Oh no, not another punk on the cover!

Yeah, just another angry working-class kid in black leather, destined for God-knows-where. Which reminds us, where the hell are you, John Lennon?

big gigs around UK

FIVE WEEKS AGO, NME gave the first exclusive news of a Brifish tour being set up this winter for Canadian heavy metal trio Rush — and solely on the strength of this advance information, box offices at key venues throughout the country have been beseiged with enquiries.

The band played their debut dates here last June when, much to the surprise of many cynics and critics, they completely sold out seven major venues. And it was obvious that they had quietly built up a strong cult following in Britain, without loo much pressure from the industry itself.

Now they are coming back for their second tour, which is twice as long as their previous visit and — because of heavy demand on the last occasion — they'll be playing two nights in Newcastle, London and Maschester. Promoters Straight Mussir, who have still to name the support act, this week confirmed these dates:

Birmingham Odeon (February 12), Leicester De Montfort Hall (13), Newcastle City Hall (14) and 15), Ediaburgh renue to be announced (16), Glasgow Apollo (17), London Hammersmith Odeon (17), London Hammersmith Odeon (Empire Ardwich Apollo (21) and 24), Everpool Empire (25). Bristol Colston Hall (26) and Southampton Gaumont (27).

Tickels sare un sale now and are priced £3, £2.50. Gaumont (27).
Tickets are on sale now and are priced £3, £2,50, and £2 — with additional £1,50 seats at Newcastle, Glasgow. Shellield and Liverpool. As opposed to the last time when their act was somewhat restricted, as compared with their touring show in America, the band will be bringing over their foll

America, the band will be bringing over their full U.S. production.

To the fa with their visit, Mercury are releasing a 12-inch EP by Rush on January 20. Titled "Clover To The Heart", it leatures the fitle track, "Bastille Day", "Authem" and "The Temples Of Syrinx". Rush are Geddy Lee, Alex Lifeson and Neil Peart.

Major tour is now set

THE FIRST 23 DATES in the extensive concert and ballroom schedule by Eddie and the Hot rods have now been confirmed. They include two nights at London Lyceum and a further 11 gigs — which will take the itinerary through into early April — are still being finalised by promoters Straight Music.

They play Sultord University (Februsry 24), Leeds University (25), Middlesbrough Town Hall (26), Hartlepool Borough Hall (27), Newcastle City Hall (March 1), Dundee Caird Hall (2), Aberdeen Capitol (3), Glasgow Apollo (4), Edinburgh venue to be aunounced (5), Bradford St. George's Hall (7), Sheffield City Hall (9), Hanley Victoria Hall (10), Liverpool University (11), Leleester De Montjort Hall (12), Oxford Polytechnic (13), Southampton Top Rank (15), London Straad Lyceum (16 and 17), Hawings Pier Pavillon (18), Reading Top Rank (19), Hemel Hempstead Pavillon (20), Coventry Locarno (21) and Birmingham Town Hall (22).

Box affices open tomorrow (Friday) with tickets priced £2.50, £2 and £1.50 at Newcastle, Dundee, Aberdeen, Glasgow (with exten £1 seats), Bradlord, Sheffield, Hanley, Leicester and Birmingham. At Leeds and Hartlepool admission is £1.50, while at London Lyceum tickets are all at the one price of £2.

Other prices: Saltord £1.75 (in advance) and £2

Other prices: Salford £1.75 (in advance) and £2 (on the doors); Middlesbrough £1.75, £1.50 and £1.25; Liverpool £1.30 (in advance) and £1.50 (doors); Oxford £1.50 (advance) and £1.80 (doors); Southampton £1.60 (advance) and £1.80 (doors); and Hastings. Reading, Hemel Hempstead and Coventry — all £1.70 (advance) and £1.90 (doors). Postal bookings will be accepted.

The Rods, who returned last month from their successful $6-date tour of America, will be featuring material from their newly-released Island single "Quit This Town" and their tatest album "Life On The Line".

Sid brings Pistols U.S. tour to life

BY SMASHING his guitar over the head of a stage intruder at San Antonio on Sunday night, Sid Vicious provided the first real note of sheer aggression in what had been a relatively quiet opening to the Sex Pistols' debut tour of America. Until then, and despite over-dramatic and highly sensationalised accounts in the national press, the and appeared to be maintaining a fairly low profile by their standards — with various critics describing them as "tame", "contrived" and "a pale imitation of their true selves".

All the early "noting" seems to have been caused by last minute police decisions to restrict attendances, so leaving large numbers unable to gain entry. Controversy inside the halls was limited to Johnny Pouten builting abutes a methi-halls was limited to Johnny Rotten hurling abuse at audiences (so what's new?) and declaring his hare for Britain.

But Sunday's show sparked the tour into life, when Sid's action was provoked by sections of the crowd throwing beer cars, cream pies and fireworks at the band. Even so, at pressime
there was no sign of any gigs

Vice Squad representatives have been in close attendance ever since they opened in Atlanta, and it's been suggested that the Pistols deliberately played it down in the early stages to pacify the U.S. watch-dogs.

The U.S. tour ends this Saturday, and the band then return to London for a couple of days before setting out on another European tour—opening in Helsinki on January 18, and subsequently taking in Sweden, Germany. Holland and Belgium

Tom's 'gay' song; EMI chief speaks

EMI RECORDS have seen fit to

EMI RECORDS have seen fit to pass an official comment on their decision to release the Torn Robinson Band's controversial track "Sing II You're Glad To Be Gay". General manager Peter Buckleigh said this week: "We're treating it like any other release. The song is a vital part of Tom's act."

In fact, the song is "buried" in a four-track live EP called "Rising Free TRB", recorded at the band's pre-Christmas gigs. It's issued on January 27, selling at normal single price, and the other tracks are "Don't Take No For An Answer", "Martin" and "Right On Sister". Robinson himself says he's particularly pleased about the release as his hit "Motorway" was "not representative of the band".

TRB are at present tehearsing for a short European tour, their first time abroad. On their return, they star routining for a new album, to be recorded in March. Because of these commitments, they'll be playing very few U.K. dates until the late spring.

ART ATTACKS SPLITTING UP

ART ATTACKS have decided to split up, following the departure of their vocalist Edwin shortly before Christmas. But they won't be lost to the business, because each member of the group is forming a new band called. The Art Attacks, numbered from 11 to V. They play their final gig with their current line-up at London Wardour St. Vortex next Monday (16) supported by Mean Street. Accelerators and Perverse Velvet.

• The Vortex in Wardour Street, one of London's premier

The Vortex in Wardour Street, one of London's premier new-wave centres, is expanding its activities by opening more Vortex clubs around the country. The first of these is launched at Dalston, East London, at the end of this month. It will be followed by further venues in key provincial cities.

Simon Boswell of Advertising is now recovering from knee injuries (including a fracture) received on Christmas Evewhen, during the band's set at London Hope & Anchor, he leapt in the air but landed off stage! His legs were set in plaster, but he has continued gigging despite his handicap (and kneecap).

Wayne County's Electric Chairs are playing a short tour of London venues with gigs at Stoke Newington, Rochester Castle (this Saturday). Stoke Newington Pegasus (Sunday). Islington Hope & Anchor (January 16), Camden Dingwalls (17), Ilford Oscar's (18) and Kensington Nashville (20). County has now added a second guitarist to the band — he is Henri Padovani, a French Corsican who previously played with The Police.

Damned's drummer in pile-up

JOHN MOSS, The Damned's new permanent drummer, was seriously hurt in a car accident over the New Year holiday. He was being driven by Johnny Rubbish in a car which was in a head-on crash in Hampstead — and Moss, who was not wearing a seal bell, was thrown through the windscreen. He sustained a broken nose and had nearly 100 stitches in his face. He was discharged from hospital last weekend, but won't be fit enough to play with the band in their Croydon Greyhound gig this Sunday — Dave Butke, Johnny Moped's drummer, deputises:

But it's expected that Moss

Goldsmith opens own box-office

TOP ROCK promoter Harvey Goldsmith is opening his own box-office in London, exclusive to his own shows. It's located at Chappell's, 50 New Bond Street, London W1 (01-629 3453) and is open daily from 9.30 am to 6 pm (5pm on Saturdays). Whatever the attraction, he will charge a booking fee of 20p per ticket, as opposed to the normal fee of about 25 per cent.

The office will also handle mail orders where necessary, and this will overcome the problem of having to resort to Post Office box-numbers, which has proved so unceliable in the past—with many people complaining about tickets delayed, or not received, for concerts by many big-name acts including Pink Floyd, the Eagles and the Rolling Stones.

MARTHA FOR LONDON GIG

MARTHA REEVES and the Vandellas have now been confirmed for a major London concert at the new Roxy Theatre in Harlesden on Wednesday, February 15. And two other gigs have been added to their British date sheet reported last week—at Plymouth Mecca (February 14) and Westen-super-Mare Webbington Country Club (16).

RECORD NEWS Why Buddy Holly is Top Five certainty

BUDDY HOLLY is the subject of an intensive TV campaign by the EMI Organisation next month, when they release his "20 Godden Greats" LP on the MCA label. It will be given a massive promotional treatment, similar to recent compilation albums by Cliff Richard and Diana Ross & The Supremes, and the company expect it to be a huge hit. All of Holly's hit records are featured on the set, including many tracks with the Crickets. A single extracted from the album, "Wishing" "Love's Made A Fool Of You", is issued on January 27.

STEVE ELLIS IN COMEBACK

STEVE ELLIS, the former Love Affair and Widowmaker tead singer, esturns to the record scene after elmost two-years out of circulation. He's been signed to an accturing worldwide deal by Anicla, who release his single "Reg eThe Bich Kids, the bend formed by ex-Sex Pistot Glen Mattock and feeturing ex-Silk einger and guitar-ist Midge Ure, have their debut single out ne EMI this weekend— aptly titled "Rich Kids". Their first album, produced by Mick Ronson, is due shortly.

Natalle Colo's single "Be Thankful" is issued this weekend by Copitot. It's taken from her album "Thankful", and there are plans for her to vigit British in the near future to promote it.

● The next Rod Stewart single features two tracks from bis current hit album "Footloose And Fancy Free". It's a double A-side release by Riva on January 20, comprising "Hot Legs" and "I Was Only Joking".

The Stukes have been signed by Sonet Records and their first release, due out on Fabruary 3, is a three-track markinsingle. Top side is one of their most popular stope numbers "Sport", while the oppoling features "It! Sand You A Postcard" and "Dead Lazy".

"I Am A Dalek"/"Neutron Bomb" is the new single by Art Attacks. released next week by Albatross Records These are their last tracks before their spiri (see page 3).

British Lione, the bend compris-ing former Mott and Madicine Head members, have their debut single issued by Vertigo on January 20. Panned by John Fiddler, It's titled "One More Chance To Bun".

• A Lynyrd Skynyrd single "What's Your Name" — taken from "Street Survivors", their less album before the band's tragic eclipse — is released by MCA on Jenuary 20.

RCA singles out this weekend include "Beauty And The Beauty by David Boeke from his "Recoas" album, "To An Unknown Man" by Wangells, "Now Can I Leve You Ageln" by John Derwer and "Sorry I'm A Larby" by Beccara. The Derver track comes from his new album "I Went To Live", out on January 20.

• John Martyn's new single, the self-penned "Deneing", is issued by Island tomorrow (Friday).

◆ The Athion Dance Band have ♦ The Abbinn Dance Band have shortened, their name to The Albinn Band, and the change reflects their move away from the moze traditional aspects of folk music. Their new approach fostured on their album "Rice Up Lite The Sur", which Harvest release in early March. Guest singers on the set include Julie Covington, Richard & Linda Thompson, Kete McGarriglé, Andy Pairweather Low and Martin Carthy.

Coventry-based band The Flys, who previously had an EP issued in the independent Zama record label, have been signed by EM for whom they make their debut on January 20 with the three-track maxi-single "Leve And A Molotov Cocktail".

Jee Cocker has signed a worldwide recording deal with Elektra/Asylum, and starts work on his first album for the company next month.

Blue returned to the studios last weekend with producers Exon John and Clive Frenks to record their second album for Rockes, the followup to "Another Night Time Flight".

These likely lads are THE ONLY ONES, who've been tipped for stardom this year by various critics, pendits and know-alts. And they've already taken the first step up the ladder by signing a worldwide deal with CBS Records. The band go into the studio later this mouth to stard work on their first albans, and a single will be rushed out as soon as possible. The Only Ones are (left to right) ALAN MATR, JOHN FERRY, PETER PERRETT and MIKE KELLE.

PARLIAMENT AND BREAD COMING IN

PARLIAMENT, arguably the biggest box-office draw of any black outfit on the American black outfit on the American circuit, are now officially confirmed for their delayed British visit in June. They were originally scheduled to come over last summer, but a management change caused a delay. They'll be bringing their full U.S. show, which is one of the biggest in the rock business and includes a 25-foot flying saucer? Said a spokesman: "They have so much equipment that it'll have to be shipped over, as air freight charges would be prohibitive."

BREAD, who re-dormed a year ago after disbanding in 1973, are being lined up for a British tour in the spring. Negotiations are now being finalized for what will be their first visit to this country for over aix years. News of the upcoming tour coincides with the announcement that their 20-track compilation album "Sound Of Bread" has achieved Double Platinum status for British eales.

quits Osibisa OSIBISA have lost their guitarist and singer Wendelt Richardson, who decided to quit the band after almost three years in fagur of a close family life. His desarture came on the ewe of their British concert tour, which opened last weekend, but they were able to find an immediate replacement in Kariban-Kariman. He was formerly lead guitarist with Ghana's foremost group, the Bombaya Band, and is widely regarded as the leading exponent of African-style guitar playing.

Two more dates have been added to Osibisa's tour schedule—at Coventry Warwick University (January 19) and Scunthorpe Baths Hall (26).

New Hearts drummer and founder member Matt Machatyte, who was previously with The Gorrillas, he left the band by mutual agreement. His replacement will be announced.

controversy, the result of frustration. There's been a farcical fracas with the police, resulting in a £20 fine for Siouxsie, and the infamous spraying incident, "Signed Siouxsie and the Banshees." A few prestige gigs with Buzzoocks in Manchester and London, a So It Goer appearance, a John Peel session. No record deaf, except the occasional futile one-off, and it's only in the last few months that they gelled in any way as a considered, permanent group. And now?

Their development has happened away from the sub-culture acceleration. On the outside, taking the best from the inside. There is no rush. They are patient.

Quicely spoken, softly articulating methods and motives, patient in contrived conversation at intentional methods.

patient in conflived conversation at interviewers' misconceptions/hesitations, learning as much as the provoker. "It's funny, now we're starting to do interviewe, we've just begun to understand what we're doing, whereas before without doing interviews we never really thought about motives."

Having understood that, publicity—which, because of the mode of expression that the Banshees have superficially adopted, is achieved through exposure in the 'rock press'—is necessary for the Banshees to reach some kind of identifiable mass. Even fame! But more, too. Now that they have been caught—through not adult of their own except their obvious uniqueness and thus their prospective hipness," in the media persecuting/giggling myth—they must perpetuale jargon to denounce shamefully demoralising distortions through ignorant miscomprehension. (Phik???—Ed).

About these miscomprehensions, they are understandably sensitive. No bitterness/grudges, Hurt, puzzlement. For a group who leave such a huge question mark after their work, it is hard for them to take being so readily wrapped and dismissed, often as either "oh-a-gur], the-future-is-female. Great. Next," or a "ooh-nazism-nusty-destroy. Next". They have indeed been mistreated, through, admittedly, as regards. "Nazism-, initial lack of forethought. They were swastikas. Their lushly subversive, brutally sensual words and the rhythmic/anthemic noise they create to form an undoubted Teutonic heaviness didn'l belp.

"But always with any sorn of politics, which is why we haven't got any, you get extremists, and once you get extremists you get people doin't understand things, they should say so. There's too much pride. We don't understand."

ND YET, DESPITE A DYET, DESPITE disruptions/distortions despite the fact that they have no record deal. despite, parameuntly, ignorance, Siouxsie and the Banshees find themselves in an almost enviable position.

Siouxsic is, according to the NME Poll, the fourteenth most popular female singer in the world. They hold the house record at the Vortex. They sold out The Nashville two nights running. They have made no commitment sacrifices, no compromises, and they feel comfortable that what they're saying comportable that what they're saying is necessary.

"Things have to go on. We're trying to show that it does not have to be pop puth next, it doesn't have to be the same old cock in coll rifts. We don't like trends. We formed initially because we fell we had something of our own to say. What was happening was lacking in certain aspects—it needed a different point of view, a variant on things, but with the same attack, impact."

Off on a variant—not like anyone else Is it this different way of doing things/saying things/shaying things that has attracted this curious following? Is there sympathy with the Banshees? A common recognition of the need for individual regeneration, the cralisation that men must suffer to know joy, some genuine concern as to when a pilitim becomes a the need for individual regeneration, the cralisation that men must suffer to know joy, some genuine concern as to when a infiliam becomes a barbarism? Is there admiration/appreciation of the way that Siousaya and the Banshees have conclusively shown the amount of expression/wariation possible utilising unorthodox and minimal techniques?

Or is it just hip to like them, for numerous reasons? Is it easy to jump up and down to them? Are they the new trend? "Well, there's she girl thing that aren't there's understood things that aren't there. Is also of people who we latched on to us because of the because they've understood things that aren't there. Is the being labelled Nazis, things like that many of the audience don't understand, but that's irrelevant as long as they get the feel that we're doing something different the republishy don't understand ourselves completely.

Whatever the reasons, genuing or doing something different ... we probably don't understand ourselves completely.

Whatever the reasons, genuine or misplaced, for their popularity, it exists, and their presence and power in performance probably propels enough feel for an audience to intuitively grasp that they're not absorbing roun-of-the-mill music/noise. It is almost hypnotic, an unfortenate association. Uninhibited, precise noise with very few reference points. Clean, perversely addictive, with more than an ounce of freedom. Unconventional in form, but no way inaccessible. Structured noise. Do they view themselves as musicians? An emphalic no.

"As non-musicians. Sound innovators." A comprehensible term? "It's an interesting ... interesting noises ... certain songs that rely on the drum beat ... soom relying on voice ... some on guitar experimenting, not just using a voice to say baby, baby ... it's making different sounds with what you've got. We go out of our way not to be musicians ... we don't rehearse till our fingers bleed.

"We can play rock in'roll, but we ignore it, shove it in a corner. We don't see ourselves in the same context as rock in 'roll groups. We'te quot on a limb. It is dangerous, but it excites us, makes it worthwhile."

frail-faced, tough-minded, strange-light-in-her-eyes voice/performer of Siouxsie and the Banshees.

When she was a little girl "I was very lonely, actually. The few friends I had were gypsies. When I was eight I tried to commit suicide to get noticed by my parents. I used to do things like fall on the floor upstairs so that they'd think I'd fallen downstairs, and I'd have bottles of pills in my hands. I've always of pills in my hands. I've always fell on the outside, really."

She, like the rest of the group, admits to being a loner. They don't really like people. A thing they have in common. Their reason for existing is to perform noise with meaning for people to share and benefit from. They could be the last "rock" group. The only "rock" group. They are not a "rock" group. They are twentieth century performers.

Friday night at The Nashville. An incongruous/traditional venue, it would seem, for Sioussie and the Banshees. Isn't anywhere? It is 'an occasion'. Names/faces are scattered, to be noticed and not to be noticed, perhaps admiring the path of individualism. Wayne County, Billy Idol, Marianne Faithful, Andy Czezowski. Howard Pickup, Jordan and on. It is a sell out. People straggle outside, hoping for admission. Some, abstrally, produce five pound notes in vain attempts at bribing the doorman. What is this?

Calm down and reflect on a bewildering reputation. It's now 15 months since the Banshees in a pyrited, impulsive shot of audience participation, went on stage at the 100 Club and set their precedent for the unique, shocking, honest. That's a dark, distant past, perhaps the only period that the Banshees have actually felt that they belonged to something. Felt part of anything.

'a movement that pressed self-destruct early on, a movement whose successful ones were, with odd exceptions, the shrewdest, the most adaptable to the business as opposed to the most creative, challenging, changing and committed.

For their first 'performance' at the 100 Club the Banshee's were Sid Vicious on drums, Marco (now in The Models) on guitar, Steve Havne on bass, Siouxsie singing. In March/April of 77 a concentrated Siouxsie and the Banshee's appeared, playing their first real gig at the Roxy, Siouxsie singing, Steve on bass, Kenny (who was one of the original 'punks') looking, Steve on bass, Kenny (who was one of the original 'punks') looking different, dancing around, on drums, P. P. Barnum on guitar. They were poor and unformulated, but intense. From about this period, they appear in Don Leirs' flicker-movie, bad-mouthing the owner of the Roxy, having small fun at others' expense. About May they began to move out into the provinces, speculative but never boring.

About May Jirey began to move dut not the provinces, speculative but never boring.

From there, the growth has been subdued and careful. P. P. Barnun left (he's now formed Heroes), Marin was brought in. The group, as to be expected, have touched

Pic: STEVENSON

Visually, the group set no principles. Concentration from the three musicians. Instinctive bodily maneouving from Siouxsle. Snapped, harsh, asexual, she wears short/short/skirsf for freedom of movement. She is nicknamed landroid by the group. Her make, in movement. She is mickhanted landroid by the group. Her make-up, which early transforms her nervous, wistful, pale face into the hard lined clown-tragedian, is the one concession to the audience. Her voice is staggered. No orthodox fluid melodies, but clipped, forced lines, sharply falling and rising, lorming careful, idiosyncratic 'hooks'. She displays no exhaustion. Chilaration, amusement, frustration or any of those other colourful sideshows that performers often find in themselves. In the early days there was little nervousness when she got on stage. Now, she gels very nervous. 'Maybe it's because there's a lot more emotion put into what we're doing now... when you just get up there like we used to the emotion that comes up... you're not scalising it. 'Emotion?' 'Passion... it's just emotion full stop. There's no other words. It's just one thing "

FTHE EMOTIONS of the group have toughened/flowered over the last few months, maybe in sub-conscious urgency of desire to communicate something blurred but precious and important, then so has the group's overall intensity us performers. Weaknesses are gradualty eradicated, the process of self-discovery.

"Now, we seem to have some sense of direction. Though we don't know what it is. over the last year we haven't got tangled. We have just kept a different way of doing things. We haven't just gone out and done every gig that we've been offered. The best ggs are those when you go down really badly but yeu know you've done a good set . we don't really need audience approval, the way we approach it, we're out there and we're putting on a show for ourselves and anyone who wants to put their hands in, well, they can.

"We're not out to give everyone a good time," on you can tome on stage, you're the same as us. It's not like that, 'cos we go on stage and it's for us and if anyone wants to take something it's up to them. We're not going to impose anything on anyone, so in some aspects it's not mainstream eintertainment.

entertainment. Its entertainment for some people but it's not mainstream entertainment.

"We're very aware of coming across as pretentious and that's one thing that we're all seared of, so we've never actually said, this is art, this is that. We leave it all open, we don't define anything so we can go back on ourselves like asyone else and find things that we ddn't see before. We don't really like being tagged as anything, but it is inevitable that people have to tag something to understand it."

Of the Banshees' performance, fifty per cent is music/noise, fifty per cent is music/noise, fifty per cent is music/noise, fifty per cent and observation, chilling vignettes of minor atrocities and gruesome indulgences, of frustration, of unrequited love. From the dark side of life, granning, perverted, subversive; euphoric and depression, vision and pessimism mysteriously co-exist. The truth in ugliness Striving to manufacture some semblance of order, of purposefulness, set against the absurdity and pointlessness of life. Their realism is vital, snatches of everyday life exaggerated for effect. No-one sings songs like these; there must be room for abrupt confrontation. "People live in a dreamworld".

Problems facing the controversial/different/indefinable—"Everyday there's a problem about having to compromise... everyday there's a reporter wanting to interview just Sioussie, take potures of Sioussie, getting across that it's a backing band for Sioussie, take potures of Sioussie, getting across that it's a backing band for Sioussie, it's not that at all. It's a four-piece band, who supports us, who plays with us, it's so bard when there's not many we like... getting certain people in on the guest list, record company people, having to deal with record company people having to deal with record company sees, that's bullshit. They're there to give the bands a little money and make as much money for themselves. They don't care if a band falls by the wasyside as long as they've made enough money out of them. We haven't signed any record deals we want commitment from a record cumpany so that we can do what we want to do.

SEX PISTOLS OVER AMERICA

EXCLUSIVE REPORT FROM OUR REPORTERS-ON-THE-SPOT DOWN THE LOCAL NEWSAGENTS

I'M-SO-BORED-WITH-SPACE-FILLERS-ABOUT-THE-SEX-PISTOLS-IN-THE-USA

EARL HARBOUR may have caught our colonial cousins with their funky drawers down around their ankles, but America seems to have been fully prepared for The Sex Pistols — at least, according to the despatches filtering back from the battleground via the press.

London's Evening News was the only British paper dumb enough to pay for the return airfare and expenses of Man-On-The-Spot John Blake, and they aftempted to recoup the investment with front page Pistols articles on Friday, Saturday and Monday issues of the commuter and Monday issues of the commuter brain candy rag.

Friday's headline blared I Harr Britain Says Screaming Johnny (as in Rotten, not Blake). Blake said the show in Atlanta, Georgia, was "only half of what the Pistols are capable of." The story told how the band intimidated that Atlanta audience by blowing their snorty noses onto the stage, which provoked the incensed crowd to hurt a barrage of popoorn and paper cups: A heavily made up blonde (no, dear, not Paul Cook) screamed. "They're disgusting and I love them!" Another young Yankee nihilist was less enthusiastic, however. "This isn't music. It's nothing."

was test enthussattie, nowever. This inn't music. It's nothing."

Blake reported that before the gig the Pistols had told the promoter that they had no intention of rising to the bait of the Vice Squad officers flown into

Atlanta to view the gig, and he quoted New York Times critic John Rockwell as saying, "They were great, they just can't fail!"

The Pistols, not the Vice Squad - fail!"

The Pistols, not the Vice Squad — silly!
With no air-ticket hanging over their heads, the rest of Fleet Street were more subdued. Friday's Duily Mail, in their headline, said Bible Beth Backlash Threatens U.S. Tour, and reported that Vice Squads from Tulsa, Baton Rouge and Memphis were flown in to see the gig after protests from Deep South church organisations.

Lieutenant Ronald Howell of Memphis said, "We have heard a lot about these boys and if they behave themselves we'll give them a right friendly welcome. Memphis is a clean city. We sim to keep it that way. We will not tolerate any real, or simulated, sex on stage. No six. Taey can be nude if they like." (Thrills advises against full-frontals due to the growing obesity of Steve 'The Beer-Belly That Aie Arlanta' Jones!) "They can spit! They can even vomit!" (If Steve is allowed to appear in the maughty-naked-onde, they probably will!) "No law against that! But there must be no lewd or indecent behaviour.

Friday's Daily Express also stressed the Friday's Daily Express also stressed the church/vice angle, and the Evening Standard — sulking because their arch-rivals at the naughty-naked-News had John Boy Blake on the other side of the Atlantic and they had no-one—ran the headline Rossen And Co. Run Of The Mill and fished their piece with quotes from whining fans who had found the show unexpectedly subdued.

The next day, Saturday's Daily Mail ran the headline The Night That Pink Went Phut, and printed a day later than everybody else how—surprise, surprise—nobody in Atlanta had suffered a cardiac arrest at the spectacle of live Pistols. The Daily Mail, however, senoped the rest with the anecdote concerning Steve Jones trying to pick up a local wench who turned out to be a transvestite.

"Funny place, America," Steve said.

The Pistols' second gig in Memphis provided the chance for John Blake to drool all over Saturday's Eventing News front page, under the headline Sex Pistols Fans In Riot, about how "tioting crowds fought with police and smashed glass doors after 300 ticket holders couldn't get in. One fan was taken to hospital covered in blood and another was arrested."

Blood! Blood! This is more like it, John. You're really worth that air-ticket now. Wait, there's more?

Sid Vicious, maybe because nobody else collide be bothered to do it, "stabbed himself in the arm with a knife. The wound was deep and there was a lot of blood." Blake told how, during the gig. Vicious "took off his leather jacket to reveal a large lint pad plastered to his arm. He ripped off the dressing to reveal the gaping wound."

Sid kept up the self-abuse schtick at the next gig at, uh, Randy's Rodeo in Texas. On Monday's Exercing News front page (yawn) Blake sevealed how Vicious screamed at the audience: "You cowboys are all faggosts"— and retailated as the audience threw beer cans by beating a heckler in the front row over the head with his unstrapped bass guitar.

Be reasonable, Sid. The cowboys were only throwing beer cans because the cops had taken their gurs away from them as they entered the emporium. Blake told how one can had hit Sid right on his voluptuous pout.

Simpered Sid: "That can hit me right in the mouth. It hurt but I don't care!"
Blake reported that the Pistols believe they are being tailed by the FBI. "These big fat guys keep following us around verywhere we go," snarled Rotten.

Ah, John, that's just Steve and Sid! Monday's Evening Standard claimed—eroneously—that Sid had stabbed himself in the arm during the gig. obviously getting their facts muddled and referring to the previous gig in Memphis. The Standard also reported how someone jumped on stage screaming: "I DONT LIKE IT!! DONT LIKE IT!! DONT LIKE IT!!

Oh, bush your mouth, Malcolm!

The Fisiols escaped being busted in Memphis — although their solourn in Elvis's home state didn's go without incident, at least if we're to believe the Freming News report by John Blake. According to Blake's front page report on Suburday, all manner of maybem took place, lactuding a full-scale riot outside the Talleayu Balbroom and a julcy teem of Sid Victous self motifaction — both of which, Sevens claims, were twisted out of all decent proportion. No riot occurred, claims 10c, and as for Victous, it seems that the bassist did out himself but that there was no dramatic oustage ripping-off of any arm-bundage.

Indeed, Blake's hysterical report could have been the outcome of what Stevens describes as a Pixtols policy of ignoring the British press in general. Virtually all the British nationals have U.S.-based correspondents on the tour—Mirror.

Express, Ferning News, Standard, you name it—but they have been greeted by a sloney-faced silence and, on one occasion, Rotten addressing them as "a bunch of lousy parasites".

Rotten, as usual, has taken it upon himself.

Rotten addressing snem in parasites". Rotten, as usual, has taken it upon himself to be spokesman of the group, spouting forth emisently quotable jibes at each audience he's encountered. At Memphis, he selped: "I'm not here for your amusement. You're here for mine! And stop throwing things at me." At the third gig, it Randy's Ballroom in San Antonio, he whisped out a familiar harangue: "You bleedin' bunch of statues. I've never seen an undience stand like you bleedin' rotters."

In fact, Jue Stevens claims that the audiences he's vituessed have been anything but liddback. Obviously baving picked up on stunts witnessed on U.S. TV 'punk' documentaries, crowds forew everything from beer-caus to ice-cubes at the Pistols in both San Antonio and Mierophin.

All in all, though, the dates played thus far have been a disarming success. More outnown shanging over proceedings appear to be (a) the Pistols and warner Bros' corporate paranola about constant E B1 'siglance (plain-clothese cops have been spotted at all gigs, looking suitably mensicing) and (b) the continuing uneasy relations between the Pistols and bassist Sid Vicious, who appeared to be ignoring-seach other's presence off-stage in Atlanta and Memphée.

The San Antonio gig, however, proved so successful for all concerned that it created a spirit of bonhownle within the band which even exuded as far as the travelling U.S. presscoops. After the gig, the band called freely and amicably with U.S. scribes like the New Yord Times' John Rockwell, Rolling Stone's Charles' Young and Punk editor Jobn Holmstrow.

THE BOB DYLAN FILM Renaldo & Clara, previewed in Thrills recently by Miles, is neither a one-off exercise nor a superstar's whim. The word is that Dylan is in films to stay. Furthermore Dylan is in films to stay. Furthermore, he's been busy setting up his own outfit to make sure he does just that.

Circuit Films is the name of the company, which has quietly set up offices in New York and Los Angeles with its HQ in Minneapotis. The head of the company is Dylan's 36-year-old brother David Zimmerman, who cans the operation with a staff of eight. A Dylan exec says: "Most of them have music industry exprience. David published Bob's music..He trusts these people. He told them to learn about the film business."

The inexperience of the hired hands is not the only unusual thing about Circuit Films. Renaldo & Clara is a three hour and 52 minute film which cost $1,250,000, a sizeable investment for a first-time independent outing. A film of that length is difficult to distribute through normal channels (witness.)

distribute through normal channels (witness Bertolucci's 1900), which is presumably why Dylan turned down offers from two major companies (guaranteeing a clear profit of $1 million) and opted to set up Circuit and handle the product himself.

The movie will be launched in the three cities where Circuit has offices, backed by a further $4,600,000 of Dylan's money for promotion. The second run will follow in Boston, Torunto and San Francisco, followed by Chicago and Madison, Wisconsin.

Wisconsin.

Because, according to a Dylan spokesman, "Dylan doesn't want to confuse the audience into thinking it's a rock concert film," there will be no soundtrack album of the 47-cut score. The soundtrack is supposed to serve as a counterpoint to the story. End result of this may be that priated versions of the soundtrack could end up on bootlegs a la "Basement Tapes".

Latest news is that Dylan is now planning a second feature, also self-financed, which will begin shooting in August. As one close friend put it, "the'll either be the next Orson Welles, or be'll have egg on his face."

(AND YES, THEY DO WANT TO BE TEEN IDOLS . . .)

LL OF A SUDDEN, pop is no longer a dirry word, there was a time when calling your music pop was like signing your own death warrant, but now The Only Ones, Nick Lowe, The Ramones. The Clash and countless others can breathe the word without fear of derision; and even feel proud.

feel proud.

This has to be a healthy condition, if only becaused don't have to apologise for one of my tastes anymore. But calling the current spate of modern teen music pop is really a misnomer, because so far it has failed to satisfy the one basic condition the term implies: mass acceptance.

So, while pop becomes a chic adjective, the music remains just a minor phenomenon.

Now, enter The Dwight Twilley Band — who would call their music "superpop" and further confuse the terminology. However, the idiom is distinct: rich and powerful pop rock as opposed to the effete fodder of most chart fare, keeping company with a beady strate of young Americans.

distinct: rich and powerful pop rock as opposed to the effete fodder of most charf fare, keeping company with a heady strate of young Americans like Cheap Trick, Tom Petty, The Marbles, The Rubinoos, Chris Stamey and, when he chooses, Big Star's Alex Chilton.

The Dwight Twillay Band are Dwight Twilley and Phil Seymour, from Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Twilley writes the songs, plays guitar, keyboards and sings. Seymour plays drums, some bass and sings. They have remarkably similar voices, so the vocals are shared, and in tow with engineer Bob Schaper they produce their own records under the guise of Orister.

So far they've had one U.S. hit single, "I'm On Fire", which canks as one of the five best records to ome out of the States in as many years, and one afturn, "Sincerely", which was almost as good. If prompted, the furthest Twilley will go to elaborate on 'superpop' is to say their music is mainty Elivs, Beattes and Twilley.

Note the pedigree. He doesn't choose (although it isn't really a choice, more a subconscious process) whatever the other kids on the block are rawing about, and there's no obscure name-dropping either. Instead it's the two biggest phenomena in the history of rock — both easily fullfilling that "mass acceptance" condition.

Twilley unashamedly sticks his own name alongside.

To be fair, I should point out that he was describing the music when he said that. But talking to him on the transatlantic phone, it becomes obvious that he's aware of the this reasons for being in pock's implications. His reasons for being in rock'n'roll (if enyone needs a reason) aren't the usual "to get laid, wasted and have a good time." Instead, he humbly aspires to being no more than the next teenage sensation.

He wants to create a stream of quality records that will cut through the chaff and de-pollute the airwayes. As he puts it, "going to the limit is what rock'n'roll is all about, we're gonna try to do rock'n roll is all about, we're gonna try to do that."

Twilley met his partner Phil Seymour in Tulsa at (get this) a Saturday matinee of A Hard Day's Night. "It isn't all that surprising we met up, most of the kids weren't tall enough to reach the box office, so Phil and I sort a stuck out."

The pair spent the next seven years writing songs together, playing in local bands and eventually building a roughshod demo studio in a friend's basement. In '74 they set off for L.A., two young kids and a tape in search of a contract. However, offers weren't exactly cuming thick and fast, so they sold a song of theirs called "Love Is A Train" to a singer who, for some reason. Twilley refuses to name, and returned home despondent. By chance, Shelter Records heard and were duly impressed by "Love Is A Train". They contacted the pair, who had not thought of approaching their hometown-based label with its roster of Dixie funk, and suggested some time in a studio-proper to see what they were capable of. The result was "I'm On Fire", three minutes of pure, pumping rock.

The result was "I'm On Fire", three minutes of pure, pamping cock.

For a list try it was stunning. The guitars threatened to punch you in the face, the drums kicked hard and the song had hooks that wouldn't let go. It had a strange classic sense, as if the pair had set out to capture 20 years of rock and grind it into a sound no more than a day old.

An America then firmly in the grip of The Doobie Brothers had a momentary lapse of taste and took it to No. 16 in the charts, which goes some way towards confirming that The Dwight Twilley Band might just have it in them to live up to their ambitions. However, it's only now, some two years later, that they're in a position to prove it.

Soon after their second single was released Shelter lost their distribution and so couldn't promote or even sell the record. It was a year before the problems were surmounted, and by that time the band had lost their initial impetus, causing their first album to carve only a marginal niche in the hearts of the American public last year, despite critical ravings.

Further problems with shelter since then have do to the band signing with Arista in the U.S., though they are still with Shelter in Britain. A second album, "Twilley Don't Mind", was recently released to near-unanimous acclaim (pace Kent), with a new single of the same title

To call it popt (or even superpop) would be to belittle it. The songs, mostly about love and sex, are breathless, insistent and above all rock-hard. They share musical territory with label-must Tom Petity (the duo sing on Petity's album), but they have more depth and class, and are not as straightforward as the blond bombshell.

"You could call us sophisticated punks, if you're looking for a label to put on us," says Twilley. I assure him that I'm trying hard not to look for a label, but since he's broached the subject, I tell him his aims have much in common with the good old youth resurgence over here.

"Probably the most intelligent thing I can say about the whole thing is that if there's any reason for it, it's that the whole music business has become adult orientated. Nowadays if you play Mention of The Saw Pictols about the contraction of the same properties that the kids are gonne went their rock in roll music back one of these days."

Mention of The Sex Pistols elicits little response from Twilley, his view of them seems coloured by media mistruths. In fairness, he declines to comment from the distance and relative seclusion of Tulsa, but though he thinks the spirit's right, he adds: "It would be a gas if someone could make it happen with the music."

Asked just why rock has become adult orientated — "musicans playing for their peers" — Twilley asserts that it's because newadays there's no leader.

FROSTY LINES DYLAN'S WALLET

THE ANNUAL SUMMER EXODUS to play the lucrative Australian concert circuit is about to start once again and, as Thrills revealed before Christmas, topping the big names this year is Bob Dylan. The Zim is now understood to be touring Australia during March for a fee of more than £600,000 for about 11 dates.

Originally a number of Australian promoters had been desperate to tour Dylan, but when he sought one million Australian dollars (£630,000) the ranks quickly thinned. It appears that the eventual promoter could be Paradine Entertainments — which has David Frost as a major partner. Frost has played a key toole in Australian rock promotion through Paradine rever since it made a killing on the Neil Diamond tout in February 1976.

Why Dylan has turned his back on a UK tour in preference for Australia and Japan is not difficult to understand. A UK tour at this stage would rate out outdoor venues, and, with their limited capacity. British concert halts could not possibly hope to compete with the revenue generated by the huge outdoor gigs Dylan can play to in Asia at this time of the year. Other big names scheduled to fill their pagy banks by playing Australia this summer include The Beach Boys, Electric Light Orchestra, Bot Scaggs, Rod Sewon, The Rolling Stones and Emerson, Lake and Palmer Just to make things even more exciting, if hat's possible, David Bowie will thimst certainly be touring Australia at the same time as Dylan.

Iggy Pop was also to have toured the Anapodes in early December, but the tour was cancelled only a formight before it was due to begin because of extremely low advance ticket sales. OUTRAGE EXPLOITER OFFENDED IN SHOP

A CHAP called Harry Lime, who is the manager of a group called Raped, has been busily telephoning the music press this week to complain about the treatment meted out to his boys' debut EP, "Pretty Paedophiles", by that well-known trendy disc boutique, Rough Trade.

Seems a friend of the band took the shop a copy of the EP for demonstration purposes. He was somewhat upset when Rough Trader Steve Montgomery promptly threw it on the floor, stamped on it, jumped up and down on it, and finally set the bedraggled record alight and burned it.

Not unnaturally, Mr. Lime assumed Mr. Montgomery had acted in this fashion hecause he was outraged by the group's choice of name and EP title. Mr. Lime, in his turn, was outraged that a company using the shock value of a slang term for male prostitution frough trade) should be upset by his boys, who after all are merely cashing in on the recent furore over-paedophilia.

Tsk, tsk. They do seem to shock easily, these rock group managers.

Mr. Montgomery, however, claimed that the main reason for his wanton destruction of the EP was that it was "not very good". What he did with the promo copy of any record was his own affair, but as for Raped, he objected to their "general attitude of chauvirism", and found their sensation-seeking "boring".

conversation, one phrase keeps recurring:
"There's more of the masses than there are of the classes."

The message is simple. If people are being oppressed and exploited, the initial blame rests with them. No matter how it may look on the surface, the fundamental truth is that the mass of the people always outnumber their rulers.

"You've got to help yourself before you can help anyone elve. The majority of people on this planet are being dientaced to by their governments. Those governments are supposed to be the representatives of the people. If they spend their time furthering their own interests instead of the laterests of the people, then the people only have themselves to blame."

"The Last Poets are warners and guides. We use our music to bring warning and guidance."

Bringing warning and guidance on a mass level isn't the easiest of tasks in a world where the media are dominated by the self-interests of capitalism.

Fartier I said that the Poets' political position hadn't changed over the eight years of their career. In fact, this wasn't strictly true. One thing has altered. The Foets have followed the route taken by Mulcolm X and Muhammad Ali, and embraced the Islamic taith. Rejoicing in the adopted names of Jalauddin Manur Norriddin, Sulfaman Et Hadl and Abu Mustapha, the Poets demonstrate a total and absolute belief in the way of the Koran, Phrases like "The one true God is Altah and Muhammad is his propher" tend to punctuate the conversation.

Most of the time, Islauddin has the knack of getting right down to simple political fundamentals, but now and again sumething comes up that jurn badh, Usually the sour notes are where the politics combine themselves with the teaching of Islam. Their new religion seems to have pushed them to a much more simplistic view of the world. Instead of attacking just white oppression, they now appear to be attacking all systems. "There's even Coco-Cola in

"There's even Coca-Cola in Moscow."
Gradually it starts to emerge that one of their new solutions is for everyone to return to the land. There's something all too gib about Jalauddin's statement that there's more than enough food to feed the population of the earth, and that it's only systems that cause famine. While this statement is open to debate, a later one comes as

One track on the new (a subburn, titled "The Pill", puts forward the idea that birth control is a white plot to reduce the populations and therefore the strength of the third world. When I present the counter argument that birth control might be the only means of liberating women condemned to a life of child-bearing or countries doomed to over-population and hunger, the reply comes back like a kirk in the head.

Right now the Poets are in Europe. They's e played Norting Hill's Acklam Hall, a benefit for the local inquiry into police brutality against the black community. Other concerts are currently being set up.

There may be contradictions in what the Poets have to say, but the black Muslim doctrine leaves no room for white complicency. It's at the heart of every cartridge we make. And there for a very good reason, too.

Because it just so happens that inside the head of every master disc cutter, you'll find exactly the same dual configuration of impulse coils.

Which means our cartridge ends up precisely imitating the cutting head's action in reverse.

Or, if you like, picking the signal up just as much. the way it was put down. Like no other cartridge can.

Right?
Well ... not exactly. Dunfermine's sole significance to the world of rock-a-boogie is the fact that ageing piss-rockers blazareth are the town's pride and joy — local boys made good. Until now — or rather until about six anouths ago — there was precious little happening in the Kingdom Fife, or at least now! worth sallvating about. While burdes of comedians played terrifying C&W covers of Jimi Hendrix songs (true, I sectually saw a redneck play a C&W version of "Purple Hare") two, then three, then four lone Fifers set their minds to changing blings.
Stuart Adamson and Jeey Johon were, and in many respects still are, two pissed off punks. I first bumped into them at a mid-Sammer of Hate gig in Edinburgh. Amidst tales of punk-bushing in downtown. Dunfermine, they informed your humble sorther that just as soon as they found a dammer fife; were gomas start a band called The Skids. I greeted the news with scepticism; after all, last Summer we were all going to "ject a band together". Tony got rid of them toute sweet. He doesn't specially like pop music, you see; but he does have some unusual friends. Bowie was his best man. Iggy

"It all started," says Tony, "when I was working for a limousine company and taking all these rock stars around and about. I hated it, and the more I hated it the more work I got. I drove the Allmans, The Who, Edgar Winter, and people like that. I used to wait outside while they was singing. Winter was nice to me, and later when I was driving for Bowie he got in and thought it was a broad David had picked up with long blonde hair."

Tony began working for Bowie around the end of the Diamond Dogs tour. "David," he says, "had an English chasificur who was scared to drive in New York, so he used to call for me. Me and David got jobs in a movie he was in called The Man Who Fell To Earth, with me as a traitor-chaffeur, which is a thing I wouldn't be in real life. Nick Roeg, the director for the flim, don't talk to me no more. I told him I hated it. "I had to pay to see that picture, you know. I felt stupid standing in line. I sit down. I come on screen, and the guy behind me says. "What a mean muths fucker." I turn around and stare at him, end miss my big shot in the flick."

As a former bodyguard for hoodlums — who were all blown away, putting him out of work for a spell — Mascia doesn it think it's hard work guarding David. Bowie's friends get Tony's seal of approval. "Flo and Eddie are nice people. John Lennon, Jagger, and the one who died in London there — Marc Bolan — and I gay, he's a crazy kid — I love." On this note Thrills asked him if Bowie was gay.

The critics who regard The Rezillot as the zenith of Scotlish rock in roll would be well advised to watch the growth of this band. The Skids' only problem at this moment is the fact that they are progressing too damn Isst for their own good. There is a proposed single on the way, which, to be housest, is mediorre when it's good and is downzight band when it is mediorre. But on their day The Skids live are a match for anyone.

Dave Dee, head of A&R at WEA, dismissed Danderminies' only true punt (I know it sounds ridiculous) as heing: "Inst mother 900 mph dole-queue band". A punter at The Skids' Christmas Eve party-cun-glg in Edinburgh sank to his taces between encores and howded: "All ah want fur mah Crissmus in Skids LP".

THROUGH MY LIFE, and through my friends, like Esther, and a couple of other friends. I have been forced to face the fact that within myself I am not a beauty. I am not, I have not, I have not the possession of your dirty dreams, I have not the possession of your bright rotten colours. your dirty dreams, I have not the possession of your bright rotten colours, I have not the possession of your endless sleep, I have not the possession of your goon tantrums. Allen Ginsberg to meet Iggy in New York at a loft party given by The Erasers (see below). Ginsberg had not previously met bim, but has been checking out the new wave recently and was intrigued. Pretty soon, while The Erasers played, Iggy and Ginsberg traded improvised vocals. The amps were not working too well, so few people heard the results of this unusual collaboration. (In the past Ginsberg had stung improvised lyrics with Bob Dylan — a collaboration they enjoyed so much that they went to the studio and recorded an album that way: "First Blues", which remains unreleased.)

After their singsong — witnessed by Thinlis on-the-spot informant Denise Mercodes, the lady who played guitar with Rat Scabies' Rumers — Ginsberg and the 1g settled down to talk of many things, one of which was punk. Pop said he saw himself as a shownan. Explained he never went to punk clubs. Said he thought the only thing happening in London was the Cue Club. He may have said that punk was the only pose to have these days and that Ginsberg's poerry was out of date (as reported in T-Zerr recently), but if so it was only in jest.

Most of the conversation centred around politics and Dylan's new tilm. After several hours of talk, Ginsberg and lagy left the party together. Contrary to the T-Zerr report. Ginsberg did not go to get drunk.

Press officers all over the world gasp in annoyance, but what can they do? Boz is a big star now and he sure as hell didn't get that off the back of no inerview.

And there's the rub. Love him or loath bim Mister Seaggs has got his act together in no uncertain manner.

Years of semi-obscure fringe applause revving up with Steve Miller left him out on a limb. Solo status wasn't much different either — the soul ration went up, the rock meter went down but the sales figures stayed static.

Some time around the making of "Silk Degrees" it was decided that this was make or break for the man, Irv Azoff, management to the E.A. gentry (Eagles, Dan but probably not Randy Newman) gets drafted.

Suddenly Boz is all over the chartes not with a bullet but with a civilised Neutrene both.

with a builtet but with a civilised Neutron bomb, kills audiences but leaves theatres intext. The right place, the right time and the man can sing. Of course this cuts no ice with the critics, who mostly ignored "Selk Degrees" at first hearing. So Boz isn't too enterprised of the neets box and

Speaking personally I've never found this to be fair, even though the only times I've ever talked to him have been on the end of a transattamic hook, elusive but affable affable.

I spent three hours chasing him round Central Park once and only managed to say hello. A year later I turned up at a London botel room and got to say goodbye. Spliced around these historic meetings have been a couple of massive phone bills. If Box is on the lam from newspaper print be Carolina and me in Central downtown London.

We're talking about "Down Two Then Left", the latest Scagge blitz and the only review he's read of it happens to be in NME. The gist of it is that Boz felt damned by faint praise:

"The guy was apologising for bking it; he was saying sorry to the readers! At least he wasn't being chic - that intellectual down your nose stance which is so fashionable with journabists. What is strange for me is to read that I'm assuming a pose. What peoples see is an image that's taken years to evolve and I don't - know how I look in the eyes of others."

Boz refutes allegations that he's oming over with a manufactured coming over with a similar time:

"All my time and pride goes into the music. I don't have my picture all over magazines, I don't push myself, just a few key interviews. I feet shy about the things inferred."

If that's the down angle there is an

"If people need to relate to an "If people need to relate to an artist's image ... maybe people need heroes ... naw, I'm tired of that. Musical terms or nothing. It comes down to conversation. listering entrance was blocked by waves of paranois. Jihes of high octane muzak floundered in my ears. But the album comes alight when you realise that on tunes like "We're Waiting" or "Gimme The Goods". Boz is really stretching into what for him is new territory. The vocals and the back-ups are in a unique class. What influences there are are submerged by the scope of those vocal chords; himis of Ella Fitzgerald. The Beach Boys, even Don Fagen (the closest companion disc this year is "Aja") are absorbed by his idiosyncratic soft shoe shuffle.

When the tension wire snaps he is still big boss man at his garter, making the rules and turning the tables — even in Los Angeles, that city which raises backles and snorts of derision from everywhere else, the Plastic City of Night.

Some arrists, though, are comfortable there, y'know. Steely Den can handle it with aplomb. So can Spirit. And if it was good enough for Jim Morrison.

Interestingly enough, the bands or personae who transcend the sick excess of the industry buz in L. A. coume from outside— New York in the case of Becker and Fagen, Florida for Morrison, and Scrages is out of Texas, so he's not easily impressed. If he feels secure in the environment it shows in the music: "I know my vocabulary there, the rouscions are more progressive and I get more freedom. We cast out spontaneous ideas in the studio, never more than three takes. This is one spontaneous ideas in the studio, never more than three takes. This is one more in a series of experiments for me. I have faith in the integrity of the musicians but I might move on at any time."

CAGGS' UPFRONT roots, his early love for R&B and a feel for pop sophistication, have been well studied before, as has his been well studied before, as has instendency to chop and change the routine, hire new men. The major aide de earnp this time was keyboards veteran Michael Omartinn, who's assisted everyone from Bobby Bland to, let's labour the point, recently, Steely Dan. His trick is to arrange the rhythm basis and direct enorus into patterns.

Omartian collaborates on strings and horms and Box handles the vocal department and initial melodies. The results are a deal jazzier than last time round with David Paich, while the rhythm section positively fries. Jeff Porcaro on drums starts to move into the Michael Shrieve bracket, young, Porcaro on drums starts to move into the Michael Shrieve bracket, young, fast and scientific.

What "Down Two Then left" makes clear is that on record at least Bor Scaggs and rock and roll are no longer sleeping parinters;

"There are only so many variations on rock "roll, it boils down to pure energy. I love it myself but I can't, as a creative individual, sustain that context. Jagger's taken it into stylism as only he can do but I don't hear a lot of good nock "nroll these days."

His histening habits are revealing; Join Mitchell, Weather Report, Joe Zawinul and Art Tatum.

"No technical ock like Yes; that's stopped. You get Weather Report working at a very high level meeting with good rock; ideas and forms are beginning to merge, there's been a re-definition."

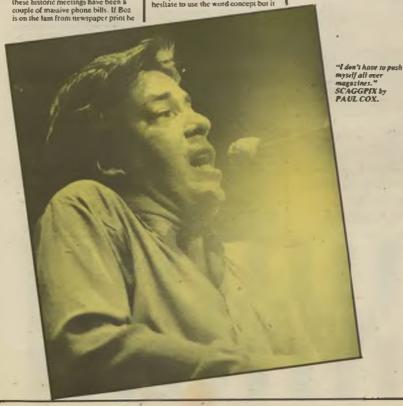

Scaggs' place in all this has been prefly much left of centre, the problem is to maintain a degree of prottern is to maintain a organic of pupularity, not to fade away, and retain the integrity which old-time Scaggs fans hold as his hardest won asset. The danger is that you become a hit machine and have to give the larger audicince what they want. Scaggs is already risking that one on account of these one grouns in the Staggs is already risking first one on account of using one group in the studio and a totally different, much younger outflow in testil:

"The trick is to educate your audience, satisfy them with the hits but intersperse with new material. On this tour a lot of them certainly aren's familiar with the present somes and the provided in the programme of the provided in the pro familiar with the recent songs and we can still take them a step further. The back-ups are becoming integral; that soul thing is how I started."

OZ SCAGGS is always OZ SCACIOS is always conscious of constructive criticism, aware also that many of his followers wish to see him play guitar again, often the biggest buzz of his five shows. Now be's writing more on guitar — "I've exhausted my four piano chords" — and his attifude

piano chords" — and his strifude towards maintaining a peak popularity would surprise those who accuse him of bland out:
"I'm geared up to cope with success now but there's a constant ego-wrestling you have to deal with. Do I need it? Is it important? Do I want an obvious format or shall I move on? I could have repeated 'Silk Degrees' but I can't consider that. The title 'Down Two Then Left' is a juggling around with image. I really am trying to depart from the norm."

SHAM 69: Borstal Breakout (Polydor). Ninety-nine per cent of the singles this week are plain rubbish, so this year the men get separated from the boys now. Sham 69 weigh in with the first strain of weight in with the first exposed steel toe-cap and butcher's hook of 1978, Peace and Goodwill etc. Anyone who's done a "bit of bird" will appreciate the testament of Jimmy Pursey. SATANS RATS: Year Of The Rats (DJM): According to Old Moore it's the year of the woodfouse. Satans Rats think otherwise. They've got a massive chip on their shoulder about the sixties and the summer of love. the sattes and the summer of love. All you obsolete hippies get numbered, freedom and love and all that bullshit. Yes, you Bob Dylan, stand up, you fraud. Better still, get lost, you don't turn these boys on no more. BLITZKREIG BOP: Let's Go Elghtungs. What's this? Nostatiat Blitzkreig Bop's "Let's Go", re-released by popular demand no doubt (originally on Mortensound), really spills the beans about San Francisco. The way it was. Like Scott
McKenzie they agree that if you go to San Francisco then flowers are the necessary head gear but be careful when you arrive as "You will meet a lot of weirdoes there". "Thanks for the warning mate but the feeling is mutual. Apparently, "If you'd gone to San Francisco, you'd have seen those hippies on the floor, I got out of San Francisco before the buggers called the law." Should have stuck around, you missed all the fun. Mind the Hells Angels though, heh. STARS NEW SEEDS: In Love With Life E.P. (Expression). Here's one wanna get off the Hells Angels though, heh. heh. STARS NEW SEEDS: In Love With Life E.P. (Expression). Here's one hippy who scrapped himself off the floor. Stars New Seeds is none other than the resurrection of Sty Saxon, once lead singer with the GREATEST GARAGE BAND of all time, The Seeds. After the applause died down and Sty saw God thru' his seedy blues he took to pumping gas on the Strip but the smell of the greasepaint and the lure of the welfare cheque were too much. Debut single "Beautiful Stars" was for the instituted and the dedicated and this Jeff Gruber production is in the same win. Obsessions with eyes, skies and wet-nosed dogs. Monotonous but compelling in the time knonoured fashion. Jack it up to maximum volume or you miss the signal. Genuine limited edition from the usual hip shops. GRATEFUL DEAD: Dancin' In The Streets (Arista). And here are some old hippies who don't have to justify being alive. This is better as a single than it was on "Terrapin Station" (where it sounded like a premeditated single, if you get my drift). Bass and drums are placed in a position of some rhythmic clarity but Jerry, Bob and the lads aren't bonestly at their best with the Martha Reeves chestnut. As titte goes by it becomes apparent that producer Keith Olsen and the Dead are not the best of partners. Do it producer Keith Olsen and the Dead are not the best of partners. Do it yourself, Jerome, and get the job done properly — like Clint Eastwoo SWEET: Love Is Like Onygen (Pohydor). The Sweat's debut on Polydor marks a chauge of direction for these erstwhile whipping boys of the media and indicates that the last few singles were ridges on the contact the media and indicates that the last few singles were riders on the contract (not the Doors song). The new, improved Sweet have been listening to Queen and 10cc methinks: although they use the influences in a relatively unobstrusive manner. Old Sweet fans stand up and be counted eh? Betchin hum this one secretly when you're in the bath. Not all bad and live they aren't fools either. Short and uh., sweet.

(Mountain). Russ Titelman and Jack Nitzsche's "Gone Dead Train", as featured in the contender for the greatest movie ever made. Performance, is a brave subject for Performance, is a brave subject for Nazareth to tackle and they emerge from the experience with colours intact and their top rocker socure. Taking their tip from the central blues motif, and it's a good 'un, Nazareth stay close to the bone and chew up the meat in the manner of Creedence. You can't argue with this, just a healthy dose of pure energy. Incidentally, whatever happened to Russ Titelman? Those who heard him, Ry Cooder and Beefheart for starters, rated him with the true greats.

RAPED: Pretty Paedophiles

STADEUM DOGS: Easybeat (Audlogenic). Peculiar. A totally off-the-walf reflection on the days of mod and Carnaby Street. Out and of the wall reflection on the days of mod and Carnaby Street. Cut and structured like an intricate exercise in exorcism but the parts stick together like old 10ce material. The effect in worked even down to the steeve (Paul Weller with a Bentle fringe?) so that it with a Bentle fringe? Weller with a Beatle fringe?) so that it's akin to stumbling over an obscurity in a second hand bin. Not pop and not art. Sort of pop-art. YELLOW DOG: law One More Night (Virgin). A more commercially viable on-going chart situation could be guaranteed for Yellow Dog (lot of dogs this week, chief), the brain-child of Kenny Young, ex-Fox. Gimmicks abound, the old rock and roll telephone trick, dubbed applause, Randy Newman impersonations. All pretty entertaining mellifluous ya dig. Bodes well but will Young's next abd be called the Rabid Coyotes?

between me and Jackson Browne is that I find it nigh on impossible to stay the course and battle with the man's supposedly weighty lyrical content on account of the music seeming so generally uninspired (Father forgive guess. The flip, "Cocasie", is a pleasant seasonal reminder though

Will 1978 be The Year Of The Flamin' Groovies?

VERY artist has his own yardstick by which to measure success. For pocket calculator idolators. seeing the latest album going double and then triple platinum is the thing ... But as far as San Francisco's lionized Flamin' Groovies are concerned, persuading a label to pay for them to record at Rockfield, with Dave Edmunds producing, will more than suffice.
For the last half-hour, Edmunds

For the last half-hour, Edmunds and yours truly have been sitting slack-jawed with amazement in the reception area of Eden Sound (a Chiswick backwater) listening to the Groovies' loquacious mouthpiece Cyril Jordan discussing (with accasional asides from George Alexander) the group's fluctuating fortunes and wondering how on earth they've managed to keep life and limb together for something approaching 13 years.

Any other hand would be continued.

they we managed to keep life and limb together for something approaching 13 years.

Any other band would have kicked it in the head ages ago. But not El Groovies. Having long since given up the idea of becoming rock 'n' roll rich kids, they now prefer to treat their only vocation in life as a hobby.

Yes, the man did say hobby.

However, Jordan is quick to point out that the word doesn't infer amateur status or unprofessional conduct.

"We've stopped caring about whether we're gonna make any money or not," he begins, "just so long as we can do what we wanna do without compromising ourselves and get a good reaction. ... great. But"—his tone is optimistic—"there's always the off-chance that perhaps one day someone will look at one of our records and say, "Hey, let's put this one in the chartst."

Truth is, people have been saying words to the reflect feet het reight.

Truth is, people have been saying words to that effect for the last eight words to that effect for the last eight years.

"Will This Be The Flamin" Groovies' Year?" The question has been posed almost annually since the group released their monumental
"Flamingo" LP on Kama Sutra in 1970 — a bunch of seldom-equalled energy-charged tracks nominated by respected American reviewers like Ed Ward and Lenny Kaye as one of the finest rock albums of the "70s.

The Stateside press said much the same thing about their follow-up album a year later. Not only was "Teenage Head" favourably likened to the Stones' "Sticky Fingers", but many claimed that the Groovies had the edge.

Sadly, both albums promptly stiffed out, probably due to insufficient promotion and lack of product.
Jordan alleges that no more than 5,000 copies of "Flamingo" were initially pressed.
To make matters worse, "Flamingo" was pressed with an insipid pink (label instead of the original yellow which had carried the work of their then-favourite.
American band The Lovin' Spoonful.
"The only reason we signed with Kama Sutra in the first place," confesses Jordan, "was because we wanted to be on the same yellow-coloured label as the Spoonful!"

Alexander nods and adds, mattered from the first than a walter.

Alexander nods and adds, matter-of-fact: "But then, we've never been a priority band on any of the labels we've ever recorded for."

PARADOXICALLY, this latter fact has never worked entirely to their disadvantage. All Groovies' records appear to become Groovies' records appear to become instant collectors' items, and not because of their rarity. Lord knows, their early Snazz, Epic and Kama Sutra material has been re-packaged and counterfeited enough times. In fact, someone has made some money out of them — and it has definitely not been the Groovies themselves. On occasions they've even had to seek temporary part-time employment.

even had to seek temporary part-time employment.

Although they've received advances from various record companies, the Groovies claim never to have received so much as a plugged nickle by way of royalties.

The reasons for this are far too complex to go into here, but it could be that the first monies will soon be forthooming — from Skydog, a small French label which released a brunch of the band's early "flox demos and, as fate would have it, kept the band's name alive when they needed it the most.

From the outside looking in, it did seem for a time as if this "comeback" album might prove to be the group's Final Statement. Last year rehearsed." I lay-off was due to circumstances beyond their immediate control. Having promoted "Shake Some Action", they put all their equipment in storage and returned to their homestead. As they planned to return to Europe within a few weeks, after renegotiating their record deal, they had wisely chosen to save on needfess air freight bills. But in their absence trucking bills, which Jordan claims weren't the band's responsibility, wen't urpaid — and responsibility, went urpaid — and through several misunderstandings all

PART FROM a bunch of originals, the new album will probably include interpretations of Byrds, Beatles and Stones songs, and because of this Stones songs, and because of this Jordan is aware that it could possibly spark off the kind of controversy that greeted "Shake Some Action".

A bone of contention amongst die-hard Groovies fans — this writer included — is that the band long since dropped "Teerage Head" and "Stow Death" from their repertoire in favour of other artists "material. "Yeah, Lknow", renors Jordan on the defensive, "that some reviewers said 'Shake Some Action' was wimpy.... but to say othat album is wimped-out is to also state that the music we were looking back at and reflecting with a "70s feel is wimped-out."

wimped-out." He claims that The Flamin Groovies perform something like "Please Please Me" or "Paint It Black" for the same reasons that Television encore with "Satisfaction", and the Pistols' used to perform "Watcha Gonna Do 'Bout It", "I don't think of rock 'n' roil as

"Watcha Gonna Do 'Bout It".

"I don't think of rock 'n' roll as being a contemporary thing," he explains, "..., it's timeless. Nowadays, when 10-year-old kids hear Chuck Berry's 'Johnny B. Goode' they go nuts exactly the same way we did when we first heard it. Trouble is, people forget just how heavy some of those early rock songs are—and also things by The Beatles, the Stones and The Who.

"We do Beatles songs just like The Beatles used to do Little Richard material—and for the same motives. They're still good songs and if they're done properly they'll still connect.

"What a lotus people fail to remember is that when the Groovies first started out, we made our reputation recording things like 'Rockin' Pneumonia', 'Somethin' Else,' Have You Seen My Baby?' and later on 'Married Woman', 'A Shot Of Rhythm & Blues' and 'Jumping Jack Flash.'

"They're not hipped-out to the fact that we did the big leather-and-studs trip way back in '72 and they think that it's ultra-cool now. Perhaps what we're dressed in right this minute (mohair and velvet three-piece suits) is gonna be cool in a couple of years from now?"

"You can't keep on doing the same old trip," contributes Mr Alexander. This succinct observation leads Jordan to explain that it's also one of the reasons why, despite frustrating many loyalists, they'we chosen to drop particular songs.

"When Roy (Loney) and I wrote 'Teenage Head', we were thinking about Led Zeppelin.

"Or, to be more precise... if The Mothers Of Itwention did Led Zeppelin what would they do?...'!

However, the restructuring of their reperiotic ale so has a practical explanation.

"If you really wanna know the truth we did songs like 'Teenage Head', 'Headin' For The Texas Border' and 'Stow Death' years ago and gor absolutely no reaction. Therefore we wouldn't get anything out a going back and doing 'em all over again. It's ironic that years later people come up to me and say what great songs they were. Yeah man, but what they don't know is that those songs gave ex nuthin' but a whole bunch o' trouble. "I' mean, 'Slow Death' was an anti-drug song all about us going back to Detroit and seeing the whole place and many of our friends. Jones'ed-out. But because it had the word morphine in the lyric it was immediately banned. That being the case, UA lost interest in us and only pressed 400 copies of our follow-up.

"Do you wan to know the other reason why we do 'Please Please Me' and 'From Me To You'?"

ceason why we do 'Please Please Me' and 'From Me To You'?"

Please continue!

"Because we wanted to do them way back in 1966. The problem in those days was that the band didn't possess the ability, and it's only recently that we've attained that level. If we could have done them properly when we first wanted to do them we'd have included those songs on either 'Flamingo' or 'Teenage Head'."

Despite past-associations, both Jordan and Alexander start discussing the pros and cons of pleasing all of the people all of the time by re-introducing "Slow Death" and "Teenage Head" into their set.

"Yeah, I know some people come along to see us and say this ain't The Flamin' Groovies."

"Listen Cyril", Dave Edmunds

"Listen Cyril", Dave Edmunds interjects, "you like to do Beatles and Stones songs because you think some kids might not have heard them. Well, doesn't this also apply to your old songs?"

Check.
"They're your songs and they could mean as much to those kids who haven't heard them as those who still want to hear them. It's just like me not doing "I Hear You Knockin" or "I Knew The Bride"... but then, I still Knew The Bride'... but then, I still enjoy singing them!"
"Maybe you've got a point Dave," metters Jordan rubbing his chin.

KEN HYDER. Pie: JAK KILBY

Back in the 60s Albert Ayler recorded on the bagpipes. Now drummer KEN HYDER is taking up where he left off, mating jazz and Scottish traditional music, researching in the Hebrides with tape recorder and whisky bottle.

DHE MATING of jazz and Scottish traditional music might sound like the one about the octopus and the bagpipes to some, but two of the most influential saxophonists got at least an arm-lock on the union. and might well have taken it

In the 60's climate of modes and In the 60's climate of modes and drones and squalling vocalization, Albert Ayler essayed the bagpipes on "Masonic Inborn", and Coltrane is said to have blown the instrument in the dense collectives that followed jazz solo as featly as a tweed jacket over a cotton shirt.

Like Gato Barbieri, Ken had to quit his country before discovering his heritage. John Stevens staried the ball rolling with a Blindfold Test that had the Scottish drummer out with the camels. "Sounds Monoccan to me, man.' John showed me the cover: 'Waulking Songs From Barra'. Outer Hebrides; I chough, WHA!" Why don't I know about this? Why didn't anybody tell me? See, at school it was If It Ain't Classical It Ain't Right. Or they'd play you Burns songs sung by Kenneth McKellar with none of the Frier-real gutsyness."

Rennett McKeular with none of the r-t-r-real gusyness."

His distaste for the tartan-added, one-percent-proof McPhona Bononus of much of Scotland's export comes through in the rolling emphasis.

"They'd play you NONE of the pibroch which is Scotland's raga. It is VERY classical. They don't lay any of that on you at all."

HE FINAL nudge came in a Mingus interview. Why did European jazzmen neglect their own rich folk traditions in favour of black America, demanded the truculent bassist?

The first album by his band, Talisker, was interesting, but clearly more research was needed. He approached the Arts Council. "I said that I wanted to explore two main things—the amount of improvisation in traditional Scottish music anyway—and the potential for doing more—and the use of unitutored voices. If turned out that we used three jazz singers, a folk singer, plus the guys in the band, to make a 10-piece choir. The Arts Council said, OK—go shead.

"I got the bread. Up until then, everything I'd composed I'd done on a glockenspiel, because all the rost of my instruments were drums. I thought, for chrissake — I'm gonna have to get something else to compose on if I'm gonne write a suite of music, so I went out and got an electric organ. The advantage of that was not only did it have the notes written above the keys, but you could hold notes on it — play the fundamental so you got a drone going, and match the top line against it."

Ken ramacked the available source

"One book about church music said that they useta do the Gaelic psalm singing all over Scotland. There was a quote from a letter saying the congregations on Sundays are sounding like a bunch of Hottentots, and that they'd need to straighten this out. So they got in this choir master and all this improvisation they were putting on the fines, you know, they were told to cut it out. It was stamped out on the maintand as being too hip, and the only people doing it now are in the Western Isles."

in the Western Isles."

The raw power of the Gaelic psalms packs a walkop like black gospel. The scarcity of texts plus illiteracy led to call and response patterns, with the precentor shouting the fine and the congregation picking it up and bending the meldoy to fit Gaelic modal patterns. The Outer Hebrides also saw the survival of another vocal tradition, the waulking song which accompanied the pounding and trampling of home-woven cloth.

These songs were sung by the women,

At the School Of Scottish Studies in Edinburgh, Ken cafled on Hamish Henderson. "I'd wondered what he made of all the stuff we were doing, because he's your gav'nor of traditional Scottish music. He knows everything about it, right. I thought he'd think it was all too Lew Grade for him, but he dug it. He said it was a restension of the tradition, which is a gas coming from someone like him."

N HENDERSON'S advice, he set off to do a little field work on the island of Barra, which, along with South Uist and Benbecula, is one of the few remaining outposts of the tradition. Its rocky coast and solitary, sinister tarms also provide a breeding groune for guillemors, razorbills, kittwakes and barnacle geese, as well as the rare red-necked phalarope. Birdwatchers and folklorists bucket about the heather with binoculars and tape heather with binoculars and tape recorders: no jazzmes, a "They told me I'd need to take a half-bottle if I went to see some of the women. I thought, WAIT a moment! They're all old-age pensioners! You must be joking!" Ken laughed loudly. "So I went to Barra with half-a-dozen half-bottles in the back of the car. I was AMAZED! "Och—ye've got a wee dram. I'll get the glass out". They were r-r-really knocking the stuff back.

waistooat. "And the shingers?" I shaid.
"I just missed seeing Mary Morrison, the wifey that does all vocal stuff with pipe notation. You know how the Indian drummers like sing the licks before they play them? Well, pipers useta pass on licks to each other by singing them. Some people reckon the person who invented solfa notation was a minister? daughter who went to Siye and checked it out with the local cals, and converted it. It may or may not be true, but they bave got all these notes corresponding to the bagpipe scale."
He flung his head back and demonstrated. "Hee Ho Haf They put in consonants for the grace notes, so they could sing pibrochs to each other. Like HURREEE HURROH DRUMM HA! Mery Morrison was the last person to do it, and she learned it from her brother. She was off the island and she died shortly after, aged 80-odd. So — I got a lot off these women."

I reached for my glass, getting closer every shot, touch it for sure next time. "Why didn't you ushe a pigwiper — shortry, bagpiper on the album?"

album?"

"Ah — now the thing is, I have this theory that pibroch was originally improvised, but most pipers disagree. It's gotta be played straight. They have something like 13 classical variations. I went along to the London Piping Championships in Chelsea Town Hall a formight ago, and there was one guy in the audience.

variations. I won along to the London Piping Championships in Chelsea Town Hall a formight ago, and there was one guy in the audience with a book out following all the fucking variations.

"Wha! It's insane! So, they've got pretty far away from the way I think it must originally bave been. It's very difficult to find a piper who'd be interested in getting into improvising. The idea is to get as near to the perfection of the written idea!, you know.

The guy'ner is probably John D. Burgess. His time is fantastic. The pibroch is like very slow 3's, and you've got these grace notes going against it, so to actually get back on the beat is very-ry difficult. This cat does it accurately and sets up rhythmic tensions like Mingus and Danner Richmond."

The highspot of "Land Of Stone" is undoubtedly "Pibroch In Three Parts", dedicated to the MacCrimmons, John Coltrare and Albert Ayler. Saxes and twinned double basess reproduce the feel of bagpipes with its chanter and drones, and the emotional impact is overwhelming. There's a wartime newsreef of a Scottish regiment in the Desert Campaign, night and carmage, the advance lit by exploding shells, courage kept to the sticking point by the wild wail of the bagpipes.

"Why did you dedicate 'See You At The Mission, Eh. It It's No' Full' to your grandmother?" I asked. Ken shook his head in admiration at his ancestor. "She's the original brassneck musician — a Scottish repainal brassneck musician — a fortish pays with so much conviction and wrong notes. She just DOES IT. She offered mes o much encouragement when I was a kid. You know how parents get uptight when kick are banging things.

You know how patents get uptight when kids are banging things, but she usets put pots and pans down for me in her kitchen when I was two. 'Go on — gis it a bash, son.' 'They had this mission in Dundee where they usets sing Sankey hymns like 'Rock Of Ages'. In the tenement when someone had been visiting and then they go away down the stairs, they useta have like this double-act. 'Granny' d say, 'See you at the mission', and her friend would say,' Eh. it's no' full'.' Words like untutored abound in Ken's conversation. Was he against Bisis on full."

Words like unturored abound in Ken's conversation. Was he against acquired technique?
"It's not so much technique as what you do, and why you do it. If you want to play like Buddy Rich, you've gotta have some technique, but if' you're playing a Country & Western git it'd be extremely insensitive for a drummer to play like Buddy Rich. It's a question of matching the technique and it is a question of matching the technique you've got with what you're doing.
"I discovered that when I wanted to play jigs and reels, I didn't have the technique to play what I heard. I got a lot of pipe band records and practised as so onversation, you all want to be talking about the same subject."
I left Ken's pad to the sound of "Paddy's Leather Breeches." Third try, I made it through the door. "Golden Spirit Of The Isle Of Skye', I am your plaything.

ABBA The Album (Epic).

Having transformed their small family firm into Sweden's top exporter. Benny and Bjorn now make a renewed attempt to go fully multi-national.

To be precise, they're out to crack the lucrative California MOR market. And that could well prove to be their first mistake.

The evidence of a shift of musical policy is there on the opening song "Eagle", which predictably enough turns out to be a tribute to the kings of West Coast (unky schmaltz.

"They came flying from far away/Now I'm under their spell/I love hearing the stories/ That they tell,"

As you'd expect, it's a super-bly crafted pastiche of the Eagles' style, exactly capturing that sense of chinical blandness. With skifful mixing, even those distinctive Abba harmonics are transformed into an approxi-mation of the Eagles' own.

In one sense, it's a bit too clever, so cool in its approach that it tacks even the minimal sense of joy that Frey and Co.

Elsewhere on the album, Abba offer their version of what Americans mean when they say "rock'n'roll." The songs called "Hole In Your Soul", and the churus goes: "It's gotta be rock'n'roll/to fill the hole in your soul."

The song's clearly intended to froth at the mouth, but inevitably there's that mor paradox; the performers want to appear polite, the rave-up is thus tightly corseted.

Benny and Bjorn also splay some intellectual display some intellectual pretensions this time out. Half the second side of the album is taken up with an offering dubbed "Three scenes from a mini-musical". In other words, our aged friend "the concept" makes a return appearance in the second process. makes a return appearance in a bid to excite upper-class

As so often happens with such work, the ambition over-rides the music, and the three scenes here prove to be three of Abba's most pedestrian cuts. attempts to shrug off the Abba formula in the apparent inter-ests of market expansion.

Or maybe Benny and Bjorn are sick of creating the snap-piest pop music around, and want to grow up into serious composers. Whatever the explanation, let's hope they can curb themselves before it gets out of control.

gets out of control.

Happily, the remainder of the set is largely given over to exactly the sort of chirpy poptunes that made their reputations and fortunes. There's the last single, "Name Of The Came", with which few can full to be familiar. But it's heavily upstaged by a cut called "Take A Chance On Me", which is so brilliantly simple-minded it could have come titraight off the greatest hits set. But for the fact that Abbs are attempting to go smoothly up-market, it would make a superb single.

There's a splendid acapella start, a grand-stam rhythm section, a yearning butch section, a yearning butch voice-over, but above all one of those unstoppable 18 line chouses that are undeniably part of the secret of Abba's

Other people's songs have books with just two lines or four. That means you have the song a fair number of times before it tatches on. Benny and Bjorn's answer to that particular resulting the makers. lar problem is to make most of the song a hook, and leave the verses to take care of leave the verses to take care of themselves. There's no way you can avoid remembering their stuff after just one play. Which can, of course, be pretty damned annoying.

They use the same technique with the second side opener "Move On", which begins with a graft recitation in the tradi-tion of Wink Martindale's "Pack of Cards", but quickly resolves itself into the classic

Never mind the fact that the Never mind the fact that the prices are brainless cosmic philosophy: "If I explore the heavens!Or if I search inside!It really doesn't maner/As long as UCan tell myself!I'me always mied." The 12-line thorus, means that you get the hook repeated six times every time they sing it, so another potential hit's there.

The song that will appeal nost to the housewives is One Man One Woman". Itssentiments are just the job for sentiments are just the job for helping them through the ironing: "One mon one woman/One life to live together/One chance to take than rever/Comes back again." You better get used to those words. Chances are that you'll be hearing a lot of them over the next few months.

Future hits apart, this album could turn out to be Abba's least satisfactory. If you're unimpressed by their music so far, you won't be converted by this collection. And if you're really into Euro-pop jingles, you're liable to feel short-changed by the company's new marketing policy.

EMMYLOU HARRIS Quarter Moon In A Ten Cent Town (Warner Brothers).

PERHAPS I'm demanding too much from Emmylou Harris, but the unease I left on hearing her last album "Luxury Liner" is confirmed by this latest offering from contemporary country music's first lady.

Oh sure she's no longer content to re-work the Gram Parsons' song book. Nothing wrong with that, seeing as how Ms Harris's versions of those great Parsons' songs have great Parsone' songs have invariably been as good as the originals, a fact that't helped get the luckless Parsone' work, over to a wider audience. For sure, there is none here. All you get is twin pretty boys, bland, tanned, dewy-eyed, blow-dried and tongue-tied (I wish) who sound more like girls than girls do.

Songs for swinging pseudopeople, recoded at the Hit Factory (oh yeah?), NYC, songs which have titles only so you can tell them apart.

You can't tell the bottom from the top. — which twin has the tonsil? There's a Sound Of Philadelphia type orchestration (if black music still had credipility, it'd be a crafty move.) Mannequin music for people who think they know where they're going in note along to. Dealing with today's numb kind of love advertisement idea! How Ovation took a hint from the 50's

You remember the Bands of the 50's. The sounds they made were exciting, raunchy and alive. But those sounds were heavy with hum and very rough and ready indeed.

Guitars in those early rock days were usually badly made even though they produced an amazing sound. Ovation have taken a hint from the 50's, added their own expertise and produced an amazing guitar. Great 50's sounds but without hum or background noise. It's called the Viper. Single pole pick-ups, 25½ inch scale length, Schaller Machine Heads, light, contoured body, superb sustain. Really raunchy rock or a clean country sound. The Breadwinner on the other hand, is built to give you tomorrow's sounds. It's the first solid body to have a built in FET pre amp. This means that the low impedance double pole Ovation pick-ups can be used with a high impedance amp. Which produces less hum and more sound, a recording engineer's dream. There's an electronic notch switch which controls the phasing between pick-ups, producing some surprising mid-ra-tone variations. It has an unusual shape that makes it really comfortable to play. The scale length is 24%. The Ovation Deacon is the beautiful deluxe version of the Breadwinner. And is also available as a twelve-string Rother's main concern here seems to be to extract the most out of his patent dehr technique. This entails doubling every note or chord played, giving them their own harmonic sound shadow or doppelganger. At its best, as on the guitar intro to the title track, the effect is hypnotically beautiful, whilst elsewhere it serves to strengthen the already uncerting rhythmic charge.

"Blackouts" differs from its predecessor in several respects. Most importantly, Manuel Gottsching (Mr Ashra himself) has decided to add 'lots of guitar'. He's an excellent player, combining the fluidity of a Steve Fillage with the offbeat rhythmic / melodic flair of a Michael Karoli. As it happens, Karoli lent Gottsching his Stratocaster for some of the sessions — which may or may not explain the hazy, pollenated lyricism of much of "Blackouts", a mood strongly reminiscent of Can's own "Future Days".

The album benefits from careful multiple overfubbing. Thus on "77 Stigntly Delayed" and "Midnight On Mere" Gottsching contrasts guitar

POPOL VUH

Aguire
(Barciay Ohr Impon)

(Barciay Ohr Impon)
Einsjager Und Siebenjager
(Barciay Ohr Impon)

POPOL VUH was the Mayan Book Of The Dead, is now Eldrian Fricke (keyboards) and Daniel Fichelscher (guitars and percussion)

Fricke's precise credentials elude me, but Fichelscher might be familiar to some through this work with Amon Duul 2. All of which is straightforward enough — the only problem being that together these two men make music that defies all but the most tentative analysis.

There is however use press.

There is however one possible point of access, and that's German film director Werner Herzog, for whose Aguirre, Wroth Of God and Heart Of Glass Popol Vuh have provided soundtracks.

Much of Herzog's output has been distinctly abstruse, although one central theme prevails, that of the individual (whether he be a Spanish conquistation in the Amazo-nian rain forests or an unread pressor property in search of peasant prophet) in search of ultimate truths. Herzog likes to see himself as something of a medievalist

And so (are you still with me?) it is with Popol Vuh. This is music — for the most part short theme songs — that suggests the cralimanship of wonderment, of emphatic faith (in the Godhead). Stained glass music — devotional, reflective, translucent, almost timeless. Enthralhing music made by men enthralled.

Both players are prolific writers. Fricke's piano is generally subdued, yet richly hymnal. Ficheischer is the focal presence. His drumming is rhythmically complex; it has to be, since Popol Vuh have no bassist. His omnipresent guitarchords are startlingly resonant and his solos — well, they're mostly modal, suggesting by turns Turkish, Arabian, Indian and Far Eastern scales, but indelibly cryptic. Whatever Fichelscher's influences, he's ciphered them welf.

And somehow Popol Vuh

cipnered them well.

And somehow Popol Vuh
sound so European, so Gothic.
More I really can't say. On Einsjager Und Siebenjager"

further allusive mysteries.

Fricke himself ventures into pure electronics from time to time, a throwback to Popol Vuh's previous incarnation as prototype Cosmic Musicians— I suggest you taste the "Aguirre" main theme and a lengthy piece of low tone modulation on the second side of the same album.

So Herzog continues his quest for some root chord of Man's being and Popul Vuh create music that intuitively reflects such a state of mind.

ass and the funny bone, working occasionally to stimulate the cranium too; hence "free your ass and your mind will

For those not yet familiar with the Parliafunkadeliement thang in all its many guises, I ought to mention that the obviought to mention that the obvious inputs are Sly Stone, Zappa and James Brown. Mangled through Clinton's ingenious mind, the output is upfront flanged bass, tapespeed vocal althetics coupled to lyrical bizarreness, liberal sprinklings of Bernie Worfell's synthesiser, and a wholly new approach to the business of getting down.

The unabating weirdness that was once mainly the domain of Funkadelic albums has now achieved full integration with the mothership. Though there's no single delight on the level of "Tear The Root Off The Sucker" or "Up For The Down Stroke", the now-familiar elements above retain most of their sparkle.

Perusing the accompanying omic for hidden meaning — is the placebo syndrome disco-monotony? Is Sir Nose a coke dealer? — I found a discreez signpost. "Don't take it seri-ously", it read. Indeed the message on "Funkentletchy" is the same one Parliament have always preached; funk as its own reward.

Like Clinton says, "the bigger the headache, the bigger the pill — call me the big pill". If you've got a disco headache you know who'll cure your ill, and I'm happy to give him at least one more crack at making an even bigger pill. I have a feeling we're going to need it.

RALPH TOWNER/SOLSTICE Sound And Shadows (ECM)

CECM)

LAST YEAR'S "Solstice" album — quite possibly Towner's best — was all that its line-up suggested it should be, Unfortunately, the collective chemistry of Towner (guitars, piano, etc.), Jan Garbarck (saxes), Eberhard Weber (bass) and Jon Christensen (drums) hasn't clicked the second time arbund: "Sound And Shadows" is almost as short of inspiration as its predecessor was full. In terms of textural breadth, it flops rather limply. Nowhere on "Sound And Shadows" is there anything with say, the fullity of the predecessor's "Piscean Dance"; the majority of the tunes here, after several plays, are quite facelessly interchangeable and lacklestre.

The one exception, "Song of the Shadows" is shadows."

lustre.

The one exception, "Song Of The Shadows", only serves to emphasise the starkness of the reat of the set.

A sadly dispiriting album which only proves that even the cream can't come up trumps all the time. Interested neophytes and would-be guitar aces should check out Towner's "Sofistice" and "Diary" before this. Towner's "Solstice"
"Diary" before this.

IMPORTS-

FACTORY, A French outlit comprising Yves Matral (vocals). Denis Fusi (guitars), Lahmi "Puce" Sairi (guitars), Fourmi (bass) and Baps (durms) have already enjoyed a Warhols-worth of fame in NME via a singles review which suggested a lew lay-offs might do the world of good for these particular workers.

But undeterred, they're back again with "Black Stamp" (Cobra), an album which proves that if Factory still haven't discovered quabity control, they're okay on productivity when it comes to heavy mental fused with a modicum of new wave and even a little funk — just in case.

Though their have been few arrivals from the States, due to the Christmas and New Year holidays, such albums as The Styllatics Wooder Womann" (H. & L.). Timuny Thomas" "Life is Just A Carnival" (Glades) and Meco's "Encounters Of Every Kind" (Casablanea) have filtered through, the last named proving that whatever Meco Monardo did with John Williams' "Star Wors" theme. he can now repeat with that composer's theme to Close Encounters Of A Plaid Kind.

While Mann Dibango's "Afrovision" (Fiesta) album and its 2" single offshoot, "Big Blow", have been among the week's heaviest sellers, it's been the latest batch of arrivals from Japan that have provided the first chuckes of 78, thanks mainly to "Rock in Roll — Original Collections", a six volume series marketed by CBS-Sony. For though Vol.6 contains some quite palatable items by The Buckinghams, The Cyrlike, The Radders and suchlike, it also features Lynn Anderson's "Rose Garden": while Vol.4 matches Link Wray and Carl Perkine alongside such "rockers" as Eydic Gorme and Johnny Mathis; and Vol.2 is surely destined for a place in rock history thanks to the inclusion of Roll Hards' "The Mc Kangerton Down, Sport", a piece of Aussie punkery that predates The Saints by some 17 years!

Not to be outdone in incompetence, MCA Nippon have released a rival "Great Rock And Rollers" series, which includes classies of the genre by loe Harnell, and MCR panist who once had a hit with "Fly Mc To The Moon". Don Cornel

THE DAMNED, whose Dave whose Dave Vanian is pictured above In gloridous isomechronic, have been fairly quiet gig-wise for a few weeks. But they get back into the swim of things with a near-London date at Croydon on Sunday, with more to follow very shortly.

ADVERTISING are doing the rounds in January with gigs this week in Loadon (Thursday and Saturday), Brighton (Fiday), Brimingham (Tuesday) and Woherhampton (Wednesday), in spite of leg injuries sustained recently by the band's Simon Boswell.

MARTHA REEVES and the Vandellas return to Britain for a series of club, concert and cabaret dates. They open in Dublin with a week's engage-ment starting on Sunday, but three weeks of book-ings on the mainland follow immediately afterwards.

JIM CAPALDI, the former Traffic drummer, sets out on a major tour this week with his band The Contenders: First ports of call are at Newcastle (Friday), Manchester (Saturday), Plymouth (Mooday), Portsmouth (Tuesday) and Bour-nemouth (Wednesday).

ROCK ON THE BOX

BBC-2's "Old Grey Whitele Test" on Tuesday comes from Glasgow and features Gallagher and Lyfe and Cado Belle.

1'sight And Scuud in Concert" (BBC-2 and Radio 1, Saturday) showcases Colonecam II and Richard Digance. This is the show originally planned for last Saturday, but postponed at short notice to make way for a four-hour opera.

The Banned and Berni Plate are in Tuesday's "Get II Together" on the ITV network.

Otherwise it's a bleak week for rock, unless you fancy Oslikian in "Crischerjack" (BBC-1 Friday).

BOOKS

Memories are made of this ...

The Guinness Book Of British Hit Singles

Jo & Tim Rice (Guinness Superlatives, £3,75p.)

TAKING OVER where Charlie Gillett's Rock File series left off, The Guinness Book Of British Hir Singles offers no more — and no less — than complete chart statistics from their inception in NME in 1952 until the end of 1976.

It's been put together by Tim Rice, who is remembered in our house more for his American Pie show on Capital Radio than his work on Jesus Christ Superstur, and his brother Jo, who has seemingly managed to maintain a close brother Jo, who has seemingly managed to maintain a close contact with the British charts while working as the general manager of Smith's Industries in Tokyo. They were assisted by Radio One's knowledgeable Paul Gambaccini and Thames Vaffey Radio's Mike Read.

Alternatively known as

Valley Radio's Mike Read.
Alternatively known as
'The Guinness Book Of Records Records,' this is the best book of its kind so far, simply because of its thoroughness. It has the especial advantage of using the Top 50 charts (from the time they were first compiled in 1960), whereas earlier chart books have more cautiously catalogued only Top 30 entries.

30 entries.

This is invaluable. It's often those 45s that nestle in the bottom reaches of the lists that bottom reaches of the lists that prove retrospectively intriguing. They either baffle by obscurity (can anyone out there remember "Marble Breaks Iron Bends" by Peter Fenton which made No. 46 in, November, 1966?) or semind you that some indisputably classic singles (Major Lance's "Um, Um, Um, Um, Um, Um, Um, Tanklinis", Angelia and ? And The Mysterians' "96 Tears", for example) could only muster a top position of No. 37 between them.

The book has been

The book has been presented with a nice regard for clarity and comes in a sensible size and shape — slightly larger than your average 45. It scores over Rock File, I suppose, because it covers more ground and presents none statistical tables. (There are list for artists with most No.1 hits, most Top 10 hits, most weeks in the chart, and many others). There is also an appendix outlining the events of the first six mooths of 1977. The one respect in which it is inferior to Rock File is that it doesn't concern itself with for clarity and comes in a sens doesn't concern itself with U.S. chart statistics.

doesn't concern itself with U.S. chert statistics.

NaturaBy, I searched diligently for mistakes, but failed to discover any of significance: though improvements could still be made (the photographs are basic, the captions witless). The major shortcoming of the presentation is that although a brief description is that although a brief description is provided of each not (Chiff Richard: UK Male Vocalist, that sort of thing), the cross-referencing system is generally inadequate. Presumably readinated the aware that John Lennon and Paul McCartiney were once members of a popular '60s group, but if they weren't then the book doesn't tell them. Similarly no connection is made between, say, Bryan Ferry and Roxy Music or Peter Frampton and The Herd. Also, there is no indica-tion that the lead vocalist of Python Lee Jackson was Rod Stewart, a fact which contri-buted not a little to its chart

It might also have interested some to learn that Aphrodites Child once housed the bulky personage of Demis Roussos, or that Marion Ryan was the mother of Paul and was the mother of Paul and Barry.

A considerable blunder is that the hits of Manfred Mann, and Manfred Mann, and Manfred Mann, and Manfred Mann is still because, the presence of the eponymous keyboards-man aside, there is no connection between the two bands. It would have made as much sense to list all Wings' hits under 'Beatles'.

Nevertheless, there is much to intrigue. A ready was occasionally pecks through the mass of figures (the Radha Krishna Temple are referred to as an 'Oxford Street vocal/instrumental group"), and if this book is to become an annual publication, as seems likely, if will not be an unwelcome one. At £3.75p., it's hardly cheap, but nevertheless only the price of an album, and better value than most of those

As Serious As Your Life

Valerie Wilmer (Allson & Busby)
THERE'S NO shortage of musicians opinions in print, but there is a dearth of writers diligent grough to sill through them and come up with a thesis.

Valerie Wilmer's latest atudy of black music advances the theory that the New Music — New Thing, New Wave, Free — far from being an esoteric siding, is the living, natural expression of a black culture which yet retains its African impulse.

which yet retains its African impulse.

She furnishes a wealth of examples. The extremes of vocalisation used by an Albert Ayler — or a James Brown — can be traced to one voice chording techniques in use in West Africa.

The freedom from set bar lines in the revision of housements.

lines in the music of butesmen parallels the untrammelled sweep of Ornette Coleman's improvisations

Black music, Miss Wilmer contends, has always been force.

It follows that the white criti-cal establishment's condemna-sion of much of what they dub 'the avant garde' is based on the want control of the transfer of the awant garde' is based on false premises.

Western strempts to classify an alien culture tell us rather more about the Great Western Card Indea than about the true nature of the music.

Part of this is down to compulsive punditry, but more sinister is the New Music from its potential audience.

The development of the jazz lofts and musician-owned record labels — the self-rebinne programme — was the outcome of the isolation of the music. a political action to counter a political conspiracy which found the "cosily reassuring" jazz-rock just the dilution needed for full-strength profits.

There are no easy applications.

tion needed for full-strength profits.

There are no easy optimisms in the book. The writer knows—none better—that the reclamation of the Airo-American for his African roots American for his African roots will entail bucking centuries of conditioning. Jihad indeed.

As Serious As Your Life is the most important polemic since Frank Kofsky's Black Nationalism And The Revolution In Music, and twice as readable. Essential.

If this is what they teach you in public school, I sure am giad I'm guitersnipe. Dud Gid was "a 14-year-old closet punk" when he wrote this molchill. Now he writts to be a brain surgeon — not the most suitable job for him, one would feel.

Scenario: David has changed his name to Adolph Spitz and hought a twastika (gaspette!) carring which he wears while listening to his favoorite record, "Death" by Sick, in his parents' council flat on the 21st floor of a tower-block overlooking the Westway.

"What you need is a good spanking. In my days people like you were put in the army! want to talk to you about these records you play. I will not allow them in the News Of The World."

Does Gideon Sams really believe that the profe spake so? (The rich are different from us — they have more credulty.)

Alas, Adolph and Thelma are sharing their last-ever pogo. Next comes Knives/Teds horzor.

I don't object to rip-olds if done with grace, but this is the crassest thing I've seen in some time.

The little punkling hasn't even done his prep proper. Why no ampletamine sulphate or fanzines or big business heaploitation? Why no reality, why no love, why no blood that doesn't taste of tomatoes?

Elton: It's A Little Bit Funny

Text by Bernie Taupin; Pictures by David Nutter (Penguin Books, £2.50)

WHAT REALLY is a little funny about this book is that Penguin should risk blowing their literary cool by tens to enguin amouso risk to lowing their literary cool by entering the pop pot-boiler market.

Lum not denigrating the delightful Mr Johr himse II, but while a pictorial record of a year in a rock star's life is a portest lees, it think this large format paperback is a pricey put-on at £2.50.

The mainly black-and-white photographs, of the most ardinary quality, fall roughly into three categories: Elton Seen Sharing A Joke With—, with the positions to the left and right of him being occupied variously by fab personages such as Shirley MacLaine, Hugh Hefner, Peter Frampton and Elton's inum; Elton On Stage; and, allegedly, Intimate Moments With Elton.

With Elmon.
With regard to the latter, I'm sure that Elton really is a very nice person. But he is not a joy to behold romping in his y-fronts and spraying his arrapits with anti-perspirant (Faherge Brat, darkags). Such intimate mousents are enough to put you off your hunch.
None of the picture five up to the blurb — "Never before has a rock performer authorised such a candid exploration of his private life".
After all, States magazine has been showing pictures of one stars in their authorized such a.

After all, States magazine has been showing pictures of pop stars in their underpunts for years.

And the whole memoir has the flavour of a jolly school outing without the tension, drama, sex, stimulants or maked emotion of a fourth-form cultural day rrip.

At some moment in 1976 Elton John must have felt sad, angry, thoughtful, analous, lonely, Inspired, surprised, deeply moved or uncuddly. But the apparently abiquitous Nutter mere captured is.

moved of uncudity. But the apparently abiquatous Numer mever captured it.

As for the scunty "fext", Taupin hasn's attempted to provide any illuminating commentary, confining his contribution to a handful of banal captions such as "The curavan comes to a half at the carrest store and, for 'pretty please,' it's leve all strough." How winterd. It tan't even particularly associage, as subversion.

The third, at Liverpool's Eric's chub last week, was spectacular, and a Very Important Event.
These audition gigs are almost unique in a music ledustry previously dominated by dinosaur corporations who could let the talent find them. This latest Challenge has proved conclusively that the enterprise is far more than another Stiffwick girmwick or hype.

another Stiffwich generics.

The whole trip verged often on the fringe of lunary, a party of Stiffs, Wicks and Liggers trekking the streets of Liverpuddle, disturbing peaceful record shops, buying second-hand clothes and attempting to sign up Sponish guitarists in restaurants.

It was a sixteen-hour rock

It was a sixteen-hour rock and roll carnival, entirely and rom carnival, entirely justified by the unexpectedly high quality of the exening's entertainment. Nine bands due on stage, a back street crowded with transit vans and musicians, Eric's only half full but yers fertive musicians, Eric's only hall full hut very festive.

Bryan Farrell was first on, confronted by a small and still sober audience. He grinned broadly and sang well in the Grabaus Parker moodle. Not my sort of music (and his shades and heret made him look like some awful old.

Irrelevant punk facsimiles from London, the vocalist From London, the vocalist working up the passion to kirk over a token bench. Hard Up Heroes and Coincidence were both dire, old fartdom with a vengence, driving thirsty spectators to the bar.

The band which really made

Scarks. Scrawl that name on your bedroom wall and memorive it because The Smirts are going to be ENORMOUS. Most of the groups on show were competent musicians, worth seeing once, but slightly drub. The Smirts were an out-of-tune, unprofessional mess, but they've only been together six weeks. If this was a bad night they've got un worries because attraction and had a hitle of their glory stolen by the infectious, shameless Smirks. They were the successful band of the first Sciffwick night and at Ele's they signed a Chiswick contract on-stage. They played a short set of melodic pop with bright, colourful visuals, but like The Smirks, some intensive gigging is going to be essential. football, just regular kids."

Of course, Jim's bonesty and refusal to compromise do tend to land him in trouble — and I'm not talking about the Vortex arrest but simply that Sham played most of their set last week with some young Simian skinhead drapping his eleven stone of bone and gristle round Jim's shoulders, and even taking a fair portion of the vocats on some numbers.

It wasn't right, of course, his clown cramping Jim's style, but Jim refused to allow the bouncers to give the kid the justifiable heave-ho — "he may look lifte a passed twat hut he's just a Bloke trying to enjoy himself," he said Jim coulon't help it, he loves the common fellow to a fault.

On the other hand, when this kid announced on the mike that "there are more punks than skinheads but we're going do yer anyway." Jim seized the mike furiously and drew unanimous applause with a "We gotta live together" unity rap, sentiments schoed in Sham songs like "Ubser Boy" ("nobody wins") and "Don't Understand".

At the end of the show the same kid was saying: "Skins and punks together stright". Hope he remembers next time he's down Milbwall ... as a is the chorus to "Whadda We Got". "Whadda we got? Fuck all" — is already on the terraces by the look of it and ifwhen that kid goes down for a streetch he'll probably take "Borstal Breakout" as his favourite song.

Sham are unapologetically Punk — the group simply explode round Jimmy, who projects an almost contradictory mixture of goodstime energy surge down to an art — what's needed now is some new material (and their present stuff, though subject to compschensive boredom the charge of being in the Ramalamadolequeue comprehensive boredom mould. Iranscends the mundame by virtue of its strong line in hooks and unpretentious simplicity) and a chance for the band to develop.

I missed The Crabs as I was upstairs being buttonholed by Jim, who informed me that he'd narrowly escaped death in a car crash earther that day that had hospitalised his girlfriend, but the show must go on.

The Jerks are a slightly better than average identikis punk band, all highspeed dronesaw soundalike stuff—a shame cos the singer, a camp mascara'd blonde bombshell out of the Ronson / Bowie glitter school of punk favoured up North, lacked nothing in confidence.

The Mirrors are Welsh, not

The Last Poets ACKLAM HALL,

CHANCES OF seeing The Last Poets I would have thought were only marginally better than those of seeing The Beatles.

Beatles.
After a handful of albums at the lurn of the decade, the centrepiece being the master-ful "This Is Madness" (1971). and a moment's notoriety for "Wake Up Niggers" on the Performance soundtrack, it appeared probable that they had simply crawled back into the urban blight from which they came the arban blight from which they came.

If they were working at all—indeed if they even still enisted—it was most likely to be for their brothers and sisters at some community centre in one of America's Chocobate Cities.

It was therefore a surprise to find their name quietty listed in the Gig Guide, and an even greater surprise to find out at really was them.

Here trepidation sets in though. Word was that only one of the original remained and, more worrying, in the interim years they had found religion.

and, more worrying, in the interim years they had found religion. Worrying because the stubborn, immutable worldview such things bring scemed at odds with The Poets' previous incisive street analysis.

Still, if the message was the same — mainly that blacks are wictims of collural mythis propogated as much by blacks as by whites — perhaps a more right-cous terminology might help it relate on these shores.

Considering the gig was a benefit for The Notting Hill Commission Of Enquiry Into Police Brutathy and Mabractise Against The Black Community, at a small dance hall at the heart of that area, a little understanding would be a fine thing all round.

But it was not to be.

Menger, with their smooth, sanitized Caucasian reggae and casual use of potent black symbols, were the punters choice of the evening.

They were professional, they will be deservedly successful, but the nearest they came to the problem core was that land of troism where jubilee rhymes with poverty.

I'd have the Paddingson youth Steel band — a dozen kids and joyous callypson rythyms — anytime.

The Last Poets followed soon after Merger, and initial rythyris — anytime.

The Last Poets followed soon after Merger, and initial audience fascination with four strangely calm and berobed musicians with just a congadrum and a bass guiltar between them soon changed to perplexity, and then became a steady exodus.

This suggests that roughly one per cent of the readership will find anything remotely rewarding in The Poets' music Good luck the rest of you.

The Poets' music hasn't can anything remotely rewarding in The Poets' music hasn't changed much. Though there are now only two voices (plus drum and bass) it's still a unique and vissionary animal.

To use functional terms, a simple, hypnotic beat mosti is established over which the voices and words play.

Put like that, though, a certain coldness and monostony is implied. Not so, The Poets form is alien to black music but it has the xame soul.

From such a seemingly inflexible base they come of hard and funky, relying on precise control and timing, and a tacit understanding of their own musical dynamic.

The voices shiue with rap-thythm and power and author-

The voices slide with rap-rhythm and power and author-ity from a frenzy to a whisper, and the listener is carried stealthily to the music's heart, where he (or she) finds two where he (or she) linds two things.

First, a deep, frightening sense of sadness and residual strength, the same feeling that comes sometimes from Miles. Davis' records, that could, were you feeling pedantic, be called the voice of centuries of black conversion.

called the voice of centuries of black oppression.

Second, some instruction on the realities of existence.

With the latter, I'm sorry to say. The Poets came unstuck. Whereas before they east realistic, acid light on the black situation, fostering some awareness along the way, they now seem to offer mostly their personal beliefs as the salvation key.

Never mind, they stimulate.

personal beliefs as the salva-tion key.

Never mind, they stimulate, they are still compulsive, and that one per cent at least will be rewarded.

Merger

100 CLUB MERGER exceeded all expectations at the 100 Club last Thursday evening with a spirited performance of blistering rock. Their virulent music was in direct refutation of the somewhat tepid metodies on the new group's debut "Exiles Ina Babylon"

"This is a song which reflects that age we live in — tribulation time," Barry Ford introduced the sel with "77"; the year, as you are possibly aware, in 'which the two cultures clashed, or something of the sorr.

of the sort.

And followed this with "Chetto Child", "Exües" and what is their most melodically developed tune to date,
"Waterfalls": settling into a comfortable groove upon the conclusion of these four songs.

comination groove upon the conclusion of these four songs. Even the sceptics ranged about Silver Camel Sound System could be seen inclined in attitudes of mute approval. "African Lady" was next, and then the group's sole love song, "It's You I Need", proving a very necessary pacer between moods.

Then, a brisk percussive introduction to the steppin' thythm of "Life Song," that had the dancers moving even before lvor Steadman dropped the heaviest bass riff this side of Lloydic Coxsone. "Rasta no deal with folly or vanity," Merger intoned the refrain; "Rasta don' deal with nuclear verapon."

Special mention at this stage to the Osei Bros., the Ghanese musicians from the Naturals recording quartet: one, laying down a driving drum beat; the other, overlaying the sound with a delightful play of frilly jazz organ.

"Rassa no deal with folly or panity." The band justained a full-powered, extended jam that kept the 100 Club crowd dancing and was thever in the least overblown or redime.

For an encore, "Rebel"
ensed the set in fine style—chanting Nyahbinghi on the sttlefield.
Later, Merger's man of

The Cortinas BRISTOL

IN THE space of a year, The Cortinas have moved from a small independent to a large American record company, left school, turned professional and they're still not old enough

Like others their position is a vulnerable one. They need to come across with some solid trend-transcending product before CBS start to cut their losses.

Which fact the group acknowledge and acted upon in Bristol's last rock gig of 1977 at the Locarmo. After quickly disposing of the old numbers like "Defiant Pose" (the new and misleading single), they played a fine set of fresh material.

These songs varied from the firm rather than frantic, R&B (whence their origin/impetus) of "Youth Club Dance" to a tribute to "The Man From U.N.C.L.E." called "Ask Mr. Wassel".

U.N.C.L.E." called "Ask Mr. Waverly" sounding like a strange but compelling like as strange but compelling mixture of Status Quo and Wire.

They encored with a nice arrangement of "We've Got To Get Out Of This Place" and a version of "Blue Gene Bop" that would have brought an appreciative smile to lan Dury's boat race.

As always they were visually excellent. Nick Sheppard in particular was bursting with acts.

The Cortinas have the time and the talent not only to survive, but also to grow — cultivate them, O.K.?

Cabaret Voltaire

SHEFFIELD

THE ORIGINAL Cabaret Voltaire was a club in Zurich, founded by the Dadnists in 1916 or thereabouts. In 1972, three musicians in Sheffield adopted both the name and the spirit of Cabaret Voltaire. Since then, they've done approximately half a dozen gigs.

Stephen Mallinder (bass and vocahs), Richard Kirk (guitar and dariner) and Chris Watson (organ, tapes and electronics) like to think of themselves simply as an "experimental pop band" — although the average rock fan could be excused for wondering where the "pop" part had gone.

As influences, they cite New, Can, Kraftwerk, the Beach Boys, Luis Bunuel and (of course) Dada, and judging by a recent demo cassette, they're also quite fond of dub.

They employ slide and cine projectors at their rare live appearances, although from this occasion.

To generalise, their sore they can this occasion.

To generalise, their soram notes to pick out the melody line-over which Kirk spreads viciously-treated guitar distortions. And on top of everything, there's Mallinder's treated vocals echoing in and out.

In short, nearly all the sounds Cabaret Voltaire produce have coursed their way through a fair selection of circuits before they reach your cars.

They sing about the Beader-Meinhof gang, "Control Addicts" and Roger Gleves and exhort one and all to "Do The Mussolini". They are rather intriguing. Their aesthetic, on this showing appears to be

The Boyfriends

HIGHGATE IT SEEMED appropriate to see out 1977 with a band of 1978.

That means a success story starts here. Pat Collier, ex-Vibrator, is leading a band with instant appeal and real potential. They must be seen.
Is there anything else to be said?

I could tell you it was New Year's Eve in a dark barn of a church hall in North London. The Boyfriends were sandwiched between some lively rockabilly from a new band. The Barnshakers: at last band. The Barnishakers: at last a possible crossover act moving out of exclusive Ted territory, and a riotous party set from The Stukas.

Dressed in the almost obligatory dark suits and ties. The Boyfriends could have ripped off anyone from The Beatles to The Jam. They've got an organ so someone must compare them to The Stranglers.

I can't put them in any neat

They're very subtle, very intelligent, very different. I want to see them again and again because I could have missed so much the first time.

mused so much the first time. Simultaneously, they are a great dance band, you can't belp twisting and jumping. Pat Collier's voice was slightly weak; I preferred the singing of the beaming, boopping, tambourine-touting Chris on keyboards. Titles like "Romance" and "I'm to Love Today" stick in my mind. These are love songs and you can sneer if you like, but I don't want to be bored in 1978.
"The Last Bus Home" was

Kevin Coyne and Zoot Money

THE NASHVILLE

IF THURSDAY night's performance was anything to go by, Kevin Coyne's present tour of prestigious, small UK venues should do him nothing but good.

Though many at the Nashville had evidently Though many at the Nashville had evidently expected to find him oppressively intense, the humour that frequently surfaces in his songa and his banter helped to engage the affections of the audience. (Funny how these moody types often are a laugh a minute: Joni Mitchell, Sandy Denny, even Neil Young have all been engagingly fold in their time. It's not till they crank the mose into ger that the doom/gloom axis resumes sway.)

till they crank the muse into gear that the doornighoom axis resurres sway.)

Comparisons first. Let loose on Johnny Ray's "Cry". Coyne receiled no-one so much as loe Cocker in his arsault on "Bye Bye Blackbird". John Martyn is another reference point, in the use of gadgetry (in Coyne's case backing by tapes and use of exho) and of voice-asinstrument.

The latter mannerism is often a close relative of incoherence, as Zoot Money had demonstrated in his opening miniset, but Coyne's grasp of melody, rhythm and narrative is such that his many vocal idiosyncrasies only rarely upset the structural applecart.

THE Chris Barber Juzz and Blues Band plan a major UK Spring tour in April with ex-MJQ pianist John Lewis and Roy Eldridge.

Roy Eldridge.
The Gil Evans Orchestra and the Stan Tracey Octet will be playing the Royal Festival Half on 25th February. George Beason is at the Theatre Royal, Druyr Lane on 27h January.

Jazz Centre Society gigs include Terri Quaye's Moonspirit at The Phoenix on 12th January, Dick Heckstall-Smith's Big Chief at 7 Dials on 12th, and Joy at the Star & Guliar on 16th Mancheste's Band On The Walf has Pube with Maggle Nichols on 19th, and Thomass Stanke with Edward Vesals on 26th.

BBC Jazz Clind transmissions for January include Max Colle's Rhythm Accs on 8th, the Brian Lemon Octet on 15th, Major Surgery and the Vie Ash Quaret on 22nd, and the Stan Subraman Quaret on 29th. February's clubbers are Pacific Eardeum on 12th, Alon Eksdon & His Band on 19th and Colin Purbrook Octet on 26th.

Alan Elsdon & His Band on 19th and Colin Purbrook Octet on 26th.

Affantic's "That's Jazz" series of re-issues has come up with a 1969 recording of Milcolav Vitous's "Mountain in The Clouds", with McLaughlin, Hamcock, Joe Henderson, De Johnete and Joe Chambers, Capiol has re-issued "Bing Crosby-Lusis Armstrong", and signed trombonist Ruul De Souza.

United Artists "Joe Bushkin Celebrates 100 Years Of Recorded Sound" was made for the Norwegian Red Cross, and features Bing Crosby, Johnny Smith, Juke Hanna and Milt Histon.

His guitar technique is Richie Havens-style, thumb-as-bottleneck, the instrument itted well back into his stomach. He played solo, briefly with Money, and sans several accompanied only by his partner's electric piano.

Whichever, Money provided texture and swing, slightly mellowing Coyne's raw presentation of his songs.

A larger public for Coyne seems no nearer, unfortunately, even though the tunes are immediate and the vision humane rather than bleak. Most people simply prefer something a bit easier on the ear (Elvis Costello, for inst-ance).

ear (Elvis Costello, ance).

Also the lack of discipline that marred the latter stages of the Nashville gig, reducing its status from memorable to morely very good, is likely to deter the unconverted.

But if you want an evening of commitment, humour, wit and drama, all directed outwards tather than in, Kevin Coyne's your man.

Black Slate 100 CLUB

HAVE THE Black State group been taking their cue from Glitterbest Promotions?

Ottons?

They introduced a new song midway through their set, described as "strictly for the critics" and titled "They Can't Make Us, They Can't Break Ite"

Walt, the attempt and not the deed confounds us, so here goes nothing. . . (You didn't really suppose I would be able to resist a challenge like that, my idren, did you?)

I first saw Black Slate a couple of years ago. At the time, the group were mostly playing in a support capacity on the North London circuit, backing artists such as Errol Dunkley the Man, Roy Shirley, and the occasional act from JA.

They were a capable youth rey, and the occasionar are from IA.

They were a capable yout fourfit, providing a competent foundation for their host of the night, not particustly inspired, neither overabundant with what the New Faces panel cuphemistically refer to as star quahity, but basically sound.

Lead singer Keithroy Drumnond would execute an energetic act, given the chance; but he tended to sound like whoever's song he was singing; and rarely tike himself.

The group have come on a singing; and rarely tike himself.

The group have come on a great deal since them. Tony Brightly has learnt to slap a subtle keyboard; drummer boy Desmond Mehoney blossoms per performance; bassist Ras Elroy Bailey is one of the most inventive musicians and exuberant personalities on the UK reggae scene; and with Slate writing their own material, Drummond has since discovered his own distinctive voice. "Sticks Man", released last year, was the catalyst for their sudden transformation and self-belief.

Written and produced by Ras Elroy, the song was one of the most in-demand sounds around lass Spring; an indication of what the majority of black youth really think of mugging, contrary to what National Front propaganda would lead us to betteve.

I rate the song as the fore-most production ever to emerge out of British regge.

And their 100 Club gig was the finest I've yet seen from the group.

And their 100 Club gig was the linest I've yet seen from the group.

Their act had the audience intent on the music, which they effected with vigorous spirit, obviously galvanised by the wholehearted enthusiasm of the crowd. Drummond kept the show intest between tunes with an admixture of patois patter and Cockney dickey.

Slate opened their account with an effective arrangement of "Thin Line Between Love And Hate", establishing a thin line twixt soul and teggase in its accomplishment, before settling into an extended session of the "Pisno Twist" iff, the Brightly instrumental with which the group followed up "Sticks Man" marketwise.

This was followed by "The Wrong Side Of The Fence" and "Where Is Your Culture", at the conclusion of which we were taken "along a roots rock, reggae rock expedition"—which translated musically into another driving instrumental workout.

into another driving instru-mental workout.

much translated musically into another driving instrumental workout.

Next came the "They Can't Make Us, They Can't Break Us" polemic; and I trust your endorsement, credulous reader, when I state that this critic is not motivated by pique in describing the tune as pointless and unmemorable.

Instead of the blistering devistation of Babylonian reviewers I had been stried to the anticipation of by Drummond's introductory outburst, we got, instead, a popy chant incorporating the title, and a very standard Slate rift.

Much better was "Btack Slate — The Roots Of Reggae Music", proven in its execution; and better still, Ras Elroy taking the lead vocal to intone the "aoh-co-coo screw-coo-coo bagga bugaboo" refrain of "Sticks Man".

Locks shaking, feet stomping, body trembling with the uncontrollable vibration of the instrument rumbling about his huge girth, a wide grin in permanent fixture on his pleasant visage: Bassic howled his lyric of flat-foot muggings vs. unity.

The nudience loved it. And unity.

The nudience loved it. And the longer the audience loved it, was the louder the music rolled: the more beatifically Bassic sang.

Black Slate closed with "African Wornan" They took their leave singly, as already described in these pages, until only a steady drum tattoo held the tempo.
The crowd were already demanding more as Desmond brought the music — and dancers — to a halt, perfore with a final clatter of cymbals.
Compelled to two encouses, with a final clatter of cymbals.

Compelled to two encores, the group obliged with "Live Up To Love", the forthcoming single, followed by Johnny Clarke's "Dread, Dread Knot

CAN this be three whackedout Whacker Bands out of the earn a few bob in the smoke?

Or a vicious slash at the sparse and weird. Usherettes sold ice-cream and soft drinks, and the audience comprised a motely collection of old ladies, couples in their 30's and young kids sucking choc ices, as an incongruous load of hip regare was pumped out of the P.A.

Four girls came onstage and Pan's Peopled to "Boogie Nights", and then five minutes later The Searchers appeared, and BANG! — straight into "Sweets For My Sweet".

And blimey, if they didn't do all their hits just like on the records: "Goodbye My Love", "Sugar And Spice", "Don't Throw Your Love Away", "When You Walk In The Room", then, WALLOP! "Needles And Pinza"! The Searchers biff Smokey squarely on the jaw! Jangling guitars, smooth harmonies, and a line-up which includes original member frank Allen on bass and Cabstot Chat.

What more could you ask

"CAN ANYONE here play 'Anarchy'?" shouts the Prof. Some kid from the audience gets onstage, is handed a guitar, and the Profetts are ready to go. They do "White Christomas", "Anar-chy", and their own number "White Russian". They also do what sounds like a Ramones song, but who cares? They certainly don't. Prof and the Profetts thrive on chaos. A lew disgruntled punters shout for their money back, but up front the lines blur. The audience laughs and cheers, and the hand cheers back.

A núcrophone is passed round, so that people can join in on the song. The P.A. continually breaks down, but everyone keeps on smiling. The house lights come on, but no-one minds.

Prof and the Profetts demand the right for anyone to get onstage and perform. They are like candy floss and mud pies, and unite homework and dog nuisunce. Prof and Profetts are fun — don't miss'em.

Rob Hall

for? They've got a new drummer, but we'll ignore him for ethnic purposes.
Great s. off.

I think The Merseybeats are insane. Apart from the predictable (and quite enjoyable) renditions of "Wishin' And Hopin", "I Think Of You", and (Booray!) "Sorrow", they padded out the rest of their set wilk such 'classics' as Gifbert O'Sullivan's "Get Down", The Muppers" "Half Way Down The Stairs", and a dreadful version of "Mull Of Kintyre".
Chly Tony Crane remains version of "Mull Of Kinfyre".

Cnly Tony Crane remains from the original band, and one wonders why he couldn't have taken the same path that ex-Merseybeat Billy Kinsley has taken with Liverpool Express (i.e. got his shit up to date).

Express (i.e. got his shit up to date).
Still, their rock 'n' roll encore got three chicks dancing and I suppose it beats nine to five.
Lately thawed out of cryogenic suspension by E.M.I., Billy J. Kramer presents a rather disturbing vision of the hitmaker turned Des O'Connor.

He jumped about looking Happy in a weirdly unconvinc-ing manner and looked tired, worried and very nervous, but this was offset by a confident stage act, and the fact that he was in Good Voice, as they

was in Good Voice, as they say.

Most of his set consisted of Neil Diamond / David Gates / Buddy Holly / Everly Brothers numbers, all knocked out in an ultra-pro cabaret style redolent of Batley and scampi.

His own hits, "Bad To Me", "I'll Keep You Satisfied", "Little Children" etc, etc, were crammed into an emotionless medley which seemed to last forever.

This was plainly Music for Pensioners, and I was bored silly.

Pensioners, and I was bored silly.

All these bands are on a time-warp nostalgia frip only, so you pays yer money, etc.

I wouldn't see 'em again (especially at two quid a incket), but watch out for gigs by The Boys and Generation X here in 1992!

No Dice MARQUEE

MARQUEE
FIRST on are Checkmate, four youths who play punchy but unremarkable rock-pop on gear their moms and dads bought them for Christmas.
Well-spoken and fresh-faced, they ger a lot of applause but their gear's removed by No Dice's roadies before they can encore.
No Dice come on and authorise the commoncement of "a bit of fun", stick their chests out and make a lot of noise.

The most that can be said of their most; qua music, is that it is high energy rock 'n rolf a la Faces/Stones.

They even mimic some of those bands' visual gestures like the bassist fearing on the singer's shoulder to sing a churus.

chorus.

The song titles escaped me amid the din, as did the lyrics apart from the line "I really could make it with you" (come back Bread all is forgiven).

back Bread all is forgiven). But I can pass on the infor-mation that their set includes the odd tiresome synthesiser break, one joke (about the Sex Pistols), some thin cockney cockiness and a bit where the singer and bessist go off to leave the guitarist to ... wait guitar solo. (Is this

Music for good time people is rock's answer to music for pleasure — the nature of the enjoyment is already decreed by convention and has precious little to do with being moved by playing or singing or the writing of music and lyrics.

Do we really need another band that plays "Jehnny B. Goode" for an encore?

Steve Taylor

They looked like a bunch of revamped refugees from the Winter Gardens circuit who've recently discovered 'eavy rock in roll. They're part of that tradition of bands brilliantly lampooned on the Bonzo's "Trouset Press"; "C'mon everybody, clap your hands

Ken comes over with all the fervour of Dr Goebbels on a slow day. As does Charles of Watford and his bunker communique. "The Swedes have lost their Individuality because of 45 years of Socialism. Behind the Materialistic wealth, Swedes have no Individuality. We have to decide whether we want to live in a land where the Individual, for all his faults, counts, or in a Totalizarian state like Sweden, striving for Technical Perfection. The Swedes only vote for the Socialists because they like Material Wealth more than Individuality. We seem to be following their lead. What everyone admires about the English is their Character and Individuality."

A NINDIVIDUAL named Betty called to put across her Highly Individualistic viewpoint about "the lady who's going blind, and is scared of it. I think she's N INDIVIDUAL and is scared of it. I think she got the wrong artitude." Presumably, an Individual shrugs off loss of the senses with a soupeon of c'est la vie. What is Decadence and the Permissive Society, after all, but a tracific, became Permissive Society, after all, but a trendier, less suppy model of The Stiff Upper Lip? Just another cop-out, another excuse for not earing?

Alan of Dulwich proved a fitting finale: "I see no reason why anyone should object to answering the question concerning race on the forthcoming 1981 Census. Surely those who won't answer are those who've got something to hide?"

They loathe our generation, while taking on the worst characteristics of the Modern World: disposability, apathy, artificiality, brutality. There are automaton people moving through Reich's inghtmare motions; the terror of seeing oneself as an "animal" driving the desire to be a CLEAN machine. Cleanliness used to be next to Godliness hut nowadays the order has changed. What has God ever done for them? This is a hire-purchase, eash-on-delivery world and it he goods don't satisfy you—from a spouse to a house—trade 'em in for a new breed. Plesh never did wear as well as plastic.

THE PHONE-In Fodder communicate with that customary don't-fouch-me courtesy which springs from uptight territory, keeping even their comrades in alienation at Pascis salute arm's-length by addressing each other as "ladies" and "gentlemen". The "ladies" are just helpless women, their votes heavy and broken with Roche-inspired defeat, most of them, seemingly obsessed with keeping their own little patch hyper-sanitised, as clean and unthreatening as the 'hypermarket in which hands need never touch.

The "gentlemen" nurture their lust and disgust behind wedlocked doors or in quiet

The germs of cause and effect can be seen in the harren technology which flourishes on Government-subsidy everywhere, the technology which has taken civilisation for a long ride up a dark alley for it's own evid way, taking us beyond civilisation into the realms of inhumanity from whence we first civilised ourselves. Or in the regression of do-gooding and the diluting of principles, the soft, rotten drift of Social Conscience into messy, mercless Social Democracy.

Auberon Waugh believes that One may carry on unmolested by ME and BIG BROTHER. "The secret is to take no interest in what people say and disbelieve everything you read in the newspapers" — though as a Waugh Auberon can afford to.

For mere humanity, the only course not pointed straight at the eve of destruction seems to be a return to the idea of Community — not that envisaged out of the mists of outmoded hippie lipservice speil such as "Love Everythody", a plan of action doomed to platitude-dom by its very unpreacticability — but rather to care selectively, to look after your own, and if this successfully accomplished to extend the boundaries of your seasons after the care of the mists of the successfully accomplished to extend the boundaries of your seasons and the successfully accomplished to extend the boundaries of your seasons and the successfully accomplished to extend the boundaries of your seasons and the seasons and the successfully accomplished to extend the boundaries of your seasons and the seasons are selectively to the seasons and the seasons are selectively to a look after your own, and if this is successfully accomplished to extend the boundaries of your seasons are seasons.

GUESS THE BAG DON'T KNOW THE SCORE — Like Who's Da Cretin? Brothers Ramone, T. Parsons or yew, baby!!!

DEAR TONY Parsons, I've just been reading your Ramones article and I think maybe it's time you took a look at yourself and started working things out from a realistic point of view rather than according to what you think is cool. It's also time you swallowed your pride. You've been writing in NME for quite a while now, at least since Swastika armbands were "striking" (Oct. 76) and surely by now a little maturity is to be expected.

So you discover that the Ramones are what we all know they are and not what you and other rock and roll, uh, writers would like them to be and instead of admitting the error of your ways you resort to the old NME standby—The Hatchet Job. Only trouble is, you haven't got the ability of, say, CSM or Farren to do so and notfully expose the chip on your own shoulder.

Tony, your job is to write about shoulder.

Tony, your job is to write about rock and roll (in case you've forgotten, that's our music, right?). We don't want to read political regurgitations. We hate the National Front and we hate Commies too. We hate all people who try to force half-baked ideas down our throats and that includer son.

half-baked ideas down our throats and that includes you.

Hell, you've got to decide which side you're on, pal. Why not take an all expenses paid trip to Berlin and look over both sides and decide?

Anyway, Tomy, I forgive you for you know not what you do. It's Nick Logan who's really the guiltry party for allowing the NME to gradually (Stophiss phi offinite right here!—N.L.)

ITE STOTIERING
MONGOLOID, Monchester.
Who's doing the Bag this week? Will they please get it sorted out toot sweet? Can't they think of anyone else to knock? — N.L.

THAT PARSONS geezer has totally confused me about Da Ramones. Before his article, I thought they wrote with lyrics taking the piss out of pop, while writing simple chewrs. Will the Ramones please say if they're really that incredibly thick, or not?

A CONFUSED PUNK (like most punks) called Alex, Swiss Cottage, London

WELL, PARSONS really excelled himself in his Rods Roundhouse review didn't he? And I don't mean his comments about the music. Having done a good job of revaling the true character of the Ramones, he totally ruined his excellent piece with one of the most disgusting things I've read in a long time.

Whether our views on the Rods themselves differ (and for the record, they don't) doesn't matter, but his comments on the audience were appalling. Because they pay hard-earned money (something Parsons will never understand) to see and hear a band whose music they genuinely like, they are branded as "gullible bastards who have a suspension of belief, chronic ego-deficiency and dormant—maybe total paucity—of brain matter".

For making that observation Parsons is clearly like most patronising piece of serum working in the NME territory. I mean, the nerve of these termings (unruly swine) who went to the Roundhouse, actually standing within a hundred yards of Parsons, and not even knocking to show proper respect!

The Burchill / Parsons partnership and not even kineching to show proper respect!

The Burchill / Parsons partnership has sired articles of this elitist nature before (remember the Outsiders LP review), and doubtless more will fathers, the matchild has a widding review), and doubtless more will follow, as the switchblade-wickling kids sneer at anyone as untip as them. Once again the untouchable journalists suggests that they are the only people who have a right to actually liken band. No way could the people at the Roundhouse have gone to see the Rods of their own accord. No possibility of them having just an ounce of intelligence, or independence of spirit. Unless they work in Carnaby Sirect they must be pure cretits and nothing more. Well in that case perhaps Tony Parsons, in is role as most intellectual individual in the universe, would kindly consent his role as most intellectual individual in the universe, would kindly consent to tell us in advance who we can go and see, without custing him any embatrasement.

And you call the Ramsones a bunch of wankers! Well take a look at yourself, Boy Wonder.

UN-NATURAL MAURICE of Scanual!

Stonwell.

Elitium is a terrible thing, Me? I'll drink with anyone, apart from John Kingsley Read (unless he's buying). As for Tary rock, I don't see it catching on, But I do think Tony's. Ramones piece was a lot funnier than da brudders' last album. — M.S.

ROCK 'N' ROLL is travelling over a hundred miles to see Stray at lifterd, and discovering on arrival that the band had cancelled the gig. STEVE, Luton

Yeah, the split of rock'n' 1041's a lunay thing. Like travelling over a hundred miles to see Stray, for starters. You deserve better, Steve. Try films or football — they usually start on time, and Luton have got a pretty fair side. — HARRY klast and HASI.AM

DID 1977 NOT happen? Eve just watched the O. G. W. T. 's "Rest Of The Year", and I just can't believe it. I mean, according to Ol' Bob the BOF '77 was the year of Elton John, Led Zeppelin, Dylan, Electwood Mac, Jackson Browne, J.D. Souther, Yes, Stillwater (who the bell are they??) Eric Clapton and Emmylou Hartis, Maybe I'm mistaken or something, but I thought '77 was the year when the following happened: Bowie was acclaimed as a genius for "Low" and "Heroes" (NME and MM album of the year). The Pistols (what can I say that hasn't already been said). The Clash, Jam, Damned. Buzzcocks, Gen. X. Ian Dury, Adverts, Stranglers, Hot Rods and Costello. The year of classic singles. The year when the USA came back to the fore with Television.

Heartbreakers, Talking Heads, Richard Hell, Blandie, Cheap Trick, Jonathan Richman, Igay, and the Ramenes. The year whon good straight took came herough with Thin Lizzy, Steely Dan, Peter Gabriel, Tom Petity, Randy Newman, Graham Parker, 801, John Martyn, B.O.C., Joan Armatrading, Little Fear and Dave Edmunds. The year when we got to know and love reggae. In fact, the year of almost everybody except those who were on the O.G. W. T. How can the only rock programme we get on TV (we don't see So It Goes up here) possibly ignore all the names I've mentioned? I suppose it's got something to do with Ol' Bob's clashes with the Pistols, but surely even that shouldn't cloud his personal taste to such an extent I'll tell you one thing though, it's the last.

Whistile Tear! I've ver watch (unless—very unlikely—someone tells me it has improved, or John Peel becomes the host) and it his letter means anything to anyone, they should do likewise.

CHRIS DA VIDSON, Greenock,

Right, Whispering Bob's idea of rock'n'roll is no rock'n'roll at all. We at NME prefer to watch Emmerdale Farm rather than risk another 45 minutes of hell in the studio with the Mad Bomber. — M.S.

But you can read about all that garf in Thrills (page 10); while T-Zers concentrates on more pressing matters like the fact that the shark in Jaws 2 (the sequel to Jaws I unsurprisingly enough) is nicknamed Fidel since it's known that F. "It would be inappropriate to launch a publicity and advertising campaign in LA now with all the hysterie," quoth manager Dai Davies, adding, "was woulded," want anone to "we wouldn't want enjone to think we were in some way responsible for provoking these heinous crines, or that we were trying to cash in on them." The Stranglers now plan to visit the city of one-night-stands in March

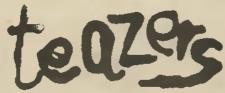

Meantime the world's most creative rock manager. Bernard Rhodes of The Clash fame, rang 7-Zers to express concern about the number of people tagging themselves 'ex-Clash.' "There's only one ex-member of The Clash and that's Kethl Levine," said Bernie, adding mysteriously, "Last year was for gigglers. 1978 is the year for the brains department..."

And Just to prove it, Bloodie has been No. I for two weeks in Australia with "In The Flesh"... Oh, and 7-Zers would like to Meantime the world's most has been No. I for two weeks in Australia with "In The Flesh".

Oh, and T-Zers would like to have said how much we enjoyed the Baid Grizzly Whatnat Tit's pick of the year but we fell asleep shortly before Led Zeppelin finished their spot, though we did revive briefly to see Erle Clayton's paunch disappearing behind the end credits. Still, we hear that the 1976 clip of Stillwater in Georgia was rilly something and infinitely more exciting than the likes of Ehvis Costello or The Clush or the rest of that boring irrelevant stuff that some claim also took place last year... And while we're talking about things old and grey (now now — Ed), the London Evening News reported last week that Elard Georgeson is talking the task of living in the material world even more seriously, and is now a fervent motor racing fan, more likely to be seen tweaking a Maserati tappet in the pris of Europe's racing circuits than likely to be seen tweaking a Maserati tappet in the pits of Europe's racing circuits than strumning a sitar in the temples of Hare Krishna. Rav's Sbankar, straist extraordinaire and George's long-time friend and reacher told the paper that he hadn't heard from George, adding "He never did practice.

Mention of the Evening News also makes T-Zers go all warm also makes T-Zere go all warm and runny seeing as how they went and made NME Music Paper Of The Year in their '77 round-up for "Being consistently witty, britchy and up-to-the-minute without going over the top too often." Gee gosh and thanks.

Release of Nell Young's next album, "Gone Wish The Wind", has been delayed two months until April since the whining one rejected the cover artwork by Tom Wilkes, who also designed the cover for "Decade"...

From The Sunday Minnr 8/1/78

Now it can be told: Mary Hindley in the Moors Munderers, whose base and opportunist gimmick earns them spreads in the Sunday Preet (see above) is in reality an American lady name of Chrissie Hynd.

Older NME readers may remember her as a frecionce writer for the paper two or three years back when Pennie Smith took the plc on the left.

ago. "I was endowed with a good friend. He pulled me off the settee one day, stood me in front of the mirror and said. "I'm walking out of your life because you're not worth the effort." Sometimes you can't see how far you've sunk until you're slapped in the face with it. After that humiliation, I went to my wardrobe closet and locked all my characters inside." Again from Rolling Stone.
Frank Sinstra on critics: "I am convinced they are descendants of Artila the Hun, Bitter and Charles Manson."
Surprise surprise. Fleetwood Mae swept Rolling Stone
Readers Poll for 1977, winning four categories including Best four categories including Best Band, Best Actist and Best Band, Best Artist and Best Album ("Rmoors", what clse). Not so predictable: Mare Bolan winning six categories in Record Mirmor's 1977 Readers' Poll, including Best Male Singer and Best-dressed Star (1). Bolan's girlfriend Gloria Jones came in Best Female Vocalist.

Time for a devastating insight into the creative process: Steve Miller describing in Guitar Player magazine how he makes his albums; "I used to make albums, and it's just a Proper inage.

It is alburns: "I used to make alburns, and it's just a guaranteed way to spond $75,000, stay up all night, drive yourself nuts and put out a mediocre record. What I do is, if I'm going to cut some rock and roll, I cut a whole bunch of beavy stuff for a week. Four weeks later I might go in and cut ballads. You end up with different cuts for different moods, then when you need a hot rock and roll song, you just go through the hot rock and roll file and there are a dozen of them — which might be boring the and there are a dozen of them — which might be boring as a one afform . . . I stockpile the stuff and try to stay ahead of my release date so I don't have that pressure." Is that how Smouds put their New Year ish treather?

Snouds put their New Year ish together?

If The New Wave's cashing in, then howcum the Toon Robinson Band are on £90 a week when The Hollles knock down £25,000 for a week's cabaret?

Here come the new apologies; we described Toany Klinger as the director of the 'Oo's Moovie, when in fact he's the producer.

We mean it, Isle of Maaaaaaaaan: Liverpool new wavers The Murants are the first punk band to brave the birch when they that hallowed isle when they that the Liverpool of the Liver they can start the film but I don't think it's ever going to happen. Richard won't do any gigs outside of New York because of the film. He's sitting around waiting, waiting and waiting like Gloria Swanson in Sunset Boulevard. Someone could make a great film about it." Panx, Dannee-boy... And finally, Blow Business, T-Zers weekly dope opera. Part 5-78. The story so far: Gregg and Chee have just split up for the fourth time. Gregg still loves Chee hat Chee doesn't love him. Bryan loves Gerry but Gerry has gone off with Misch who still loves Bianca who says she still Receival Chee does It love him. Bryan loves Gerry but Gerry has gone off with Misch who still loves Binnes who says she still loves him too though she was last seen with Bjorn (Borg) though she's also been out with Rod who no longer loves Britt hair differences out of court. Bisnea has also been going out with Roddy who is loved by Margaret who no longer loves Tony though some say she still harbours affection for Peter (Townsend) (no relation). Rod meanwhile is going with Marcy after a brief dalliance with Bibl who used to love Todd (Rundgren) who loves everyone. David has meantime run off with Zowle, his son by Angle who is now living with Ray (whoever he is) while David's friend Brian (Eno) is now shacked up with Julie (Christie) leaving Ritva with only her camera. Steve loves Kim. Elton says he has sex' "about three times a week, more female that male" (Hough just "about three times a week, more female than male" though just who he's talking about he ain't saying.
