recorded in Mannheim, Frankfurt, and Copenhagen, will eventually be made into an album.

At the time of going to press negotiations are underway with Santana for a 'live' concert. Further details will be announced in the musical press shortly.

Jackson tickets

A CHANCE of a lifetime to win tickets for the forthcoming Jackson Five concerts.

During the week commencing

The Luxembourg John Woolfe Dragster that now holds the ¼ mile land speed record.

MICHAEL JACKSON — tickets for the groups concerts in a 208 competition starting next week.

October 31 Radio Luxembourg will be holding a competition, and the lucky winners will each be given two tickets to the Jackson Five concert nearest their area. So listen hard, there are thirty tickets, and twenty Jackson Five albums to be won!

Dragster record

THE RADIO Luxembourg John Woolfe Dragster has smashed the ¼ mile world land speed record. The new record, set by driver Dennis Priddle, now stands at 6.7 seconds for the ¼ mile run with a terminal speed of 220 m.p.h.

To celebrate the occasion the Mettoy Toy Company have produced a beautiful model in their Corgi Toy range which will be on sale in most toy shops from the beginning of November.

Plans are also afoot to exhibit the actual world-record breaking dragster at several of the Tamla Disco Shows.

208 Tamla Disco hit

AFTER COMPLETING six of the sixteen dates on the 208 Tamla Disco Show, the total audiences have now reached a figure of 8,233, taken against the average Tuesday night attendance of the venues of 4,370.

The six towns so far visited are Doncaster, Birmingham, Reading, Brighton, Bristol, and Liverpool. The tour continues through to March in 1973, and the dates are as follows: October 24, Top Rank Suite, Southampton; November 14, Top Rank Suite, Croydon; November 21, Sheffield, Top Rank Suite; November 28, Cardiff Top Rank Suite; December 5, Swansea Top Rank Suite; December 12, Hanley Top Rank Suite; January 9, Sunderland Top Rank Suite; January 23, Plymouth Top Rank Suite; February 6, Watford, Top Rank Suite; February 20, Preston Top Rank Suite.

Disco to Scotland

FOR THE first time Radio Luxembourg DJs will be making 'live' appearances in Scotland.

Bookings have been received for Edinburgh for Fridays the 3rd, 10th and 17th November, and in Glasgow for Sundays, 26th November and the 3rd and 10th of December. Also appearing will be one of Scotland's top group's Salvation, whose first single will shortly be released.

Rosko heads production company

FAMED AMERICAN Disc Jockey, Bill "Rosco" Mercer, who recently joined the Radio Luxembourg broadcasting team, has been appointed Production Director of a new division within the British Service of Radio Luxembourg.

The new division will produce jingles, commercials and also offer script writing facilities to Radio Luxembourg's existing and future advertising clients. The Service, headed by Rosko Mercer, will also make its facilities available to anybody else interested in commercial radio.

Bill "Rosco" Mercer has worked in a creative capacity for all the leading agencies in the U.S. for many years. He will continue to produce radio and TV commercials for various companies in America.

"Rosko" as he is called, was voted 'Radio Man Of The Year' in 1970 by the American Broadcasting Industry. His programme on Radio Luxembourg can be heard each Saturday morning at 1 a.m.

TONY PRINCE IN DEFENCE OF THE OSMONDS

I BELIEVE the circle has been completed. What began as an arc with Frank Sinatra and Johnnie Ray progressed and formed itself as follows (keeping to the main line of the various other influences which were not picked up by the mass): Bill Haley; Elvis Presley; The Beatles; Stones; Dylan and Hendrix.

The circle of popular music took twenty years to become fused within itself. I do not believe there are any remaining major avenues of pop to explore and I hold faith in this statement because of the past four years in which an orgy of talent has been unable to produce a new approach to pop that would, for a time, become popular.

What we can easily forget, those of us lucky enough to have grown within the aforementioned circle, is that we progressed along slowly from Johnnie Ray to Hendrix; Zeppelin; Dead; Floyd (I could go a step further to a duo calling themselves "Suicide" but they're really out on a limb somewhere in New York).

If I had had Floyd's music thrown at me when I was diggin' Elvis I'd have thrown up — today I can dig some of it and battle to grasp fifty per cent of what Dead are into.

In a world that is striving for a peace formula it hurts me to see and read of so much misunderstanding amongst music lovers, there seems little give and take — from the mouths of people who have climbed on to the Hendrix (a.d.) plateau come words of hypocrisy, self regard and dissension!

I wonder if the bourgeois intellects who sneer at the mere mention of the word Osmond, who crease up when the name Cassidy is uttered, who place their fingers in their ears to block out "Children of the Revolution", ever realise that they too had once hummed along to a similar and simple form of pop music?

The fact is that once pop music becomes too complicated a new generation will jump up from behind and demand a cease fire which is what is happening now.

The screams are back, the old excitement, the fans. The "New Rock" are here and there's no room for "Old Rock" at an Osmond, Jackson 5 or Slade concert because "Old Rock" had its turn — and how!

I recently returned to Las Vegas to interview the Osmonds. They were playing Caesars Palace just a mile down the strip from the Hilton where one week earlier I had interviewed Elvis. It has been a long, long time since I was so entertained by one act, unfortunately though they will not be entertaining their British troops in the same manner.

The Osmonds have two acts, their concert show for "New Rock" and a general cabaret show for whoever. I saw the latter and was utterly impressed. The youngest brother Osmond is nine-year-old Jimmy, the oldest is twenty-two-year-old Alan and there are four brothers in between.

Their cabaret act includes every vaudeville trick you've ever read about (Yes! Including tap dancing, juggling and drum solos).

The only thing I want to say is that I believe that the Osmonds will soon cause fan-mania in Britain only ever before seen at the births of Beatles and Presleys. And I won't puke once!

208 Winter Hours

With effect from Sunday, October 29, Radio Luxembourg's broadcasting hours will be: Weekdays 6.45 until 2.30 a.m. and on Sundays programmes will commence an hour earlier.

A deep respect for the Old Colonel

■ From 208 Times p.3

silent. I had the feeling I was witnessing something historic! "Make sure you give 'em a real swell party now Tony!" he stood to his feet and bugged a further two hundred Elvis singles at me, "See you tonight at the show, I'll take you, Todd, Ian and their wives and maybe a couple fans down to see Elvis just before the show so be ready!"

I've never been as ready for anything in my life, I couldn't even eat my steak. I'd asked the Colonel if I could introduce Elvis on stage and just before the meal he'd sat down next to me and told me it was on and for the first time in years the butterflies ran wild within me!

Tom Diskin the Colonel's right-hand collected me and took me backstage past the guns and security net. Two huge stage hands sandwiched me and took me centre stage where they lifted the heavy gold drapes for me to walk out before the two thousand diners who were just into their brandies as I took hold of the microphone.

Fantastically when I mentioned that I worked for Radio Luxembourg there was a very definite reaction and I saw the glitter of diamonds as hands applauded in warm acknowledgement.

The speech was basically a thank you for the beautiful reception the Americans had awarded us, no less the generosity of Elvis and the Colonel. Two hundred Britons were joined by eighteen hundred Americans as I asked for 'an E', 'an L', 'V', 'I' and 'S'.

"So now ladies and gentlemen to what we're all here for tonight, the only singer singing on earth who has become a legend in his own time — this is the Elvis Presley Show."

Having already seen the show four nights previously I knew what was to happen. As I walked back through the curtain the forty-piece orchestra was assembled, the Sweet Inspiration stood in the wings, the lights out front were dimming. As good as their act is I would miss it this once, the Prince was about to meet the King.

Deep below the stage of the Hilton Hotel is another world. The decor is out of an Ian Fleming novel. We were taken into a small suite. At one end was a bar, Dean Martin could well have stocked it, against the far wall was the largest colour TV I have ever seen, facing this was a black and white monitor reflecting what was happening on the stage above us.

There was a lot of excitement although stifled and suppressed with the stupendity of the occasion. A large guy at the bar eyed my travel bag with the protruding microphone suspiciously, I saw him talk to one of the Colonel's assistants who whispered in his ear and pointed across to the Colonel.

If I did anything wrong it was that I took the Colonel's disguised permission for the interview too literally. By now though I respected the 'Old Colonel' in the extreme and, although he wasn't wearing his glasses as he'd promised, I still didn't wish to step out of line.

As a result, I had no way of checking my mike level and the microphone was always a good three feet away from Elvis. Here now is what was said during my meeting with the world's greatest musical influence — Elvis Presley. Suddenly he was there talking to two of his friends at the door. I stood anchored to the spot, one of the invited fans gave a small shriek, I almost harmonised with her!

The Colonel broke the spell. Elvis moved further into the room as the Colonel took Todd and I by the elbow and walked us across to him. Elvis: "Thanks for comin' all this way, I sure appreciate it. I always wanted to git over there but never did get the chance. I will do one day though!"

He shook hands with each of us (ten in all) and greeted everyone with an almost whispered, "Pleased to meet you."

Todd Slaughter's wife, Vicky, wasn't having any messin', as Elvis took her hand she stretched up on tiptoe and planted a kiss on his cheek. He smiled broadly and did a double take as if she'd really shocked him.

I imagine the atmosphere in that room was similar to the MBE awards. Two things struck me (1) he's bloody handsome (2) he's shy!!

Suddenly everyone had met him and there was a free for all with the official camera man being called for and the unofficial cameramen, (our lot), clicking away furiously.

Todd and I stood next to him with the NME award for all his poll successes over the years. It had been specially made by the NME and the only one ever presented. El. accepted it and told us to pass on the message that he was really grateful.

The photos done with and I found myself standing shoulder to shoulder with him, I suddenly remembered why I was there. Prince: Your working very hard, Elvis, has it been a strain at all, two shows a night and the special three a.m. one Saturday?

King: "It's not a strain, I enjoy it. I get a thrill everytime I go out there, it's always like the first time. Every show is important to me so I always try to make it like it's the first time."

Prince: "Have you any more movie plans?"

King: "No, not outside the one soon due out about the tour we just did of the States, it's a kinda follow up to That's the Way it is."

Prince: "How about your musical plans. Is there any chance we'll be hearing any albums of Elvis blues or rock?"

King: "We're recording in Memphis as soon as this show's over. S'funny you should ask that, we're looking for the songs and it's gonna be blues with some rock, it really is a coincidence you should ask that question!"

Prince: "Speaking personally that's the best news I've heard since they let you out of the Army. You only ever did one true-blooded country music album, considering that your roots were in country music I wonder do you still go for this type of music?"

King: "Depends, depends on the song, if I like it or not."

Prince: "No plans for another country album in the future then?"

King: "Not right at this moment, no."

Prince: "Receptions like this, meeting your public. How do you really feel about it?"

King: "It's great. S'my only chance to meet them I only wish I could meet more of them."

Prince: "I suppose you know there are another one hundred and eighty British Fan Club members out front. The Colonel was really kind to them all, even met each of them in his suite this afternoon."

Elvis: "I'm glad, say howdya like the way he's done that place out up there?"

Prince: "Well it's pretty obvious you're not walking into Tom Jones's dressing room!" (Elvis laughs, he's been signing autographs continually).

King: "Do you know Tom?"

Prince: "I knew him when he still had coal dust on his vest!"

Elvis: "He came down for the late show Sunday mornin'."

Prince: "Do you get a lot of stars dropping in on you?"

King: "Two thousand every show!"

Prince: "Uh?"

King: "The fans Tony, they're the only stars to me!"

On the TV monitor behind us the Sweet Inspiration were into their Aretha Franklin medley, it was obviously getting near spitting time. Elvis looked up from an autograph book, I believe I was the only one to notice it but it was a split second glance from Elvis to one of his sidekicks and bedlam broke loose as they herded everyone out of the room.

King: "I'm sure sorry I can't spend longer with you folk but I gotta change and go work for a livin'!"

Farewells; handshakes; tears and Elvis silk kerchiefs for everyone. Somehow amidst the confusion Elvis had disappeared. The Colonel came across to ask if I'd got what I wanted. I was just about to tell him that I hoped I had when Elvis reappeared. "Elvis," said the Colonel, "Just have a shot taken with Tony here." The cameraman was called for but had split. Luckily though Todd Slaughter had his flash camera out and ready. The photo you see on page 2 of this 208 Times is the end product. Prince: "Thanks Elvis. I hope your getting a splintering of the happiness your spreading."

King: "Thank you. Be sure and tell 'em I wanna go over there first chance!"

A hand shake. An ambition completed.

because of too much mental and physical strain."

Exactly what is it that makes American tours so peculiarly exhausting?

"It's the travelling and the fact that you're involved with so many different things when you tour the States. Hopping about from one side to the other, you know, hotels every day.

It just generally gets you tired.

"Travelling and sound tests day in and day out. It's great doing the gigs, doing gigs is no problem, but it's just all the things leading up to doing them. We had things on our minds, personal problems."

THERE WAS also the problem of singer Ozzy Osbourne's voice going. "We thought we'd go over anyway. So we did a couple of gigs and his voice went. We had the doctors in, everything, injections, throat sprays, the lot.

"Anyway, the doctor said he should have time off, and he did take time off for two days. So we thought it's getting better, we'll try again.

"So we did another gig, and then he had to have a week off. It just pisses me off, hangin' about. It had been just all rush from the beginning, and we just wasn't ready for it.

"And then when his voice did come back, we was going out on stage wondering if it was going to go again, all worried like in case it goes. Eventually it all came to a head, and the last night I collapsed at the Hollywood Bowl.

"We'd just finished the last number and I come off and I'm just gone. The doctor was in, and he said we'd have to go home, so we had to cancel the dates. I didn't know anything about it. Completely out, I was."

So you see, it ain't all bright lights in the rock biz. Did any of this lunacy actively affect B. Sabbath's music?

"It does in a way, I suppose. Things come out in the music. Your scope widens. Like from the early days of Sabbath up until now, we've seen a lot of the world, we've seen a lot of everything that goes on.

"Like in the last album there's a thing called 'Laguna Sunrise', which is over there, Laguna Beach, it's about the beach and the sea. You just write about things which are in your environment at the time."

Has the band's increasingly affluent life-style changed their music?

"Well obviously we all live a lot better. In the early days it was a lot rawer because of the environment we were in. We were all down in the dumps, and that had a lot to do with it. It's certainly changed the music.

"At the time of the first album we was all pretty much pissed off as I said and it was all really aggressive. The new album is different really. It's basically heavy but it doesn't have that rawness like the first one."

B. SABBATH'S music publishing company bears the exquisitely subtle and enigmatic

CHARLES SHAAR MURRAY looking for flames

name of "Rollerjoint" and the new album carries a dedication to the "COKE-Cola Company Of Los Angeles."

Does this denote a strong orientation towards (gulp) DRUGS?

"You can take that Coke thing two ways. We did an advert for Coca Cola for the TV. I don't want to say more than that, actually. It can be taken two ways. 'Rollerjoint', that's also something that can be taken any way. I think it was Lord Patrick Meehan who thought of that — our manager. It was his marvellous idea to 'roll a joint'."

Does he get different vibes off English audiences as opposed to American audiences?

"Not really. We really enjoy working in England and we enjoy English audiences. It's probably different because it's our own. We used to think, 'Oh great, we're going to the States', but now it's 'Oh great, we're going back to England'."

What got B. Sabbath into writing about Satanism?

"Things we've written about in the past have just been things that's happening, but people don't mention really. Not particularly things that's happening to us, but things that's happening in the world.

Like the things that we've written about have been like... Satanism and a good bit about drugs and the bomb and things like that. It's just things that's happening in general that we've written about, not just things that's happening to us.

"Geezer's (Geezer Butler)

had dreams like... this particular instance he had a dream that I was stuck in a lift and couldn't get out and all this kind of stuff, and right next day I got stuck in a lift and couldn't get out." He laughed heartily.

"Which was really weird because the night before he'd had this dream and he'd told me about it and the bloody thing happened the next day. Just things like that. It's happened a few times.

"There have been others but I can't remember what they've been. He's got this thing, he can dream of things and they'll happen. Even in the early days with the things we got into on the first album, there was like something pushing us into doing those sort of things. It just sort of come out like it was meant to come out."

Suitably impressed, I asked if B. Sabbath considered themselves to be a socially reflective band. "I'm lost! You mean like — say it again?" More hearty laughter.

Do you consider yourselves a band who's gig it is to reflect what's happening to people? "Oh, I see. It's just things that we think that we write about that people don't write about really. People understand when they listen to the music.

"A lot of people, when we first went over to the States, realised how different the band was. It was like a new thing for them, because we was writing about things that was actually happening that people didn't really write about. Satanism and one thing and another. People really got into it. We was trying to throw things out to people so that they'd realise."

Goodbyes were said, and the amiable Mr. Iommi descended into the basement.

I tried and tried, but I just couldn't imagine the flames of hell licking around his feet as he slowly vanished from sight. It was just too much of a strain on an already severely over-taxed imagination.

THIS MAN GLITTER

I'm crude, I'm raw, he tells ROY CARR

AFTER SPENDING the best part of the 60's rocking in semi-obscure, a somewhat-straight-looking Paul Raven recently took it upon himself to redirect his destiny by undergoing a most dramatic personality transplant.

The transfiguration successfully completed, the once-reserved Raven — now in the glitzy guise of Gary Glitter — started all over again. But this time it was right at the top, with the hit single "Rock and Roll Parts 1 and 2". In years to come I have the feeling it will constantly re-emerge as the future generation's much requested Golden Oldie.

Butcher than Bowie, more mobile than Marc, but far less decadent than Alice Cooper, the sparkling presence of Gary Glitter strikes an extremely commercial compromise as he comes on double-strong like a blast from the past.

Against tub-thumping drums, the fact is that glittering Gary has proven to be the logical descendant of such cutely-named extroverts as Gary U.S. Bonds, Bunker Hill and Chubby Checker. They all projected intense excitement by pounding out total body music.

NOT THAT GLITTER sees himself as a blast from the past.

"I'm most definitely no 1959 rock 'n' roll singer," insisted the gyrating grunter, when I talked to him at his agency's office. Slightly more sober behind the scenes, the man who has often been heard to enquire "Do you want to touch me" in public is more inclined to decline to during the course of private interviews. For our meeting he chose a subdued black velvet two-piece with only a few diamond studs betraying his vocation.

"He told me: 'It's just that as a kid I grew up when there was a certain dirtiness about music. Everything was full of excitement. And the very big rock stars... well, they were really glamorous.'"

"Jerry Lee Lewis, for instance, and Little Richard, Presley, Bo Diddley and Chuck Berry are still big stars today mainly because they've still managed to retain that extra special glamour."

Emphasising that he had attained his present stature more by sheer accident than premeditated intent, Glitter offered a somewhat strange paradox.

"If you, or anyone for that matter calls me a pop star, you're the one who's saying it... I'm not.

"I'm just getting up there on stage in front of an audience, and doing something that I've always wanted to do. It's been my ambition to get somewhere from the time that I first started singing.

"One thing is certain, I really don't know what the image of Gary Glitter is... maybe someone could tell me."

IN MANY WAYS, the reason why so many may have clutched glittering Gary to their bosoms may have something to do with the fact that he is a stark reflection of many people's darkest and most closely guarded secret.

Like them, Gary Glitter is the definitive gesticulating mirror poser.

C'mon now... own up. How many times have you put on a record by your favourite rock hero, placed yourself squarely in front of your wardrobe mirror, first making sure that the bedroom door is locked, then, with dedicated fervour, faithfully impersonated an artiste of your choice in an idolising and yet narcissistic pastiche?

There's a little bit of all of us inherent in the Glitter grinning, which is why, at the mention of his name, so many smile. Few sneer.

Glitter openly admitted to this mirror-dancing practice when I put it to him. He also told me that at the age of 10, when he WAS Elvis Presley, he went so far as to hang his tennis racket around his scrawny neck in order to give more credibility to his pelvic prancing and slack-mouthed lip-synching.

"I'm quite certain," he added, "that even Mick Jagger used to do just this before he became famous.

"I suppose a lot of my appeal must have something to do with clothes and that sorta thing, but I'm not really all that outrageous. You can walk down the King's Road any day of the week and see plenty of young kids who look far more outrageous than I could ever try to be.

"I can't stand people not looking at me when I'm on stage, though, which is why I don't work to the front row. I always work right to the very back of the crowd, so there's not one person in the place that I'm not holding.

"I'm not a head man one little bit... my music is purely physical. It's vulgar, it's crude, it's raw. But it's exciting. I perform the kind of music I personally enjoy. I like dancing, going to discotheques, jumping about and stamping my feet.

ADDS GLITTER: "I fall between being a Proby and being a Slade... I just go straight down the middle, and fill that very important gap that needed to be filled for a long time. A lot of people come along to see me for the first time just for a bit of a giggle. But they go away satisfied."

MANY AN ARTIST'S subsequent downfall could more often than not be attributed to the fact that he appealed to just one tightly-knit band of followers. Gary Glitter feels he gets to everybody.

"I would like to say that we just appealed to rock 'n' roll people, or just the teenyboppers — but we don't," he told me.

"Fortunately, we attract a whole cross-section. There's lots of teenyboppers, a whole bunch of jaded old rockers, and even a considerable amount of heads and freaks, who're pleasantly surprised with what we've got to offer.

"If I'm truthful, once you take into account that I'm always getting my clothes ripped off my back by hysterical girls, I suppose I've now become something of a sex symbol." He was trying not to sound too embarrassed, and in an aside he whispered: "Or that's the way it appears from some of the letters I receive..."

ORIGINALLY GARY GLITTER was no more than a name conceived out of a private joke between Paul Raven and his friends when watching "Rock Around The Clock" on TV late one evening.

But today Gary Glitter the person, Gary Glitter the act and Gary Glitter the star have taken on a positive personality of their very own.

"Gary Glitter was tongue-in-cheek to begin with," he told me as he talked about his alter-ego, "insomuch as the name was tongue-in-cheek. It's no longer that."

He offered an example as he accepted a cigarette: "When Engelbert Humperdinck first started out everyone was going around mumbling, 'Christ, what a stupid name'. But once he became successful he was accepted. The same thing has happened to me.

"Now, when I go to a hotel I've stayed at before, instead of 'Oh Mister Glitter, ha, ha, ha', it's 'Hello Gary'. You see, the laugh's not there any more. They've accepted Gary Glitter as a real person."

Even with his new-found freedom, this scintillating symbol isn't being allowed to run wild or to self-destruct. There's also a brain there, programmed to know what's right and what's wrong.

"On stage I always say to the audience: 'It was you who put me on this stage, and don't you let me forget it' — because they made me.

"I don't want anybody to let me forget it, either. If ever I do, I want someone to kick me up the arse and say: 'Hey you'.

"It's easy to get out of touch with what's happening. I've seen it happen to others, and I'm making sure it never happens to me. That's why, after a show, I insist on talking to at least 10 or 15 kids out of the audience. I don't want to creep off and be put to bed.

"I want to know what they saw in me. I want to know what they like. And more important still, what they don't like.

"I'M NOT TRYING to please everybody, because I'm not God. Therefore it's good to surround yourself with a certain amount of controversy.

"I don't want to be Gary Glitter all the time. It's impossible to be that flamboyant every hour of the day, except that at the moment there's not much time for privacy.

"While I'm talking to you you'll notice I'm not dancing on the table or leaping about all over the table. I would be, at a Press reception, because that would be the me everyone wanted to see.

"Everyone has a fantasy. Gary Glitter is mine".

He'll be around for a long time. And in my book, Gary Glitter's alright.

SHA NA NA: "Rock & Roll Is Here To Stay". (Kama Sutra). These 12 men of varying shapes and sizes have now emerged from being a cultist curiosity to a fully fledged headlining attraction. Sha Na Na are worthy of every superlative bestowed upon them.

When it comes to re-interpreting other artists' material, you have to be as good, if not better, than the original — and this is the standard the Shas have attained. However, even on record, they are so much more than just a clever Xerox, in that they give full impetus to each and every Golden Oldie.

With Sha Na Na's albums now selling well, Polydor have re-packaged their very first album of 14 all-time classics.

With sure-fire precision, the dirty dozen workout well on such tunes as the Earls' "Remember Then", the Del-Vikings' "Come Go With Me", Big Bopper's "Chantilly Lace", the Diamonds' "Little Darlin'", Mr. Penniman's "Long Tall Sally", the Monotones' "Book Of Love", Danny and the Juniors' "Rock And Roll Is Here To Stay", Sonny James' "Young Love", Dion and the Belmonts' acne anthem "A Teenager In Love", the Cletones' "Little Girl Of Mine", Colonel Parker's prodigy's "Heartbreak Hotel", Mark Dinning's crass "Teen Angel", the Rays' "Silhouettes" and the Flamingoes' "Lovers Never Say Goodbye".

Only one gripe. When this album was first put out, the lyrics were included. Second time around they are not. Still, the music's there. — Roy Carr.

JERRY LEE LEWIS: "Explosive" (Contour). A low-price set, ideal for connoisseurs. These tracks date from 1965 — not exactly Lewis's heyday, but still before he began to revert to more basic country roots. There are some classic rock standards — "Johnny B. Goode", "Roll Over Beethoven" and "Mabellene" among them. Not his peak best — but still exciting and dynamic. And cheap. — Derek Johnson.

FRANK ZAPPA AND ABNUCEALS EMOUKHA SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA: "Lumpy Gravy" (Verve Select). According to Frank himself, "Lumpy Gravy" is a "curiously inconsistent piece which started out as a ballet, but probably didn't make it". It was recorded in early 1967 and was the subject of much wrangling between Capitol (who commissioned it) and MGM (who eventually released it). Eric Clapton is on it. This is all the information that can be presented at this time.

A while ago I thoughtlessly characterised this album as "off-target". Oh, how could I be such a fool! It was on-target for what Zappa wanted to do, but I was nowhere near the target. I didn't enjoy "Lumpy Gravy" when I first heard it, and I still don't dig it now. If you have sufficient faith in Uncle Frank to buy this album in the hope that all will be revealed at a later date, then go ahead, bro' and good luck. Maybe if Frank re-issues it again in 1977 we'll have caught up with it.

Hey, Mr. Polydor — whatever happened to "Rueben And The Jets"? That I can understand. — Charles Shaar Murray

CHAIRMEN OF THE BOARD: "Bittersweet" (Invictus). Although this includes their current single "Elmo James" and their last hit, "Working On A Building Of Love", at least there's more than 40 minutes of music — quite an exceptional playing time these days.

Now down to three since their re-formation without Eddie Custis, the Chairmen of the Board are becoming more adventurous in their choice of material, as evidenced by the lengthy anti-war song, "Men Are Getting Scarce", which advises proponents of women's lib that they will soon be truly liberated since there just will not be any more men left.

The bulk of the writing is by the Board's General Johnson and his writing partner

SHA NA NA: deserve all the praise.

Greg Perry, while the famed Holland - Dozier - Holland teaming, who own Invictus, were responsible for "Working On A Building Of Love".

Interestingly, the arrangements were handled by McKinley Jackson and H.

Barnum, the later being longtime jazz big-band leader.

Up till now, Invictus albums, and Chairmen of the Board offerings in particular, have tended to be very samey in concept. Taken individually, most of their tracks sound good. Lump them together, and they end up merging into one another.

IMPORTS

APOLOGIES FIRST. The manager of One Stop's Dean Street (London) shop says that, as far as he knows, the Abkco singles mentioned in this column recently were only available from One Stop at the time I wrote my piece and my assertion that they were generally available at import shops was incorrect. Now on to other things...

Seems to be a flood of early Dion recordings. I mentioned the "Greatest Hits" compilation (Laurie LLP2013) the other week, but since then I've spotted several other Laurie items by Dion all waiting to be collected by those who remember his Belmont days.

"Together" (LLP2016), "Alone With Dion" (LLP2004), "Runaround Sue" (LPP-2009) and "Lovers Who Wander" (LLP2012) are titles I've spotted and I'm sure "Sings To Sandy" (LLP2017), "15 Million Sellers" (LLP2019), "Wish Upon A Star" (LLP2006) and the initial "Dion And The Belmonts" (LLP2002) are in somebody's stock.

Incidentally, the Belmonts also share a Spin-A-Rama album with James McCleese (Jimmy Soul) and this is in one or two import shops. McCleese had a million-seller in "If You Want To Be Happy."

Big sales-puller at present is "Mar Y Sol" (Atco) a double-album of the first Puerto Rican Pop Festival. Dr. John, the J. Geils Band, Herbie Mann, John Baldry, the Allman Brothers, Emerson, Lake and Palmer, Osibisa, Nilzinger, Jonathan Edwards, Cactus and the Mahavishnu Orchestra are the names.

Michael Jackson's "Ben" (Motown) looks a nice one. The title song comes from a new Cinerama film, but there are more familiar songs aboard in "Shoo-Be-Doo-Be-Doo-Da-Day," "My Girl" and the Thom Bell and Linda Creed song "People Make The World Go Round."

What else? Well, one can try "Little Feat" (Warner) on which Sneaky Peter Kleinow and Ry Cooder guest, "Crusaders 1" (Blue Thumb); "The Moments' Greatest Hits" (Stang); or Bonnie Raitt's album for Warner Bros. on which she intersperses blues by such as Sippie Wallace and Robert Johnson with songs by Stevie Nicks and Paul Siebel.

Joe Osborn, Jim Gordon, Larry Knetchel, Jim Webb and Johnny Rivers all helped to put the first 5th Dimension album together back in 1967. In 1972 they're still together and have an album — Johnny Rivers' "L.A. Reggae" (UA) — to prove the point.

"THE OSMONDS LIVE" (MGM). Those of us over the age of consent may wish to ignore the clockwork Osmonds. Together with the Partridge Family, the Osmonds — who appear to breed like rabbits — constitute the horrific ultimate in America's commercial music culture.

Be that as it may, you can't ignore the fact that the Osmonds are creating the same kind of mass hysteria as the Monkees did.

Here is another fact. Every sub-teen phenomenon that has been foisted on the unsuspecting public since the Beatles hasn't possessed the talent of John, Paul, George and Ringo. To me, each new scream machine has had less to offer than its predecessor. And with this album I think someone is scraping the bottom of the barrel.

Let's face it, the Osmonds are the honky Jackson Five, and on talent the Jackson Five win hands down.

Save for a couple of songs tailor-made for the Osmonds, the five white tornadoes go through their well-drilled paces by performing sub-standard covers of other artists' past glories.

In the wonder of 16-track stereo screamarama, the Osmonds hack out a Motown Medley, Buddy Miles' "We Gotta Live Together", offer very unsatisfactory interpretations of quality songs like "Your Song", "Proud Mary" and "You've Lost That Lovin' Feelin'", while Donny drones "Go Away Little Girl".

If that's not enough, the youngest member of the Osmond household, six year old Jimmy, squeaks out Uncle Elvis's "Trouble". Is nothing sacred any more?

The album and the Osmonds' only saving grace is the powerhouse aggregation backing them up. Indeed, I'd prefer an album of just the backing tracks, because the bass player, drummer and guitarist lay down some of the finest rhythm work I've heard in ages. Such a shame that musicians of this calibre are forced to earn a crust this way.

OSMONDS: A PALE JACKSON FIVE?

I don't like this album, I don't like the Osmonds, but then that's only one opinion. I'll concede that I'm outnumbered.

To paraphrase Cheech and Chong: "And now back to our movie, the Jackson Five Story starring the Osmond-Brothers".

— Roy Carr.

GARY GLITTER (Bell). So what has made Gary Glitter shine so brightly on the world's charts in such a short period of time?

It's because Glitter sings the kind of rock songs that you and I have all made up at one time or another and then warbled merrily while soaking in a Radox bath wondering why they were not challenging Marc, David and Donny to be Top Of The Pops.

The chord sequences are thoroughly predictable, the lyrics so wonderfully inane and the rhythm infectious. Ah, the true spirit of hub-cap rock 'n' roll. It's Wild Man Fischer-type mouth music with a raunchy grating back-up band, and I love it.

Not since Gary U.S. Bonds

has anyone had the pluck to hammer home such crude music into our brains so effectively. It's base, it's nasty, often as raw as an exposed nerve, vulgar and as mindless as sweaty body music can possibly be.

Gary Glitter and with Mike Leander (his producer and co-song writer) have taken the basic three-chord trick and the other instant rudiments of rock, beefed them up and placed all the emphasis on maintaining an intense mood which is as simple as thrashed out four-in-the-bar drum beat can possibly be. Which isn't as easy or as artless as it appears on paper. It takes know how, discipline and guts to be as simple as this.

"Rock & Roll Pts 1 & 2" and "I Didn't Know I Loved You" proving just this point. "Rock On" consolidates this and so too do his covers of "Baby Please Don't Go" and "The Clapping Song". As a first album pushed out in the wake of two smash singles, it's acceptable. However, I feel that with the kind of planning that made his singles such big charters his second album could prove to be really somethin' else.

Personally, I don't think Gary Glitter is a two-hit wonder. He has a place in pop music and anyone who can get teenyboppers, rockers, freaks and the NME editorial staff to indulge in some good old fashioned foot stompin' can't be bad. Twinkle On.

— Roy Carr.

RALPH MCTELL: "Not Till Tomorrow" (Reprise).

There lie certain doubts in my mind as to whether Ralph McTell was ready to make this album just when he did. Agreed, it's a year since "You Well-Meaning Brought Me Here", but he still doesn't seem comfortable on all the songs. And at least two of the tracks come nowhere near to what he is capable of.

On first listening I found most of the album particularly hard and unusual to get into. Since then many of the cuts have come through to me.

Unlike "Well-Meaning", this album is just about pure McTell; only using bass and drums to add strength throughout, apart from his own instruments, and an occasional organ, sitar and recorders. It suggests, as do some of the tracks — blues numbers like "Zimmerman's Blues" and "Birdman" — that he is re-examining a path in style he followed on his early albums.

This possibility also comes through in his writing style. The beauty and sensitivity he showed on things like "Factory Girl" is present again strongly on "Sylvia" (with piano accompaniment), "Barges" (with the fluent melody), and "Gypsy" (with a pitter-pattering guitar line).

McTell's ever-improving guitar technique is evident on "First Song". And there's also a new guitar trend on "This Time Of Night", where his strumming, and, in fact the form of the number and its arrangement, bear close resemblance to Cat Stevens' style.

Apart from some faults, such as the poor mix for "Birdman", and some poor material — "When I Was A Cowboy", "Nettle Wine" and "Another Rain Has Fallen" — McTell has managed to offer us something outstanding again.

— Tony Stewart

JIMMY STEVENS: "Don't Freak Me Out" (Atlantic). Most first albums can be dumped in the bin, especially ones accompanied by PR notes saying they're greatest thing since the amplifier.

This one's rather different. There was no hype, and Stevens himself claims not everybody will freak out on it.

Apart from producer Maurice Gibb laying on the strings on practically every track and smothering some of Peter Frampton's guitar work, the album is quite good. Though I'd like Stevens better with a small band instead of the swooning orchestration.

Straightforward tracks like "Bye Bye Love" and "Don't Freak Me Out" were the ones I particularly dug.

Stevens' vocals have soul and strength, but also some tender moments as on the opening to "Tears" and "Sweet Child Of Mine". However, he makes a poor effort on "Girl From Denver", the only track I can't stand.

Except for "Bye Bye Love" the material is all self-penned. He shows he's conscious of melody and good lyrics, and this could have been brought out more with better arrangements. People like Frampton and Mike Kellie help him along a lot. He should prove worth listening to.

— Tony Stewart

ATACAMA

'The Sun Burns Up Above'

CAS 1060

The combination of good music and intense political motivation, performers and writers joining to reach and persuade public opinion, is now full-blooded tradition in Latin America, and particularly in Chile. Music is as effective a media as any when artists are prepared to play for little or nothing in villages impoverished and illiterate. ATACAMA's second album to be released on Charisma (The first was 'Atacama' CAS 1039) features songs from the central and southern regions of Chile, including three from their acknowledged 'master', Violeta Parra, who died tragically some years ago.

STRING DRIVEN THING

'String Driven Thing'

CAS 1062

A discovery in the highest tradition of Charisma 'firsts' (i.e. Lindisfarne, The Nice, Genesis, Van der Graaf Generator). A remarkable first major appearance at the Reading Festival '72 has been followed by a period of private and close co-operation with producer Shel Talmy. A strange line-up: The superb violin of Graham Smith the sturdy vocal of rhythm guitarist Chris Adams, the voice and driving concert tambourine of Pauline Adams, the fine bass work of Colin Graham worked under Sir John Barbirolli in the Halle, before moving on to the Scottish National, where he began 'moonlighting' on gigs with Chris, Pauline and Colin in the Glasgow area.

LORD OF THE RINGS

Bo Hansson

CAS 1059

Around five years ago quite a few British musicians were admiring a Scandinavian duo called Hansson and Carlsson, an organ/drum outfit ambitious beyond its time. Hansson, composer and keyboard man, retired from the gig scene to an island off Stockholm. Reclusive and other-worldly, he was seduced by Professor Tolkien's 'Lord Of The Rings' trilogy. Out of the seduction was born a series of haunting rhythms and melodies. In large part this 'Lord of the Rings' suite was recorded on that same small island off Stockholm, with Hansson's own organ and Moog Synthesiser dominating. The album includes a colour portrait insert of the rarely photographed Professor Tolkien, taken by Snowdon.

PLAINSONG — A 1972 CLASSIC ?

PLAINSONG: "In Search Of Amelia Earheart" (Elektra). First I took a look at the lyric sheet, and then at the two biographies of Plainson. Then I settled down with the collection of newspaper stories about that heroic lady aviator's last flight. After about half an hour's engrossed perusal of these most valuable documents, I realised there was an album in the package as well, so I went and listened to it.

This last was commenced not without some small degree of foreboding. After all, "In Search Of Amelia Earheart" is a concept album, and the days when the very mention of the phrase "concept album" was enough to send any reasonably sensitive music journalist screaming for shelter are by no means long gone.

All things notwithstanding, this is a startlingly fine album. Plainson (or P. Song) are more than just Ian Matthews' new band, or even Ian Matthews, Andy Roberts and two mates. It's these two aforementioned gents, plus Dave Richards and Bobby Ronga, and this, their first recorded work, is pretty remarkable.

If you missed CSNY and Matthews' Southern Comfort, but found America too insipid for words, then look no further than Plainson. I could be wrong, but for what it's worth "In Search Of Amelia Earheart" is going to be one of the very important albums of the next few years.

It's an extension of the country rock/harmony thing that got so stultifying a couple of years back, but so revitalised that it once again becomes a workable concept.

There are in fact only two overtly Earhart songs on the album. The others are either new Matthews songs, with "Call The Tune" particularly outstanding, or songs by such as Jerry Yester and Judy Henske and Paul Siebel. I must confess that my favourite cut is "Yo Yo Man" a perfectly charming version of a song by a gentleman named Rick Cunha, which cropped up on a lovely but neglected Mason Williams album called "Home Grown". Mason Williams? That's right, Mason Williams and if you laugh I'll kick your teeth in.

Add to that a production by Sandy Robertson, ex-producer to some of the finest folk and acoustic acts in the business, and you have as good a potential classic as I've heard recently. This, the Steeleye album, "Ziggy Stardust" and the new Crows are probably the best bets for the classic 1972 albums.

It's been a long time coming, and worth every minute. Get this album. — Charles Shaar Murray.

GENESIS: "Foxrot" (Charisma). There's plenty to be said about Genesis' third album for Charisma — most of it complimentary. They're a clever, adventurous band with undistressing tastes and a nice knack for imagery.

They have the ability to skirt the edges of pretension without ever quite toppling over.

Genesis images and instrumental backdrop, charmingly outlined on earlier albums (notably "Nursery Cryme") are here developed to a much larger extent. On most levels this succeeds artistically; on one or two vital areas, it... not exactly fails, but falls short.

Compliments first: we now have a brilliantly-broadened instrumental Genesis with vaulting arrangements and typical Peter Gabriel lyrics.

The lyrics — like those of King Crimson's Peter Sinfield — are classically-inspired yet flavoured with the need to pass social comment. Like Sinfield in later stages, Gabriel unfortunately stands in some danger of becoming a parody of himself. But on the whole his lyrics are appropriate.

A word here on the sleeve. The complicated nature of the lyrics makes recourse to sleeve notes important — yet the chronic printing and bad proof-reading suggest that someone didn't take enough care with this vital ingredient.

But that's not Gabriel's fault, and his eerie, chanting voice still contains that quality of raising the hackles at times. And the better lyrics (such as "Get 'Em Out By Friday") are full of wicked satire and Private Eye-type pessimism. Yet I wish that whoever selected the obscure titles (what about "As Sure As Eggs Is Eggs/Aching Men's Feet") would realise that private jokes sometimes alienate.

Side two is one major epic-length piece with another awful title ("Supper's Ready") — yet this is the main reason for the album — or its main justification. In scope it is almost magnificent. Almost. Genesis have traditionally been a band of longish songs linked by orchestrated instrumental passages: on Side Two (I won't use that title) the instrumental ability (notably Tony Banks' various keyboards and the much-improved Steve Hackett's Frippish guitar work) really shines.

On first hearing, "Foxrot" contains none of the melodic triumphs that Genesis have created on earlier albums (such as "The Fountain Of Salmacis" from "Nursery Cryme"); but, as a whole, it is surely a more impressive work. There's still a lingering feeling that perhaps it's time to explore a few new avenues but "Foxrot" contains naught to be ashamed of and much good music and clever words — Tony Tyler.

MOST OF THE many phases of Noel Scott Engel are briefly recaptured by "This Is Scott Walker Vol. 2 — Come Next Spring" (Philips Sonic cassette 7176-036). "Sons Of" and "If You Go Away" reflect the period when every second song seemed to be by Brel. "Will You Still Be Mine" and "Impossible Dream" recall his attempt to woo mum and dad via the telly, and "Til The Band Comes In" and "What Are You Doing The Rest Of Your Life?" presents the Scott of the 70's — still, incidentally, very much like the Scott of the 60's.

If they'd only added a couple of tracks from "Scott 4," the album on which he sang his own songs, then tape buyers might have got some idea of how Scott might have developed if he'd stayed with rock instead of opting to join the Bennett-Sinatra syndrome. Still, at £1.75, this cassette's certainly worth a try.

I'VE MENTIONED a few deluxe cassette machines recently, so now let's talk about one of the most inexpensive units.

The machine is the Fantavox: it offers both record and playback facilities, piano key controls and jack sockets for an A.C. adaptor, a remote control microphone and an earpiece.

It's attractively styled and comes complete with the mike, earpiece, a C-60 cassette and four 1.5 volt batteries for around £10.99. Which is pretty good value.

IT'S GREAT to find another helping of "Motown Disco Classics" on tape. "Volume 2" continues in the same non-stop manner of its predecessor — a real party maker.

SOUL IS A term that emanated from jazz. I think I first heard the term in connection with the work of pianist Horace Silver, who frequently offered up an amalgam of blues and gospel that had a certain commerciality.

Ramsey Lewis is the man who's really made the formula pay off.

Now "The Best Of Ramsey Lewis" appears as a Chess cartridge (7739-100) and 8-track men can enjoy "The In Crowd," "Hang On Sloopy," "Wade In The Water" and all those other samples of funky fluidity. It makes easy-listening and can be quite truthfully described as middle-of-the-church music.

SINGLES

ROCK AROUND THE CROC WITH ELTON

Reviewer
DANNY HOLLOWAY

ELTON JOHN: "Crocodile Rock" (DJM). Put on your blue suede shoes... This song takes over where good old rock and roll left off as Elton's fine vocals front a vigorous shimmy rhythm. There's touches of the Marvellettes' "Please Mr. Postman" and the Diamonds' "Little Darlin'", but all-in-all it's the most natural and infectious tune he's recorded.

JEFF BECK: "Hi Ho Silver Lining" (RAK). Mickie Most dips into his golden vault to assemble a three-track maxi of old Beck stuff. "Hi Ho" is strictly non-Beck stuff, with him singing (for lack of a better description) a light, catchy tune which features a short awkward guitar solo based around repeating the melody. The flip side includes "Rock My Plimsoul" with Rod Stewart on vocals and the guitarist's tour-de-force piece, "Beck's Bolero", written by Zep's Jimmy Page with the mad Moon manning the drum kit.

STYLISTICS "I'm Stone In Love With You" (Avco). Following the success of their "Betcha By Golly Wow", they stick to the same dreamy and slick pattern. Although Tony Blackburn tends to categorise this as "easy listening soul", I find it very hard to listen to. The saccharin strings, mushy lyrics and light and airy voices lack guts; the whole production is too smooth.

FARON YOUNG: "Seems Like I'm Always Leaving" (Mercury). It's rare when a freak hit like "Four In The Morning" is successfully followed up, but I find this song to be much more enjoyable and commercial. It's an up-tempo song with a strong chorus and Young's voice is strong and confident.

STEALERS WHEEL: "Late Again" (A&M). A very fine song with Beatle-ish harmonies, produced by rock veterans Leiber and Stoller. It seems more like an album track than a single, because the general public seem to have a hard time getting behind anything that doesn't have a forceful beat.

DESMOND DEKKER: "Beware" (Rhino). It's a pity that a singer like Dekker has teamed with a company that specialises in 'cleaning up' reggae for the mainstream pop market. It's an insignificant song and he's not singing at his best anyway, so it's really not worth writing about.

ELTON JOHN: the most infectious tune he's recorded.

SANDY DENNY: "Listen, Listen" (Island). I usually don't like Miss Denny's voice very much, but this well-structured song (which she wrote) should gain her a new audience. By coming up with the right song, her chances for single success are good.

TEMPTATIONS: "Smiling Faces Sometimes" (Tama Motown). I can't really write about the Temps with too much enthusiasm. Their recent line-up changes and their recent awakening of "awareness" has left them hurting. This song was originally a 12½-minute album track before producer Norman Whitfield stepped in with his scissors and snipped off nine minutes. It's a mellow and boring mid-tempo offering.

SHIRLEY BASSEY: "And I Love You So" (UA). Shirley's cabaret delivery remains unchanged as the dramatic strings and timid orchestra chase her through another field of love. Actually, she's quite good if you like that sort of thing, but I don't. By the way, there's a nifty 12 string guitar accompaniment throughout.

LOBO: "I'd Love You To Want Me" (Philips). This is the best thing I've heard from Lobo since his "Me And My Dog Name Boo" hit last year. There's a strong chorus based around the same three-chord sequence that has given birth to a million and one hits. The melody slightly reminds me of the Mac Davis song "Baby, Don't Get Hooked On Me".

PIONEERS: "I Believe In Love" (Trojan). It seems like these guys are frantically releasing singles every other week, trying to get back into the chart. This one is very simple, but unlike some of their songs, it's centred around a basic backing and the voices. There aren't any strings messing the whole thing up. The idea is a bit trivial, but that may enhance the Pioneers' chart chances.

FOCUS: "Hokus Pocus" (Polydor). Focus are a promising Dutch band who deliver a power-packed instrumental. There's thundering guitars and yodelling, and in one part it becomes quite similar to "Dharma For One" from the first Jethro Tull album. What it all amounts to is a modern day "Teddy Bear's Picnic" without let-up.

AL GREEN: "You Ought To Be With Me" (London). This must be about the fifth song since "I'm So Tired Of Being Alone", yet they've all sounded the same. Green has an unusually expressive voice and his arranger / producer, Willie Mitchell, is also a man of many attributes. So why do they waste their time rehashing the same song over and over again? Beats me.

JACKSON HEIGHTS "Maureen" (Vertigo). Here I have an excellent track of hardened wax. The crashing kick beat of the distant drums reminds me of Mike Giles, while Lee Jackson's bass sounds like a perculator. The voices and melody are effective and I hope this one makes a splash out there in Teenage Wasteland.

WINSTON FRANCIS: "Blue Moon" (Rhino). This is a reggae take-off of the old Marce's version of the Rodgers/Hart song. The treat lies in the bellowing baritone which belches a breathtaking performance throughout. With the current interest in raves from the grave, this could well make it again, because the up-dated arrangement has made it appealing by present day standards.

STACKRIDGE: "Anyone For Tennis" (MCA). First off, this is not the old Cream number. It is in fact, a reasonable facsimile of the jitter-bugging music during the roaring twenties. It's not a hit, but rather a teaser for their new album "Friendliness", due out soon. The B side, "Amazingly Agnes", is about a cow in a sort of reggae rock formula.

TONY HAZZARD: "Sweet Ruby Ruby Nite-Time (It's Time To Blow Out The Stars)" (Bronze). There's a good backing with a tinge of Caribbean influence as the drums jump between a reggae and rock beat with a steel drum break. Hazzard's voice is neither harming or complimentary to the over-all song. The song is a good one, but I doubt that it'll make it.

JOHNNY RIVERS: "Rockin' Pneumonia And The Boogie Woogie Flu" (UA). Success has always eluded Rivers here, but he was really big in America a few years back. Here he attempts a come-back with a very good version of the old Huey Smith song. His voice is shoved back in the production but the feel is quite nice. He takes the frantic rocker and paces it down to a funk signature.

IN A NEW SERIES called "Fours", Warner/Reprise and Atlantic have teamed together in releasing a collection of four-track maxis by 10 successful artists. Each package resembles a mini-album, with colour sleeve and photo and features four classics from days gone by. Each set sells for 59 pence. Due to lack of space, I've chosen to merely list the tracks as most of you are already familiar with them.

RAY CHARLES: "What'd I Say"; "Yes Indeed"; "I Got A Woman"; "Don't Let The Sun Catch You Crying" (Atlantic).

KENNY ROGERS FIRST EDITION: "Ruby, Don't Take Your Love To Town"; "Me And Bobby McGee"; "Rueben James"; "Tell It All Brother" (Reprise).

Hilda the homing Pigeon...

I MEAN TO say, it wasn't very thoughtful of them dragging little Barbara and Susie's grandma, Mrs. Hilda Woodward, back from a well-deserved holiday in Majorca, was it? Especially when she was having such a good time. Well own up, you don't get sandy beaches, a blazing hot sun and brandy for 10 bob a bottle in Coventry, well do you?

At such short notice and being more or less set in her ways, Hilda hadn't even bothered to dress up for the grand occasion, though of course she looked her best. Hilda does take pride in her appearance. That favourite old black and white turban hat and that nice green dress with the fur trimmed collar, that would do nicely. It's best to feel comfortable when you're in strange surroundings.

It wasn't so much the hat, nor the dress, nor for that matter her insistence on shaking everyone's hand that gave the impression that it was all a bit new to her. It was the cup of tea and the plate of sandwiches that Hilda was clinging to as she made her way with some trepidation through the music business reception throng of beautiful people breakfasting on chilled champers, deep-fried drum-sticks and calling each other "Dwarling" that first gave me the impression that this might just be a shade different from those coffee mornings back home in Coventry.

Still, this sort of thing happens when suddenly you're top of the nation's singles chart.

You've never heard of Hilda

Woodward? Well, she's not the kind who seeks publicity. She prefers to remain one of the two piano players in Lieutenant Pigeon — the cuddly grandma in dark shades who pounds out "Mouldy Old Dough" on "Top Of The Pops".

What does stardom feel like?

"It's absolutely incredible and this is a lovely cuppa tea," Hilda admits in the same breath, in a voice that reveals an accent as distinctive as the motor-car engines that originate from her part of the world. "To tell you the truth, I haven't come down yet," she adds.

Hilda's husband George couldn't attend this reception laid on in her honour by Decca Records.

"You see, he's an engineer and at the moment he's on nights."

But Hilda doesn't think he's missed much, because George is a quiet sort of person.

Up until now Hilda Woodward has enjoyed a small measure of fame as an accompanist round the Coventry cabaret and working men's club circuit. She also organises a choir of disabled people at the Enterprise Club, who do charity appearances.

Though the offers are starting to pour in, Hilda and the other Pigeons aren't planning live appearances. "I'm 52, and it's a bit hard to start doing one-night stands at my time of life."

I expect the rest of the lads in the band, who also appear under the name of Staveley Makepeace, must have told Hilda about the perils of living on a diet of M1 transport caff grub.

"Anyway," she continues, "I just haven't got the time. I've got the house to run and my club work to think of." What an amazing lady.

What will Hilda do when the Mouldy Old Dough comes rolling in via royalty cheques. "Well one thing's certain, I'm not going on a spending spree... I'm not that kind of person."

She ponders on something to splash out on. "I've always fancied a fur coat, so I might buy myself one, and I'd love to buy a television for the folk at the Enterprise Club."

By Christmas, world sales for "Mouldy Old Dough" could mean that Santa will be delivering a gold record to Hilda's home. This could prove to be a bit of a problem, too. Says Hilda: "We'd have to get the house done up first and then think of a special place to put... I'm glad you mentioned that."

Hilda's particularly pleased for her two grand-daughters, Barbara, seven, and Susie, six. "They're over the moon," she says in a voice that only proud grandmothers possess, but ponders the predicament, "but I'm afraid that they've now got themselves a rock 'n' roll grandma."

Well, when you come to think of it, there are worse things in life.

EX-BYRD

IN THE MIDSIXTIES, when English acts were 'top of the pops', the Byrds were the first Americans to successfully counter-attack on an international level. A naive outfit of peach-fuzz faces, they came together in LA when the Sunset Strip was developing its own scene. They were very promising musically and fate was on their side — they happened to be in the right place at the right time.

I met ex-Byrd Chris Hillman — seven years after — at his London Mayfair hotel suite last week.

Hillman's history starts with him playing folk on an acoustic guitar at the age of 14. Then he moved into country and bluegrass fields as a mandolin player. The Byrds all had two main things in common: (a) they came from a folk music background and (b) they'd never played electric instruments before.

Hillman told me: "The Byrds started out with David

Crosby, Roger McGuinn and Gene Clark as a trio. I knew Crosby and this guy who was helping them out called Jim Dickson, who had access to a studio.

Dickson rehearsed and taped them every night and I looked in to see them and said 'boy that sounds great. Two or three weeks later I dropped in again and this guy with real long hair was sittin' over in the corner playin' on boxes with sticks. They told me he was their drummer

(Michael Clarke), but he hadn't got his drums yet."

"So, anyway, they approached me and said 'Hey, do you wanna play bass?' I said, 'I've never played bass before, but yeah I'd love to'.

"When we got enough money to buy proper equipment, we cut some stuff which much later became the 'Pre-Flyte' album. The company went bankrupt so we went to Columbia and cut 'Tambourine Man', but Roger (McGuinn) was the only one who played on it."

Hillman stuck with the Byrds through their many line-up changes. Gene Clark was the first to go, followed by Crosby and Michael Clarke. It's said that McGuinn was a difficult man to work with. What made Hillman finally decide to quit?

"At that time we had management problems, and apart from that I was feeling very bored, I wanted to do something else. So I originally approached Roger and invited him to forget the Byrds and do something else. He said, 'I think I'll stick to it', so I just left.

"Roger built that group back up until they were really good. It's not the Byrds I knew; it's another group, but they're good."

After the Byrds, Chris teamed with Gram Parsons to form the first Flying Burrito Brothers. This was back in 1968, the same year that Dylan went to Nashville to record his country influenced "John Wesley Harding". The first two "country/rock" bands that I personally remember are the Burrito Brothers and Poco. It's interesting to note that these bands started at approximately the same time and same place — Los Angeles.

KEEPING STILLS COUNTRY STYLE

How happy was Hillman with the Burrito's music?

"I loved it at first, but we had our ups and downs. Even though the first album was not recorded right technically, and the sound was bad, I think there's a lot of magic in it. I really love it — it's my favourite record.

"I had fun in the Burritos. We had a very tight stage thing going, but we had bad management and the record company weren't very enthusiastic.

"I finally got tired of the band after two and a half years, and was just about to go when Steve (Stills) approached me. I'd learned a lot and had a good time, but I didn't make any money or anything. I won't ever appear on any more albums under the name Flying Burrito Brothers, I've sort of blanked the whole thing out of my mind. I might get together someday with Gram, but it won't be called the Flying Burrito Brothers."

And how did Hillman come to join Manassas?

"I ran into Steve Stills and he said that he was going to cut some country stuff on his album, and would I like to help out? So I said sure. So he called on me one day and I went down with Al Perkins. We were working on the road with the Burritos at the time, and we were doing the Stills thing on the side in our spare time. It was really fun and Stephen said, 'Hey, let's start a group'."

In Manassas Hillman is Stills' right-hand man. He writes, aids with back-up vocals and generally gives Stills assurance to front the group. Their voices form a natural harmony blend. It's good to see Hillman happy with a group, and not having to carry the weight of leadership as he did with the Burritos.

Of the music he had this to say:

"I like playing mandolin, but I love bass the most. I like simplicity — I don't care how fast or complicated something is. I go for simplicity in many aspects of music... in lyrics and in arranging songs. I brought the country influence to Manassas. Steve's aware of country music, but mostly he's into blues and things. But he does have a real good feel for it."

Hillman's a straightforward sort of character, so I wondered what he thought of the increasing weirdness of the rock and roll culture.

"Well, I like to hear good music. They can go out in chicken suits if they're going to boogie and play good. I'm not into the glamour, but to each his own. If they want to get dressed up and play with snakes, that's cool, but I just want to play some music.

"At first glance, when you see those guys you say 'what the hell?' But I got to talking with Alice (Cooper) one night and they're really nice guys. Frank Zappa does some strange things, but he's a damn good musician and he has a fine band."

Back to Manassas: Is Hillman aware that most people come to see Steve Stills rather than the band?

"Yeah, sure. At this point the band's name isn't really established the way he is but it's happening. When the album came out we couldn't bill ourselves solely as Manassas, because people wouldn't know who we were. So it's 'Stephen Stills and Manassas' until the name is established — we're hoping that'll be after the next album.

"The next album is a one-record set and it's a big step forward in that it's more of a group album. There's more of the group singing and writing. Fuzzy (Samuels) sings a song and Joe Lala is singing and writing. Dallas (Taylor) wrote a good song, and I've got some. The album after that will be even better. It's takin' time.

"Manassas is the best group I've been in. It's a lot of fun. I've never been in a group where the members have gotten along so well. We're all at the age where we've been in about 10 groups and we're all aware of what makes bands split up. And we don't want that to happen."

THE BEATLES yesterday

On the tenth anniversary of the band that changed the world, a random look-back at the Beatles through the NME files.

THEY WERE exhilarating days, those early days on Merseyside when a gut-punching band called the Beatles used to knock 'em cold at the New Brighton Tower and the Cavern and all those hallowed halls that went on to colour the fabric of rock 'n' roll.

Weren't these Beatles going to change the world? Weren't they already sharing the bill with Little Richard and the like?

And then it happened, ten years ago — God, ten years ago — on October 24, 1962. The Beatles were in the NME Chart. "Love Me Do" had crept in at No. 27.

The pride of Liverpudlians was fierce, intense and undaunted by the public's first only-grudging acceptance. We'd show 'em, those Southern ponces, and never mind all those gags about "the Cock roaches" and the suggestion that clog-dancing might be the real rage anywhere north of Watford.

I could maudle-on with stories of the time Epstein told me: "They'll be bigger than Elvis" (and I knew they were good, but I smiled); and the night I reviewed their first theatre show (at Liverpool Empire, for which they wore off-the-peg suits from Burtons); and times when they were dead-chuffed because they were in this week's "Mersey Beat" or had two lines in the NME.

But enough of this schmaltz. It's now ten years after. And these pictures from the NME vaults tell their own story of the rock 'n' roll band that shattered and re-built the ideals of a generation. — A.S.

Weren't these Beatles going to change the world? Weren't they already sharing the bill with Little Richard and the like?

And then it happened, ten years ago — God, ten years ago — on October 24, 1962. The Beatles were in the NME Chart. "Love Me Do" had crept in at No. 27.

The pride of Liverpoolians was fierce, intense and undaunted by the public's first only-grudging acceptance. We'd show 'em, those Southern ponces, and never mind all those gags about "the Cock roaches" and the suggestion that clog-dancing might be the real rage anywhere north of Watford.

I could maudle-on with stories of the time Epstein told me: "They'll be bigger than Elvis" (and I knew they were good, but I smiled); and the night I reviewed their first theatre show (at Liverpool Empire, for which they wore off-the-peg suits from Burtons); and times when they were dead-chuffed because they were in this week's "Mersey Beat" or had two lines in the NME.

But enough of this schmaltz. It's now ten years after. And these pictures from the NME vaults tell their own story of the rock 'n' roll band that shattered and re-built the ideals of a generation. — A.S.

NME Bus Rolls On

Front Row Review

THE SECOND of the NME/Marquee free nights last Wednesday was the main chance for the NME/Red Bus Roadshow, currently touring university and college campuses around Britain, to display its wares to a notoriously cynical London venue.

I'm happy to report that all went well — indeed admirably. The Roadshow — as devout readers of "What's On" will know by now — consists of three acts: Geordie, Yellowstone and Voice and Welsh singer Schunge together with his Scouse partner, Rob Ricardo. As events turned out, Yellowstone and Voice were away in Luxembourg for the night (they subsequently came third in the Luxembourg Grand Prix of Song) and it was left to the other two groups to make the running.

Nice; it was nice. Schunge (it rhymes with sponge) opened the show to a full Marquee house. A gentle, gnomish little guy with a soft — almost weak — voice and a habit of screwing up his face in agony to reach even moderately high notes, he proved to be a performer of rare charm and — that much misused word — charisma.

Backed by a top-hatted Ricardo on flute and broad grins, Schunge, with his unaffected guitar/voice style and his own melodic compositions, soothed the audience into a state of real peace. I'm not quite sure how he did it, but it was certainly an achievement. Ricardo's unpretentious flute and occasional counterpoint vocals gave the whole act an aura of gentleness that few achieve.

But for me the real surprise was Geordie. Somehow, from the biography, I'd come to expect a sort of Newcastle Sweet, wallowing unashamedly in commercial pop while cranking the handle of the minting machine under the table. Nothing further from the truth. They're a four-piece, sure 'nuff, and from Newcastle, sure 'nuff, but there the resemblance ends.

Geordie perform exclusively — apart from a tough little Gene Vincent medley at the end — songs of their own composition (courtesy Vic Malcolm) with excellent stage presentation.

They were nervous (London gig an' all that) but hit it well, laying it down with precision and a catchy feel that made them extremely popular with the audience.

Not exactly palm-of-the-hand days yet, but they'll return soon and in all probability do a Lindisfarne in almost every sense of the word — though they're nothing like Lindy's Farm musically. They're better.

Quadraphonic Smokebombs

SO I GOT UP, played me new Keith Jarrett record, opened the envelope containing two complimentary tickets to the Empire Pool, played me new Keith Jarrett record, and then sat down to listen to "Obscured By Clouds" because I'm always one album behind.

Dunno about this Pink Fluid. I dunno — but twenty or so Frenchmen can't be wrong. (I was surrounded by Frogs where my seat was, you see, and not only that — one of my fellow-countrymen turned to a mate of his halfway through the show and said: "Best group in the world, they are." This statement was so shattering, or boring, that the mate didn't reply, so the first bloke limbered up a bit: "Well, alright, name one better than them. Go on — name one." He's right you know. There's no answer to that — except that Keith Jarrett came Seventh Equal in the NME Keyboards Poll).

's I say, I dunno about this Pink Fluid. I liked some of their records and Syd Barrett was a gasser (hopefully still is).

And I like their homely Englishness. No, America-is-where-the-money-is Grahnd Piahno stuff from these lads. Course, they've rubbed machine-heads with the best (a choir here, an orchestra there, some Famous-Film directors too, I shouldn't be surprised, but that doesn't stop them playing the same gig as Joe Bugner.

Pretty chilly in the Pool of a Saturday night.

After a while the mate gets it together to say that the guitar at the beginning was a bit like Garcia, with which the first bloke disagrees. It's interesting he should think of that, though, because, in a way, the Floyd and the Dead currently share the same ponderous monumentality that's so hard to get on with if you liked their sprightlier early periods. Also, neither of them travel well outside their countries of origin.

I wished vaguely that we could have more piping at the anthem of the sunlamp. I dreamt of groups called the Grateful Floyd, the Pink Dead, the Dreadful Fink, the Great Fred. I dozed fitfully and, as I dozed, I became aware of ancestral voices prophesying Eugene. And suddenly: BLAMMO! A load of magnesium flares went off, temporarily overloading my retinas, and Roger Waters screamed as the axeman cameth.

FRONT ROW REVIEWS

The audience thoroughly enjoyed every quarter of an hour of it. I didn't quarrel with them — they're too many of them, even for me, a black belt in origami. They threw paper darts gaily and in several directions, lit sparklers and had them confiscated by zealous old men in paramilitary uniforms, and belated the names of songs they wished to have performed. Cannily, the Fluid obliged, throwing in quadraphonic smoke-bombs and a totem-pole with an outboard-motor which hauled itself up over the arena, grinning multi-coloured lights, and looking like some heathen idol of old Babylon.

They did some stuff from "Obscured By Clouds Of Evil-Smelling Smoke Descending From The Ceiling Five Minutes Afterwards"; then they did the one at the beginning of "Middle" (the one with two chords); then they did "Eugene" (the one with two notes); and then I decided to give myself the benefit of the doubt.

I hung around in the foyer for a while to see if Roger Waters would suddenly stop a number and say: "Right! Now that miserable bastard's gone, we can get down to it! Like to introduce your friend and mine, Mr. Keith Jarrett..."

They had some chicken-noises instead.

Anyway, I got home and played "Mortgage On My Soul" a couple of times and that brought the colour back to my cheeks. Charlie Haden doesn't play that many more notes than Roger Waters — but he sure do rock the joint.

MELANIE/RAH

CLEARLY, A Melanie concert is no place to be for a boozed-up, doped-out degenerate to sit chain-smoking and picking his nose. The vast and faintly bizarre auditorium of Albert's Victorian memento mori was packed with sensitive young people, plus a few elders in beards and appropriately sober garb. They were waiting for the Big M.

She came on and was immediately presented with a ready peeled orange by a devotee who seated himself on stage. This orange was seized by a man I pay to perform such acts and is currently in the possession of Chick Corea, who has now left the country, so there's no way to get it back, none at all. As the Big M ended her first number, the stage was swamped with young acolytes, who sat reverently round her in ever-increasing numbers. One thought that it would have been great fun to see her play a set from the box. Let 'em try and climb into that one!

The stage bore an uncomfortable resemblance to a scene from "The Sound Of Music", of perhaps some strange atavistic throwback to nursery school.

She trilled her way through an enticing variety of ditties old and new, including E. John's "Border Song" and Dylan's "Sign On The Window", which she massacred by turning it into a toe-tapping singalong. Grrrr.

Possibly the loudest applause of the whole evening came for "Alexander Beetle" a rather over-cute children's song, and for "Lay Down". The tunes that most pleased this writer's scabrous ears were "What Have They Done To My Song Ma" and "Psychotherapy".

Actually, I've really developed a taste for all this, and I've gotten well into Melanie's vibe, man. So if you'll pardon me awhile, I've just got the time to practise my tantric yoga, feed Karma the cat and nip out for some brown rice and apple juice before washing my hair in organic shampoo not forgetting to take my copy of "Christopher Robin" to read in the tube. But don't go 'way, cuz there's another review coming right up . . . after this message.

KINKS/RAINBOW

THE KINKS returned to their native stomping ground, North London, on their Rainbow gig last Saturday night. At first without the brass, they plunged awkwardly into a speeded-up "Tops Of The Pops" before shifting into a rock and roll medley, based around their "You're Lookin' Fine". The compilation also included "Little Queenie", "Shakin' All Over" and "Be Bop A Lula".

Wearing a white coat and trousers, Ray Davies carried himself like a cross between Elvis Presley, a vaudeville performer and a Hollywood starlet. At one point, Davies positioned himself in a Marilyn Monroe-type pose as he flaunted his goods. An inspired soul in the peanut gallery offered a wolf whistle which prompted Ray to extend his posterior forward, saying: "Isn't this the greatest ass you've ever seen?" with a nasal New York accent.

The band became better and better as time went on, but under Ray's leadership many songs were sped to double time. With the addition of the Mike Cotton sound, a deeper and more colourful dimension was musically achieved. During "Alcohol", Ray opened endless cans of beer, guzzling and spilling healthy proportions before tossing the half-full remains into the audience.

From the Kinks' Klassics file, they delivered "Dedicated Follower Of Fashion", "Sunny Afternoon", "Apeman", "You Really Got Me", "All Day And All Of The Night" and an abbreviated "Lola". The energy level hit an all time high towards the end, when the crowd rose to the occasion by stomping, shouting, and working on out with the Muswell Hillbillies. The boys left the stage after "All Day And All Of The Night", only to find a roar capable of equalling a Cup Final win chasing them.

Minutes later they moseyed back and Ray Davies announced "the greatest rock and roll song ever written" as the Kinks pressed into a very basic "Louie Louie" a song that was included on four or five of their albums. The song witched to "My Girl Sloop" and back again before they left and returned with "Victoria". It wasn't an amazing performance by any means, but it was a heck of a lot of fun.

DRIFTERS/ DUBLIN

NOSTALGIA swept the air when the Drifters — genuine version — appeared in Dublin's Television Club. It wasn't so much the days of past youth evoked as the group reeled off all those classic oldies because most of the audience was composed of teensies whose musical memories would hardly go back as far as the early 'Sixties. No it was the nostalgia provoked by the audience's reception of the group.

There they were actually enjoying themselves and not afraid to show it with girls screaming in best Beatles' era fashion, multitudinal arms a-waving and scores of feet a-bopping. It really was like being back a decade.

With the John McFlair Band pumping out some fair old riffs, that wondrous character Freddie Mack — one-time Golden Gloves boxing champion — tore up the four-page script he had been given and introduced the Drifters in his own inimitable way with plenty of hip jive talk and bump-and-grind body movement.

Johnnie Moore may be balding but he still has a voice to melt any female heart, evoking shades of the late, great Sam Cooke at times, but most of all sounding just like he did on all those fantastic rockin' and driftin' records I'd bought as a kid.

The giant Bill Fredricks has enough stage personality and good looks to be a real black hero — he bears an amazing resemblance to Bill Cosby when he pulls all those faces and he, Grant Kitchings and Butch Leake all took a share of the lead vocals along with the illustrious Mr. Moore.

"Up On The Roof", "There Goes My Baby", "Save The Last Dance For Me" and a few samples from the Sam Cooke and Motown songbooks were all reeled off with sheer professionalism and remarkable precise harmony behind the evocative lead while the enthusiastic audience threatened to swamp the stage and souvenir hunters ripped-off Bill Fredricks' diamond ring.

This was pure good-time music, nothing intellectual, just all-the-way entertainment and the reception it got augurs well for the Television Club's new policy of a monthly American soul show.

WIDIE GIG GUIDE

THEIR FIRST British gig may prove a strange experience for the JACKSON 5, when they face the monkey-suited audience at the LONDON Palladium on Monday in the Royal Variety Show, in the presence of the Queen Mother. Also featured: Elton John and Jack Jones. Catch the show on BBC-1 the following Sunday (5).

While every effort is made to ensure the accuracy of the dates in the Gig Guide we don't claim infallibility. Gigs may be subject to late change and we suggest you check locally whenever possible. Remember also to check for further information with the advertising in this supplement.

MANNY CHARLTON, lead guitar with Nazareth, knows when he's well off. The minute the plane touched down from the band's six-week tour of the States and Canada, he beetled up the motorway to the wife and kids in the band's home town, Dunfermline.

They had a week's break before getting back to business at Barnsley last week and Manny used some of his feet-up time to talk to NME.

"Over the six weeks we were working six nights out of seven, mainly around the Great Lakes, the West Coast, Toronto, Florida and places we'd only heard of in the Westerns, like Denver, Tucson and El Paso.

"I'm not complaining, you understand. We had a ball, what with seeing the sights and working on the trip with Buddy Miles and Ginger Baker. I like to think Nazareth put the trip to their own use whenever they could. We spent a lot of our 'time off' doing radio interviews.

"We even did a TV show. An hour live for a series that's coming out soon over there called 'Tube Trip' and featuring groups. I believe the show we did will be split into half-hour segments to be televised at the start and the end of the series.

"We couldn't bitch about the exposure Nazareth got and we found that, whenever the Americans discovered we were Scots, they just happened to be Scots, too. Or they came of Scots ancestry. 'Glencoe', one of our compositions, seemed to intrigue them. The deejays wanted to know why we wrote this number and asked us to fill them in about the Glencoe massacre. It was fun.

"Coming back here to Dunfermline virtually straight off the plane and all jet lag (we flew everywhere over there), it's the ideal therapy for a group. Up here in Scotland a group can slow down and recuperate, so to speak. It's the same even when we're just coming home from a lengthy stay in and around London.

Manny added: "You know something, Nazareth have been neglecting the home front. We've spent nearly seven months working abroad this year. We sense that Britain — and Scotland in particular — could be forgetting about us and between now and the end of the year we mean to intensify our gigging in Britain and, particularly, this side of the Border."

ALTHOUGH RORY Gallagher will make several stage appearances in Dublin during his December stay here, the question of a Belfast concert remains a delicate one.

True to form, Rory is quoted as saying that he'll travel North if he's asked — for him, it is just another gig. Last year he played a sell-out concert in Belfast's Ulster Hall on Boxing Day afternoon, and there is strong speculation that he will give a repeat performance this year — if he's asked.

A spokesman for Aiken Promotions, who are handling the visit, says that a Belfast concert will indeed be set up on Boxing Day — if the city cools off sufficiently before the event.

Although Rory hails from Cork, he spent much of his early career in Belfast, and has more friends of both religions in the city than possibly any other living being. Gallagher's Belfast concerts are just naturally sell-outs.

AN OLD side-kick of Rory's — drummer Wilgar Campbell, phoned home this week to let everyone know that he's still with Mick Abrahams' Band, an outfit he joined four months ago after leaving Rory.

Wilgar isn't too happy, though, about his old boss's authority on the Belfast troubles.

"At press conferences," says Wilgar, "we found that everybody was asking Rory about the situation in Belfast. And he was telling them. Nobody asked Gerry (McAvoy) or myself — and we're both from Belfast. It was as ridiculous as me giving my opinion about the situation in Cork."

The Mick Abrahams Band have an album due for release at Christmas, but so far there's no word of them playing any gigs in Wilgar's home town.

NAMES PROVISIONALLY lined up for 1973 concerts in Dublin's National Stadium include Johnny Cash, The New Seekers, and Blood, Sweat and Tears. Which looks like an attempt to please all of the people some of the time.

RALPH McTELL and the Natural Acoustic Band had a capacity crowd and a tumultuous reception when they played Belfast's Whitla Hall last Wednesday (18).

Organiser Alistair Stewart said, "we sold out the show on the first day, and I reckon we could have sold it out twice."

BRISTOL is due to be blessed with a ring road which is likely to cause the destruction of many beautiful chunks of country around the city. As you can imagine, this is not a popular idea to many citizens so, when the Bristol New Vic staged a protest musical about it, the theatre was rather full.

Called "Bristol Roadshow" and directed by Howard Davies, it finished its successful fortnight on Saturday, having done the job of explaining in artistic terms why the road should not be built.

Music for the show was written and performed by a West Country folk outfit by the name of Canton Trig. This group will now continue taking the spirit of the show to colleges and folk clubs all over the west and I can strongly recommend that you see them.

Venues for November are: Golden Hart, Evesham (2); Hiatt Baker Hall, Bristol (4); Ashburton Folk Club, South Devon (12); Stonehouse Folk, Bristol (13); St. Pauls College, Cheltenham (17); Seale Hayne College, Newton Abbot (23); Haughton, Stafford (24).

SWANSEA'S whizz-kid promoter, Phil Lawrence, one of the first to bring rock bands to the area and still make money, is extending his operation and will now be promoting in Pandora's Discotheque, Swansea. This is in addition to his regular Patti Pavilion, Barry Memorial Hall and Pier Hotel gigs. Phil's first Pandora's promotion is this Sunday with Focus and Graphite.

THE NEXT Harlequin Rock 'n' Roll Circus is scheduled for November 16 and will feature Curved Air, Brian Auger's Oblivion Express, Sutherland Brothers, Thank You, Pigsty Hill Light Orchestra and Little Free Rock with Sarah Gordon. As before, there will be constant interruptions by extremely silly people.

One of the silliest people at the first circus was a local policeman. Having been asked for permission to let off fireworks from the top of the venue, Llanelli's Glen Ballroom, he quickly halted the proceedings after five minutes. Asked why, our Guardian of the Law said: "I thought you were joking." LORD SUTCH, incidentally, claims to have selected the Glen as the venue for his proposed battle with Alice Cooper. I bet you say that to all the promoters...

WHEN THE halcyon days of student life are over, whither turns the social secretary? More often than not, he does just what he always vowed he would never do — that is, join forces with those big bad agents and prostrate his talents thus.

A couple of weeks ago, I mentioned a few who this summer have done just that, and would like to point out to their sceptical comrades who think it would never happen to them, that they are actually enjoying themselves in their new-found niche in life. However, there are one or two ex-social secs who are not prepared to lie down without a fight.

Faced with the alternatives of a job in a record company/agency and unemployment, they go for a middle course, choosing a position in the peripheral zone of college promoting but one which does not exactly entail a steady income.

Two members of this intrepid breed are Stuart Joseph, a former social secretary of C.C.C., and Ali Khan, who I am sure you all remember, reigned unchallenged for a year or two at the O.P.

Ali tried working with an agency but it was not to his liking; he found that he could not get the attitudes of a social sec. out of his blood. He has therefore taken up the position of, in his own words, "a glorified sabbatical social sec. without portfolio". (This title rather gives the impression of Mr. Khan wandering around the country, selling his services to the highest bidder. However it has a more realistic foundation than that).

Apart from helping out any Ents Committees with their difficulties, he has also looked into the possibility of a scheme whereby he could liaise with a London agent in order to block-buy certain acts for a circuit of colleges. The business side of things having been left to the agent, Ali could then concentrate on helping out the college with all aspects of their promotion — publicity, internal wrangles with authorities or whatever. Ideally, they should already have saved money on account of the block-buying scheme and could only benefit from the further assistance that Ali would give.

Obviously his idea can only get off the ground if colleges are at least prepared to get more details from him and to discuss the feasibility of his proposals.

Stuart Joseph, too, has an interest in retaining links with college entertainments committees. Having graduated from Cambridge this summer, he can still be found in the central Union there, and is, as far as I can gather, still responsible for bookings.

On top of this, he has two schemes in the pipeline. One concerns the possibility of a Cambridge-based, student-run agency called "Volunteers" which would cater for any colleges that wanted the help of an "old lag", the help presumably being of a practical nature.

And lastly your dose of rock 'n roll for this week can be obtained from Anton Promotions, who in conjunction with Noel Gay Artists and Gemini are putting a package on the road featuring The House-shakers, Heinz and the Wild Boys, the Original Savages, Dave Travis and Bad River, and a disco. The whole three-hour show is available at a cost of £300. And a good sweaty evening to you all.

RAY CONNOLLY

IN THE July 22nd edition of this newspaper, in a review headed "Elvis Hacked Apart," a derogatory comment appeared with regard to Ray Connolly and an article written by him entitled "A Rock Odyssey" in the book "Elvis Complete".

We are now aware that our reviewer's comments were unfounded and unfair and we would like to unconditionally withdraw the comment and apologise to Mr. Connolly for the distress and embarrassment that the matter has caused him, and we have by way of compensation paid Mr. Connolly a substantial sum in damages.

CHEECH AND CHONG: STABBING AT JUNKIES

"OUR GUEST THIS evening is a former professor of philosophy at Harvard University. He has a B.A., and M.A., and a Ph.D. His name is Bob Bitchin."

"Bob, tell us what does a man do with all those degrees — a B.A., an M.A., and a Ph.D.?"

"I make candles, man."

Then there is the gag about the unit commander in Vietnam whose men got wiped out when they were sent to burn a field of marijuana.

They're part of the act that has made Cheech (Marin) and (Tommy) Chong the hottest act in North America. At this very moment, Cheech and Chong's second album, "Big Bambu", is at the top of the most influential charts on this continent — the first time in nine years that a comedy album has been number one.

Rock fans have flipped out over this former rock singer and his partner, a one-time topless bar owner.

Cheech and Chong were back in Toronto this week, for the first time since the "Big Bambu" album hit the top. They proved both that comedy is lucrative again (nearly 2,000 bodies at $3-to-$5 a seat) and that comedy never really changes.

Jim Smith,
TORONTO

WISHBONE ASH'S Ted Turner: the band were too serious for some Canadians.

The duo's success is remarkable when you consider that this generation will probably be regarded by future generations as the one that stopped smiling. We're so turned on to "serious" rock that we've forgotten how to laugh. C&C are the first comedians in Lord knows how long to relate to the pop masses.

And what's the secret? Nothing, much. You merely include plenty of hip slang (every other sentence is a "wow" or a "hey man") and substitute drugs for booze. And there you have it — the newest edition of Bob Hope or Jack Benny — which is exactly what Cheech says the duo are working towards.

It's closer to the truth to compare C&C to the late Lenny Bruce. Bruce perfected the irreverent, scatological sick humour that C&C rely heavily on. Neither Hope nor Benny would be caught dead with C&C's references to defecation or masturbation. The duo toss off obscenities like drunken sailors. But, like Bruce, they're a valid representation of the society they travel in.

Cheech admits the comparison with Bruce is valid. "At least for the first part of his career. Later on, when he was getting busted all the time, he was very bitter. I don't think we're bitter."

Maybe not bitter, but pessimistic. They have a skit that includes an advertisement for suicides wishing to use a skyscraper. The ad points out that the suicide fee includes a splatter-proof plastic bag for the jump.

The audience lap it up. Which is pretty incredible when C&C spend most of their time cutting up drug users.

Or have C&C merely realised that what the drug culture really wants is someone to tell it off?

● PHLORESCENT LEECH and Eddie (Howard Kaylan and Mark Volman, late of the Mothers Of Invention and the Turtles) and Wishbone Ash shared a bill at Massey Hall here. Phlo and Eddie (second-billed) were the only redeeming feature of a dismal concert.

Wishbone are one of the least known of all the British acts to appear here recently. Their Armageddon approach to music even had some of the most hardened rock zombies heading for the exits.

But Phlo and Eddie showed promise. Their approach is more melodic than the Mothers and more challenging than the Turtles. Their first album has a few problems, but it shows definite promise.

● DOES ANYONE care anymore? James Taylor is going back to concert work. Peter Asher announces that Taylor will be working weekends in the future, including a concert at New York's Radio City Music Hall (6,000-plus seats, making it the nation's largest legitimate theatre).

Why I'm 'quitting' again, by DIAMOND

REPORTS

WEBB

ONCE AGAIN Neil Diamond is retiring from live performances. He puts a time limit of "around two years" on his lay-off, but one year is probably a closer estimation. For despite what he may say, Diamond needs the buzz that an audience can give him.

"Every few years I find I've got to take off," he says. "About three years ago I stopped and it was fantastic for me. I was able to get into new kinds of writing. I wrote 'Brother Love' and 'Sweet Caroline' during that period — though I can't be sure that kind of good thing will happen this time. I'm just gonna get off the stage for a couple of years and get away from it all."

"I have to re-energise myself and approach everything with a new attitude. I want to do a television show, maybe a film — this period will give me a chance to do that. I don't know what kind of film — but not a musical."

Right from the beginning Diamond insisted he was a songwriter rather than a singer. This could perhaps be the reason why he is temporarily 'laying off.'

"Now I don't know which I'd rather do. It's just that when you start, when you have any successful record, they say 'hey come on and perform' and they start booking you and I accepted it."

"It didn't seem strange to me at the time — my father had been an amateur performer and I'd seen him perform many times in front of audiences. Songwriting is a very basic part of what I am — but performing is also very strong because it fulfils a certain need for acceptance. But the core of everything I do is the writing."

NEIL

What atmosphere is the most conducive for you to write a song?

"Privacy is the main thing. And I usually work better after midnight. But on the other hand, I've written some of my best songs in the back seats of cars and in aeroplanes. When a song is ready to come it comes."

"Usually the feeling comes first, rather than melody or lyrics. After the feeling everything else comes out; sometimes it's the melody, sometimes the lyrics, but always it's the feeling — if it's introspective, if it's deep, flighty and light and giggly — that's always the starting point."

Are you aware when you finish a song whether or not it's commercial?

"No not really — I know when I like it. Generally a song takes a long time — it's like planting a seed and letting it lay there in fertile ground for a while until it blossoms. Then you leave it. Then you take care of it. Then you come back to it. Some of my songs have taken over a year to complete."

Have you ever felt you couldn't write another song that you'd completely dried up?

"Yes. That happened when I first started writing. There are periods when you don't feel like writing. But now it doesn't bother me because I know that when that period is over I'll be writing with more excitement."

... AND DIAMOND SOAKED WITH BEER

NEIL DIAMOND SANG at a fund-raising benefit picnic for the Democratic party held Sunday, October 15, at the Rockville, Maryland, home of vice-presidential candidate, Sargent Shriver and his wife, Eunice (Kennedy).

The picnic was open to the public, with the other musical entertainment consisting primarily of Irish singers and Scottish pipers. The Kennedy family sent their special plane to fetch Diamond, his seven backing musicians, and his publicist from La-Guardia to Dulles Airport.

Besides Eunice and Sarge, the Kennedys present included Rose (mother of them all), Teddy and Joan, Robert Kennedy's widow, Ethel, and the many Kennedy kids.

Eunice introduced Neil and requested that he sing "Sweet Caroline." Ethel asked for "New York Boy," a number Diamond rarely does in performance anymore, but which he had prepared on advance request. "Caroline" won.

As Neil was completing the number, Ethel marched on stage and poured a container of beer over Neil's head. He laughed good-naturedly, was handed a towel, proceeded to go into "New York Boy," and completed his set with one of his biggies, "Cracklin' Rosie." He did three encores and by the last one the people were up and dancing. His set lasted roughly one hour.

Eunice took Diamond and his wife Marcia on a tour of the large house, where he got a close-up view of the famous Kennedy mementoes — lots of pictures, Presidential flags, and the like.

FRIDAY 13 is supposed to be an unlucky day. Not so for Chuck Berry, who received his gold record for "My Ding-A-Ling" on stage at Madison Square Garden from Chess Records' A&R man, Esmond Edwards (who produced that cut).

Oct. 13 was the third anniversary for Richard Nader's Rock 'n' Roll Revival Show. Along with Chuck, this show featured Bo Diddley, the Coasters, Five Satins, Dovells, Gary "U.S." Bonds and The Bobby Comstock Band.

Nader joined Esmond on stage to congratulate Berry on his gold record.

A mammoth party followed the concert — held at Harry M's, a spacious bar located within the Madison Square Garden complex. Tiny tea sandwiches and an open bar was bill of fare.

"FELLINI'S ROMA" has officially opened in Manhattan, but United Artists are still screening the film for friends and friendly Press. On Wednesday, Oct 18, the screening I attended consisted largely of members of the alternative media. Also in attendance, but not together: Johnny Winter and Marjoe. (RCA is either about to or already has released Marjoe's album).

"Fellini's Roma" won critical acclaim at the Cannes Film Festival, became a box office hit in Europe, and now looks to do well here.

It's a successful view of memory and fantasy, decadence and historical beauty; a strange and imagination-grabbing film. The Warhol wonders love of course.

DAVID DALTON is the author of "Janis," "The Rolling Stones Songbook," and, with Jonathon Cott, the "Let It Be" Beatles book which was included in the English package of the Beatles album, but not in the American package. The "Let It Be" book is now on sale Stateside as a separate item. David is currently working on the OFFICIAL biography of the Stones.

Meanwhile, David and his lady threw this incredible bash, see, and it was a fine opportunity to relax and cut loose. The loft was gigantic. Located in downtown Manhattan on the grubby East side, just off the Bowery, the building was, fortunately, one of the few in that area which possessed a lift. The third-floor loft had, in addition to the main room — which was as large as any Manhattan loft I'd seen, many separate rooms, including a darkroom, a greenhouse with terracotta-tiled walls and a sunken tub, and a laundry with washer and drier. There could have been a hundred people in there, and a live rock group was playing loud and clear. Not just ANY rock group, either, but Cat Mother (they've long since dropped "The All-Night Newsboys" monicker).

Cat Mother were in rare form, with former "Cat" Charlie Chin taking the vocals. (Charlie played banjo on the beautiful "Bluebird" on the second Buffalo Springfield album). Cat Mother have a new guitarist, Charlie Harcourt, from Newcastle, England.

Harcourt has been with the band for six months, and previously played in several English groups, including Lindisfarne.

The group are now cutting their fourth Polydor album at Electric Lady studios in Greenwich Village. It'll be all-rock and also include some acoustic picking by Charlie Chin, with Jake Jacobs (formerly of Jake and the Family Jewels and Ed Sanders' Hemptones) on guitar, and Buzzy Linhart on vibes.

Cat Mother expects to spend another two weeks completing the album, but they are taking time off from the studio on Oct. 30, when they will participate in a benefit concert for the Free Clinic of Haight-Ashbury in San Francisco. Its A Beautiful Day and Stoneground are also expected to play.

When you were first signed as a professional songwriter, who were your greatest influences?

"All of the successful songwriters at that time inspired me — Carole King, people like her. And I've always been very impressed by Cole Porter's rhyming patterns, and I love George Gershwin's melodies. Even some classical writers."

Was there any great influence at that time from Britain?

"No. At that point British music hadn't really come into its own — until the Beatles came out, and this was years before that."

What kind of material were you writing then?

"Just basic songs — I was learning how to write. I was learning about myself, and I was involved in all the excitement of being a professional songwriter. Maybe I'd write one song every other week — that's far more than I write now, but those songs didn't require quite so much work. They weren't so sophisticated."

Many of your songs appear to be personalized. Are you so involved that an incident, say an argument with someone, would form the basis for lyrics?

"I never really know when something like that might come out in one line of a song. I haven't written any songs about specific instances — it's an accumulative thing, all things that affect you and make you as a person."

"No matter how objective you try to be, you're still putting your own feelings and what you are as a person into what you are writing, and because songs like 'Brooklyn Road' are so personal and so powerful, they tend to overshadow the fact that most of my songs are not autobiographical — although they all reflect what I am as a person."

Could you name one song that means the most to you?

"That like asking which child is your favourite — you can't say. They all have different meanings and different reasons, because they came out at different times. The songs I do on stage are my favourites — that's the quickest index."

You've said you're never nervous before live performances — have you ever done concerts that have proved disastrous?

"The most difficult times were in the early days, when the theatres were only half full or one third full. Generally I just sing the way I feel. I never give much consideration to my stage performances because I don't like to watch myself and listen to myself because I become too self-conscious and self-critical. I want it just to come out, even if it's wrong — I think the audience will accept you as a person with your mistakes and weaknesses."

Changing the subject completely I asked Diamond why he declined to do any interviews last time he visited Britain.

"Interviews are hard because you must think about them, and to do a good interview I must be enthusiastic about what I'm talking about. So there has to be an interesting conversation, and it doesn't always happen like that."

"So over the years I've felt that I would rely on my music, that the music would say it all — and if the music was good, interviews wouldn't matter. Just recently though I've started doing them again because I've more self-confidence in myself, and also because so many untrue things were written about me that I thought it might be good to set the record straight."

By not giving interviews — or indeed by not giving concerts over the next year or so, do you not feel you are giving people who buy your records a bad deal?

"I don't feel that way because I'll still be making records — I'll still be writing songs. So I hope that will compensate for it. I have to do it my way. Obviously there will be a lot of things I'll miss, but if anything it will increase my appetite to come back."

"I'm hoping this period away from the stage will enable me to re-evaluate what I do — to understand it better and try to do it better. I have a very strong feeling that there are new kinds of music, new forms of music jogging around in my brain. I want to give them as much chance as possible to come out."

"I'm hoping to record two albums a year. I want to record in London, and in other cities in Europe."

You have a double live album coming out soon. What kind of material is included on that?

"It's a concert — 22 or 23 songs. It's really a document of the last six years of my professional life. It's called 'Hot August Night' and we recorded it at the Greek. I'm very pleased with the sound."

As of next March/April you'll be signed with CBS. Any particular reason for switching from UNI?

"I'm going to CBS because they have an enormous roster of artists that I want to work with. Also, I think it is important for an artist to change. Five years with a record company is fantastic. But it's important for an artist to be re-kindled with enthusiasm and encouragement from the company."

Finally, the last word from Diamond on his retirement.

"I don't discount the fact that I may be back sooner than two years. But it won't be until I have something so special that I can't keep it."

AFTER WAM-bam - slamming onto the soul scene with a run of hit singles of which "Give Me Just A Little More Time" was the real biggie on the British market, Chairmen Of The Board seemed at one time to have fizzled almost to a halt.

Indeed, they even stopped working for a period.

Now, with the pendulum swinging back in their favour in the form of "Elmo James" — which, incidentally, has nothing to do with the late bluesman Elmore James — they could well have their biggest hit to date.

The Chairmen record of course for Invictus, the label set up by producer/writers Holland-Dozier-Holland when they split from Tamla Motown — amid a welter of law-suits — to set up an organisation which seems almost a duplication of Motown. Or rather Motown as it was before the move to the West Coast.

In their roster of Invictus artists, Holland-Dozier-Holland seem to look upon the Chairmen as their Temptations and, though they haven't followed that group into black rock, there are similarities in the two bands' soul material.

That said, the Chairmen do however have a distinctive sound, due mainly to the lead vocals of General Johnson with his rather hiccuppy, even forced, style.

Chairmen

Long wait for a seat on the Board

Those who listened to "Give Me Just A Little More Time" and thought they'd heard that odd voice before were right, for Johnson kicked off as lead singer of the Showmen.

How the Chairmen came about was something like arepeat of the Monkees story.

Holland - Dozier - Holland knew what they wanted and were prepared to wait for it. Between signing Johnson and the group actually hitting the road, there was a period of more than two years spent auditioning hundreds of prospective members until the right people were found.

Meanwhile, Johnson kept on busily writing material for a group which didn't yet exist!

Still living down in Norfolk, Virginia, he found the wait a frustrating business — living on a comfortable salary from the company it's true, but unable to get out there and entertain the people.

But the wait was worthwhile and eventually Harrison Kennedy, Danny Woods and Eddie Custis were elected to the Board, with the idea being that each member would play a full part, sharing lead, and doing something more than the rather limited back-up vocals and dance routines which were standard format for most soul groups.

The formula seemed to work and they and Invictus were rewarded with instant success.

With three consecutive chart entries and a first British tour behind them things looked good for the Chairmen but, like most emergent big-time groups, they had their internal hassles and what with Harrison Kennedy going back to school for a while, General Johnson concentrating on producing the Honey Cone and other acts and Eddie Curtis splitting because he didn't like the musical bag they were falling into, their career as a group ground to a temporary halt towards the end of last year, a situation now happily resolved.

Their "Bitter Sweet" set, from which came "Elmo James", was issued in the States in March.

A FURTHER INVESTIGATION OF

MELANIE

The girl behind that naive image

MELANIE DOESN'T DRINK or smoke, but I wouldn't take too many bets on her missing out on the greatest pleasure of them all. Let's face it, she's a happily married girl.

Why should I mention that at all? I'm just trying to point out that her "blessedly naive" image is way off the beam.

Miss Safka with her Bambi eyes and flowing hair is, to be frank, sexy. Don't tell anybody folks, but she swears. The image is unreal. Melanie is simply a charming and friendly lady who happens to possess a voice that pleads for help and understanding.

She's not a frightened child or anything of the sort. And having moved around on the rock circuit for quite a while now, she is certainly not naive. It's about time she was freed from the sentimental shackles. There's more humour than pathos in her songs, if people could but see it.

Slimmer and full of good humour, Melanie sat rapping about herself and her music in a London hotel during her recent visit. The Albert Hall show was part of a European tour on behalf of UNICEF. It was a sell-out.

Obviously, she has a unique style which singles her out from the pack. So I was interested to hear about her early musical influences. She was born in New York in February, 1947, and learned to love music through her mother.

"She was a jazz singer and I grew up with the music she sang and played. I heard a lot of jazz and blues. I don't know how directly they influenced me, but I heard people like Bessie Smith all the time. I also heard a lot of folk music through my uncle. I lived with him for a while.

"The biggest thing in my musical education was what my mother taught me — not to try to sound like someone else. My mother made me try to be myself, to find something that was me.

"I think the sound of someone's voice is as individual as the strokes of an artist's brush, although certainly there will be certain similarities between singers.

"There may be something in the quality of my voice that's similar to someone else. But the artistry comes from each performance being a truly new experience. When I sing, whether it's at a concert or on record, it's always a new feeling for me. I don't have to try and make it different. It just happens."

Before Melanie won broad-acceptance, did friends ever advise her to try something other than singing?

"Tell me I should give up, you mean?" she laughed. "Well, I was in a school vocal group once and they told me I had to be one of the non-singers. That involved standing there and looking cute and miming instead of singing. The reason was my voice used to stand out, so they put me in the back. It was frustrating.

"But that didn't worry me too much. I still felt confident in my music. It wasn't something I had to practice. It wasn't any big emotional thing. I just accepted music was part of me, the same way I accept that I'll go on breathing.

"Song writing came naturally too. I started getting things down when I was quite young. They weren't songs that I'd sing now, but I needed to write them to help me get through my life. Really they were just things I was imitating from my mother. There was no originality in them at that stage.

"Later I grew away from the jazz and blues influence and became more involved in folk and some kinds of show music. I still had the same roots, but I was on the way to finding something of my own."

When did she start writing fuller songs?

"There wasn't a time when I suddenly started writing better songs. They just gradually became more meaningful to me. They expressed more of what I felt. Not that that's the only important thing, but it was important to me then."

How critical is she of her early work?

"I'm critical of a lot that I do, but I don't sit and analyse. That would be a waste of time because they came out of me and I believe in where they came from. I don't know if I believe in me all the time, but I believe in the source."

Melanie's current single,

"Together Alone", will soon be followed by a new album titled "Stoneground Words". I've heard the set a couple of times and it's a good one. But she says she didn't set out to try anything new on this, her first L.P. for her own label, Neighbourhood.

"I'm not hung-up on musical development in an intellectual sense, or on experimentation with new ideas. That always seems technical to me. But now that the album is done I think I can see some changes. It's just the result of a natural evolution and the events that led to the writing of the songs.

"One thing I can say is that I really worked closely and happily with the producer, Peter Schekeryk, and arranger, Roger Kellaway. Roger has a very free spirit. We could have made 'Together Alone' take up a whole side. But Peter is the force who says no. He stopped the album becoming self-indulgent and I think we have come up with something truly unusual.

"The three of us created something which was beyond what I wrote. It's the best thing I've ever done."

She is less enthusiastic about the way her old label is pushing out what she regards as second-rate material, as well as re-releasing everything in sight. But she was in no rush to get "Stoneground Words" out into the shops.

"As it's on my own label, I didn't have to work to any timetable. I'm no longer worried by the pressures of business. Actually, I didn't even begin this album until a year after 'Gather Me'. It took all that time to write the songs.

Throughout her career, Melanie has found that recording isn't always fun.

"The record company used to be constantly pushing me, saying: 'Come on. Four months have gone by. We've gotta follow up that last record. I'd just say: 'Yeah sure. I've got some more songs I can squeeze out of the toothpaste tube'. That's how it went for a long time, so now it's nice that I don't have to worry how long it takes me to come out with a new album."

For a lady said to be so frail and fragile, she shows a lot of quiet, but firm resolve. Her management would have liked her to stay in the States to promote the new album, rather than tour Europe for UNICEF. "But," she shrugged, "this is the time they asked me to come over, so that was it. My work with the album finishes when I leave the studio."

Her involvement with the United Nations Children's Fund started nine months ago when she sang at the General Assembly. Then a guy from UNICEF, asked if she'd be interested in doing some things for them.

"I said it would be nice, but first I wanted to know all the details of where the money went; how much of it went to the kids, and how much was just red tape and bullshit. They told me, and I'm satisfied it's a good thing."

She paused, then continued with a giggle: "It was just time for me to donate myself somehow. I've enjoyed this tour. It's been really nice. It's like getting back to a kind of Immaculate Approach to what I do."

Would she like to take it a stage further and actually meet the kids, in the same way as Danny Kaye has done?

"Well, I'm not interested in making a career out of UNICEF," she said. "I don't know if I could really take that, you know. I don't particularly want to see some of the most deprived areas of the world. I know what I'd feel and it wouldn't do me any good."

"I know that some things affect me emotionally to a point where I'm not really strong enough to take it. They would like me to go to India, but I'm a little afraid of that. I'd rather sing to raise money. I think I can help more that way."

"WE'VE REACHED THE ceiling in Holland," said Thijs van Leer. "We have to go elsewhere now."

Jan Akkerman rapped the table sharply in agreement. "Anything to get away from those audiences. They don't care about music, only getting stoned. Who wants to play for sleeping people?"

This is the front-line of the top Dutch rock group talking: van Leer, keyboard-player and flautist, a mild-mannered, idealistic and slightly nervous man — and Akkerman, the star European guitarist, in complete contrast a self-possessed, brittle, and laconic personality given to sporadic outbreaks of that incomprehensible Low Countries humour which most often finds its expression in sudden rude noises made on zer mouth.

After I'd made the right sort of start by identifying the Monteverdi reference at the beginning of "Eruption" from their second album "Moving Waves", Yder de Jong, genial giant and manager, broke out the lager so that I could drink my own health.

Akkerman continued: "There are really only two other Dutch groups apart from us. Supersister and Solution. The rest is Golden Earrings and that's another thing — pop groups, you know?"

Akkerman started out in one of Holland's most successful pop-groups, Brainbox, along with Focus's drummer, Pierre Van der Linden.

"They had a lot of hits," van Leer assured me.

"And those records are just now beginning to sell in the States," Akkerman smiled sourly. "They caught up with us at last."

"Focus were at that time a trio," his colleague explained. "We had made one album already, called just 'Focus'. Jan quit Brainbox and joined us and we made a single called 'House Of The King' which was a hit. After that we decided we needed a new drummer, and Jan got Pierre in from Brainbox."

In April and May 1971 the band came to London to record "Moving Waves" for Mike Vernon's Blue Horizon label, despite the distinct absence of 12-bars in their repertoire.

Since then they've acquired a new bass player, Bert Ruiter.

now is uniquely Focus," van Leer explained. "We aren't playing anyone else's clichés. We're playing ours. And what we're aiming for is simplicity. As Jan says, to be able to express oneself like a child expresses itself is true maturity."

"To get past technique," Akkerman stressed.

"We believe," said van Leer, "in pure music. As a language by itself."

What have been your main influences?

"The newer jazz. McCoy Tyner, Bill Evans, Chick Corea. And then Bela Bartok, Johann Sebastian Bach. And earlier stuff than him too."

A good two-thirds of "Moving Waves" is unashamedly Romantic music. Where does that come from?

"My parents gave me my musical education when I was a child in Amsterdam. Very old music on the one hand, very modern on the other. And the whole Romantic period my father spat on. My mother too. But I've discovered that that period — Schubert, Schumann — was very important. I think also that Bach was very Romantic. Very warm."

And Mr. Akkerman? Who does he count as his mentors?

"Practically no-one except Django Reinhardt. And Julian Bream. I listen to a lot of early lute music."

You'd better get along to a Focus gig during the next fortnight. They could very well be your cup of meat.

pulse behind Focus?

"We'd all got tired of making music on three chords and we wanted something new." He laughed. "Now we play on one."

"We're perfectionists," said van Leer.

"You may be," Akkerman responded. "I'm not."

"No — perfectionist in the sense of striving after creating a perfect experience. I want Focus to make people just happy. Deeply happy."

I brought up the subject of the group's British debut on "The Old Grey Whistle Test" last year. They'd played "Hocus Pocus" and the end had gone wrong.

Van Leer smiles. "Yes. We sat and watched the playback, but when we saw how it had come out, we decided to keep it like that — because it was real, you know?"

How much of their live set is improvised?

"Fifty percent."

And what direction is the music travelling towards?

"Jazz".

FROM THE SOUL

THERE WE WERE, walking down Dublin's famed O'Connell Street past the battle-scarred GPO Building — memories of the 1916 Easter Rebellion — solving the problems of the world and gathering quite a sizeable audience of bemused Irishmen as we did it.

Grant Kitchings of the Drifters, Freddie Mack, that loveable character of the London clubs — both musical and boxing — and myself rapped on about everything from America's foreign policy to the First World War and telepathy. But most of all we talked about music.

I didn't ask Kitchings his age. He looks in his late twenties but in fact he fought in the Korean War and before joining the Drifters a couple of years ago he had more than earned a long-service medal for his work with such legendary outfits as the Ravens and the Ink Spots.

Having seen R&B run through many changes, from the doo wop groups of the early 'fifties to the intricately arranged orchestral-backed outfit of today, Kitchings has firm views on the music and the direction it should take.

"Simplicity is on the way back with songs relating to everyday people in everyday situations," he said, "it's what the public really wants and what the performers must really start catering for."

"It's amazing how the kids get into our music, especially the songs which were hits long ago. But it's a fact that those songs have lasting relevance."

"We are getting to the stage now where some relatively recent songs are becoming 'standards' — like the best of the Beatles' writing and the old Drifters' hits. These melodies and lyrics will always have something to say to people."

When in Britain, the Drifters always work with Birmingham's John McFlair Band: "They really feel our music, and they now know our material almost as well as we do," he said.

"It's difficult to find good backing groups these days. So many guys want to show off their own virtuosity rather than just provide a backing suited to the vocalist."

"You tell them how you want a thing to sound and they get upset. They think you are trying to tell them how to play. But you're not, you're just trying to get them to be sympathetic to the way you feel the music."

"Singers are musicians just as much as they are, and a good singer needs to practise as hard and as long in order to master his instrument, which happens to be the human voice."

Despite his great experience, Kitchings admits that at times he still attempts to do things vocally which are just beyond his physical capability.

"You have an idea of how you want your voice to sound,

DRIFTERS: BACK TO SIMPLICITY?

DRIFTER Grant Kitchings: Simple songs have staying power.

but you just can't quite hit it right.

"That's why it is so important to have musicians who can get the same feel as you have. I'd love to record with Willie Mitchell's band, for instance. The way they can hold a beat and sustain a rhythm is incredible."

"The bass-player will play a steady riff right through a number, never varying the tempo or departing from the line once. That discipline is the sign of a great, truly professional musician."

"On stage I used to listen to my drummer, but many of them can't hold a tempo that now I've got into the habit of sticking with the bass-player."

Now that they've switched labels to Bell and got an new album out, the Drifters are eager to introduce these songs into their stage act. But they'll still sing the old classics like "Save The Last Dance For Me", and "Down At The Club" because they and their audiences still get something from them.

● BLACK MOVIES are becoming quite a trend after the pattern set by "Shaft". One of the most recent is "Superfly", yet to make our shores, but the soundtrack album is already available on Buddah 2318.065.

It's the story of dope peddlers in the ghetto and carries the message that everyone, junkies and peddlers alike, are caught up in a squalid and destructive maelstrom from which there is no real escape.

The music has been penned and performed by Curtis Mayfield and the haunting single "Freddie's Dead" says it all. Certainly the finest, most creative work Mayfield has carried out since splitting from the Impressions.

● EMI's launch of the new Mowest label was really something — a lavish reception at Ronnie Scott's, the first two Mowest singles — by Frankie Valli and the Four Seasons and Thelma Houston — and American copies of the new Thelma Houston and Syreeta albums which will appear here in November.

It seems NME's Roy Carr wasn't too impressed but dedicated soul fans and Motown freaks might think otherwise.

Miss Houston's set emphasises her gospel roots and thus manages to fulfill the promise her single and her stage appearances never quite managed to develop.

As for Syreeta, she's sweet-voiced, and the album shows the influence of husband Stevie Wonder and his flirtation with electronic sounds. In truth, it's wonder's music rather than his lady's voice which makes this so outstanding.

● WATCH OUT for the soul excitement of Gladys Knight and the Pips — "Perfection in Performance Inc." — who hit these shores on November 27 and stay for three weeks. Appearing with them will be Carol Woods, the black New Yorker who records in Britain for Ember but still lives Stateside.

● ALSO DUE in November is that long-time Motown stalwart, Junior Walker, who signed with the label in 1964.

"I've always been pretty happy with Motown — they've treated me good," he told me over a crackly trans-Atlantic phone line. And I live just 100 miles out of Detroit, which is convenient."

After his recent success with the heavily orchestrated "These Eyes" and the like, Junior now intends to revert to the simpler, more rough-edged style which gave him his first big hit with "Road Runner" back in 1964.

"It'll be very much the sound I get on stage. My present band have been together for a couple of years. I've got bass, guitar, organ and drums backing me."

The next single from the sax man, Stateside-wise that is, delights in the glorious title of "Give Me The Beat, Let Me Put My Feet" which is, let's face it, just what Junior Walker's music has always been about.

"Really, tastes haven't changed all that much over the years. Basically, people still want to hear something they can get up and dance to."

● GETTING UP to dance may well be your last reaction to Laura Lee's new album, her first for Hot Wax (SHW 5006), which finds the one-time Chess lady with some pretty potent material.

It's not that the numbers lack a good, solid dance beat but that the lyrics are so strong you'll want to sit back and hear them first.

Women's lib seems most decidedly to be this young lady's kick from the title track on with "Love And Liberty" and "It's Not What You Fall For, It's What You Stand For" also strongly in that bag.

ROGER ST. PIERRE

CLIVE JOHN, back on guitar for MAN.

MAN Motorway sweat not in vain

LAST WEEK Man had a road accident: Nothing too serious — the van was 'offed' and there were some slight injuries. But the band weren't too shaken up. After all this was their third crash in recent memory.

All this means, if you don't know already, that Man are a road band.

They've been travelling down them ole lonesome motorways for what must seem to them like a lifetime, and it now appears that all the sweat hasn't been in vain.

For, snuggled there right at the very top of an industry mid-price album chart recently, above "Top Pops '72" and all those Music for Pleasure muzak hohums, stood "Man Live At The Padgett Rooms, Penarth" — a limited pressing of one of the last live-gigs the old 4-piece Man performed, selling for £1.

The live album, along with another cut-price goodie "Greasy Truckers Party", a double-album with the old Man pile-driving their way through a 22-minute version of "Spunk Rock", was recorded while the band still contained guitarist Deke Leonard and bassist Martin Ace.

Leonard left to record some solo tracks at Rockfield Studios, Monmouth, and has just recently joined up with Help Yourself, while Martin Ace is working on a project with his wife, called the Flying Aces.

Into their places were brought Will Youatt on bass and Phil Ryan on keyboards, both fugitives from one of Wales' finest bands, The Eyes of Blue (Ryan is also ex-Piblokto, Pete Brown's old band).

At the same time Clive John, Man's original guitarist who'd left at the beginning of the year, quickly rejoined in order to bring things back into shape.

The immediate results of all this reshuffling have been some exceptionally satisfying gigs and a soon-to-be-released full-price goodie titled "Be Good To Yourself At Least Once A Day".

The good news is also that the "Man sound" (and there is such a thing friends) has not only been retained, but also modified in such a way as to make it even better.

The very strong West Coast feel of the Penarth album and "Greasy Truckers" tracks — bearing a strong resemblance to early Quicksilver Messenger Service guitar inter-play though more high-energy and intense — remains intact; but the addition of Phil Ryan's organ-work has swelled the sound out.

Ryan is one of the very few organists around who knows how to play his instrument within the context of rock 'n' roll without having to consult a book of jazz-classical riffs for effect.

"Good To Yourself" will be Man's sixth album, with four long tracks — "Bananas", "Keep On Grinting", "Life On The Road" and "Come On" — gracing the two luscious sides of black vinyl.

"The idea behind releasing the 'Padgett Rooms' album was just as a gift for fans of the band," states Clive John, "We never really considered that it would take off as it has done."

United Artists still intend to keep the album as a limited venture. "We don't want the old line-up to be taken up and become thought of as what this band represent. We have been moving on from that stage. The music and feel is evolving more and more," explains organist Phil Ryan.

About the break — "Deke and Martin left for reasons they'd probably be more able to tell you about and that left Micky and Terry to carry on. Meanwhile Clive, Will and I were forming this band we were going to call

'Iorueth Pritchard and the Neutrons' and when the news came through it was either a case of Mick and Terry joining the Neutrons or us joining Man. Obviously Man had the name and reputation, so here we are."

The individual members of the band reckon to have been on the road for an average of seven years. "We thrive on it. The thing is, the minute you get off the road you start thinking about your music and that starts you right back."

Man can claim to be the first all-Welsh "progressive rock" band to start really making a strong impression on British audiences.

Now there seem to be any number of Welsh bands ready willing and able to deliver in no uncertain style — the Grand Funk of Cardiff, 'Budgie, and Swansea's Quicksand are two quite amazing rock 'n' roll acts down at Rockfield in Monmouth. There's also Magic Muscle, Hawkwind's second cousin, from Bristol, now signed with Island.

But Man are up and away the strongest most creative unit currently to be found on that side of the border.

Be good to your ears at least sometime in the near future. Go and hear them at a live gig and be converted.

Rosie Hardman: In the McTell class

ALTHOUGH I've said it before, it will bear repetition — some contemporary albums of the "personal statements from my diary" type can be rather draggy.

Often, it's the fact that the songs themselves are substandard, but even when they are well structured and musically acceptable the subject matter is often plain boring.

Now it wouldn't be fair in any case to describe Rosemary Hardman's new album "Firebird" (Trailer LER2075) as a personal diary record, but, by and large, personal songs are Rosie's main output.

When she laid down the tracks for "Firebird", Rosemary said, "The new LP has enabled me to look at my songs from the outside." She explained that she's been able to look at her own very personal statements more objectively as music.

Though I believe that to be true, the record's obvious best point is that the songs on it are easily the best crop Rosie has ever produced.

I've known Rosemary Hardman since she was writing, in 1967, songs such as "Child Of Merseyside" and "This Is My Mountain". She sang her early songs with a considerable drive and enthusiasm that one can recognise in retrospect as reflecting the fashion then currently in vogue on the folk scene.

In '65 Rosie started to dig folk music after visits to the Manchester Sports Guild, which still runs one of the biggest and most successful folk clubs in the north. The club was almost round the corner from Rosemary's home. Before that, she had been "churning out Sinatra-type ballads, the pop-stuff of the times."

After a club residency in Timperley, Cheshire, Rosemary went solo in '68, and gave up a job as a part-time agent when she found the club work was overwhelming her. About that time she made "Queen Of Hearts" for the Folk Heritage label — a nice record but not a complete picture of the artist.

Rosemary was much influenced by Alex Campbell who "took my act apart and put it together again — kindly, of course."

Late in '69 Rosie teamed up with Bob Axford, a fine guitarist, and the partnership lasted until last December. Bob and Rosemary made "Second Season Came" for Bill Leader's Trailer label, and even here her songs showed a much quieter, reflective person.

Rosie's new album is even less turbulent in mood, taken as a whole, though some of the quieter songs on it seem to have come out of the fire that burns in Rosemary's mind and that symbolically decorates the sleeve.

There's a fair sprinkling of "guest appearances" on the record from June Tabor, who sings a very effective harmonic duet with Rosie on "Song To The Evening Sky," Carole Pegg, Robin Dransfield and others. And the backing musicians include Clive Woolfe, Chris Thompson, Bob Axford, Alun Eden, Sue Draheim, and Barry Dransfield.

The lyrics and tunes are well structured, the musicianship provides settings that form a backcloth of rich musical tapestry. And the songs... Well, it would be a futile exercise to give a track-by-track rundown, but the songs are right up in the Ralph McTell class, and that's a very high class indeed.

AMERICAN PIE?

.... People still think we're an American band

DAVE "CLEM" Clempson lives in a flat in South London with his wife, numerous cats and dogs and around fifteen guitars.

That is, at least, when he's not out on tour with Humble Pie, one of the most hard working of the world's more illustrious bands.

It's now been just over a year since he left the comparatively rarified atmosphere of Colosseum to join the Pie... a rough and ready year in which he's seen the band establish itself very firmly in the top league.

This week they start to tour Britain and, for Clempson, it comes perhaps at the highest point in his career. It's fairly stale news that he was never too happy with Colosseum and although the Pie's style of music isn't nearly as complex, Clempson now has more faith in himself as a musician.

"As a guitarist Steve has taught me to respect what I've got and bring it out," he explains. "Colosseum was strange. Because the band was always trying to encompass different types of music, they were always trying to get me to change my style to fit whatever was going down at the time.

"But Steve digs the way I play and has just been telling me to bring it out. And let's face it, that's the only way. If Hendrix had tried to play like Clapton he'd have been nothing.

"Often I used to feel very restricted and frustrated in Colosseum because it was six people all equally strong in what they were doing and we had to satisfy everybody.

"You had so many bars here and there, and, because it was Jon's band and because Jon couldn't control it, everything had to be arranged.

"Now Steve or I can do anything we like on stage. We can start playing a different number and sometimes do. We started 'Honky Tonk Woman' like that.

"Steve started playing the chords one night and we all joined in. We'd played it before a bit at rehearsals because it was one of our favourite numbers. It hadn't been arranged or anything and now it's one of our best stage numbers. In fact our whole set is very loose — anything can happen."

WHAT ABOUT Steve Marriott, I wondered. In the past he's had a reputation for being a little difficult to work with.

"Yeah, when I joined the band I expected Steve to be more or less in control of everything but really I've been free to do almost whatever I like — more than I was in Colosseum.

"The point is he's got an incredible amount of energy. You have to cope with that and it depends whether you dig him or not. Everybody in the band recognises what each other's good at. To me he's encouraged me as a guitarist more than I thought anybody could and I'm really grateful for that.

"Steve does the big show on stage and gets most of the spotlight but he's one of the best in the world for doing that, so it'd be stupid for us to say he's got to share it. I suppose if any of us got jealous of Steve then the whole thing would fall apart but I can't see that happening.

"I suppose Steve got his reputation for being whatever he's supposed to be with the Small Faces and in a way I can understand how all that came about.

"Actually we were on the same bill as the Faces at the Pocono Festival and it was amazing — apart from Kenny Jones, who's just a nice guy, they all still hate him.

HI, CATS 'N' KITTENS

All the New York oldie freaks turned up in force at the seedy Academy Of Music, down on 21st Street, last week. And for once the long-haired ushers didn't need to act like fascist police with the audience. Surprisingly, a rock 'n' roll audience is a lot tamer than a heavy rock audience. Or maybe it's not so surprising — de kids are younger, dat's all. Remember ripping up those Gaumont seats with the Coronation penknife?

They'd all turned up to see Ben E. King with the Drifters. Now, don't get me wrong, this isn't the Drifters currently in the UK and scoring big on the charts. This is ANOTHER group — in point of fact the SAME group that recorded "There Goes My Baby", "Dance With Me", "This Magic Moment", "Save The Last Dance For Me" and "I Count The Tears" back in '59 and '60. What's in a name, after all? About four hundred guys can claim to have been in the Drifters since they cut loose way back in the early fifties with leader Clyde McPhatter. How did it sound 12 years after? GREAT! Even Benny was surprised.

"We all got into it again so easily," he told me. "And we had those parts just right." The sound was good — even the guitarist who'd been on the original sessions was there — Abdul Samad, alias

OLDIES BIG BUSINESS

Billy Davis . . . Black Power invades the oldies.

They haven't done any more recording together, but Ben has been approached by Larry Marshall of 'Rock' magazine to cut some sides. He says he may do, but he ain't too sure — he's more interested in his new solo deals with J.J. Jackson.

Other acts on the bill include the Dovells, featuring Len ('Mr. Excitement') Barry, who were solid dynamite. They bopped through their US hits like "Bristol Stomp", "Bristol Twistin' Annie" and "Hully Gully Baby", while Len gave some nice versions of his solo goodies like "1-2-3" and "Like A Baby". The rest of the bill was full of Doo-Wop bird-name groups, crooning and swooning to the nostalgic audience.

Oldies are big business in New York, and another good venue is the Fantasy East in the Bronx, which is currently spotlighting the Platters, Jay and the Americans and Johnny Maestro and the Brooklyn Bridge. Maestro was lead singer with the Crests, who scored here with "16 Candles", "Step By Step" and "The Angels Listened In".

There's a cat named Wayne Cochran around, whose only album, recorded in 1967, features him on some good solid soul numbers. But he really excels at rock. His act is wild — he looks like a sweaty Conway Twitty with a platinum-blond candy-floss wig that stands a full six inches above his head. Or maybe it's his hair, I dunno . . . anyway, he makes Jimmy Savile's barnet look sober.

Anyway, if you see any of his records around in the UK, grab an earful. He's on Chess.

Another good Chess record is "Shoutin', Swingin' And Makin' Love" which features tracks by Jimmy Witherspoon, Jimmy Rushing, Al Hibbler . . . and Wynonie Harris. There's one for yer, Maxie! The Harris sides were the last he ever cut — "The Comeback", "Buzzard Luck", and "Conjured", arranged by Johnny Pate, famous for his work with the old Impressions. Jazz-blues shout fans — hear this one.

That's about it, except to tell ya that October is 'Chuck Berry Month', and if the number of times we hear "My Ding-A-Ling" on the radio is anything to go by, someone's doing a mighty good job of promotion.

SHORT SHORTS: You'd better creep your crepes down to the Palace Bars, Southend, on Boxing Day. They're holding a Ted's R & R Xmas Party with a free running buffet, a rock band — as yet unnamed — and a £40 prize to the holder of the winning numbered admission ticket, so you can buy a new drape.

Admission is 75p and if you're interested — who wouldn't be — ring Olive 'Mum to the Teds' Taylor at 07026 2369, or just turn up on the day.

● Wild Angels have a new single, "Beauty School Dropout", set for the next few weeks and Shakin' Stevens and the Sunsets cut a new single on November 2 tentatively titled "Fun Party" . . . Magic Rock Band's pianist Lew piled his 1000cc Vincent Norton into a Rolls. He's bruised and has a busted ankle but his bird Sue broke her leg and she's in Stanmore Orthopaedic Hospital.

● Mal Grey gigged with Yakety Yak recently . . . Wild Wally wowed 'em in Germany, and he's going back again . . . Remember Bill Black — one of Elvis' boppin buddies — he died on October 21 1965 . . . Stompin' sounds from Tongue Tied Danny's Wild Wax Show at the Swan, Kingston. He's there every Friday . . . Wild Angels are in Dublin on October 27 to play the Danny Hughes Show for Irish TV . . . Tony and Jackie Read want "anything by Eddie Cochran" as their album prize in our Wembley Park Fest competition. What superb taste, anything by Eddie is bound to be good, I'll get it off to you soonest. That's all folks, see you soon baboon!

nored him. Steve went up and asked him how he was doing and Ronnie just looked straight through him.

"And they caused such hassles that night I couldn't believe it. Like Rod refusing to travel with the other bands and insisting on his own private helicopter to fly him to the site."

AS FAR as this present British tour is concerned, Clempson isn't sure if it'll make much difference to the band's position in Britain, since he feels "a lot of people still think of Pie as an American band".

I asked if this worried them.

"In actual fact I think everybody is really happy about it," he replied. "That's what they set out to do when they started. Steve had to really, because if he'd tried to make it in England I don't think he'd be in the business any more simply because of the things some people were laying on him when he formed the band."

"It wasn't that they were ignoring him — some were being really vicious, saying he had no right to be on the scene. His only chance was to get on a new scene where nobody knew him and where he could start on an equal footing."

FRESH FROM FOLK

Album reviews:
ERIC WINTER

THE VALLEY OF THE TREES: Vin Garbutt (Trailer LER 2078). A convincing debut record from a singer much liked on the club scene. Good selection of traditional material, balanced with five instrumentals and five contemporary songs, four of which Vin wrote.

The title song is easily the best of these — a lyrical poem to Vin's own area. There's a good deal of inventiveness in Vin's playing of jigs, reels, and hornpipes too. He's specially good on that often overlooked instrument the penny whistle, which nowadays costs about 50p, of course.

BARRY DRANSFIELD (Polydor 2383 160). Divorced from his brother Robin, Barry gets here a chance to sing more, and what a pleasant voice he has. In a way, the album is the reverse side of the medal struck by Fairport when they took in the traditions to their repertoire.

Because Barry, ignoring the categories, includes reels and jigs (which show off his fiddling, of course), a Robin Hood ballad, a music-hall song, and several songs that draw on words/music from Humphrey, Weightman, Patrick Carroll, Mike Hurley, and Keith Reed. I like the record, but it doesn't quite capture the improvisations that Barry manages in a live performance.

BONNIE DOBSON (Argo ZFB79). Brave of Bonnie to rely mainly on her own guitar playing, with a sparse backing from Mick Maloney, Brian Golbey and Dave Moses, none of whom are credited on sleeve or label. Not surprising that she relies on her voice, which is lovely, but I'm glad she resisted any temptation to opt for the big orchestra.

The traditional songs include "Un Canadien Errant", "A La Claire Fontaine", and "Farewell to Nova Scotia". Gordon Lightfoot's "Long River" and Ian Tyson's "Four Strong Winds" and "Someday Soon" also appear. That last song never stales for me, and Bonnie sings it delightfully.

AN EVENING WITH THE SPINNERS (Contour 6870 588). Another selection of Spinners' material taken from now deleted records in the Philips/Fontana range. I have no quibble with Contour's policy of making available old material at bargain prices, but I feel they ought, for the sake of buyers, to say what they're doing somewhere on the sleeve. The live tracks, "Ellen Vannin", "Wimoweh" and "Drunken Sailor" are inevitably best, but it's good to have "Asikatali", "The Family of Man", and "Black and White". One sacrifice for the sake of the bargain price: no sleeve notes — a pity, since the Spinners always manage to be informative.

BANISHED MISFORTUNE: The Pealers (Polydor 2460 165). I'd like to say I enjoyed this album by the three likeable lads who make up the Pealers, but there's a touch of the trivial about it. "Dalesman's Lullaby" is taken in a hard 4/4 (or is it 2/4?) time instead of the 3/4 time it needs to develop its lyrical quality. "Bleacher Lassie" is straightjacketed by a too-strict guitar backing (much the same can be said about several other tracks). The Pealers are a London group but two are Dublin-born and the third has an Irish father. The group sounds rather like certain inferior groups that are ruining the music in the urban pubs of Ireland.

ABBEY ROAD: Richard Dawe cut a single titled "Tulip". Also in have been Stella and Bambos, who did a couple of nice latin albums for CBS a little while back. Fela Ransome Kuti's second album (the first was with Ginger Baker) won't now be available until the New Year, says producer Jeff Jarrett.

AIR LONDON: There's been heavy traffic at the Oxford Street studio this week — T. Rex, Wings, Carly Simon and ELO all working. Bolan and Carly were doing overdubs and mixing, as was Roger Cooke, while Mike Vickers came in to do a Moog demonstration. Jon Hiseman's new band, Tempest, have just commenced an album and Mike Harrison has been making a single. Allan Clarke, the King Sisters and Spike Milligan filled the gaps.

AUDIO INTERNATIONAL: John Leyton flew back from Los Angeles to record an album produced by Deke Arlon. Four Kenny Young songs were among the titles.

CHAPPEL: Ian Page's album, "Being Green", was completed by Ray Mills, and a single from the LP, titled "If You Add All The Love In The World", is issued by York this week. Ex-Strawb Tony Hooper has been producing Wooden Horse's second album.

AROUND THE STUDIOS
T. REX, WINGS, CARLY AT AIR LONDON

EDEN: Stonehenge have completed a single for the Bumble label. Orphan and folk singer Bo Idle have been other studio users.

IBC: The Chick Corea, String Driven Thing and Status Quo albums are now complete, and work on recordings for Tony Cole and Andy Bown continues. Currently, Daliah Lavi and Laurie Stivers are in.

ISLAND: Jim Capaldi came in to bop happily at Carl Groszman's session the other day. Carl, who was with Tin Tin and also wrote "Down The Dust-pipe" for Status Quo, is currently working on an album with his own band. John Martyn, Free, Mud, Scott English, Tommy Leonetti, Ruby James and the Sutherland Brothers all came in during the week.

MARQUEE: Tony Visconti has just produced a single with his wife Mary Hopkin; the Private Eye team are about to tape their highly-controversial Christmas offering. The Little Angels of Korea have been making an album and Ken Howard and Alan Blaikley have completed their entry for the Eurovision song contest. Other artists in the studio this week included Tony Atkins, Andy Bown and Mike Redway. Marquee has found that, with heavy studio commitments and forthcoming expansion, it has been necessary to engage the services of a marketing manager, Mike Jackson, who will handle all reservations.

MAXIMUM SOUND: Mike Hugg is well into his next album, and Manfred's also working on another one. Eddie Grant produced the De-Hems' single for Island and is now working with Muscle Power, the band featuring Tony Morgan as vocalist. McGuinness-Flint, once again album-making, have been in as have Flash and Biggles — the latter being led by Carl Palmer's brother.

MORGAN: Lou Reizner has been putting some music tracks together for the film "That'll Be The Day" — being made by David Putnam and Sandy Liberson, the team responsible for "Performance". The film, set in the late fifties, features Billy Fury as a rocker named Storm Tempest and also stars Keith Moon, Ringo Starr and David Essex.

Apart from those names, Ronnie Wood, John Hawkins, Jack Bruce, Rick Grech, Steve Winwood and Viv Stanshall have been in to record contributions and it is hoped that the Original Crickets will also help out on the soundtrack when they arrive in November. Meanwhile, the Kinks, Longdancer, Badfinger, Reason Why, Parchment, Laurie Stivers, Kala, Festival, Bitch, Rick De Johnette and Steve Jones have all been in.

PHONOGRAM: This week's visitors — Scott Walker, Even-song, Marsha Hunt, Wizzard. TRIDENT: The Mike D'Abo sessions continue, Gypsy, Atomic Rooster, Byzantium, Sale-na Jones and Reina James being the other studio users.

WESSEX: Tucky Buzzard's album, produced by Bill Wyman, was recently completed.

FRED DELLAR.

BELFAST, 1972: The British Army Saracen car rumbled along the empty streets in dawn's half light. The back doors were wide open, and inside sat soldiers. Eyes alert, bodies tense, trigger fingers poised, they scoured the area carefully. Hunched up, with legs astride, they held their powerful rifles: loaded and ready.

Belfast isn't a pretty sight. And as we — the Natural Acoustic Band and myself — drove from the docks to Queens University last Wednesday morning, the army was our first encounter. And of course there was the atmospheric tension in the imposed silence of a city at war. Tom Hoy and Robin Thyne heard a solitary shot as they came off the ferry.

We were frightened — because nobody has yet invented a bomb or bullet which differentiates between a musician and writer, or a soldier and IRA sniper.

As Krysia Kocjan says: "My immediate reaction is pity for the people. When you're surrounded by uncertainty like that, little things seem quite important to you. Your own steady routine seems important, because you might not have it tomorrow."

Strangely enough the national dailies and television networks have done just a dandy job in blowing up the situation into the unreal — headlining shooting incidents and riots but not the quieter moments.

And there are the moderately safe areas, such as the vicinity of the university. Yet there are alarms, security precautions. Double doors on hotels — locked until you're frisked for bombs.

In a Civil War of this sort it's the innocent who suffer. The two main cinemas do little business. And the number of top line concerts here during the troubles can be counted on one hand.

So when artists like NAB and Ralph McTell go there and perform, they're doing a lot of fine people one big favour.

The concert was carried on in safety. As the kids filed in, all 1,500 of them (and it could have been double that number given the space), guards checked for parcels and cases which could conceal a bomb. Nothing was found, and it was just like being in London. Except that the atmosphere — a mixture of genuine warmth, gratitude and appreciation — was far better.

Those bands who've refused to go and play in Northern Ireland should reconsider. All you big bread earners should skip the profits for once. Corny though it may sound, take some peace and good-vibes to the music-deprived people of Belfast.

After such a plea, I must mention the dangers. The night before this gig, and only 200 yards down the road, the UDA and British Army had a gun battle.

Another night: a university student, walking home, was caught in cross fire between an Army patrol and a mad gunman with sub-machine gun at his waist. Neither knew whose side the student was on as he lay there on the ground. Luckily they waited to ask. He's still alive.

WHAT it's like playing in a music-starved city, where bullets and bomb blasts are a constant threat. It takes a brave band, but the appreciative audiences make it worthwhile NAB's new member, bass player Amin Mohamet wasn't unduly worried by the Belfast scene. He's spent a year playing in Vietnam.

Our stay in Belfast allowed me to talk at length to the Acoustic Band, and see them perform one of the finest concerts I've ever seen (see Front Row Reviews).

Playing in Belfast was part of the band's policy, explained by Robin as "to play to as many people as possible just now". The result is that they've started to draw good crowds in the same way that McTell does. This is their first national tour.

"I think it's worked quite well," says Robin Thyne, usually the most reluctant of the four to talk. "We've played for maybe a week solid before, but never an actual tour. It's difficult to see the effect yet, until we see how many albums we sell."

"Our first album sold reasonably well for a first, but I think we need to play as much in Britain as possible."

Aside from sales though, Krysia believes these performances have given them a new confidence.

And this frame of mind obviously reflects in their new album "Branching In". In comparison to the first set, which was only representative of their stage act, it's more revealing — exposing individual interests in jazz, rock and electric music.

"We wanted to put down on record what we're really doing in our heads," Robin claims. "Just to get it all out. A lot of people might think it's not the Natural Acoustic Band, but they've got the first album to see what we're like now. I suppose we've branched out a bit. But the next album will be different again."

"We used strings on three tracks on this album, and they worked well. The sound is a bit heavier. Yet there are still a lot of tracks that are similar to those on the first album. So it's quite a mixture."

Is it more a commercial application of the music?

"Inadvertently, I suppose. We didn't say 'we're going to make this much more commercial' — not deliberately."

"Tom did play the electric guitar on several tracks," he continued, pin-pointing the obvious commercial factors. "He used to play electric guitar about three years ago though, and hasn't really touched one since. He just wants to get it out of his system."

"We are into a lot of different kinds of music, and I think the new album stresses that more."

The sound does, on the surface, indicate that the NAB have matured in regarding recording and stage shows as two separate entities — the former needing a wider, less specialised appeal.

Thyne is not so sure about that. "It's half and half; it's not completely separate. There are a lot of things on the album that we can more or less do the same as we do on stage."

Both Tom — better known as Elvis to his friends, and you'll know why if you listen to the album — and Robin are slightly frustrated at being perhaps unfairly categorised as purely acoustic and consequently folkie. This obviously is a result of the group's name.

They argue that electricity is not unnatural. And would like to progress into a wider sound scope. But Robin argues, "I don't think Krysia would fancy that. I think she's still into a more natural folkie feeling. Whereas Tom and I have always been into group rock and jazz. Whether we could play that as a unit and get away with it... I don't think so."

This inclination is backed by the inclusion of Amin, who, they say, "fills the music out. He gives it a lot of rhythm and solidarity. He adds a lot of life."

Krysia is undecided about the mode of music she'd like to follow. She agrees, however, that the new album "has exploded us into a different direction".

"This band is like a catalyst. Each of us is a different kind of musician."

"I think our differences are holding us together. Because it's really quite interesting."

So there's little chance of conflicting opinions causing a rift yet, because the band still have a lot of scope for experimentation as a unit. Robin comments optimistically: "We're happy now, but I'm sure there are a lot more things to come."

Hey, like another trip to Belfast?

GIVES OUT WITH THE REAL STUFF ON BLACK MUSIC
IN BRITAIN

MATUMBI EXPERIMENT WITH AFRO-REGGAE

ONE OF THE few fairly successful black British-based bands are Matumbi. Since their formation little over a year ago their aim has been to fuse Afro-rock music with a mild form of reggae.

They're a south London-based group of six. When I spoke to manager Noel Green I wanted to know why a group of West Indians were so interested in this musical fusion — which could leave them in the wilderness for many months, if not years.

Green just says: "We're still experimenting man."

MATUMBI: a new blend

We've tried on many occasions but generally the public has not been too enthusiastic.

Matumbi have been working mainly in the Midlands, and they also back vocalist Pat Kelly a great deal. But they haven't quite been able to attract as large a following in London.

However, at Hammersmith Palais some weeks ago they came third in a National Talent Contest semi-final, which takes them through to the finals in December.

At present the group are expected to back Pat Kelly on his next LP, and at the same time they're getting together some material for their own album.

Green thinks that when their LP hits the streets it'll cause a stir.

"I believe that the music of the black community in Britain won't stay in little isolated bags for much longer. Within five years we'll see African, West Indian and even Asian music combine to give this country one hell of a rich black beat. Man, that's exactly what we are trying to do, you dig."

REGGAE SEEMS at last to be accepted in Britain. How come?

Junior Lincoln, boss of Bamboo Records well-known for the high standard of ethnic reggae that they release, talked to me about the music.

"Reggae started as a dance like ska, bluebeat or rock steady, and it's been the most successful, so the public has decided to hang on to it."

"Today the music in Jamaica has reached the stage where it ceases to be influenced by any other form of music. Earlier, ska and bluebeat were very much influenced by R&B, but we have tended to drift further and further away with the passage of time."

"If reggae is handled properly, it's going to give the world a shock. But success depends very much upon the people who are handling it abroad. I'd like to see more attention paid to the artist who doesn't necessarily have a hit in the charts."

Green himself doesn't make commercial reggae records, and yet by some strange irony these are the very reggae records that the majority of the public buy in large quantities.

"My reason for not making them is simple. I find they don't do anything for me. I can't dance to them; I don't like them. I tried making them once and it was a disaster."

"We at Bamboo are fighting to preserve the beauty of the music. That was why we went to all the trouble of making a film explaining to the public what reggae was about."

What about the future of reggae? What would follow now that American producers were interested in the music?

"Personally I think it's fine for the music that they are interested in, but I'd like to see the real thing get a chance — so the public judge for themselves. The real thing has quite a lot to offer and there's plenty of room for improvement, providing too much commercial reggae doesn't force the good artists to cheapen their material."

Let's hope it all works out.

One 21-year-old who I have been watching with interest is Junior English, currently working on his second album. He plans to launch himself on to the British scene early next year.

BREAD ARE ONE of those rare groups who make beautifully polished records without sacrificing 'soul'. Their current success, "Guitar Man", is a good example. It comes close to being both slick and slushy, but neatly sidesteps both traps. It is, in fact, a good ballad which gives a highly romanticised view of 'life on the road'.

David Gates, Bread's main driving force, is the man behind those enchanting melodies. Happily married with four kids in tow, Gates is not exactly the classic example of a rock star. Bread live life at a more controlled pace than most of their rivals, as Gates explained to me at his Los Angeles home.

"We don't go on the road as much as some groups. We prefer to stay home and work on our songs — writing and recording. We feel we're a little better on those things, so we concentrate on them."

Is this because the original Bread line-up were all very successful session musicians, well versed in studio work but unused to touring?

"It probably is," said Gates. "I always feel at home in the studio. For me recording is just a little more interesting and challenging than touring."

The whole Bread thing has snowballed in sensational fashion. Four years on they are still gaining in popularity.

"When we got together," he explained, "we didn't plan to go on the road. But as Bread got more successful we felt we should do some gigs. I'm sure it was the right decision. It has helped our career."

"You get to know your audiences better and you can see which kind of songs they get the most pleasure from. It helps you to give them what they want."

Bread's recorded material is always free of over-indulgent solos. Their approach is fundamentally different to that of most heavy outfits. But they didn't set out with any set policies. Gates says they just stick to an elementary premise.

"I believe you gotta do what you do best. I think we write melodic songs and come up with some nice harmonies. We can play our guitar too, but we feel we're a little better on the vocal side. We like to keep the instrumentals down and enjoy harmonising."

"We do have some ideas for some longer songs when they're called for. But we don't sit down and say, right, it's about time we did a six minute record."

"We keep a very close eye on solos. I think there are too many boring guitar solos down on record already. We don't want to add to that pile."

You really can't write an article about Bread without

GOOD MELODIES AND NO JUNK

constant reference to melody. Gates really does come up with some superb songs.

"There's no specific person who I could say shaped or influenced my style of song writing. As I grew up, I heard all kinds of music. I had some classical training and I grew up in Oklahoma where there's a lot of country music, so that made an impression on me too. I took the melodic parts from everything. That's probably what shows up now. I've listened to a lot of things."

"But really, you've got to have that 'feel' for a good melody inside you to start with. Nobody can sit down and work out a nice song unless that is there. It's a thing people are born with."

Some of his best work is on the newly released "Best Of Bread" album. But, staying on the melody line for a moment, which other composers impressed him on that level?

"Several. Paul McCartney writes really good melodies, as does Neil Young. There are others, but those two guys come to mind real quick. Their melodies are haunting; they stay with you."

Getting back to his own music, Gates went on to talk about "Guitar Man". "I guess I do see life on the road with a band in some sort of romantic light, and so the guitar player in the song comes across as almost a folk hero figure. That was what we were trying to get across anyway."

Gates himself never really conceived of being anything other than a musician. "It was what I always wanted to do. I didn't know if I'd be successful at it, but as far back as I can remember I always liked music. I always felt I could play."

Bread's new album, "The Guitar Man", has just been released in the States. It's scheduled for early January over here. Gates likes it. "It's all new songs and I think it may be the best we've ever done. It's got some good ballads and some good rock tunes, as well as a little country."

Earlier he had said how much Bread enjoyed recording, yet their records are always uncluttered with gimmicks. I wondered if this called for a lot of self-discipline.

"We do like to keep the albums simple, but there's a lot of technical stuff goes in to getting that effect. The records we make are pretty clean. You can hear all the parts and the echos we use. We spend a lot of time trying to get it just right. "Our biggest hope, when we make an album, is to come up with something that people can listen to again and again without finding it monotonous."

"The more things you throw into a record, the greater the chance of it getting boring. If you've got a good melody you can keep it clean. Some artists don't have the melodies, so they throw in junk."

"The only aspect of recording we do get carried away on is laying down the vocals. As I said before, we really enjoy singing together and we keep putting on harmony after harmony until we're all going crazy and we just have to stop."

"The big thing about recording is you've got to know when to say, okay that's it. We'll leave it there."

RECORDS

"Festival Wise" (Dynamic) by U-Roy is low-keyed stuff, but nevertheless it's U-Roy all the way. "Looking Back" (Jackpot) by John Holt is definitely a good one. He's a much underrated singer and handles this old classic with grace. "This is Pepper" (Attack) by U-Roy Jr. — a poor attempt at the work of a master in his own right. "Come Down" (Grape) by Carey and Lloyd: I love this little disco goody. "Let's Stay Together" (Acker) by Alton Ellis: a fine try from Alton, but trouble in the pressing. "Shark in Bed" (Harry J.) by Scotty: the best of this week's releases; based on the current hit "Breakfast in Bed" and the U-Roy-type dubbings, this sounds almost like U-Roy — a beauty! "On Top Of The Peak" (Grape) by U-Roy: a typical U-Roy single. "Mr. Postman" (Pama Supreme) by Cynthia Richards: a strong beat, but somehow I don't think it's strong enough to make the charts. "People Make The World Go Round" (Song Bird) by Errol Brown and The Chosen Few: a simple reggae beat but somehow I don't like it; a poor record.

Playin' in the Band

INSTRUMENTS, EQUIPMENT by JOHN BAGNALL

ARGENT'S 3-PIECE

GOOD MUSIC, AND a tight, funky sound, aren't the only things to grace an Argent gig. For anyone who's into instrumental ideas, the band has some nice custom jobs to show around.

There's Russ Ballard's space-age Stratocaster for example, and Jim Rodford's ultra-neat double-neck Fender conversion which effectively gives him three instruments in one.

Rodford's double-neck guitar combines four-string bass plus six-string lead necks on one body. It's a combination to which he beat the mighty Gibson Corporation by quite a healthy margin.

What's more, the two halves can be readily separated and returned to their original form.

The Fender Precision Bass and Fender Stratocaster instruments together cost Rodford the trifling sum of £130.

The Strat, in fact, only cost £40. It belonged to a friend of Rodford's, a musician he'd played with in the late fifties. When Rodford bought it about three years ago it had lain untouched — and in almost-new condition — under the friend's bed for near-on ten years.

Another friend of Rodford's — a guy by the name of Roger Miles — performed the conversion. The top cutaway of the bass was removed and likewise, the bottom cutaway of the Strat.

The cutting was made so that the two instruments are simply slid-together to form the one double-neck guitar. Separated, the cutaways can be slid back to form the original instruments.

The only body conversions needed were a replacement, non-standard scratchplate on the bass section, and the re-siting of the Strat's controls from the bottom to the top cutaway.

"What worried me was that the machine heads of the top Stratocaster neck might foul those on the bottom Precision neck. There was no way of finding out, without trying it."

He needn't have worried. They cleared each other by a bare eighth of an inch. And Rodford had himself a unique guitar. Or rather, three of them.

post and packing), direct from POKI PRODUCTS at 14/16 High Street, Addlestone, Surrey. A two-input model, for tuning two instruments together, costs an extra 60p to special order.

ALAN BOWN, EX-HERD man and trumpet player extraordinary, is currently doing things with his instrument that Louis Armstrong just wouldn't have believed.

The secret lies in the 'bug' — miniature pick-up — that Bown has had fitted to his trumpet mouthpiece. Using it to amplify the trumpet (or the flugelhorn that Bown also features on stage), he can put the instrument through any electronic gadgetry that happens to catch his fancy.

Generally, though, Bown sticks to two units. "I use a wah-wah pedal and an octave divider," he told me. "The octave unit is very neat and very small — it clips on to my belt. It's made by MAESTRO and called the MAESTRO 'KING'." Don Ellis told me about it.

Apparently it's the octave divider, says Bown, that does it all. Five switches give him a choice of straight trumpet or two octaves with a range of different tones. And the wah-wah pedal gives him, with the aid of his practised breath control, access to a range of sounds that most people just wouldn't associate with such an instrument.

Bown himself had to rethink the technique of playing. "You can't handle it in the same way you would ordinary trumpet," he explained. "It's a question of not playing actual notes — more of playing a percussion thing."

"Of course people are going to say things about a trumpet being used in this way — things about a trumpet not being a rock instrument. But why shouldn't it be in a rock band?"

Bown will be taking a new band, Alan Bown's Brainstorm, on the road in the near future.

Poki claim a lot of uses for it — for tuning up, as a play-anywhere practise amplifier, or as a preamp/treble booster when used with a conventional set-up.

It switches on when a jackplug is inserted into the input socket, and switches off when it's withdrawn. The four PP3 batteries have a working life of about 24 hours.

SHOP

DEALER

Imports/record distribution/the worst companies/Zep set/boozeless Charisma

ONCE, AN IMPORT record shop was just that. Nowadays import retailers have to be a little more careful. Regular readers of "Shop" would have realised that I'm an import dealer importing records from America that usually, English companies don't want to release because of limited sales, and so on.

I know import dealers upset quite a few of the major record companies, because the record companies say we spoil the impact of an initial release.

I say we create more interest in the product — but that's another story. To my mind, records should be released simultaneously over here with the States; WEA are trying to do just that.

For instance I imported a Tim Buckley album called "Greetings" from L.A. and the Doobie Brothers album, "Toulouse Street." I had both these albums for about a fortnight, and they were selling very well, when suddenly WEA announced that they would be releasing both albums as a rush release — which they did, but not as a British pressing.

They imported the albums and stuck a sticker on the front of the sleeve saying "special import," and giving the British number. Well done, WEA. It's good to see a record company giving the customer — if not the retailer in this case — a fair crack of the whip. But please give the dealers a little more notice, and if you're going to import, make sure you import enough. In the case of the Tim Buckley album it is now out of stock, and I understand it is not being pressed over here for the time being.

I LEARN FROM my importer that there are quite a few nice albums to be released in America in November, including Neil Young, Frank Zappa, Captain Beefheart, Paul Butterfield, a triple set of Grateful Dead, The Faces, America, Youngbloods, James Taylor, Rod McKuen and Dionne Warwick.

Now all the above names record for WEA, but as yet my representative for WEA has not shown me any of these new issues. Are WEA going to import and do a rush-release on them, or will they be released as an English pressing in December and after Christmas? We shall have to wait and see.

I shall be importing all of the above mentioned goodies, as will a lot of other retailers, so November looks to be a good month for new albums.

TALKING OF NEW albums I understand that there could well be a new album before Christmas of Led Zeppelin. Again it will be released by WEA, and it will be released here at the same time as in the States.

Nice one WEA. I only hope the company manages to cope with the Christmas rush, plus the new releases.

BEING A WEST END dealer I get invited by quite a few record companies to hear their new bands, and at these functions booze flows like water — perhaps this is because a good half of the bands sound better through a drunken haze.

But back to the point; Charisma invited some dealers to the London's infamous Marquee for a drink and to listen to Capability Brown, Spread Eagle and another band whose names escapes me.

On this particular evening I couldn't make it, but I asked another member of the staff to go and in the morning report what the bands were like.

This he duly did, but was very upset by the reception he received — he said he couldn't get a drink. The only people who were allowed to get drinks "were members of the Charisma organisation, who all wore badges." If you didn't have one of these badges, or if you didn't know one of the Charisma staff, no free drinks. You had to pay for them.

This was a little unfair on parched and hardworking shop staff, Charisma. After all you'd invited the dealers for drinks as well as to listen to your bands. Only half of your kind invitation was fulfilled.

LAST WEEK I received a letter from Mr. A. M. Edwards, of Mitcham, Surrey, who has a very valid complaint about a United Artists album by Bobby Womack, the album being distributed by EMI.

Mr. Edwards says that when he went to play the album he found it jumped on the first track. He tried the album on a couple of friends' players, but the fault was the same.

Quite understandably he was rather upset, so instead of returning the album to the shop from where he purchased it, he sent it direct to EMI as I suggested in this column some months back.

EMI returned a copy which they said was brand-new and had been tested, but they did not refund the postage and the fault on the album was the same. EMI implied that Mr. Edwards' record player was at fault, as must have been his friends. At this Mr. Edwards, as one can imagine, was rather annoyed, so he telephoned a Mr. Watkins who is the manager of EMI's customer services.

Mr. Watkins gave our hero a lot of technical advice about track weighting etc., but finished up saying that there was nothing he could do about it apart from giving him a refund for the album but not for the postage.

It was at this point that Mr. Edwards wrote to me. The only thing I can suggest now, but it's a thing I don't like doing, is for Mr. Edwards to take it back to his record shop and explain the situation.

Most retailers know how to get a record — faulty or not — back to a record company. It involves devious methods by the dealer. But as all else has failed, here it would appear to be the only course open.

IF A CUSTOMER places a special order with me then I try to give him a date when I expect the delivery, but this is not always possible as companies are somewhat erratic with their despatching.

I order every Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday, and all record orders are placed by phone within about an hour and a half of each other. Now theoretically, all my orders should arrive on the same day within a few hours of each other. But bet your sweet life — I'm lucky if I receive them within a day of each other.

If I had a record company "top chart" I would say WEA and CBS used to be about the best, with a same day delivery, but somewhere along the line it's deteriorated.

EMI, I usually reckon on getting the next day, but with their present troubles deliveries are anybody's guess.

Phonogram and Phonodisc (Philips and Polydor) can be called triers; RCA could be better, and Pye records you might as well forget.

With all the record companies you just can't tell when records will arrive, so if you go to your record store and ask for a record that is out of stock — and your dealer can't give you a definite time or date — don't get uptight.

Junkyard Angels

SOME PEOPLE do the strangest things. Not long ago I was browsing my lunch break through Dobell's when I was informed that some penniless blues freak was selling off a fantastic collection of post-war urban blues classics.

Never being averse to taking advantage of a fellow creature when he's down, I made off with the Albert King album currently under discussion. Grab yer toothbrush and let us away.

Albert King is the second best-known of the dreaded King triumvirate, the others being B.B. and Freddy. I forget who's currently claiming to be related to whom, but they share a common Mississippi background, and a common mastery of the guitar.

Albert's career didn't really get moving until he joined Stax Records (formerly licensed by Atlantic) in 1967, where he was produced by Al Jackson, and hacked in the studio by Booker T. & Co., plus the Memphis Horns and one Isaac Hayes.

This is basically his Stax "Born Under A Bad Sign" album, plus sundry singles. It opens up with "Cold Feet", which I originally bought in 1968 on a single.

It's basically Albert doing a mumbled rap about "sittin' in this studio for three days in a row now ... seems like no one can get a hit outta here by Sam and Dave." All good in-joke stuff.

"Crosscut Saw" features an arrangement which strongly influenced Michael Bloomfield and the Electric Flag on their version of Howlin' Wolf's "Killing Floor".

"Born Under A Bad Sign" is here in its original form, a musical work of unparalleled magnificence, along with "Oh Pretty Woman" (not the Roy Orbison tune), more recently covered by John Mayall and Paul Butterfield.

It's fashionable to say that Albert King knows six licks. That's as may be (not that I'm counting, you understand), but he sure plays the hell out of them, all of them.

For economy, attack, timing, tone production and taste, there's not a heavy trendy white guitar hero who can't learn from Albert King — and most of them have.

ALBERT KING: King Of The Blues Guitar (Atlantic SD 8213)

Ladies and gentlemen (and others), one of the true bosses.

This stuff was recorded between 1967 and 1969, and this compilation issued in '69. Sad to relate, A. King ain't done nuthin' better since. Give him time, though. Unlike now-you-see-'em-now-you-don't rock stars, they build bluesmen to last.

Crimson's dates in long concert series

THE RE-SHAPED KING CRIMSON set out on an extensive British tour next month, playing a total of 26 major gigs. In addition to leader Robert Fripp on guitar and mellotron, the outfit's personnel now comprises David Cross (violin and flute), ex-Family member John Wetton (vocals and bass), ex-Yes drummer Bill Bruford and percussionist Jamie Muir. The itinerary includes appearances at

London Rainbow and Manchester Hardrock, and the full schedule is as follows: York University (November 11), Guildford Civic Hall (13), Watford Town Hall (14), Derby King's Hall (16), Exeter University (18), Torbay Festival Hall (19), Plymouth Guildhall (20), Weymouth Pavilion (21), Colchester Essex University (24), Oxford New Theatre (25), Bournemouth Winter Gardens

(26), Malvern Winter Gardens (27), Bristol Top Rank (28), Cardiff Capitol (29), Preston Guildhall (30), Glasgow Green's Playhouse (December 1), Edinburgh Empire (2), Manchester Hardrock (3), Sheffield City Hall (4), Swansea University (6), Newcastle Odeon (8), Liverpool Empire (9), Birmingham Town Hall (10), Brighton Dome (11), London Rainbow (13) and Portsmouth Guildhall (15).

NEWS EXTRA

Beck for February U.K. tour

PLANS FOR A MAJOR British tour in February by Jeff Beck's group — now known as Beck, Bogert and Appice — are now being finalised. It will coincide with the release of the outfit's first album, which is to be recorded in America after their current U.S. tour. Their American itinerary — which opened at the Sportatorium in Miami last Friday — runs until November 12 and among acts which will be supporting them during the tour are the James Gang, Buddy Miles and White Trash.

HARDROCK: TOP ACTS UPCOMING

MORE BIG NAMES have been booked by the most progressive rock venue in the North of England, the new Manchester Hardrock. After the opening of Ten Years After's British tour at the Hardrock tonight (Thursday), the venue's full line-up for November includes Genesis, Capability Brown and Atacama (2); Ike and Tina Turner (6), Roxy Music and New York Dolls (9); Roy Wood's Wizzard, East Of Eden and Spontaneous Combustion (12); Emerson, Lake and Palmer (14); Incredible String Band (16); Velvet Underground (19); Santana (21); Hawkwind (26); and Fleetwood Mac (30).

8-hour gigs at Sundown

LONDON'S Edmonton Sundown is launching a new Sunday concert series to be known as "Sunday Joint". Each show will last for eight hours (3-11 p.m.) and feature six acts, with £1 as admission price. The first event is on November 12 when attractions set are Fluorescent Leech & Eddy, Focus, Brinsley Schwarz, Linda Lewis, Man and Ducks Deluxe.

GROUNDHOGS TOUR VISITS 26 VENUES

THE GROUNDHOGS are to headline a lengthy nationwide British concert tour, opening at Birmingham Town Hall on November 17 and running through until December 22 when they appear at London Rainbow. The itinerary includes a total of 26 venues, 15 of which have been confirmed and are listed in the Upcoming section of this week's Nationwide Gig Guide — the remaining 11 will be announced next week. Supporting the Groundhogs on all the dates so far announced will be Stray and Gentle Giant. Ticket prices at all venues will be pegged to a maximum of 90p and, in some cases, will be as low as 50p.

The tour — during which the Groundhogs will feature material from their sixth United Artists album "Hogwash" for release on November 10 — will be their first major concert series here since last November. Due to lead guitarist Tony McPhee sustaining a broken arm, they have not worked live since they returned from America in August — although McPhee has been routing and recording with the group since mid-September.

The British dates will mark the first occasion on which the Hogs have used Moog and mellotron on live appearances, although these and other electronic devices are featured on the "Hogwash" album. The tour will also mark the live debut of drummer Clive Brookes, formerly with Egg, who replaced Ken Pustelnik in the line-up two months ago.

Hawkwind' London gigs

LONDON DATES have now been added to Hawkwind's itinerary for their "Space Ritual" tour, details of which have already been reported in the NME — they are at Edmonton Sundown (December 29) and Brixton Sundown (30). Tickets for both concerts will be priced at £1, which will include a special Space Ritual manual. The tour will now open one day earlier than originally planned, as a result of a new booking at King's Lynn Corn Exchange on November 8.

Jr. Walker tour

JR. WALKER and the All Stars are to play a 13-day tour of Britain next month for promoter Danny O'Donovan. They will undertake a string of one-nighter dates, interspersed by several concert appearances. They arrive on November 10 and their first confirmed date is at Dunstable California the following night (11).

NEW ELP DATES

DUE TO THE heavy demand for tickets for the Manchester Free Trade Hall concert on November 13, Emerson Lake and Palmer have added another Manchester date to their British tour itinerary — it is at the Hardrock the following day (14).

The outfit's previously-announced concert at Cardiff Top Rank on November 12 has been cancelled, and instead they will now play two performances at Cardiff Capitol on November 23.

The ELP tour, opening at Bournemouth Winter Gardens on November 10, will be the first chance for live audiences to see Carl Palmer's specially designed Moog drum.

EX-FAIRPORTS BOOST ALBION BAND LINE-UP

A RIFT IN the Albion Country Band has led to the departure of two members, while a third is about to leave. Steve Ashley and Royston Wood have already quit, and fiddle player Sue Draheim will be departing shortly. Newcomers to the outfit, who have already joined, are Richard Thompson (who recently played in Sandy Denny's group) and singer Linda Peters who contributed to the Bunch's "Rock On" album. Discussions are at present under way with Martin Carthy, and the NME understands that he is likely to join the band in the New Year.

Referring to the departures from the band, an Albion spokesman said: "The music lacked the quality expected, and the band were being held back by this. But the split was at a musical level only." At present the group's line-up consists of four former Fairport Convention members — Richard Thompson, Tyger Hutchings, Simon Nicol and Dave Matlocks — plus Linda and, for the moment, Sue.

STACKRIDGE PANTO

STACKRIDGE are to present a pantomime based on "Treasure Island" during December. This follows the success of their Christmas Party tour last year. Stackridge and their guests, the Pigsty Hill Light Orchestra, will each play separate sets — then combine at the end of the evening to stage the hour-long panto, complete with costumes and scenery. Stackridge violinist Mike Evans will play Long Jane Silver, and the pirate crew will be played by "scantily clad young ladies". Details of dates and venues so far set are listed in the Upcoming section of this week's Nationwide Gig Guide.

KING'S CROSS CINEMA: MIDNIGHT GIGS AGAIN

A NEW SERIES of weekly all-night concerts at London's Kings Cross Cinema starts on Friday, November 3, with the JSD Band and the Roy Young Band. Shows run from midnight until dawn, and admission is £1. Subsequent attractions will include Quintessence, Man, Hardin & York, Juicy Lucy and Beggars Opera — with new Scottish outfit Nickelson resident on all shows. Promoter is Brian Adams.

A PROFESSIONAL CAREER AS A MUSICIAN

If you can play a musical instrument, or would like to learn, there could be a place for you in a Corps or Regimental Band of the Royal Armoured Corps.

Your training will include tuition on several instruments, and you could attend a course at the Royal Military School of Music, Kneller Hall and go on to qualify as a bandsmaster.

In addition, you'll have plenty of opportunity for sport, recreation and further education.

This is a chance to have a professional career in today's professional Army

If you're interested, write to: THE DIRECTOR OF MUSIC, HQ RAC CENTRE, BOVINGTON CAMP, WAREHAM, DORSET.

600 MERCEDES BENZ

BLUES

Big Mama, the Hound Dog howler who inspired Janis

IN THE DEEPEST depths of Transatlantic's Marylebone High Street (London) headquarters there's a wire cage which looks like Death Row in your favourite neighbourhood prison.

The bars and wire are there for good reason however. Behind them is stored the company's vast stock of black wax goodies, ranging from cake-walks recorded in 1900 to seventies-style heavy-rock.

The solid base of Transatlantic's catalogue is made up of material of a specialist nature: the aforesaid cake-walks, obscure classical pieces, folk music from around the globe, early jazz, and, of course, the blues.

The company's press officer, Steve Mann, took on the role of warder and the hefty padlocks, burglar-proof doors and warning systems were swept aside for him to gather me up a sampling of the company's product.

One album I'd been after was "Big Mama Thornton" (Arhoolie F 1028), and since Transatlantic now handle distribution of imported records from the Berkeley, California, based label, I got a copy.

Big Mama Willie Mae Thornton's greatest claim to fame is that she recorded the original of "Hound Dog" in 1952, though it wasn't released until a year later.

Legend has it that the Leiber/Stoller songwriting team — later to win renown with the Coasters and other acts — handed her the song scribbled on a brown paper bag.

Big Mama doctored the words a little, added a lot of hollering and screaming and came up with her biggest hit to date: "That song must have sold two million copies — and I was paid one cheque for 500 dollars, and never another cent," she claims.

The daughter of a minister, Big Mama was just 14 when her mother died and she had to start fending for herself. So she upped and left Montgomery, Alabama, to join Sammy Green's "Hot Harlem Review".

"I learned to sing, blow harmonica, even play the drums, just by watching other people. I don't read music but I know where I'm singing," she says. "If I hear a blues I like then I try to sing it my own way. It's always best to have something of your own — I don't sing like nobody but myself."

Settling in Houston, Texas, she eventually played opposite Johnny Otis's Revue: "He had Little Ester with him. I sang the Dominos' song 'Have Mercy Baby' and stole the show so Johnny took me to New York."

"We played the Apollo and that's where they made their mistake. They put me on first. I was out there to make my name and I did — I stopped the show and Little Ester didn't even get to appear. The manager told Johnny he was putting me to the top of the bill."

So Big Mama travelled round with Johnny Otis and eventually went on her own, recording "Hound Dog" then forgetting all about it as the company had shelved their original release plans.

"One day I turned on the radio and heard the record. I just had to rush out to the store and buy it. Then I had to buy a record player 'cause I didn't own one and sit in my dressing room, playing the record and learning the song all over again so I could include it in my show."

After "Hound Dog", Big Mama's career settled down to the gruelling round of small-town one-nighters and sleazy club gigs which is the black blues singer's usual lot.

Then in 1964 she tore the Monterey Jazz Festival apart, which led to a trip to Europe with the Folk Blues Festival and the "In London" album. On returning home she cut a sensational album (Arhoolie F 1032) backed by Muddy Waters — thinly disguised under the pseudonym of "Clear Creek" — his half-brother Otis Spann on piano, James Cotton on harmonica and Francis Clay on drums. It's called "Big Mama The Queen Of Monterey" and on it you'll hear Muddy Waters play the most spine-chilling guitar break ever recorded. That's on "Everything Gonna Be Alright".

Later on she recorded two albums for Mercury which feature a more modern though still 100-per-cent blues sound.

Of these, "Stronger Than Dirt" (Mercury SMCL 20176) was released here and is worth looking for, featuring a fine version of Albert King's "Born Under A Bad Sign" and a sensational reading of the soul standard "Funky Broadway".

Remember "Ball And Chain," which Janis Joplin recorded? Well, Big Mama wrote that for her in 1961 and it too is on this superb album.

FOR A fresh taster of Albert King's own work, Stax will soon be releasing a brand new album called "I'll Play The Blues For You", already available in the States on Stax STS 3000.

Like his namesakes Freddie and B.B., Albert King has sometimes been accused of selling-out in order to reach rock audiences.

Being signed to Stax and recording with the Bar-Kays and Isaac Hayes' Movement as his rhythm section, plus the Memphis Horns' brass, would seem to add force to this argument — but only if you accept the to me stupid premise that the blues should be a self-contained and insular music form.

For my money King can keep on rockin' and boppin' as long as he likes. After all, while his sidemen may be soul orientated it's obvious that they love the blues as any native of Memphis should.

STAY WITH IT, AIR

BEWILDERMENT AND SHOCK are the only words capable of describing my present feelings. Curved Air have split down the middle. Why, at almost the peak of their musical climax, should this band, paralleled only by ELP in ability, do such a thing?

TOOK TAKES OFF

I THOUGHT I'd write and thank you for the Steve Took article. It seems that you're the only music paper to take an interest in his talent. I sincerely hope that he starts bringing out his own records instead of being "Bolan's man" — and gets the recognition he rightly deserves.

So all you Bolan and Cassidy boppers, take a good look and listen to this guy. He's worth it and one day he's gonna be big. Very big. — BELINDA, Horsham, Sussex.

JAZZ

GOOD TO see the inclusion of a few jazz reviews in this week's NME (October 14).

But looka here, is this all the space a major music paper can give to jazz? How about a page or two a week? You could make it good. — C. le VAY, London, S.W.8.

UNBELIEVABLE. Peter Green actually got one point in your guitarists' poll. I just can't believe it. Somebody else remembers that brilliant man.

That fella in Budgie's got real taste. Many thanks. Everyone else seems to have forgotten him. — J. NEWLARD, Tadworth, Surrey.

JIMI HENDRIX the person may be dead, but Jimi Hendrix the musician lives on. — EDWARD CURTIS, Helston, Cornwall.

RE: YOUR "Under The Influence" column (NME, October 14) where Graeme Edge states that a group called the Flee-Rekkers did not make a record.

Well, I have three singles recorded by them between 1960/62. The first was "Green Jeans"/"You Are My Sunshine", which was produced by Joe Meek; the second was "Blue Tango"/"Bitter Rice" and the third "Sunburst"/"Black Buffalo". I also have an EP of theirs with "Brer Robert"/"Capri"/"Hangover"/"Phil The Flutes Ball", and a tape with "Lone Rider" and "Kon Tiki" on it. — ALASDAIR SMITH, Hawick, Roxburgh.

THIS LETTER concerns our liberty as people to choose what sort of entertainment we wish to have. Until today I was under the impression that Hawkwind were going to play at Preston.

I have just discovered that the local council have banned them from playing in Preston. Why? It's not because they wouldn't play, not because they have long hair, not because they fear riots. It's because Stacia flashes her boobs. It's enough to turn anyone to violence. — P. GARDNER & N. HUNTER, Preston, Lancs.

I WAS completely resigned to the fact that Gary Glitter was a secondhand imitation but I

Without Way and Monkman, Curved Air just won't be. They formed the core of the group and it was their influences that predominated in the group's unique originality.

The vivacious "Vivaldi", the ecstatic "Everdance" and the hauntingly melodic "Marie Antoinette". All of this is to be crushed out and buried. What a crime.

Air are a beautiful group, made up of beautiful people playing beautiful music.

— SINCLAIR LOUGH, President, Curved Air Musical Appreciation Society, Fife, Scotland.

was very surprised to find that his advertising agency have also shown a lack of originality by stealing Roxy Music's ideas.

I refer to the double star with his head in it. Now look at Roxy's album adverts. —

J. JOHNSON (name and address supplied).

UPON READING your issue dated October 21, I came across a rather sarcastic remark referring to my department written by "A Dealer" under the heading of "Shop".

I would appreciate it if you could explain to the gentleman that it is certainly not EMI Imports that puts the little stickers on the nickers, but WEA in the USA. However, the whole point of it is, the sticker is there to take the mickey. People desperately try to get them off and there is nothing obscene underneath. Just a little joke to get people smiling.

Trusting that this will get a "smile" from our "Dealer". — J. R. van HENGEL, Manager — Import Sales, International Sales Division, EMI Records, Hayes, Middlesex.

I'M SURE it's very nice of Rockin' Henry to remind us of the passing of Gene Vincent, but this information could have been directed to a higher source. Namely Capitol Records, who, a year after Vincent's death, have yet to release a memorial album in this country. — J. BARLOW, Sheffield.

NEXT WEEK IN NEW MUSICAL EXPRESS

CHART OF THE CHARTS

NEXT WEEK'S music packed NME is a must for any fan or follower of pop and rock — complete listings of the big and biggest singles hits of the past 20 year, and the artists and groups who made them. NME started the first British chart in 1952; others followed. All the facts — and some fascinating answers — are provided in the lists compiled after months of research by writer Derek Johnson. The week after, we publish the full run-down of album hits and artists.

Both are in a free kingsize wallchart supplement provided with the paper. A once-only and authoritative slice of rock history — next week with NME.

Only with NME next week plus exclusive interviews
