The Chart Points Tables are compiled from the singles and albums. Top Thirty charts, published weekly by NME. Every week throughout the year, points are awarded on the basis of 30 for a No. 1 placing, 29 for a No. 2—and so on, down to one point for a No. 30 position.

The resulting tables are a guide to chart consistency and popular to chart consistency and popular.

The resulting tables are a guide to chart consistency and popularity during the year — but, of course, they don't accurately reflect actual sales figures. For instance, the best-selling single of the year was probably Wings "Mull Of Knuipre" — but its sales were compressed into such a short period that the points table doesn't do it full justice.

As a sort of recompense, here's a picture of Linda McCartney wearing an old-style nany cap from HMS Mull of Kinyre, a Royal Navy repair ship launched in 1945.

Elvis: spring tour

ELVIS COSTELLO and the Attractions will be fouring Britain in the spring, Andrew Lauder of Radar Records told NME this week. The exact period in their U.K. trek is dependent upon dates now being fixed up for their return visit to America, but it's tikely to be around Murch or April. Costello and the band are currently in the studios recording the follow-up to their "Watching The Detectives" hit, for release as their first Radar single, probably in February. And it will be followed soon afterwards by their thest album. ELVIS COSTELLO and the RAT SCABIES has formed a new band and is already recording with them. The former Damued drammer has got together a line-up including ex-Clash guitarist Eddle Cos., former Tuff Daris singer Kelvin and bassist Steve. Provisionally named Teenage Dream, the band are rurrently rutting debut material, and plan to start material, and plan to gigging in the near future.

PISTOLS FLY TO U.S. AFTER BAN IS LIFTED, BUT.

Carter intervene?

IN A TOTALLY unprecedented about-face on Friday, just 48 hours after it had hanned the Sex Pistols from entering America because of their "moral turpitude," the U.S. State Department reversed its decision and gave permission for the hand to tour there. And NME understands that orders for this dramatic policy change came direct from presidential sides — and possibly even from Jimmy Carter himself.

No official reason has been given for this sudden change of heart, but it is clear that U.S. Immigration outhorities were subjected to some form of pressure. NME had pointed out to them that the bas was in complete conflict with Carter's speech last week, just before he left on his seven-nation goodwill four, in which he declared: "I am totally dedicated to the cause of human rights and freedom of expression."

contain dedicated to the clause of numer rights and freedom of expression."

An official then admitted they had not previously recognised the significance of this, particularly in relation to Press coverage. After a further series of phone conversations with executives on both sides of the Allande, NME was finally advised on Friday that the ban had been revoked.

Subsequently, both London and Washinston required decided.

heen revoked.

Subsequently both London and Washington sources dealed tesponsibility for the policy change, though one official hinted "off the record" that orders had some direct from the presidential enfourage in Warsaw, where they had been consulted during the first stop in Carter's "human rights" sour.

A secondary influence may have been Pistols manager Malcolm McLarent's threat to sneak the group into the States by the back door, via the Canadian border, which could have sparked a diplomatic incident.

via the Canadian border, which could have sparked a diplomatic incident.

So the Pistols duly flew off to America at the weekend, and opened a 19-day tour on Minnday. Their U.S. record label, Warner Brothers, confidently peedict they will take the States by storm. And McLaren feels that U.S. acceptance will open most of the docet in Britain, which have previously been closed to them.

Earlier, the State Department had refused to grant entry visas on the grounds that the Pistols did not meet the necessary requirements. There are many reasons why applicants are turned down — including criminal records, sexual deviations and drug consistions.

It's understood that two of the Pistols were the main stumbling blocks, one of them being Johnny Rotten, ostensibly because of his 260 fine for possessing speed. But despite previous minor convictions, it's probable the Pistols were banned not so much for any specific reason as for their reputation. . . until the authorities changed, or were persuaded to change, their minds.

Plans for the U.S. tour were put in hand because the Pistols' feature flim, due to start shooting this week, has been delayed yet again. A spokerman said it has now been postponed indefinitely, because the band "are more interested in being on the road."

had welshed on their contract.

Bill Wright of the Bankbouse Agency told NME, that he had booked the band for the Dewbory date through their agent, Richard Hermitage of Asgard, Bot, he said, doubt was cast upon the booking by their non-return of contract — plus the fact that the promoter left he was "being ripped off fee-wise". Accordingly, the promoter suggested a lower fee, and this — claims Wright — was accepted by Hermitage on December 9. Wright asys he doly confirmed the revised arrangement by telegram with Asgard and, as far as he was concerned, the Buzzcocks were playing Mr. Pickwick's as planned. Some bours later, someone else from Asgard contacted him to any the date was off, because the band had a recording session. Added Wright: "I still have so proof of this, and I can say that legal action is now in process."

THE BUZZCOCKS found themselves at the centre of another controversy this week, when the organisers of their cancelled December 12 gig at Dewsbury Mr. Pickwick's claimed they had welshed on their contract.

On the other hand, Asgard claim the gig was cancelled two weeks beforehand, because the promoter "had been losing money on new-wave acts". They say they sent a telegram threatening that they had welshed on their contract.

would take legal action if the gig didn't go ahead as scheduled.

The promoter then said he would take the Buzzczeks if they would reduce their fee, allege Asgard, and he added that he would continue to advertise them — "thereby twisting our arm". The band say they left this was unethical, and decided to scrap the date. "The idea of the promoter taking action against as is ridications," said a spokesman.

THE "STREETS" tour continues into the New Year with gigs headlined by The Lorkers at Dewsbury Mr Pickwick's January, 9), Huddersfield Ivanhoc's (10), Leicester University (13), Coventry Mr George's (14), London Camden Dingwalts (16), London Covent Garden Rock Garden (17), London Marquee (27) and London Stoke Newlegton Rochester Castle (28). At Leicester and Coventry they are supported by Reaction, and at Dingwalls by The Doll and Johnny G.

Uncle Frank back in town

FRANK ZAPPA returns to Britain later this month to headline three concerts London Hammersmith Odeor on January 24, 25 and

Tickets are on sale now priced $4, $3, $0 and $3, and the promoter is Floderick Bannister. These are the opening dates of Zappa's European tour. But his schedule does not include any other gigs in this country.

He is bringing over a new eight-piece band, including two keyboards men and two percussionists. The only familiar name in the line-up is ex-Mothers Of Invention member Roy Estrada on vocals, but Eddie Jobson is no longer in the band.

The long-delayed live album "Zappa In New York" is finally being issued this month by Warners to coincide with his

Gallagher & Lyle playing 28 dates

GALLAGHER & LYLE return to the British concert circuit next month, when they open an extensive 28-date tour, including four shows in Eire and three major London appearances at the Hammersmith Odeon. The band's new line-up for the tour comprises Benny Gallagher (bass, keyboards and vocals), Graham Lyle. (guitars and vocals), Billy Livesey (keyboards) and Ray Duffy (drums), to which another member and a brass section will be added. The support act has still to be named.

Halfway through the tour, the band film their own "Sight And Sound in Concert" showcase for BBC-2 screening a week or two later. And the little track from their upcoming LP is released as a single this weekend, with "Golden Boy" — a song not featured on the album — as the coupling.

Tuna in March

HOT TUNA are coming to Britain in March for what looks like being a fairly comprehensive toper. Promoter Frederick Bannister confirmed this week that the band have at last signed for a U.K. visit. He is at present setting up dates and venues, and these will be a mixture of concert and university gigs. Their timerary will be announced shortly.

Supremes, Martha Reeves for U.K.

THE SUPREMES, who were expected to break up after playing their "fatewell" concert in London during the summer, have not disbanded after all—and, in fact, they will be touring Britain again in May and June. The split looked inevitable when the last remaining founder member. Mary Wilson, announced that she was leaving the group. Promoter Athur Howes, who is lining up the girk?

announced that she was leaving the group. Promoter Arthur Howes, who is lining up the girk' visit, told NME: "I'm not sure what their personnel will be when they come over, but it's possible that Mary may be back with them again."

Howes announced that the group are opening at Sheffield Ficsta on May 14, and he expects to have other dates finalised shortly. They will also be going to Germany to headline a major Eurovision TV special.

MARTHA REEVES is now confirmed for a month-long British tour starting in the middle of this month. She'ill be backed by the Vandellas who have recently undergone a personnel change with two new members. Vonciele Faggett and Francine Howard, coming into the line-

Wings exceed million

A week before Chrismas, DAVID ACKROYD walked into his local record shop and bought Wiegs' single "Muli Of Klotyre"— and found that he had acquired the one milliouth copy of the record. To mark this rare event on the British market, DENNY LAINE (helt) presented him with a specially-minted Gold Disc on December 23, Dermand for the single has increased following the TV bashing it took over Christmas, and sales are now reported to be approaching the one-and-a-quarter million mark.

Grian Auger and Julie Tippett are back together again, recording an album titled "Encore" release by Warners in two munks' time. They scored their biggest hit ten years ago with the single This Wheel's On Fire", in the days when Julie's surname was Onscoll.

Elvis spoof revealed

THE MYSTERY SINGLE "Don't Cry For Christmas", released by Charly Records in late November, is now revealed as an Elvis Presley spoof and not the genuine prticle. There was speculation as to whether it was an early Presley recording, or a track he cut while serving in the Army. But it now transpires that the single was recorded in Sweden by a group of U.S. army deserters called the Rockabilty Raiders, with the aid of Duich singer Ricky Livid. Charly are now reissuing the instrumental B-side under the group's correct name as a brand new Aside titled "Hurricane Rock", coupled with an instrumental version of RCA have signed. Gloria Mundi to a long-term contract and issue their single "Fight Beck!" in early February. The group will be going on an extensive tour to coincide with its release.

Nell Young's new album has now been officially titled "Gone With The Wind". It's scheduled for February release by Reprise.

• Hawkwind stert work this month on a new album provision-ally titled "PXR-5". Ralease is plan-ned for the spring, when the band will be touring to promote it.

• A new single by Eno, titled "Kings Lead Hat", a re-mixed version of a song on his current album, is released by Polydor on January 20. The B-side, not on the tP, is called "R.A.F."

Tom Robinson's contraversial track "Glad To Be Gay", which EMI have been reluctent to reliable, it at test coming out. It's included on a three-track EP by the Robinson Band due out next month.

Buzzocks start work later this month on their debut album, for U-A refease on March 3. Tentatively (teld "Another Music In A Different Kitchen", it is a continuous recording with no single tracks. Meanwhile their single "What Do I Get" comes out on Januery 20.

At 63 degrees below zero my amps never sounded better.

Besides Scott Gorham on lead guitar. Thin Lizzy comprises Phil Lynott. Brian Robertson and Brian Downey.

They've had a string of LP successes from Vagabond of the Western World' to their latest, Bad Reputation:

The albums of the last few years have benefited from the gutsy Marshall sound. Scott Gorham uses five 50 Watt Marshall Valve Combos. Four are stacked up for his guitar and a fifth is used as a cross-stage monitor for Brian's guitar.

The Marshall range now includes two new Master Volume Vaive Combos. The 2103 100 Watt and the 2104 50 Watt Master Volume

The Master Volume Control allows the musician to regulate the overall volume whilst the pre-amp volume control produces the warm overload or clean biting sound as required, making these combos exceptionally versatile. The full Marshall tone equalisation is provided with Presence, Bass, Middle and Trobbe control.

Troble controls. A standby switch is provided to keep the amp in constant readiness.

"Like most bands, Thin Lizzy earned its reputation playing on the road.

This particular night, we were booked to play the Chicago Stadium. During the night the Alaskan weather had come down into the United States

The temperature was 63 degrees below zero. None of us had been through anything like

The city was completely trapped. There were accidents and ambulances were stuck three miles away trying to get through.

They blasted out warnings on the radio that no one should go out with any skin exposed, because it'd turn to frost-bite in three minutes.

Of course we were all worried how the amps would play:

We'd got all the stuff outside in the truck And it all started freezing over

Then a roadie got frostbite on one of his legs trying to get the gear out.

Well, the amps were perfect and 20,000 people managed to see us. Crazy!

I'd seen other bands using them but now. I'm calling the Marshall 50 watt comboing sound.

It's the sound I've been looking for.

A SECOND successive triumph for Abba, who again capture the Album Of The Year title, in terms of chart placings. Their "Greatest Hits" LP scored a runaway victory in 1976, collecting a massive 1018 points — and now they're done it again with "Arrival", which has notched up prechely 11 points more than last year's total.

But unlike last time, 1977 hasn't been a one-horse race. Quite the contrary, because three albums have been battling for the No. 1 spot virtually since the beginning of the year. Pleetwood Mac's "Rumours" looked as though it might just pip Abba's elpee at the post but, in the final analysis, failed to do so by just 30 points. In lact, if our survey had covered the full 52 weeks — instead of 51 — the final gap would doubtless have been reduced to about five points.

The third album in contention was "Horel California" by the Eagles, though it eventually had to settle for 912 points and third place. Even so, this is an improvement on their tift spot last year with "Their Greatest Hits."

When you remember that last year's No. 2 was more than 300 points behind Abba's winner, you realise what a close-fought race it's been between the three top albums — one of the closest in the history of these annual points surveys.

in the history of these annual points surveys.

Further evidence of Abba's consistency can be seen in the No. 5 spot, where their "Great Hist" set crops up again — giving it a total of more than 1700 points over the past two years, and a remarkable run of 78 weeks in the Top Thirty, Just above it in this year's list, in fourth place, comes the "A Star Is Born" soundtrack — which is, perhaps, the biggest surprise of the table's upper negions.

The success of compilation albums, and the TV sales exposure they invariably enjoy, can be gauged from the fact that collections by the Shadows, Diana Ross & the Supremes, Johnny Muthis and Combe Francis all figure in the first 20 placings.

But surely one of the most significant achievements by The Stranglers, who spearhead the challenge of the new-wave movement. Their "Ratus Norvegicus" LP claims a very worthy eighth place, while their follow-up "No More Heroes" is at No. 26 — and they thus become the only act, apart from Abba, to have two albums in the Top Thirty.

become the only act, apart from Abba, to have two albums in the Top Thirty.
Incidentally, the Pistols are at No. 36 — but of course, their LP is still in the charts, so its full impact is not reflected in the table covering just 1977.
Altogether during the past year, a total of 202 different albums appeared in the NME Chart — and by a strange coincidence, that's the same number has in the previous year.
NEW-WAVE has also estallshed itself convincingly in the singles chart, which for so long has been dominated by MOR and teemplop sounds—and it's refreshing to see The Stranglers and The Sx Pistols occupying 8th and 9th places respectively in the accompanying table.

respectively in the accompany-ing table.

Nevertheless, the MOR freaks have the last laugh—with David Sout capturing the coveted top spot and Bosey M at No. 2, both of them in their first year on the

of them in their first year on the recording scepe.

Abba, kast year's No. 1. drop to No. 4 — having been overtaken in the very last week by Showaddywaddy. Not surprisingly in view of the sales rush that followed his death. Elvis Presley is at No. 5. And Rod Stewart is the only one of last year's top Tenners, apart from Abba, to retain a place in the leading ten this time.

Altogether 197 acts appeared in the singles Top Thirty during 1977 — three less than the record total of the previous year.

THE TORMENTS OF THE DAMNED

(a somewhat sobering cautionary tale of our time)

WHAT HAPPENED?

Charles Shaar Murray asks, is that a light at the end of the tunnel - or another oncoming train?

IGHT A candle (black, of course) for the souls of The Damned... It's 4.15 and Stiff Records the day after the final gig of The Damned's less than spectacularly successful tour of Britain, and the Captain Sensible Show is still in full swing. He's been at it for most of the day and he won't go home. He been answering the phones in his own inimitable manner and driving both incoming callers and the switchboard totally utterly and completely pineapples in the process. There is a steadily increasing desperation quotient in the increasing desperation quotient in the Captain's determined assaults on the consciousness of everybody who passes through the portals of Stiff Records and proportional increments of desperation are being displayed by his audience.

Mind you, it ain't necessarily Sensible's fault. Whenever someone new wanders through the door(and in this instance it's a passed of kids from some 'zize or other) they immediately lamp the Captain in mute expectation of some form of deluxe weirdness from him.

Just as long as some one effe is the Captain's victim, that is. Then it's cool. Then you can sit around and giggle at the crazy you can sit around and giggle at the crazy man. Safely.

Not to worry. This afternoon, the Captain's dementia is turned strictly against himself, as — ultimately — it always has been. His throat is caked with something that looks like blood. No-ome cares enough to ask him whether it is. I didn't either.

It'd've kinda spoiled the magic, you know?

This time he's wearing a badge —
home-made scrawl-over feit-rip job —
announcing "The Damned: The Queen Gives Good Blow Jobs" and backing it up with a rap of spectacular asininity in a sort of post-Derek-And-Clive vein (as in jugular) about how the Queen — right? — is gonna be coming round any moment — right? —
she wants everybody to be ready — right?
And he's in the middle of this inane rant when he suddenly yells "Your Majesty!" and leapfrogs out into Alexander Street. He stands there in the cold, hauls his jeans and greasy Y-fronts down around his ankles, still yelling. Finally he gets dressed again and a la-a-a-rif as long as the beers keep comin'.

VENTUALLY Brian James arrives — red shirt black levver blue jeans white shoes — and an expression which resembles a tentative smile that's trying to force its way past a studied scowl. Alternatively, it's a tentative sowl infiltrating a studied smile.

I've known Brian James longer than any of his colleagues: met him a long time ago round Nick Ken's place when he and the Big K were in a band called The Subterraneans (he had long hair in those days, if in matters, but then so did Kent and so did I). They were raving and drooling about this increrrerred-ible drummer they'd just fatched onlo. name of Chris, and James struck me as a fairty pleasant and positive sort of bloke, but it'd have to have been a hot day in January before It'd ve pegged him as the future of rock'n roll.

A few months later — prestof change-ol — Brian James plus The Subterraneans' rhythm section plus Dave Vanian were The Damned: the first to get hit singles — albeit minor hit singles — the first to offense who had to get an album out, the first to plaster their punitus across TV screens via a teenybop wonder land fantasy like Supersonic— the first to lour with a ranking star band like T Ren— the first to soew up in a big way.

Golden boys around a year ago, about as hip as glittery platforms and day ice right now, dazed, confused and pissed off. Popular media figure and human outrage Rat Scabies is out of the band and firing off stab-yor-back verbal fusillades in his vapour trail. Their initial sponsor and Mr Fixit Jake Riviera is off and running with Elvis Cosello and Nick Lowe, Siff having proved as much of a stepping stone to greater things for Jake as it was initially intended to be for its acts.

And the hoter half of Siff Records — in the person of noted Paddy entrepreneur Dave Robinson — has washed his hands of The Damned after the metual freezeout bust the mercury right out of the thermometer.

Sone management sans Scabies, sons record company, sons everything ... everything except them

KAY, SO what the helf happened? At the time when it seemed The Damned were out in front, aiming for the mass rock audience, they were in fact zooming straight to Oblivion Central.

The audience they were after succumbed to The Stranglers instead, who maintained far more "Punk Credibility" (whatever that is) white simultaneously playing a music far more acceptable to the denizens of Mainstreamland. Over on the other wing, The Sex Pistols and The Clash (far more The Damned's comtemporaries, having sprung from the same jamming circles as James Et Ce') reached and maintained their positions simply by being the best and the most copied.

Their singles — clever, taut and witty — nevertheless didn't get high enough to stay in the public consciousness the way The Stranglers' singles did, or The Jam's, or the Pistols.

Their first album — darkly explosive and garnished with a couple of good songs here and there — simply wasn't as manically playable as The Clash's or The Ramones'. The songs weren't all strong enough, and Dave Vanian — even though he sings in tuce — simply didn't sound as good as he looked.

In America, they bombed. Their interviews in US rock rags demonstrate the clumsiness and dullness with which they laid punk platitudes on writers who found them totally uninteresting.

Word filtered back of Scabies making a total idiot of himself over the redoubtable Joan lett, and of backstage bully-boy nastiness. (Heard the one about the New York groupie and the Fender bass?) If you haughed, you're an asshole.

No-one seriously objected to The Damned's avoidance of political cliches except the real nurd-core Ramalamadolequee Orthodox school—but behaving exactly like the jaded old creeps they were supposed to be displacing was Not On.

RONG PLACE, wrong time. During periods when it was assumed that they were Laying Back and Keeping A Low Profile — as Sensible, somewhat nuefully, points out — they were playing on the Continent, working their bollocks off in Sensible's case, literally if you take what happened to him at Mont De Marsans into account, getting things thrown at them by unruly audiences. When punk was a big Deal for the Nationals and a target for the dailies, The Damned were always somewhere else when the spotlight hit.

"Everyone seems to think we've sold out," moaned Rat Scabies shortly before his departure from the band. "but if we've sold out howeum we ain't got no money?"

Judging from the desperation with which he was cadging drinks, he wasn't joking. Despite his later claims that The Damned's troubles started when claims that The Damned's troubles started when he departed their serried ranks, there was already a feeling that there was an Ongoing Blowing-II Non-Achievement Situation.

The "Music For Pleasure" album featured new guitarist Lu ("If he stays I go!" howled Sensible before he changed his mind), a guest appearance by Lol Coshill and production by Nick Mason. In general, the playing was better than the first album and the songs were worse. Far from reminding everyone of how wonderful they said The Damned were at the beginning of 1977, is just provided another opportunity for rapid insertion of the critical boot.

of the critical boot.

Their just-completed British tour, on which they were supported by CBGB botshors The Dead Boys, wasn't so much a triumphal round-Britain procession like The Clash's tour as a glorified wake.

The attendances were dismal. The crowds were a glorified wake.

The attendances were dismal. The crowds were enthusiastic but small. "Kids were coming round to see us after the gigs and saying, "What's this we keep reading about you being finished?" "says Brian James. "If they were telling us they thought we were rubbish it'd be one thing, but they're not."

Dave Robinson — their manager until a fortnight ago — felt they should have toured as someone's support group. Nick Lowe — who produced the "Damned Damned Damned" album — proclaimed that he thought they were finished. The errant Scabies no sooner hit dry land than he proclaimed that he thought The Damned were finished.

were finished.

Brian James blames the band's apparent decline on unsympathetic press and misguided management. He and Sensible maintain that "about 75 per cent of the energy went out of Stiff when Jake left. Now it doesn't seem as if there's much being done for us. We didn't have a single out for the summer..."

Predictably. The Damned are upset at having received more attention for their antics—the massed tales of outrageous-things-Scabies-and-Sensible-did-at-parties are more than legion—than for their Music. The new alburn was an earnest attempt to progress.

Nick Mason was The Chosen One no produce because—in James' words—"I listened to the Floyd's alburns and they sounded as if he knew his way around a studio."

roya s annums and they sounded as it he knew this way around a studio."

Their choice of producer and the addition of Lu on aftermate-choice guitar was to enable the group to produce better and more varied music.

After his initial shock and horror—hence the oft-quoted remark re-produced above—Sensible is now an ardent admirer of Lu's playing, "It's like working with a saxophone player or something. It's hardly like a guitar at all, what he plays. I said all of that before I really heard him play properly. Now I think he's great." Plus there's drummer John Towe from London (the band not the town, schurdo) in the band and he's — quote — fitting in really well — unquote.

AMES AND Sensible, therefore, display

AMES AND Sensible, therefore, display nothing but optimism for their musical future. They feel that they've been treated unfairly, but they don't seem bitter.

Well and good. Fine, in fact. Good for them. Then six days later the roof falls in. Scabies is beard muttering round town that Stiff and Dave Robinson have dropped The Damned. Check it out: phone call to Dave at Stiff and sare 'nuff 'n' yes they have.

What it is: Dave Robinson didn't feel that The Damned crusted him as their manager. The Damned didn't feel that Dave Robinson felt that he couldn't manage a band who wanted Complete Control but in fact only exercised a right of veto. The Damned felt that Dave Robinson felt that the couldn't manage a band who wanted Complete Control but in fact only exercised a right of veto. The Damned felt that Dave Robinson felt that The Damned didn't appreciate that he was splitting his time three ways — as equally as possible — between them, GP and Stiff in general.

Deadlock. No trust, no faith, no confidence, no fun. It was felt best to call it a day.

Robinson emphasises that his disillusionment with The Damned is purely as a manager. "I always found them very exciting on stage and I stiff of the server of the self-life was a stiff if they are a self-life was a se

The Damned are still slugging on regardless. Keeping on playing to whoever wants to see them, carrying on in whatever direction takes their lancy, fuelled principally by their unshakeable belief that The Dumned are the greatest rock and roll band on the surface of the earth.

Pretty much the way they started out, in fact.

pleasures one can hardly imagine, were it not that Jamaican weather is very benevotent at this time of year.

By the end of the day, Tado had enjoyed a much more traditional time, encountered his own ghost in two incarnations, and also found a ceasen for living, such as might well have been appreciated by the man who once claimed that "the gift of God is eternal life". In addition, he was the best-dressed turkey in town.

"I was coming from sea, where I nearly got drowned," he related. "The reason I went to sea that morning was because I wanted to do a little exercise for my stage show, which would be one of my biggest in Jamaica."

(Tado was booked to play Kingston's Carib Theatre — a seminal stepping-stone on the road to national recognition.)

"That show, I'd been longing for it, so I was kinda arranging myself to do it properly. So there, I went to the sea — you would call it a wharf — where beethere and betthere go down there and jus' chuck off, you know. Well, really, I'm a great swimner, but that morning my swimming let me down. I nearly got downed.

"Anyway, I saved myself. I had a rehearsal to go to, but, before, I had many other little occasions to put through before I did went to the rehearsal. So I was walking up from the sea to my shoe store at 129 Orange Street. On my way up, I haided my brethren and so on ... I reach the corner and I look around; I saw a bus coming up, you know, but it didn't have on an indicator, and From the Daily Mirror that number bus never usually turn there; it never usually come in that direction, man, at all.

"There was the stop light on, so I went across. And on my way, I was looking westwards, and the bus was on my right hand side, the east side. On looking that way, I see a man hold his two hands over his face like that; and by the time my senses pick me up and turn my head around, I saw the bus immediately on me. I couldn't do nothing more than say, Jah have mercy."

In "Born For A Purpose" and "Still Alive" (the introduction to which, with Tabby of The Mighty Diamonds, appears top left) Alimantado claims the driver hit him on purpose. Does he really believe that?

the driver hit him on purpose. Does he really believe that?

"He did it."
Why?

"The reason why! — I was only in short pants; I didn't ave on no shirt; I didn't ave on no tam. Now they ave a style — whether Jamasica.

America, London; no matter where you go, from you fly your onty deep est, because he is not with you, he feels like he should get rid of you.

be is not with you, he feels like he should get rid of you.

"So his busman, I know he saw me; because, really, when I look round and I see the bus, and I know he could have seen me, because I'm not an ant, I'm a human being. I know he saw me, and I know he did it purposely, because my dread was flying, you no see!

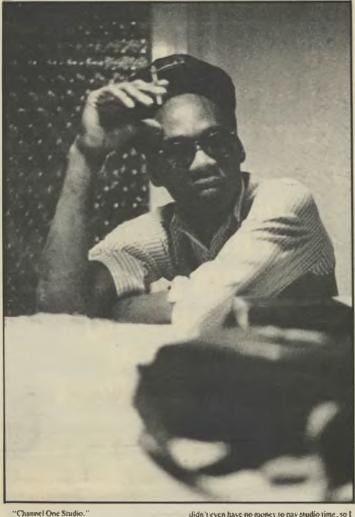

"You see, that song means a lot to me. And it means a lot to all of the youths who's getting discriminated for no reason at all. No matter who you might be, what colour you are, if you get discriminated that song mus' are to reflect to you. Maybe because you wear your shirt wrong side; maybe because you don't wear shoes; maybe because you wear pants upside down, or anyhow; sometimes people might use spoon and eat, and you use you hunds; people light against you for that.

"So I say: 'Don't right me; don't try to determine what I want to do; allow me to what I want oo do; allow me to what I want oo do; because it picases me and that's the great thing. I don't try to determine a man's life, and I don't want no man do me that.

"If you feel like you have no reason for living ... don't determine my life ... my life... my life...
"When I recover, I find myself underneath the bus, behind the buck wheel, but still underneath the bus. The hospitals and all them things come along and ling. When I came out, I couldn't walk; they send me out the hospital before I could walk. My brethren, including Jah Man. helped me to ge in a taxi and they took me to 129 Orange Street, because it was my mearest location in that area; I stay there for about two days; and then I get a crutch stick. "One night I fay down on my sick bed, the song came to me so plain and clear. That was the first time I tried walking again, because I wanted to get a pen and paper to write it down so I could remember it. I ended up crawling in pair; but I still reach the pen and paper, because I was determined to reach in.

They said, you know, we don't care about that; we want to help you, and we would like to do the best for you, Tado. I didn't even have no money to pay studio time, so I went to Channel One and Joe Joe says you're a sick man and you use my studio all the while, so you're free."

BOXING DAY 1976: A memorable date in the BOXING DAY 1976: A memorance date in the roots rock calendar. That night, whilst Alimantado lay trussed-up in pain in a hospital bed, I dallbed down Leicester Square Empired Ballrooms, where Tapper Zukie, Assad, Nicky Thomas and the Cims held an all-mations audience. Thomas and the Cims held an all-nations audicine in thrall. The teal reason why Joe Strummer was the only white man in Hammersmith Palais the same night — where he witnessed a Bajan spouge show with Roy Atton, Kalabash, Merrymakers Steel Band and the Crescendos — was due to the pre-eminent attraction of the Empire gig.

And seven days later, the two sevens clashed.

BRIAN ROBERTSON'S RECURRING INJURIES

HIN LIZZY GUITARIST Brian Robertson has been damaging his body yet again.

Twelve months ago Lizzy's big US tour had to be abandoned after Robbo — highly out of it with good of fellow Glaswegian Frankie Miller one night down the Speakeasy — had his left hand badly damaged during a brawl.

This time it's his plectrum-holding right hand which is in plaster. In fact, it was already in plaster for the final night of the hand's British four at Soutbend, and Roberston had to squeeze out his solos through an anti-hiotic fugged brain, occasionally in extreme agony.

He ain't getting the sack this time, though. This time it really wasn't the guitarist's fault.
Robertson, see, possesses a meet flick-haffe. When you flick it, a comb appears out of the handle. Room of a friend's after the Lewisham dates he saw what he took to be his own comb knife being brandfished. "Och," he declared in a display of Cellic waggishness. "Dinns plue wi'knives." And playfully grabbed for the comb end. Surprise, surprise Not really a comb at 181. In fact, what we have here is a real grown-up's knife sticking fato Robbo's hand.

To make anniters worse, when the wound was dressed at his local hospital the kindly Florence Nightingale applied a wide—as opposed to close (or narrow) — gauze bandage. This meant that the blood congealed around the bandage, thus ensuring that on his return from Southend, the hapless Robertson had to hold his right hand in hot water for two hours before the handage would solten sufficiently for it to be removed. It could've heem worse, though, Brian. You could have been sacked again.

He concedes, indeed, that the old Speakeasy incident has ultimately proved beneficial. Immediately after it had happened Robertson returned to his parents home in Glasgow. At that time not only had be been sacked from the band nod had he ever play guitar again — a vital tendon had been severed and even now be has a dead middle finger on bis left hand.

Robertson now feets, though, that although his shambling, Scotch-from-the-bottle onstage image might have been pretty effective visually, his guitar-work really sucked.

"If that hadm't happened," he reckons, "not only would my guitar playing have deteriorated more and more, but I would have eventually stopped playing nitogether.

"Because I would have been dead.
"I was drinking two bottles of Scotch a day and my playing was loosy, I think I looked very good, though," he ndds. "hij image of rock'a'roll's next candidate for the mortuary was highly refined."

TOKEN PISTOLS PERSECUTION STORY - THRILLS MAINTAINS FAIRPLAY REPUTATION

smeared themselves with blood.

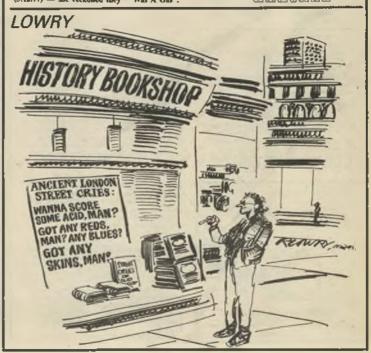

The Pistols' Aberdeen application reached the full District Council meeting shortly before Christmas. Despite Liberal councillor Nigel Lindsay's stunneh support of the band's right to play their proposed Music Hall gig — he claimed he'd had his largest ever malbag on the motiver, mainly in suspport — he was outwied by 27 to 17 by the likes of Tory G fibrray Park, who wondered if the band's upplication to perform was simply a publicity giamsick (1) and Labour man Norman Bonney, who was much perturbed by the title of "Belsen Was A Gas".

Labour member Agnes Keay pointed out that the Music Hull belonged to the people, not the councillors, and that maybe the people should be allowed to choose for themselves what they should und shouldn't see. The pompous protectora of Aberdeen did not agree.

Even worse, reporter John Lodge of the Aberdeen Evening Express wholeheartedly supported the ban in his report of the decision.

Dundee District Council also voted the same evening not to allow the Pistok to play Caird Hall. Hoots, mon.

No sooner had we met than I was dragged back to his small, bare room in Earls Court and talked at until 8 am he following reporting about anything.

in Earl's Court and taked as unit a sam the following morning about anything and everything that concerned him—especially The Ants.

It's like this: The Ants are Adam's passion in life—a passion that he pursues with fanatical zeal. Yes, everything I'd heard was true: pre-arranged lapes, constant beatings, etc — Adam willingly confessed to it all.

What I wanted to know was, how come the band take all this lying down? Could this be a true-life story of Slaves and Masters?

Well, not quite. Adam says he only works the band as hard as he works himself, and any power he exerts over them is born out of mulual respect and a "strange" kind of affection—indeed, Adam and his band are very fond of each other. He'll hate me for even referring to him and the band as separate entities: Adam is adamant (ha ha) that there is only The Ants.
The Ants started gigging earlier this year at the Man in the Moon in Chelsea, Adam clad in a black leather rapist hood, sacrificing himself to the milling hordes of X-Ray Spex Ians every Wednesday night.

Since those days they've lost their original guitarist, the mysterious 'Kid' (he of the prescription shades and Albino eyes), replacing him with "Handsome" Johnn Bivouse— a tall, clean-cut youth who handles a neat line in heroic power-chords.
Other willing secomplices in

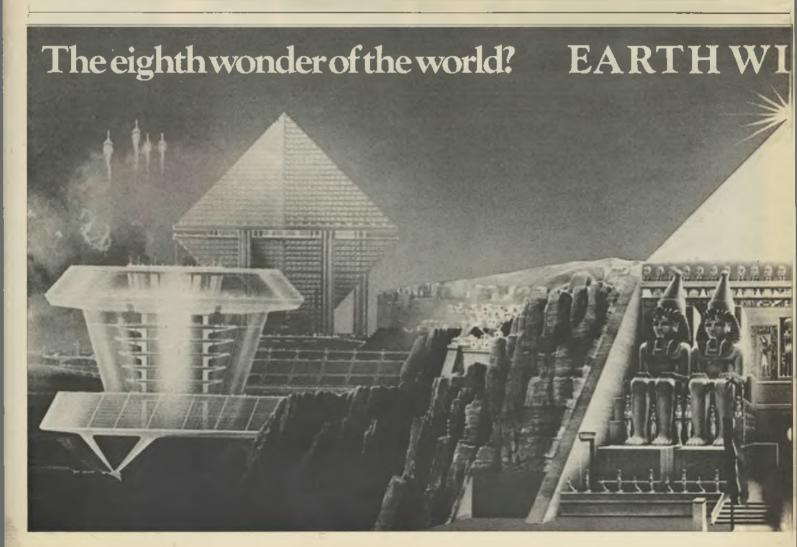

Other willing accomplices in Adam's master-scheme are Andy Adam's master-scheme are Andy, who plays bass, and Dave, on drums, who is my idea of a regular bloke—y'know, wants a good wife and a nice 'semi' in Southgate. Who knows, maybe he's got them already? The Ants play fast, negative pop to corrupt the innocent. They've got this following... a fanatical crew of 14-year-old head-bangers who have ANTS written all over their clothes and chuck themselves about with the same total disregard for personal safety that Adam himself displays. Sure, they may just be banging their heads at the moment, but just wait till they come to their senses and start listening to the larvies...

wait till they come to their senses a start listening to the lyrics. When I met you You were just sixteen Pulling the wings off of flies When an old lady got hit by a truck

I saw the wicked gleam in your eyes Your sadistic suits my maschimic And there's a whip in my valize Who taught you to torture? (Who taught yea?)

Ask that of the future generation of S&M suicide pilots and they'll probably tell you about The Ans. Or how about some tender interludes in the life of a stormtrooper? "Dirk Wears White Socks" is Adam's anthem to his favourite idol, Dirk Bogarde. Set against the decaying socnatio of pre-war Berlin: We'll go to a Berlin night club All the acts are so risque Many people hace a motto: Gid today, boy tomorrow.

As you've probably noticed by now, Adam's fyrics are not without a certain black humour — and it's this that I reckon to be their salvation. He injects enough humour into potentially bleak subject matter to turn it into a kind of high camp horror show — like Richard O'Brien and Allen Jones taken to the streets. Sick, morbid, but underliably funny.

The rest of The Ants' set comprises The rest of the Arths set comprises sones with titles like "Plastic Surgery", "Light Up A Beacon On A Puerto Rican", "Hampstead" and "Juanito The Bandito". Adam claims he wrote most of The Ants' repertoire about two years ago, but a long period of illness prevented their being played up to now. up to nov of illness prevented their being played up to now.

The only number not written by Adam is called "Loo". A song about Lou Reed, it's written and sung by the band's manager, Jordan (who first, eff course, made her name when working in McLaren's Sex emporium).

Apart from sharing a stage for this one number, Jordan and The Ants wift also share a movie screen when Dereck Jaman's new film Jubilize is released sometime this February.

The movie will include The Ants along with a host of other bands.
Jordan acts, and Adam has a small part which he himself describes as "a sort of little boy lost role". He ends up getting horribly murdered.

And what of Adam himself? What's he reelly like beneath that foundation cream of S&M brutality?

THEY SAY ENVIRONMENT determines character, and when it comes to American music, they're probably right. After all, California— notorious for its ever-warm, lush climate and the fact that its citizens reputedly don't know the meanings of the verbs to walk or to work — produces an appropriately opulent and indolent music.

New York, which claims to be the sheaziest part of the U.S., but at the same time considers itself the only cultured part of the country, combines these things into what the Village Voice recently any fit to term Avant-Punk.

Detroit is world-renowned for two kinds of metal monster: American cars and Ted Nugent. And so on. If environment really does determine masked styles, then Cleveland, Ohio, must be a very weird place indeed. Over the past year a steady flow of Cleveland vinyl esoterica has made its way to Britain. The garage explosion seems to have taken special hold in that lown and prompted all sorts of social outcasts and other vermin to congregate, form bands, and seek ways of captivating the more curious punier.

The Electric Eals, for instance, considered early pioneers of the Cleveland school, went out in a blaze of unrecorded glory when they snarled their equipment cables using an electric laws mower on stage.

Other local miscreants number the infamous Devo from nearby Akron. The Gooses, Mirrors. Quadron, The Human Switchboard, Thay Huey and The Bizarros. All these bands have two things in common. Their ideas of what consiltutes rock are unlike any other, and they all pale in comparison other.

Their second single, "Final Solution", was about social problems and, erh, diseases. I didn't like to ask about that.

David Thomas used to be a writer on a jornal teen paper called The Second (where he first used his slightly better-known handle. Crocus Behemotils). Along with another rock-crit, the hate Peter Laughner, he formed the now semi-legendary Rocket From The Tombs.

"Rocket From The Tombs really have no relationship to Pere Ubu other than the fact that I was In them," asserts Thomas. "That was around "74, and it was a

In the winter of last year, though, the line-up stabilised for their third single, "Sireet Waves", as Toon Herman (previously bass, switched to guitar), Scott Krause (drums), Tony Maimone (bass), David Thomas (voice, musette) and Alan Ravenstine (synthesizer, nailroad spike).

"He is at the core of Ubs, 1 suppose," says Thomas. "He's a very unusual synthesizer player. He's very parist with it, and he doesn't even have a keyboard—instead he has a touch tone dial. He doesn't want to combine suything musical with the synthesizer, because he feels — and rightly so, I think — that it's a new instrument and should be treated as such."

Which is a very good way of looking at Pere Ubu as a whole. They use conventional rock forms but seem to give them a new language by re-devising the way sound is used within those forms — which puts them in a category with Eno, the duh musicians and Weather Report, though they sound unlike any of them.

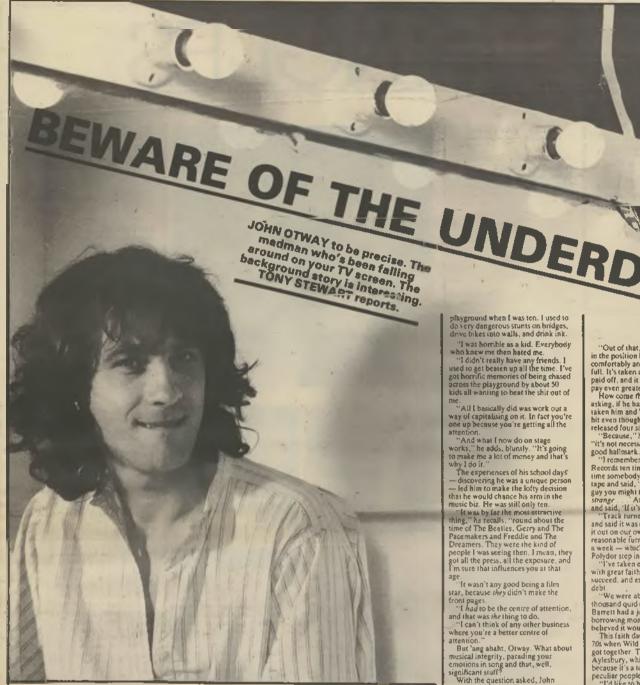

Their last two singles, "Street Waven" und the recent "The Modern Dance", reveal an ever-increasing sophistication and when you hear Pere Ubu — a contract with Mercury und an imminent debut afbum assure this — you will be mystlied and either compelled or repelled, but you definitely won't forget that sound. "It's hard for us to talk about what that is," complains Thomas, "We pot the unit together with the lidea that what we do wond be different, but don't know why it sounds like that. Nobody knows, other than it sounds perfectly normal to us that that's the way rock'n'roll should sound. I suppose, though, that it has something to do with Cleveland. "There's this relationship between machines and flesh in Cleveland that is very strange. It's a strong justaposition. Cleveland is a glast, blown-out factory town. There's the Plats with all this incredible industry, steel mills going flat out all day and all night, and it's just a half-mile away from where all the people live. "This gives them the feeding that there's no future in a commercial sense for them, so they all say we're going to do what we goddam want.

testifying to his complete sanity there are very few people who would believe it.

Anyone who's seen this gangling person on the telly recently will naturally assume he's bonkers. He has a habit of careering around the studio thrashing the daylights out of his dicky little acoustic guitar, hollering wildly into a mike, and frequently toppling off speaker cabinets, painfully cracking his nuts a severe blow. nuts a severe blow

Of late he's usually sung the hit,
"Really Free", and if the restraining hand of his stoic playmate, one Wild Willy Barrett, didn't occasionally find is way onto his protruding shoulder-blade, then Otway's idea of an encore would be a full-frontal lobotomy. It will probably always remain one of the world's great mysteries why Barrett, an old, golden-haired hippy who tucks his head over in concentration and drills his fingers through a home-made electric guitar or multifarious stringed instruments. should have the moniker he does, when obviously it's Drway who really deserves it. He is a walking disaster area, and neither a serious nor accomplished

He and Barrett have variously been described as brilliant, boring, hilarious, crass, Pythonesque and telentiess. After playing together off and on for seven years, and at one point binefly acquiring the production services of Pete Townshend, it was only last summer that they were able to trick a major record company into releasing their first album.

But it is the success of the single which is an interestingly bizarre event.

Secondly, and perhaps most importantly, "Really Free", with all its ludictous inanity, came out at a time when rock people were solemn, serious and concerned.
Whereas other mortals might proudly procelim they're in this business to further the course of rock in roll, boldly articulate the grievances of a generation, or just contribute their tuppence worth of talent, Otway has no such pretensions.

He is happily exploiting his own

Tall and awkward, he wears a loosely fitting, dishevelled black suit.
He's polite, reserved and only a little batty. Like many other comedians when they're away from the stage, he isn't intentionally funty.
Also, it's hard to believe that this intelligent, self-assured and amiable bloke was once the victim of school bullies, the source of others'

The experiences of his school days—discovering he was a unique person—led him to make the lofty decision that he would chance his arm in the music bia. He was still only ten.

"It was by far the most attractive thing," he recalls, "found about the time of The Beatles, Gerry and The Pacemakers and Freddie and The Dreamers. They were the kind of people I was seeing then. I mean, they got all the press, all the exposure, and I'm sure that influences you at that age.

"I adore people like Liberace because they've built their character up so well: that's really an art. And people like Tom Jones I've got great admiration for.

"He's great!

"I've also got a lot of admiration for The Sex Pistols. Often I've really thought they've blown it, but they we always managed to steer themselves away from the disasters and use them so well. It's a most amazing publicity excercise. It always seems to be working totally on a knife edge."

Otway explains that his own eccentricity manifests itself in a variety of ways. Simply, he just seems to attract attention for being the chatacter he is, and if, for example, he was to walk into a pub with a group of people, he would be the one people remembered.

"I used to hate it," he says. "That's where a lot of the ambitton came from. But once you've learnt to master the art of using it."

from. But once you've learnt to master the art of using it . . . it's beneficial.

"Out of that, and nothing else, I'm in the position I am in now: living comfortably and enjoying life to the full. It's taken a lot of work, but it's all paid off, and it books as if it's going to pay even greater dividends."

How come then, you can't resist asking, if he has this uniquenessit's taken him and Willy so long to have a hit even though they've previously released four singles.

"Because," he answers readily. "it's not necessarily engarded as a good hallmark.
"I remember we went to Island Records ten times, and about the lifth time somebody walked in with the tape and said, I've got this tape of a guy you might think is a bit strange. And the guy stood up and said, 'I'd it's Otway, take it out!"

"Track turned down the last album and said it was rubbish. We had to put it out on our own labet. But it had a reasonable furnover. We did 3,000 in a week — which was enough to make Polydor step in.

reasonable furnover. We did 3,000 in week — which was enough to make Polydor stop in.

"I've taken exceptional gambles with great faith in my ability to succeed, and ended up in smazing debt.

"We were about five or six thousand quid down. Neither me nor Barrett had a job, and we just kept torrowing money because we both believed it would all pay off."

This faith dates back to the early 70s when Wild Willy and Otway lirst got together. They both come from Aylesbury, which explains a lot because it's a lown infamous for the peculiar people it has bred.

"I'd like to be arrogant," John interjects, "'and say that's almost down to me. I'm sure.

Mind you, he also suggests that his liaison with Barrett was one of convenience.

I think he just thought it was a lot more adventurous, and saw something in it. "But your average musician wouldn't work with me because I play the wrong chords all the time, and can't even tune the guitar. I don't even know when it's out of tune. "I really believe that the whole thing's a show and as long as you're entertaining the audience it doesn't matter what's going on onstage. I adore applause and I'd basically do anything in order to get it.
"Oh, I do love music," he quickly establishes. "I'm not knocking it. It's done me, hahaba, a lot of good. When I was a kid I'd really get upset if I missed Pick Of The Pops, for instance.

"I've always said I want to be a pop "I've always said I want to be a pop-star, and not a rock star. I haven't got a lot of time for rock'n'roll, because I don't really fike it. I was always in the minority because I liked Cliff Richard and Gary Glitter."

He was also in a minority believing the world was ready for his type of music, even with such an accomplished multi-instrumentalist as Barrett by his side. Yet at the beginning their own conviction was not that devout, and just after Otway held the master tapes, and he privately pressed and distributed 500 copies of a single called "Misty Mountain". Although one found it's way to the ear of Townshend, which resulted in him producing four tracks by them, the single they released on Track, "Murder Man", sold a grand text of 15 copies.

Reflecting on this, Otway politely comments: "It's very difficult to assess the effect Townshend had.

comments: "It seep difficult to assess the effect Townshend had.
"The advantage of his name in terms of prestige has been, at any one time, small. But overall it's made a good difference. The music almost got Pete Townshend's stamp of approval, therefore it was worth listening to. And that applied right scross the board, from the journalist and record company to the audiences.
"But his involvement was always a way-in, although we did take a step down after that. I really though it would be easier going. In fact it wasn't, because I ended up doing two years on the dustbins."
Yes, Mr Otway was a dustbin man—while Willy went off to contribute to missing the word of the contribute of the con short-lived solo contract. They managed to stay out of each other's way until two years ago, when they released "Loursa On A Horse".

Since then they're played clubs, failed to form a backing band because other musicians did flind Otway too trying on stage, and so they contented themselves with the duo work. Last year they invested £1,600 in recording the album, which was promptly rejected by Track.

The set is the musical history to this story and comprises both the old and new material. But it isn't the production hotter-potch you might expect, and it's also remarkable because our subject wrote most of the songs and even manages to sing some of them in key.

Although it's a competent and entertaining work, it's only one dimension of their abilities. Otway is aware that their success depends very much on his character, and this is best reflected in "Really Free"—which is partly an explanation of why the single made it.

OW, AFTER a brief rest from each other's insanity at the end of last year when Otway toured with Scratch, the duo are together again. They'll gig through until spring and then decide whether to temporarily split again and investigate the other options now open.

to temporarily spil again and investigate the other options now open.

A hit single. Otway explains, opens a lot of doors, and he may even write a book or make movies.

But if you're under the impression that onstage he is presenting only a glimpse of what happens inside the cuckoo's nest, then you're wrong. He might frequently deny it, but the psychological scars influered during his childhood are deep, and now he's blowing a very loud and vulgar raspbe rry at those who regarded him as a social outcast.

Without wishing to sound pompous, he hopes that his triumphs will encourage others who're now in a similar position to do the same.

"When I was at primary school," he remebers, "They wanted to send me to a special school because they thought I was mad.

"There are a lot of people like me now, and reachers still treat them badly.

"I don't feel bitter about it, but I am a bit angry. The poor old underdog has got to have his heroes, hasn't he?"
Otway could now be one of them.

SINGLE OF THE WEEK

DWIGHT TWILLEY BAND:

Twilley Don't Mind
(Arista-Import). By a long chalk.
While the muse seems to have escaped most of the other contenders in the pile this week the Twilley disc goes from strength to strength. The reviewers were a might snooty about the boy's album of the same name but being an ornery critter I disagree and assure you that Dwight's (an club can safely invest their Crimble record tokens with glee

BLUE OYSTER CULT: Gold'
Through The Motions (CBS). This is about as close as the Cult have got to contributing to the gross national product. An unusual ditty penned by Eric "Rock King of the Finger Lakes" Bloom and Ian Hunter, it features a singalong chorus and hotel room lyries. Apparently the last song to gain entrance to the monumental "Spectres", it needed the multi-mix talents of Memphis Sam Pearlman and Murray Krugman to rig it into shape. Points to watch; a short but hypnotic bridge where Bloom scales his vocal finesse with true power and greec, Bert Bouchard's shirking man's Spector drum scat and Buck Dharma's silver wolf solo. Over the edge is Allen Lanier's "Searchin' For Celline", a fragile and icy voyage to the end of the night with ambiance of pit fiends, helffire and all those other things that make the Cult the best at their trip. On the other hand who wants the single when they could (must) have the album? Right.

WHITE BOY: Spastic EP (Doodley Squi Records). Possibly the strangest concept in rock and roll today. White Boy are a two-man team, faither and son so legend do say. On socialese we have Mr Ort, a man who by sheer virtue of antic disposition and refusal to comprehend the exigiencies of age the's pain the routine, checking in at 351 makes laggy Pop seem like a churchwarden. Son'guitarist Jake Whipp (as in Whippensnapper) ha mere sprog of 19. Fall-guy to pop's warped dynamism? Not a bit of it. Whipp is no slouch at retreading old Hendria licks through the fuzz boxes of middle America. On this mini-LP you can appreciate the death and of middle America. On this mini-LP you can appreciate the death and rebirth of modern technology via the channels of custom block buster idioxy like "I'm So Straight". Flectronic Suicide", "I' title Idiots" and "Just An Old Fart". By day these guys are perfectly normal, but by night. I date you to even think of buying this record.

THE RAVERS: it's Gonna Be A Puals Rock Christmas!
(Zombie-Ariola). Who are these creeps? Predictably, it's a bunch of studio chaps who happen to have erred on a tardy idea. Yes folks, a Christmas roll call of all your heroes done in 'cor blimey guy nor, strike a light, Jack the Ripper strikes again' voice. What a gas. These fools have no appreciation of ballisties and the hell of it is they have nil sense of humour.

THE GERMS: Forming (What Records?) Didn't exactly bust a gut on this one either, although having a bassist called Lorna Doom is moderately funny. Sounds like it was recorded underwater. Still, you get a lyric sheet and a health warning and a live side two. The lifty is reministent of the Velvets' "Live at Kansa City" except that they forgot to record the guitar, bass and drums. There are a lot of words here that the O.E.D. never hearing that it is the master. nover heard of but it might be easier to mp round the local and tell the barman to eff-off. Actually, at one point the singer chappy harangued me for buying the record. I didn't and you don't have to either.

CHAINSAW: See-Saw EP (Romanlik). Anah, a Belgian punk foursome. I most admit to a secret perchant for bands whose command of the English language is. on-yew-zay, negligible but who carry on regardless. For example, only a freel or a freg woold agree to be known as Jerry. Wanker and perform in a group who massiere Lou Reed's

"What Goes On". I'm sorry, they might have invented the Common Market but the Spryuts can't cut it in the rock and roll department. Un-deux-trois-quatre. Next

THE DILS: I Hate The Rich (What THE DILS: I Hate The Rich (What Records?). Agit-prop San Diego style. Originally managed by Kim Fowley (then and every budy else). The Dils have a reputation for being one of America's original and only fist-elenched brignde. The message is familiar enough but the playing is suburban gurilla and who wants to fisten to some scumbag miles away berating you about nothing?

THE YOUNG BUCKS: Get Your Feet Back On The Ground (Blueport). A lack of development in the vocals but plenty of potential in other areas for this Newcastle band. In terms of making use of all the instrumental possibilities upon to the material — shades of Them and even Captain Beetheart — The Young Bucks come out of this experience with A's for effort and dedication. Good keyboards and drums throughout and some enterprising sax on the flip. Very promising.

THE MIRRORS: Cure For Cancer THE MIRRORS: Cure For Cancer (Lightating). Two bands called The Mirrors this week but this one is Welsh. Aside from the title (seems to me they're kicking in a bit of morbidity for the wrong reason), these boyos can really move uh-hub-hub, shades of rockabilly in Andy Smith's cool and frenetic guitar runs which are probably even better when heard alive. Idiosyncrasies include the olumny signing and include the plummy singing and meatloaf thythm section. Should appeal to Pirates and Feelgoods fans

THE MIRRORS: Shirley (Hearthan). Inordinately long and boring art-rock guff recking with chintry piano and lacey lyries. A genuine non-exent.

RE-ISSUE OF THE WEEK

THE YARDBIRDS: For Your Love THE YARDBIRDS: For Your Low (Charty), An enterprising slice of nostalgia. This features the end of Yardbirds Mark I, Clapton model. "For Your Love," by Graham Gouldman, was their first universal hit and nearly 13 years later you can appreciate why this band as so integrally influential. In those days Fire was entilled for the shortlist for the Spring was entilled for the Spring was entitled for the Spring was entilled for the Spring was entitled integrably influential. In those days Enic was only on the shortlist for the Holy Ghost's gig although Jim McCarty was pretty good as well. What transitions, what economy. Includes the original beck-up, "Got To Hurry", which is nuthin" remarkable but shows that some white men have a feeling for de bloose.

THE MODERN LOVERS: The Morning Of Our Lives (Beserkley). It occurs to me that young Richman has lost a few marbles on the sunny road to stardom except that every body is so anatous to slap the geezer on the back that they can't tell shift from Chanel. Once I could appreciate the cut of his jib but this, and yet amother "Roadrunner" (live), is plain pissing in the wind. Bring back Greg Kihn THE MODERN LOVERS: The DOLLY PARTON: Here You Come Again (RCA). Despite the roll-call of famous side-men and the superlatives laden on M. Parton's fatest crossiver hit (I guarantee it will be a chart smash here) this Mann-Weill dirge makes me feel distinctly ill. Not even the brain-softening process of the season could drag me down the middle of this road. Not as much fun as fast year's Billboard.

CHEECH & CHONG: Blost On

IVOR BIRD: Over The Wall We Go (RSO). Written by some other than the young David Bowle (in 1967). I'm sure he's trying hard to forget this 'orrible piece of cockney cloth cap. Only of interest to sadists, masochists and potential blackmailers. Did you really write this David?

GENO WASHINGTON: Proud GENO WASHINGTON: Proud Mary (DJM). I though Easter was the time for cruedisions. The Ram Jum man transports us unwillingly back to the swinging 60s with an unplyasant discofied tendition of John Fogerty's classic. An experience to be missed at all costs. If you don't appreciate the gowds keep your paws off mate.

Clint and Nick and Bobby run the gauntlet -a few servive...

Bobby Deerfield (A)

Directed by Sydney Pollack Starring Al Pacino and Marthe Keiler (Columbia-Warner)

LIVES REDEEMED by love often resemble laxative adverts: each sluggish and miserly each sluggish and miserly antecedent balanced by a post-joilop joility and general flush. Sydney Pollack's movie falls into this schematic in the last third as the costive racing champion, Al Pacino, colours in his grey past. Kicking up his heels in bars, inventing non-functional fantasies, hobnobbing with a gardener whose weathered features and horny thumb clearly know a thing of two about proper drainage, Pacino, who has spent most of the film behind sunglasses, joins humanity. sunglasses, joins humanity

The pivotal scene, probably unplayable, has Pacino risking ampayante, his racino risking ridicule by a halting impersonation of Mae West, his lugubrious, limpid, comic face straining after the stridency of that Grand Horizonial. An interesting actor — more than that in the underrated Dog Day Afternoon has interesting actors. - he is increasing cast in near-somnambulist roles which miss the comic Keaton victim in his quietness. Maybe his resemblance to Dustin Hoffman panies him into onsuitable parts.

Structurally, the script is too neat, trotting out the various fingidities of the hero and then tidily reversing them. He ignotes the family snapshots; he adores the family snapshots; he adores the family snapshots. As if aware of the saccharine drift of the genre—Jane Wyman, Sirk, Lowe Story—screenwriter Alvin Sargent injects some Jart oddities into the dying heroine's dialogue: "Have you thought that the racing car is an extension of the penis?" asks Marthe Keller. Her father's collapse on the beach crushes an infant, she explains to the baffled Deerfield in one of her flights of fancy.

Throughout, the coquetry with mysterious reverberations—the magician's eerie performance, the fairytake gathering of hot air balloons, the enigmatic death of Deerfield's team mate—is mercly pressed into Structurally, the script is too neat.

The Deep (A)

Starring Robert Shaw and Jacqueline Bissett. Directed by Peter Yates (Columbia).

THE DEEP is formula filmaking as High Art, guaranteed to empty wallets and minds. There is no humanity in this underwater adventure, only professionalism.

Peter Benchley's sub-Jawr epic of innocents with aqualungs stumbling on a forgotten hoard of morphine capsules benefits from its serven treatment, gaining a pace which the printed page plot lacked. Director Peter Yates swaps the car chases of Bullin for tension-filled underwater excapades with giant conger eels, and voodoo and Bermudan heavies thrown in for effect.

Robert Shaw plays Romer Trecce the maverick diver, with a touch of psychosis that makes his performance enjoyable, if not memorable.

psychosis that makes his performance enjoyable, if not memorable. Jacqueline Bissert and Nick Nolte meantime satisfy the meat market fans by displaying desirable torsos and little else.

The innovatory use of underwater sound techniques sporadically capture the right full fathom five feel. Elsewhere, though, the movie more closely resembles a saline drip.

Appropriately, Donna Summet provides the film's theme song. Infinitely consumable, The Deep is shallow.

The Pack (AA) Directed by Robert Clouse

Blue Sunshine (X) Directed by Jeff Lieberman (Columbia-Warner)

TWO LOW-BUDGET fright genre prices, one a minor trumph of wit and style, the other a major triumph of banal storyline and

The Pack concerns a gan of rabid dogs terrorizing an isolaed holiday island, and draws a vague notinal island, and draws a vague moral about the encroachment of uncaring civilisation on nature. Civilisation gets its come-uppance though by having the vacationing bankers amongst the first to die from snarling canine jaws.

The characters, like the moral, are of the cardboard cut-out variety. For the finale they wheel hickneck, All-Agerican Marine Biologist Jerry into place in front of a houseful of burning dogs. He says to his son "Go get the crackers out of the glove compartment in the car," and makes pals with the one remaining hound. A wonderfully remaining hound. A wonderfully inane moment, as if they brought Walt Disney's animal kingdom studio in to fimish the film.

Inane moments about in Blue Sunshine too, but here they are deliberate and, like the tension and neatly cliched plot, played tight clever, never too obvious.

Basically, what happens is that some people go simultaneously bald and bizarrely homicidal manie. The hero, Zipkin, is accused of being such a person and, on the lam with only his girlfriend to believe him, sets out to discover the real culprit and prove his innocence. Without giving too much away, let's say it knocks another nail into the coffin of the summer of love.

If you take it the way it's intended — not too seriously — you should enjoy it. And if writer/director Jeff Lieberman ever finds a bogey man common to everyone's closet and takes it slightly more seriously, he could make the next Jaws.

The Gauntlet (X)

Directed by Clint Eastwood Starring Clint Eastwood and Sondra Locke (Columbia-Warner)

AT 47, CLINT Eastwood still looks good in a torn T-shirt and with his stock repertoire of facial with his stock repertoire of factal fics, squints, grins and grimaces supporting a hard-boiled (or is it half-baked) philistine philosophy which falls somewhere between rugged individualism and survival of the fittest, he remains a Genuine Hero.
Odd, because his aura of arrant od, because his aura of arrant sexism and arrogant authoritarionism falls way short of any moralistic principles and contrasts sharply with his individual liberty schtick. But the Eastwood screen persona — not substantially different from his off-screen one -- has become increasingly grata to a huge international audience (though excluding, one would've thought, many women) who see him as a Regular Guy in control of the situation.

Which is one of the reasons his

Which is one of the reasons his latest movie comes as a pleasant surprise, since the character he plays — a luconic (of course), stoical (natch) policeman from Phoenix — bears scant relation to Dirty Harry and The Man With No Name beyond being able to point a gun straight and pull the trigger.

For starters, this cop is, er, a bit thick and, in a preposterous plot which portrays the combined police forces of Arizona and Nevada as venal and/or stupid, in no way in charge of his own destiny until, predictably, the slambang finale.

Eastwood's cop is a loser (he slovenly drops a bottle of Jack Daniels from his car as he reports for duty after an all-night drinking session, dishevelled and unshaven), just potting in his 20 years and waiting for retirement. He's a disposable, dumbass oop ("A faded number on a rusty badge," as someone puts it, somewhat bathetically), sent to Las Vegas to escort a 'two-bit hooker' (Sondra Locke, lovely performance) back to Phoenix for trial. Routine case, routine assignment — or so he's told.

case, routine assignment — or so he's told.

In fact, the Mob (you know, those faceless hoods who've bought the Police Department) are out to make sure neither of them get further than the Vegas strip. Ms Locke, you see, knows Too Much.

Some hope, especially when Eastwood sobers up and is goaded into prideful reaction by his spunkly companion, leading to several spectacular set-pieces and unlikely confrontations with cracker cops, Manson-like hog-choppers and, best of all, a bent PD commissioner whose axiomatic remark ("Shit, they're cops, the baslards are paid to shoot, not think") sums up the ambiguous tone of the entire exercise.

Eastwood the actor puts in a maudin, impassioned plea urging respect for the cop on the beat while Eastwood the director shows them as a bunch of diddo-toting flunkies.

Still, the direction keeps The Gauntler moving so swiftly that you don't question the dubious morality of the piece until you've gone home wondering how come you can hear what Clint says when his lips don't move.

Like all his movies, The Gauntlet move.

Like all his movies, The Gaundet looks good enough to frame and is expertly out for maximum motion. Movies should move, right? It may not be as impressive a work as The Outlaw Jasey Wales (the plot's just too daft) but even Clim's human, for Chrissakes, I think.

no idea what he was talking about. As usual.

Lucky for him all of us were here to tell him what he meant. Looking at it straight ahead it's obvious A J Weberman was une of the first punk rock pundits. Being one of the first literate and voluble humans to dig that other folks just could not put into printable words just exactly what the Prophes was saying. Everything he (the Prof) said came true, but you gotta listen to those who dig deep to get it now.

That's where I, and Suicide, come in. What Dylan meant was that we all wanted to sleep forever, rego the 70s. Betcha wondered when I'd get around to talking about them things.

Yes, we ran sleep and boughe too, in fact we don't want no intrusions. Sleeping is as important as eating or fuck-ing or the rest of those nigh-forgotten basics, but sleep got a bad press for a while there.

I think the best album to come out of the whole new wave is Richard Hell's "Blank Generation", but Bob Quine, lead guitar in that group, told me this: "Yeah we're all right, but we're not perfect." Bob thinks Suicide's debut is perfect, and he has better faste than I do, so good he deesn't even the Lou Reed's like "Metal Machine Music".

GIL SCOTT-HERON & BRIAN JACKSON

& BRIAN JACKSON Bridges (Arista)
DID THEY really get what they wanted? They being black Americans. Gil Scott-Heron doesn't think so. He thinks that what they got came only on official paper when itshould have come from the heart. With his partner Brian Jackson he's still writing songs about it.

He started in the late '60s as a novelist and rap poet, but soon moved to music as a more immediate method of impart-ing his message. Over the years he has refined his medium from the spirited, free-rolling jazz verse of his early Flying Dutchman albums to a sophis-ticated midnight soul sound, but the commitment remains but the commitment remains the same.

In simple terms, Gil Scott-Heron wants freedom for his brothers and sisters all over the world. He is probably alone amongst U.S. black musicians amongst U.S. Diack musicians for retaining a social con-science, most others having lost it as quickly as — in the wake of the 60s expanding political awareness — they found it.

"Bridges" is no different in that respect. The themes that thread the album are black spiritual affinity, identity and emancipation.

These, you'll notice, are much the same as the themes in Rasta music, though Scott-leron's treatment is not the simple chant and catchphrase variety. Coupled with the current vogue for social commitment, this suggests that his, by now, should be a name to drop to drop However, over here at least this has not been the case, probably because his chosen medium — soul music — remains for Britain almost a white man's province. Which brings us to another point: how does the white man relate to Gil Scott-Heron? He doesn't. Gil Scott-Heron addresses himself mainly to his communication level isn't is communication level isn't is communication level isn't he sort that can be easily felt by all and sundey. He relies on poetry and hot funk hythms, his music testing somewhere between The Last Poets and Marvin Gaye's "What's Going On".

If anything, it's his poetry that tends to let him down. A mawkish preaching tone sometimes creeps in to detrimental effect, but on "Bridges" these moments are to a minimum. For the most part he keeps it succinct, telling and funky, turning in two charging workouts of the "Johannesburg" and "The Bottle" type in "Hello Sunday" and "Under The Hammer" and turning out easily his best album since "44's

The Hammer and turning our easily his best album since '74's "Winter In America".

THE DICTATORS Go Girl Crazy (Epic)

A BONA-FIDE classic. No doubt about it, "The Dictators Go Girl Crazy" — almost three years old but released here for the first time — ranks along-side the Apollo 12 moon-shot and Richard Nixon as a great American disaster of our time. And for throwaway relevance aligned to low-rent social significance it remains unsurpassed by anything except the first six issues of

"Go Girl Crazy" is prece-cupied with, and at the same time a vindication of, Arseni-can garbage kutcher. It also contains more in-jokes per sentence than the average issue of Spouds.

Combining these things Andy Shernoff's aural Ameri-can Graffiti asks where were you in '75 and answers with an all-embracing "huh?", plenty of Who-chord hard rock and a few Beach Boys steals. Wrestling, McDonalds and all night fourteen channel teleall high lourteen channel fele-vision provide the scenario for The Dictators to explore the motivations of contemporary American youth. Their find-ings are best expressed in the closing "(I Live For) Cars and Girls", but along the way who except Richard Blum (aka The Handsomest Man In Rock 'N' Roll) could handle such intentionable one-theory as "I drink Coca-Cola for breakfast" or the immortal "edjamacasion ain't for me"? BAREFOOTJERRY Barefootin' (Monument Import)

HA VING PROVIDED the Mother Company, Columbia, with a string of near unimpeachable albums
it came as no surprise to learn of Barefoot Percy's unceremonious dismissal from same.
"Barefootle" is the group's sixth venture into an area of constry onaste which, by virtue of its welding the traditional elements of the genre to an electronic expertise not usually associated with the ostitah whick, is governd steps removed from any southern outfit.
Still following the path of proven humour, civilised doperisms and individual expertise the barefoot crowd give success, lad and maudian Nashwille rehands a well-alisted middle flager. It was an doubt part of Columbia's double think policy that resulted in their deigning to release the band's fourth disc in Europe. In the interim you might have missed the debut, "Grovery" and the classic "Watchin' TV".

Barefoot Jerry's country credentials are second to none.

Shoeless In Tennessee

Operating out of Madison. Tennessee and drawing their inspiration from the Smohies, America's most indiback sountains, their output has revolved around the presence of veterns stylists such as Wayne Moss. Charile McCoy ("the Nashville Hit Mas"), Mac Gayden and steel guitar virtuoso, Russ Hicks.

Along the way they've managed to alter their lineap without vere Justing a grip on the hishity textured sound which in their custom hold bertage. Mac Gayden has sought the solo lights recently and Dave Doran, Turry Dearmore and Fred Newell are on vacation but the reappearance of guitarist Barry. Chance and the multi-intented strings man Mike McBride easily make the out.

Side one in a compromise for these guys. rhytim), salacious hogweed commerc and a nod at blue roots, Robert Parlier in the title track and the risque Dizie blow out zap of Blcks.

Side two contains all the familiar elements that muche Barefoot Jerry so warm and inviting a proposition. The focus switches to larger dollops of animanus Wayne Moss, the finest singer in the South and in the abspace of Duane Allman, one of that area's most unique guitarists. Fils reperiodre ranges from an A merican protest number, eschewing the cause of solar ower quelear energy (dedicated to the stardwors of the world's largest muches power plant in Hartsville, Tennessee) to a geographical boedown guide to the reclier states which puts in what the Pain Am travelogue leaves out.

The mood and drive of Moss's material is structured to a finale, a poen to the Smoklen name of "Heradia" For The Fillim", which just about some up the actum plight and puts the cural way of life in a commartic perspective. Wayne's delivery and the band ranach are affied to un overall dynamic sense of melody refined enough to stand comparison with the hest groups on the planet—melodies, hooks and transitional chord breaks in abundance.

keeping records clean is not to get them dirty. And I suppose I could leave it at that but

The truth of the matter is that prevention is preferable to any known cure, so keep your fingers off the microgrooves. Always handle a record by the edges or use a fold-over velvet record handling pad (BASF, 60p) and don't (unless instructed by our reviewers) use records as beer mats and frisbees.

beer mats and frisbees.
Considering the exceptionally high price of records, you'd expect people to treat them with respect, but of course that seems to be too much to ask. As a result of wide-spread negligence, a lucrative mint-industry given over exclusively to record care and vinyl sanitation has sprung up.

and viryl sanitation has sprung up.

There may well be something in the region of three dozen various cleaning kits readily available, but the problem is that some manage to cause more harm than good you often require another cleaner to remove the gunge deposited by the kit you originally used to clean your records!

HI-FI By ROY CARR

However, if you persist in clogging up the grooves, here's a few items which, if used with care, could restore your discs to their former glory. But remember, nothing but nothing will remove scuffs and scratches from the surface of any second.

scratches from the surface of any record.

Speaking personally. I have reservations about clearing fluids, because even the purest tend to leave some residue which, after a period of time, builds up into a solid layer.

I much prefer either one or a combination of the following:

(A) the dust-off roller, (B) a dust bug, (C) anti-static reducers.

dust bog. (C) anti-static reducers.
(A) The dust-off roller (with either a fell or plastic sponge cleaning pad) is both effective and simple to use and comes highly recommended. This is how it works: place a record on a rotating turniable, gently rest the roller on the surface of the record and, after it has absorbed any mayerick dust. absorbed any maverick dust, activate the stylus arm. And one for as little as 78p, Watts' Parostatik Dise Preener retails at something under a pound, while the Decoa Record Brush which boasts "a million conductive fibres" is a more up-market model selling at something in the vicinity of £6.

BIB (one of the major hi-fi accessories dealers) market one for as little as 78p, Watts' Parostatik Disc Preener retails

(B) Many hi-fi buffs favour the dust bug because it is an extremely practical automatic cleaner which tracks the stylus while the record is playing. Again, there are a number of different dust hug arms available for your scrutiny: B1B market a sefection which start at £1.36 (Model 50) to £3.97 (Model 101 Parallel Tracking Cleaning Arm). BASF offer on adjustable cleaning head for optimum tracking angle as part of their sales yitch. Price £3.24.

There are a couple of transparent to he is a series with need to be income.

There are a couple of drawbacks that need to be drawbacks that need to be taken into consideration. Unless a dust-bug arm is correctly positioned it can, if you're not careful, slow down the speed of almost any turntable. Dust-bugs also have tendancy to fall apart.

(C) One cleaning device which, despite retaining at £6.99, is rapidly gaining massive acceptance is

THE ZEROSTAT anti-static pistol - good for 50,000 shors

Zerostat's anti-static pistol. No larger than a Derringer, this anti-static reducer contains a piezo-electric cell which produces a discharge of approximately 10,000 volts, applied to a corona discharge needle in the barrel to neutralise static charges of needle in the barrel to neutralise static charges of either polarity. Yet, despite the high voltage produced, the Zerostat is perfectly safe as it does not produce a lethal current.

So what does it do?
It enables the vinyl junkie to thoroughly clean a record.

Static is a recurring problem because even careful use with a polishing cloth still attracts a certain degree of static. If a Zerostat anti-static pistol is used in conjunction with say BIB's Groov-Kleen dust bug, you should encounter lattle if

Zerostat doesn't remove dust.

Zerostat doesn't remove dust, it neutralises the static that attracts debris, the dust-bug sweeps it clean.

BEB also market a similar device, a Groov-Stat at £5.98.

After reading this, I expect many of you will still smear your greasy dabs all over your albums and then bad-mouth the record manufacturer for pressing up such crappy product.

A friend of mine who owns a large record store recently confided that many of the records returned to him as being "defective" are not always substandard pressings but victims of a blunt stylus. One afternoon, while I was in his store, a customer made a real big deal of returning his copy of P. Floyd's "Animats". On inspection, the dise proved to have the first three inches of grooves gouged out.

Asked if he'd checked his stylus the customer replied.

Asked if he'd checked his stylus the customer replied defiantly, "What's that?"

The needle. "Why should I check it?"
Well then, when was the last time you changed the needle?

"Change it! Nubody ever said anything about changing the ..'er, watche call it?"

The stylus. "Yeah .. stylus."

How long have you had your record player?

"Bout six years ... there's nothing wrong with my record player, it's the bloody record that's faulty."

I'm not fabricating that story to emphasise a point (no pun intended), because it isn't an isolated incident. More records are permanently mined by being played with a blunt stylus than by any number of sticky lingers.

However, even a new stylus is ed servicing, so regularly trush it gently forward with a small clean cambel-hart paint brush. If at any time, the stylus gets clogged, I suggest either BIB or BASF eleaning fluid or better still a drop of neat Vodka

Son Of DagooNa (The God Of Reefer) and half-a-dozen equally bizarre pseudonyms has long harboured this kind of vision of unilateral conquest.

However, don't misconstrue Clinton's predilection for name-game disguises as advance symptoms of schizophrenia. The way things are going, he might just achieve the America Today part of the campaign.

The United Maggots of Funkedelia is where George Clinton puts his plans for world dominence into operation, from a suite of offices situated along Sunset Strip between the notorious Whiskey A Go Go and an even more notorious All-Nude Burlesque House.

LINTON (make a note of the name) is arguably the only person to have instilled a welcome breath of insanity into a black American music scene on the brink of having both soul and lifeblood drained by the disco vampire. He is mastermind and ringmaster behind the unholy trinity of Funkadeke, Parhament and the irrepressible Bootsy's Rubber Band—the result of his self-confessed acid-awarness having been vividity transformed into a three-ring electric circus of over-the-fooness.

His becostumed cohorts have exerted the most profound(!) influence on Black American consciousness since James Brow Jimi Hendrix and Sty Stone.

Their work is a Bosch fantasy of unearthly delights that evokes flashes of almost everything from Alice Cooper and Ziggy Stardust, Pint Floyd and Kiss, Hendrix and Zappa, techno-flash and dry ice, ELP and LSD, Sty and Star Wars.

"Ah left," drawls the gregarious Clinton in his best Superfly hip-speak, "that is was time for ah change."

His assumpton was correct and his vision evolved into what he laughingly terms Acid Doo-Wop!

For all his appearance Clinton is one El Shrewdo Dude. Aware that almost every innovation in rock has come as a direct result of white—no matter how apologetic and dedicated—ripping off black, Clinton has chosen the try and re-direct the heavy one-way teaffic.

"For a long time." he jives, "I've been aware that with almost everything in America . . . black follows white, so ah just hung around taking notes and waited until it was time for me to make around taking notes and waited until it was time for me to make mah move."

According to him, young Black America no longer has any real empathy with its blues heritage. "Down maste", is how he describes it, "Blues doesn't reflect pride. British kids know more about the blues than American kids of their own age. Anyway, blues became white kids' music."

He cites the Stones in the first instance and more recently The Average White Band and The Bee Gees as having attempted to turn both black and white kids back on to R&B and soul. This is something he approves of — but apparently the controllers of the American pose strings do not.

"The barriers might be down but the dollar bill is desperately trying to stop it. They ir estill trying to separate the black and white markets so that there'll be no need for cross-over advertising. It's not the music but the advertising revenue that's the key to radio. If a black station is playing the same kinds records as a white station the sponsors have gotta compete in both markets."

The way things stand, many million-setling black superstars are unknown outside the ghetto — "It's easy to sell a million albums to blacks without cross-over sales and without appearing in the charts."

However, Clinton isn't very complimentary about many black artists. As both performer and record producer his believes the only thing the majority have going for them is a good disco re-mix appropriate the control of the control of only thing the majoray new garage engineer.

This degeneration of black music, he says, coincided with the blanding-out of white American rock.

"The whole culture" — the busky voice escapes from inside a body swathed in embroidered denim and patch-work thigh boots "decided to take a rest and that's when we popped outes the closest."

closet."

"The war in Victnam was over and a lorta folk reckoned rock had nothing to get serious about".

Climon decided to play the situation for laughs and his approach proved lethal. City after city across America capitulated as The Mothership — a large flying saucer that skimmed over the heads of the audience — disporged the massed bands of Parliafunkadelicement onto the stage in wild abandon.

"Rock aim't finished", Climon chuckles. "We just needed to change a few identities and call it sampthin' else".

The Tubes, who had much the same idea, didn't put a name to their brand of outrage. But Clinton chucke P-Funk (the P-stands for Pare).

for Pure). In sttempting to take One Giant Step Forward, The Mothership (with Clinton at the controls) first went back in time and salvaged all those special effects discarded by white supergroups in their flight to un-numbered Swiss bank accounts.

"Strobes, psychedelic lights, thunder-flashes and dry ice machines," Clinton points out, "are a big novelty amongst young block audiences."

So too, it seems, is a decent p.a. cystem. Volume, or to be precise, the sheer lack of it, had prevented black acts from breaking our of the clubs and theaters and into the large arenas. "Vihes at big concerts have always been real bad. The only thing they mixed up was the singer, with the result that in a big hall a band sounded shirty. You'd never hear the bass and drums and guitar in, say, Sly Stone's band the way they should have sounded. Sure, they'd play good, but because they didn't sound anything like their records they'd catch hell from the audience. "Except for 'The O'Jays and Earth, Wind & Fire, acts didn't bother to do anything about their sound. They reckoned that because they had a hit record the kids would scream and when they went on tour they couldn't understand why hardly anyone showed up.

"I learned about the benefits of a good sound system from socing Alice Cooper and Led Zeppelin and touring with heavy white rock groups.

white rock groups

ARDWARE ain't the only thing the Mothership picked up on its travels. Unlike a Tubes soiree, their audience isn't comprised of white punks on dope but apparently of black freaks on acid.

This, it seems, is a relatively new phenomenon.
"If the kick could get their hand on good psychedelies," Clinton opines, "the whole vibe would be much the same as when white kids used to trip."

opines, "the wince vice would be ratted the same as when while kids used to trip."

Apart from exerting an undentable influence on Clinton and especially Bootsy Collins, Jimi Hendrin's elevation as a Black national hero has coincided with black mass acceptance of acid. "Jimi was into acid and love power when a lotta black didn't understand where he was coming from. Now they understand as a result of the acid experience."

"He never made it with blacks until that particular rock era was over. Most blacks weren't aware of him until the "Band Of Gypties" album. He was always considered black by other musicians, but the guitar hero period was never popular with black audiences. They only wanted rhythm.

Afto the brothers couldn't understand why he used a white bass player and drummer.

"But it wasn't until he became very popular that it became an issue and he was forced into the Black And Proud politics of the time.

"As black consciousness grew, Jimi Hendrix became a superstar. The only trouble was that he was dead. But that hasn't stopped black kids from displaying posters of Jimi alongside of Muhammad Ali and Martin Luther King."

Politics in rock-Americana have, for the time being, become pase. As a result. Clinton assumes reggae will remain a minority cult.

"As far as American blacks are concerned, reggae is the same as the blues. Whites appreciate it more than blacks — but of course that could change.

"Reggae is associated with bad times. Even Bob Marley, who I admire, it still considered far too political for many blacks to enjoy. American blacks have had more than enough of politics. That was the '66s scene, Today, everyone wants a good time.

"You gotta understand, things in Jamaica are different from America.

America.

"Even though what Marley says may be the truth, it's not the black American way to approach things. It's like preachers need another concept to get people back into church." So too, it seems, does the black American music scene, which has been losing its audience to white rock acts. "I suppose you could say Bootsy has taken over where Hendrix left off, Parliament are Alice Cooper, Funkadelic are poised as the black Lod Zeppelin and The Horny Horns are Chicago with soud."

soul."
George Clinton's ambition is to take one stack-soled step beyond anything that's been done by any other artist.
"We'll clone 'em all!" he laughs so violently his hat almost falls off his head. "There's no reason why a black act can't be even bigger than Emerson. Lake and Palmer.
I hoped he wouldn't say that. Come in Eldridge, Eldridge and Eldridge!

OFF WE GO again with another year of frantic gigging, and we shall do our atmost to keep you fully informed about what's on and where. day, while most bands and artists are more concerned about holiday imagovers than work! Besides which, the colleges, are not yet back in action after the Christimus vacation.

Main items of interest this week are the start of Osliska's toor at Aylesbury (Saturday). Plymouth (Monday), Cardiff (Tuesday) and Swansen (Wednesday); Kevin Coyne playing a string of London dates with Zoot Money, Friday through Monday; Sham 69 on the road at Woking (Thursday), Braintree (Friday), Doceaster (Monduy) and Birminghum Tuesday); and Motorhead topping a new British trek, at Penzance (Thursday) and Birkenhead (Monday).

Mind you, we've managed to find quite a wide range of other varied gigs for your edification, including such delights as Hymie Blows It at Basidon, and Vesavius at Burnley Bank Hall! If there are no big names in your area this week, why not take in a new band? Remember, the unknowns of today are the stars of tomorrow.

You'll find there will be a larger number of gigs next week, and in a fortraight's time things will be back to normal again, as the winter tour season gets into full swing and the major acts site out of their leftnergy and go back on the road throughout the country.

We're ulways pleased to hear from any bands, promoters, wenues or agents who are putting on sign. We'll gladly print the detailst and, of course, entry is free. Just write to the Gig Guide, New Musical Express, 5-7 Carnaby Street, London, WIV IPG.

And to everyone out there who relies on these pages, either professionally or us a member of the great NME readership, may we wish you peace and success in 1978 and a happy year of giggoing.

THE NASHVILLE

THE NASHVILLE
CHRISTMAS Eve at The Nashville Rooms, a beery, boozy, affable crowd, everyone intent on getting drunk and having inn.

More hip revellers in the audience than rabid Elvis tans. I spent half an hour wondering why I wasn't at another gig down the road.

Suddenly there's a band on stage to shake all but the intenties onto Christmas contentment and seasonal good homour.

The Pop Group are hypmotic, different, frightening and irresistible.

The singer is a tail, painfully thin pillar of anguish, hands covering his eyes as be hown despair at the sedentary crowd.

Two diminutive guitartists prowl around his feet; the one with ginger half and freelies croome catchy pop hooks as feedlines for the giant's desperation.

The other stores blankly into space until the climas of the set. Without warning he gyrates into a juddering, twitching solo.

The impact of The Pop Group is comparable to witnessing an epileptic lit or an unexpected light. You want to turn away but the hideous fascination will not release your eyes.

The preservation of Ray Davies

The Kinks

RAINBOW

THE WHOLE evening was a very odd affair, and at the end of it you weren't sure whether you'd just seen the last - but - one show by The Kinks

Just before they performed "Alcohol," for instance, Ray Davies insisted that it'd be the last time they ever played it.

And then at the very end of the show, as the rest of his gang trooped off, Davies grabbed the mike and sang, "This could be the last time."

Well, there was another gig the following night, Christmas Eve, but then that was mainly for The Old Grey Whistle Test and arranged in such a hurry they were offering free tickets as you walked through the fourse on Fidday.

as you walked through the foyer on Friday.

Maybe I've been fooled by Davies' sense of burnour, but there was also something very final about this Kinks concert.

Perhaps it was just a Christmas Special, a rare and memorable treat for the fans, but during the two limits they and "Sleepwalker," the title track of their last album. Split into three sets, with Alan Freeman having the unfortunate task of facing the Alan Freeman having the unifortunate task of facing the audience's barracking as he audded a spoken narration between each section, it was easily one of The Kinks' most successful and entertaining shows.

Pure nostalgia would have probably carried the whole venture shrough to a triumphant conclusion, but musically it was invariably excellent with the nucleus of the band—Dave Davies (guitar), McAvory (drums), Andy Pyle (bass) and John Gosting (keyboards)—joined by the now tegulat three-piece brass section, two girl singers and percussionist Ray Cooper.

Although Davies was in a suitably festive mood, humorous and cynical, constantly commenting on his bisexual image or recalling that in days of old The Dave Clark Five would be topping the bill, his vocaf and theatrical perform-vocat and theatrical performance was excellent.

The depth of the show depended very much on him, and even though the excerpts from their "concept" works were brief, Davies still indulged his theatrical fantasies and appeared as Mr. Flash from "Preservation" for "Victoria" from "Arthur Or The Dechine And Fafl Of The British Empire," the whole

But really, when you think about it, the show might only have been the end of one era, and as "Sleepwalker" indicates, Davies and The Kinks are suine into another.

The above dialogue repre-sents the basic level at which Status Quo communicate with

It also demonstrates one of the pitfalls for ageing rockers trying to maintain their rapport with 16-year-old fnotball hoofans.

They start getting a bit clever. Not intentionally, of course. But when you're well on your way to your first million, limp-wristed words like "response" no longer sound quite as effect as they once did.
Not that the Quo audience

noticed that Francis Rossi had stepped out of character.
The exhortation to proceed was simply a protest at the gap between one remoseless twelve-bar and the next.
Quo fans demand a strict adherence to the ritual, and get a little uncomfortable if there's any break with tradition.

a little uncomfortable if there's any break with tradition. The Quo act is essentially a carefully archestrated celebration of adulescent machismo, and the hand's success stems in part from the skill with which they maintain the cosy fantasy. There may be passing similarities with punk rock. The crowd all wear Doe Martin's, and they like their music simple and unaffected. Quo certainly comply. Keyboard player Andy Bown is so discreet it's impossible to hear a note.

is so discreet it's impossible to hear a note. But Quo fans are rather less adventurous than the punks. They're aggressive, but it's the sort of aggre othat runs in packs. They all dress the same, never secking the individual styles that you get with new wavers.

styles that you get with new wavers.

In fact, it's the sense of community that makes the Ouo show so reassuring for them.

Conformity is the strict order of the day. The band always dress the same. Rossi in his denim unsitional and history.

order of the day. The band always dress the same. Rossi in his denim waistcour and hippin hairdo. Parfitt with his shirtsleeves rolled up like a rock'n'roll labourer.

And all three frontmen adopt the same curious butch stance, with their feet placed two yards apart. This makes them look as though they all landed awkwardly on the same vaulting horse, or as though they've been riding too long on fat carthorses.

But the audience find nothing to laugh about. Their pleasure is strictly serious. There is, of course, the music. Univarying. More monomanic than anything else currently on offer. Kraftwerk and other academic theorists of machine music never get close to the same league.

From the moment the band hit the first chords of "Caroline", the kids go into ecstasies. Quo walk on to the sort of reception most bands strive to get for their encore. The whole place bogs so furiously that you can literally feel the balcoury rock up and down. In the corridor below, theatre staff watch anxiously as the chandeliers eatile along to the beat.

the chandeliers ratile along to the beat. Interestingly enough, when the bend get away from the likes of "Roll Over Lay Down" to more obscure items like "Backwater" and "Is There A Better Way", the response is more muted. The rhythm and the beat are the same in every case, but the audience feel safe only with the hits—a reflection of the deep insecurity that the shot intended to assuage. The big irony for the audience seel safe only with the hits—a reflection of the deep insecurity that the shot are in the process of quietly selling them out.

The new album is a sophisticated piece of pop, artfully produced by Ptp Williams. Quo have their eyes on the lucrative American market, and all (hat brash simplicity and have to make way. "Rocking All Over The World" requires more artfulness than the band may care to admit they possess.

Drowning in a sea of scummy innuendo

Fabulous Poodles SHEFFIELD

TO MY eternal shame, I've come — after repeated listens — to quite like the perverse oddity of the Fabulous Poodles' album.

I mean, I know it's rubbish and all, but here's this nagging hurmability ingrained in a few of the tracks which, try as I will, I can'l shake off.

Shaking off their live performance, however, is far easier.

Inasmuch as they deal with Inasmuch as they deal with the more inconsequential aspects of life, treating them with a certain amount of humour, and, in a few cases, an uncertain amount of psychological acuity), they remind me a little of The Kinks didn't lard their materiat with quite so much kitsch as the Poos.

The grouple is, their subjects.

the Poor.

The trouble is, their subjectmatter is more often than not soo inconsequential to be bothered with at all.

The Poor mainman (or maindog, is you like) is obvioutly the incorrigible Tony de Meur, an anothrilling guitarist and reasonable vacalist whose real strength lies in his melodies.

He can, I'll admit, chuen out a good chewn here and there.
He also — and this is perhaps to source of both the Poos' successes and their failings—has a good sense of the niceties of nostalgin. (Witness "Mr. Mike" and "When The Summer's Thru" from the album). album).

Summer's Thru" from the album).

Live, any wit present in the songs is drowned in a sea of scunning innuendo more worthy of Benoy Hill, the embarrassing nadie of which occurs in the pseudo-reggae "masturbation dance" number, "Let's Wirst Again", during which a few juveniles jump onstage and demonstrate the dance, flash bums and generally advertise their imminent release from sexual repression.

Still, some people find it hundrous; or maybe they're just egged on by de Meur's stage stance of childish irresponsibility.

stage stance of childish irres-ponsibility.

As front-man, he comes across like a '70s Max Miller who's not learnt the difference who's not learnt the difference between double-entendres and single-entendres, or, more succinctly, between subtlety and sledgehammer tactics.

And judging by violinist Richie Robertson's 'greasy spiv' persona, the Poos' approach is in all probability quite deliberately seedy.

No amount of deliberate stylisation, however, can account for the inclusion of their cocked-up snippets of stuff like "It's Not Unusual" and "Livin Doll".

Does ambody really rate

Does anybody really rate

Does anybody really rate this junk as funny?
Musically, (not a subject of paramount importance to the Poos. I'll wager), they were a bore, all the songs except "Bike Blood" suffering outside the confines of the studio, partly because the lyrics were almost indecipherable, partly because the arrangements were too much of a muchness.

What more can I say? They attain an impressive contact

Thunderlag — the collec-tive moniker for portly planist Thunderlap Newman and drummer / saxist Bob Flag — are as fitting a support for the

Poos as could reasonably be

Both bands have something of the music-hall about them, Thunderflag exhibiting a more direct link with the past than the Poos, and demonstrating the use of innuendo to greater effect.

Thoroughly British in their approach, they utilise a good deal of peops, clothes and welltie, and bongle their way good-humouredly through songs like "Masculine Woman, Feminine Men". "As Time Goes By", "Barney Geogle" and a set of cowboy classics, although they do tend to serve up a surfeil.

One of a series of gigs to

Before a small, mixed audience at the 100 Club, The Lurkers were the only band with committed fans in very similar to Status Quo and looked almost as old. "Throbing Gristle". "Bend And Flush", "My Mother Gave Me A Gun For Christmas", with a Clockwork Orange bassist posing keeply for photostapes that the stage with a chain pinned to its smout was really disgusting and I shall certainly write to my MP about this deeply shocking.

The Doll strayed promisingly from the orthodox punket formula.

A female vocalist scrubbing furiously at a tacky guitar, a small yeflow-haired organist playing the lead and a few random Stranglers riffs.

Any thought or effort was wasted: couldn't hell one song from the other, couldn't imagine how they would justify their existence as a band.

After that I expected at least something efficient and elassy from The Jurkers, but where the previous bands had been tedious or irritating, the head-liners were actively objectionable.

A faceless four-piece, they caced through a set of indistinvery similar to Status Quo and looked almost as old. "Throb-bing Gristle". "Bend And

The Boys Of Lough

VICTORIA PALACE

IF YOU like sooustic tradi-tional music and you missed the Boys of the Lough's first London concert in seven months it probably wasn't your fault. Publicity for the show, sandwiches sandwiched somewhere between Dorothy Squires and Basil Brush, was almost non-existent:

A band that pride them-selves on having been the first fully professional traditional group in Britain and on having eschewed the kind of promo-tional push that has rocketed. The Chieftains, to fame deserve

Happily for the people who did turn up to half fill the baroque interior of the compact Victoria Palace there compact Victoria Palace there was no disappointment to correspond with that the band must have felt.

The support, Cilla Fisher and Artie Trezies set the tone of the evening decisively with the close blending of their two voices, sympathetic accompaniment on guitar and dulcimer and an engaging sense of humour.

Thanks to the half's excet-Thanks to the half's excel-lent lighting and a sound system that picked up overy aside, distance between audi-ence and stage was reduced to a clubroom intimacy. When the Boys come on this is helped no end by their style of delivery. They shuffle on, an unprepossessing quarter of a clutch of instruments.

Despite their repeated assertion that "we didn't come here to talk", the hanter is quick and topically witty, particuarly from bodhran player Robin Morton. There's a refreshing lack of phony folkie bonhomie.

Musically it's similarly straight, no frills.

Listening carefully to the rhythmic interweaving and counterpoint. I's clear how successfully they've married the disparate traditions of their musical upbringing (firsh, Soots and Tyneside) and the disparate traditions of their neusical upbringing (Irish, Soots and Tyneside) and absorbed influences from repeated touring in the States and Cananda.

Tunes are what the show is about, and playing. It's almost impossible to pick out indiudual highlights from such a determinedly concerted effort. widual highlights from such a determinedly concerted effort, but Aly Bain deserves particular mention for the way his fiddle playing relies on the production of rich-toned individual notes, not a blurr of speed and flash.

One gripe: the set seemed to me too flat, not enough highs and lows, not enough of the emotional contrast they got by following "The Hound And The Hare" (which ties to a cressendant sound-picture of the kill) with a poignant lantent.

The audience didn't mind, however, and brought themback for two well-deserved encores.

But there is something missing, something which can probably only be acquired by the relentless gigging of the Supercharge Of Old.
The new humans in the band are (a) a bow-tied and taxed of drummer with the improbable name of Dave Frug, (b) a black, after d bassis with the acually exotic name of Frug.; (b) a black, afro'd bassiss with the equally exotic name of Paul Abrosius; (c) a portly lead guitarist, Truck Cummings; (d) a tenor saxist. Andy "Porky" Parker; and (e) a swarthy (Brazilian?) guitarist in footbalk kit, cated Rip Pollard.

There's also "Professor" Atlen Gaskell on sax and guitar, but it's a matter of opinion whether or not he's human; it seems more likely, on this performance, that he's some mutant branch of the Donnelly family tree, and should be approached with appropriate caution at all times.

Another portly chap with beard and glasses, Gaskell wears a grubby sincoest and undersized crash-helmet emblazoned with the NF logo.

Very feething

emblazoned with the NF logo. Very fetching.

He cuts a dashing figure as, attired thusly, he goove-steps and Hitler-satutes his way across the stage, although personally I rather doubt his ability to get the broad mass of the people behind him. I'd imagine he'd rather get the peoples' broad masses in front of him.

f him. And the music? Well, there's (deep breath) a Well, there's (deep breath) a state of "My Prayer", a somewhat tedious reggee number, a rude downop accapella medley, a song about Simon Templar (The Saint, you dummies) getting stoned at a club, a spoof Queen-style operetta about a dead parrot being put in a pic, a punk spoof, a song about what'll happen when the NF take over, a cowboy song — "The Kinky Cowboy" featuring the quite probably insane Gaskell attred as per a pervert comboy, and what seems like a spoof Edmundo. Ros latin piece, introduced by Donnelly as "Serious music for nice people, not you slobs". Same old staff, eb?

NEW YORK CITY
A SNARLING deep hass

much heavier Andy Pratt than Pd been expecting.
Mark Doyle played tricky, cunning snake-like runs on the guitar which intervorve with his own very high voice.

He wriggled at the plane, a neurosthetic bug-eyed Marty feldman in Roger Daltrey curls doing as much work with his neck as most people do on stage with their whole body.

He bounced up and down on the piano stool like a worm on a hot plate and his head duck-walked across his hunched shoulders as he rolled his eyes and squeaked in a stage manner that ranged from Kevin Coune-conspiratorial to manner that ranged from Kevin Coyne-conspiratorial to hair-on-end Todd Rundgren of course he's a Boston boy and a bit loonie like Jonathan Richman, but "Sit Down In The Twilight" was delivered with such energy, enthusiasm and power that the cynical New York audience warmed to full play over a slow loping bass line.

His vocals took off from the bass like sparrows from a telephone wire. If it was possible to levitate from a piano stoot Pratt would do it. He put so much concentration into it, seemingly hovering for splis seconds in space.

He has a hard rocking piano style which is a weird cross between between Jerry Lee Lewis and Cecil Taylor.

Sonetimes he uses two bass players for a fuller bottom sound when he is singing and playing in the top register.

He also favours hong repeating endings, a la "Hey Jude", where he can improvise both wocally and at the keyboard.

He is an amazing singer,

Wording and at the acytomer.

He is an amazing singer, going from Ella Fitzgerald skat to rock hellow in a few bars (on "Aff I Want Is You"). It was a classic performance. Loved it.

Cado Belle

EDINBURGH

EDINBURGH

IF CADO BELLE are one of my favourite bands — as indeed they are — then why the puzzing over what to put into this review?

The answer is quite simply there and very much new to add to what has become the accepted evaluation of this group's fine work.

There's a lot that's taken for granted in going to see the band. For a start there's the assumption that every performance is going to be little short of excellent. The material will of course be uniformly good, and the delivery accomplished and sophisticated.

we presume Maggic Reilly will pult off her usual dynamic performance and we confidently await the expected display of guitar pyrotechnics from Alan Darby ... So what's new?

Well, actually not a lot. The script for Cado Belle reads virtually the same at the end of 1977 as it did at the end of 1976. This year hasn't exactly seen any startling developments in their music and all we've got to remember them by has been one totally superfluous EP.

Otherwise it's still down to good work to be encouraged.

So what is to be sussed from its gig? Firstly, it's comforting to see Firstly, it's comforting to see that despite the current musical climate and the sad dentise of Moon, the band were in good spirits. In fact, they turned in one of their finer performances, with everybody in fine fettle.

Secondly, though the set was largely familiar, these were a couple of interesting new songs.

ngs. The first was bassist Gavin The first was bassist Gavin Hodgson's composition, "Falling in And Out Of Lave", another good song, firmly in the established Cado Belle mould—a strong hook but with predominating over the melody.

The second was much more striking. "All I Need", Maggie Roilly's first attempt at lyric writing affied to muse from keyhvardman Stuart Mackillop, chorges along at a thunwing pace. It's far more upfrow and aggressive, almost rocky, than anything hitherto. If this is indicative of a new

If this is indicative of a new

If this is indicative of a new direction, then developments are definitely on the horizon. Thirdly, it was good to see the under-rated Cohin Tully looking much happier and turning in some shining work on sax on both the new songs and also on "Next Best Thing".

The main priority for Cado Belle now is a sympathetic but firm hand at the managerial controls so that they can get down to their real strength, making excellent music.

down to their real strength, making excellent music.

What is going to get Cado Belle across is the urgency as much as the class in their music, especially their spirited rhythm section.

The right producer is also a problem but they're one of the few bands who might actually merit a live album. Once the magic and excitement of their live gig is safely captured on record, then we'll see progress.

1 never can tell if her long raps between numbers are ingratisating or if he she really is that friendly, open and tacking in self-consciousness. Bit of in self-consciousness. But of both I guess. She did some political songs in the first part — music in a role I'd almost forgotten about — music I've always been deeply suspicious of, particu-larly at the big-money end of the business — but there is no doubting Joan's sincerity and so it works.

so it works.

She sang an accapella
"Swing Low Sweet Chariot", dedicating it to Sleve Bilde.
Towards the end of the song
she discarded the microphone as well and stood, almost to attention, her voice loud and attention, her voice loud and clear.

Few people can do that without it becoming a grovel-and-cringe situation.

She linally convinced me by doing "Graceas A La Vida".

Maybe it was the beauty of the Spanish language (which she sings perfectly) or maybe it is because I have met people (people of my age and younger) who were tortured in Chile by the junta — this was one of the songs of the resistance movement — anyway, she grabbed me.

I always feel ambivalent about Ms. Baez.

I think her political position is naive bordering on the ridiculous, and yet she is the only popular singer who can make political songs reach me.

I think her attempts at folks rock are for the most part embarrassing fumblings yet "Diamonds And Rust" is a conhartassing fumblings yet as a good song.

She opened part two with her Dylan imitation from the Rolling Thunder Review.

Dressed in a wide-brim hat with flowers, white face, straggly beard, searf and leather jacket she did a remarkably accurate version of Dylan's nasal twistings on "One Too Many Mornings", complete with harp solo. She even took the trouble to remove her rings for greater authenticity.

remove her rings for greater authenticity.

In fact she did it soo well and some people in the audience felt cheated when it was revealed to be just Joanne all along. "It was cheap," shouted someone from the stafts. "I thought it was damn good," she replied.

Nothing planned, she took requests.

Nothing planned, she took requests.
"Blowin' In The Wind" and the charming sweet intinacy of "Love Song For A Stranger". It was "Mary Hamilton" from the first album that struck me most. Joanie is a constant. Like Hank Marvin and Chuck Berry, she has always been there.

It must have been 1961. The woman I was with at that time had only recently moved from New York and was filled with talk of Joan Baez. It was eight weeks before Dobells got my special order copy of her recently released first album (there were no import shops recently released first album (there were no import shops then) and I was able to hear the achingly clear voice I'd heard so much about. Folk was where it was at then, y'know. . Since then she's moved in and out of fashion depending on what was always nice to know she was there.

Not that I'm trying to culog-

Incre.

Not that I'm trying to culogisc her.

I think she's often well clear of the murk. For instance: in the States they don't know The Beatles broke up. They play them constantly on the radio every day. Joan assumed that that was the case here and led the audience in singing along on John Lennon's "Imagine", complete with lead lines. Well, that was bad enough, but when she did it with Paul McCartney's "Let II Be" it was a joke. But the audience sang along in splendid fashion.

They were old beatniks made good: neat arimmed beards and Laura Ashley dreises. Datsons parked outside. Joani let them sing "Armaring Grace" while she sang counterpoint harmony. Exeruciating. Then came "Silent Night". I outld have done without that as well. The evening was breaking up like a cripped B52 over Huc, but I hung on for the encore. It had to be, it war "We Shall Overcome". Incidentally, Johnny Rotten closed his Rotterdam concert with it a few days earlier. Some things are eternal.

This new two-minute-a-day treatment has everything you need to clear them fast.

Clinical tests show it works.

Spots, pimples, blackheads . uren't they a nuisance! But now, you needn't live with them for long, be-needn't live with them for long, because now Clean and Clear is here.

Clean and Clear was specially developed by Beecham dermatologists after studying young people's skin problems just like yours. Clinical trial has shown how well it works. And it takes only two minutes a day to use.

Everything you need

Clean and Clear is different in two important ways. First, it's a medicated gel wash, not an ointment, cream or lotion. Secondly, it combines, in one preparation, everything you need to clear spots fast. Clean and Clear cleanses thoroughly but gently - carries away excess surface oil and germs, and dries up spots. It frees blocked pores, to dissolve unsightly blackheads and it checks the cause of inflammation. What's more, it has an antibacterial agent expressly selected for its ability to penetrate and combat bacteria deeper down

How to use Clean and Clear. Make a lother with water, Massage in for 1 minute twice daily. Rinse and pat dry.

Clinically tested
In order to demonstrate how successfully Clean and Clear works, a strictly controlled trial was undertaken in the dermatology clinic of a leading London teaching hospital.

All those taking part were young people and, in a high percentage of cases, the doctor in charge reported really positive

Clear healthy skin

Massaged in for just one minute twice daily, this Medicated Wash could make a wonderful difference for you too . . . effectively treat unsightly spots and pimples, help your skin look clearer and healthier than for years. Get Clean and Clear at your chemists today. It's easy to use, non-greasy, and no unpleasant odour or telltale trace remains on your skin. Most important of all, it has everything you need to clear spots fast - and everything you need to clear spots fast - and clinical tests show it works.

T SEEMS that if there is T SEEMS that if there is anything that CSM dislikes more that a Boring Old Fart it's a Bi-Wave Fart. I am what he refers to as a member of the 'nutter faction" in his introduction to the NME Poll Results. I voted for Pink Floyd, Rainbow etc in the Best Group Pation, also voted for The Clash, Pistols etc. And why shouldn't !! If the nurds hadn't noticed, it's all music and that's what your rag's all about music and that's what your rag's all about.

I was into punk before most people I know back at the start of '77 — wow ownst vary you, that ain'tearly.

Well I come from Gloucester (tough eh!) and punk has never really come here and never will. We did have two non-entity 'punk' bands come but they went down like well greased ...—

Burlesque and Eater, with the latter apparently literally shrown out on the street-equipment and all, after a tustle with the management, who asked them to stop playing effer two numbers. And that was it. The last big name we had come here was Demis Roussos and the sell-out crowd had to pay seven quid a throw to see that fat womble (sorry Orinoco). And that just about sums up Gloucester musically (how about it tour organisers).

Back to the point. I was nearly thrown out of the common room at school for playing my pic bag copy of 'Grip' when it came out, by the bippies and soulites alike. But during the summer these bypocrifical farts suddenly became The Stranglers

'Grip' when it came out, by the bippies and soulites alike. But during the summer these hypocritical farts suddenly became The Stranglers number one fans because it was now the 'in thing' to dig punk. Can you blame them? It was fun, good for a laugh and they saw they were missing out. But nobody (though I bear one kid did) smashed up all their old records. They still play 'em and so do I, and I bet you lot do too though you're too scared to admin it.

I've got "Boffocks" just like everyone else (the album silty) but it takes its turn on my turntable along

I've got "Boflocks" just like everyone else (the album silty) but it takes its turn on my turnstable along with old favourites like "Made In Japan" and "Dark Side Of The Moon". I'll be saving up my Christmas record tokens in eager expectation of the new albums from The Clash. Syd Barrett and Rainbow. Look, unlike most of you posers, I am on the dole. I know what it's like and sometimes the last thing I want to hear is some moron who isn't singing

Reality, Escapism, and The Common Man

about how terrible it is. Ever heard of escapism manann . . . When I sat through a Floyd concern earlier this year it took me miles out of my everyday dull life as I sat there and watched the pretty lights and effects and soaked up the overpowering music music.

I would like to draw a parallel brought to me by Mick Farren's review of the new Lonnie Donegan compilation. He brought about the skiffle era. Kids countrywide who would not normally have even would not normally have even considered taking up music aid and formed bands, masses of fresh talent emerged and developed from this era, remember the Stones, Who and Beatles, changing the face of popular

Most the same thing is happening—kids all over the country are forming bands. For Christsake, even I've bought a guitar and I can already play more chords than the second best guitarist in the world (see poll results) and I've only had the damn thing a month. I'm never going to make it as an axe here but by my reckoning at least a handful should emerge from the thousands of potentials now around who might never have touched a guitar if it had not been for Pants.

Pank.
And to all you B.O.F.'s who still hate Punk I've got a few things to say, cheer up, the real music's due back with a vengence, and hard shit, you've missed out it was great fun, in a few years you'll look back and thank these guys for the almighty kick up the ass they gave music.

THE ORACLE Gloucester.

the ast they gave music.

THE ORACLE. Gloucester.

Yeah, it was a pretty dumb remark on Murray's part—even John Rotten Blees Neil Young and Beetheart as well. Couldn't agree more with your views about people becoming creatively involved in the music—and surely being in a band is less escapts; and more satisfying than a trip to the rock equivalent of Star Wars. Not that a little escaptsm is a bad thing—on the courtrary it's a occassary micty valve (particularly if you're on the dole / doing a dull job)—but too much escaptsm dulls our sense of present need and parpose; which, I suggest, is one reason rock needed the 'almighty kick up the ass' you talk about.—N.S.

"I THINK Jonathan Richman is a wet and a weed and I can't for the life of and a weed and I can't for the life of me see what this album has to offer to anyone except acid casualties and very small children." — Charles Shaar Murray, NME — 17/12/77. It makes me laugh when I think that the above statement comes from some slob who collects SUPERMAN COMICS . . . I gave them up decades

COMICS . . . I gave them up decades ago.
Coming from a Richman fan like me I suppose this sounds like sour grapes but hell, the man's one of the few original left in or this planet. Maybe Murray dishles JR because he's met something different and is scarad of it. Obviously the review would have been different if JR had looked a bit like Murray as he seems to be in love with anyone who looks like him hence The Dictators or the very boring old fart Dele Leonard, GET BACK TO YOUR BORING OLD.

fairly reasonable human being Tarry reasonable auman being.

However, can this very same character who was complaining about the absence of "chewns" in the angles of the Pistols and The Damned a few weeks back, sorely not recognise that this is where Richman is so entertaining — he makes bloody astounding CHEWNS — and if, at times he verges on nursery rhyme lyrics, who really cares? His music.

for me, is a happy escape from this goddarm awful mess in which we live and, in that context, he must swely be as relevant today as The Chash. Jonathan Richman is most definitely NOT a weed — he just shows up CSM for having lost that aura, that 'innocence of life', which continual cynical criticism seems to bring about. NEIL, Tarves, Scoland.

Dunno, comics addiction saums at least as escapist and 'innocent' as J.R. Anyway Jonathan sur's so much innocent as someone that's chosen to ignore all the masty things in favour of the nice things; a true subarban boy. Dinosaurs I can understand but fee cream vans?? — N.S.
CONGRATULATIONS on your Christmas issue! Ms Smith's shots of Jean-Jacques Barnel were a delightful bonus that made the seasonal cost of NME well worth paying. I've not seen such beautifully formed feet in a long time. Perhaps Ms Smith could do a lengthy photo-essay on rock musicians' feet in a future issue. I must suggest however that she demands that her models should be well-rinsed in that area before she aims her Bor-Brownie lens! It has demands that her models should be well-rinsed in that area before site aims her Box-Brownie lens? It has often been my experience of musicians that their feet have a melodic quality all of their own, especially those that are clad constantly "en Plimsolle."

MARK PERRY'S Alternative TV MARK PERRY'S Alternative TV single is far too good to allow Shamus O' Pyjamas to dismiss it with a crushing one liner. Signs of a crushing one liner. Signs of a constructive, working intelligence on a rock and roll record must be galling to a self-confessed show biz freak like. Bob Geldol, particularly as A.T.V. have a lot to say about the state of affairs that leads to the elevation of mediocrities such as the Rais to the status of five-minute Stars.'

I MUST write this to thank The Clash for such a great might in Betfast. The gig was great and afterwards we met and talked to Joe Strummer and Paul Simenon. We couldn't find Jones and Headon, but Joe Strummer got their autographs for us and left them at the reception desk of the Europa Hotel as he promised he would.

Would Robert Plant do the same? Thanks a lot Joe and the band. You kept your promise to come back and play for us here.

My brother and I were very close at all times and we felt that we were achieving something in our music—for even then there was a feeling of, ebellion lagainst our clders. When the war came, bowever, we were separated, although at the time I didn't know that I would never see Marty again. News of his death led to my having a nervous breakdown, which in turn destroyed my marriage. I have lived alone now for thirty-five years—which adds up to many, many hours of grief and loneliness. We here at NME rechon L. Zeppelia will hit back hard in '78. After all, as photographer CHRYS CHRYSANTHOU found dut when he stambled across Zep's Ciracesser hideaway, PLANT, BONZO (on guitar??), JONES and PAGE look in pretty sharp nick.

Awright you lot, welcome to . . .

HANK CHRIST our Lord had only one son — don't think we could've taken much more of bleedin' Xmas. Get thee behind us, demon festivity. As for 1978, it's no doubt starting the way it intends to carry on. And who better to lead the way than The Foul-Mouthed Punk Rock Group (reproduced coutesy of Sun-Speak coutesy of Sun-Speak Cliches Inc.)?

The moral turpitude of J. Rotten and Co.—much to the delight of Fleer St and all Right-thinking people everywhere—meant that admission to the United States was denied them for a while there. Just like the Stones back in the '60s when Brian and Keel (never mind that — Ed.) in the '60s when Briam and Keel (never mind that — Ed.) Anyway, the upshot was that thousands of American ticket-holders for shows that were scheduled to stort from December 30th (last year) weren't going to see Britain's lovable spike-tops. The US Embassy ruling denying them entry cited "sexual deviants or anyone with drug offenses" as liable to be placed in a non-ongoing visa situation. non-ongoing visa situation. (They really do talk like that, don't they? — Ed..) At the time of the ban,

At the time of the ban, ashen faced Sex P. supremo Malcolm "Allison" McLaren was quoted: "I feel sick about this and so do the boys." Talcy Malcy went on to describe 'the boys' as having 'petty' convictions, including John's £40 sulphate fine fast March, Paul Cook ripping up a few London bus seats and Steve Jones being a 'pretty slick' burglar before joining the band.

burglar before joining the band.

"Sid has a few assaults on his record," added McLaren hetpfully, "Like knocking a policeman's teeth out." Mr Vicious (for it is he) is currently on bail until January 19 after being arrested in a West End hotel with Namey Spungen (ask Nick Kent about it). Even last week (when all this was happening, remember?), the Yanks were getting hold of the wrong end of the stick. The producer of NBC's Samaday Night Lice TV show, obviously oblivious to the visa problem, was under the misappenension that The Foul-Mouthed Punk Rock Group had cancelled their appearance over money. Ha Group had cancelled their appearance over money. Ha ha. And to think all the tickets for their Chicago show were sold in 20 minutes.

Just as well some Warner Bros (Sex P's US company)

Bros (Sex P's US company) legal big wig got the original decision reversed, 'cos Malcolm threatened to smuggle 'the boys' into America from Canada and Johnny consoled himself by scoring 311 in NME's Kristmas Kwiz, which means he's ''A peetly nice sort of person, if dulf.'
