

LEYTON BUZZARDS ● JOHN CLEESE ● MARLEY ● ARMATRADING

NEW NME EXPRESS MUSICAL

THE JAM

Strangers In A Strange Town

P.20/21

PRETENDERS

Dizzy Ms Chrissie

P.7/8

Sod all that — what about

THE ONLY ONES

JOHN PERRY (left) and PETER PERRETT, winners of this week's PENNIE SMITH Award for Cover Shot In The Face Of Intense Competition.

ROD STEWART'S ON THE SHELF

At the newly opened:

Music Book Centre

Songbooks, music tutors and books about music for all musical tastes.
79 Newman Street, London W1. Phone 01-580 2580.

FIVE YEARS AGO

Week ending March 19, 1974

Last This Week
3	1	BILLY DON'T BE A HERO.....Paper Lace (Bus Stop)
1	2	THE AIR THAT I BREATHE.....Hollies (Polydor)
2	3	JEALOUS MIND.....Alvin Stardust (Magnet)
5	4	THE MOST BEAUTIFUL GIRL.....Charlie Rich (CBS)
4	5	YOU'RE SIXTEEN.....Ringo Starr (Apple)
7	6	JET.....Paul McCartney & Wings (Apple)
13	7	I GET A LITTLE SENTIMENTAL OVER YOU.....New Seekers (Polydor)
8	8	REMEMBER (SHA-LA-LA-LA).....Bay City Rollers (Bell)
10	9	CANDLE IN THE WIND.....Elton John (DJM)
12	10	IT'S YOU.....Freddie Starr (Tiffany)

TEN YEARS AGO

Week ending March 19, 1969

Last This Week
1	1	WHERE DO YOU GO TO.....Peter Sarstedt (United Artists)
3	2	I HEARD IT THROUGH THE GRAPEVINE.....Marvin Gaye (Tamla Motown)
2	3	SURROUND YOURSELF WITH SORROW.....Cilla Black (Parlophone)
8	4	THE WAY IT USED TO BE.....Engelbert Humperdinck (Decca)
6	5	WHICHITA LINEMAN.....Glen Campbell (Ember)
7	6	GENTLE ON MY MIND.....Dean Martin (Reprise)
9	7	MONSIEUR DUPONT.....Sandie Shaw (Pye)
12	8	FIRST OF MAY.....Bee Gees (Polydor)
5	9	I'M GONNA MAKE YOU LOVE ME.....Supremes/Temptations (Tamla Motown)
4	10	HALF AS NICE.....Aman Corner (Intermediate)

15 YEARS AGO

Week ending March 20, 1954

Last This Week
3	1	LITTLE CHILDREN.....Billy J. Kramer (Parlophone)
1	2	ANYONE WHO HAD A HEART.....Cilla Black (Parlophone)
5	3	NOT FADE AWAY.....Rolling Stones (Decca)
2	4	BITS AND PIECES.....Dave Clark Five (Columbia)
7	5	JUST ONE LOOK.....Hollies (Parlophone)
6	6	DIANE.....Bachelors (Decca)
14	7	I LOVE YOU BECAUSE.....Jim Reeves (RCA)
6	8	I THINK OF YOU.....Merseybeats (Fontana)
9	9	BOYS CRY.....Eddi Kane (Fontana-London)
13	10	THAT GIRL BELONGS TO YESTERDAY.....Gene Pitney (United Artists)

CHARTS

SINGLES

Week ending March 17, 1979

This Last Week			Highest position Weeks in chart
1	(3)	OLIVER'S ARMY.....Elvis Costello (Radar)	5 1
2	(1)	TRAGEDY.....Bee Gees (RSO)	4 1
3	(4)	I WILL SURVIVE.....Gloria Gaynor (Polydor)	6 3
3	(5)	LUCKY NUMBER.....Lene Lovich (Stiff)	3 3
5	(9)	CAN YOU FEEL THE FORCE.....Real Thing (Pye)	3 5
6	(14)	SOMETHING ELSE.....Sex Pistols (Virgin)	2 6
6	(20)	PAINTER MAN.....Boney M (Atlantic/Hansa)	2 6
8	(2)	HEART OF GLASS.....Blondie (Chrysalis)	8 1
9	(16)	I WANT YOUR LOVE.....Chic (Atlantic)	3 9
10	(19)	KEEP ON DANCIN'.....Gary's Gang (CBS)	3 10
11	(6)	CONTACT.....Edwin Starr (20th Century)	6 4
12	(11)	GET DOWN.....Gene Chandler (20th Century)	6 9
13	(17)	INTO THE VALLEY.....Skids (Virgin)	3 13
14	(8)	GET IT.....Darts (Magnet)	4 14
15	(7)	CHIKUITTA.....Abba (Epic)	6 1
16	(22)	MONEY IN MY POCKET.....Dennis Brown (Atlantic)	2 16
17	(—)	WAITING FOR AN ALIBI.....Thin Lizzy (Vertigo)	1 17
18	(26)	DON'T STOP ME NOW.....Queen (EMI)	3 18
19	(—)	YOU BET YOUR LOVE.....Herbie Hancock (CBS)	4 19
20	(13)	SOUND OF THE SUBURBS.....Members (Virgin)	5 13
21	(—)	CLOG DANCE.....Violinski (Jet)	1 21
22	(30)	ENGLISH CIVIL WAR.....Clash (CBS)	2 22
23	(12)	I WAS MADE FOR DANCIN'.....Leif Garrett (Atlantic)	7 6
24	(10)	WOMAN IN LOVE.....Three Degrees (Ariola)	8 3
25	(—)	FOREVER IN BLUE JEANS.....Neil Diamond (CBS)	1 25
26	(—)	HONEY I'M LOST.....Dooleys (GTO)	1 26
27	(15)	AIN'T LOVE A BITCH.....Rod Stewart (Rival)	6 10
28	(21)	HOLD THE LINE.....Toto (CBS)	3 21
29	(—)	TURN THE MUSIC UP.....Players Association (Vanguard)	1 29
30	(—)	SULTANS OF SWING.....Dire Straits (Vertigo)	1 30

BUBBLING UNDER...
CUBA — Gibson Brothers (Island); TRASH — Roxy Music (Polydor); IMPERIAL WIZARD — David Essex (Mercury); DISCO NIGHTS — G.O. (Arista).

U.S. SINGLES

Week ending March 17, 1979

This Last Week			Highest position Weeks in chart
1	(3)	TRAGEDY.....Bee Gees	4 1
2	(2)	DO YA THINK I'M SEXY.....Rod Stewart	5 1
3	(1)	I WILL SURVIVE.....Gloria Gaynor	6 3
4	(4)	HEAVEN KNOWS.....Donna Summer	3 3
5	(8)	SHAKE YOUR GROOVE THING.....Peaches and Herb	3 5
6	(8)	WHAT A FOOL BELIEVES.....Doobie Brothers	3 5
7	(5)	FIRE.....Pointer Sisters	3 5
8	(11)	SULTANS OF SWING.....Dire Straits	3 5
9	(9)	Y.M.C.A.....Village People	3 5
10	(10)	DON'T CRY OUT LOUD.....Melissa Manchester	3 5
11	(12)	WHAT YOU WON'T DO FOR LOVE.....Bobby Caldwell	3 5
12	(16)	EVERY TIME I THINK OF YOU.....The Babys	3 5
13	(7)	A LITTLE MORE LOVE.....Olivia Newton-John	3 5
14	(18)	LADY.....Little River Band	3 5
15	(20)	BIG SHOT.....Billy Joel	3 5
16	(25)	MUSIC BOX DANCER.....Frank Mills	3 5
17	(19)	CRAZY LOVE.....Poco	3 5
18	(24)	KNOCK ON WOOD.....Ami Stewart	3 5
19	(21)	I DON'T KNOW IF IT'S RIGHT.....Evelyn "Champagne" King	3 5
20	(15)	LE FREAK.....Chic	3 5
21	(23)	I JUST FALL IN LOVE AGAIN.....Anne Murray	3 5
22	(13)	THE GAMBLER.....Kenny Rogers	3 5
23	(27)	STUMBLIN' IN.....Suzi Quatro/Chris Norman	3 5
24	(26)	FOREVER IN BLUE JEANS.....Neil Diamond	3 5
25	(17)	DANCIN' SHOES.....Nigel Olsson	3 5
26	(—)	HEART OF GLASS.....Blondie	3 5
27	(28)	SONG ON THE RADIO.....Al Stewart	3 5
28	(—)	LIVIN' IT UP (FRIDAY NIGHT).....Bail & James	3 5
29	(—)	PRECIOUS LOVE.....Bob Welch	3 5
30	(—)	MAYBE I'M A FOOL.....Eddie Money	3 5

Courtesy "CASH BOX"

ALBUMS

Week ending March 17, 1979

This Last Week			Highest position Weeks in chart
1	(1)	PARALLEL LINES.....Blondie (Chrysalis)	22 1
2	(2)	SPIRITS HAVING FLOWN.....Bee Gees (RSO)	6 2
3	(10)	MANILOW MAGIC.....Barry Manilow (Arista)	2 3
4	(3)	ARMED FORCES.....Elvis Costello (Radar)	9 2
5	(16)	C'EST CHIC.....Chic (Atlantic)	6 5
6	(5)	THANK YOU VERY MUCH.....Cliff Richard & The Shadows (EMI)	4 5
7	(5)	MARTY ROBBINS COLLECTION.....Marty Robbins (Lotus)	5 5
8	(12)	THE BEST OF EARTH WIND AND FIRE VOL. 1.....CBS	10 5
9	(7)	BLONDES HAVE MORE FUN.....Rod Stewart (Rival)	15 2
10	(21)	THE GREAT ROCK 'N' ROLL SWINDLE.....Sex Pistols (Virgin)	2 10
11	(15)	52nd STREET.....Billy Joel (CBS)	8 11
12	(—)	LIVE (X CERT).....Stranglers (United Artists)	1 12
13	(4)	ACTION REPLAY.....Various (K-Tel)	9 2
14	(9)	STRANGERS IN THE NIGHT.....UFO (Chrysalis)	5 8
15	(8)	NEW BOOTS & PANTIES.....Ian Dury & The Blockheads (Stiff)	43 5
16	(11)	BAT OUT OF HELL.....Meat Loaf (Epic)	27 6
17	(14)	EQUINOX.....Jean Michel Jarre (Polydor)	12 6
18	(17)	DIRE STRAITS.....Dire Straits (Vertigo)	2 17
19	(22)	GREASE.....Original Soundtrack (RSO)	35 1
20	(20)	OUT OF THE BLUE.....Electric Light Orchestra (Jet)	62 3
21	(13)	WINGS GREATEST.....Wings (Parlophone)	12 3
22	(30)	20 GREATEST HITS.....Three Degrees (Epic)	3 22
23	(—)	AT THE BUDDOKAN.....Cheap Trick (Epic)	1 23
24	(19)	THE INCREDIBLE SHRINKING DICKIES.....Dickies (A & M)	4 19
25	(28)	WAR OF THE WORLDS.....Jeff Wayne (CBS)	98 2
26	(29)	INFLAMMABLE MATERIAL.....Stiff Little Fingers (Rough Trade)	2 26
27	(25)	TURN TO THE MUSIC.....Players Association (Vanguard)	2 25
28	(—)	NEW DIMENSIONS.....Three Degrees (Ariola)	1 28
29	(—)	FEETS DON'T FAIL ME NOW.....Herbie Hancock (CBS)	1 29
30	(17)	20 GOLDEN GREATS.....Neil Diamond (MCA)	17 1

BUBBLING UNDER...
FEEL NO FRET — Average White Band (RCA); MANIFESTO — Roxy Music (Polydor); LOOK SHARP — Joe Jackson (Epic).

U.S. ALBUMS

Week ending March 17, 1979

This Last Week			Highest position Weeks in chart
1	(1)	SPIRITS HAVING FLOWN.....Bee Gees	6 2
2	(3)	MINUTE BY MINUTE.....Doobie Brothers	2 3
3	(2)	BLONDES HAVE MORE FUN.....Rod Stewart	15 2
4	(4)	DIRE STRAITS.....Dire Straits	2 17
5	(6)	52nd STREET.....Billy Joel	8 11
6	(5)	BRIEF CASE FULL OF BLUES.....Blues Brothers	2 17
7	(8)	CRUISIN'.....Village People	2 17
8	(9)	LOVE TRACKS.....Gloria Gaynor	2 17
9	(7)	TOTALLY HOT.....Olivia Newton-John	2 17
10	(10)	ARMED FORCES.....Elvis Costello & The Attractions	2 17
11	(13)	2 HOT!.....Peaches & Herb	2 17
12	(11)	C'EST CHIC.....Chic	6 5
13	(14)	LIVE AND MORE.....Donna Summer	2 3
14	(15)	LIFE FOR THE TAKING.....Eddie Money	2 17
15	(18)	BUSTIN' OUT OF SEVEN.....Rick James	2 17
16	(12)	TOTO.....Toto	2 17
17	(17)	ENERGY.....Pointer Sisters	2 17
18	(25)	CHEAP TRICK AT THE BUDDOKAN.....Cheap Trick	1 23
19	(20)	GOLD.....Jefferson Starship	2 17
20	(16)	THE BEST OF EARTH, WIND & FIRE VOL. 1.....Earth, Wind & Fire	10 5
21	(19)	NICOLETTE.....Nicolette Larson	2 17
22	(21)	BARBARA STREISAND'S GREATEST HITS VOL. 2.....Barbara Streisand	2 17
23	(24)	THE GAMBLER.....Kenny Rogers	2 17
24	(22)	GREATEST HITS.....Barry Manilow	2 17
25	(29)	THE CARS.....The Cars	2 17
26	(23)	DOUBLE VISION.....Foreigner	2 17
27	(—)	LEGEND.....Poco	2 17
28	(27)	YOU DON'T BRING ME FLOWERS.....Neil Diamond	2 17
29	(26)	BACKLESS.....Eric Clapton	2 17
30	(—)	HEAD FIRST.....The Babys	2 17

Courtesy "CASH BOX"

IGGY'S BIG GIGS —18 dates confirmed

MOST OF THE dates and venues have now been confirmed for the spring tour of Britain by Iggy Pop, plans for which were exclusively revealed by NME four weeks ago. A total of 18 dates, including two in London, has so far been set by promoter John Giddings of the MAM Organisation. To tie in with the tour, Iggy's new album 'New Values' is being released by Arista, with whom he has just signed an exclusive deal.

Iggy visits Manchester Russell Club on April 20, then plays two shows at Liverpool Eric's (21), followed by Sheffield Top Rank (22), London Camden Music Machine (25), Cromer West Runton Pavilion (27), Leicester University (28), Redcar Coatham Bowl (29), Edinburgh Tiffany's (30), Glasgow Apollo Centre (May 1), Birmingham Barbarella's (4), Colchester Essex University (5), Dunstable Civic Hall

(6), Bristol Locarno (8), Brighton Sussex University (9), Coventry Warwick University (10), Newcastle Mayfair (11), Leeds University (12) and London Strand Lyceum (13).

Tickets for both London gigs are all priced at £3, and should be available this weekend; prices vary elsewhere, and readers should contact individual box-offices for details.

The line-up of Iggy's new touring band has now been confirmed officially and, as forecast last week, it includes former Sex Pistols and Rich Kids bassist Glen Matlock. The other personnel are Tangerine Dream drummer Klaus Kruger; guitarist Jackie Clarke, who was like & Tina Turner's band leader and played with the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band; and keyboard man Scott Thurston who's been working with Iggy for some time. They can all be seen in action when Iggy guests in BBC 2's 'Old Grey Whistle Test' for screening on Tuesday, April 24.

MAGAZINE'S HEADLINERS

MAGAZINE follow their recent 12-date college series by setting our next month on the most important tour they have yet undertaken. It comprises 18 concerts at leading venues throughout the country, including a major London appearance at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane. It ties in with the March 30 release by Virgin of the band's new album 'Second Hand Daylight', and the tour dates — for which tickets are now on sale at most venues — are:

Malvern Winter Gardens (April 16), Blackburn King George's Hall (17), Sheffield Top Rank (18), Leicester De Montfort Hall (19), Aberdeen University (21), Fife St. Andrew's University (22), Manchester Apollo (23), Newcastle City Hall (25), Birmingham Odeon (27), Southampton Guildhall (28), Oxford New Theatre (29), Bristol Colston Hall (30), Hemel Hempstead Pavilion (May 1), London Drury Lane Theatre Royal (2), Canterbury Odeon (3), Cambridge Corn Exchange (4), Leeds University (5) and Liverpool Empire (6). One or two more dates may be added.

Magazine's HOWARD DEVOTO

RAR package in Ally Pally rally

IT HAS NOW been confirmed, as forecast by NME, that Rock Against Racism's 'Militant Entertainment Tour' will climax in a massive concert at London's Alexandra Palace on Easter Saturday (April 14) — and the first three bands to be set are Aswad, The Angelic Upstarts and The Ruks, with at least another three still to be finalised.

Another two dates have been added to the package tour — at Middlesbrough Teesside Polytechnic on March 24 (Barry Forde Band, The Leyton Buzzards, The Piranhas and The Barbarians) and Bradford College Students Union on March 30 (Carol Grimes Band, The Mekons, 15-16 and 17 and Little Fingers).

Line-up for the first 14 shows was reported two weeks ago, and the bill for Cardiff Sophia Gardens on April 7 is now set as Aswad, The Angelic Upstarts, Crisis and a local band. These leave another five provincial gigs for which bands have still to be announced. The Aberdeen show on March 29 is switched from Ruffles to the Music Hall.

Besides appearing in several of the RAR shows, The Leyton Buzzards also headline their own gig at London Marquee on March 27.

Absent Member

THE MEMBERS missed a couple of nights on the Eddie & The Hot Rods tour earlier this week, because bassist Chris Payne is suffering from nervous exhaustion. But they have now picked up the tour again, with replacement — Paddy Carroll standing in for Payne.

Siouxsie at Rainbow

SIUXSIE & The Banshees, who aren't planning to go on the road for the time being, have nevertheless decided to headline a major one-off London concert — a charity event in aid of the National Society for Mentally Handicapped Children. It's at the Rainbow Theatre on Saturday, April 7, and the concert also features The Human League and Renna Rema. The show is promoted by Dave Woods and Pure Noise Ltd., and all artists and organisers are giving their services free of charge in order to help this worthy cause — ticket prices are: £3, £2.50 and £2. Release of Siouxsie and the band's second Polydor single 'The Staircase' has been slightly delayed, and is now set for March 23.

Blondie for TV special

BLONDIE are definitely coming to Britain next month, it was confirmed this week. They are filming one of Granada-TV's new hour-long in-concert series 'On The Road'. It will be taped before an audience at a secret venue, for screening on the full ITV network late night on Saturday, May 5. (As reported, other acts to be showcased in this new series include Earth Wind & Fire, David Essex, Tina Turner and Kate Bush, with Gerry Rafferty now added to the list). It's still not clear if Blondie will be playing any public concerts on this visit, but — in view of recording commitments in the States, it's now looking doubtful.

Aerosmith in one-off — AND NUGENT DUE IN MAY

AEROSMITH pay their long-awaited visit to Britain in May, as part of a whirlwind European tour, but they're only coming in for one solitary concert — it's at London Hammersmith Odeon on Sunday, May 20. Tickets go on sale tomorrow (Friday), priced £3.50, £3 and £2.50.

They are being brought in by Straight Music, as part of that company's continuing heavy metal onslaught, and they are also in the process of lining up a short May visit by Ted Nugent. Details of Nugent's concerts were still being finalised at press-time, but are expected to be announced next week, and are likely to include a show at Hammersmith.

Aerosmith's line-up is unchanged since their last visit, but Nugent now has a new band comprising Cliff Davies

AEROSMITH

(drums), Charlie Huhn (vocals and rhythm guitar) and John Sauter (bass), the latter two now having permanently replaced Rob Grange and Derek St. Holmes. It's expected that CBS will be issuing new albums by both acts in May.

NEWS

ROD STEWART

In our publication of November 11, 1978, we published a report of a football charity match in which Rod Stewart participated. It has been drawn to our attention that we may have described him in such a way as to impute homosexual tendencies. Such an imputation would be wholly groundless, and we apologise to him for any distress or embarrassment which may have been caused.

Motorhead: London extra

MOTORHEAD, whose major British tour opens next weekend, have added a second concert at London's Lyceum Ballroom to their schedule. Due to heavy demand for tickets for their original April 1 date at the venue, the band will now also appear there on Good Friday (April 13). And they have also slotted in an extra gig at the very beginning of the tour — at Cromer West Runton Pavilion on March 23. The tour also provides something of a novelty, in that the support act throughout is all-girl heavy metal band Girlschool.

TOM ROBINSON BAND have also chosen an all-girl band to support them on their upcoming 19-date tour, reported last week. They are Leeds-based four-piece The Straits, and they are seen together in our pic above.

'OH BOY!' TV RETURN AND MORE CONCERTS

JACK GOOD's memorable TV rock series of two decades ago 'Oh Boy!' is returning to the small screen in the autumn. ATV are filming six half-hour shows in May for network transmission, probably starting in late September.

And Good's string of 'Oh Boy!' rock concerts in January at London's Astoria Theatre were so successful that he's presenting another eight at the same venue — on Sundays, April 1, 8, 15 and 22 (two shows each day) — probably with the same cast including Alvin Stardust, Joe Brown, Fumble, Shakin' Stevens, Les Gray and Freddie 'Fingers' Lee. The TV series is likely to have a different cast for each show.

KOKOMO CONCERT FOR PATTO FUND

KOKOMO have now been confirmed as headliners of a special charity concert, in aid of Mike Patto's widow and children. As reported last week, Patto died earlier in the month after a long battle against throat cancer. The gig takes place at London Camden Dingwalls next Wednesday (21), and among others taking part are The Voice Squad, the Carol Grimes Band and The Retainers. Admission is £2.25. BO DIDDLEY, who topped what was intended to be a one-off at London Lyceum last Sunday, is playing another last-minute gig before he leaves the country. He'll be at Dingwalls tonight (Thursday).

Eagles land in autumn

THE EAGLES are returning to Britain in the autumn for a series of major concert appearances — that's the word this week from their record company. There were plans for the band's new album to be released next month, but it's now been delayed indefinitely, because they've decided to expand it into a double set. Said a WEA spokesman: "So far they've only completed 13 backing tracks, but they have an early summer deadline for completion, because that's when they're due to go to Japan. And we're told by their management that they'll be doing a European tour, including Britain, in the autumn."

GLORIA GAYNOR

Palladium stints by Gloria, Helen

GLORIA GAYNOR comes to Britain early next month, hot on the heels of her smash hit single 'I Will Survive', to play eight major concerts within the space of five days. She opens with two shows at Manchester Apollo on April 3, and the following night plays another two performances at Glasgow Apollo. Her visit climaxes in a string of three nights at the London Palladium — April 5 (one show), 6 (one show) and 7 (two shows).

Tickets are on sale now from the respective box-offices and usual agencies priced £4, £3 and £2 (Manchester and Glasgow) and £6, £5, £4, £3 and £2.50 (London). She'll be bringing over her backing band The Gloria Gaynor Experience, with whom she's been touring very extensively in the States. Her new album 'Love Tracks' has just been issued by Polydor.

HELEN REDDY pays her long-awaited visit to Britain at the end of next month, when the highlight of her visit will be a week-long engagement at the London Palladium from Monday, April 30, to Saturday, May 5. Tickets are on sale now priced £9.50, £6, £3.50 and £2.50.

Bishops' Zen is injured; gigs off

THE BISHOPS' rhythm and slide guitarist Zenon de Fleur was badly injured in a road accident at the weekend, though he is now off the critical list. The band have been forced to cancel a few dates, but are hoping to pick up the rest of their March commitments using a stand-in. But there's some doubt as to whether their May tour will be able to go ahead as planned.

CHERRY VANILLA is back in Britain after a ten-month absence, and will be going out on the road again in the early spring to coincide with the release of her recently completed new album. Meanwhile, she has a single issued by RCA on April 6 titled 'Moonlight'.

HELEN REDDY

—AND ANOTHER TWO CONCERTS FOR KATE

KATE BUSH has added another two nights at the London Palladium to her debut concert tour itinerary, reported two weeks ago. This is because her original three dates at the venue (April 16-18) sold out within hours of the box-office opening on Monday of last week. The extra gigs are on Thursday and Friday, April 19 and 20, and tickets are available immediately.

Her provincial concerts have also sold out, and there's a good chance of a few more performances being added. Kate and her seven-piece band will be playing the entire two-hour show themselves, with no support act — but, said a spokesman, with plenty of surprise!

DUSTY SPRINGFIELD, whose UK comeback tour was announced last week, has added one more concert to her itinerary — at Blackburn King George's Hall on Easter Sunday (April 15).

RECORD NEWS

● The original version of Blondie's hit 'Denis' — by Randy & The Rainbows — is included in a compilation album out this week on Ensign. It consists of 20 vintage tracks from the U.S. Laurie catalogue, among them 'Sweet Talkin' Guy' by The Chiffons and 'I Wonder Why' by Dion & The Belmonts.

● Graham Parker & The Rumour's previously-reported fifth album 'Squeezing Out Sparks' is now officially on release. The Vertigo set was produced by Jack Nitzsche.

● Lowell George has at last finished his long-awaited solo album 'Thanks I'll Eat It Here', and it's issued by Warner Brothers on April 6; it includes guest appearances by Bonnie Raitt, J. D. Souther, John Phillips, Nicky Hopkins and two other Little Feat members. Meanwhile, Little Feat themselves are busy recording a new LP.

● Doll by Doll have their album, with their name as its title, issued by the Automatic Record Company (distributed by WEA) on March 23.

● WEA have signed a licensing deal with Carole Records for British distribution. First singles under the agreement, due in late April, are 'Who Were You With In The Moonlight' by Dollar and 'Seven Lonely Days' by Sheila S. Devotion.

● 'Van Halen 2' is the title of the American band's second album, for Warner Brothers release on March 30. And negotiations are under way for them to tour Britain again in June.

● George Thorogood & The Destroyers, currently touring Britain, have a double-single issued by Sonet this week. It retails at normal single price and consists of two album tracks, 'So Much Trouble' and 'Can't Stop Lovin'', plus two previously unissued live cuts — 'I'm Ready' and 'New Hawaiian Boogie'.

● Showeddywaddy's latest Arista single, out this week, is their version of another oldie 'Remember When'.

● Rok Records first four singles, out this week, each feature two up-and-coming bands. They are 'Get Ready To Go' by Squire (from Woking) / 'Doing The Flea' by Coming Shortly (Milton Keynes), 'You' by Just Frank (Leeds) / 'Just Don't Try' by Split Screens (Oxford), 'Just Can't Let You' by The V.I.P.s (Clapham) / 'Wild Boys In Cortinas' by Urban Disturbance (Swindon) and 'Gotta Change My Life' by Hezard (Cambridge) / 'No Good For Me' by The Clerks (Birmingham).

STEVE HILLAGE

● Steve Hillage and Miquette Graydon have composed, performed and produced a project LP — featuring guitar and synthesizer music only — for use at the forthcoming Festival For Mind, Body And Spirit to be held at London Olympia. Titled 'Rainbow Dome Music', it will be played continuously throughout the event. And it's being issued by Virgin in clear vinyl on April 12, at the budget price of £2.99.

● Devo's debut album 'Are We Not Men? We Are Devo!' is available as a Virgin picture disc from this week, priced £8.99. Devo are currently working in Los Angeles on their second album, for late May release.

● The Fabulous Poodles' upcoming single 'Workaholic' will be issued here by Pye with whom they have an exclusive worldwide deal, and not through Polydor.

● Lightning / WEA are releasing a series of ten picture-disc reissues of classic oldies on April 6. They include 'Bird Dog' by The Everly Brothers, 'Dream Lover' / 'Mack The Knife' by Bobby Darin, 'Poetry In Motion' by Johnny Tillotson, 'To Know Him Is To Love Him' by The Teddy Bears and 'Save The Last Dance For Me' by The Drifters. A few will couple two different artists on one disc, as with 'Let's Dance' by Chet Holmes backed with 'Memphis' by Lennie Hayt. They're issued in a limited edition, selling at £1.50 each.

Ex-Dogs form new band

TWO LEADING members of the now-defunct Slaughter & The Dogs — guitarist Mike Rossi and bassist Howard Bates — have formed a new hard rock band called Studio Sweethearts, together with Billy Duffy (rhythm guitar) and ex-Eater drummer Phil Rowland. They've been rehearsing for some time, and have already been signed by DJM Records, where they'll be produced by Vic Mello. Initial product is expected shortly. Our picture shows (from left to right) Duffy, Rossi, Bates and Rowland.

Otway's personal promo

JOHN OTWAY has come up with a unique way of promoting his new single 'Frightened And Scared', released by Polydor on March 23. Mixed in with the first shipment will be three copies featuring only the backing tracks — and no vocals! And whoever buys one of these copies will find Otway on his or her doorstep, waiting to sing the song to them in person!

Details of how to arrange an Otway visit, should you acquire a non-vocal copy, are contained on the sleeves — but Otway says he's prepared to travel all over the country to fit the missing vocals to the backing tracks.

Otway is the subject of a documentary called 'Stardust Man' to be screened by some ITV regions, including London, late night on March 22.

Includes new single MYSTERY DANCE

Duncan Green

NEW ALBUM
MCF 2875

IN THE DARK

"Music that makes you crank the record player up till the room's shaking... I love it. Really the whole album merits your immediate attention. The Runaways were NEVER like this." Sounds

MCA RECORDS

© 1 Great Parkway, London W18 7TH

Date Sheet

RADIO STARS have added another date to their current tour at London College of Printing on March 23, when they are joined on the bill by Bobby Henry and Shrink. And their postponed gig at Northampton County Ground has now been rescheduled for March 24. Speculation that bassist Martin Gordon had left the band has now been confirmed officially, and he's been replaced in the line-up by ex-Sparks sideman Trevor White.

THE FALL go on tour to promote their first album 'Live At The Witch Trials', issued by Step Forward Records this weekend. So far set are York Pop Club (March 21), London Lyceum (25), Liverpool Eric's (30), Birmingham Barbarella's (April 3), Newport Stowaway (4), Winstford Knight Grange Barn (5), Nottingham Sandpiper (14), Plymouth Tops (17), Dawlish Grand Hotel (18), Sheffield Limit (28), Norwich Boogie House (May 3) and Bolton Polytechnic (12).

ADAM & THE ANTS are playing a short string of four gigs over the next few days — at Norwich St. Andrew's Hall (Monday, Thursday), Rerford Porthouse (Friday), Reading University Students Union (Saturday) and Bishops Stortford Triad Leisure Centre (next Monday). For the Reading show, admission to the general public is only available by advance booking through Rough Trade.

WILKO JOHNSON'S Solid Sanders, who were forced to cancel their projected appearance at London Camden Electric Ballroom on March 7 because the promoter allegedly 'disappeared', have now fixed another London date by way of compensation — it's at Camden Music Machine on Saturday, March 24.

POYNTER Folk Festival is being staged again this year for the seventh time. The three-day event takes place from Good Friday to Easter Sunday (April 13-15), and among the 32 acts booked so far are Earl Oun, Stu McFarlane, Jimmy Collins, Wayland Smithy, Ticklers Jam and Tom Shepley's Band. Admission to the Poynter Folk Centre (on the A523 between Stockport and Macclesfield) is £4.50 for the full weekend. Enquiries to 09967 5555.

GERRY & THE PACEMAKERS, Billy J. Kramer & The Dakotas and Dave Berry are among acts taking part in a rock revival concert at London Rainbow on Sunday, April 29. And in June, Berry headlines a Sixties Revival Package Tour, appearing again at the Rainbow as well as nine other major venues around the country.

DIANE SOLOMON headlines a series of round Britain concert appearances next month, and details are currently being finalised by promoter Robert Paterson. First confirmed date is Croydon Fairfield Hall on April 14.

BANDIT are going on the road for the first time since ex-Procol Harum guitarist Mick Grahame joined their line-up. They will be special guests in the previously-reported 26-date concert tour next month by John Miles (April 2-29).

THE RED CRAYOLA, along with Laura Logic and Scotti Pollitt, tour Britain from next week to early April. First confirmed dates are Nottingham Sandpiper (March 23), Cheltenham Plough (24), Rugby Railway Club (26), London Acland Hall (30), Manchester The Factory (31), York Pop Club (April 4) and London Action Space (5).

MISTRESS, the Lancashire all-girl band, have reshaped their line-up which now reads Denny Gibson (bass and vocals), Joan Bimson (lead guitar), Donna Darlow (keyboards) and Karen Sass (drums). Upcoming gigs include Burnley The Hop (March 20), Stoke Gately (22), Leeds Yeoman Peacock (26), Liverpool Masonic (31) and Blackpool Welcome Inn (April 6 and 7).

RULE THE ROOST, the Irish band who were scheduled to open a British one-nighter tour last weekend, have been forced to cancel all dates because of the illness of lead singer Hugo Blake who is suffering from appendicitis. They plan to re-schedule the tour for early June.

PATRICK FITZGERALD plays a rare, possibly unique, matinee performance at London Halington Hope & Anchor on Saturday, March 31 — with admission for under-18's costing just 30p. He's already set to appear at the venue the previous evening, and will leave his gear there overnight for the matinee show. Another new gig is at Dublin Trinity College on March 29.

THE CURE have added four new gigs to their current tour — at London W.C.1 Conway Hall, Red Lion Square (March 27), Cromer West Runtin Pavilion (30), Chippinham Technical College (April 3) and Chesterfield Fusion Top Rank (5).

AFTER THE FIRE have new gigs at Middleborough Tessaide Polytechnic (tonight, Thursday), Sheffield Limit (Friday), Reading Bui-mershe College (Saturday), Port Talbot Troubadour (March 23), Tonypandy Naval Club (24), Newbridge Memorial Hall (25), Milton Keynes Crawford Club (26), Swindon Brunel Rooms (27), London Marquee (30), Broomfield Harnik Club (31), York Pop Club (4) and Warrington Lion Hotel (7).

INNER CIRCLE, the reggae band who've just completed a UK tour with the Average White Band, will be undertaking their own headlining British and European tour in April. Prior to this, they play warm-up gigs at Egham Royal Holloway College (tomorrow, Friday), Colchester Essex University (Saturday) and London Marquee (March 22 and 23).

MAX WEBSTER, the Canadian rock band whose second album 'A Million Vacations' is due out shortly on Capitol, are to support Rush on their previously-reported 19-date British tour opening April 23.

FRANKIE MILLER: EXTRA 15 DATES

FRANKIE MILLER'S tour itinerary has now been completed and, in addition to his initial gigs exclusively reported last week, another 15 dates have now been confirmed — making a total of 25 concerts in all. The extra bookings include a major London appearance at Hammersmith and four shows in Ireland. And as reported, the tour ties in with the release this weekend of his new Chrysalis album 'Falling in Love'.

The new dates are at Reading Hexagon Theatre (March 23), Ayr Pavilion (April 4), Edinburgh Odeon (6), Redcar Coatham Bowl (8), Tunbridge Wells Assembly Rooms (12), Aylesbury Friars (14), Sheffield Top Rank (15), Bristol Locarno (16), Cork Arcadia (19), Dublin Stardust (20), Portrush Arcadia (21), Belfast Ulster Hall (23), Liverpool University (25), Aberystwyth University (27) and London Hammersmith Odeon (29). And there's a date switch for the gig at Cleethorpes Winter Gardens, which moves from March 26 to April 10.

Essex adds eight more

DAVID ESSEX has added eight new venues to his upcoming UK tour. The first five extra dates come at the beginning of the tour, which now kicks off at Southport New Theatre tomorrow (Friday), followed by Blackburn King George's Hall (17), Stoke Jollies (18), Sheffield Fiesta (19) and Wakefield Theatre Club (20). The other three new bookings tack on to the end of the original itinerary — at Preston Guildhall (April 6), Liverpool Royal Court (7) and Leeds Grand Theatre (8). Additionally, Essex is now playing two performances on his dates at Newcastle City Hall (March 27), Hull Dorchester Theatre (28), Coventry Theatre (31) and Portsmouth Guildhall (April 4).

GRAND HOTEL FOR HEADLINING DATES

GRAND HOTEL, who've just completed a series of nationwide dates supporting Cheap Trick, are back on the road this week in their own right. Dates set so far are Burton 76 Club (tomorrow, Friday), Nottingham Boat Club (Saturday), Uxbridge Brunel University (Sunday), York Revolution (March 21), Kirtlington Country Club (23), Manchester Polytechnic (24), Leeds Flord Green Hotel (25), Hatfield Polytechnic (29), Scarborough Penthouse (30), Rerford Porthouse (31), Norwich Boogie House (April 1), London Woolwich Tramshed (3), Wolverhampton Lafayette (6), Birmingham Barbarella's (7) and Jack-sdale Grey Topper (8). These are their first headlining dates since the release of their debut CBS album 'Do Not Distrib'.

Digance back on the club circuit

RICHARD DIGANCE, now an established concert performer, returns next month to the folk club circuit for the first time in four years. Object of the exercise is to debut new material before recording his next Chrysalis album. Dates confirmed so far are Stevenage Leisure Centre (April 1), Swansea White Swan (3), Reading Cap & Gown (5), Betchworth Red Lion (6), Portsmouth Centre Hotel (8), Cheltenham Plough (15), Brentwood Youth Centre (17), Sherborne-St John Cob & Pen (20), Leeds Packhorse (21), Hitchin Talisman Club (22), Trowbridge Lamb Inn (23), Alton Market Hotel (25), St. Ives Manchester Arms (26), Milton Keynes Stantonbury Campus (27), Birmingham Hare and Hounds (28), Islwyn Folk Club (29), London Putney Half Moon (30), Sutton Red Lion (May 3), Bristol Stonehouse (4) and Coventry Burnt Post Club (6).

Oldfield: two in provinces

MIKE OLDFIELD, already set for six major London concerts at the end of next month, has now added two provincial dates to his itinerary — at Birmingham National Exhibition Centre (May 6) and Manchester Belle Vue King's Hall (7). Tickets at both venues cost £5, £4 and £3, and postal bookings are being accepted immediately — for Birmingham, write to Midland Concerts Promotions, Cooper House, Brockhurst Crescent, Walsall, West Midlands; for Manchester, to the box-office.

Tickets will be on sale to personal applicants at box-offices and leading local record stores from March 19 (Birmingham) and March 26 (Manchester). These two gigs will give another 13,000 people the opportunity of seeing Oldfield performing with the 45-piece orchestra, with whom he is currently touring Europe.

Giltrap in town

GORDON GILTRAP makes two London appearances next week, as the climax to his current tour. Together with his band, he's at The Venue in Victoria next Monday and Tuesday (19-20). Admission is £3.

● TINA TURNER also has a late booking at The Venue, in addition to her other two London appearances. It's this Saturday (17), when she plays two shows at 9pm and midnight. Admission is £4.

BURL IVES FOR HUGE UK TOUR

DATES AND VENUES have now been confirmed for the massive spring tour by near-legendary folk performer Burl Ives. In addition to his previously reported concert at London Royal Festival Hall on April 16, over 30 more dates have been set — and these are:

Hull New Theatre (April 12), Wolverhampton Civic Hall (17), Reading Hexagon (18), Portsmouth Guildhall (19), Croydon Fairfield Hall (20), Preston Guildhall (22), Malvern Winter Gardens (23), Leicester De Montfort Hall (24), Brighton Dome (25), Halifax Civic Theatre (27), Derby Assembly Rooms (28), Leeds Grand Theatre (29), Cheltenham Central Hall (May 4), London Woolwich Odeon (5), Weymouth Pavilion (6), Bournemouth Winter Gardens (7), Manley Victoria Hall (11), Liverpool Philharmonic Hall (13), Nottingham Albert Hall (15), Peterborough ABC (16), Aberdeen Capitol (18), Usher Hall (19), Manchester Free Trade Hall (20), Glasgow Theatre Royal (23 and 24), Kilburn Gaumont State (27), Blackpool ABC (28), Eastbourne Congress (29), Slough Fulcrum Centre (31) and Ely Cathedral (June 1).

Prior to the tour proper and before he goes to Europe, Ives plays at Oxford University Sheldonian Theatre this Saturday. And to complete his schedule, there are plans for him to give an open-air concert in a London park on June 3. He'll also be making several TV appearances during his visit.

Sabbath's new phase

BLACK SABBATH begin a new phase of their career this month, by signing an exclusive personal management deal with top agent and Jet Records chief Don Arden, who is now busy clearing up the many business and legal problems that have dogged the band for so long. They're about to start work in America on their new album, using a top US producer (instead of producing it themselves, as in the past), and they plan to tour Britain later in the year.

STRAIGHT MUSIC & WATKINS ARE PRESENTING

TINA TURNER

HAMMERSMITH ODEON
QUEEN CAROLINE ST W 6
FRIDAY 16th MARCH at 7-30
Tickets £5.00 £3.00 £2.00 (incl. VAT) Advance Theatre Box Office Tel: 4081 London Theatre Bookings: Shaftesbury Ave. 419 3371 Premier Box Office, 240 2246, Usual Agents or on night

BIRMINGHAM ODEON
NEW STREET
SUNDAY 18th MARCH at 7-30
Tickets £3.00 £2.00 £1.00 (incl. VAT) Advance Theatre Box Office Tel: 4081 London Theatre Bookings: Shaftesbury Ave. 419 3371 Premier Box Office, 240 2246, Usual Agents or on night

STRAIGHT MUSIC PRESENTS

CULTURE

WITH GUESTS
TRIBESMAN

RAINBOW THEATRE
232 SEVEN SISTERS ROAD N 1
SAT/SUN 24th/25th MARCH at 8-00
Tickets £3.00 £2.00 £1.00 (incl. VAT) Advance Theatre Box Office Tel: 4081 London Theatre Bookings: Shaftesbury Ave. 419 3371 Premier Box Office, 240 2246, Usual Agents or on night

STRAIGHT MUSIC PRESENTS

BUZZCOCKS

HAMMERSMITH ODEON
QUEEN CAROLINE ST W 6
SATURDAY, 31st MARCH at 7.30
Tickets £3.00 £2.50 £2.00 £1.50 (incl. VAT) Advance Theatre Box Office Tel: 4081 London Theatre Bookings: Shaftesbury Ave. 419 3371 Premier Box Office, 240 2246, Usual Agents or on night

STRAIGHT MUSIC PRESENTS

MOTORHEAD

WITH GUESTS
GIRLSCHOOL

LYCEUM
STRAND W C 2
SUNDAY, 1st APRIL at 7.30
Tickets £2.50 (incl. VAT) Advance Theatre Box Office Tel: 4081 London Theatre Bookings: Shaftesbury Ave. 419 3371 Premier Box Office, 240 2246, Usual Agents or on night

STRAIGHT MUSIC PRESENTS

JEAN-LUC PONTY

RAINBOW THEATRE
232 SEVEN SISTERS ROAD, N 7
WEDNESDAY 4th APRIL at 8 p.m.
Tickets £4.00 £3.00 £2.00 (incl. VAT) Advance Theatre Box Office Tel: 4081 London Theatre Bookings: Shaftesbury Ave. 419 3371 Premier Box Office, 240 2246, Usual Agents or on night

MUSIC BY POST

Comprehensive Catalogue free on receipt of 70p stamp

This week's best selling SONGBOOKS		BOOKS
BLONDIEN Songbook	£1.00	SEE PISTOLS Film	£2.95
LEO ZEPPELIN Complete	£3.50	BOWIE The Lives & Times of	£5.95
THE CLASH Songbook	£2.95	T.B. S. Lyrics	£1.50
KATE BUSH The Cook Inside	£1.95	THE SIX PISTOLS	£2.95
KATE BUSH Livebook	£2.95	Get Blinded — Play It a Day	£1.40
IAN DURY Songbook	£2.95	Old School Songs	£0.95
GOR DYLAN Street Legal	£2.95	Best Guitar solo & record	£3.95
THE WHO Who Are You	£2.95	Rhythm Guitar solo & record	£3.95
BOWIE Songs of	£1.95	Lead Guitar solo & record	£3.95
ELP Songbook	£2.95	100 GUITAR & PIANO CHORDS	£2.95
GOR DYLAN Songbook	£2.95	GROUPE	GB & IRELAND OVERSEAS
JANE BEND Sinatra 60 Greatest	£2.95	£2 or under	30p
DEEP PURPLE Machine Head	£1.50	£3 or under	40p
THE WHO Who Are You	£2.95	£4 or under	50p
BUZZCOCKS Songbook	£2.95	£5 or under	60p
ROD STERNA Shogun Home More Fun	£2.95	over £10	£1.00

PASH MUSIC STORES, 5 ELGIN CRESCENT, LONDON W11

W.H. SMITH HAVE TURNED RECORD PRICES UPSIDE DOWN

£1.00 OFF* ALBUMS

50p OFF* CASSETTES

Bee Gees: Spirits Having Flown
 Supertramp: Breakfast In America
 Billy Joel: 52nd Street
 Wings: Greatest Hits
 War of the Worlds
 UFO: Strangers In The Night

80p OFF* ALBUMS

50p OFF* CASSETTES

Blondie: Parallel Lines
 Three Degrees: New Dimensions
 Neil Diamond: You Don't Bring Me Flowers
 Rod Stewart: Blondes Have More Fun
 Jean Michel Jarre: Equinoxe
 Stranglers: Live (X Cert)
 Ian Dury: New Boots & Panties
 Cheap Trick: At The Budokan
 Elvis Costello: Armed Forces
 Chris de Burgh: Crusader
 Queen: Jazz
 Boomtown Rats: Tonic For The Troops
 Boney M: Night Flight To Venus
 Elton John: A Single Man
 Best of Earth Wind and Fire
 Tomita: Kosmos
 Roxy Music: Manifesto

WHSMITH

* Manufacturer's recommended price.

Branches throughout England and Wales. Merchandise subject to availability, where you see this sign.

Titles subject to alteration. Offer ends 25 March 1979.

WELCOME

"I SNT IT incredible, my dears, what some people will do when they get a hit? I'm appalled to hear that journalist-for-a-day Chrissie Hynde, lead singer of little known pop combo The Pretenders, has begun to behave somewhat like Farrah Fawcett Majors (34) — the American pin-up girl. What seemed like only a day after their admittedly catchy single entered the charts, I hear that Chrissie immediately began to refuse all offers of being interviewed — despite stern protests from their record company.

"Finally, Chrissie capitulated and relented to allow a rival music paper to interview her — only on condition that she was able to read the copy (as we call it in the trade) before it was printed. As a result a suitably smirking (and incredibly long) piece appeared in the rival paper. Just why she should suddenly behave like an American superstar (when in fact her only similarity to the Playboy covergirl is her hair — and possibly her age) beats me.

"And at the length at which she rabbits on (like most Americans) I'm surprised if anyone will now be interested in listening, still less in printing unexpurgated dialogue!"

Record Mirror, Feb 24, 1979.

THE AFOREQUOTED sordid little snippet pinpoints not only a sick side to the UK music press's current penchant for tacky and ill-conceived malice but also a good second-grade reason why The Pretenders, and in particular Chrissie Hynde, don't wish to confer with the press right now.

It is not some sly shot at Costello-style 'silence makes legend' status.

More than anything it is the enlightened policy of a group of people who've all too often observed premature gushes of superlative-strated copy tossing the proverbial spanner in the works of natural progress, forcing the poor buggers concerned into being yoked and harnessed by the demands of others cracking the whip and calling the shots.

It's early days right now for The Pretenders, though anyone can see that they're already a crack unit — with a powerful human chemistry linking together the four band members with a bright, hungry young manager, sympathetic record company (run by Dave Hill, also the manager) and a cluster of allies including England's best PR, Moira Bellas (It'll take more than that to get you back on Warners' mailing list — Ed.) and an affiliation with the uncannily successful "Red Shadow" market research team who are currently responsible for a good 50 per cent of the hits squeezed into the Top 30.

Even though "Stop Your Sobbing", despite relentless radio play and a Top Of The Pops appearance, has failed to blitzkrieg the charts like everyone expected and is currently slipping down after ticking the golden staircase of the Top 30, it's going to take some human volcano of a band to trump this crew's clout this year.

Manager Dave Hill knows that. Sitting backstage after a university gig in Colchester, Essex, he reminisces about the very real deja vu he experienced of two days back when, driving past the Nashville where The Pretenders were presenting their first outright bill-topping crack in London, he saw crowds queuing way round the block in exactly the same fashion as for Elvis Costello's first Nashville gigs.

A handsome, youthful, quiet, but graceful figure, Hill more than any of the band has the confidence, vision, drive and focus to state unblinkingly that this band are destined to go all the way, to conquer Britain, Europe, Japan, America.

His credo is simple but firm: you either go all the way or don't bother even setting the ball rolling.

His label, Real Records, after first failing in a fraught liaison with Johnny Thunders, has now struck pay-dirt with a band virtually formed around a girl formerly notorious for being "a loud-mouthed pain-in-the-arse".

CHRISSIE HYNDE, Pic: PENNIE SMITH.

Let's pretend... (like we did last decade)

"a temperamental bitch impossible to work with."

The above are direct quotes made over the last three years by various insiders — some of them quite well-known musicians.

Hill, however, has stuck by Chrissie Hynde, bad reputation and all, for pushing a year and a half now, consistently ignoring the bad mouthings, tempering out the odd tantrums, most of all believing in her ability to come through, working damn hard to achieve that end and consistently putting his money where his mouth was.

Stories documenting the first vital encounter are mildly muddled and contradictory but Hill himself vividly recalls sighting Chrissie at The Vortex.

"Well... it has to come down to referring to the old cliché 'star quality'."

He laughs slightly at the term. "She just had something that made her stand out."

It should be stressed that he hadn't heard her sing a note, knew nothing about her consistent attempts in the last three or four years to form a band — attempts that caused her to move from her native Akron, Ohio to London (his first trip not made specifically to form a group but more to escape the stranglehold of Rubber City aimlessness), from London to Paris where, barring a few stray club dates in hometown Akron years before, playing hit parade covers in a group also including future Doves mastermind Mark Mothersbaugh on keyboards, a viable offer to be in a rock and roll band first occurred.

The latter outfit never gelled, however, and after a brief return to London Hynde headed back to the Mid West, working ultimately with Jack Rabbit, a local outfit of well respected musicians and the one band that she now regards as the most educational and satisfying project up until The Pretenders.

The urge to ramble back to London came when Malcolm McLaren, at this point (early '76) a forcefield of positive energy for singlehandedly orchestrating a rock 'n' roll resurrection, summoned the feisty Ms H (a former friend who'd even clocked in time working at Sex in mid-'74) along with the likes of Sylvain Sylvain and Richard Hell to invest their energies in this dramatic reconstruction.

The latter pair ultimately backed out but Hynde did make it over and here begins a hazy series of events, with Hynde the Sex Pistols'

Number One fan on the one hand but also a little too worldly and unimpressed by the three chord bal-balam to feel fully at home in the myriad settings both McLaren and Bernie Rhodes were forever conceptualising for her.

These included The Love Boys (with Hynde's tomboy looks meant to be played to the androgynous hit so that gender disorientation was to be the basic name of the game), an unnamed group comprising yours truly, Hynde, Chris Miller and possibly Mick Jones (then referred to simply as "Brady"), a band named Masters Of The Backside with Chrissie just playing guitar while two guys (one the future Dave Vanian) sang while the future Scabbes and Sensible made up the rhythm section, even Big Girl's Underwear with Hynde and Mick Jones predominating.

Some lasted one day, some three, but none lasted more than a week.

Hynde kept on keeping on while all around her the former accomplices — Mick Jones, Vanian, Scabbes, Sensible, etc — found their niches and together galvanised a formidable army of punk bands bent on seeing the music business, not to mention the mid-'70s indolent, sloth-like excuse for rock 'n' roll, placed under heavy manners.

She applauded the fireworks but felt the proverbial outsider, still doing the whole audition routine time and time again in the vague hope of finding that elusive collection of kindred spirits but only being driven further into depression when, say, tentative link-up with Croydon nutter Johnny Moped and his band ended in her being fired, or, worst of all, when vague plans to help out some loopy Welsh singer on a demo blew-up into her name being wrongfully splashed over a shock-horror story in both the national and music press as prime instigator in some dire project going under the name of The Moors Murderers.

A YEAR AGO I ran into Chrissie — when she was still unsettled by the ramifications of the latter sordid episode. The only positive side to her activities had been the location and purchase of a rehearsal studio in Covent Garden. We talked a little about maybe working together and even spent an evening playing each other our songs.

I recall being unimpressed by her work at that time — the lyrics all seemed to be about "coming home and finding you shooting it up" while her guitar playing, although adequate, still needed a deal of work before the rhythm truly delivered.

Another burn audition. One year later however and things had changed. Drastically.

"Sentimental gestures only bore me to death You've made a desperate appeal —
now go save your breath Attachment to obligation through guilty regret
Shit, that's so wet.

You asked me for advice — I said
'Use me dear'
But you're still clinging to somebody you deplore
And now you wanna use me for emotional blackmail
I just feel pity when you lie
Contempt when you cry."

'Private Life' is the kind of song you don't hear too often. There's a sinuous and beguiling reggae riff embellished by guitarist James Honeyman-Scott with a coda that wraps itself around the cold throb of the rhythm perfectly, and Hynde virtually scats lyrics that penetrate emotional situations rock rarely recognises exist.

No more facile "lines" about junk and squalor chic (We'll hold you to that, Kent — Ed.) this is a song that takes George C Scott's classic line in The Hustler — "Self pity is the greatest household sport in the world" — and hones it down to one-to-one incisiveness. Dagger sharp.

Or take "Tattooed Love Boys", a savage paean to middle-class girls who like to play with fire — in this case getting coy with heavy duty bikers.

■ Continues over page

NICK KENT waits for the pips

PRETENDERS

■ From previous page

"I see you
All impressed and half-dressed Pensick all over the scars and lumps and bumps
Stop snivelling you're gonna make some plastic surgeon a rich man
Oh but the prestige and the glory
Another human interest story
You are that"

And again the music matches the lyric punch for punch. Just like it does on 'Precious' or that derisively sassy reconstruction of The Mysterions' 'I Need Somebody' or the spooky chilling 'Phone Call' where Hynde plays an anonymous mercy messenger "from a South Jersey call box" brusquely informing a character of his impending doom ("Somebody you used to know is back in town/You'd better go").

I'VE BEEN granted the second interview with The Pretenders not due to the former close ties with a certain member or because the band are working on some publicity master-scheme. Indeed, though it never got to the point of being a stipulation, there was a definite desire amongst those involved that this piece should NOT end up a cover-story.

What the band — and Hynde in particular — want is to be the subject of a piece of constructive journalism. Constructive, as in not perspective critical; as in not jumping on the bandwagon and gawping on the superlatives; as in hopefully providing a focus for a band who virtually everyone else wants to attitude-dance all over.

To Hynde, this is particularly important because, as she will all too willingly attest, she is hopelessly incapable of quasi-objective analysis of her talents.

"I'm always under this cloud of... well not quite self-doubt, but I'm never quite sure of myself. I'm certainly not, say, like Patti Smith who's always coming out with these statements about how she sees the greatness of her art and how great her band is. She seems so damn adamant about her own self-esteem, y'know."

I counter that simply as a performer Hynde must have some quotient of 'ego' pumping it up for her, just to get out there and sing her own songs.

"No." Her laugh is almost self-effacing. "No, not at all. I've never had an ego. Christ, I've often really wished I had one."

I mean really, because I'm so oh, I don't know, I just wish I had some objective vision on my personality. It's weird because with my loud mouth and my being very, very temperamental — like I can get very, very upset over petty little details and all — I suppose I could be regarded as coming on like an egotist. But I never feel like that.

"Like I remember you saying to me when I started writing for NME — you know, 'Chrissie, just wait 'til you see your name in print, it'll knock you out so much'. Well, it didn't and all the good things that have happened since — from hearing the record on the radio through to being on Top Of The Pops — none of those obvious things have provided me with any great bursts of egotistical joy."

"Actually," she pauses for a moment and laughs, "one thing really did give me that rush. Do you watch Fawlty Towers? Well, I love it. I love John Cleese. OK. Anyway, in this one episode there's a scene with this guy laying on the bed and suddenly he picks up a newspaper and it's the Melody Maker cover with me on it — 'The Great Pretender'. And I just want wow — that got me."

The Great Pretender. "For some reason I was thinking about the Sam Cooke song," Chrissie recalls, "and it was a real last minute thing because the record had virtually been pressed and everything. So it was The Pretenders — which was kinda neat if only because it's totally unpretentious."

Former name suggestions were scarce, although at one point The Rhythm Method looked like sticking.

Hynde was adamant about one thing.

"From the first day I met Dave, I made it perfectly clear that no way would it be just The Chrissie Hynde Band. A was getting the band. B was getting the stage act together. C was the record. The last two ended up switching around but otherwise it's been done to the letter, really."

Workin' out with THE PRETENDERS (L-R): James Honeyman-Scott, Pete Farndon, Chrissie Hynde, Martin Chambers.

The formation of The Pretenders involved effort, coincidence and luck. A drummer, one Gerry Mackleduff, was initially involved; he turned out to be unsuitable but did provide an introduction to bassist Peter Farndon who'd just returned from the dubious joys of playing in an Australian combo named The Bushwackers. Farndon turned out to be another stranger to the stringent dogmatism inherent in so much punk rock of the '76-77 period, but clicked personally with Hynde as well as proving to be a more-than-adept musician.

Next to arrive was the redoubtable James Honeyman-Scott, equally proficient on guitar and keyboards. In one brief audition he proved his worth, but commitments in his native Hereford — including a fiancée and a band (as well as the possibility of going up to Rockfield studios and working in the shadow of his idol Dave Edmunds) — caused him to hesitate.

The crunch came when Nick Lowe, an acquaintance of Chrissie's since 1974 (when the pair plus Dai Davies had driven up to Rockfield to watch Dai Shannon record there) and a source of benevolent encouragement, was sent a demo tape of Hynde's which, amongst songs like 'Made To Measure', a Stax-Volt affair, 'Hymn No. 3' and 'Tequila', a C&W-slanted number, included a version of 'Stop Your Sobbing' from the first Kinks album — an album that a girlfriend of Chrissie's had owned back in their adolescence in Akron and for which she'd always held a great affection.

Guessing that Lowe would take to the potential of 'Sobbing', Hynde's calculation paid off when he duly phoned up from a call box (Are you sure it wasn't a home pay-phone, Nick? — Ed). One Sunday and gushed: "Chrissie, I'm amazed and stunned. I definitely want in on this act."

Although in the midst of recording both his own 'American Squirm' single and the 18 songs that would eventually be paired down to become 'Armed Forces', Lowe took the group into the studio to record 'Sobbing' and 'The Wait' in one day.

The juxtaposition of the tracks made excellent sense, with the tender melifluousness of 'Sobbing' contrasting totally with the St Vitus' Dance pulse of 'The Wait'. To those already familiar with Hynde's voice, the latter seemed the real deal: 'Sobbing' merely appeared to demonstrate Nick Lowe's skill in giving us a late '70s Sandie Shaw as he used his protegee's uncanny skill as an impersonator of other women's singing (everything from a masterful Tammy Wynette to a brazenly accurate Aretha Franklin).

The Shaw parallel has since caused a minor controversy. While not finding the comparison unflattering, Hynde still maintains she had little knowledge of the '60s singer at the time of recording and has only subsequently become acquainted with Shaw's hapless quaver through David Johansen who, after The Pretenders had supported him in Birmingham, played her his cherished Sandie Shaw greatest hits album as well as teaching her the chords to 'Girl Don't Come', the current Pretenders' encore played alongside 'Sabre Dance'.

THIS ENCORE is dutifully performed at Colchester one Saturday as the climax to a strong set played before a disorientingly incongruous crowd. Students, punks, heavy metal fans and bikers are all in attendance and the atmosphere is edgy.

The pack flanking the front of the stage aim the odd gob at Chrissie and the occasional can of beer at

■ Continues page 24

Catch Roxy's come-back down at Boots.

£1 off 'Manifesto'!

Roxy Music are back. Brian Ferry fronts the re-formed set-up and, with three other original members, the band's all set for a rapturous return.

You can see Roxy on tour in May. But first catch their brand new album, 'Manifesto.' You'll find it at Boots for just £3.99* — a saving of £1.00. And there's also 50p* off the cassette.

Access and Bar tabs and welcome

*At this special offer price until April 21st
From Boots Record Department subject to stock availability.
Savings shown is off RRP, Retail Price.

Make the most of your Boots.

DEPARTMENT

Open N

Door

AB BENEFIT SECTI

D STAFF

F FRESH & RENE (Attend Empl

G DISABLEMEN
OFFICE

H EMPLOYMEN
SHOP & TRAIN

Paul King for Outlaw Concerts presents

THE TRB TOUR

MARCH 20th SWANSEA, Top Rank

21st EXETER, Routes

22nd PLYMOUTH, Polytechnic

24th BELFAST

25th PORT RUSH

27th COVENTRY, Locarno

28th SUNDERLAND, Mayfair

29th SOUTHPORT, New Theatre

30th NOTTINGHAM, Malibu

31st BRIDLINGTON, Spa

APRIL 1st BLACKBURN, King George's Hall

3rd DUNSTABLE California Ballroom

4th HIGH WYCOMBE, Town Hall

5th SOUTHAMPTON, Gaumont

6th GUILDFORD, Civic Hall

7th LEWISHAM, Odeon

8th WOLVERHAMPTON, Civic Hall

9th ILFORD, Odeon

10th IPSWICH, Gaumont

“Steve was a rebel and a boozier
The AC king of teenage cool
He was a cleancut calculating cruiser
Broke the heart of every kid in school”

BLACK ANGEL

TRB TWO

The new Tom Robinson Band album produced by Todd Rundgren

CULTURE ON CUMBOLO TOUR

March

16th	BRIGHTON	Top Rank
17th	WEST RUNTON	Pavillion
18th	BRISTOL	Romeo & Juliet's
19th	SHEFFIELD	Top Rank
20th	MANCHESTER	Apollo
21st	CARDIFF	Top Rank
22nd	PORTSMOUTH	Locarno
23rd	BIRMINGHAM	Bingley Hall
24th	LONDON	Rainbow
25th	LONDON	Rainbow

European representation Steve Hedges, Bron Agency Ltd.

CUMBOLO (Friendship) The New Album From CULTURE Out Now On Virgin's Front Line FL1040

THRILLS

BOUNCERS: WHO GUARDS THE GUARDS?

A CAMPAIGN to control the activities of bouncers has been started by Matthew Bowles, twin brother of Henry Bowles, the 24-year-old mechanic who died as a result of injuries caused by bouncers at a London Subway Sect gig in 1977.

The campaign received its first boost on Monday night, when the BBC Tonight programme reported on the problem, focusing on three cases where violence on the part of bouncers had led to the deaths of members of the public, whose lives it is supposedly their job to protect.

The central subject was the Bowles case, in which two men, John Godden and Frank Flood, were found guilty of manslaughter and common assault respectively, and received sentences of twelve months and three months in prison. The details of the trial were reported extensively in Thrills (9.12.78).

There was also the case first reported in Private Eye of Billy Hogarth, who was punched to death outside a disco in Scotland last October (covered in Thrills, 10.2.79) and that of Peter Stubbs, kicked to death outside Cindy's Club in St. Helens in the spring of '77. This case only recently came to light, when a policeman who witnessed the murder was fined for neglecting his duties. At the time he thought that the three men involved were simply "ejecting a customer from the premises."

Matthew Bowles

Matthew Bowles, angered by the senseless death of his brother, decided to organise an active campaign after the GLC told him: "Show us there is a problem and we may do something about it."

Bowles first move is a petition, aiming to collect signatures from three areas:

1. Friends and acquaintances of Henry Bowles — to refute the notion that the kind of person who gets assaulted by bouncers is the kind of person who was probably asking for it anyway.
2. People with direct experience of bouncers (promoters responsible for their hiring and supervision, artists, groups, clubowners, and people who have been beaten up by bouncers).

3. People concerned with public safety (MPS, councillors, and pressure groups such as the National Council for Civil Liberties).

NME readers wishing to sign the petition should contact Matthew Bowles at 33 Montague Road, Cambridge CB4 1BU.

The petition will be presented to the GLC and to the Home Office, and will support MP Bruce George's Private Members Bill which seeks to bring all security firms under public control. In other words, all security firms employing bouncers, and the individual bouncers themselves, will have to register with and be licenced by an official body.

A bouncer argued on Monday night's programme that making them accountable for their actions will encourage people to provoke them. Not making them accountable, on the other hand, could encourage just the opposite, and the need for measures such as those proposed can't be disputed.

Few people who regularly go to clubs, concerts or discos will dispute an impression of these characters as often — though not always — being either intimidating untrained gorillas or else outright thugs: an impression confirmed by the volume of mail we receive on the subject every week.

STEVE CLARKE

THRILLS

RICH KIDS way back when (L-R): New, Matlock, Ure, Egan.

Rich Kids — have they or haven't they? (And if not, why not?)

HOLD IT! Don't pull the trigger yet! Put the cap back on that bottle of pills! Averting a million suicides at a stroke, it's our privilege and pleasure to break the glad tidings: Rich Kids are still together!

The tears flowed freely here at the NME offices and sub-editors danced in Carnaby Street when we heard the news: yes, we'd bungled it again! Our heroes live on to fight another day, and all previous obituaries are henceforth declared premature and obsolete.

The Rich Kids have most definitely not split up. They remain a valid and viable unit. Comb your hair, adjust your trousers, and sigh with deep relief.

It took some prodding and probing, but finally cute but cagey Glen Matlock confessed over the phone on Monday that the lovable Rich Kids couldn't split up — even if they wanted to.

And they most definitely don't want to!

Glen explained: Basically, it's like this. We're still under contract to EMI for three more albums, so we're not even able to split up.

"We're all just doing other things. There's no animosity amongst us at all, no daggers are being thrown, we're all still friends. We're just resting."

"Midge has been doing some production work — not Rusty incidentally — and has written a song with Lynott called 'Get Outta Here' for the next Lizzy album, and Stevie Nicks is going to play with Pat Paladin's new group, and me and Rusty have just finished touring with Bette Bright."

"We haven't split," Matlock emphasises, "because it's like an impossible thing for us to do. We're just doing other things."

"I tell you, EMI were well surprised when they opened last week's NME and saw that we'd split! And we've had loads of kids ringing up asking what the hell's going on."

We can well believe that! But why all the outside-group activity that prompted the sad misunderstanding that the flashy poppers were defunct?

"Oh, we just don't feel it's the right time to do another album," Matlock proclaims, "and, y'know, we just want to do other things in the mean time. Plus, we didn't want to do another slog around the clubs of Great Britain. We've done lots of gigs, enough for now, and we all just wanted a change."

Everything becomes clear at last — even though scurrilous gossip-mongers still persist in claiming that all this outside business is not temporary but decidedly permanent — such as New's involvement with Pat Paladin.

And what about young Glen's participation in Iggy Pop's new group?

"Well, like Iggy just phoned me up! Great, y'know, haven't played with him yet, haven't started rehearsing, but I'm really looking forward to it all. It's going to be an interesting experience. I mean, Iggy's good! And the new album's really cracking, so things are really happening."

The Iggy tour takes in Europe and America, and will last a good few weeks. As for Rich Kids, Matlock insists: Give us a month or so and we'll be off again."

And let Thrills be the first to wish them luck! But meanwhile their label EMI are curiously non-committal about the state of play. "The group's management's point of view," commented an EMI spokesperson, "is that they have not split up. So we'll just take it from the management. As far as EMI is concerned, it's just no comment... you can make of that what you will!"

We already have.

PAUL MORLEY

THRILLS

Anxious Rich Kids fans await new developments

Now if THIS doesn't make him think twice...

NEW SHAM LINE-UP?

WAIT A minute... have Sham 69 backed the wrong revivalist fad, or what?

Jimmy and the Ferrets miming to Bay City Rollers records at the Walton Hop in the year 1975 is what.

Jimmy so in Pursey. Bay City Rollers as in Britain's seat-screaming supremos until it dawned on them that they could make more money Stateside — in case you can't remember or are too young to care anyway.

Jimmy and the Ferrets won the annual talent contest three years running with their fabulously accurate Tartan Terror take-off. Our picture shows them scoring the hat-trick, and if you're through laughing at the trousers, you might note the lack of amplification and dangling guitar leads... "I've always enjoyed miming," Jimmy told the Surrey Herald, after their show had left local fans spent and dizzy.

"In the past I have done Mick Jagger and Gary Glitter. But we are all great fans of The Bay City Rollers," he added — presumably straight-faced.

The real Rollers even came along to see them once, and were flattered to the point of giving the Ferrets free tickets so they could understudy.

Yet even then Jimmy was taking matters seriously, with plans for the Ferrets to actually learn to play so they could do a proper live set — although the mime act was apparently quite a success. Summer bookings were coming in from places as far afield as Bournemouth and Bognor!

One way of pulling the birds, eh Jimmy?

THRILLS

LOWRY

'Hi! Hello. Anne Nightingale couldn't make it this week, so I've agreed to do the show in drag.'

This man gave Tony Parsons an exploding cigarette and lived. Pic. GEORGE BODNAR

You saw them on the Lene Lovich tour
See them on tour with Bill Nelson's Red Noise

March

14th Bradford St. George's Hall

16th Lancaster University

17th Leeds University

18th London Theatre Royal, Drury Lane

Hear them on record

Fingerprintz 'Who's Your Friend?'

4 tracks for the price of a single

Available in blue vinyl

VS252

Aussie freak proves well Duffo

LOOK AT the geek, he wants your attention, look at the geek, he wants to be famous...

The geek walks down Carnaby Street wearing an undertaker's suit with black hat, one of those cushions-that-fart shop ties that stand up straight when you press a button, black wraparound Orbison shades and he's tapping a white stick on the pavement pretending to be blind. What a bleeding laugh, eh?

The puerile pillock has a face like an open toilet bowl made up with a trowel into mid-period Jobriath Tart gross gloss, pointy plastic Spock ears, cart-dyed coiffure and an elongated anthropoid physique such as the missing link might inhabit after a fortnight on the rack.

Heads turn. Two cops approach this boil on the face of humanity.

"Oy, you," one of them says, "You look fucking stupid, you moron."

The moron is an Australian by the name of Jeff Duff who calls himself Duffo. In sunlight his face is a transvestite wrinkled prune pining for the soft-focus sanctuary of a silk-covered publicity shot camera lens.

"Actually," bleats the freak in a Soho pub, "I've got a much worse reaction in England than I ever did back in Australia."

Ah, you can't grumble — there was that coy exposure and stale banter last week on the

Russell Smarmy Show, national airtime this week on the Olde Bland Wrinkled Mess... not bad for a hapless hype whose Beggars Banquet album is merely insipid Electric Chairs imitations (once you know his broad accent is the real thing, the single "Give Me Back My Brain" loses its charm faster than you can say, "Bruce is In Charge Of The Logical Positivism Department").

whose sole claim to stares, copy and cash is being one more side-show in the Freak Circus routine, that sad parade of travesties of the human form for ackers and... attention.

"People call me faggot, fruit, poof, lot's of things," reveals The Duff One, sipping from his slim line tonic. "And hbm, queer, queen, perv..."

You astounded me. "But I'm none of these things... the mystery of my sexuality is that I'm asexual. I just don't do it. I couldn't fuck a boy and I couldn't fuck a girl, it just seems so laughable to me, a joke, a game... but I like watching. I enjoy being a voyeur."

Apart from his dotard doting on the plastic inevitability of A. Asshole's soup-can scum demi-monde, Duffo also has a tiresome love of crass public school rag ball spiffing prang wizard japes.

The pulsating rubber brain, electric shock hand shakes, whoopee cushions, the erecting peckham... all these things get on one's tits. But when the Rothmen's King Size offered from Duffo's pack explodes leaving just a charred filter between one's index and middle fingers, one dumps the NUJ code of conduct and picks up anything one can lay hands on and aims it at Duffo's head.

"That's great," simpers Duffo, ducking an ashtray. "You reacted. All I'm after is a reaction. People can laugh with me or at me, I've been in two English casualty wards already."

More mediocrity shrieking for your attention... more pinhead grist for the publicity mill. Find solace in the fact that the sweetie palms hovering in the wings (Beggars' Banquet, Tony Brainsby Publicity and The Lurkers' Nick Austin as manager) are nowhere near as smart as they think they are.

TONY PARSONS

THROTTLES

COOL for CATS

THE NEW ALBUM

SQUEEZE

THE ALBUM

THE SINGLE

SQUEEZE

blanco negro

AM

1 2

COOL for CATS

THE PORTERHOUSE NOTTINGHAM

THE LYCEUM LONDON

THE NASHVILLE LONDON

THE NASHVILLE LONDON

Saturday 17th March

Sunday 18th March

Friday 30th March

Saturday 31st March

1979 A&M Records Ltd. All Rights Reserved

FRANKIE MILLER

GOOD TO SEE YOU

On Tour

MARCH
THURS. 22 READING, Hexagon.
FRI. 23 ST. AUSTELL, Cornish Riviera.
WEDS. 28 CARDIFF, Top Rank.
THURS. 29 BIRMINGHAM, Barbarellas.
FRI. 30 HASTINGS, Pier Pavilion.
SAT. 31 NORTHAMPTON, Cricket Club.
APRIL
MON. 2 DUNDEE, Caird Hall.
TUES. 3 ABERDEEN, Music Hall.
WEDS. 4 AYR, Pavilion.
FRI. 6 EDINBURGH, The Odeon.
SAT. 7 GLASGOW, Apollo.
SUN. 8 REDCAR, Cootham Bowl.

New Single
In A Limited Edition Picture Bag
CHS 2299

Chrysalis

On Tour

APRIL (cont.)
TUES. 10 CLEETHORPES, Winter Garden.
THURS. 12 TUNBRIDGE WELLS, Assembly Robms.
SAT. 14 AYLESBURY, Friars.
SUN. 15 SHEFFIELD, Top Rank.
MON. 16 BRISTOL, Locarno.
THURS. 19 CORK, Arcadio.
FRI. 20 DUBLIN, Stardust.
SAT. 21 PORTRUSH, Arcadio.
MON. 23 BELFAST, Ulster Hall.
WEDS. 25 LIVERPOOL, University.
THURS. 26 MANCHESTER, Ardri Cinema.
FRI. 27 ABERYSTWYTH, University.
SUN. 29 LONDON, Hammersmith Odeon.

Long arm of the Liverpool Funk Force...

THIS WEEK 'Can You Feel The Force', Real Thing's very high-stepping and most ace dance delight, hit the No. 5 spot in the British singles chart, going silver in the process. The band, understandably, are more than a little pleased with this success.

Not merely the single is selling in such healthy quantities, but also, and maybe more importantly, they feel that they have at last stepped out of a suit that was much too small for them. Which is to say, they feel that they have matured some since the days of 'You To Me Are Everything'.

It's great to see a black British act come up with such a bouncily joyous hunk of funk as this — but why, I wonder, has it taken so long for the Brits to produce the goods? The answer is provided in a vaguely whacked-out manner by guitarist Eddie Amoo, a staunchly consistent Liverpoolian decked out for the occasion — a video promotion film — in a spectacular patched leather, and the mandatory po-boy cap.

"Basically it's the musicians; we have a great bunch of guys playing with us right now. The best of their kind in the country. Plus, of course, it has a lot to do with the way you put a song together."

Bro' Chris Amoo, lead vocalist, takes up the tale: "You see any good musician can play funk, but that doesn't mean to say any good funky musician can write good songs, and that's absolutely important. Eddie and I are writing really strong material all the time — they are our favourite bands — and I know that we can come up with material just as strong. No sweat."

Chances are that if the band get their way the new album will be produced in New York. A step they feel to be most important to the furtherance and development of their music.

"We are really eager to record in the States," says Chris, "because the facilities are so much better there; anything you need to get the sound that you want is right at your finger tips — there's no question of making do. And there's no way that you can have those kinds of facilities in this country unless you've got huge amounts of time and money to spend. Which is one reason why the American funk bands have a sound that is so much better.

When you're hot... Video cameraman holds R. THING to ransom (L-R): Dave Smith, Eddie Amoo, Ray Lake, Chris Amoo. Pic: PAUL SLATTERY

"Ideally we would like to take our producer, Ken Gold, across there with us, because we have built up a really strong working relationship with him — plus we feel he is one of the best producers in this country. Of course we haven't got the kind of power you need to be able to insist on things like that... yet."

Real Thing's American record company, Epic, are rushing 'Force' this week. Chris Amoo is optimistic about the Stateside end of the operation.

"Epic are behind us all the way, and I have every confidence in their ability and their enthusiasm for our music. If they push our record hard enough over there, there is nothing to stop us taking off. There is no reason why we shouldn't make it. I mean, the sky is the limit as far as we are concerned."

There is no doubt that Real Thing have come a long way since their days as Vocal Perfection, circa 1970. The progression from being a strictly second string pop outfit of dubious worth to Britain's best home grown funk operators is not fairy steps by anybody's standards. However, even so, the Brothers Amoo have retained their grip on the essential ingredients and logic that bring commercial success.

"It's no good just writing to please ourselves, that's easy because we are hip to everything. But it's no good being absolutely hip, and writing cool songs that you and your band can dig if they don't communicate to other people. You have got to communicate, otherwise nobody is going to buy your records, and that is what it is all about."

Real Thing are obviously not playing around. They intend to win this game with a very high points score. And if they can maintain the sumptuously high standard they have set with material such as their current chart climber, then they are a very safe bet indeed.

JOHN HAMBLETT

THIRDS

WHERE WERE YOU IN '74?

LET'S PLAY games. What were you doing in March of 1974, and what have you been doing since? That question was recently put to a whole bucketful of major and minor pop celebrities by New York anglophone Trouser Press, as part of its fifth anniversary celebrations this month.

Hey, Nick Lowe, how about you? "I was hanging out. Since then I've been having fun." Wreckless Eric gets off the floor and charms: "I was working at a way to change the world a bit. Now I'm putting the scheme into operation."

Tom Petty contributes the most interesting snippet of his career: "I was saving money to buy a multi-track recorder to tape over 1,000 dogs barking at once. Since then I have recorded 1,568, and I am on the road to a dream come true."

And we learn that in 1974 Meat Loaf lost 25 pounds due to sexual excess. Tom Robinson "had stars in my eyes and holes in my shoes. Since then, I've worked my way up to a good pair of black boots."

Jerry Casale deadpans: "Personally, I was teaching art spuds at Akron University. The group at the time was planting tubers and sorting out the gene pool. Since... we've devolved." Jonathan Richman has decided to go back "and sing alone, just like before. People ask me why... well it's more naked this way", and Lou Reed says it all: "I was doing 85 in a 55 mile per hour zone... still on."

Good game, good game.

PAUL MORLEY

THE TV CONSPIRACY

THEORIES ABOUT television are as numerous as the electrons whizzing down the picture tube. However, some make more sense than others.

The View From Sunset Boulevard is the title of a new book by TV scriptwriter Ben Stein, whose theory is simply that popular television reflects the opinions and attitudes of a small and homogeneous group of people — namely the writers and producers who are the creative force in television.

But their view of the world, as portrayed in such shows as Kojak, Charlie's Angels, M.A.S.H. and the like, shapes many people's impression of American culture.

Stein found: "Businessmen were portrayed as bad people and workers were good people. High-level police were bad people, representative of a rotten and deadening bureaucracy, and idiosyncratic, rebel cops were the salt of the earth and smart, too... Small towns were superficially lovely, but under a thin veneer of corn pone there was lurking, terrifying evil, waiting to ensnare the innocent Natty Bumppo of the big city. But big cities, at first glance jungles where narcotics dealers disguised as real-estate salesmen lurked on every corner, offering heroin and white slavery to small children, were basically friendly, cheerful places. Only in the suburbs was there sanctuary, but even there, in the white frame houses behind the picket fence, surrounded by emerald lawns, lurked Mr Big of the Syndicate, paying for his daughter's trip to Europe with the agony of the junkie."

When called upon to explain why the writers and producers hold such uniform views on life, Stein writes: "When the people who make television are seen as a highly articulate, well-heeled, highly-motivated class on the move, eager to dominate the other powerful classes and groups in society — their entire political and social posture becomes clear. They are doing neither more nor less in seeking to move their class to the top of the heap and to displace whatever stands in the way."

In other words, without any actual conspiracy, it seems a small group of people exert a powerful influence on us all.

MARLON BRANDO was recently back at the same lot where he made A Streetcar Named Desire 27 years ago, to play the role of George Lincoln Rockwell, former head of the American Nazi Party in NBC-TV's recently previewed series Roots: The Next Generation.

The six-page scene, based on an interview Roots author Alex Haley conducted with Rockwell in 1966 for Playboy magazine, also features James Earl Jones. This is the second time Brando has played a Nazi, the first being The Young Lions in 1958.

The seven-part series follows on directly from the original Roots bringing the story up to the present day, and also features cameo appearances from Henry Fonda and Olivia de Havilland.

DICK TRACY

THIRDS

If you come to W.H. Smith expecting a saving on blank cassettes...

Stock up now while we're selling special money saving packs of 3 cassettes.

Pack of three EMI C60 Super Cassettes £2.35 (Price for three bought individually £3.15)

Pack of three EMI C90 Super Cassettes £2.95 (Price for three bought individually £3.75)

WHSMITH

Offer open while stocks last where you see this sign

Prices correct at time of going to press. Branches throughout England and Wales

...we could send you packing

And in every pack of cassettes you'll find an entry form for the W.H. Smith

USA HOLIDAY COMPETITION

A fabulous trip for two with TWA that you can take before September 30th 1979.

FAWLTY THINKING

How John Cleese became a weapon in the ratings war

THIS IS NOT a backlash, but... Well, yes, I suppose it is a backlash in a way, caused by a belief that the new series of Fawlty Towers is not as funny, as memorable, or as original as its predecessor.

The degree of bitterness present in any given backlash is in itself an inverted tribute to the very high standards set by the artist or Creative Entity in the first place — a response, disproportionate maybe, but keenly felt nonetheless, to a perceived failure on the part of said C. Entity to maintain said level of flawlessness.

There is no office plot to pull the rug from under John Cleese: no collective agreement that "his fifteen minutes are up". But there is a strong feeling that Fawlty Towers Version Two has gone significantly askew somewhere down the line; and in view of the almost unanimous national press approval (reminding the hardened sitcom fan of the outrageously sycophantic reception awarded to Leonard Rossiter's ghostly The Losers — a case of Emperor's New Threads if ever there was one) it seems appropriate to expand upon this opinion, and, if possible, to discover the reasons for it.

"Trouble begins" four years ago, when intense, brilliant John Cleese follows up the BBC welcome which has accrued to him via his participation in the hugely successful Monty Python canon by approaching the Beeb with the kernel of a new comedy idea. The BBC agrees; and Fawlty Towers comes into being.

It is a tour-de-force. Brilliant characterisation by the writers (Cleese and his then wife Connie Booth, who also plays Polly, the assistant manageress); wicked situation-jokes ruthlessly exposing British pretentiousness, xenophobia, smugness and class-consciousness; excellent acting from all protagonists — and, above all, consistently marvellous performances from Cleese himself, as the neurotic, snobbish Basil Fawlty, owner of the doomed hotel, would-be autocrat who succeeds in dominating only the ineffectual Manuel.

The series is an enormous success for the BBC, and for Cleese. Another series is booked immediately. In the meantime, Cleese and his wife begin living apart; they get together again briefly, but separate again. Divorce follows: but little acrimony. Cleese and Booth will continue to write together.

A year or two pass with Cleese making commercials for General Accident and Accurankle watches. At this time we first hear of a series of privately-commissioned management training films being made by Cleese. Not a laugh in a lorryload. Straight stuff.

Then — last month — the new Fawlty Towers. Here I must be quite clear. There is still plenty to laugh at. But the plotlines have clearly deteriorated. Whereas in Series One these were loose, affording Cleese the necessary elbow-room to provide his portraits of Basil Fawlty Up Against It, now they edge uncomfortably close to conventional sitcom territory. Nothing so gormless as Are You Being Served, but still more than a mite basic.

The relationship between Basil and his wife Sybil — so carefully understated in Series One — is badly overdrawn to produce a stereotype of Dragon-and-Budgie.

In Episode Two, four minutes are entirely devoted to getting Basil in a complicated physical situation vis-a-vis shapely female guest. 'High point' Basil's hand on guest's tit. Enter Sybil. Outrage, etc.

In Episode Three, a moderate joke about Waldorf salad lasts for twenty minutes.

Basil's manic spiels are now more manic, and longer — though no funnier. Basil's "wife" Sybil, played in the series by the superb Prunella Scales, is made to emerge from behind her calm, uncanny mask to pose as a Foolha Joyce-type Fruity But Frustrated Ballleaxe. The guests, formerly drawn with great subtlety, are now more ponderous caricatures.

The hotel is the same. Connie is the same. The sets are the same, or nearly so. The selfish waiter Manuel, originally used with great effect to display Basil's bullying side, as well as providing a useful supply of quick, coarse humour — but above all a character who desperately needed to evolve — has not evolved at all. Three years on, Manuel speaks no English, has not yet seen through his employer's bravado, still allows himself to be bullied and exploited.

It is plain that "ingredients" in the original formula have been identified, and that the new series has been written, not from plotline upwards, but from "selling-points" downwards.

I have no doubt that John Cleese's talent is extraordinarily original. But at the same time his character is hidden from me — even though I've just finished interviewing him.

Cleese's relations with media have always seemed, from a distance, to be uncomfortable. Not bad. Obscure. Colleagues who have talked to him have reported him shy. Articles in other magazines ranged from, as Cleese puts it, "the sort of article you can expect when the first question is, 'Tell us something funny that happened to you while you were making the new series, John'", to baffled reportages on Pythons that quoted Cleese and Idle not at all, leaning exclusively on Palin, Jones, Gilliam and Chapman. All this reinforced the image of shy introspection and impenetrability.

SO WHEN I contacted the BBC for a Cleese interview, I didn't hold out high hopes of getting anything substantial.

Well, at least an interview took place — which is to say that this winter spoke to John Cleese for more than half an hour, making notes while he did so. But because (a) it was a phone interview, (b) it was an unexpected phone interview (how does five o'clock on press day grab you? And don't forget I'd left my list of questions at home) and (c) it was a bad interview inasmuch as I asked no controversial questions nor raised touchy topics nor indeed put to Cleese any facet of the above polemic — and wouldn't have received interpretable answers if I had done so — it all rather added up to a non-event.

He's inwardly as shy and suspicious of publicity as ever, but, determined to upgrade himself in what he sees as "professional" arenas, has drilled himself into a kind of crackly bonhomie that at times veers perilously and misleadingly close to Basil Fawlty-style brown-nosing. Even so he couldn't help revealing his real concerns, often by an artificially cheery tone of voice — when irritation would have been more understandable — rather than by words alone.

Finally, at the same time as he was talking to me he was in a BBC studio, editing the fourth episode of Fawlty Towers.

I asked him first about whether he had deliberately decided to accentuate slapstick at the expense of other aspects — meaning, of course, was he going for cheaper laughs?

"Certainly one of the things Connie and I decided was that we needed more visual gags. Every phase of them is carefully worked out and in the script."

Why is it that Basil is never allowed to win? It would be perfectly possible to allow him an occasional interesting and undeserved victory, so why the relentless emphasis on losing out?

"My God, hasn't this ignoramus heard the one about genius and pain?"

"Ah, well, you see, Basil's driven by his own Furies. He can't be allowed to win. He's impossible enough as it is. No, we allow Basil to get as close as possible to winning — then snatch it away from him."

I know it's a hack question but... are you like Basil Fawlty? "That's the sort of question The Sun asks." (Chuckles to show there's no offence intended.) "Partially, I suppose. But don't forget there's another side altogether. Urbane, bland... my bank manager side."

A good cue to ask about the management training films he made a while back. To satisfy this side of his personality? "Money, actually. I've always had a very strong need for financial security. A large sum of money." And the TV commercials? "The same reason. Money."

"Do you know how much I got for the second series of Fawlty Towers? Well, I don't mind telling you. Fifteen thousand. All in."

For a second series? It's a lot to me, but then I'm not John Cleese. What league-leader in any other field would settle for fifteen rotten grand?

Let's just say Rod Stewart wouldn't.

"Eight months work — no, say ten months including editing." Hand imperfectly covers phone. "Don't you think we could do that coming the other way? Yes, yes, that's it." Into phone. "Yes, that's the one. Can we use that? Hello? I am sorry about this. What were we talking about?"

It is pure Basil Fawlty. He's back again. "Three days work buys me six months living. I've just worked it out."

What stage of editing are you at? "Just doing the fourth (out of six) now. Have you seen it? Of course you haven't. The trouble is, not enough studio time — although the Director, Bobby Spiers that's S-P-I-E-R-S and producer Douglas Argent as in silver — got that? — have been very good. I'd say the best in the business. The best I've ever worked with. What was I talking about? Studio time. Yes, well we've 12 hours to edit, not much but what can they do? They've got no money. I understand this."

But he's saying it just the same. "You know, an average sitcom is about 65 pages of script. We've been writing 123 or so pages and cutting back. Plenty of ideas, too many really."

Do you ever feel like abandoning Basil?

"As a matter of fact, Basil was never conceived specifically with me in mind. I felt at the beginning that someone like... Denholm Elliott could have played him very well."

Denholm Elliott? Surely not. "Don't you think so? Of course it's too late now."

During the course of this disembodied conversation he told me about his writing powers. ("My strengths are logical, as opposed to Connie's; she understands women"); the Python days ("I don't see much of them socially"); his unease at the manner in which Python, and particularly he, were adopted by Our Culture with such tremendous enthusiasm ("All the pot-smoking and so on. Of course I've nothing against pot — ridiculous that it's illegal"); the Dailies "A pain in the arse"; and the state of his marriage. All with complete openness. He didn't react in good-copy ways because I asked him no direct good-copy questions. But that was because I my shit together had not got, as told above.

Concluding moral: if your genius feeds on a certain type of insecurity and is furthermore exclusively transitive in style, concentrate on innovation and let your most insane instincts point the way. Ignore what you see as your effect and look inwards for ideas. Accept a measure of financial insecurity as the price of stimulus.

And don't leave your list of questions on the fridge at home.

TONY TYLER

TERMINUS

CONNIE BOOTH and ex-hubby CLEESE argue over who'll get the best lines when the divorce goes through.

The Lone Groover

BENYON

LOVELY CRASH

THE SOUND OF THE DAZZLERS

POP THAT'S BRIGHTER THAN EINSTEIN!

SPECIAL FULL COLOUR SLEEVE!

EVEN THE FACTORY SEEMS LIKE THE BEACH!

SOUNDS LIKE IT LOOKS!

THE DAZZLERS

LOVELY CRASH
A NEW 45

CB 330

S

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

AM

69

THE NEW SINGLE

RULING THE AIRWAVES & WAIVING THE RULES

ROY CARR tells you how to play the U.S. radio promotion game

THE COMMON record company practice of stamping review copy album sleeves with a "Not For Sale — For Demonstration Purposes Only" warning, has always had one strange side-effect.

It makes them a kind of collector's item. To the esoteric hoarder defaced means desirable.

Similarly, the proliferation of official bootlegs and radio station programming aids has bred a new strain of herd-care elitist vinyl junkie.

Now a little explanation is in order.

In America regional radio exerts the same power to expose/promote talent that the British rock press enjoys.

The American record industry is aware of this fact, but no-one dares to openly criticise the all-powerful radio dictatorship. Instead they support the regime — mass-producing formula albums with radio station programme appeal, thereby ensuring their own annual profit growth.

You may not know this, but to record companies just showing a handsome profit is not sufficient. If a company is to maintain its prestige on the Wall Street stock exchange it must show an annual profit increase of not less than ten per cent.

It may be this which has prompted some companies (like CBS) to hike the suggested list price of many albums to an all-time high of $8.98.

Profit growth economics is just one reason why hard-core New Wave has so far established no more than a cult following Stateside. If the major of stations won't play it, few labels will make a heavy promotional investment.

In some cases it's reached the point where an artist must sell between 50,000—100,000 copies of his/her first debut album before the label will sign the renewal option in their contract.

So... to 'combat' tight playlist Top 40 format radio, the record industry has come up with a comparatively new method of grabbing all-important extended air-time — the official bootleg.

For some time now key American FM (and some AM) radio stations which carry an AOR (Adult Oriented Radio) format have — in conjunction with various labels/managements — been sponsoring either 'live' concert transmissions (i.e. WNEW-FM/New York — a three hour Bruce Springsteen Special; WRKO-AM/Boston — an entire Donna Summer Show; KSAN-FM/San Francisco — a five hour Grateful Dead marathon), or at least managing to get artists to drop by the station for an interview before plugging their latest product.

And though this kind of personal service can only be offered to main stations, the companies don't wish to offend the hundreds of important regional stations who are also essential to their financial well-being.

Hence official bootlegs and other programming aids such as product samplers and 12-inch cuts.

Even if at the same time they are supplying illegal bootleggers with top quality source material, record companies are still finding this method of promotion very beneficial.

Instead of underwriting sound truck/hall rentals and local union fees for a one-off 'live' radio show, a label can — for a few dollars more — supply all the nation's stations with either a live tape or a specially pressed very limited edition promo-only album.

The latter is by far the most attractive alternative.

Unless they're guaranteed a world (or at least a regional) exclusive of a Megastar's latest album, no station will play any new album in its entirety — let alone more than an isolated track by Crawler or The Pousette-Dart Band. Yet

THE desirability amongst vinyl junkies of all this vinyl junk has, inevitably, led to a boom in gangster activities. This ranges from straight duplication of promotional records supplied by the record companies to the creation of pseudo-promotional copies of rare items.

It's a couple of years ago, now, since a single by Stalk Forrest Group (later known as Blue Oyster Cult) "Arthur Combs"/"What Is Quicksand?" surfaced as an Elektra promotion copy for radio, but in such abundant quantities that there was no way it could ever have been genuine. Also, we're reliably informed that the black and white label of the aforementioned artefact is not consistent with the labels of genuine Elektra DJ-only discs.

Since then, with the increasing tendency of record companies to create collector's items and thereby generate interest by such devices as 'official bootlegs' (how on earth can you have an official bootleg?), the pirates have been beavering away like there was no tomorrow. Nils Lofgren, Tom Petty, Southside Johnny and Graham Parker and more recently E. Costello — amongst others — have all had official bootlegs unofficially bootlegged.

It's not only the rarity value of these records, but also the relatively crude presentation of them that makes them such prime targets. Unless he can compare them with the genuine article, the poor (or even rich) collector has no idea whether he's getting the real thing or not. There are, of course, ways of telling. For example, Graham Parker's 'Live At Marble Arch' should have the tell-tale Phonogram ridge around the edge of the label. And more often than not, the sound quality on illegitimate copies of these albums will be inferior.

... And NICK RALPHS catalogues the pirate spin-offs

The latest 'official bootleg' to be hit is Bob Dylan's 'Four Songs From Renaldo & Clara', a promo record of which 200 copies were pressed for radio station use. One week it was exchanging hands amongst U.S. Dylanophiles for upwards of $30, and the next it was on sale in some shops for less than $6! Bootleg copies of the Canadian 'Elvis Costello Live At El Mocambo' promo item, Ronnie Spector's extended 12" version of 'Say Goodbye To Hollywood', and the Mink DeVille/Elvis Costello/Nick Lowe three track EP have also been spotted.

Equally popular with the pirates are their own counterfeit version of rare albums. Currently available are The Yardbirds' 'Little Games' and John Lennon Sings The Great Rock'n'Roll Hits — a K-Tel type release that later came out as 'Rock'n'Roll', minus versions of 'Angel Baby' and 'Be My Baby'. Plus regular favourites are Emmylou Harris' 'Gliding Bird' (her very first album recorded for the now defunct Jubilee label), that perennial rarity, 'Safe At Home' by Gram Parsons' International Submarine Band, and inevitably there is plenty of scope in the field of old rock'n'roll issues.

The ethics involved could be debated for weeks, but obviously a record company that doesn't make something of the standard of 'Renaldo & Clara' readily available to the public is asking to be gazzumped. And wasn't a similar situation with the same artist and the same label nearly ten years ago the major catalyst for the bootleg boom of the late '60/early '70s?

paradoxically, they may well be susceptible to broadcasting an entire one-hour live concert by such acts, given suitable promo material.

Many companies have been quick to capitalise on this. Aside from syndicates like The Superstars Radio Network and The College Radio Network, Warner Brothers (to name but one label) have inaugurated 'Warner Music Shows' which every month offer taped live concerts (i.e. Todd Rundgren) free of charge.

The only stipulation is that transmission ties in with any other promotion they may have in the area.

Though I don't know the terms of the deal, oh a much larger scale, the legendary King Biscuit Boy Hour regularly hits 240 stations in the States alone with 'live' shows featuring the likes of Rod Stewart, Yes and The Rolling Stones.

Be it cut on location ('Elvis Costello At The El Mocambo') or before a studio audience ('AC/DC Live From The Atlantic Studios', 'Graham Parker & The Rumour Live At Marble Arch'), in terms of artistic control the official bootleg has more attraction to the artist (and the record collector) than a 'live' transmission.

The latter is vulnerable to technical mishap or the artist having an off-night, but the album/tape can be made at leisure.

These official bootlegs, radio station programming aids and selected cuts come in various forms.

The official bootleg is a straight concert recording, and amongst those artists who've made them are Elvis Costello, Graham Parker, AC/DC plus Nils Lofgren, Tom Petty / The Heartbreakers, Blue Oyster Cult, Jesse Winchester, Meatloaf, Kansas, Southside Johnny & The Asbury Jukes, REO Speedwagon and Derringer.

The success of Lofgren's promo-only album 'Back It Up' and 'Derringer Live In Cleveland' resulted in re-recorded commercial live albums. But in both instances the official bootlegs proved infinitely superior.

including a great live version of 'I Hear You Knocking' recorded by Rockpile at New York's Bottom Line last October.

Other promo ploys of a similar nature feature the dulcet voices of Jon Anderson, Brian Wilson, Chick Corea, ELP, Barry White, Jerry Lee Lewis, Ritchie Blackmore, and The Moody Blues. In some instances, the interview sections are open-ended, allowing a local DJ to fire the questions to pre-recorded replies!

Radio station programming aids (like in-store samplers) come in various permutations, including Greatest Hits-styled compilations as road tour back-ups (The Commodores, Kiss, Z.Z. Top, Be Stiff/Route 78 Tour).

Two of the most 'collectable' in this category are the Elvis Costello picture disc, with highlights from 'My Aim Is True' on one side and 'This Year's Model' on the other, and a 12-inch clear orange vinyl platter which has Elvis' 'Radio, Radio' and Nick Lowe's 'You've Gotta Be Cruel To Be Kind' on the A-side and Mink DeVille's 'Soul Twist' as the flip.

Then there are the great one-offs.

Aware that programme directors might be put off ploughing through the three-record set of The Last Waltz soundtrack, Warners compiled a single album of Waltz soundtrack, Warners Bee Gees' four tracks from Saturday Night Fever ('Stayin' Alive', 'Night Fever', 'More Than A Woman', 'You Should Be Dancing') plus Yvonne Elliman's 'If I Can't Have You' and slapped them all on one 12-inch disco cut.

Dylan selected four Renaldo & Clara titles for a 12-inch.

The Stranglers and Who may have had little difficulty editing the 'naughty' bits out of 'Peaches' and 'Who Are You' respectively before pressing up limited quantities for radio play, but making The Tubes live double album acceptable for airplay proved much more difficult.

The result was 'The First CLEAN Tubes Album'.

What lengths some people will go to to hear their record on a car radio!

But as far as America is concerned, it's radio that sells the most records. So an early investment of a few hundred dollars can, if the wind's in the right direction, offer a multi-million dollar return.

You can't knock those kind of odds.

THRILLS

Another popular variant is the album which is intercut with an interview. Amongst those who've plugged new products this way are George Harrison ('Thirty Three & 1/3'), David Bowie ('Stage'), Pete Townshend ('Who Are You') and Dave Edmunds ('Tracks On Wax 4') — the latter

AND in the beginning there was darkness. Then, it has been written, the Mood formed the Pistols, Clash, Damned, Stranglers, Vibrators and The Jam and it was good. It is now approaching three years since the genesis, and the high rise, dole queue, boredom revolution is a global business.

We can find The Stranglers in Australia, The Clash in America and The Jam in Germany — we can even find ex-fanzine scribbles being flown on expenses to interview the local lads who've made good.

Don't ask a man to drink and riot, he'll forget his point.

If you've seen the excellent Blue Collar film you may have noticed that the role played by Richard Pryor is a very nice summation of the cooled scream of punk revolution — all those who initially made the effort have been 'rewarded' and are now comfortably indulging in other schemes to satisfy the customers that they once were.

But that's not as depressing as it reads. We all know how brilliant has been the soundtrack accompanying the goings on of these past years. Everybody's taste, too, has been in for a service — how many copies did ELP's "Love Beach" dive in comparison to "All Mod Cons" — plus there are still facilities for any Hairbrain Joe to get up and do it if he feels the strain of creation pulsing through him.

This is GREAT Britain. Just shoot onto the Continent and find out if we've got it sussed or what.

There's us with umpteen shades of speciality within any one brand of rock/reggae/soul, and there's our EEC cousins appearing like a huge clueless branch of W. H. Smith.

It can be ever so modern to whine about how reactionary the UK is and how the scene in France/Germany/Chad is a beacon to us all, but that, my friends, is more desperate bullshit from clueless posers.

OK UK, OK. In the Fatherland I just wish The Jam had retained one of their old standards and flown that Union Jack above the afmps, because we can afford to brag.

BERLIN. The Jam are from Woking, I am from London. So we meet, of course, in Berlin. The theatre is on one of those highstrasses with a name as long as your arm, within a shopping complex where traditional traders like Burger King, C&A, and MacDonalds are still to be found touting their wares.

Inside, the house is well and truly full with a variety of punters — from a couple of dye-in-the-hair punks to a greying bearded man who turns out to be quite an enthusiastic old tomcat at heart. Past the toilets, through some curtains and into a bare concrete chamber which is the 'star' dressing room. Inside the mood is as dank as the trappings suggest, and faces don't perk up none when the member of the press is introduced.

Bruce Foxton, draped over a chair back, raises his head and breaks the thumping silence.

"Take a drink off the table, there's fuck all else happening."

Ah, these wild rock'n'roll parties! Gathered are the band, a couple of roadies, Dick the tour manager and John Weller, Paul's dad and band manager. John is a big-built bloke with a thick shock of silver hair and a voice comparable to that of cockney comedian Mike Reid. Despite his initial appearance, the stocky frame belies an unobtrusive nature, and, although not the first person I'd choose to get leary with, I didn't hear him shout let alone get heavy during the four days I was around.

I was interested to know what Mr Weller Sr. did before coming to grips with the wild'n'whacky world of teenage beat music.

"Ah y'know, all over the place... bit a'buildin' — this'n'that. But y'know this might be twennyfour hours a day sometimes, what wiv the travlin an all that, but I don't never think o'this as work, d'ya know what I mean? It'll knacker ya as much as anything I tell ya, but the kicks I get from it well... it just never seems as though I'm doin' a job."

"Now look at the group. They're

Dies' ist der modernische Welt gettin' a bit down because they're playin' these countries, praps for the third time in some cases, an' they might wonder why they ain't in the bigger halls, but even if they crack Europe next year or the year after, to me, that'll still be like making it overnight.

"Because of the way things went at home ya might get to thinkin' it's all a doddle but I know geyzers... like, I'm an old mate of Ricky Partitt's dad... and compared to an outfit like Status Quo, The Jam have just started. I keep tellin' 'em that but to them it seems like a million years."

In the cheesy bunker backstage conversation occasionally spurts but it's all very claustrophobic and forced. There's not enough room in the room for the trunks that the group's stage gear, so when the nod is given the conversion from Levi's and baseball boots to the legendary suits is done partly in the outside passage.

Rik Buckler keeps his boots on and they loom like grubby ski's beneath his sharp narrow two piece. Bruce Foxton looks him up and down, chuckling.

"What do you fuckin' look like..."

In the few minutes of milling about before they go for the stage I find myself in front of Paul Weller. The pair of us stand for a few seconds feeling a bit awkward until we realise the roles we are both cast in require us to BE FRIENDS though because of the phoney chumminess that riddles rock/rock business relations, neither of us knows the correct procedure for establishing common ground and from there to wipe out the obvious distrust that is bound to exist.

A couple of years back it was a simple case of us and them, but now nobody is sure who's with who, why they're there and even if it matters. If I were a rock performer the temptation to view any journalist, particularly any hack on a trip abroad, as a person merely reviewing my band to fulfil a duty tossed his way during an editorial meeting, would be overwhelming.

Weller shatters our mental circles and speaks first.

"Alright? ... you like a lot of disco stuff dunya?"

"Yeah... but loads of other stuff as well..."

Christ. You know how it feels when your mate sets you up with his girlfriend's best mate and after the cup of coffee and all that old bollocks you have to play the enquiring wooer whose life itself seems to hang on acquiring information like "Where do you work?" and "So how long have you known Sue?"

Well, there was me and Paul engaged in an equally closeted conversation. We were both rescued when the cry came for the gentlemen to take up their positions.

A FEW MINUTES after they'd punched into the set I realised why I'd wanted to do a piece on The Jam. This trio are just so excellent. From what had been one of the worst cases of backstage depression since Ally Maccloud crossed Iran The Jam were flying hard and high, a flush of steel confidence.

It was during this set that I began jotting down about patriotism, their string of magic muscle music creating a mammoth pride in my chest.

"To Be Someone", "Billy Hunt", "Away From The Numbers"... I mean, even knowing the catalogue of strength they have to fall back on they were truly awesome, and, during an encore masterstroke of Marthas and The Vandellas'

"Heatwave", literally breathtaking.

Honestly, this is no love letter. Later on when I was babbling to Weller about how good the set was he too saw how difficult it would be to write a genuine appraisal of a band's music when every other article you read will tell you so and so hold the key to the vaults of paradise.

"Maybe you shouldn't've come," he said. "People are suspicious of good reviews and anyrate I spose we're due some bad press..."

Last week they got some. In the singles column Ian Penman destroyed the new single on the grounds that Weller promoted poetic GPR and Woodbine imagery and in general did nothing to further mankind nor rock'n'roll.

Apparently countless reggae singles and the Public Image album do further mankind — but quite how escapes this poor stunted cloth cap. Maybe the prime reason that the Ayatollah seized control was that he advocated mass playings of "Fodderstompf" or "Best Dressed Chicken In Town" but I find that questionable.

The argument for the Public Image school of rock is that Lydon and Co are destroying existing rock structures and thereby creating healthy change. Well OK, but that angle of rock'n'roll only exists for those of you so obsessed by the importance of the hobby that it seems imperative to lay a cockamamie theory across everything that even vaguely comes into your idea of how things should be.

Why, for example, can't somebody be equally interpretive and say that the Public Image LP is an under-rehearsed expensive trash that is not 'a joke' nor 'revolutionary' at all.

Why? Because then, sin you are a philistine, a reactionary and a blinkerer fool who, in calling the album 'under rehearsed', can't see the wood for the trees. And it's a hard argument to disprove because you are standing by existing 'traditional' rock'n'roll and they talk in terms that can only be judged from hindsight, plus the 'reactionaries' hardly ever bleat back because they'll take their action on the night rather than debate about whether it's valid throughout the weekend.

From left: PAUL WELLER, RICK BUCKLER, BRUCE FOXTON. Top: a Jam jump. All pix: JOE STEVENS.

Ah, these wild rock'n'roll parties... PAUL WELLER—pic, JOE STEVENS.

Enjoyment, another trait of ignorance...

In every branch of expression, be it jazz, rockabilly, sculpture, theatre or writing, there will always be factions continually screaming over what is stagnation, what is progression and what is bullshit. That is how the game is played. But the music should always be a firm second to the motives and — and this is touchy — the morals of the artist as far as reviewing the case goes.

Weller was also chided for "penning singles for a mythical jukebox".

Well, sure, but the jukebox isn't mythical. Jam singles can be found at Al or whatever and sound excellent. If, of course, the crime is to pen 45 gems for public-playing then The Jam are stone guilty.

On this side of the fence let it be said that the single 'Strange Town' is, along with The Gibson Brothers' 'Cuba', the real heavyweight so far this year, and that it should be better than any track off of the sublime "All Mod Cons" is astounding.

Recently Weller was summed up in a Record Mirror article as being "a dull and simple lad". Paul takes the umbrage and guns.

"I read that and thought how ridiculous it was. Alright so look... you've seen I'm not like Bruce and Rick in so far as they'll muck around and be loud 'n' not while I'll sit with Jill" — his everpresent and lovely girlfriend — "and prefer to sit and have a quiet drink most o' the time. So journalists see that and think, 'Ah well I've seen Paul Weller do that for 20 minutes therefore that is Paul Weller'..."

"Plus, when they bung a tape down in front of ya it's kind of expected that you're full of hidden meanings about your songs or you're full of witty anecdotes about being on the road or slapping another group down.

"When, if you look at it, there's him trying to ask important questions and me trying to give important answers when they're never there in the first place. Now this is gonna sound like a massive cliché, but everything I've gotta say — or not got to say — comes out in the records. So just because I ain't got so much to go on about in interviews, which'll make boring reading, it don't follow that I'm a dull and simple lad.

"You can't say that the records are exciting but he ain't, even though I ain't claiming to be something special, cos, face it I'm responsible for most of 'em."

The conversation turns to promises, promises.

"I spose most, no all, of the groups went back on what they sort of threatened in 1976, and from this point of view you can't blame them. You just don't realise what you're getting into."

Yeah, but The Jam were never into hard-line militancy.

"No, right. But I couldn't say we've never compromised. I mean even little things. I regret like changing the word 'luck' for radio play and that.

"Even today, though, I'm still pretty sickened by the rock business. There's still so much of that superstar shit all the way through it — getting away with murder when they ain't released a good record for years. You've got to stay dead accessible or you're finished.

"But with record companies... I mean, it's OK saying you hate 'em and that you're not gonna have anything to do with 'em, but the only people we meet are the employees, who're just like us and are really OK. You never meet the fat cats up top. You only see the people who're working for you and you can't have a go at them.

"The thing is, though, to guard against thinking that they're all like that. You've got to remember that the blokes upstairs are only after what they can get out of you..."

"All the time we're getting rich / You hang around to help me out / But when we're skint — Oh God forbid — You'll drop us like hot bricks. I'll tell you what / I got you sussed / You'll waste my time when my time comes."

"I know, I've read reviews where it says that my words are pointless, useless. Well, I know that nobody is going to take action because of a song but... if I feel it here and it's important to me then what's to stop me putting it in a song... what's so wrong in that?"

BUCKLER 'n' BAKER forging passports.

... Dies' ist, in fact, THE JAM in Germany, where punks go by the book, the Union Jack flies proud, and the Star Club is empty. DANNY BAKER digs the beat and the bratkartoffel

SOME PEOPLE want blood, and I mean blood. In the Berlin theatre the crowd is on its feet, bobbing gently, which for Germany is quite a party. Still seated at the back are two hardcore punk rockers and the duo are plainly baffled. All their literature had told them The Jam were one of the originals, so when the band hit town it was obviously on with the old black'n'bondage twin sets and touch up on the two tone crop.

The pair had also slapped on some dodgy Dusty eye make-up and, festooned with their badges — "Punk", "I'm A Punk!", and several Sid Vicious and Rotten pictures — had come to see the group vomit on stage as per brochure.

They sat together while the fever raged about their ears, occasionally looking to each other for comfort. Bewildered, they had sought outrage and 48 thrills and had discovered exhilarating pleasure and 45 Motown.

As the reborn power of Manha and The Vandellas trashed their typecast demands for Slaughter and The Dogs our couple slunk toward the exit and the street where maybe some old couple's shock might stake their thirst to be the werewolves of Berlin.

No different from any Kiss/Rollers/Liberace worshippers, their kind were the death of any punk politics as much as any record company fat cat.

The narrow minded duo had probably read a million words on the revival of flair and energy, and yet when presented with one of its finest exponents had sulked because the wrapping was different to that advertised.

ON THE COACH to Hamburg the next day. Rick Buckler insists on regaling us with his Devo cassette. Buckler and Foxton play gags off each other continually, trading insults and forever trying to top the punch line.

Upfront, John Weller — which, incidentally, is Paul Weller's name on his passport — has some of the road crew with him in a serious card school. At the back Paul is asleep in Jill's lap.

Through the windows East Germany is just like we pictured it — tanks, machine guns and hatchet-faced officials. Very grey and absolutely No Fun. We are stopped for nearly 45 minutes as we go through the Russian sector, our passports being checked at least four times.

As soon as we are back in West Germany we stop for nourishment. Wurst is sausage and Bratkartoffel is fried potatoes. Afterwards, and let me tell you Bratkartoffel are magic moments, the band pose for some photos by appropriate signs. I ask them how many photo sessions they've done — an impossible poser.

"No idea," comes back Bruce, "but the real killers are the ones we used to do for Jackie and Pink'n'at. Some bloke says 'hold this bit of card' and you'll say 'what bit of card?' and WHOOSH the flash bulb goes and the next thing you see is yourself on the cover of Oh Boy with a placard saying 'Happy New Year To All Our Oh Boy Fans!'."

It was seven hours to Hamburg and the Star Club. Nobody ever actually discovered whether it was The Star Club because on arrival nobody cared. Not a poster in the window, let alone name in lights, it's an off-the-highway nightclub with an interior a la Barbarella's, red velvet and alcoves.

Weller and Jill sit at the back of the place, totally shattered. I pass him and he looks up.

"We're booked to play two nights here an' all... they ain't sold enough tickets to warrant the bar opening by the look of it..."

On the night there were maybe 50 customers top whack. As often happens on disasters like this, the gig was honed with that something extra, Weller still encouraging the few to get with it if they knew the words. The set was different from Berlin, no breaks yet unhurried, but the highlights remained the same — 'Heatwave' and a classic rendition of 'Tube Station'.

It must be destroying to be delivering one of the finest rock'n'roll sets to be caught anywhere in the world when all you see over the footlights is some bloke wandering mindlessly across the hall to offer a girl a cigarette. From Wembley Arena to a yawning Star Club... it could drive you round the twist.

The next night was cancelled and the promise of a luxurious free day in Hamburg soon turned to the reality of dull day in a merciless stone metropolis. When the four of us finally got sat around a cassette machine the result was predictable. We passed an hour or so rabbiting about the past few years but threw up nothing that would cause ripples in print. When I mentioned the first album faces were pulled.

"God, I could never play it now," Weller confessed. "Not that we're ashamed of it or anything. It's just that, like everything else from that time, it seems to have been done so long ago."

"Besides if we did it now we'd know exactly the sound we're after. I still think a lot of 'Modern World' but 'Mod Cons' is The Jam album and 'Tube Station' is the single. Don't worry about it though... we ain't peaked yet... not at all."

With songs like 'Strange Town', 'Tube Station' and (fill in any one from choice) behind him and still not 21 years old, Paul Weller is phenomenal. With Foxton and Buckler — and we must repeat that they are not simply backers — The Jam become tougher, better than the rest.

Enough people cried out that they'd blown it after the second album — enough to shatter them to pieces. But now they can feel entitled to strut; now all the favours are theirs to be dished out.

In a couple of years — and, believe it, they'll be around — Weller will be handling interviews with the passion he now keeps exclusively for his "work".

"Yes, it's just that his mind and his heart aren't into sitting down and telling somebody all about himself. He'd rather be somewhere proving and living his rock'n'roll. 'Gotta be yours too."

Dull and simple lad? C'mon now, you've heard The Jam. Don't you wish you could be like...

From Their New Album
No 1 IN HEAVEN V2115
YES! LIMITED EDITION IN FLUORESCENT YELLOW VINYL
Also Available on Cassette

SPARKS

The Number One Song In Heaven

THEIR NEW SINGLE OUT NOW ON VIRGIN RECORDS
Limited Edition 12" Fluorescent Red Vinyl VS24412, Also Available 7" Full Colour Bag VS244.
Producer: Giorgio Moroder for Mellow B.V.

Virgin

Heaven In The Seven Sisters Road

Or: Jimmy Greaves — A Wizard, A True Star

PENNY REEL plots the path of Tottenham Rock, from The Migil Five to Osvaldo Ardiles. Late scorers: LEYTON BUZZARDS.

Tot. Rock's finest exponent of the moment — Buzzards excepted — OSVALDO ARDILES.

*"Sixty-nine was a very fine year.
Was a teenage rebel who knew no fear.
Hanging around the flats at night,
Drunk on cider — outasight!*

*"Six months later, baret's grown.
I got a mohair suit to call my own;
Button-down shirt with a windowpane check;
Brand new strides with a dogtooth fleck.*

*"Growing up, I need much more.
The youth club kids were such a bore.
Me mate Neil said there's a place he knows.
Where his elder sister and her mates all go."*

BUZZARDS uptown (L-R): David Jaymes, Vernon Austin, Kevin Steptoe, Geoffrey Dean.

SATURDAY NIGHT beneath the plastic palm trees, and I am standing up in Tottenham Royal mecca of dance in an attitude of mute protest at the disc jockey's selection of Searchers and Hollies waxings, musing on not much, alongside such notable personalities as Lenny the Lion Tyler, Yonker Malcolm Chiswick, Beady Pegley, Haggerston Harry, Monk Taylor, Neil the Pill and Street Wise Sarah, when a party from Dalston named Chopper Harper approaches us, in the company of his two regular spurs Modernist Markie Feld and Mickey's Monkey.

Now this Chopper Harper is a very hard character in every respect, and in fact the way he gets his monicker dates from the day he takes an axe to the three Courtney brothers from Hackney Downs, who are at the time considered the most feared and prominent parties in the whole of Mare Street.

Knowing this, I am by no means pleased to see him at this present moment, nor at any other in the foreseeable future, particularly not as he had Modernist Markie Feld and Mickey's Monkey in tow, as these are both snide and evilous brethren in their own right, although of course I give them a most expansive hi, and say I hope and trust they are keeping nicely.

Well, Chopper Harper and Modernist Markie and Feld and Mickey's Monkey ignore me totally, but Chopper Harper goes up very close to Haggerston Harry and says to him like this:

"Hey Harry, I am hearing certain rumours that you are seen of a Saturday afternoon in the Chaz Don dancing with Susan Bernstein to Eden Kane records," says Chopper Harper. "And as is well known by one and all, Susan Bernstein is the same bird as I have been courting for this past seven months or thereabouts."

Now, of course, I am immediately aware that this is patently improbable, and in fact not possible at all. Seeing as how Susan Bernstein is celebrated in this town as Chopper Harper's bird, and knowing that Chopper Harper is more than somewhat fond of his birds, Haggerston Harry would no more dream of dancing with Susan Bernstein than he would of supporting Arsenal — and even if Haggerston Harry were to dance with Susan Bernstein, he would not do so to Eden Kane records, as it is quite impossible for anyone to dance with anybody else to Eden Kane records whatsoever.

"I am surprised at you falling for a line like that, Chopper," says Haggerston Harry by way of reply. "As you know, I am engaged to be married to Loretta Stolkein in the spring, and besides I never go anywhere else but White Hart Lane on a Saturday afternoon."

"In fact," he continues, "I will lay you plenty of seven to four that you hear this story from Buster Boulter, who has never forgiven me for wearing the same Conicks Young Esquire shirt as himself at Vicky Schneider's birthday party, and is always looking for ways to do me down at all times in consequence."

Well at these words, Chopper Harper produces a cut throat razor from his jacket pocket and, before anyone can make a move to stop him, if anyone has a mind to do so, Chopper Harper has sprung forward and wiped his blade evenly across the left cheek of Haggerston Harry, saying, "No bastard calls me a sucker and gets away with it."

The upshot of this is the appearance on the scene of a dinner-suited bouncer who promptly puts himself between Chopper Harper and Haggerston Harry while driving a beautifully delivered full-fisted punch into the latter's mouth, and ejects him from the dance hall with the declaration that hoodlums and troublemakers are not welcome inside the Royal.

It later transpires that as Haggerston Harry is picking himself bruised and bloody from the step outside, Chopper Harper is disengaging himself from Modernist Markie Feld and Mickey's Monkey to join Haggerston Harry on the street and says to him like this:

"I am very sorry I lost my temper in there," says Chopper Harper solicitously, offering Harry a hand to his feet, "and I hope you are alright."

"Oh, it's really nothing, Chopper," answers Haggerston Harry carelessly.

"In that case," remarks Chopper Harper, "you will not be too upset by this." And so speaking, he once again flicks open his razor, and ceremoniously proceeds to inflict similar surgery upon Haggerston Harry's opposite cheek.

Saturday night beneath the plastic palm trees, dancing to the rhythm of 'The Guns Of Navarone', I found my Mecca near Tottenham Hale station. I discovered heaven in the Seven Sisters Road.

■ Continues over

BUZZARDS

■ From previous page

CHATSWORTH ROAD, in the heart of Hornorton, is a singularly dismal arcana of Victorian terrace houses, shop fronts, '50s-style high rise flats, and the forbidding wall of the Eastern Hospital; dribbling, at one end, into Marsh Hill as it descends toward Hackney Marshes; negotiating, at the other, a particularly infelicitous market of cheap drapery and vegetables, before emerging finally into Lea Bridge Road. Its only claim to fame is that the 22 bus, having trundled the sights of Chelsea, Piccadilly, Holborn, Liverpool Street and Dalston Junction, finally comes to rest there.

On this night of which I am speaking, a decade and a half later, Rock Against Racism are overseeing a benefit show at Chat's Palace with local group Leyton Buzzards.

Hardly palatial at all, Chat's Palace is the street's one-time community centre, now converted into a club for the area's youth, offering some temporary respite from the rigours of nearby Upton House Comprehensive School for boys.

"I hate Arsenal," 22-year-old Buzzards bassist David Jaymes is telling me. "I can't help it, it's in-built. Ain't it funny the way you can dislike a football team so much?"

"Mind you," he adds, "Everyone else I know hates Arsenal just as much, too."

Seen, I reply.

"To a large extent," vocalist Geoffrey Dean joins the conversation. "You can suss out a person by the football team they support. Like, you can always judge a Chelsea supporter, for instance. I mean, they're all cowards."

As befits members of a group who claim to have found their Mecca near Tottenham Hale station, both Jaymes and Dean are confirmed Spurs supporters — although, as their name suggests, the Buzzards are a Leyton-orientated outfit, giving expression to a gamut of experience gleaned from growing up on the impoverished streets of suburban North-East London, and hanging round the flats at night, from Mile End to Manor House, Snarbrook to Stratford.

At present, Leyton Buzzards spearhead a small movement of similarly-based rock and roll groups, on a drinking scene that revolves around pubs such as The Charleston in Maryland Point, and includes little known entities like Fatal Microbes, The Lee Hart Band, Legal Guardians, Patrick Fitzgerald, Poison Girls, and London Underground, all of them playing the RAR circuit in Hackney and Tower Hamlets, to the extent of not inconsiderable local notoriety, at least.

"Most of our gigs are Rock Against Racism," claims Jaymes. "At the beginning, it was very hard for us to get gigs and RAR was the only way we could hope to play live. Since we've made some kind of reputation for ourselves, we're finding it a lot easier to get bookings, but we still prefer to play for RAR, not only for the support they have given us in the past, but also because we think it is a genuinely good movement."

"I'm not too sure how effective it is, but RAR are at least making some kind of positive social statement; and then look at the crowd we've pulled here tonight — and they are all local kids — it's good to see that, punks and skinheads united, and especially in a place like Hackney."

"At least as a group we can make some kind of statement," says Geoffrey. "I think that RAR brings different, conflicting cultures together, albeit on a superficial level. Like, it's great when we play with Black Slate, and you've got all these black kids and white kids out there in the audience, all grooving together and not giving two shits."

"If white people can dig reggae, they will see it is being made by black people, and are going to learn that you can't tar people with the same brush."

"I don't think music is an end in itself, but it can be a catalyst towards breaking down some of the barriers."

Isn't that one of the positive things about punk?

"Well, we do a song called 'The Greatest Story Ever Told' which is all about the new wave, such high hopes, and how it didn't do what it was supposed to."

"Young disciples preaching words of wisdom through our land; non-believers could not understand. Persecution, prosecution, could not stop the young Messiahs, standing with their Fenders in their hands."

Hmm, pretty standard juvenilia, really, especially when compared to the truly inspired 'Saturday Night Beneath The Plastic Palm Trees'. Did that come directly out of your own experience, Geoff?

"Yeah, I just started thinking about it, and wrote everything down, all these images. Once I got going, I couldn't stop. It was either writing a book about it, or writing a song."

Are you referring to the Royal, or might it be the Palm Tree Club up by Blackhorse Road?

"Oh it's obviously the Royal, isn't it?"

Have you written anything else in a similar vein?

"I've just completed this song about a place I went to in Spain, Llorat de Mar, and all I met was pissed Englishmen. It's about the language problem I encountered out there, 'cause all the birds had Liverpool accents. But if that came out now, it would typecast us. We've got many different styles."

"Tottenham Rock — forward on the track. When I take this stop I won't be coming back. When I play the musical shock attack. Sounds called the Tottenham Rock, As I would tell you."

(U Brown: Tottenham Rock)

THE GENESIS of Tottenham Rock on disc is described by The Tottenites in 1961 with 'Super Spurs' — a 45 celebrating Danny Blanchflower's team winning of the League and Cup double with the most fluent and creative football ever played in England.

A similar sentiment is played a few years later with a waxing by The Cheers entitled 'Up The Spurs' for Match Of The Mods Music, issued on the locally distributed Big League label; and in 1973, Young Blood Records secured a Top Twenty entry with 'Nice One Cyril' by The Cockerel Chorus — a paean to the Tottenham left-back C. Knowles — coining a national catchphrase in the process.

Last year, one Amigos O' Lane waxed lyrical 'A Tribute To Ardies And Vills' (State), a title that is still selling strongly over the counter of the Spurs Shop in Park Lane. (And we will not even talk of the aborted Terry Venables singalong, recorded when he was still wing-half with the club.)

Soccer aside, Tottenham Rock came into its own via The Dave Clark Five, who first hit in late 1963 with a cover of The Contours' 'Do

GEOFF DENE. Pic: GUS STEWART

You Love Me?', broke into the big time with a follow-up 'Glad All Over', enjoyed some two dozen Top Fifty chart entries over the next seven years, and went on to become a US obsession.

A few years earlier guitarist Rhet Stoller ('Walk Don't Run', 'Chariot') and beat balladeer Gerry Temple alias Keith De Groot ('No More Tomorrows') had laid some sort of foundations for The Dave Clark Five, although their music probably owed more to Stamford Hill Hassidism rather than the inspiration of Edmontown.

Like Dave Clark, The Migil Five were a further quintet based at Tottenham Royal, and in 1964 they became the only white act ever to score in the ska genre, when their 'Mockingbird Hill' hit the charts in the wake of Millie's 'My Boy Lollipop', at the height of the short-lived bluebeat craze.

More recently, Tottenham Rock has established itself through the medium of reggae, especially as regards the recordings of Errol Dunkley and John Brown. Various Johnny Lynch productions, the rise of Fat Man Hi Fi sound-system and, more recently, the dominant Third World set-up in The Broadway.

With their recording of the supreme 'Saturday Night Beneath The Plastic Palm Trees', Leyton Buzzards have given the style its most enchanting expression hitherto.

"Eddie Holman slows things down. You ask a girl to dance, But you get turned down."

FRIDAY NIGHT beneath the draughty rafters. And following the soul, reggae, and Sex Pistols floor show, Leyton Buzzards take the stage at Chat's Palace to inaugurate a sharp set of 16 short songs, in a variety of styles, the majority of them realised at breakneck speed.

Recently, the band won The Band Of Hope And Glory Competition, sponsored jointly by Radio One and the Sun, a success that Jaymes says "has done us both good and bad. It puts some unsavoury connotations upon us, and I'm sure we'll get the piss taken out of us in the press. On the other hand, it did give us a Chrysalis contract, and that has helped the band no end."

In their present line-up the Buzzards have been together for little over a year, although the nucleus of the group was determined when Jaymes, Dean, and drummer Kevin Stepien were at college together "playing stuff like 'Honky Tonk Women' for the students," Jaymes recalls.

Last year they issued a debut single '19 And Med' for Leyton's Small Wonder label, which is reckoned to have sold some 10,000 copies to date.

They open their set with 'Nice (That's What You Are)', followed by 'Hanging Around', and then the contentious 'Bader Meinhof Gang', the lyric of which has already earned the Buzzards a deal of adverse criticism in some quarters.

"Urban warfare, pride and joy, Time Out readers' pin-up boys," snarls Geoffrey Dean. "We hate your damned democracy, founded on hypocrisy. Smash your bastard tyranny."

"What a lot of people don't seem to realise," Dean tells me later, "is that a lot of our material is intended to be satirical. 'Bader Meinhof Gang' was meant to be a joke."

Why have you not got the courage to stand out and say what you really mean, I ask.

"If I've got something to say about it," comes the reply, "I can't say it in a song. I wrote the 'Bader Meinhof Gang' lyric, looked at it, and I thought it appalling. I've made the same mistake as dozens of other bands. So, I thought I'd go right over the top and make it a satire, but then obviously it wasn't satirical enough."

"It makes me laugh the way kids are still singing 'Bader Meinhof' at our gigs. I mean, I'm Jewish. What if I wrote a song called 'God Bless Hitler'?"

Another Buzzards composition I had cause to take Geoffrey Dean to task about was an item called 'Extra Extra', introduced by the vocalist with a sneer at all journalists, knowing I was in the audience, watching.

"Articles, parties of glory and glory. I must have my headline, I've just got to have a story."

"I'm sorry if that song offended you," I am told, "it wasn't meant personally, honest."

"At one of our first gigs we got a really heavy headline in the local newspaper: 'Punk Riot'. It was just like a bunch of yobs making trouble, and got blown out of all proportion. That's the role of the press."

"As for the music press, what every reader of NME and the rest should always remember is that they are not necessarily reading the truth about a band. What they are reading is the written account of something by a man just doing his job."

Let's talk about your job. What are you doing in rock and roll?

"At the moment," Dean fixes me with an earnest stare, "it's holding my interest. I certainly don't see it as a long term interest. It's something like I don't have to clock in, I need it to be a success, and if you think that's a financial thing, well up yours, 'cause it ain't, it's a purely personal thing."

"I've got a need to be successful in something, and if this proves second-rate, it won't last long. The art in itself is not sufficient."

"Going back to what I was saying about the role of the press. It's like suddenly there's all this interest in us, just because Tony Parsons gives us that splash review on 'Saturday Night'. I think that's all wrong, one man shouldn't have all this power."

It's less a question of power than simple information, I return. A lot of records are issued each week, and a reviewer's job is merely to pick the best of the pile. It was the transcript of lyrics about 'Guns Of Navarone' and Tottenham Hale that captured my interest.

"And what do you think now you've seen us?" he asks.

I still think 'Saturday Night' is your best song, I say. I also enjoyed 'I Don't Wanna Go To Art School' ('I don't wanna be a commercial artist, I wanna be a piss artist'), 'Last Tango In Leyton', 'I Wanna Be O D L T' and, surprise, surprise, 'Bader Meinhof Gang'.

What intrigues this particular observer, however, is whether or not the Buzzards might consider taking a leaf out of The Markies' songbook, and follow up the adventures of 'Saturday Night' with a similarly evocative account of Sunday morning...

THE PRETENDERS

■ From page 8

the extremely unamused Farndon, and seem at times confused by the musical diversity and individualism of the band — all of which is forgivable if your only frame of reference is the doe-eyed 'Sobbing'. The latter's tender-trap commercialism is unique in a set where tenderness is otherwise strictly out of bounds.

Watching them afterwards, drained and relaxing, one can remark on the characters concerned. Farndon, for example, has one of those classic handsome English hoodlum faces that, if he were younger, might compel him to display self-conscious toughness. However his evident worldliness allows him to overcome all this and instead one finds a guy with a firm grip on his personality and his role in the band.

The impression he gives is one of great inner strength that will prove invaluable as a tempering influence on The Pretenders.

Moneyman-Scott is the most extrovert of the foursome. A facile but nonetheless distinct and immediate impression of him forces me to liken him to a less rabid and less obnoxious Rat Scabies (the two have met and the guitarist claims he thought Scabies was an ersetole).

Immature but extremely likeable, he's likely to go through fearsome changes as time goes on. He's a survivor though, and he could very easily become one of the breed of precious few lead guitarists currently redefining the state of the art. Watch him closely.

Drummer Martin Chambers is quiet, the archetypal nice guy and perhaps even more of an anchor man than Farndon when things get heated. His drumming is always on the beat, always marking the right accents.

And Chrissie Hynde? Well, she is destined for greatness. That is as obvious as it is potentially traumatic. But her abhorrence of interviews comes not so much from a constant fear of over-exposure (as it may actually do when she remarks that she really has nothing to say about the music she makes). She will talk about anything, about the stories behind the songs, about the nights she spent alone on the tube crying because there seemed no possible way of breaking into the marketplace, of finding a niche. But you believe her implicitly when she says, "I'll just do it 'cos I like it, that's all. I've never done it because I believe I'm something special."

THE NEXT MOVE is going for the big one. An album and single will be recorded together as soon as the right producer is found. Nick Lowe is too busy so top of the list is Chris Thomas, although he still has to be contacted.

From there on out it's going to be fast and furious. This band are going to need to be level-headed and to learn how to pace themselves and, most of all, to trust in their instincts and hold together because what they have is precious and must not be diluted.

Not for the prestige and the glory. Or another human interest story. Because they are far, far more than that.

key facts

Taking O and A levels this year? Get KEY FACTS STUDY AIDS — they help take the work out of homework and have been topping the exam success charts for over 12 years. Call at your newsagent/bookshop NOW — they're waiting to help you. Over five million bought.

Angel Station
Angel Station

HOW OLD WILL YOU BE BEFORE YOU CAN AFFORD THE SYSTEM YOU WANT?

Clearly, you need to be a little cautious when you're considering serious hi-fi.

Especially when it's as serious as £600 for Pioneer's X90 rack system.

On the other hand, you can't hold out forever. With this in mind, Pioneer have gone a long way to ease the load.

We've introduced a unique credit system. And it's almost painless.

ANNUAL FLAT INTEREST AT 8%
HOWEVER LONG YOU TAKE TO PAY.

It's called the Pioneer Privilege Purchase Plan.

No other hi-fi manufacturer has a scheme that can touch it.

Whatever the size of your loan, the annual flat interest rate is a mere 8%*.

Apart from being extremely low, it never varies or fluctuates—whether you spread it over 12, 18, 24 or 30 months.

The period you choose is entirely up to you. This is how it works out.

WHAT'S IN THE SMALL PRINT?

There's nothing in the small print that we're reluctant to put in big print.

You're not confined to buying any particular Pioneer equipment. The choice is strictly up to you.

All we ask is a minimum deposit of 20%. And the minimum purchase must exceed £200.

That's virtually the end of the conditions we make.

It could also be the end of waiting indefinitely for the equipment you want.

Just send in the coupon.

And we'll send you full details, together with the name and address of your local Pioneer dealer operating the scheme.

Loan Amount	12 months		18 months		24 months		30 months
	Deposit	Monthly Instalment	Deposit	Monthly Instalment	Deposit	Monthly Instalment	Deposit	Monthly Instalment
£10	0.80	0.90	1.18	0.82	1.52	0.68	2.00	0.40
£20	1.60	1.80	2.32	1.24	3.28	0.97	4.00	0.80
£30	2.40	2.70	3.46	1.87	4.90	1.45	6.00	1.20
£40	3.20	3.60	4.62	2.49	6.22	1.93	8.00	1.60
£50	4.00	4.50	5.78	3.11	7.54	2.42	10.00	2.00
£60	4.80	5.40	6.94	3.73	8.86	2.90	12.00	2.40
£70	5.60	6.30	8.10	4.35	10.18	3.38	14.00	2.80
£80	6.40	7.20	9.26	4.98	11.50	3.87	16.00	3.20
£90	7.20	8.10	10.42	5.60	12.82	4.35	18.00	3.60
£100	8.00	9.00	11.58	6.22	14.14	4.83	20.00	4.00
£120	9.60	10.80	13.90	7.46	17.06	5.81	24.00	4.80

*Annual flat rate of 8% is the equivalent of a true percentage rate of interest of 15.6% over 30 months.

PIONEER®
EVERYTHING YOU HEAR IS TRUE.

To: Pioneer, PO Box 108, Iwer, Bucks, SL0 0JL.
Please send me full details of the Pioneer Privilege Purchase Plan.

NAME _____

ADDRESS _____

NAME

CUT THE COST OF FALLING IN LOVE.

£1 off

list price of the new L.P.
from Frankie Miller
"Falling in Love."

See Frankie Miller on tour:

22 March Colchester - Essex University
23 March Reading - Hexagon Theatre
24 March St Austell - The Cornish Riviera
28 March Cardiff - Top Rank
29 March Birmingham - Barbarellas
30 March Hastings - Pier Pavilion
31 March Northampton -
The Cricket Club

The HMV Shop Top 20 Albums up to £1.50 off list price.
The HMV Shop Top 30 Singles all at 75p each.
The HMV Shop Top 20 Cassétes all at 70p off list price.

All offers valid at least until 7th April 1979

This Saturday is Gold Disc Day*
at the HMV Shop National Sale. Sale L.P.'s marked with a Gold Disc sticker will be half marked sale price.
So visit your local shop for final bargains.

Sale ends Saturday
March 17th

*Excludes Oxford Street

Limited amounts of Gold
Disc items available

the HMV shop

363 Oxford Street,
London W.1.
(next to Bond Street tube)

Bedford
Birmingham
Bradford
Bristol

Corby
Coventry
Derby
Edinburgh
Enfield

Exeter
Glasgow
Gloucester
Gravesend
Halloway

Hull
Kingston
Leeds
Leicester
Lewisham

Liverpool
Luton
Manchester
Newcastle
Nottingham

Notting Hill Gate
Plymouth
Portsmouth
Southampton
Stockton

Stratford
Sunderland
Sutton
Swansea
Wolverhampton

SINGLES

SINGLE OF THE WEEK

THE DISTRACTIONS: You're Not Going Out Dressed Like That (TJM)

More Manchester magnificence! Sadly skimmed over in Johnny Clarke's wordless guest column a few weeks back, this poshly packaged 12" EP on Manchester's wealthy TJM label is yet another Mancunian pop classic and no way must it be overlooked. Like 'Spiral Scratch', 'What Do I Get?' 'Shot By Both Sides', 'Jilted John', unique complete, tenacious.

Contained are four immaculate gems of teenage vulnerability, each of three minutes or under, based on steely, neatly guiter poetry, sung with smooth charm, structured with superior wisdom. Such precious, precocious pop! (aigh). Brittle young Byrds meet Peter Pan Shelley and it's so very, very special.

The opening song 'Don't Bother Me' is truly sublime — Peter Powell has simply got to make it his record of the week. Buy it and make it a hit. (What is it about us Mancunians that makes us so soft and sulky?)

SINGLES OF THE CENTURY

BUZZCOCKS 1-7 (United Artists)

For those of you who forgot to buy or ignored that brilliant, breathtaking run of classics that complete the package, UA have re-issued them all in their original sleeves. There is now no excuse not to collect the set. After the cross cartoon 'Orgasm Addict', the best pop of an era: 'What Do I Get?', 'I Don't Mind', 'Love You More', 'Ever Fallen in Love', 'Promises' right up to the flighty, flirty 'Everybody's Happy' which at this very minute shoots chartwards with the warm blessings of all discerning pop fans.

Spread the sleeves out on the floor and smile at the colours, shapes and associations: play the singles one after the other, bam-bam-bam and swoon and drool at the twists and trickery. Smartie pop — smooth, crunchy, playful. Smartie people are happy people, they smile all the time (a myth). Peter Shelley has turned abobbing and sulking into an art! The sardonic acknowledgement of infatuation as a welcome yet hateful adventure!

For the price of a crummy album, the complete set of pop singles this side of Blondie, T. Rex and The Kinks, symbolising the magic of the charts these days, and the games people play.

SPIRAL SCRATCH OUTTAKES OF THE WEEK

SWELL MAPS: Dresden Style (Rough Trade). Birmingham's probing misfits Swell Maps continue their crooked march towards inevitable mass acceptance. This stubbornly unsophisticated EP, is even better than their endearing and random debut.

'Ammunition Train' has the same kind of insistent, strolling gait as early Fall, rolling out curiously and colourlessly (in fact Swell Maps do sound like a bubblegum Fall, or even Faust crossed with The Monkees). 'Full Moon' is 59 seconds of dubbed and dabbed coughing, grunting and groaning — avant-garde.

'Dresden Style' itself is a stirring example of hypnotic primitivism; a careering riff, messy guitars, erratic bass, galloping drums and the minor genius Nikki Sudden not actually singing a melody but doing all sorts of inspired

"You're not going out dressed like that"

Music to stay in by...

bending and drawing with his deliberately flat voice.

Swell Maps achieve a cunning and winning balance of the serious and the silly. How to be blank and full. (They could even be Wire crossed with T. Rex, but then I know something you don't). Nikki Sudden is vocalist of the week. Garibaldi is biscuit of the week. Rough Trade is label of the week. (Year?)

CLOWNING OF THE WEEK

SPIZZOIL: Cold City (Rough Trade). More Birmingham whimsical primitivism — the trash and boundless Spizzoil and their second record, with Spizz on clipped, whinnying vocals, kazoo and percussion, Pete Patrolem on coarse, clumsy guitars and percussion, and four more artless, audacious rants about the ardours of industrialisation, approximately played.

This is nothing more than unadorned punk skiffle — anyone can do it, not many bother — but such expressions are always worthwhile and repeatable ccs of moments of accidental splendour, such as the chorus of 'Cold City' and the words of 'Platform 3'. Spizz has established himself as the Spika Milligan of punk: he succeeds because his impudence always draws a positive response. Rumour has it that he's formed a big band with real musicians and synthesiser and things like that. Can't wait! Where will it all end! On This Is Your Life

EXPENSIVE IMPORT OF THE WEEK

CHI-PIG: Ring Around The Collar (Chi-Pig). There's a fascinating plethora

of sounds flooding over from America as the dissenters finally stir into doing something positive and practical about the appalling state of their nation.

By now we should all be grooving, grinning and grinding to James Black And The Whites, Nervous Rex, Theoretical Girls — and this supple, simmering single is well worth adding to that set. Why? Maybe it's the healthy guitars that sprily snake around and sily snicker at each other, maybe it's the light psychedelia of the two sides' meandering pop patterns, maybe it's the girl singers' memorable phrasing, maybe it's because they're the missing link between Jefferson Airplane and The Slits. It's potent, puzzling pulp, pop. It comes in a sleeve like those early Devo imports, costs you £1.50, but I'm not complaining and I'm saving up for a synthesiser.

CHART CERTS OF THE WEEK

KATE BUSH: Wow (EMI). I remain unconvinced by the winsome waif. What she takes from others for her music is a lot stronger than what she herself puts in. Her fractured naivety is a little irritating, and her wide-eyed ability to delude people with her mock artiness is more annoying than admirable. But her records are so well presented and preened I usually find myself reluctantly absorbed into their fresh, glowing luxuriance. Maybe I feel sorry for her. Maybe I'm jealous.

This is my favorite of her songs, less arch than 'Wuthering Heights', less Mitchelless than 'Child', a gently fluctuating song — a 'wantonly erotic' as the Daily Express would have it — of translucent grace. She looks set to be more permanent than De Paul; certainly she does seem to have a peculiarly heavy respect and a proportionately punk following. I saw them the other day queuing for tickets outside The Palladium with their Jam and Clash badges. The thing is, Linda of Ludus and Lora of Essential Logic do the Bush sort of thing much harsher and headier, with much more musical muscle, and with far more insight. Obviously they're not as cuddly and submissive as

Reviewed this week by PAUL MORLEY

Pic by PETE SHELLEY

Kate, who can spread her legs on telly and be as inoffensive as a three year old playing on a swing.

VILLAGE PEOPLE In The Navy

(Phonogram). A samey blast of excess and celebration to 'YMCA' but who's complaining? Yet again it's pivoted with that distinctive non-stop bass drum that pump pump pumps away with manipulative regularity whatever the rest of the song does. Yet again its hook is a triumphant anthemic glorification. Their gusto and gaudiness is much preferable to their kinfellows Kiss. Much more transient too, thank God.

NOISE OF THE WEEK

ELECTRIC FEELS: Agitated (Rough Trade). Where volatile rock'n'roll gets recorded in a tunnel of grime. Or is it really a garage! The scoundrels! Two garbled grimaces mostly sounding like a splooge of perverted vocals, disintegrating drums, and amplified vacuum cleaner, with a trebly burst or two of amorphous guitar. '64 Stones fed through a mangle, cut up and sucked through a straw. Some loveless noise! Such sour intent! And of course, slightly sinister. But, if you want, just a repugnant POP record to shock your friends with.

Rough Trade are supplying access to the great unorthodoxies and indiscretions of today, and that's a valuable function. The best thing you can say about it all is 'I could do that!'

CHART CHANCES OF THE WEEK (Selection)

RASPBERRIES: Overnight Sensation (Capitol).

Five years old, re-released to coincide with a Best Of... compilation. You should know it well — last time round it was something of a 'turntable hit'. A rare example of substantial pretty boy American pop-pap, cleverly built, packed with fancy gimmickry, with some neat, faint soul inflexion. Prime mid-day radio pop.

THE POINTER SISTERS: Fire (Planet).

A big hit in America, but don't expect their vintage verve or anything like that. This is the Pointers singing Springsteen produced by Richard Perry and as sophisticated, solemn and smouldering as that arrangement would suggest. So subtle and dignified (too subtle and dignified?) it'll need a few plays to chart.

THE SQUARES: This Is Airebeat (Sire)

The last Sire single I bought was the unexpectedly inventive Undertones beaut 'Get Over You'. This isn't half as elusively ingenious; the trio are currently touring with the Derry dazblers, and the title slogan sums up their frothy, flimsy pop — airy and beaty. They approach their pop the same way as The Distractions, with a quarter of

Continues over page

swell maps

BUZZCOCKS - ever fallen in love...

(with someone you shouldn't)

Radio Luxembourg 1979

- History of the World's Leading Commercial Radio-T.V. Network.
- News, Features and Pictures on the 208 DJs
- Radio Luxembourg Throughout Europe.
- Pop Quiz

Available from W. H. Smith bookshops or send postal order or cheque (no cash please) for £1.00 in the U.K. to:

Radio Luxembourg 1979 Handbook
38 Hertford Street
London W1Y 8 BA

Remember to print name and address in block capitals

Name

Address

■ From previous page

FINGERPRINTZ: Who's Your Friend? (Virgin). Fingerprintz have been working hard lately; they've just finished the Lene Lovich tour and are now starting the Red Noise one (coincidentally, blur those two sounds and get some idea of Fingerprintz edgy pretensions). This composed four-tracked EP gives good warning of their spicy, spiky sound. 'Who's Your Friend?' is fine, frantic metallic R&B, and there's an extreme, resourceful interpretation of Lennon/McCartneys' 'Do You Wanna Know A Secret?' Fingerprintz have a lot of potential, as they say, and do tend to use their electric guitar with refreshing resonance. (Why are Virgin so obsessed with coloured vinyl?)

CARL DOUGLAS: Choose Between Two Lovers (Pye). More competent, considered animation from Douglas. A busy and brisk slab of poppy funk. It kicks about a lot and that's what I like. Not as fizzy as Real Thing, though.

JUDGE DREAD: The Touch (EMI)

The shrewd and lewd Dread fumbles and gropes where the action is with an infectious, wrinkled length of dance noise. Until Big Daddy gets round to making a disco record, this'll do. I can just see the flesh flopping. Gross.

GEORGE BENSON: Love Ballad (Warner Bros.)

EDDIE HENDERSON: Cyclops (EMI)

The distant sons of 'Bitch's Brew' and 'Music Of My Mind' continue to consolidate. The albums these two singles are lifted from — Benson's 'Livin' Inside Your Love' and Henderson's 'Mahal' — I find totally unpalatable with their slick, sickening oozing and easing, but as singles these two pieces are moderately appetising (remembering that what these two professionals are doing is nothing to do with jazz). Benson picks and scats with typical deft precision, and Henderson's bubble and squeak is smart, histrionic and much better than the horrible Hancock hit. I lived through playing them both and I wasn't expecting to.

THIS WEEK'S STIFFS
LEW LEWIS: Lucky Seven (Stiff)

RACHEL SWEET: I Go To Pieces (Stiff)

THE SPORTS: Who Listens To The Radio (Stiff)

DYAN DIAMOND: Mystery Dance (MCA)

Stiff just get bigger every day and still they continue to splash all over the place the slightly eccentric, the slightly odd, the slightly good-time. Stiff numb me. Still, Lew Lewis' 'Lucky Seven' chugs along chunkily and cheerily, and has a slippery guitar-harmonica duel (what else). Could be a hit. The reviewer's free gift is a Shnaghis harmonica.

Rachel Sweet yearns for a brother called Donny as she puts some twang in to a tender version of Del Shannon's pretty 'I Go To Pieces'. Now, I like 'B.A.B.Y.'. Will be a hit. The reviewer's free gift is a 750-piece jigsaw puzzle.

The Sports are Australian — something you'd never guess from the stupid sleeve — and are a quaint, antiquated mixture of all the pub rock noises Stiff have ever plundered. Stylish, they're currently on tour with Great Parker And The Artful Rumour.

Dyan Diamond, the ex-Runaway produced and directed (directed) by Kim Fowley, is an honorary Stiff. The best thing about her plain version of Costello's 'Mystery Dance' is the way she forces out the words 'Mystery

Dance', but such moments are hardly worth 90 odd pence. Stiff could wrap up such ordinariness with their usual insulting irresponsibility, and make it a little big hipper.

THIS WEEK'S FAULTIES

THE LINES: White Night (Illegal)

JOHNNY CURIOUS AND THE STRANGERS (Illegal)

THE RESISTANCE: Kidnapped (Mequie)
FASHION: Steady Eddie Steady (Fashion)

Faulty Products are growing up too, almost out of sight, but the nearest thing they've had to a major hit is with Kark Kent, whose new single is so pathetic there's nothing I want to say about it. Faulty, despite The Fall and ATV who must be their most wildly popular entertainers, prefer to play it safer than Rough Trade and only slightly lumpier than Stiff. Nothing out of the ordinary amongst these records, not that there's anything necessarily wrong with that.

The Strangers four-track EP, for instance, is the work of a young quartet with a perceptive, versatile pop sensibility who I'd be quite enamoured with if it wasn't for the brilliance of The Distractions. They're worldly and visionary than Sires' Squares, though, and 'Road To Cheltenham' is soaked in vague vaudeville-Floydian psychedelia that I like a lot.

The Resistance single is a pretentious piece of mature, allusive rock-balladeering, produced by old hardies Poli Palmer and Tim Hinkley that's just not vivid enough.

The Lines make a meandering, inconspicuous touch music that makes me think of The Zombies, Spirit and clear blue skies. Pretty and inconsequential. Fashion's facile modern gestures, their anonymous exaggerated exertions and their attempt at dubbing are well nonsensical. Drab, dribbling new rock. Faulty, you're dealing with too much mediocrity!

INDUSTRIOUS MEOCRITY

THE WALL: New Way (Small Wonder)

DISCO ZOMBIES: Drums Over London (South circuit)

THE DUNNEAU: On My Own (Clubland)

PLASMATICS: Butcher Baby (Vice Squad Import)

THE DAZZLERS: Lovely Crash (Charisma)

THE K.9's: K 9 Hassle (Dog Breath)

THE MANIKINS: I Never Thought (Manikins)

EARTHSOUND: Liberated Lady (Archway)

The more pop records that are made, the more unexpected genius and greatness is churned up — opposed at the other end by the inevitable pale pile of presumptuous drivel.

There's nothing much here to jump about to or for, but you can hardly knock them for their action.

The Wall, a reckless teenage London quartet, thrash about with none of the ebullience of The Members or voracity of The Skids and chant with aimless hope about the new way, suckers and uniforms. Young punk; one day.

'Drums Over London' comes wrapped in what seems like pink wallpaper, is ill-disciplined, stakily structured new pop but the chorus almost makes up for it.

The Dunneau play economical, indifferent light metal, something like Lizzy crossed with The Ramones.

The studiously weird Plasmatiks are New York stunt people. Their pop is as crude, contrived and crazy as the titles on their EP indicate — 'Butcher Baby', 'Fast Food Service', 'Concrete Shoes' (the last two recorded live at CBGB's) — like Vanilla and her band in a bad state of shock.

The Dazzlers, who all seem about 12, come dressed in oranges, pinks, blues, pointed shoes, are Charisma's latest attempt to be contemporary and commercial, and play empty bubble pop that wouldn't for a moment interest even Stiff or Sire.

K.9's 'K.9 Hassle' is like a retarded Albertos disco out-take, and it's coupled with two useless, puerile shock songs, 'Idi Amin' and 'Sweeney Todd'. The Manikins make heavy going pop; they've a long way to go before they achieve the state of sloppy Gen X.

If you study Brian B's page you'll know Earthbounds name well. This 12" EP comes in laminated cover, with lyrics, and is produced by the group with David Vorhaus, who used to be White Noise. It's a clumsy ambitious attempt at exotica-rock, fronted by absurdly contorted vocals from Jutta Neinhuis that make Kate Bush sound like she's talking. They're not an ordinary sort of pop group. They're almost impossible to listen to. Could support Enid or The Only Ones, which is significant.

MEMORIES OF THE WEEK

STEVE HARLEY: Someone's Coming (EMI)

JOHN MILES: Can't Keep A Good Man Down (Decca)

Harley is definitely one of the main beneficiaries of the new pop (with Bolland, Bowie, Chinn-Chapman, Hunter, the Mael's) and without losing any respect the never really had any) he could continue with his old perfidious, insidious pop and have a few hits. Make people smile. But... elderly popsters just want to grow serious, bare themselves and reveal the stretchmarks. This is a watery ballad, with mournful steel guitar and flabby strings.

Miles gets autobiographical, honestly accepting that Melody Maker are not going to put him on the cover every two weeks any more, and with this Alan Parsons-produced trivis bravely aims for that sensitive heavy metal audience.

THE RUMOUR A EURO ALBUM FROGS SPROUTS CLOGS AND KRAUTS SEEZ B

THE RUMOUR

ON TOUR WITH GRAHAM PARKER

DATE	VENUE
MARCH 15	BRADFORD ST GEORGES HALL
16	MANCHESTER APOLLO
17	MANCHESTER APOLLO
19	BIRMINGHAM ODEON
20	BIRMINGHAM ODEON
21	IPSWICH GAUMONT
22	PORTSMOUTH GUILDHALL
24	BRIGHTON CENTRE
25	READING HEXAGON HALL
26	LEICESTER DE MONTFORD HALL
28	DERBY ASSEMBLY ROOMS
29	ILFORD ODEON
APRIL 1	OXFORD NEW THEATRE
2	HAMMERSMITH ODEON
3	HAMMERSMITH ODEON

AQUARIUS DEALS WITH DEMOCRATIC COMMUNICATION BETWEEN HUMAN BEINGS WHO LOOK ON EACH OTHER AS BROTHERS: IT'S RULER URANUS GOVERNS ELECTRICITY

SPECIAL OF THE YEAR

SERVED EVERYWHERE

Breakfast IN AMERICA

This exquisite platinum platter features 10 prime cuts, skilfully blended by master chefs using only the finest ingredients available.

English cuisine at its finest!

Album AMLK 63708 Cassette CKM 63708

Produced by Supertramp & Peter Henderson

Armatrading's American Dream: Strictly Personal...

Live (Just).
A Night In Bavaria

THIS STORY begins with a road crash.

Seven am on the autobahn that runs from Berlin through East Germany, to the West. It's cold, dark and snowing. The roads are icy and treacherous. A truck carrying nearly all the instruments and stage equipment for the Joan Armatrading European tour starts to pull in towards a welcome lay-by. The driver's been on the road for four hours and he's looking for a rest.

But as he touches his brake the huge truck suddenly goes into a skid. The rear end swerves onto a verge; the cab swings round and smashes side-on into the vehicle behind. Windcreens shatter. Metal slams against metal. Shouts. The cars behind dance crazily across the road trying to avoid the wreckage.

The truck, like a wounded animal, slides quietly down the verge and comes to rest in a ditch.

Shock. Silence. Cold.

The next few scenes are like moments from a macabre farce. The road crew, following in a different van, alight to a halt and leap out onto the ice. To a man they fall flat on their backs; one of them cuts his head open. Later the local police chief drives onto the scene, skids, and also ends up in the ditch. Like a comic nightmare.

But it's no joke. The driver, badly hurt, is rushed to hospital. The equipment, which may be damaged, is held by the East German authorities. And the road crew still have a six-hour drive to Munich.

It's gonna be hard day for everybody.

The end result is that the evening's concert at the Deutsches Museum in Munich (where they serve champagne in the interval — that or lager) begins a couple of hours late. It's a miracle it's on at all — instruments, lights, an entire PA, have been hired, borrowed and scrambled together in a few desperate hours.

The musicians are using totally unfamiliar instruments; there are no monitors, so they can't hear what they're playing; and the usual light show, consisting of 120 separate units, is reduced to three spots plus the built-in onstage lighting.

A lot of people would've refused to play, but Joan Armatrading takes it all in her stride. At first the band are understandably sloppy, but they keep smiling and gradually get into it. Joan is in superb voice. She carries the beginning of the set, then turns it around with an immaculate solo spot that features brilliant acoustic guitar on 'Steppin' Out'. The applause is ecstatic; after that everything becomes easier.

The first of two encores is a rousing, rocking, funk-out version of 'Back To The Night'. Joan is laughing, dancing, prowling the stage, having a ball — totally transformed from the nerve-racked, uptight, motionless performer of a few years ago. No doubt about it — Joan Armatrading has reached dry land.

Work. The Simple Way To Complete Control

THE INTERVIEW takes place the next morning. Our search for a quiet place takes us to the Munich Hilton's indoor swimming pool — a vast, glassy building, quite deserted at nine am. We sit at a table in the far corner, surrounded by large plants, while Jill Furmanovsky hovers nearby taking her pics. It's an unusual scenario for a rock 'n' roll meeting; and what's worse, none of us smoke or drink!

In which JOAN ARMATRADING boxes clever, evades the issues, sorts herself out, and plays a great gig. Which is what it's all about, isn't it? GRAHAM LOCK says no. Smile please says JILL FURMANOVSKY.

For a while, Joan is gently taciturn, answering many questions with a mere 'yes' or 'no'; gradually, she becomes more talkative, punctuating the conversation with a deep, throaty laugh. But abrupt or joking, Joan Armatrading remains exasperatingly evasive — it's not until the interview is nearly over that she allows a few intriguing glimpses of her real feelings to emerge.

She was born in St. Kims, in the West Indies, in 1950, and came to England eight years later with her parents. The family settled in Birmingham.

She left there 1969/70, but didn't settle in London until 1972. Part of the intervening period was spent touring in Hair, an episode Joan is reluctant to discuss. She recites quickly "I enjoyed it, didn't take my clothes off, 'n' it was great" — then lapses into a profound silence which intimates that the subject is closed.

After Hair, Joan took her songs around the record companies. "I got offered contracts 'n' ended up saying 'yes' to Cube, 'n' wishing I hadn't. But there you go."

'Whatever's For Us', the first album, featuring songs written with friend Pam Nestor, was released to critical praise but dismal sales — due, in Joan's opinion, to Cube's lack of promotion. "They were useless. I mean, I didn't wanna sell a million, but it would've been nice to sell one or two," she laughs.

It took two years' litigation to free her from that contract. The next step was a move to A&M and a second album, 'Back To The Night', which collected good reviews — but it wasn't until her third album, 'Joan Armatrading', that she achieved a breakthrough in terms of mass commercial success. That album, her first to be produced by Glyn Johns, was NME Record Of The Year; and a track from it, 'Love And Affection', became Armatrading's first hit single, reaching the Top Ten late in 1976.

The subsequent albums, 'Show Some Emotion' and 'To The Limit', show her consolidating her reputation as a perceptive writer and experimenting quietly with a variety of musical forms — reggae, gospel and blues are evident influences. In 1978, an extensive tour of Europe, Australia, New Zealand and Canada climaxed with an appearance supporting Dylan at Blackbushe, her most prestigious gig to date.

She obviously has a firm grip on her career, and knows exactly where the music is going. When I ask if she's ever felt caught up in a process she can't control, the suggestion is dismissed out of hand.

"Nah. Listen, you can always stop. Nobody makes you do anything. If things get too much, you can say 'Thank you I've had enough'."

"If I felt at any point that I didn't like what was happening, and there was no way I could say 'I don't wanna do this' — it's so easy, I just stay at home. It's no problem. I'll still have my two hands 'n' I'll still be able to walk 'n' breathe, 'n' hopefully have my health. That's all that matters."

At this point I inquire if she's made a lot of money. Joan becomes jokingly evasive. "Not yet, but I'm working on it." "You'd like to be rich?" "Yeah, why not?" "What would you do with the money?" "Put it under my bed." "There's nothing you'd like to buy?" "Yeah, Britain." Again the subject stays closed.

Apparently at the pinnacle of her career and in a position of unique independence, it's ironic that Joan Armatrading has again become involved with litigation against her record company. Typically, she refuses to discuss it; but the dispute appears to centre on an option in her contract which, it is claimed, A&M failed to exercise. Her suit, in the American courts, alleges that A&M illegally interfered with her attempts to negotiate for a new label, and asks for a variety of damages totalling over ten million dollars.

A&M maintain that she is still under contract to them and they have been granted an interim injunction by an English court which restrains her from recording for any other company. It seems unlikely that either case will be settled until late in the year. Until then the situation is in deadlock — Joan refuses to record for A&M and is prevented from recording for anyone else. A depressing tangle; or Cube squared.

Politics. A Portrait Of The Artist As An Island.

THE ARMATRADING evasiveness takes on the contours of an ideology when we begin to talk about politics. "I'd read that in the early days she'd received support from the Women's Movement, and I was curious to know her relationship to feminism. I got a short answer.

"I was never involved with feminism."

But didn't you do benefits gigs for Spare Rib?

"Not gigs. I did one gig 'n' I only did it because I knew somebody who was on Spare Rib and they asked me to do it. I didn't do it for the Movement. I did it for a friend. I wasn't trying to say anything." Well, I can believe that. But didn't you even feel you were getting support from the Movement at one time?

Continues over page

From previous page

A long pause. Then Joan shrugs and laughs. "I dunno. I suppose so." My remark that she seems to be very cagey about it elicits an indignant rebuttal.

"No, I'm not cagey. I just didn't get involved with 'em — and I don't know anything about 'em ... so I can't give you answers I haven't got. If the Women's Movement wanted to ... um ... sort of adopt me, then I think that's great. The music is there for everyone — men or women, gay or straight, or whatever. I love it when they like it."

She also argues that simply doing what she's doing is more effective than joining any movement. "It helps black people to think they can get on, it helps a woman to think she can get on. I mean, I'm doing my bit."

The fact remains that few people have followed her example; that few women performers control their careers to the extent that Joan Armatrading does hers. She explains: "That's probably cos I'm just stubborn. I dunno ... I can't be bothered with being pressurised, with somebody who's gonna tell me how to dress and what to say and who to talk to. I just like to be myself and not worry too much. It's just me; I've always been like that."

It may well be that Joan Armatrading is exceptionally talented, or determined, or has just been plain lucky. Whichever is the case, the fact that she's in an exceptional position undermines her contention that anyone can follow her example. The last thing that's likely to change prejudice in the record industry is a watered-down version of the American Dream.

This aversion to political involvement extends to organisations like the Anti-Nazi League, even though Joan becomes almost vociferous in her condemnation of the National Front.

"Listen, I'm very pleased the NF is getting the publicity it's getting because everybody knows it's there. I'd hate them to be an underground movement, just building and building, and suddenly we've got a whole other Germany.

"And it's so negative, what they're trying to do. It makes no sense. What they're saying is you should just kill everybody, just deport 'em to ... uh ... outer space or something. Cos if you wanna trace everybody's history you're gonna find all sorts of rubbish in there. You're not gonna find a true anything."

"And what happens to the guy who falls in love with a black woman? Or falls in love with a Jewess? He's gonna be off ... they want a perfect race, but what is perfect? I'm sure half of them aren't."

So why not work with RAR or the ANL?

"I think they're great — but it's something that needs dedication. It's like I read something about Ian Dury saying if every person in the world sorted themselves out, this world would be great. It's the only way."

But it's not likely to happen, is it? "No?" A shrug. "But you can try 'n' do your bit. I don't say I've got it all together but I have a go."

Apart from your singing, what do you mean by "doing your bit"? A pause. "Well ... uh ... OK, it's like, for example, by living peacefully with somebody, like a black person and white person. Then it's saying OK white people and black people can do it. Then you can do your bit without actually joining in the gang."

Songs: The Seen Says Hello To The Felt

THE QUESTION of privacy has also figured prominently in discussions of Joan Armatrading's work. She has always maintained that her songs are not about herself. Pam Nestor, who co-wrote the 'Whatever's For Us' album, once told Nick Kent: "With Joan, she doesn't feel she has to experience things in order to write about them ... She knows that certain stock situations exist ... and that's where a lot of her lyrics come from."

This doesn't necessarily mean that she's a cold or calculating writer; it could just be she's perceptive, sensitive to other people, and reasonably imaginative. When I quiz her on this, I don't get very far.

I begin by paraphrasing Pam Nestor's comment in a long-winded question which goes something like — your songs about relationships seem to use a lot of the standard romantic notions and situations; is that because you're deliberately using love-song conventions as components of your song-writing techniques, or is it because you think life is really like that?

The answer is much more succinct. "Yeah."

Huh? Which?

"The last bit. I don't get it out of a book! No, I know what you're saying, but I just write it as I see it. Writing so many songs it's sort of impossible not to put a tiny bit of me in it, but I do try not to write about myself."

"And though they're not personal, I do get very involved in the songs. I mean, it's not just a bunch of words, or cos they sound good together; they have to mean something to me to get to other people."

Why don't you write about yourself?

Pause. "Ah, I dunno. I don't want to, really."

Why not?

"Cos I don't." Laughs.

There's no explanation?

■ continues page 56

HEAVY METAL.

SO HARD, IT HURTS.

Two sharp slivers of heavy metal, harder than you've ever heard it. Scorpions new double: Tokyo Tapes. Four sides, eighteen tracks. Recorded live in Japan.

Get an instant replay.
Get Tokyo Tapes. By Scorpions.

SCORPIONS TOKYO TAPES

Special price:
£4.98 rrp

NL 28331(2)

REI
Records and Tapes

GRRR! EVEN HULK
HATES TEETH THAT TURN INTO UGLY MONSTERS!

The Health Education Council.
Helping you to better health.

AAGH! IF THERE'S ONE THING THAT MAKES HULK REALLY ANGRY, IT'S PEOPLE WHO DON'T LOOK AFTER THEIR TEETH!

HULK GOES MAD UNLESS PEOPLE CLEAN THEIR TEETH
THOROUGHLY EVERY DAY (ESPECIALLY LAST THING AT NIGHT). HE GOES BERSERK
IF THEY DON'T VISIT THE DENTIST REGULARLY! IF YOU DON'T LOOK AFTER YOUR TEETH, SOMEBODY MAY COME BURSTING INTO YOUR HOUSE IN A TERRIBLE TEMPER. AND IT WON'T BE THE MILKMAN.....

IF YOU WOULD LIKE A FREE COLOUR POSTER VERSION OF THIS ADVERTISEMENT, WRITE TO: HEALTH EDUCATION COUNCIL,
DEPT. D.H.I. 340-342 CLAPHAM ROAD, LONDON S.W.9. (BLOCK CAPITALS PLEASE. ALLOW 28 DAYS FOR DELIVERY)

NAME ADDRESS

SET IN maybe half an acre of ground, 56 Hope Road, Kingston 6 is a sprawling, wood-fronted, two-storey detached house, its flaking cream paint seeming to symbolise the decayed colonial gentry for whom it was originally built and who are now mostly long gone from Jamaica.

Its former name, Island House, remains on the gates even though it's now some years since Island Records boss Chris Blackwell sold it to his label's largest selling act, Bob Marley.

It's a long way from the ghetto of Trenchtown down on the coast road where Robert Nesta Marley grew up. A mile or so more up the Hope Road and you're on the edge of the hills, felt by Rastas to be the true spiritual centre of Jamaica.

Uptown though it may be in its geographical location, the collective Jah-ruled head state that resides here transcends such petty physical limitations to remain anchored well and truly down in the roots, in the soul of the island.

Anyday up at Hope Road you may find 50 or so brethren reasoning, playing football, or drinking fish tea.

It's said that this is where a lot of Marley's money goes; in keeping with an altruistic Rasta philosophy (which is the very antithesis of the more traditional sharp Jamaican division between the haves and the have-nots, arguably a colonial legacy), he must surely invest a lot of his royalty cheques in all these people.

No wonder I saw him haggling over the price of some lamb's head herb that was going for 100 Jamaican dollars a pound.

DESPITE all one hears about the early-rising habits of Rastas, the only person visible on this cloudless blue morning is the middle-aged dread at the rear of the house damping down the dust with a hose.

The only sound is the joyously celebratory rhythm (in England it'd be called a summertime sound) of Anicia Banks' (aka I-Three-ite Judy Mowatt) 'I Want To Thank You, Jah' jumping out of the system in the Tuff Gong shop, with Judy's promise that she can see "it's a brighter day" and that she is "stronger because of sacrifice".

It's from 56 Hope Road that Bob Marley runs his Tuff Gong label, with the shop tucked away with its own entrance in the far right room (as you enter the gates from the road) of the building.

Tuff Gong will shortly be adding to its catalogue the Island Steel Pulse and Jahman albums. Its current biggest seller, however, is The Waiters' 'Rastaman Live Up', an excellent single that follows in the fine tradition of last summer's Tuff Gong Marley 45 'Blackman Redemption', the first sign of Marley breaking with the sickness of 'Kaya' and 'Exodus' (both recorded out of Jamaica).

Neither of these singles will be coming out in England on Island — though there are plentiful supplies of 'Rastaman Live Up' on import in reggae shops.

After talking in the shop with Diane Jobson, Bob's lawyer and assistant, who is arranging freshly cut flowers in a vase to put on the counter, I step out onto the wooden verandah where several brethren have by now arrived, as if gathered there for some pre-arranged purpose.

Some few minutes later a large black BMW flying a small red, gold and green Ethiopian flag from the front left wing pulls into the driveway and parks directly in front of the shop.

Wearing fawn track-suit trouser bottoms, running shoes, a white T-shirt with cut-off arms and a delicately crocheted fawn tam — again with red, gold and green interwoven into it — the slight figure of Bob Marley bounds up the steps.

He reappears a few moments later and I introduce myself.

He responds just like Bob Marley should: "You wa: i some 'erb, mon?". Smiling, he presses some ganja, along with a single ZigZag paper, into my right hand.

As this is my first morning in Jamaica for nearly a year I've yet to refamiliarise myself with the highly idiomatic combination of Rastapeak and standard Jamaican so I content myself with my spliff, while Marley engages in deep conversation with the brethren.

At this point there appears to be a certain mustering of forces. They have to go somewhere now, he turns and tells me.

"Alright," I nod, feeling it best not to press my presence too much. "Later then."

Two more guys and Diane Jobson join the party. They climb into a VW bus. From the doorway I turn to watch them drive off. Then suddenly Marley, sitting in the open mini-bus door, gives me about two square miles of utterly trustworthy, open grin.

"Come on!" he laughs, waving me over. "Come with us!"

I climb in between him and another brother and soon we're bouncing crazily, like some Furry Freak Brothers cartoon vehicle, along a rui-filled road lined with detached middle-class homes (several of them boarded up, their weak-hearted owners presumably having fled the country to the States).

A DAY OUT

CHRIS SALEWICZ checks BOB MARLEY at home in Kingston JA, gets a lift and enlightenment on matters Ras Tafari.

It is only now that a vital question occurs to me: Where are we all going? I turn to Marley and ask.

"Gun Court", he replies, and nods to himself.

The Gun Court... Oh, of course! Where else would we be going?

My question and the reply have been the only words that have broken the almost religiously meditative silence that has reigned in the bus since it left Hope Road. I sit back, let it waft around me, and try and keep my considerably herbed head in shape.

YOU MAY know about the Jamaican Gun Court where, if the forces of law and order find any part of a gun or a bullet in your possession, you're sent for a trial that may result in a life sentence.

Out the back of the court you go into the sinisterly, euphemistically named Gun Court Rehabilitation Centre and it's see you in a quarter of a century's time.

Unfortunately in many quarters the standard of justice is considered doubtful, with allegations that 'if the police say you're guilty then you must be' attitude prevails.

More subtly iniquitous, however, is a recent Government Act known as the Suppression Of Crimes Act that apparently allows arbitrary suspension of civil liberties.

However, back to the Gun Court: after reading a report in an American magazine, I'd always pictured the place as lying on some Devil's Island-like swamp right on the edge of the sea. But this is not the case.

The Gun Court Detention Centre lies on the edge of the comfortably suburban foothills that become Beverley Hills.

In a way, though, this setting — such a

Bob herbs up

Pix: ADRIAN BOOT

forced attempt at making these green-painted concrete blocks appear normal — carries an even more sinister air about it.

As on the only other time I've been inside a long-term prison — Wandsworth in South London — I feel incredibly exposed and vulnerable as soon as the VW has driven through the main gates and we're standing there in the sun.

There really is a sense that they've got you now, and that if it is so desired anything whatsoever may happen to you and nobody need hear about it.

I suspect Bob Marley feels the same way, too.

But why are we here? Who have we come to see?

"To see a Youth," Marley tells me.

Why's he in?

"Them says 'e kill someone," he replies sadly.

We're ushered over to a wooden hut by a gate in the middle of a tall criss-crossed wire fence. We give our names, step through the gate, then through a doorway and into another concrete building.

In the high-ceilinged stone hallway there's a further wait as another barred door is opened.

Through that, and then through another more conventional wooden door, and we're in a another hallway — long with a dark-stained wooden floor, this time — with a long table set in the middle. On either side of it several doors lead off.

The khaki-clad prison sergeant (with holster on hip) shows us through a door at the opposite end from where we've come in. And inside the room we all sit on wooden chairs.

Someone makes a crack about Bob always hogging the limelight as he edges his chair forward.

After a moment or two a man in police officer's uniform enters and sits behind a desk at the other end of the room. There is an embarrassed silence for what seems like some ten minutes — though it's probably much less — before a slight, fragile-looking figure in prison khaki with a small blue and yellow fox on his head enters the door.

Michael Bernard, as I later learn his name to be, is ushered over by Marley to a chair between him and Diane Jobson. They talk in low voices which I'm unable to make out. Then after a few minutes Bob and Diane confer together and the eyes of Michael Bernard and myself meet.

I ask him why he's in.

"They say I murdered someone," Bernard tells me in an incredibly soft and gentle voice.

Is he innocent?

"Yes", he nods, and if it's possible to look into a man's face and see innocence there then I'd say Michael Bernard is innocent.

Before I can ask anything more of him, Diane Jobson, who used to work for the Jamaican legal aid scheme, begins to talk to the police officer sitting behind the desk. Bob Marley lands support, but in total contrast to the religious rebel-rouser one sees onstage, this Bob Marley speaks almost in a whisper, almost brought to tears by the prisoner's plight. It's said that he was in tears when he went down to the jail to get Peter Tosh out after the latter had been brutalised by the police last Autumn.

The police officer seems edgy and awkward, hardly capable of enunciating a proper reply. Later I discover this is probably because he was Bernard's arresting officer.

MICHAEL BERNARD, it transpires, is something of a Jamaican celebre. Sentenced in 1972 to life imprisonment for the murder of another youth, his case later took a dramatic reversal when the chief witness, a 13-year-old girl, declared that she'd made her statement to the police under duress and retracted it.

The subject of assorted petitions and a play, Youth Against The Crown, written by one Orlando Wong who is a Jamaican resident equivalent of Linton Johnson, Bernard is apparently now almost certain to get his release. However, as the way of officialdom across the world, this cannot be until it appears his release is not a result of the public pressure (this latter fact is, apparently, one of the things of which Bob, Diane and Michael have just been informed.)

When we leave Michael Bernard is allowed to accompany us as far as the first set of locked gates. But though I find myself side by side with him for a few moments the mood is hardly apt for any hard-nosed sleuth reporter questioning about conditions inside the jail. All I can do is wish him well, hope that he can keep on hoping.

Leaving the Gun Court obviously takes a strain off Bob Marley. As we get back into the bus he's smiling for the first time since we left Hope Road.

"There, you're the first journalist ever to go inside the Gun Court."

He laughs, no doubt aware from just looking at my face as to how phased I am from all this having gone on within the first 11 hours of my being in Jamaica — seven of which I'd spent sleeping anyway.

All I can do is nod, and I realise just how full of shit you can become living in the "reality" that is London.

THOUGH BOB's currently having a recording studio built into the ground floor at Hope Road — the house is now just the musician's hanging-out and general waiting yard as opposed to one where he actually sleeps — it won't be completed in time for his combo to cut their new album there.

Indeed producer Alex Sadkin, of Third World and K C And The Sunshine Band production credits fame, is currently checking out studios in Jamaica with Bob for that very purpose.

Until then Bob Marley and The Wailers rehearse every night in the music room upstairs at Hope Road until, as Wailer guitarist Junior Marvin describes it, "Bob reaches the place in his head where he can find all the music he's been hearing inside him."

Judging from the one evening of rehearsals I heard he must be getting pretty close by now. With Bob sitting with his guitar on a stool up against a wall — from where he could see all the rest of the band — they played fiery, emotionally clear and beautiful music that sounded at times like passionately religious chants and for which 'Blackman Redemption' and 'Rastaman Live Up' are obviously the closest reference points.

Missing from the rehearsal studio, however, were the horn section that is due to become part of The Wailers for their next tour.

The two Tuff Gong singles, incidentally, were both recorded at the same time and had their initial rhythm tracks cut at Lee Perry's Black Ark studio with Scratch at the controls and later overdubbed and mixed at Island boss Chris Blackwell's Compass Point Studio in Nassau.

Bob also has a Disco 45 ready for release though I'm not certain if that came from the same session.

Other projects from individual Wailers include a seven-piece band, led by one Richard McDonald and called the New Wavies (christened courtesy of R N Marley). This is Family Man's project, and material will shortly be coming out on Tuff Gong.

The much-maligned Junior Marvin, an excellent guy who is the son of a jazz professor and who grew up in JA, London, and New York, has also cut in Nassau a fine solo LP on which most of The Wailers, including Bob, play. As well as original material the album includes both a version of Eric Clapton's 'Layla' and, as if taking something back to its roots, the Marley song that Clapton popularised, 'I Shot The Sheriff'.

Wailer keyboardman Tyrone Downey is also working on a solo album.

As to the evasiveness of the hopelessly reactionary United States in falling under the Marley spell — subsequent albums have failed to emulate the success of 'Rastaman Vibration' which made the top ten — manager Don Taylor is disappointed that Warner Brothers, who now distribute Island in the US, have not done more with the 'Babylon By Bus' double live set.

Going on precedents of American fondness for double live albums one might have reasonably expected the Yanks to lap it up. However, we'll get onto this matter of America in a moment.

For the time being, in addition to their world tour in the spring, Don Taylor (who also has a share of Marvin Gaye's management, apparently) is considering an open-air festival in Cuba with Bob and The Wailers topping the bill with his new client Jimmy Cliff, generally felt about to have an upwardly mobile career once more, as support.

IT'S 8.00 in the morning a week after the visit to the Gun Court. Bob Marley sits under the arbour that shades the front door of 58 Hope Road, smoking a spliff and reasoning with the brethren who tend the yard and a dread who, as the result of a car accident, has had a foot amputated and sits in a wheelchair.

On each of several visits to Hope Road I noticed Bob investing a lot of time in caring for this poor man's head state.

Amongst white rock writers it has been fashionable over the past 18 months or so to be disparaging about Bob Marley, to suspect him of the kind of Macchiavellian stroke-pulling to which many rock artists are prone. All I can say, after observing the man, is that you shouldn't lay your own paranoia on others, baby blue.

Sticking his hands deep into his blue jeans and standing tall in his ankle-strapped tan boots, Bob Marley displays an almost pugnaeous, almost threatening, street-fighting stance that is the antithesis of the softer side he'd displayed earlier.

"America..." he breathes passionately. "It is pure devilry them things that go on there. Them just work with force and brutality!"

Does he think that the American music business has deliberately held back reggae music?

"Of course!" his reply has far more certainty than I'd even expected. "Them see that everywhere throughout the world reggae music produces love!"

Of course, the running scared Americans have also done their best to prevent Punk getting any foot-hold in their wretched country.

Bob nods: "Them lock out the punk thing because they see something is happening. Them 'ave punks, mon, so the oppressors bring another man to blind the Youth to the truth. And they call him," he draws the word out with a sneer, "John Tra-vo-ta!"

He points to his locks underneath his woolen tam: "If you wear locks it causes you a tribulation. Men not want to give you work. But you know the difference between stepping free and being in jail."

Though there are quite a few false Rastas around — even if once they get into it they're probably unable to escape its true pull.

Bob nods: "Not every man 'oo wears locks need be a Rastaman. There is many a man 'oo 'ave locks but 'oo 'ave a wicked 'eart, 'oo is a wolf in sheep's clothing."

"But a Rastaman can be any nation. Even," he seems to hesitate for just a moment, "Any race."

"Just so long as 'im 'eart is pure for Rasta deal with pure livity (living)."

"They are called dreadlocks because them put dreadful fear into the hearts of other men."

I-ward, a white Rasta who lives on the beach at Negri, appears in the doorway and interrupts us with his voice booming out Rastafarian fire and brimstone like Charlton Heston playing an Old Testament prophet. He spent his childhood in Ethiopia. ("a wonderful place"), he tells me, and then became a DJ in South Carolina. The day 'Natty Dread' arrived on his doorstep he got stoned on grass and listened to it all evening. The next day got a flight to JA where he's lived ever since.

I turn to ask Bob about his impressions of Ethiopia on his recent visit there at the end of last year.

He's disappeared, of course.

Rock 'n' roll people tend to live on the edge....

.... this album is there.

Bob Marley & The Wailers

Rastaman Live Up!

Including hit tracks: "Waiting for My Man", "What Goes On", "White Light/White Heat", "Heroin", "Rock and Roll"

Album 6641 900

distributed by phonogram

ONLY ONES

■ From previous page

had done service on the Mad Dogs and Englishmen tour.

It must be strange for Kellie, a veteran of three tours with Spooky Tooth, the days of 'groupies', mass hype, expensive hotels, cars on call, hot and cold running women, all the rock and roll paraphernalia — now conspicuous by its absence. Old acquaintances emerge, nostalgia is tempered by this new, more important, job.

Back in England talk centres around the desire to work harder than ever. There is much soul searching and what Kellie calls "the mood to ask and answer questions frankly."

The Only Ones have yet to stage the full frontal assault on the British sub-conscious they need in order to shake off the uncertainty. Costello, Dury, Buzzcocks have made themselves constantly available, whacked out singles regularly. Yet many of these acts are paying the price for overwork: they have become stale, or have alienated their original fans with displays of arrogance.

The Only Ones are not stale, though they recorded their second album 'Even Serpents Shine' under bizarre circumstances. Mair recalls: "It was done between dates, a track here and there. You need a different mental attitude to cope with studio work, intense concentration, a higher state of mind."

So far success has been elusive. They've impressed critics but failed to secure matching sales.

'Serpents' should change that. It is a vast improvement over the debut, the emotional impact of Perrett's idiosyncrasies, that honesty and petulance which put off many a casual listener, being heightened by determined, showcased arrangements. The atmosphere on the record is metallic, it thrills, coheres, demands to be taken seriously.

Songs of anthemic proportions like 'Out There In The Night' and

'Someone Who Cares' are aligned with new ground in 'Programme' and 'Instrumental'. The styles vary but the kick is direct. They've taken more chances, and if they've borrowed they've done so with full return. (Perry: "The percussion part on 'Instrumental' is reminiscent of Pharoah Saunders' 'Japan', it's a lot of tin cans and bells and stuff.") Perrett raises his eyebrows: "Fuckin' hell John, I thought you invented all them licks.").

The overriding impression is of a band with huge ambition, the flights of heavy duty expertise from the front man proves the obvious — this band will be at their best in concert auditoriums and not the neighbourhood Mecca.

Kellie says: "We don't want to be a cult. We haven't got this far for purely artistic reasons. We want success, to be rich. If we stayed in clubs we'd get nowhere."

Tony the driver echoes this sentiment after the last set in New York. "Youse guys is too good for dis place. Next time I'll drive ya to Madison Square Garden."

MAIR AND Perrett co-produced 'Serpents' and it's difficult to imagine a name producer improving on the result. Yet because 'You've Got To Pay' hasn't got on the BBC playlist (BBC are thinking of calling in a commercial producer for the next single — a move Perry refers to as "a desperate marketing ploy").

This lack of a hit single is perplexing. Neither 'Lovers Of Today' or 'Another Girl' created the effects they merited — and these are two of the finest singles to emerge from a British band in years. ('Another Girl' Another Planet' in fact crops up as the theme tune for Den Hegarty's new weekly TV show — third time lucky?).

As Mair points out, "Most people think we're an oddity. We need a hit to get them attuned. It wasn't until Pink Floyd broke through with 'Money' and 'Dark Side Of The Moon' that they won their elementary mass appeal."

"I sometimes wonder if we're too indulgent, but we try and keep a balance on any obsessions. We feel the songs are outstanding so we've got to graft... and wait. Sometimes it seems that we don't have the organisation to hard sell, or we aren't capable of a commercial hit. It won't make any difference in the long term."

Perry pours on the cold water: "Alan's an eternal optimist. Maybe after ten years' hard work we'll have a minor hit with a totally unrepresentative song. Four year-olds are capable of hit singles."

Perrett says he listens to stuff like 'Armed Forces' — "to see if we're going wrong. We've got to get on the airwaves of the world; our fans are great but there aren't enough of 'em. Perhaps we're being overtaken commercially..."

Perry: "But not artistically. There's millions of these new bands and none of them inspires me to check them out further. You can't believe what you read in the papers — every week something is greater than everything else."

"It would feel odd if we went out as support with a bigger group. We've got to stand on our own ground, however small, because the band's been together long enough to exist in its own right."

"We should present ourselves in a way appropriate to the number of people. We want thousands screaming 'cos the band works better in concert, we present ourselves as a unit. I want riots, fans rushing the stage, falling equipment, crushed bodies... we never wanted to get stuck in little clubs, that ideal was never shared by us."

Perrett: "Clubs are great if there's a good atmosphere..."

Perry: "Yeah, it."

I ask Perrett some specifics about the lyrics, a subject he hates discussing.

"I'm proud of 'From Here To Eternity', 'Flaming Torch', 'Miles From Nowhere'. Some of the songs, like 'In-betweeners', are old and the words don't mean anything to me now."

"'Flaming Torch' is the most abstract lyric — all that stuff about

'ancient ruins covered in dirt' and 'I practise spiritual research' has to do with dreams, the past. 'Miles From Nowhere'... that's the feeling that I want to be untouched by everything. It's hard to retain the things you thought were important. I dunno, but I try not to let life affect me."

"Sometimes I look at the songs afterwards and discover hidden depths... I haven't got the patience to do any other kind of writing. The songs are modern poetry; poets were stars in the 19th Century, they had the effect that rock and roll has now, people like Byron and Shelley. I had that forced down me at school, suppose I enjoyed it. I don't read books now, just the News Of The World."

This introverted, self-deprecating stance is typical of Perrett, though the quality of his imagery belies the inverted snobbery he falls back on when pressed. His songs are so personally conceived that it seems unreasonable to dig deeper in conversation.

Perrett also speaks of "a need to make music that transcends money". He's been doing it for ten years, first with England's Glory. Same is true of Perry, who with Magic Muscle then The Rats, Robert Hunter and now The Only Ones has established total credibility. All of them are born musicians.

Watching Perrett in the studio or on stage you witness a character quite unlike the retiring, sometimes inarticulate individual who spends days in bed at a time. Once the guitar is strapped on Perrett becomes immersed in his songs, his performing role, his alter ego.

It's his world.

NOW THE Only Ones embark on a lengthy spell of English and European touring.

Some of the gigs are RAR backed and will expose the band to a wider cross section than Only Ones stewards, though Perry is as agreeably caustic as usual.

"I support the ideals but I'm not sure what the movement achieves. It's such a cliché. Everyone with any sense is against racism but it's got to the stage of 'Stamp collectors against racism' and 'Skateboarders against racism'. I've got visions of a lot of liberals with their fingers in their ears: 'It's an awful noise isn't it?' — Yes, but it's all in a good cause."

The Only Ones' mixture of brutal cynicism and their greater personal belief is part of the make-up. They are not hypocrites or fools; their organisation is anarchic and opinions differ. Perrett, the eternal patriot, voiced misgivings over going to America and has doubts about the possibility of recording the third album in Nassau — a move favoured by other band members (at least they'd all be there at the same time...).

"Did you see the Average White Band on the OGGTV in Nassau? I hate all that, people walking around with fat stomachs hanging out of their shorts. Besides, it'd be too hot there. I like England."

Perry chaffs at this insularity. Band democracy will decide. All are adamant that the previous untogtherness must be a thing of the past.

Kellie: "There can't be any more splits in ideals. We've got to share the ambitions, go through the shit together, and we'll do it."

A naive sentiment perhaps, but inevitably true. 'Even Serpents Shine' will establish the band's credentials once and for all as a force to be reckoned with, while the live shows are invariably displays of unequalled class in this writer's book.

The band that returned from America was hot to display its master moves on home territory, ready to add some important notches to its belt. The time has to be right for 'The Only Ones' flaming torch to spread its magic in the night. As Kellie said, when the band left their final rehearsal before the opening night in (Old) York: "This is an interesting time for The Only Ones. A very interesting time."

That's the understatement of the year.

THIS ALBUM CONTAINS FOUL LANGUAGE

LOU REED LIVE
THROUGH THIS TAKE NO PRISONERS

Live double. Includes Sweet Jane, Waiting For The Man, Coney Island Baby, Berlin Walk On The Wild Side and others. Don't miss it.

RCA
Records and Music

Angel Station
Angel Station

Is Manfred Mann's Earth Band
latest album. BRON 516

Their latest single
'YOU ANGEL YOU'
BRO 68

A sad fact, proved to be true night after night, is that without proper amplification, good guitarists with expensive instruments will sound bad. The worse the sound, the worse the playing and everyone suffers. It's a waste of good money and talent.

Since Yamaha make excellent musical instruments they naturally needed amplifiers of compatible quality to do them justice, and since only the best is good enough for Yamaha, they built their own.

Like the rest of their instruments, Yamaha amplification is a satisfying blend of sophistication and reliability, characteristics not shared by a lot of their rivals.

But then Yamaha is a breed of its own.

YAMAHA

Craftsmen to the world's musicians since 1887.

Kemble/Yamaha, Mount Avenue, Bletchley, Milton Keynes Telephone 0908 71771

SILVER SCREENIt's sheer hell in them
thar hillsThe Hills Have Eyes

Directed by Wes Craven
Starring Susan Lanier and Robert Houston
(New Realm)

Take one WASPish family from Normalville, Ohio — Mom, Pop, 2.8 kids, frisbee and dogs — en route for L.A. Snap the back axle of their cosy trailer-towing Buick, stranding them in some Godforsaken backwater snake desert (marked on the map as a USAF nuclear testing site). Add a colony of marauding mutant Masonequahillbillies and Vollie: The recipe is complete for an all-out, nail nibbling chiller-pic.

And that's exactly what you get. Written and directed by Wes Craven in 1977, The Hills Have Eyes — winner of the Sitges International Horror Film Festival and selected for last year's London Film Festival — fits squarely in the same American Hulk-Gothic mould as Night Of The Living Dead and Race With The Devil.

An underlying theme of these films is the conflict between good old American innocence and evil ungodly weirdness. True to form, we see in Hills the forces of Rin Tin Tin wholesomeness locked in grisly, no-holds-barred combat with filmdom's most insalubrious no-goodniks ever.

Why, no sooner had they crucified Dad than they start to terrorise the survivors by heavy-breathing over the Citizens Band radio. It transpires that they all have a heavy cannibalism habit to support and the movie charts their gruesome endeavours to de-cub Baby for their hill-top barbecue.

Lurid? Very. But in Craven's directoral hands The Hills Have Eyes is structured and styled with such a commanding sense of Kentucky fried frissons that it is imbued with flesh-crawling credibility. He skilfully balances moments of understated tension with explicit scenes of gross violence, and the effect is designed to leave you in a state of seat-edge shockus interruptus.

The Hills Have Eyes: the lucky ones died first, it says here.

Those with a nose for the nasty will cherish this film, if only for the garish rat's bladder make-up and the inspired casting. For here is an opportunity to savour the not inconsiderable screen presence of Hollywood's token ugliest human. (Remember the dome-headed incontinent with the NF eyes who hooted a lot in One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest? It is he.)

Essential late-night viewing — but keep a tight grip on your choc-ice.

Rick Joseph

In Praise Of Older Women

Directed by George Kaczender
Starring Tom Berenger
(Col-EMI-Warner)

Strange that it should have taken so long for Stephen Vizinczey's best-selling '60s novel to reach the screen, since its subject-matter — the sexual education of a Hungarian buck with a particular voracious appetite for instruction — seems rich in commercial possibilities.

Andres Vajda, virile and predatory, has a single-minded obsession with sex, and screw the social graces: in comparison, Casanova seems bashful. "If you need to be seduced," he tells one of his would-be lays/victims, "then it isn't worth it."

Hence the conversational hors d'oeuvres are skipped entirely. Presumably this makes it difficult for the film-maker trying to construct something more edifying than pure porn, and while Kaczender's film clearly has some pretensions to seriousness, he actually undermines his own purpose by being too faithful to the original.

Vizinczey's book had a veneer of literary sophistication, and professed some serious intent by making comparisons between different codes of sexual behaviour in the old and new worlds. This film version was bound to sacrifice the former, and it loses the latter through its total lack of atmosphere.

While the locations shift from the post-war streets of Budapest, through the 1956 Hungarian uprising, to the Canadian campuses of the early '60s, no sense of place is ever established; recurrent Americanisms like, "He's still at school, but he's skipped two grades" don't help.

The scenes of the populist revolution are done on the cheap, with three extras and a flag, and make the whole movie seem under-budgeted. Further, although the movie spans 20 changing post-war years, the only suggestion of the passing of time is the replacement of suspenders by tights.

However, there is a yet more fundamental weakness. It just isn't possible for the strapping Tom Berenger to portray the ungainliness of the 16-year-old sexual novitiate, because he always looks twice the age of the character he's meant to be playing.

Given a movie whose sights, even if once set high, automatically revert to crotch-level, skilful acting performances such as that turned in by Karen Black just seem absurdly redundant.

Bob Woffinden

More films over page

Alan Alda Bill Cosby Walter Matthau Richard Pryor
Michael Caine Jane Fonda Elaine May Maggie Smith

"A HOWL...
UPROARIOUS...
VERY FUNNY"

Vincent Canby, N.Y. Times

STORY AND SCREENPLAY BY NEIL SIMON. MUSIC BY JOHN WILLIAMS. COSTUME DESIGNER: JANE FONDAS.

NEIL SIMON'S "CALIFORNIA SUITE" starring ALAN ALDA · MICHAEL CAINE · BILL COSBY · JANE FONDA · WALTER MATTHAU · ELAINE MAY · RICHARD PRYOR · MAGGIE SMITH

Screenplay by NEIL SIMON. Produced by ROY NEWMAN. Directed by EDWARD ZWIG.

ORIGINAL SOUNDTRACK ALBUM ON CBS RECORDS

from EASTMAN Released by Columbia & MCA Warner Distributors

DAILY PERFORMANCES START TUESDAY MARCH 20
ODEON LEICESTER SQUARE TELEPHONE: 930 6111

Sep perfs daily, doors open 1.45, 4.45, 7.45 pm. Late night show Fri and Sat, doors open 11.15 pm. All seats bookable. Advance box office open Mon-Sat 10.30 am-8.00 pm. Sun 1.30 pm-8.00 pm.

Chosen for The Royal Film Performance, 1979, in the presence of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother. To aid the Cinema and Television Benevolent Fund, Monday March 19, ODEON THEATRE, LEICESTER SQ.

Oneness is one sound— the sound of genius from Carlos Santana

A sound that's been honed to perfection over the last ten years.

A sound that bursts out in its full, fiery splendour on
"Oneness. Silver Dreams Golden Reality"
—the sparkling new album from Devadip Carlos Santana.

With the help of friends from every era of his career, Carlos offers you the pure essence of Santana.

Hear it on his new solo album
"Oneness. Silver Dreams Golden Reality."

MORE SILVER SCREEN

Below: director FRED SCHEPISI. Left: TOMMY LEWIS in the starring role in Schepisi's controversial 'The Chant Of Jimmie Blacksmith'.

Schepisi on Australian racism

Nearly 80 years ago, an Aboriginal farmworker in Australia went berserk and hacked to death with an axe four white women settlers. It was a notable event because those killed were among the first to die at Aboriginal hands, although nearly 20,000 Aborigines were killed by whites.

In 1973, respected Australian novelist Thomas Keneally based his book The Chant Of Jimmie Blacksmith on the incident. Now Fred Schepisi's film (reviewed last week in Silver Screen) is causing a storm of controversy in Australia and when it was shown at last year's Cannes Film Festival it brought the audience to their feet.

"There have been a couple of Australian films that have approached the Aboriginal issue," says the big, blond, quietly spoken Schepisi (pronounced as in Pepsi). "But I think this is the first one to try and really come to terms with the racism that is wrapped around our historical roots."

"There had been trouble with a few previous films that featured Aborigines. On one occasion radicals stormed the studios and demanded the right to re-write the script. That was the kind of reaction that I wanted to avoid. I wanted to get the film right from a black point of view and I also wanted to tell a good story. I tip-toed through the politics and got guidelines from as many people as possible. In the end it worked out fine."

"At the first screening a group of Aborigines stormed the front row, where I was sitting, and told me that I was a black man — it was the greatest compliment that I've ever had."

Although it is violent, Jimmie Blacksmith is never purely sensational and certainly is not a polemical film. Much is done by implication: one of the most disturbing moments comes when Ray Barrett (playing the brutal Police Chief) is roaring drunk, trousers undone and fingering the bulge in his underpants — we never see what he does to the terrified Aboriginal prisoner who is found hanging in the cell next morning.

"There were other things that we didn't show," says Schepisi. "At the beginning, Jimmie as a young boy slips away from the mission into the outback, to attend his circumcision rites. It's a ceremony that still takes place, so they asked us not to film the central part.

"There is also a rather puzzling sequence during the ceremony when an alarming noise is heard, but it is never made clear what it is. It's made by a bull roarer, one of those things like a ruler with a string attached that makes a noise when you whirl it around your head."

"They are used in Aborigine ceremonies to keep the women away, but no woman must ever see one. So they asked us not to film it as a woman would be able to see it when the film was shown. I left the scene in to create a bit of mystery."

While making Jimmie Blacksmith, Schepisi developed a great admiration for the Aborigines.

"I found that I had all sorts of unconscious racist assumptions, even though I like to think of myself as fairly liberal."

"They are a superb, proud people. There are, for instance, 450 tribes, each one as different as the French from the Germans, or you from the Italians — yet we tend to lump them all together."

The casting for Jimmie Blacksmith was done by Schepisi's wife Rhonda, who discovered the beguiling Tommy Lewis in an airport.

"Rhonda started getting beside herself at the sight of this attractive person at the next table."

"It was half a joke, but she went up to him and did a reversal of roles, asking him if he wanted to be in a movie. He nearly fell over, but once he had convinced himself of our bona fides he was over the moon."

Another piece of inspired casting, as far as Australian audiences are concerned is having Jack Thompson play the missionary who educates Jimmie — in Australian movies, Thompson is Steve McQueen and Robert Redford rolled into one.

Although Schepisi has become a devoted fan of the Aborigines, he doesn't want to become pigeon-holed.

"As far as I'm concerned, the only reason to make films is to do something which interests me. I'd love to do a musical, but right now I'm working on a bittersweet movie about love between 40 years olds."

And he looked meaningfully at his wife

Jerome Burns

The Passage

Directed by J. Lee Thompson

Starring Anthony Quinn, Malcom McDowell

SS-x-ploitation thrills again, and drawn to mind is the old dictum that if a thing's worth doing it's worth doing badly; either way you look at it, The Passage ain't worth a flying one.

Set around a wartime resistance plot to smuggle out over the mountains — you wouldn't twig this — a scientist with the power to bring the Nazis to their knees, it's only slightly less predictable than a cavalry charge and not as profound.

Perennial clichés wing their wizened way about the landscape like bats to a Hammer castle.

Characterization is constructed across stereotypes who'd likely be fired for getting out of the wrong bed side, never touching deeper than A Big Game or By Jingo! James Mason plays one of those scientists who start the game without the £200 but quickly gain through further loss: loses wife, finds son, kills man, sings eyebrows... a real man, now.

As a real man Anthony Quinn's Basque shepherd is strait from the Zone's central casting: one of those — you wouldn't twig this — widower shepherds whose immediate reaction toward military intervention is "Who the hell's gonna look after my sheep?", he quickly turns giant amongst men — ostensibly for money, but we know it's because he lost a buddy during the premiere of A Farewell To Arms...

Titillation execution, amputation, avalanches and the like keep us cosy between confrontations.

There's something disturbing and disgusting about such stuff as this and Just A Gigolo.

When the swastika is reduced to the status of a joke on Malcom McDowell's underpants you can't help but wonder — here comes another paranoid warning card — why? McDowell's SS monster is the kind you'd scare your children with; oh yes he's evil, but it's that kind of reassuring, wacky, absurd, mythical evil — it always gets slain, it casts no seeds.

One big happy holocaust: what price Himmler as a right-wing Fonz?

Lee Penman

94 men must die to keep alive a dream...or nightmare.

LEW GRADE Presents
A PRODUCER CIRCLE PRODUCTION

GREGORY and LAURENCE PECK OLIVIER

JAMES
MASON

A FRANKLIN J. SCHAFFNER FILM

THE BOYS FROM BRAZIL^x

and starring

LILLI PALMER "THE BOYS FROM BRAZIL"

Executive Producer ROBERT FRYER Music by HARRY GOLDSMITH

Screenplay by HEYWOOD GOULD from the novel by IRA LEVIN

Produced by STANLEY O'TOOLE and MARTIN RICHARDS Directed by FRANKLIN J. SCHAFFNER

Original soundtrack recordings available on N & W Records and Tapes "We're Women Again" Song by Gloria Ridge Read the Film Pageback

Released by IFC FILM DISTRIBUTORS LTD

Now classic scene STUDIO 1
HAYMARKET SWISS CENTRE LIVERPOOL SQUARE 439 4470 OXFORD CIRCUS
AND AT SELECTED CINEMAS ACROSS LONDON FROM SUNDAY

LENE LOVICH

(lây-nă lŭv-itch)

Her Album 'Stateless' (Seez 7) in "Super Stereo" © pat. pending
Includes "Lucky Number/ Home" Buy 121 "Stateless" Cassette available soon

The London Appearance
-Lyceum, March 18

LENE IS THE LEADER

ALBUMS

GRAHAM PARKER AND THE RUMOUR Squeezing Out Sparks (Vertigo)

When you play this album for perhaps the tenth time, when you return to 'You Can't Be Too Strong' and listen to that one song again and again until you no longer experience a fearful horror but complete sympathy — then you will understand that you've heard something quite extraordinary.

As you shudder and recoil from the fierceness of Parker singing about a girl's abortion, you may also realise that his metaphor has always had a much wider connotation than just the evident song subject. He might be pointing to his own talent as someone possessed by the artistic voice and suggesting that the surgery required to reveal this can be as emotionally destructive as the removal of a foetus.

'You Can't Be Too Strong' — Parker's vocal naked with only an acoustic guitar, electric piano and subdued bass for embellishment — is the axis of the album from which comes the title: "Yeah babe I know it gets dark down by lunar park / But everybody else is squeezing out a spark / That happened in the heat somewhere in the dark".

Musically, 'Squeezing Out Sparks' is a great rock 'n' roll album: at least everything you'd expect from musicians of such imagination and dedication as GP&R has happened in the studio, with producer Jack Nitzsche giving their sound clarity and definition without distorting its strength. It's hard, forceful but organised playing: unlike Nick Lowe, Nitzsche seems detached enough to appreciate that the lyrics and therefore Parker's voice should be the focus.

So, instead of a cluster of solos in the erstwhile polite democracy and perhaps brass and strings to pump up the atmosphere, there is just simple, direct backing. Paradoxically The Rumour's role is even more essential as they coalesce to provide impetus with their frequent use of succinct, irresistible guitar and keyboard motifs and a malleable backbeat. Nothing is lost in Parker's characteristically impassioned singing, nor in the raw lyrical edge: the songs are compact with choruses that slam through unforgettable hooks and a swing that never loses that thing.

It'll probably be their first 'hit' LP. Although its commercialism shouldn't be underestimated, 'Sparks' doesn't only sound like a classic rock album full of furiously proud energy, but also has the spirit of a classic. And if Graham Parker isn't the British artist of the decade, then he's certainly the most convincing manifestation of the '70s rock conscience to emerge so far.

When he released his first album 'Howlin' Wind' in '76, Parker was regarded not only as a great R&B singer but as the first anti-hero of the new age. For all the acknowledgements that he was a 'precursor of punk', his stance was only a catalyst which helped trigger off a movement in which he had no voice. That once significant rock culture has since become enfeebled by sloganeering and a plethora of 'active young leaders' speaking for a generation: ironically Parker now adds substance to it again.

None of the ten 'Sparks' songs is an anthem; there isn't an 'Anarchy', 'White Riot' or 'Ain't Gonna Take It'. Parker doesn't contend any titles

Parker introspects and tries to sanctify his soul

Pic by CLAUDE GASSIAN

Parker says yes to surgery with Rotten, Strummer, Weller, Robinson or Pursey; he doesn't assume leadership. His songs are clearly autobiographical as he articulates his paranoia, phobias and obsessions.

When talk of a 'rock culture' has become futile because so few artists have anything other than myopic vision, Parker revives it in its true sense, gives it perspective and meaning. He claws under the thick, resilient hide of polemic and hysteria to inspect his own soul and conscience. This is the portrait of the '79 Rock 'n' Roll Man — his emotions blunted by his sensitivity to modern realities and his revelations so agonisingly honest that to hear them you feel guilty, an intruder in the confession-box.

As he says in 'Passion': "The world is easy when you're playing around with it / Everything's a thrill / And every girl's a kill / And then it gets unreal / And then you don't feel anything". 'Discovering Japan' is the broader vision, a love affair with that country, the sexual metaphor convincing and yet tainted by the oblique references to the past nuclear destruction and the blame fixed firmly on America. 'Local Girls' is dignified — don't fake an image, the recurring theme of the whole set.

Most of the songs are painfully introspective, apparently and deliberately iconoclastic, as best illustrated by 'Passion': a cruel, candid exposition of false idols. 'Nobody Hurts You' is the anguish of being out of favour but with the broader scope of living in a 'suffocating' and 'claustrophobic' environment; 'Saturday Night Is Dead' is the disillusionment of change, the title self-explanatory. 'Love Gets You Twisted' concerns the mad blindness of a relationship, and 'Waiting For The UFOs' is perhaps political satire, a pop Animal Farm.

Finally, 'Don't Get Excited' is the only possible conclusion. Parker's emotions

Bodnar and Belmont ruminate

Pic by PENNIE SMITH

Rumour say no to Europe are numbed by life and his environment — note the obviously deliberate, half-stated 'I Can't Get No Satisfaction' piano phrasing. Throughout the dilemmas and despair manifest themselves as sexual impotence and almost symbolic emasculation. It's an effective imagery.

Yet 'Japan', 'Local Girls', 'Nobody Hurts You', 'Passion', 'Protection' and especially 'Love Gets You Twisted' are a musical antithesis: they're intense rock songs, Brinsley Schwarz and Martin has grown up, but one of a person who is growing prouder and teller.

Few albums have moved me like this one, but no, you won't cry. That would be gross self-pity because the songs don't just concern Parker: they're about you and your friends.

Tony Stewart

THE RUMOUR Frogs, Sprouts, Clogs And Krauts (Stiff)

Logic circuits would suggest that this album would achieve a far readier rapport with more progressive elements of the consuming public if it was by somebodies other than The Rumour. If it was by a group from Düsseldorf or Marseilles, or — at the very least — from somewhere in the Midlands... if it was by a group of serious young men and women with industrial haircuts and sincere overcoats, scuffed DMs, and home-made synthesizers... then, and only then, it could be loved with a truly unself-conscious passion.

Unfortunately, it's not: it's the latest holiday project from Graham Parker's playin' mates, who are (a) Martin Belmont, Brinsley Schwarz, Bob Andrews, Steve Goulding, Andrew Bodnar and (b) grizzled old luses who have mastered the art of hitting the musical mark every time with a wonderfully slapdash precision while never ever (ever) taking anything seriously.

In other words, The Chaps have tackled the unlikely and achieved the unpredictable: a simultaneously soulful and sardonic look at the ailments and obsessions of in-touch, with-it people. Primary targets: emotional numbness and the consequences of cultivating same (ref: 'Frozen Years', one of the few singles that I've ever known Danny Baker to misjudge), and the current mania for all things Modern, European, and Metallic (ref: 'Euro', 'New Age', 'All Fall Down'). 'Frozen Years' and 'Euro' are the work of Brinsley Schwarz, a pathologically self-effacing guitar maestro as little-known for his writing and singing as he is for upstaging people, who pulls off a stunning Gastache / analysis of the last few periods of Bowie by manipulating Bowie's own imagery and devices on 'Frozen Years', and a hefty dig at (be warned — this is guesswork) Jean-Jacques Burnel on 'Euro'. More!

Elsewhere, Martin Belmont teams up with Nick Lowe on 'Leaders', which damns Establishments both rock and political with exquisitely faint praise; Bob Andrews goes nuts in a car in 'Emotional Traffic' and — among other things — generates the frosty keyboard mist that dominates most of the top layer of the album. Bodnar and Goulding maintain their reputation as a ridiculously good rhythm section with charmingly insolent ease.

Be warned: this album doesn't exactly whack you over the head on the first play. In fact, up until the third listen I was trying to think of ways to tell The Chaps that they'd made an album which would have bored a grapefruit. But it started to connect the third time and by the fourth time around, at least three tracks had nominated themselves for a place on the Best Moments Of '79 playlist.

Rumour spelled backwards is Rumor. Chaps — euro big band now.

Charles Shear Murray

JULES AND THE POLAR BEARS Got No Breeding (CBS import)

Jules and The Polar Bears is a sweet name for a pretty tough sounding band. Fronted by ex-Funking King Jules Shear, a songwriter of some merit given to verbosity but in possession of a vocal intensity akin to Jackson Browne.

The Polar Bears — Richard Bredice, Stephen Hague and David Beebe — further Shear's ambitious structures, soaring, lush-textured vignettes whose lyrical bent suggest that the main man was frightened by a bat while still at an early and impressionable age.

Much of the material has a certain manic compulsion that drives the rocking currents against Shear's tetchy warble and all too human sentiments. The pace is ferocious and the messages are garbled, then pulled into shape by Bredice's succession of telepathic megal pop breaks.

The whole has intimations of a very middle class Ramones (i.e. Shear can count up to four without resorting to fingers and thumbs) and occasionally the subject matter resounds with substance. It's refreshing that the Bears don't try and rest their musical laurels on any safe ride; they concentrate instead on matching seemingly effortless commercial melodies with the odd burst of profundity 'bout flowers, fishes nipping at your toes and similar stuff: bearably twee.

Songs like the title track, 'Lovers By Rote' and 'Driftwood From Disaster' all make play of an interesting vocabulary and some smart metaphors that prove Jules and his furry friends actually are not short of breeding and thus join the exclusive club populated by Americans with summat to say and a way of saying it that could make a convert out of a pearl-snuffing pig.

Good easy listening.

Max Bail

March 17th, 1979

DOWN WITH TRB!

TRB TWO

£1 off

list price of their latest album, "TRB 2" including their single "Bully For You"

The HMV Shop Top 20 Albums up to £1.50 off list price.
The HMV Shop Top 30 Singles all at 75p each.
The HMV Shop Top 20 Cassettes all at 70p off list price.

All offers valid at least until 7th April 1979

This Saturday is Gold Disc Day* at the HMV Shop National Sale. Sale L.P.'s marked with a Gold Disc sticker will be half marked sale price. So visit your local shop for final bargains.

Sale ends Saturday
March 17th

*Excludes Oxford Street

Limited amounts of Gold Disc items available

the HMV shop

363 Oxford Street,
London W.1.
(next to Bond Street tube)

Bedford
Birmingham
Bradford
Brighton
Bristol

Corby
Coventry
Derby
Edinburgh
Enfield

Exeter
Glasgow
Gloucester
Gravesend
Holloway

Hull
Kingston
Leeds
Leicester
Lewisham

Liverpool
Luton
Manchester
Newcastle
Nottingham

Notting Hill Gate
Plymouth
Portsmouth
Southampton
Stockton

Stratford
Sunderland
Sutton
Swansea
Wolverhampton

I'm Ron and I'm not much fun

Pic by PENNIE SMITH

Sparks pull plug

SPARKS
No. 1 In Heaven (Virgin)

Come out, come out wherever you are! It's safe now! Those critics'll love yez all again!

Sort through the jaded jumble sale here, sift through the remnants of remaining 'romances', the hacky hairlooms of our childhood ballroom. The sounds and images are vaguely familiar and familiarly vague. Some stains here and there, but I'm sure we can extract a fair amount of mystery from it all, carry on hawking our history in the accustomed manner.

You can come back refreshed, heels dragging on the tail-end of the 'revolution'. Bad Company can come back. Roxy and Sparks too — wonder who'll be next, huh? They all went into hiding for a while, watching that New Wave whilst it stamped about for a bit, bleating and bleeding its mangy way into the commercial zone. But parts of the potential new best got turned, and it is thought that now the conditions exist for...

No need for you to re-think things, even insufficiently. Here's Ron and Russell, for instance, returning to form with this 'No. 1 In Heaven', its suitably pseudo-modern and slickly sexist graphics collated around a predictably pseudo-modern Sparks renaissance collection of pseudo-statements, six of them, elongated into pseudo-European disco drama by revered regular guy capitalist Giorgio Moroder.

The vinyl's a funny ohmygosh colour, although you can't sniff, suck, lick, pinch or bite it, which does come as a bit of a disappointment to those of us who really like to fetishize records. Still, Sparks persons rest assured, them Mack brothers has kept everything intact for you, it's still the same Sparks pseudo-oddball, cynical, nihilistic, hygienic and hammy orthodoxy. Those synth-drums slip in nicely with the general spotlessness and silliness.

Moroder's production is essentially irrelevant, on about the same level as Rundgren producing Tour Robinson or Pearlman producing The Clash: get them that international kinda sound, the one which justifies our initial investment; sustain the industry of Fun. It's all just 'fun' after all, isn't it? Eek, Ian, don't you ever enjoy yourself?

To which I answer: define 'fun'. I thought Bowie's 'Low' was fun (for a week or two), but then I'd heard Robert Wyatt's 'Rock Bottom' and didn't need the tourist version. Is Elvis Costello fun? I get fun out of pushing people into defending EC as a 'serious artist' — him and his subliminal army of free singles, postcards, participatory sleeves and false mystique poses. Yeah, him and Sparks got a lot in common.

Sparks play at being saviours with the same old structures. This isn't 'fun' or 'beat music'. Sparks are the missing one-joke-laugh between Kim Fowley and Thelma Houston. 'No. 1 In Heaven' is neither a comedy album nor an experimental album, but it possesses the near instant redundancy of both — beyond the Zero.

A little bit of glam, a little bit of angst, a little bit of narcissism, a little bit of drisco, a little bit of melancholy, a little bit of mystery: a big bit of a perfect pain in the bum. Anyone remember Gilbert & George? No?

Ian Penman

BERT JANSCH
Avocet (Charisma)

Jansch's 'L.A. Turnaround' album of 74 had a certain disruptive quality. It contained some of the best compositions of his solo career, but largely wrecked them with fussy folk/rock arrangements using such unlikely sessions men as Klaus Voormann and Mike 'Monkee' Nesmith.

Yet between these regressive attempts at a commercial viability, he had finalised the distinctive style of his guitar excursions such as 'Chamberlain'. It's this that he's eventually developed into 'Avocet', his first instrumental album and a welcome return to all-acoustic music.

It offers inspired interpretations of six different birds, all suitably romantic and elusive in nature. Musically, it's far less ambitious than the concept itself, and it's this reassuring simplicity, coupled with a faultless, clear production, that makes it such a fine and distinguished album.

Within the restrictive framework of only three musicians (himself, Martin Jenkins on violin, flute and mandocello, and the excellent Danny Thompson on bass), Jansch effectively balances precise statements of theme and improvised sections, keeping both of them restrained, delicate and enormously varied. The title track, being one side of the album, allows the most freedom for Thompson's percussive, rhythmic technique and Jenkins' use of phasers to produce thin, distant violin tones.

A purer, more emotive album from Jansch would be hard to imagine.

Mark Ellen

I'm Lemmy and I'm not either

Pic by STEVE EMBERTON

Lemmy stays put

MOTORHEAD
Overkill (Bronze)

BRAM TCHAIKOVSKY
Strange Man, Changed Men (Radar)

With 'Overkill' Motorhead have produced the definitive contemporary Heavy Metal album, an album you could point at a whole crowd of people and say 'Take that, you bastards' with real conviction and confidence in the result.

Their opposition should fold up and quit right now, because the only way that they are ever going to top this one is by declaring war on the Russians. On reflection, Motorhead might as well jack it in too, as the chances of them repeating this kind of outrage next time around must be very slim indeed.

This album is absolutely awful, which is just fine, because that is where its strength and appeal (sic) lies. It is offensive, tasteless, simplistic and monstrous; it's an insult to human decency, a record that bends at the waste and shakes its head. Without wishing to bludgeon this point to death, I would like to say that this is a regular Heavy Metal tour de force. The only things that stop this being on a par with 'Never Mind The Bollocks' are a few rather misguided slow moments and the indisputable fact that at least two thirds of Motorhead are older and uglier than the Pistols were.

Listening to this album is like stumbling unaware on a hidden slice of perpetual motion. With no apologies or justification, all we are given are the bare bones of a recognisable tune fleshed out with energetic and omnipresent drumming, energetic and clamouring chords, energetic and guileless bass runs, also all kinds of chemically induced mayhem that are a wonder to behold but a pain to bear. This is the ultimate product of an alternative life-style that refuses to go away, even when ignored for long periods.

Thankfully the lyrics are almost entirely indecipherable, which is just as well because the only role that the words have to play within this context is to save the songs from being instrumentals. And therefore boring. A necessary distraction. All anybody needs to know about these songs can be gleaned from the titles: 'Overkill', 'No Class', 'Tear Ya Down'. Take your pick, the menu is consistent and unrelenting.

Whatever criticism is levelled at Lemmy and his co-conspirators, nobody could ever say that they didn't know where they were heading or that Motorhead hadn't sussed just exactly to and for whom they're playing. Which is more than can be said for Bram Tchaikovsky. The comparisons between the two bands are obvious but shallow, apparent yet tenuous. Both bands operate within the same field, both could be loosely termed power tríos and both have produced albums that will presumably appeal to a similar audience.

But whereas Motorhead are happy to show themselves as unashamed heavies, gloriously at ease with their utilitarian, one-of-the-boys image, Bram T seems to be more than a little confused as to what direction or image they should promote and present. The main trouble is that they have too much imagination to operate with total fluidity and conviction within the inflexible restrictions that the genre imposes, but not enough vision to step free of the props it so freely and readily provides.

I really think that Bram T. should decide whether they want to be a pop group or a rock 'n' roll band. To suggest that the two are or can be one and the same — which is apparently what they are endeavouring to do with this release — is plain silliness. By trying to create a happy but fictional medium, Bram T. have done nothing more than diffuse the impact and blunt the edge of a number of potentially sharp rockers, also overpower the melody of more than one neat pop tune. If I'd written a pop song like 'Sara Smiles', I wouldn't have been in the least tempted to beef it up with such a heavy-handed production job. Similarly, if I'd penned a cutting, solid rocker like 'Turn On The Light', I wouldn't have been even slightly inclined to impose any kind of false restraint on my cohorts. However Bram T. are obviously a band with much potential. Just so long as they don't turn into Paul McCartney before they realize that potential, things should work out fine.

John Hamblett

I'm a Chrome and my lips are sealed

Chrome shine up

CHROME
Half Machine Lip Moves (Siren import)

The title of Chrome's second album 'Alien Soundtracks' perfectly describes one level on which their music can be taken: the evocation of a fantasy world in which Deathlok the Demolisher gets trapped inside a Philip K Dick plot.

More importantly their music stands on its own account. No way is 'Half Machine Lip Moves' merely the aural adjunct to some SF buff's reading habits. I'm in no sense an addict of that genre, yet I find this the most engrossing record I've heard since 'The Modern Dance' — and, looking back over the year's releases that separate them, that's saying something.

This is the album that PIL should have made, rather than that stillborn apology they actually did. Like 'The Modern Dance', 'HMLM' comes across initially as somewhat disjointed, an impression derived from the abrupt and violent fragmentation of many of the tracks (very few cases of the one track/one riff syndrome here) and from the copious but effective use of disconcerting sound-collage washes and interjections, a device not much in evidence on their two previous albums.

For most of the album the vocals are treated in one way or another, often to the point of incomprehensibility: the high-inaudible whisper on 'You've Been Duplicated', the tortured Ubuesque growl of 'Zombie Warfare', the half-formed dancing neanderthal grunts of 'Creature Eternal', and so on. Nearly all the instrumental tracks make use of non-symbolic vocal detritus of some form.

The only tracks on which the vocals are anything like clear — the opener 'TV As Eyes', 'March Of The Chrome Police' and 'Abstract Nympho' — demonstrate that Chrome have successfully captured both the contemptuous sneer and adrenal musical attack of punk (even to the extent of using the line 'I want you to be my dog' in the latter).

I have reservations about this. Although the influence doesn't predominate, these tracks are the only ones on which Chrome fail to achieve a blurring of the roles of form and content — an achievement that is, I feel, what sets 'HMLM' apart from its predecessors and makes it a masterpiece.

Elsewhere things aren't as clearly determinist; influences — much American rock, punk, Ubu, Hawkwind and the usual European crowd, I'd surmise — are confusingly combined to produce a jarring, jagged, glass-and-metal whole peculiar to Chrome alone. So much is woven together so brilliantly that detailed analysis of any individual track would be an almost impossibly complex and ultimately fruitless task.

The only other (rock) artists to achieve anything remotely comparable in this respect are Zeppa, Can, Beelheart, Ubu, Residents, This Heat, Faust and Tim Buckley. Which, I reckon, is pretty good company to keep. And none of those are or were completely successful all of the time either.

Now whether this process of essence-extraction, reapplication and redefinition of basic relations is the end of an era (summation) or the start of a new approach to making rock music (true invention) is far too complex a question to be considered here, but nonetheless one which fully deserves as much time and effort as you can spare. Enough examples have certainly surfaced in the past few years to suggest that rock may be undergoing some fundamental metamorphosis or even birth — to ignore it would surely be churlish and reactionary.

Short of This Heat finally releasing an album or The Residents getting 'Eskimo' out, 'Half Machine Lip Moves' looks set to be the vinyl event of 1979. And short of some enterprising outfit like Radar or Rough Trade organising a licensing deal, it'll probably remain on import only. But then at least a quid more than British albums, it's still one hell of a bargain.

Andy Gill

JOHN MILES IS BACK WITH A BANG

MMPH
MORE MILES PER HOUR

TOUR TAKES OFF APRIL 2nd

2nd. PETERBOROUGH ABC THEATRE	17th. READING HEXAGON THEATRE
3rd. OXFORD NEW THEATRE	18th. PORTSMOUTH GUILDHALL
4th. LIVERPOOL EMPIRE THEATRE	19th. WOLVERHAMPTON CIVIC HALL
5th. MIDDLESBOROUGH TOWN HALL	20th. LONDON HAMMERSMITH ODEON
6th. GLASGOW APOLLO THEATRE	21st. EASTBOURNE CONGRESS THEATRE
7th. ABERDEEN CAPITOL THEATRE	22nd. CROYDON FAIRFIELD HALL
8th. NEWCASTLE CITY HALL	23rd. BIRMINGHAM ODEON
9th. MANCHESTER APOLLO THEATRE	24th. SHEFFIELD CITY HALL
10th. BLACKBURN KING GEORGES HALL	25th. BRADFORD ST GEORGES HALL

11th. BRISTOL COLSTON HALL
12th. IPSWICH GAUMONT
14th. ST ALBANS CITY HALL
16th. PLYMOUTH FIESTA

26th. DERBY ASSEMBLY ROOMS
27th. BOURNEMOUTH WINTER GARDENS
28th. CANTERBURY ODEON
29th. LEICESTER DE MONTFORT HALL

MMPH
MORE MILES PER HOUR
DECCA

CAN'T KEEP A GOOD MAN DOWN

John Miles newsingle on DECCA FR13827

Through a glass, fably

SQUEEZE
Cool For Cats (A&M)

Despite the success of their debut single "Take Me I'm Yours," Squeeze — the pride of Deptford High Street — can now be seen to have failed to consolidate their position as one of London's premier new bands.

Squeeze, although initially lauded as a punk group — but who wasn't at that time? — really shouldn't be lumped into any punk / new wave category. Streetwise would be a more accurate definition.

The band spent a sizeable proportion of last summer in America, at a time when they should have been back in the UK building on whatever success had come their way. A lack of live gigs later in the year only weakened their position further. On the rare occasions that they did play, the gigs were almost invariably in or around their much beloved Deptford manor; "Cool For Cats" comes a year and a month after the first Squeeze album.

If success depended on quality alone, "Cool For Cats" would be in the charts by this time next week. Other factors, like fashionability, are unfortunately also at work. For instance, "Cool For Cats" knocks "TRB 2" into the proverbial cocked hat. Not hard to know, but you know which album is going to get the biggest collective push.

Eschewing the production of John Cale, Squeeze have produced the album themselves, in collaboration with engineer John Wood. As a result "Cool For Cats" gets right to the heart of Squeeze's dynamic pop sensibility.

Melodies, vocals (harmonies, phrasing) and arrangements all owe a lot to pre-1966 Beatles. But Squeeze have enough talent to personalize their predilection for Merseybeat. And the end result is a witty articulation of the South London youth experience.

Squeeze's pop comes straight from the street although, unlike the likes of The Clash, Jam and Stranglers, Squeeze's 'street credibility' has never been self-conscious or bogus. Like Ian Dury, Squeeze are the real thing.

Careful scrutiny of Chris Difford's lyrics will pay dividends. They're incisive, witty insights into South London life that never forsake fun for mindlessness. In Squeeze there's none of the churlish hostility which frequently passes for 'aware politics' in more fashionable hands.

An initial spin reveals "It's

SQUEEZE'S TILBROOK: the autentick samd of London (Sard). Pic ROB 'ALL

Not Cricket", "Up The Junction", "Slightly Drunk" and "Cool For Cats" as the stand-outs. As a unit, Squeeze are a powerful, adaptable band. Drummer Gilson Lavis has to be singled out for individual honours. His stickmanship never for an instant lets up. No wonder Fab Macca nearly nabbed him.

I would like to have heard more of Jools Holland's boogie piano, but power to him for executing the synthesiser lines with taste and economy. Squeeze are a deft rock and roll band. Laurels too for the nicely-paced guitar solo (Glenn Tilbrook?) on side one's closer "The Knack."

"Cool For Cats" is cool for you.

Affirmative?

Steve Clarke

FALLING IN LOVE
Frankie Miller (Chrysalis)

And now for something completely... the same. Frankie Miller - in - love is really quite similar to Frankie Miller - not - in - love, and his latest vinyl rendering is a collection of average to chunky blues / country / rock-based ballads, most of which are over-produced. Miller has a great voice, no question. Throaty, gritty, melancholic and ideally suited to express the heavy-hearted weltschmerz that drifts from within the grooves.

"Falling In Love" is an old-fashioned, no-nonsense strings 'n' boogie album — a son of Dr. Hook for grown-ups. I can imagine it going down a platinum treat with those hordes of Angelino divorcees weeping into their Tequila Sunrises. Or is that Tequila Sunrise? I forget.

Rick Joseph

EDDIE FLOYD
Chronicle (Stax)

This album was obviously put together by somebody who cared.

Aply named, 'Chronicle' maps out effortlessly, effectively and beautifully Eddie Floyd's unparalleled involvement with Stax — click your fingers when you say that name — Records from the mid '60s to the early '70s.

All the really great songs are present: the masterful 'Knock On Wood', surely a prime contender for The Greatest Soul Single Of All Time ticket; his mini-hit from the following year ('67), 'Things Get Better'; and perhaps the definite cover version of Sam Cooke's 'Bring It On Home To Me' (lest your heart out Rod Stewart).

It is virtually impossible to overstate the contribution that Eddie Floyd made to Stax. Besides recording for the label a number of artistically and commercially successful singles himself, he also wrote material — alone and in collaboration with the likes of Steve Cropper, Al Bell and Booker T — for almost the whole gamut of Stax 'stars'.

An unexpected bonus are the excellent sleeve notes, penned by Clive Anderson (co-author of The Soul Book), and the meticulous and fascinating session details, supposedly supplied by the man himself.

If you feel the need to own an album's worth of '60s soul sung by one of its finest exponents, I cannot recommend this album highly enough.

John Hamblett

ASHFORD AND SIMPSON
Is It Still Good To Ya (Warner Brothers)

A good, solid, stylish helping of modern soul from Ashford and Simpson, veteran writers, established singers, developing producers. 'Is It Still Good To Ya' mixes the disco beat with sophisticated ballad, emerges as a streamline album of cool funk and comfy sensuality.

The urgent 'It Seems To Hang On' was a recent hit single, and the bouncy 'Get Up And Do Something' could well follow it. Other tracks pursue the ups and downs of adult romance at a more leisurely tempo — cooling vocals, sighing strings, a gentle throb of pleasure.

It's all a little too deliberate, though. A slight feeling of pose rather than poise, summed up by the fact that Valerie's hair is so carefully disarrayed on the sleeve pic that the guy who did it gets a credit.

Smooth. Classy. But, ultimately, perhaps a little too close to Product.

Graham Lock

THE ALBUM OF THE YEAR

SINGLE OUT NOW give me back me brain

diff

live at the venue

sunday 25th march

also available on cassette

DEGA 5

THE GLADIATORS

Naturality (Front Line)

'Naturality'? A latest, natural section of Gladiators 'historicity'? Say wha? Awsoah, 'Naturality' is a weak record, whether here on its own or there with The Gladiators' catalogue, principally those two Virgin albums 'Proverbial Reggae' and 'Trenchtown Mix-Up', and the beautiful Studio One label 'Presenting The Gladiators' — a particularly tough-time index to hold anything up against, to be sure, but still no excuse for negative appraisal.

Negative appraisal as in that of 'fail-safe critical valve': Oh, they couldn't make a bad album if they tried... This excuse for dampened expectation pops in and out of our beat music scrolls at annual release-date intervals, another service to the industry. Hallowed idren get around to letting their record company spend a little more on modern promotion and middle-road production, and critical consensus duly celebrates the 'magic'.

This 'magic' is contained somewhere in the particular attribute of an artist — John Martyn's guitar, Roger Chapman's voice, Kevin Coyne's humanity, etc — and picked out for prize at the disregard of all other faults: rather like worshipping a witch doctor for the one out of every hundred people he doesn't kill.

This 'magic' matters more — and is certainly further exaggerated in — matters reggae, where the whole of we have to contend with is coloured by singing the praises of Jah Rastafari. A most irregular — but wholly worthwhile — process, for sure. But as for magicians...

The Gladiators are one such. Albert Griffiths, Clinton Fearson and Gallimore

Glad tidings last year at the 100 Club

Pic by PETER MURPHY and CLAIRE HERSHMAN

Gladitat?

Sunderland possess the power, one hears, to turn abysmal material into something sublime and spiritual, not as in John Coltrane revising 'Greensleeves', mark you, more in the sense of 'technique' triumphing over terrible substance. That sounds a bit wet, Western and unlikely to me — especially considering the 'intuitive' intrinsically ordered methods of JA music.

Commercial reggae: one step forward, two skank back. The formula here is for that Habitat reggae which isn't that different from white people playing reggae. Aimed at the audience, bit of Culture here, Bob Saviour there.

I'm hearing formula. I'm hearing that old slack 'magic'. Anywhere, anyway 'technique' only has meaning in relation to ends — otherwise it's just chatter — and what we have here is flat and friendly.

'Naturality' ends, appropriately enough, with 'Exodus'. It sounds like the sign in a cinema which shows you where to leave.

Ian Penman

TOTO

Toto (CBS)

Will these people never learn? In the time-honoured Hollywood tradition of foisting ambitious super-sessioners upon that large portion of the American public bereft of a brain, taste or the ability to decide for itself comes Toto, a six piece composed of former Boz Scaggs and Steely Dan lyons know the rest) side men.

Now Toto, individually, are undoubtedly the proverbial cats' whiskers when it comes to chops, reading scores, making the appropriate noises for the man paying the bill. Similarly, I don't begrudge them the desire to branch out and create their own thing. What gets my goat is that having been given their head they fall back on this insipid, derivative and embarrassing cleverness. This is the malaise of men looked in a studio too long churning out hit-factory easy listening.

Toto are David Paich, a couple of Porcaros (one of whom was arrested for shop lifting when Scaggs played in London), David Hungate, Steve Lukather and vocalist Bobby Kimball. You'll see their names on a score of Californian albums where their contributions vary from the excellent to the downright unlistenable: they're brilliant soulless automatons.

Paich is a whizz kid genius: he has the formula to break the band into the charts with 'Hold The Line' and the sweet talk to persuade Columbia to pour the big promotional push. Their success is assured but Toto have no more chance of coming up with a half way decent song than a chimpanzee in front of a typewriter has of writing the complete works of William Shakespeare.

Max Bell

Imports

You've got to hand it to those sons of Nippon — they really know how to manufacture records. Immaculate pressings, sleeves that would withstand a score of karate chops, lyric sheets printed in both Japanese and English — the whole works, in fact.

Unfortunately, in the case of Alex Chilton's 'One Day In New York' (Trio), such niceties are rather wasted. The music that comes so effectively Jap-wrapped is just second or even third-rate and is hardly worthy of the guy who once pulled the plaids for his work with Big Star and The Box Tops. If you're a Chilton cheddar chuzzler, you've probably heard half the tracks before: side one comprises the five studio cuts that formed an ORK release not so long ago.

Really little more than demos cut with the aid of Jon Tiven (guitar), Richard Rosebraugh (drums), Rick Clark (keyboards and drums) plus a couple of other visiting firemen, these sides are — with the exception of a calamitous 'Summertime Blues' — fair to middling. Good, half-formed ideas wait to be licked into shape. But if they gain three points on a 10 scale then side two is definitely minus-zone stuff, being no more than an adequately recorded selection of tunes taped on a dull night at CBGB's.

'This one's called 'Holocaust' and it's sorta new,' claims Chilton as he and his Cossacks stumble through their way through a barely-rehearsed opener. Then follows 'In The Street', all predictability and morning yawny, 'Make Me Like It', a live version of one of the cuts that bedecked the album's studio side, 'Little Fishy', and all-time low in dropiness; 'Baby's Beside Me' ('This one's off the first Big Star album — my baby's so ugly she should get a job standing outside a doctor's office makin' people feel sick!'); and after contemplating wrecking jobs on 'Chances Are' and 'Misty' Chilt heads for home on a cod version of 'More'.

All totally dispensable music then, even though it's packed with care. Packaging is really the name of the game recently, the week's biggest seller being a red vinyl, heart-shaped version of the Gaye/Wonder/Ross/Robinson Pops, 'We Love You' (Motown) single. But it's RCA who got the Ziff Of The Week award for the latest episode in their long-running series on how to really bury Elvis. For the company has now commenced a 'Memory Of Elvis' line which, if Volume One is anything to go by, promises to be little more than an excuse to reissue Elvis' old records sans orchestral backings.

Presley is also remembered in more suitable fashion on Robert Gordon's 'Rock A Billy Boogie', the ex-Private Stock rocker's first for RCA. For Gordon revives 'Blue Christmas', a 1964 single for El, along with Johnny Burnette's 'I Just Found Out', Fats Domino's 'All By Myself', Conway Twitty's 'It's Only Make Believe' and 'Wheel Of Fortune', a Key Star pre-rock special that headed the U.S. charts for a straight nine weeks back in '52. Chris Spedding heads the back-up band on this particular memory parade, other participants being Rob Stoner (bass), Howie Wyeth (drums and piano), Scotty Turner (rhythm guitar) and Paul 'Hello This Is Joannie' Evans (back-up vocals).

Fred Dollar

GRAND HOTEL
DO NOT DISTURB

GRAND HOTEL
NEW ALBUM
'DO NOT DISTURB'

Tracks include:
Double Vision
(Split Decision)
No Dice
Low Life

83134 Records Cassette

Flooring at:
 76 Club, Burton-on-Trent
 Nottingham Boat Club
 Brunel University
 Revolution Club, York
 Kirklevington Country Club
 Friday 16th March
 Saturday 17th March
 Sunday 18th March
 Wednesday 21st March
 Friday 23rd March

Angler's Mail

Every Wednesday 18p

Buy it and you'll get hooked!

Some hope!

Did you know an unplanned baby is born in Britain every few minutes?

The trouble is, it's a great deal easier to start a baby than you think, especially if you take chances.

A man takes a chance if he just hopes the girl is on the pill or is 'safe'.

A girl takes a desperate chance if she just hopes he'll withdraw. (A man sometimes promises to withdraw and then doesn't. And even if he does withdraw, you can still get pregnant).

If you're a man at least ask the girl if she's on the pill and wear a contraceptive if she's not. You can buy them from chemists, barbers or slot machines.

If you're a girl you should never rely on a man. You can get advice and free contraceptives from doctors or Family Planning Clinics - whether you are married or not.

You'll find clinics listed in your telephone book.

 The Health Education Council

78 New Oxford Street, London WC1A 1AH. 01-637 1881

TO ADVERTISE
PHONE 01 261 6153 Brian B.

marquee

90 Wardour St., W.1 01-437 6603

OPEN EVERY NIGHT FROM 7.00 pm to 11.00 pm
REDUCED ADMISSION FOR STUDENTS AND MEMBERS

Thur 15th Mar (Adm £1.20) SMIFF 'N' THE TEARS Plus support & Ian Fleming	Mon 19th Mar (Adm £1.00) BRAM TCHAIKOVSKY Plus support & Jerry Floyd
Fri 16th Mar (Adm £1.50) UK SUBS Plus support & Ian Fleming	Tue 20th Mar (Adm £1.00) THE EXTRAS Plus guests & Joe Long
Sat 17th Mar (Adm £1.00) THE JAGS Plus support & Ian Fleming	Wed 21st Mar (Adm £1.00) THE SMIRKS Plus support & Jerry Floyd
Sun 18th Mar (Adm £1.25) THE CURE Local Operator and Mandy H	Thur 22nd & Fri 23rd Mar INNER CIRCLE Plus friends & Ian Fleming Advance tickets to members £1.75 Non-members on the door £5.00

HAMBURGERS AND OTHER HOT AND COLD SNACKS AVAILABLE

THE NASH VILLE ROOM

FULLERS TRADITIONAL ALES

MARCH Thursday 15th	Bowles Brothers & Jags	75p
Friday 16th	THE EDGE & Support	£1
Saturday 17th	DANA GILLESPIE & Hazel O'Conner	£1
Sunday 18th	GARY HOLTON'S GEMS & Phil Ram Band	£1
Monday 19th	PINPOINT & Valves	75p
Tuesday 20th	COOL NOTES & THE SAMARITANS	75p
Thursday 22nd	CAROL GRIMES BAND & Support	£1

CORNER CROMWELL ROAD/NORTH END ROAD, W1?
Adjacent West Kensington Tube Tel: 01-603 6071

HERMIT LIVE

Brentwood Youth House,
Sheffield Road,
Brentwood

Monday March 19th

LEA HART
★ JNR ★
+ Special Guests
RAM

If in doubt phone recorded program on Brentwood 210857 anytime

AIN'T MISBEHAVIN'

FROM BROADWAY

The New FATE WALLER Musical Show

REDUCED PRICE PREVIEWS
FROM MARCH 16th
OPENS THURSDAY MARCH 22nd

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE
Huguenot St. TEL: 01-930 6606

THE PORTERHOUSE

20 CAROLGATE, REYFORD, MOTTIS. Telephone 704851

Friday March 16th

ADAM & THE ANTS
+ Support
Saturday March 17th

SQUEEZE
+ The Injectors
(No Scruffs)

THE BRIDGE HOUSE

23 BARKING ROAD, CANNING TOWN, E16

Thursday March 15th 40p DOG WATCH + Support	Monday March 19th Free LITTLE ROOSTERS Two shows 7.30 pm + 9.30 pm and 9.30 + 10.30 pm
Friday March 16th 50p ★ LEA HART JNR. ★ (With Ex Roll Ups @ Grand Hotel)	Tuesday March 20th Free REBEL
Saturday March 17th 50p WARM JETS + Glass (10p - 8 pm)	Wednesday March 21st Free THE JAGS + Support
Sunday March 18th 40p REMUS DOWN BOULEVARD	Thursday March 22nd 40p DOG WATCH + Support

Bridge House Records invite you to see
WARM JETS DOG WATCH THE TICKETS at the MUSIC MACHINE, MONDAY MARCH 19th
Collect your free tickets from the Bridge House
Coach facilities available, book in advance

LENE LOVICH

SQUEEZE YACHTS

LYCEUM
LONDON W.C.2

SUNDAY 18th MARCH at 7-30

Tickets £2.50 inc. VAT. Advance tickets £1.50 inc. VAT. (All prices include 10% discount for students and members)
LONDON THEATRE BOOKINGS TEL: 01-261 6153. PREVIEW ON OFFICE TEL: 01-261 6153. ON BOOK ON 01-261 6153. LONDON TOURS TEL: 01-405 1002

MUSIC MACHINE

Playing times 10.30 pm and midnight

LONDON HIGH ST OFF ABBINGTON (RESCUE TUBE - MARK I)

Wednesday March 14th £1.00 SPLIT RIVITT + NANCY KRAMER	Monday March 19th £1.00 Bridge House Records Night WARM JETS + Dog Watch + The Tickets
Thursday March 15th £1.50 ZAINE GRIFF + Agents	Tuesday March 20th £1.00 THE BUSINESS + Daylight Robbery
Friday March 16th £2.00 THE RECORDS + Berracudas	Wednesday March 21st £1.00 THE PRESS + Plain Characters
Saturday March 17th £2.00 MERGER + Goldinc
Thursday March 22nd Pay at door £2.00 THE PIRATES + The O.T.s
Saturday March 24th Pay at door £2.00 WILKO JOHNSON'S SOLID SENDERS + The Young Ones
Thursday March 29th BETHNAL + The Next Advance tickets £1.00 from Box Office
Wednesday April 25th IGGY POP Advance tickets £3.00 from Box Office

LICENSED BARS - LIVE MUSIC - DANCING
8PM - 2 AM MONDAY TO SATURDAY
OVER 18s ONLY

SOUTHBANK POLYTECHNIC S.U.
Rotary St., S.E.1.
Elephant and Castle

Friday March 16th £1.00
GINO & THE SHARKS
+ The Cannibal
Benefit gig in aid of muscular dystrophy

DINGWALLS

01 267 4567 Camden Lock, Chalk Farm Road, London NW1

THUR 15th MARCH

★ ONCE IN A LIFETIME TREAT ★
★ LIVE IN A NIGHTCLUB THE ONE AND ONLY ★

BO DIDDLEY

WITH HIS OWN BAND

TICKETS AVAILABLE NOW £4.50 LIMITED ATTENDANCE
FOR EASIER VIEWING AND MORE COMFORT
"FREE CARD" HOLDERS NOT VALID FOR THIS SHOW

WED 21
BENEFIT FOR MIKE PATTO'S WIFE AND KIDS

KOKOMO THE VOICE SQUAD
CAROL GRIMES THE RETAINERS

TICKETS JUST £2.25 AVAILABLE IN ADVANCE

THE SPORTS

OUT NOW/ON STIFF/FOUR TRACKS FOR 99p
THE SPORTS EP/LAST-5

FROM AUS

TRA LIA

CURRENTLY ON TOUR WITH GRAHAM PARKER AND THE RUMOUR

MAR 15 BRADFORD ST. GEORGE'S HALL
MAR 16 MANCHESTER APOLLO
MAR 19 BIRMINGHAM ODEON
MAR 20 BIRMINGHAM ODEON
MAR 21 IPSWICH GAUMONT
MAR 22 PORTSMOUTH GUILDHALL
MAR 24 BRIGHTON CENTRE

MAR 25 READING HEXAGON HALL
MAR 26 LEICESTER DE MONTFORT HALL
MAR 28 DERBY ASSEMBLY ROOMS
MAR 29 ILFORD ODEON
APR 1 OXFORD NEW THEATRE
APR 2 HAMMERSMITH ODEON
APR 3 HAMMERSMITH ODEON

HOPE & ANCHOR

UPPER STREET
ISLINGTON, N.1

Thur 15th FREE RED BEANS & RICE	Sun 18th 75p THE SPECIALS
Fri 16th 75p THE CLEANERS	Tue 20th 75p PINPOINT
Sat 17th 75p LOCAL OPERATOR	Wed 21st 75p LEW LEWIS
Sun 18th 75p THE SPECIALS	Thur 22nd FREE RED BEANS & RICE

ESSEX S.U. ENTS PRESENT
From Jamaica ...

INNER CIRCLE

with special guests YACHTS
Saturday March 17th at 8.30 pm
in the S. U. Dance Hall
Tickets £1.40 From S.U. & Parrot Records
Enquiries: Colchester 863211

Next Week (Thursday March 22nd) FRANKIE MILLER

North London Rock Against Racism
Friday March 16th at 8 pm

PHANTOM n
+ SPECIALS
University College S.U.
2nd Floor
25 Gordon Street, W.C.1

BELT 'N' BRACES
Chats Palace
Brooksbys Walk, E.9

DUKE OF LANCASTER
Approach Road, New Barnet
(beside B11 New Barnet)

Thursday March 15th THE LITTLE JIMMIES	Thursday March 15th 50p TENNIS SHOES
Friday March 16th 64 SPOONS	Friday March 16th 50p THE CROOKS & CARPETTES
Saturday March 17 ZILCH	Saturday March 17th 75p BIG CHIEF
Sunday March 18th EARTHBOUND	Sunday March 18th Free COMMUTERS & BARNSHAKERS
Tuesday March 20th SCANDAL	Monday March 19th Free BOBBY HENRY & THE PIKANNAS
	Tuesday March 20th Free ANGELO PALLADINO
	Wednesday March 21st Free A.B.C. + LOCAL HEROES

On the road with Elton

ELTON JOHN begins his comeback tour this weekend, but it's a tour with a difference, in that he's appearing as a solo performer — accompanying himself on piano, and with percussionist Ray Cooper (pictured with him above) as the only other musician on stage. The itinerary is a lengthy one, and includes a week in London — but the opening concerts are at Glasgow (Saturday and Sunday), Edinburgh (Monday) and Newcastle (Wednesday).

NATIONWIDE GIG GUIDE

Thursday

Birmingham Odeon: SW Holey & The Comets/Flying Saucers/The Wild Angels
 Birmingham Marcat Cross: Special Clinic
 Birmingham Railway Hotel: Orphan
 Birmingham The Bell: The Clarks
 Blackpool Northrock Castle: The Pretenders
 Bournemouth Tiffany's: Gine & The Rockin' Rebels
 Bournemouth Town Hall: Wild Horses
 Bradford Princeville Hotel: The Vys
 Bradford St George's Hall: Graham Parker & The Rumour
 Brighton Alhambra: Fan Club
 Brighton Hungry Years: The Tinsels
 Bristol Trifly: The Other Bristol/Essential Boy/The Untouchables
 Bristol University: Martin Carter & Graham Jones
 Burnwood Troubadour: The Amazing Dark Horse
 Camberley Lakeside Club: Freddy Cole (until Saturday)
 Cambridge Selwyn College: Tot & The Gifs in Room 419
 Cardiff Grange's: Patrick Fitzgerald
 Chadderton Hustlers: Taz
 Chatham Central Hall: Ralph McTell
 Coventry Lancaster Polytechnic: The Smirks
 Coventry Locaina: Eddie & The Hot Rods/The Members
 Coventry Warwick University: Supercharge
 Derby Bell Hotel: Oman
 Doncaster Gaumont Theatre: Billy Connolly
 Eastbourne Lottbridge Arms: The Piranhas
 Easleigh Knight Spot: Raw Deal
 Edinburgh Astoria: The Only Ones
 Edinburgh Odeon: Van Morrison
 Epsom College of Art: Warm Jets
 Exeter Route: U.K. Subs
 Farncombe Three Lions: John Thomas
 High Wycombe Nags Head: N.W.10
 Hull Bell Hai: Section 80
 Lancaster No. 12 Club: Gotham City
 Leeds Fan Club: The Cure
 Leeds Polytechnic: Gordon Giltrap Band
 Liverpool Central Hall: The Boxy Band
 Liverpool Empire Theatre: Tina Turner
 Liverpool Eric's: Those Naughty Lumps
 London Camden Blackrock: Scarcrow
 London Camden Dingwells: Bo Diddley
 London Canning Town Bridge House: Dog Watch
 London Clapham 101 Club: The Cannibals
 London Covent Garden Rock Garden: Shrink/The Balleons
 London Darnford Albany Empire: Debbie Shephard & Rough Edge
 London Epping Folk Club: Katie Heath
 London Fulham Golden Lion: Ex-Directory
 London Fulham Greyhound: Too Much/China Street
 London Hammersmith The Swan: Beast
 London Harrow Rd. Windsor Castle: Guest Band
 London Islington Hope & Anchor: Red Beans & Rice
 London Kennington The Crickets: Marynary
 London Kensington De Villiers Bar: Gold Dust Twine
 London Kennington The Nashville: Bowles Bros/The Jags

London Knightsbridge Pize on the Park: Dick Wellewood
 London Marquee Club: Sniff 'n' The Tears
 London Maunberry's: Murta
 London New Barnet Duke of Lancaster: The Little Jimmies
 London Soho Pize Express: Milt Franklin Quartet
 London Southgate Royalty Ballroom: Freddie Fingers' Les
 London St. Moritz Club: Red Tape
 London Stoke Newington Pegasus: Tennis Shoes
 London Talk Of The Town: The Drifters (until March 24)
 London Twickenham Turks Head: Ego
 London Victoria The Venue: Martha Reeves & The Vandellas
 London Wembley Conference Centre: The Johnny Cash Show
 London Woolwich Trenchard: Desmond Dekker
 London W.C.1 School of Oriental & African Studies: Earthbound
 Manchester Apollo Theatre: David Essex
 Manchester The Factory: The Streets/The Squares
 Mansfield Art College: Art Failure
 Middlesbrough Tessaide Polytechnic: After The Fire
 Newcastle Mayfair: John Grimaldi's Cheap Filips
 Newcastle Quayside Rad House: American Echoes
 Norwich Boogie House: Birch
 Norwich St. Andrew's Hall: Adam & The Ants/Deep Throats
 Nottingham Hearty Good Fellow: The Hormones
 Nottingham Imperial Hotel: Lap Region
 Oxford University College: Morrissey-Mullen Band
 Peterborough Technical College: The Pirates
 Portsmouth Cumberland Tavern: Interference
 Portsmouth Polytechnic: The Records
 Poynton Music Centre: Martin Simpson/Fish Company
 Rhyl Nutz Disco: Light Of The World
 Rosyth Lion Club: Rokotto
 Sheffield Limit Club: The Skids
 Sheffield Polytechnic: George Thorogood & The Destroyers/Ray Campi & The Rockabilly Rebels
 Skipton The Yorkshireman: Snoots
 Southampton Holbury Old Mill: Witch-fryde
 Southend Scamps: The Ruts
 Stodbridge Lockford Hut: Real Ale & Thunder Band
 Stockport Jazz Cellar: Crazy Caven & The Rhythm Rockers
 Stoke New Staffs Polytechnic: Jonathan Richman
 Swansea Circles Club: Hi-Fi
 Tillingbury The Anchor: Cliche
 Watford Cary's Palace: F.U.X.
 Welford Mex's Palace: Ian, Paul & The Captain
 Wellington Town House: The Angels
 Wellingborough: Weapons Of Peace
 Worthing Balmoral Bar: Night rider
 Yeovilton Heron Club: Samson
 York Revolution: The Accelerators

Friday

Aberdeen University: The Only Ones
 Ampthill Fox Inn: The Black Pig
 Bedford College of Higher Education: J.A.L.N. Band
 Birmingham Barberette's: Chas & Dave
 Birmingham Barrel Organ: Bright Eyes
 Birmingham Elizabethan Days: Bad Earth
 Birmingham Fighting Cocks: Dangerous Girls/The Wide Boys
 Birmingham Railway Hotel: Sphir
 Birmingham Town Hall: The Boxy Band
 Birmingham University: Bram Tchakovsky/Gotham City Swing Band
 Bishops Stortford Tried Leisure Centre: Destroyer
 Brighton Alhambra: Better Looking/Twist And Shout
 Brighton Bombay Bar: Devil's Dyke/The Parrots/Woody & The Splinters
 Brighton Top Rank: Culture
 Bristol University: 'Be Limp' Package Tour

Burnton 76 Club: Grand Hotel
 Camelford Liberal Club: Lipservice
 Chelmsford Chancellor Hall: George Mally & The Feetwarmers
 Chiddingfold Six Bells: Night rider
 Cromer West Runtin Pavilion: Gooz
 Doncaster Hayfield School: Foggy
 Doncaster Rio Theatre Club: Acker Bilk Band
 Dudley Technical College: Ricky Cool & The Isobars
 Eastbourne Congress Theatre: Ralph McTell
 Edinburgh College of Art: Belsen Horrors/Dirty Reds/Cuba
 Edinburgh Meniot West University: Crazy Caven & The Rhythm Rockers
 Edinburgh Napier College: The Delft Jerks
 Elkesmere Port Bull's Head: The Accelerators
 Exeter Crown & Sceptre: Martin Carter & Graham Jones
 Exeter St. Luke's College: Whizz
 Farnham Art College: The Underdogs
 Glasgow Apollo Centre: Van Morrison
 Guildford Royal Hotel: The Piranhas
 Hatfield Polytechnic: Gordon Giltrap Band
 Hornchurch The Bull: Jerry The Farret
 Hull Technical College: The Skids
 Kettering Windmill Club: The Beershank Band
 Lancaster University: BR Nelson's Red Noise
 Leeds University: The Donkeys
 Leicester Polytechnic: Eddie & The Hot Rods/The Members
 Leicester T.U.L. Club: Ray Campi & The Rockabilly Rebels
 Liverpool Empire Theatre: Bad Company
 Liverpool Eric's: Jonathan Richman
 Liverpool University: The Tunes
 London Acton Kings Head: Pax
 London Battersea Arts Centre: Amazing Band
 London Camden Blackrock: The Vipers
 London Camden Dingwells: Sara Throat
 London Camden Dublin Castle: ABC
 London Camden Electric Ballroom: George Thorogood & The Destroyers/Low Lewis Reformer/Albert Collins
 London Camden Music Machine: The Records

PAT TRAVERS returns to Britain after a long absence with a re-shaped band. He's touring with Journey and the first date is at Manchester on Wednesday.

London Camden Southampton Arms: Jet-Heyl Blues Band
 London Canning Town Bridge House: Leo Hart
 London Chiswick Polytechnic: Gino & The Sharks
 London City Polytechnic: China Street
 London Covent Garden Rock Garden: Red Beans & Rice
 London Fulham Golden Lion: Dead Ringer
 London Hackney Chats Palace: Belt & Brass Band
 London Hammersmith Odeon: Tina Turner
 London Harrow Rd. Windsor Castle: The Ruts/Nicky & The Dots
 London Kensington The Nashville: The Edge/Warm Jets
 London Lewisham Black Bull: Coast To Coast
 London Marquee Club: U.K. Subs
 London New Barnet Duke of Lancaster: 64
 London New Cross Goldsmiths College: Hi-Fi
 London North Polytechnic: Squire
 London North-East Polytechnic: The Special A.K.A.
 London Paddington Western Counties: First Aid
 London Soho Pize Express: Bud Freeman Quartet
 London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The Carpettes/The Crooks
 London Strand Kings College (lunchtime): Turning Point
 London University College: Phantom & The Specials
 London Upstairs at Ronnie Scott's: Tropicana
 London Wembley Conference Centre: The Johnny Cash Show
 London West Hampstead Moonlight Club: Patrick Fitzgerald
 London Willenden White Horse: Gine & The Rockin' Rebels
 London W.1 Portman Hotel: Roger James Band
 Maidstone Technical College: Wild Horses
 Manchester Apollo Theatre: Graham Parker & The Rumour/The Sports
 Matlock Baths Pavilion: Vesuvius
 Melton Mowbray Painted Lady: Jimmy Crawford
 Middlesbrough Town Hall: Slim Whitman
 Newport The Village: Supercharge
 Northolt Target Club: The Chevrons
 Nottingham Hearty Good Fellow: Last Call
 Nottingham Sandpiper: The Cure/Burton
 Northampton Pringles Hall: Strangeways
 Oldham Civic Hall: Showaddywaddy
 Oxford University Sheldonian Theatre: Bust Two Oxford Westminster College: Panties
 Plymouth Polytechnic: The Alwoodley Jets
 Reading University: The Movies
 Rifford Porthouse: Adam & The Ants
 Salford Maxwell Hall: Pure Product
 Salisbury Technical College: The Screens/Thieves Like Us
 Scarborough Penthouse: The Smirks
 Sheffield Limit Club: After The Fire
 Slough Langley College: The Lightning Riders
 Solihull Golden Lion: Ocean Boulevard
 Southampton Old Mill: Eyes
 Southampton The Onslow: Witchfynde
 Southport Theatre: David Essex
 Theydon Bois Old Forsters: Cliche
 Watfall Town Hall: Pressure Shocks
 Warrington Padgate College: Speed Limit
 Whitstable Duke of Cumberland: Rebel
 Wolverhampton Lafayette: The Pretenders
 York Revolution: Straight 8
 York University: Gwladys Hunt & The Pipe/The Wetts/Lester Square

Saturday

Akern Spe Social Club: The Alwoodley
 Bakewell Edenor Village Hall: Avalanche
 Birmingham Barberette's: Bethel
 Birmingham Bogarts: Miscellaneous Youth

Birmingham (King's Heath) Here & Hounds: Johnny Silver
 Birmingham National Exhibition Centre: The Johnny Cash Show
 Birmingham Railway Hotel: School Sports
 Bishops Stortford Tried Leisure Centre: Howard Lake
 Blackburn King George's Hall: David Essex
 Blackpool Gaiety Bar: Light Of The World
 Blackpool Northrock Hotel: The Pirates
 Bognor Harrison's Bar: Rokotto
 Bournemouth Winter Gardens: Slim Whitman
 Brighton Polytechnic: The Boxy Band
 Brighton The Vault: Smeggy & The Cheesey Bits / The Accents / The Chofs / The Kempton Rockers / The Teen Beets
 Bristol Crown Cellar Bar: The Wild Beasts
 Cambridge Corn Exchange: Gang Of Four/Misty/Ted Express/The Ruts
 Canterbury Kent University: The Curs
 Carlisle Twisted Wheel: The Struts/The Squares
 Carlisle St. Helier Arms: Johnny & The Jailbirds
 Chelmsford Chancellor Hall: George Mally & The Feetwarmers
 Cheltenham Plough Inn: The Fall / Ver-millon
 Chester Arts Centre: Neironymous Bosch / Sinsler
 Cranbrook School: Thieves Like Us
 Cromer West Runtin Pavilion: Culture
 Dublin National Stadium: Eric Clapton Band
 Eastbourne The Cavalier: The Little Jimmies
 Edinburgh Odeon: Eddie & The Hot Rods / The Members
 Glasgow Apollo Centre: Elton John
 Halifax Good Mood Club: Ricky Cool & The Isobars
 High Wycombe Nags Head: El Seven
 Morsham Capitol Theatre: Ralph McTell
 Leeds Haddon Hall: Red Eye
 Leeds Polytechnic: Jonathan Richman
 Leeds University: Bill Nelson's Red Noise
 Lincoln A.J.'s Club: Immigrant
 Liverpool Eric's: The Skids
 London Battersea Arts Centre: Brendan Mulveny/P.J. Grotty/John Garry
 London Camden Blackrock: Urchin
 London Camden Dingwells: Steppaside
 London Camden Electric Ballroom: George Thorogood & The Destroyers / Low Lewis / Reformer / Albert Collins
 London Canning Town Bridge House: Garry McAvoy Jam
 London Chiswick John Bull: Fest Livin'
 London City Polytechnic: The Registers / Or Eyes
 London Covent Garden Rock Garden: Roco
 London Covent Garden St. Paul's Church: The Pop G's / Linton Kwesi Johnson / Mancunian Noise
 London Fulham Golden Lion: Simon Townsend Band
 London Fulham Greyhound: Panties
 London Hackney Adam & Eve: Rock-n-Roll Connection
 London Hampstead Westfield College: Sniff 'n' The Tears
 London Highgate Jackson's Club: Hi-Fi/Charge
 London Islington Hope & Anchor: Local Operator
 London Kensington Queen Elizabeth College: Landscapes
 London Lewisham Black Bull: Yakety Yak
 London Manor Park Three Rabbits: Tour De Force
 London Marquee Club: The Jags
 London New Barnet Duke of Lancaster: Zilch
 London Notting Hill Old Swan: The Injections
 London N.4 The Stapleton: S.W.1
 London Putney Star & Garter: Greig & Hapel's Folk and Blues Night
 London Rainbow Theatre: BM Holey & The Comets/Flying Saucers/The Wild Angels
 London Regent's Park Cecil Sharp House: Dave Garland
 London Soho Pize Express: Johnny Barnes - Ray Williams - Fred Hunt Quintet

CONTINUES OVER

NATIONWIDE GIG GUIDE

London Stoke Newington Pegasus: Big Chief
 London Upstairs at Ronnie Scott's: Tropicana
 London Victoria The Venue: Tina Turner
 London West Hampstead: Moonlight Club: Nicky & The Dots/London Zoo
 London Woolwich Odeon: Nolan Sisters
 London Woolwich Thames Polytechnic: The Piranhas/Peter & The Test Tube Babies
 Luton Kingsway: Matchbox
 Manchester Free Trade Hall: Dave Pope/Jahmep United/Graham Kendrick
 Manchester University: The Movies/Straight 8/The Tunes/The Astronauts/Tonika
 Matlock Baths Pavilion: Vesuvius
 Milton Mowbray Painted Lady: Jimmy Crawford
 Middlesbrough Rock Garden: The Pretenders
 Newcastle Coopers (lunchtime): Roxoff
 Northampton County Ground: Supercharge/Speed Limit
 Northfleet Red Lion: Samson
 Norwich Googie House: Gotham City Swing Band
 Nottingham Boat Club: Grand Hotel
 Nottingham Hearty Good Fellow: Outward Band
 Nottingham University: The Bishops
 Plymouth Polytechnic: Wild Horses
 Poole Jolly Sailor: Raw Deal
 Reading Bulmershe College: After The Fire
 Reading Target Club: General Accident
 Reading University: Students Union: Adam & The Ants
 Redruth London Inn: Lipservice
 Salford University: The Smirks
 Sheffield Woodhouse West End Club: Strange Days
 Southampton New Theatre: Showaddywaddy
 Stafford Castle Social Club: Dynamo Truckin' Company
 St Albans City Hall: Bram Tchaikovsky
 Stevenage College of Education: High Flames
 Stowmarket Royal Oak: Quasar
 West Bromwich Coach & Horses: Ocean Boulevard
 Winchester King Alfred College: Adam West & His Gotham City Rockers
 Walsley Crown Hall (lunchtime): The Pests
 Wolverhampton Polytechnic: Acker Bill Band
 York Revolution: Dog Watch
 York St John's College: The Vye
 York University: The Enid

Sunday

Alcester Cherry Tree: Telephone Bill & The Smooth Operators
 Birmingham Barbarella's: Patrick Fitzgerald
 Birmingham Odeon: Tina Turner
 Birmingham Railway Hotel: Prima Donna
 Bishops Stortford Triad Leisure Centre: Exh (lunchtime) / The Haymakers (evening)
 Blackburn King George's Hall: Showaddywaddy
 Bransgore Saddle Bars: Tours
 Brighton Alhambra: The Piranhas
 Bristol Colton Hall: Bad Company
 Bristol Romeo & Juliet: Culture
 Bromley The Northover (lunchtime): Bill Scott & Ian Ellis
 Coventry Dog & Trumpet: Armpit Jug Band
 Dumfries Stagecoach: The Only Ones
 Dunstable Queensway Hall: Gordon Giltrap Band / John Glover Band
 Glasgow Apollo Centre: Elton John
 Glasgow Film Theatre: The Moteis

Hull Humberdale Theatre: Section 50 / The Odds
 Ipswich Royal William: Boy Bastin
 Jackdaws Grey Topper: The Pretenders
 Leeds Florde Green Hotel: The Smirks
 Leeds Staging Post: Terot
 Leeds Viva Wine Bar: The Vye
 Leicester Phoenix Theatre: Jonathan Richman
 Liverpool (Hayton) Bluebell: Tontrix
 Lochmaben Belcastle Hotel: High Flames
 London Battersea Nags Head: Jugular Vein
 London Camden Brecknock: Sucker
 London Camden Dingwells: Low Lewis
 London Canning Town Bridge House: Remus Down Boulevard
 London Charing Cross Duke of Buckingham: The Invisibles (for four)
 London Chiswick John Bull: The Jags
 London Clapham Two Brewers: The V.I.P.s
 London Covent Garden Rock Garden: Kangaroo Alley
 London Drury Lane Theatre Royal: Bill Nelson's Red Notes
 London East Ham Ruskin Arms: Dog Watch
 London Finchley Tooting: Big Chief
 London Fulham Golden Lion: Speed-O-Meters
 London Fulham Grayhound: Gotham City Swing Band
 London Greenwich Theatre: Alternative TV / Fashion / The Transmitters
 London Harrow Rd Windsor Castle: London Zoo
 London Kensington The Nashville: Gary Holton's Gens / January Sale
 London New Barnet Duke of Lancaster: Earthbound
 London Palladium: Slim Whitman
 London Peckham Monipeller (lunchtime): Blue Moon
 London Putney Half Moon: Turning Point
 London Soho Pizza Express: Barney Bates
 London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The Commuters / The Barnabakers
 London Strand Lyceum: Lens Lovich / Squeeze / Yachts
 London Victoria The Venue: The Bothy Band
 London Woolwich Tramshed: The McCallmans/Paul Downes
 London W1 Portman Hotel (lunchtime): Benny Waters / Fred Hunt Trio
 Manchester Apollo Theatre: The Johnny Cash Show
 Newark Cavalier: Oman
 Newcastle Polytechnic: The Movies
 Newquay Central Hotel: The Winners
 Nottingham Hearty Good Fellow: Medium Medium
 Peterborough Focus Club: Deep Throats
 Poole Wessex Concert Theatre: Martha Reeves & The Vendettas
 Portsmouth Rotary Club: Interference
 Poynton Folk Centre: Pegleg Farm / Pat Ryan
 Preston Guildhall: Bill Haley & The Comets / Flying Saucers / The Wild Angels
 Redcar Coatham Bowl: The Enid
 Redhill Lakers Hotel: Nicky & The Dots/Those Helicopters
 Slough Fulcrum Centre: Ralph McTell
 Southampton New Theatre: The Hollies
 Uxbridge Brunel University: Grand Hotel
 Walsall Dry Dock (lunchtime): The Amazing Dark Horse
 West Bromwich Coach & Horses: Ocean Boulevard

Monday

Barnsley Worsborough Dale: Tarot
 Birmingham Bagel Organ: Fashion
 Birmingham Mercat Cross: Orphan
 Birmingham Odeon: Graham Parker & The Rumour/The Sports
 Birmingham Railway Hotel: Video
 Bishops Stortford Triad Leisure Centre: Adam & The Ants

TOM ROBINSON takes his band out on the circuit for a 19-date tour, tied in with the release of their second album 'TRB Two' and new single 'Bully For You'. Their first two concerts are at Swansea (Tuesday) and Exeter (Wednesday).

Bristol Crookers: Thieves Like Us (for three days)
 Chester ABC Theatre: Showaddywaddy
 Corby Nags Head: Gaffe
 Edinburgh Odeon: Elton John
 Edinburgh Tiffany's: The Skids
 Glasgow Apollo Centre: Bill Haley & The Comets/Flying Saucers/The Wild Angels
 Ilford Cauliflower Hotel: Original East Side Stompers
 Keighley King's Head: Red Eye
 Leeds Florde Grear Hotel: Gims & The Rockin' Rebels
 Leeds (Yealand) The Peacock: City Limits
 Leicester Polytechnic: Gang Of Four/Misty/The Ruts/Wendy Tunes
 Liverpool Kirklands: Tontrix
 Liverpool The Crown: The Clerks
 London Camden Brecknock: Urchin
 London Camden Dingwells: Electrotunes / Soulyard/Neurosis
 London Camden Music Machine: Warm Jets / Dog Watch/The Ticketants
 London Canning Town Bridge House: Little Roosters
 London Chalk Farm Roundhouse: Elvin Jones Jazz Machine
 London Covent Garden Rock Garden: The Monochroma Set
 London Elephant & Castle Southbank Polytechnic: Tot & The Girls In Room 419
 London Fulham Golden Lion: Wildlife
 London Islington Hope & Anchor: The Specials
 London Kensington The Nashville: Pinpoint/The Valses
 London Marquee Club: Bram Tchaikovsky
 London Paddington Western Counties: The Best
 London Putney Half Moon: Tany O'Leary & Friends
 London Putney Star & Garter: Penny Royal
 London S.E.1 (London Bridge) Cockneys: Squike
 London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The Piranhas/Bobby Henry
 London Victoria The Venue: Gordon Giltrap
 London West Hampstead Moonlight Club: KHz/The Four Kings
 London Woolwich Thames Polytechnic: Tour De Force
 Manchester (Aldershaw) Guide Bridge Theatre: JBWSR Band
 Manchester Band on the Wall: Pure Product
 Newcastle City Hall: Van Morrison
 Newcastle Coopers: The Sabrejets
 Nottingham Hearty Good Fellow: The Party
 Nottingham Imperial Hotel: Gwahli
 Oxford New Theatre: The Hollies
 Penarth Paget Rooms: Zipper

Compiled by Derek Johnson

Plymouth New Theatre: Slim Whitman
 Pontefract Town Hall: The Struts/The Squares
 Rayleigh Cross: Ray Campi & The Rockabilly Rebels
 Sevenoaks (Badgers Mount) Black Eagle: Flying Saucers
 Sheffield Top Rank: Culture
 Wakefield Theatre Club: Tina Turner
 Warrington Carlton Club: Bitch
 Willington Power Station Club: Armpit Jug Band
 Worcester Hidesway Club: The Pirates
 York Arts Centre: Ethel The Frog

Tuesday

Birmingham Barbarella's: The Pretenders
 Birmingham Fighting Cocks: Brujo
 Birmingham Mercat Cross: Cartoons
 Birmingham Railway Hotel: Speed Limit
 Bishops Stortford Triad Leisure Centre: Newtown Neurotics / Gangsters
 Bolton Bus In: Genocides
 Brighton Richmond Hotel: Lilletes / Dirty Weekend
 Bristol Colton Hall: The Hollies
 Burnley The Hop: Miteless
 Cardiff Great Western Hotel: Zipper
 Corner West Rynon Pavilion: Gang Of Four / Misty / Pain Killers / The Ruts
 Glasgow Apollo Centre: The Johnny Cash Show
 Glasgow College Of Art: The Skids
 Huddersfield Polytechnic: The Cure
 Leeds Fan Club: The Dickies / The Features
 Leeds Irish Centre: The Bothy Band
 Leeds Moxborough Club: The Straits / The Squares
 Liverpool (Hayton) Bluebell Inn: Amsterdam
 London Camden Dingwells: Split Rivet
 London Canning Town Bridge House: The Edge
 London Chalk Farm Roundhouse: Duke Jordan Trio / Stan Tracey Quartet
 London Covent Garden Rock Garden: The Method
 London Fulham Golden Lion: Skin Deep
 London Islington Hope & Anchor: Pinpoint
 London Marquee Club: The Exiles / Car Crash
 London Maunberry's: Freddie & The Square Pegs
 London Soho Pizza Express: Digby Fairweather Quartet
 London Stoke Newington Pegasus: A-Level / Belt & Braces Band
 London Victoria The Venue: Gordon Giltrap
 London West Hampstead Moonlight Club: The Edge / Soul Boys
 London Woolwich Tramshed: The Bishops
 Manchester Apollo Theatre: Culture
 Manchester Band on the Wall: Rare Device / The Mediators / F.T. Index
 Newcastle City Hall: Eddie & The Hot Rods / The Members
 Nottingham College Of Agriculture: Supercharge
 Nottingham Imperial Hotel: Gaffe
 Oxford Corn Dolly: Fast Livin'
 Portsmouth HMS Excellent: Yakety Yak
 Reading Target Club: F.U.X.
 Sheffield Fiesta Suite: Bill Haley & The Comets / Flying Saucers / Wild Angels
 Sheffield Limit Club: The Vye
 St. Helens Theatre Royal: Heathcliffe
 Swansea Top Rank: Tom Robinson Band
 Wakefield Theatre Club: David Essex
 Walsley Dale Inn: Play
 Walsall Dirty Duck: The Amazing Dark Horse
 Warrford Max's Palace: Jesus Howard & The Mathematics
 York University: Patrick Fitzgerald

Wednesday

Aberdeen City Hall: The Skids
 Birkenhead Hamilton Club: Light Of The World
 Birmingham Bagel Organ: Brujo

Birmingham Bogans: Orphan
 Birmingham Railway Hotel: Rainmaker
 Birmingham (Yardley) Bulls Head: Roses
 Bishops Stortford Triad Leisure Centre: Dumbo Blondes
 Bourneouth Town Hall: The Westerns
 Bourneouth Trales: Real Ale & Thunder Band
 Bourneouth Winter Gardens: The Hollies
 Brentwood Old House: Foggy
 Brighton Alhambra: The Dials
 Brighton Sussex University: Jonathan Richman
 Brighton Top Rank: The Pretenders / Nicky & The Dots
 Cardiff Top Rank: Culture
 Carlisleton St Heiler Club: Matchbox
 Cheltenham Plough Inn: Roadsters
 Corby Festival Hall: Bill Haley & The Comets / The Wild Angels / Flying Saucers
 Coventry Lancaster Polytechnic: Barry Forde Band / The Lyrton Buzzards / The Piranhas / The Specials
 Dunstable College: N.W.10
 Exeter Routes: Tom Robinson Band
 Glasgow Dial Inn: The Moteis
 Great Yarmouth Wheels: Boy Bastin
 Hull New Theatre: Ralph McTell
 Leeds Viva Wine Bar: City Limits
 London Camden Brecknock: Japanese Toy
 London Camden Dingwells: Kokomo / The Voice Squad / Carol Grimes Band / The Retainers
 London Camden Dublin Castle: X-Films
 London Camden Music Machine: London Zoo
 London Chalk Farm Roundhouse: Art Ensemble Of Chicago
 London Covent Garden Rock Garden: Pinpoint
 London Islington Hope & Anchor: Law Lewis Reformer
 London Knightsbridge The Grove: Free Beer
 London Marquee Club: Eric Bell Band
 London Maunberry's: Eric Roberts
 London New Barnet Duke of Lancaster: Earthbound
 London N.4 The Stapleton: Tannis Shoes
 London Paddington Western Counties: S.W.1
 London Peckham Montpelier: Blue Moon
 London Putney Star & Garter: Dana Simmonds & Greig's Folk and Blues Showcase
 London Soho Pizza Express: Clyde Bernhardt Quartet
 London Stoke Newington Pegasus: ABC / Local Heroes
 London West Hampstead Moonlight Club: The Reincarnate
 London Wimbledon F.C. Nelson's Club: Panties
 Loughborough Sea of Rounders: Gaffe
 Manchester Apollo Theatre: Journey / Pat Travers Band
 Manchester The Factory: Patrick Fitzgerald
 Margate Bowlers Arms: Too Much
 Newcastle City Hall: Elton John
 Northwood HMS Warrior: Souled Out
 Nottingham Hearty Good Fellow: Gwahli
 Nottingham Imperial Hotel: Some Chicken
 Plymouth Circus Tavern: Crazy Caven 'n' The Rhythm Rockers / Shot Rod
 Rayleigh Cross: The V.I.P.s
 Sheffield Limit Club: Pressure Shocks
 Sheffield Polytechnic: The Only Ones
 Slough RAF Cranwell: Strange Days
 Slough Langley College: Slidghammer
 Solihull Golden Lion: Special Clinic
 South Woodford Railway Bell: Original East Side Stompers
 St Agn. 118 Of The West: Freddy Cole (for four days)
 St Austell New Riviera Lido: Lipservice
 Uxbridge Brunel University: Bram Tchaikovsky
 Wakefield Theatre Club: Slim Whitman
 Wrexham Jolly Tavern: Amsterdam
 York Pop Club: The Fall
 York Revolution: Grand Hotel

PATRICK FITZGERALD is being hailed in many quarters as God's latest gift to the new-wave movement. In fact, he's hardly a newcomer — but at least he's now beginning to make the impact his talents deserve. He's on tour at Cardiff (Thursday), London West Hampstead (Friday), Birmingham (Sunday), York (Tuesday) and Manchester (Wednesday), promoting his newly-released Polydor single 'All Sewn Up'.

JONATHAN RICHMAN, pictured here on his last British visit, returns this week in a new guise — as a solo performer. Since splitting from the Modern Lovers, he's been presenting his acoustic set very successfully in the States, and his new approach can be seen in action when he opens his UK tour at Stoke (Thursday), Liverpool (Friday), Leeds (Saturday), Leicester (Sunday) and Brighton (Wednesday).

SOME OF YOU DIDN'T READ LAST WEEK'S HEADING, DID YER — WELL THE BOYS WILL BE ROUND IN THE WEEK. REMEMBER DON'T RING ME FOR THE GIG GUIDE (FREE LISTINGS) WRITE TO 'IM. DEREK J. Love Brian B.

THIS MAY NOT BE THE REAL ONE, BUT AT LEAST IT COVERS THREE PAGES

00000

LEW LEWIS REFORMER

LEW LUCKY SEVEN

LEWIS NIGHT TALK

TOUR DATES

FRI 16 CAMDEN
SAT 17 CAMDEN
SUN 18 CAMDEN
MON 19 TRINGTON
TUE 20 TRINGTON
WED 21 TRINGTON
THU 22 HIGH WYKINGE
FRI 23 HIGH WYKINGE
SAT 24 HIGH WYKINGE
SUN 25 HIGH WYKINGE
MON 26 HIGH WYKINGE
TUE 27 HIGH WYKINGE
WED 28 HIGH WYKINGE
THU 29 HIGH WYKINGE
FRI 30 HIGH WYKINGE
SAT 31 HIGH WYKINGE

NEW SINGLE OUT NOW ON STIFF
A/SIDE - LUCKY SEVEN B/SIDE - NIGHT TALK CAT No. LEW 1

BRUNEL UNIVERSITY S.U.

Friday March 16th

REGGAE REGULAR
+ support
Tickets £1 advance
£1.20 on door

Wednesday March 21st

BRAM TCHAIKOVSKY
(ex Motors)
+ support
Tickets £1.20 advance
£1.40 on door

Tickets available from Social Secretary or City Electronics, Uxbridge
Brunel University
Kingston Lane, Uxbridge, Middlesex Tel (09) 39125
Nearest tube Uxbridge Buses 204, 207, 223, 224

THIEVES LIKE US

Winchester 02561/Abingdon 2788
GET DOWN AND LOVE THEM

MARCH:
Thurs 15th: Bournemouth Town Hall (with Wild Horses)
Fri 16th: Salisbury Tech (with Screens)
Sat 17th: Cranbrook School
18th, 20th, 21st: Crookby, Bristol
Thurs 22nd: Culham College, Oxford
Mon 26th: Corn Dolly, Oxford
Wed 28th: Old Mill, Moulton
Thurs 29th: Broadchurch, Dorset

This line is a rip-off, isn't it?

MEDIUM MEDIUM

Fri Mar 16 Happy Birthday John
Sat Mar 17 Nottingham Queens Drive S.K.A.N.
Sun Mar 18 Nottingham Hearty
Wed Mar 21 Derby Bell
Fri Mar 23 Wusford K.S.B.
Sun Mar 25 Nottingham Hearty

All bands end
(0502) 813662

TICKETS... TICKETS... TICKETS
AVAILABLE FOR LONDON CONCERTS OF THE FOLLOWING

Mar 19 JIMMY GARR
Mar 20 JIMMY GARR
Mar 21 JIMMY GARR
Mar 22 JIMMY GARR
Mar 23 JIMMY GARR
Mar 24 JIMMY GARR
Mar 25 JIMMY GARR
Mar 26 JIMMY GARR
Mar 27 JIMMY GARR
Mar 28 JIMMY GARR
Mar 29 JIMMY GARR
Mar 30 JIMMY GARR
Mar 31 JIMMY GARR

LONDON THEATRE BOOKINGS
96 SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.1.
General Enquiries: 01-435 3371
Telephone Credit Card Bookings: 01-240 0881

GEORGE THOROGOOD & THE DESTROYERS with guest ALBERT COLLINS
LEW LEWIS REFORMER

ELECTRIC BALLROOM
(at Camden High St. N.W.1. (nearest tube Camden Square))
FRI/SAT-16/17 MARCH at 7-30
TICKETS: 12.50 ADVANCE, 15.00 DOOR. ELECTRIC BALLROOM BOX OFFICE: TEL. 025 5006.
LONDON THEATRE BOOKINGS: SHAFTESBURY AVE. W.1. (13) 39125. PLYMOUTH BOX OFFICE: TEL. 740 7245.
ON BOOKING RECORDS: JAGTUN (17th Ed. N.W.1. Tel. 425 5000)

L & CO Present
Friday March 23rd at the REGAL SOCIAL CENTRE
Soho Road, Handsworth, Birmingham

CULTURE
with guests
TRADITION & ECLIPSE
Doors open 7 p.m.

Tickets £3.00 in advance, £3.50 at the door. Tickets available from Virgin Records, Bull Street, Birmingham; Rising Star Records, Dudley Road, Birmingham; Zion Records, Villa Road, Handsworth; Hit Factory Records, High Street, West Bromwich; and usual agents.
Enquiries: 021 707 2553

PUBLIC WARNING!
live recording of the DEBUT ALBUM
LIVE SHARKS
Wed 28th March at THE MOONLIGHT CLUB
Cino and the Sharks

Plus the cannibals & private vices
Fri 16 Mar SouthBank Poly (SPECIAL GIG)
ELEPHANT & CASTLE, Rotary St. S.E.1.

BIG CHIEF
Featuring Dick Maccall-Smith
Monday March 19th in the UNION COMMON ROOM
BEDFORD COLLEGE, REGENTS PARK
7.15 p.m. U.S. £1.00 Queens. Chicago Road A&M!

FOXES AT THE GREYHOUND
Park Lane, Croydon

Sunday March 18th. Tickets at the door
REGGAE REGULARS
+ Trimmer & Jenkins + D.J. Graham Fox

TRIAD
Bishop Stortford 56333

Friday March 16th, 8pm
DESTROYER
Saturday March 17th, 8pm
HOWARD LIKE
Sunday March 18th, 8pm
EXIT
Tuesday March 20th, 8pm
NEWTOWN NEUROTICS
Wednesday March 21st, 8pm
DUMB BLOODES

LOCAL OPERATOR
Hope and Anchor
Saturday March 17th

ROCK WITH THE CAROLITE Roadshow

Fri March 16th Civic Hall, ORPINGTON.
Sat March 17th, King Georges Hall, Most Road, EAST GRINSTEAD
Fri March 23rd Baintree Technical College, Church Lane, Basingstoke.
Sat March 24th Town Hall, CHATHAM
Mon March 26th Nildon Manor, London Rd, TONBRIDGE, Kent.
Thurs March 28th Remington Manor, Northfield, Nr ASHFORD, Kent.
Fri March 30th Roots Hall, Southend-on-Sea, SOUTHEAST.
Sat March 31st, 8th Centre, Westwood Rd, ST IVES, Cambridgeshire
Don't miss the... 12.00 p.m. - 12.30 p.m. ROCKING DAY & NIGHTY THE NIGHT
Thurs April 5th, 10.00 p.m. Cluff Road, FOLKESTONE (with support Lyle)
Fri April 6th, 10.00 p.m. Cluff Road, FOLKESTONE

Sat April 7th, 10.00 p.m. FULHAM, LONDON
Coaches will run from Maidstone and Chelmsford. Tickets available at all rockshops.

For further info contact 01-240 0881 to

For further info contact 01-240 0881 to

For further info contact 01-240 0881 to

From page 32

"Yeah, I suppose there is. What is it?"
You'd be the person to know.

"Well, maybe I know 'n' I'm not telling."

Joan laughs, and I concede defeat.

Her writing technique is far from unusual: the great majority of songs, novels, plays etc. are probably not based directly on the personal experience of the author. A minor example — when the crash which opened this piece actually occurred, I was fast asleep several thousand miles away. All writing is a con — the point is whether or not it's effective, and to what end.

If there's one disappointment about 'Show Some Emotion' and 'To The Limit' it's that, for whatever reason, the lyrics don't have the bite and sparkle of those on 'Joan Armatrading'. Because she has no developing perspective on her subject-matter — the songs are random observations — and because, though her music is changing, those changes remain mostly within certain traditional parameters: the danger is that Joan Armatrading will become less and less innovative the longer she goes on. Repetition threatens.

Towards the end of the interview, I try to find out more about the ways in which Joan's feelings do interact with her lyrics — that area where her observations mingle with her experiences and the songs are made. I didn't do very well, and I'm not sure now why I wanted to know in the first place. But for those of you into personality cults and the like, here are a few... mmm... fascinating insights into the way a writer receives her raw material, and a rare glimpse of Joan at a vulnerable and revealing moment. Real hot poop! In your previous interviews you've come across as a solitary person.

"Yeah, I still am."

A lot of your songs are about people being on their own, and sometimes feeling lonely. Do you?

"I'm not lonely, no. Somebody asked me that the other day. I can't remember when I was lonely. I haven't been lonely since I was little, and even then I don't really remember... No, being on your own is nice. I just like to sit by myself or just be with one other person or two other people."

"I'm sure the reason for that is cos when I was little I spent a lot of time on my own. My two brothers didn't wanna play with me — they didn't wanna go to school. I didn't have lots of friends even then. Some, but not loads. So it was a matter of amusing myself."

"Like, I used to go to the pictures on my own — and anywhere I wanted to go, I went on my own. I took me a long time before I could go somewhere with somebody."

"So it was something I had to get into, being with people... I think it's nice if you can enjoy your own company. It's a shame if you have to have somebody with you 24 hours a day to feel you're a human being."

Listening to 'Never Too Late' I thought it might have been written by someone who felt they were getting old. Do you ever feel like that?

"Sometimes. Sometimes I feel ten, sometimes 30, sometimes 28. No, it wasn't that. The reason I wrote that was, I was walking in New York — I mean, I've seen all sorts of rubbish there — I was walking along the pavement one day, 'n' a guy — just your distance from me cos he was passing me — just... uh... slashed his wrist with a... he broke a bottle on the side of a wall 'n' he started hacking away at his wrist."

"I sort of looked... 'huh?'... 'n' I rushed into this shop to phone the ambulance. And somebody else did as well, and they did it before me. The ambulance came — they took him away."

"And... oh, there's so many crazy people there... 'n' then I was walking along the street again 'n' this woman comes down the road, 'n' all the inside of her mouth was hanging out. I've never seen anything like that — it was really bloated, 'n' this huge, red, bulbous... it made me feel really bad, you know. And I wanted to go up to her 'n' say 'do you want some money for the operation?' And... Joan laughs nervously... 'I started to cry, of course. I really wanted to say 'look, how much is it — have it.' And I stopped 'n' turned around 'n' watched her go — I was thinking 'oh blimey, I'm too late.'"

"And that's really why I wrote that song. Cos I wasn't too late. I could've run after her 'n' given her the money. It's like, saying 'it's not too late' and 'never doing it is too late'. Both, you know. That was the reason for that song."

Art as sublimated liberal guilt? There must be a new theory in there somewhere. This story completely contradicts Joan's earlier contention that she just writes it "as I see it" without using any of the conventions of song-writing. The pity of it is that all the emotions, all the complexities of what was obviously an intense and prickly personal encounter in that New York street should be diminished into the altogether more cosy and commonplace imagery of rock 'n' roll love song: "If you see someone not dancing/it's your fault/ Never is too late/ And a dance short lived/ Or long/ it's all that's needed/ Who will help this lonely one."

At moments like this, you begin to wonder if the 'rock tradition' isn't among the most reactionary forces of 'contemporary' culture. Down to zero? You bet.

U.K. SPRING TOUR

BETHNAL WITH NEXT

Sat 17 Mar/Barbarellas (Birmingham)
Tues 20 Mar/Oscars, Liverpool
Thurs 22 Mar/Hucknall (Welfare Club, Notts)
Fri 23rd Mar/Middlesex Polytechnic (Hendon)
Sat 24 Mar/Kingston Polytechnic (Surrey)
Sun 25 Mar/Chancellor Halls (Chelmsford)
Thurs 29 Mar/Music Machine (London)

THE NEW ALBUM

◆ STRANGE MAN CHANGED MAN ◆

NOW ON TOUR

MARCH 16: BIRMINGHAM UNIVERSITY • 17: ST. ALBANS CIVIC HALL •
19: LONDON MARQUEE • 21: UXBRIDGE BRUNEL UNIVERSITY
• 23: LONDON CITY POLY • 24: BIRMINGHAM BARBERELLAS •
25: LONDON NASHVILLE • 29: SHEFFIELD UNIVERSITY •
• MORE TO FOLLOW •••

GET DOWN to your record store and TURN THE MUSIC UP of the hottest dance albums around— hurry before they're CLEAN out!

INCLUDES
U.S. AND U.K.
TOP CHART SINGLE
'CONTACT'

EDWIN STARR album 'CLEAN'
BT 559

Single 'CONTACT'
7" BTC 2396
12" BTCL 2396

GENE CHANDLER album 'GET DOWN'
BT 578

Single 'GET DOWN'
7" BTC 1040
12" BTCL 1040

INCLUDES
DISCO CHART SMASH
'GET DOWN'

PLAYERS ASSOCIATION album 'TURN THE MUSIC UP'
VSD 79421

Single 'TURN THE MUSIC UP'
7" VS 5011
12" VSL 5011

BOTH NOW CHARTING WITH A BULLET

ON THE TOWN

Magazine

Glasgow
Smoke drifts atmospherically past the window like a Jack the Ripper dockland fog. Problems with special effects: the fog swirls like a gathering of demons — too fast, effective, but there's no subtlety. A clumsy analogy occurs...

Magazine, the foreground to the fog despite Devoto's previously limited experience, became distinctive and special with amazing speed. Often melodramatic, they sound like music from the Hammer version of Cabaret.

Devoto's inexperience shows. He has two expressions: inscrutable, and inscrutable with raised eyebrows. Through gestures and tone of voice, he reminds me of Kenneth Williams. But cheekbones that make the Mekon (the Dan Dare one) look butch are a definite advantage, and should he realise the possibilities of a stage and escape from his present rut, Howard Devoto could be the next Howard Devoto.

Songs from the fridge

At present it's not that he's so good, it's just that everyone else is so bad. Magazine should really keep him if they can't get Joel Gray.

For early '78, Magazine was a brave move on Devoto's part. The keyboards, the long, slow songs must have seemed like tragedy to all the people forming their own bands because they reckoned they could knock out some adequate two-chord stampedes too. For this you needed expensive equipment, musicians who didn't think Johnny Ramone was the best guitarist in the world. And what was all this stuff about Sylvia Plath and Samuel Beckett? An intellectual? Pshaw!

Memories of the first tour are of an audience (mostly along to see The Skids) confused by this glacial, structured music, looking blankly ahead, subdued applause on cue: Devoto, crouched behind a monitor, looking at the people with all the unconsciousness of a baby deer; a wag untying Devoto's shoelace as he sang.

Magazine have fans now. Their second album is due out in two weeks and a major tour is planned. They still deserve success.

Most of the older songs have slightly altered arrangements to sustain interest (our's and the band's). The new songs, particularly 'Back To Nature' and 'Feed The Enemy', promise well for 'Second Hand Daylight' (the new album) though there are no new short, fast songs to match 'Shot By Both Sides' or even 'Touch And Go'.

The only hints of any decay into predictability and international stardom are the entrance tape (quite a good one, actually) and Devoto's separate entrance after the band.

Julie Covington looks like Dave Formula, amongst modestly massed keyboards, and John McGeoch on guitar and sax provide most of what's interesting. In contrast the bass and drums frequently seemed boringly simplistic; enough to put anybody off wanting to be a bassist.

Yes and Genesis used to be quite good. Van Der Graaf remained good to the end. If money and success are the lethal catalysts, I can only hope Magazine are poor forever.

pragVEC, who performed first, probably will be. They're existentialist intellectuals, summarising Proust in a song. Austere and humourless, they reminded me most of Slapp Happy's work with Henry Cow (which means they're quite good), their singer being an X between Dagmar and Pauline from Penetration.

They went down well. Glasgow audiences are a constant source of surprise.

Glenn Gibson

Richard & Linda Thompson

The Venue

Fits and starts; fits and starts. That's the way Richard Thompson's career, certainly since he left Fairport Convention, has loped along.

He's one of a breed of musicians/songwriters (Steve Winwood is another) who refuse to stalk into the music biz market-place and prefers the more eccentric role of a shadowy figure, skirting the outer precincts, making his statements and disappearing again to pursue purely extra-musical activities.

The Thompsons may have successfully come to terms with the hoary old biz, but a frustration arises from what can only be regarded as a simultaneous lack of perspective when viewing the true worth of their contributions, past and present.

Their first house gig at The Venue was a perfect case in point.

Thompson and his wife have not been prolific live performers since the onset of their career, consummated by the superb 'I Wanna See The Bright Lights Tonight'; yet a recent change of label (from Island to Chrysalis) and subsequent album 'First Light' willed them to assemble a band and tour for promotion purposes if nothing else.

Having foolishly mistimed my arrival at The Venue, I walked into a decidedly low-key atmosphere, good natured with a beguilingly spirited essence to the proceedings. The band was superb. Anchored by a crisp, sympathetic rhythm section of Fairport stalwart Dave Pegg on bass and a young vigorous, newly recruited drummer, the juxtapositioning of John Kirkpatrick on accordion alongside wife Clair on keyboards and flute provided sinuous textures for Thompson's majestic guitar playing. Linda sang, played tambourine and looked suitably serene.

The problem was mainly choice of material. Use of 'First Light' songs — 'Died For Love', 'Restless Highway' — and a grand finale of 'Layla' — re-emphasised the promo aspect of the gig, the highlights all impeccably played between the odd medley or two of the jigs and reels.

It was all very tasteful, occasionally breathtaking but too perfunctory to be satisfying.

More than anything it was frustrating: frustrating to watch a man ignoring a great heritage of illustrious songs ('Four Down Like Silver' was the sole exception); frustrating to hear one of rock's most innovative and soulful guitarists cruising over the fretboard when there was irrefutable proof he'd lost nothing.

Sure, it was a good night; but good ain't enough when greatness is so obviously there.

Nick Kent

Bo Diddley Ray Campi And The Rockabilly Rebels Whirlwind

Lyceum

Bo Diddley's a gunlinger. Bo Diddley's a lumberjack. Bo Diddley's a round man with a rectangular guitar. Bo Diddley's the master of the nuances of rhythm and noise. Bo Diddley's my hero. Bo Diddley's a man who needs a band good enough to say "How high?" in mid-air when he says jump. And Jack, I got one more for your ass: Bo Diddley's a mindwrecker. Man can take you apart with either hand while he pushes back his specs and pinches his nose with the other.

Man can do just about anything other than make his impossibly dreary backing group sound like anything other than three stooges (in the non-iggian sense).

But it didn't really matter apart from momentary flashes of irritation at the guitarist's clichéd solos and feeble rhythm, at the bass player's lackadaisical drabness (particularly when Bo did a lovely 'Crackin' Up' and the rhythm section could've made it lovelier with a few reggae accents) at the drummer's missed beats (Bo's stunning intro to 'I'm A Man' was virtually capsized because the drummer came in at the wrong speed. Bo gave him a dirty look and played the riff again his way. They sorted it out eventually, but it took a minute or two to recover the impetus and the magic).

Well, all right. They weren't the total drongos with which too many legends saddle themselves, but they weren't up to the standard which someone like Bo Diddley should be demanding of his accompanists.

Start again. Missed Whirlwind, caught Ray Campi and — by all accounts — got the worst of the bargain.

Campi is a thickset 'King Of Rockabilly' in his late 30s: he plays a bullfiddle bass adorned with Confederate flags, and hollers into his mike in a more than businesslike manner. But the bass was amplified fairly erratically and seemed more serviceable as a prop than an instrument. After all, when Campi seemed in danger of being upstaged by one of his acrobatic young guitarists (which was, I'm afraid, often the case) his last resort was usually to climb on his bass and balance on the damn thing.

It seemed about the only thing that he could do that one of the Rockabilly Rebels couldn't have done better.

There was Kevin Fennell with his 'ache and his silly outfit and his Les Paul, but he kept pretty much his own counsel throughout with solid rhythm and the occasional finger-busting featured solo. Jerry Sirkorsky takes the more spectacular stuff (musically and gymnastically) while looking like the archetypal B-movie truckstop redneck dressed up for that Big Night Out.

Finally for the front line, Colin Winkski sings backup harmonies, poses his way round the stage with a creditable evocation of what most people consider a teenage Presley must've been like, plays totally inaudible rhythm guitar and steals the show with an orgasmic setpiece that took in every Hot Move known to rock and roll science and raised the energy level of the set close to where it should've been all along.

The place was pleasantly full without being jam-up-jelly-tight: the audience were multi-racial and multi-style with Teds winning by weight of numbers. Joe Strummer was right in the centre of the crowd (sartorially and geographically).

Bang on ten, Bo's band blink on stage and then The Man adds his magisterial presence. Simultaneously sorcerer and patron demon, Bo invokes himself with 'Hey Bo Diddley'. A huge challenging figure in a sheriff's hat and outfit that ought to look absurd, he hits the switches on his custom-built rectangular box and comes up with a tougher, weirder sound each time. No sooner does a number end than he's bump-starting a new one. 'Bo Diddley Is A Gunslinger' (yeah? Uh huh), 'Road Runner', 'Bo Diddley' and a specially version of 'I'm A Man' that co-ordinated musical and visual humour with an instinct and timing that was a delight to behold/behear.

You didn't notice the band unless they cocked up (I noticed 'em a lot) but Bo Diddley is as hard to ignore as a pterodactyl in your bath, as hard to resist as a good time. This man doesn't have a record contract. Why not?

Once again: Bo Diddley is a mindwrecker. Yeah? Uh huh.

Charles Shaar Murray

This here's the review of Bo Diddley

BO. Yo' bro', and mo' besides.

Pic: CHRIS HORLER

PAT TRAVERS BAND

PROVES WHAT HARD ROCK IN THE RIGHT HANDS CAN DO

THE NEW ALBUM

Heat in the Street

SEE PAT TRAVERS ON TOUR WITH JOURNEY

March

21st Apollo

22nd Apollo

23rd City Hall

24th City Hall

26th HAMMERSMITH ODEON

27th De Montfort Hall

28th Odeon

MANCHESTER

GLASGOW

NEWCASTLE

SHEFFIELD

LONDON

LEICESTER

BIRMINGHAM

ALBUM • CASSETTE

KRAMER & friend jamming out the kicks. Pic CHRIS HORLER

Return of the MC1

Wayne Kramer

Dingwells

I saw MC5 at the Cambridge Corn Exchange in '72 supporting Syd Barrett. Like many similar tales, the smelling was infinitely worse than the telling. I left Syd mumbling into his shirt-front while people walked and talked, oblivious, probably as numbed by the Five as I was. My abiding memory is of ugly old Rob Tyner ranting beneath a shapeless fretboard frenzy, while Fred Smith stared lethargically into the dark. Living legend? Led Zep at Earl's Court is the only gig I've enjoyed less.

Soon after, I picked up 'Back In The USA' for 99p and life began: all that flailing energy crammed into two and three minute capsules.

The MC5 broke up through public apathy as much as politics, acquiring outlaw/martyr chic in buckets. Then, in '76, handsome Wayne Kramer scored himself a lifetime's worth the hard way — four years for coke dealing. Stirred by Max Bell's prison interview, I bought the 'Rambling Rose' solo single. It's not exactly worn out.

And so to Camden Town, a year after Kramer's release.

There's old Larry Wallis, the hairdresser's nightmare, looking pasty and serious. Bearded George Butler, from the magnificent Softies, is on drums, bassist Andy Colquhoun looking downright elfin in this grizzled company. Wayne, complete with 'tache, is the most suave. 'Rambling Rose' is first up, complete with daft falsetto. Butler's impeccable and Kramer and Wallis solo like they mean it. Fine for starters.

WK's first proper vocal, on 'Going Up To The City', is no disgrace and the guitars spark like Johnny Winter and Rick Derringer on a good night.

'The Harder They Come' follows, divine dual lead and more great work from Butler making purist objections redundant.

Sensing he's passed the audition, Wayne comments "Not bad for two rehearsals", and promptly almost blows it. The band slip into an easy-rolling blues and it's rap-time, dramatising the bust saga way beyond the limits of good manners. The leather jackets loved it.

'Back In The USA' ('Chuck Berry did this after he got out') is played as per the album. Kramer's dancing guitar covering nine years in a single bound. Despite a thin vocal — one of the few times Tyner's missed — 'Looking At You' proves it's no fluke. The guitars play delectable hell out of 'Get Some', dull riff though it is. Somebody find Larry Truittful regular employment: these one-offs are mere prick-teasing — we want Wallis!

In true 'welcome back' spirit, I'll gloss over the hideous locker-room cunnilingus rap that made 'I Wanna Do Something Freaky To You' such a stain on the evening. Still, we got a show. Wayne strutting head up on several solos and machine-gunning the audience just like old times. Wayne Kramer '79 equals money's-worth hard rock, but the bust references can't go quick enough. Those six strings do all the talking necessary. Whether they'll add to the language of the '80's remains to be seen.

Harry George

Dire Straits

New York

There's this incredibly offensive radio commercial for Dire Straits' LP featuring an adman's exemplars of the squeaky clean 'Knowledgeable American Consumer', with the hook line "Are you tired of hard rock, disco, new wave and punk?" This from the company that brought the US the Pistols and Devo and which distributes Sire.

You're smugly told that Dire Straits are just the answer for you — it'll appeal to everybody.

No doubt Dire Straits themselves would be somewhat abashed to hear this sort of sales pitch on their behalf, but the damning fact of the matter is that it's true.

Damning because Dire Straits are blind enough for everybody: bland, but relatively different (for the American mass audience, that is), since they don't fit into a category like the LA country-rockers or over-processed heavy-metal-pop of the Bostons. They also have two pluses in the 'non-commercial' integrity / credibility column, for the pseudo-intellectuals: Mark Knopfler is an excellent guitarist and sings like Dylan too.

Listening to their lightweight blues-rock muzak in the background at home is one thing, but going out to see them is another. Well, the Bottom Line (usual capacity 450) was packed for four shows and the crowds were all immensely pleased, calling for multiple encores. But I was bored.

I paid the show close attention, looking for details nuances... anything to write about. Yet by the end of the third number ennuï had set in for me, only relieved by the occasional snappy guitar break and 'Sultans Of Swing', a catchy if rambling song.

Their tunes were oppressively samy: the same chords in slightly different sequences and the pace varied. As someone pointed out to me later, this could be said of a lot of bands' material, why pick on Dire Straits? Easy — there's nothing else to redeem them; except, of course, the guitar.

Not that the other Straits are dire musicians (the drumming was particularly tasty), but Knopfler's guitar — an odd thumb-and-fingers style that is syncopated, dynamic, darting, biting and often stunning — is the whole show. If he ain't cookin' there ain't nothin' happenin', since the low-key material lacks even minimally interesting instrumental colouring.

Success comes to many less deserving than this marginal lot, and their Bottom Line reception and rise up the charts shows the people have spoken.

But so have I. Dire Straits are insubstantial and boring.

Marc Maycox

Leyton Buzzards

Music Machine

It could have been the Harpin Coldrex mixture clouding my senses or the rogue PA, but when they put their minds to it Leyton Buzzards make a lot of NOISE.

It's a pity, as they are one of the more interesting outfits among this year's newcomers, and they score high in the dressage, rabble rousing and material stakes. Lead singer Geoffrey Dean, dandy in Beaufort style Uncle Ernie costume, only lacked a red nose. Bassist David Jaymes and guitarist Vernon Austin, both given to much onstage writhing, opted for the shiny blackskin-tight and peroxide look. The drummer's name is Kevin Steptoe.

They generated enough ramshackle popo-wangage to heat the entire house by several degrees.

Their songs display a keen sense of sardonic deadpan. 'Saturday Night Beneath The Plastic Palm Tree', a moving saga of love and hate at the

Tottenham Road: 'Nineteen and Mad, a clarion call to sixth-form schizophrenia, and a mischievous Costello parody. 'I Don't Wanna Go to Art-School' are three examples of the dry, if not high comedy in their, uh, repertoire.

They propelled their set in raging, if somewhat sloppy, fettle. They have a basic edgy rhythmic sound peppered with instrumental snatches borrowed from Tchaikovsky and the town hall clock chimas. But a strain of confusion often made them sound like an uncoiled combine harvester.

At the moment they seem to have an identity problem — they can't decide whether they're The Members, Japan or Dagenham Dave. When they've solved this dilemma they could break big on the West bank of the River Lea.

Rick Joseph

UK

Imperial College

UK were greeted by rapturous applause: a phenomenon I tried to puzzle out all evening.

There they were: ace-bass John Wetton (formerly Family, Ferry and, crumbs, Uriah Heep), ex-boy Wonder Eddie Jobson (fiddler to the stars, late of Roxy, Zappa and Curved Air) and Terry Bozzio (Zappapostate and mean mother on the traps).

What credentials! What faultless techniques!

So why, after three numbers, was I bored out of my mind and ultimately out of my seat? I mean, could anyone reasonably ask for more than a modern equivalent to yesterday's 'supergroup'?

Yes. How about a little personality for starters? With the banks of instrumental paraphernalia, the stage resembled a lab and generated a forbidding sterility which the band did little to dispel. Talk was kept to a functional minimum and no identity was projected. Regardless, the majority of folks were clap-happy (especially when Jobson approached his famous Perspex fiddle), but if UK expected their music to do all the talking, then they were disappointed.

Maybe they're too serious, too complex and too tasteless within the confines of experimental heavy rock. The songs, except the melodic and comparatively streamlined 'Rendezvous 502', were basically grandiose frames for protracted, often indulgent instrumentals. Lyrics, dwarfed by the enormity of solos, dealt with "chasing rainbows" and cosmic themes that Wetton must have picked up from his Heep days.

And his vocals, pleasant as they were, oscillated between Rundgrenesque falsetto and Greg Lake circa King Crimson (which isn't surprising since Wetton served time with Crimson as well).

UK are obvious successors to the ELP title. Their music is ideal for impersonal olympic stadia; a real shame because their musical accomplishment is worthy of a more humane fete.

Personality-wise, UK could learn a few things from their support group Ian Trimmer and Billy Jenkins. They were the comic mainsprings of the late lamented Burlesque and with a threadbare guitar/sax sound still came up with the loony tunes and effervescent character which makes them the thinking man's Otway and Barrett.

They may sing inane songs about bananas, but I prefer their anarchy anyway to boredom in the UK.

Efesa Van Poznak

16 or 17? WHY 1979 COULD BE THE START OF AN OUTSTANDING CAREER

If you are 16 or 17 and apply now you could be a police cadet in September.

Once accepted, you'll be specially trained for a career in the police.

A career that's exciting and challenging, responsible and rewarding — where you initiative and character are constantly put to the test.

A good grounding

As a cadet, you'll be taught exactly how the police work. You'll gain first-hand practical experience with operational officers. You'll do adventure

A flying start

At 18½, you're eligible to become a police officer, when the knowledge and experience you've gained as a cadet will prove invaluable.

Well trained and well paid

Cadet pay at present ranges from £1578 to £1863 (in London £1769 to £2054). When you become a constable your pay will start at least at £3600 (in London £4569).

The Big City challenge

At the moment, there's a special need for police cadets in the Metropolitan Police and some of the forces covering the big cities.

This is where the big problems are, of crime and traffic. And, as a cadet, you will start learning how to do your share in helping to solve them.

If you think you've got it in you to become a police cadet, fill in the coupon. And take the first step to an outstanding career.

To join, you need to be between 16-18, physically fit, and up to certain height and educational requirements. Write for a brochure to Police Careers Officer, Dept. L45, 6 Harrow Road, London W2 1KH.

Name
(Mr Miss Miss)
Address

Postcode Age

POLICE CADET

The start of a worthwhile career for today's 16 and 17 year olds.

training, community work, and bags of sport. And you'll get opportunities to study and add to your academic qualifications.

AWB Inner Circle

Leeds

AWB posters, albums, T-shirts and badges adorned the foyer of Leeds University's Saturday Stadium. Inside the hall, the band, possibly in a Guinness Book of Records attempt to re-define the twin concepts of "blandness" and "laid-back", played on, and on, and on.

The only accessories you really needed in that hall were a long drink and a deck-chair.

Frankly, you don't have to be too hung up on punk or new wave or heavy metal (or whatever your bag is) to know that the Average White Band are very definitely not where it's at. Playing meaty and fruity — like a beefburger heavy on the relish — the bearded Scots simmered their way through 'Love Your Life', 'Person To Person', 'Got The Love' and a few others, each lasting around a quarter-of-an-hour. Every one featured some pretty hoarse waiting, effete harmonies, Brother Lee Love gospel back-up, obvious instrumental solos and lightweight rhythms rambling on ad infinitum/nauseam

There were redeeming features. 'Atlantic Avenue' — a deadringer for Pebble MHI At One — is a nice enough tune, even if its Nassau/Rio lyrics are smug, naive and unashamedly bourgeois.

And on 'TLC' the funk really did work, with drummer Steve Ferrone cooking a faster than average (you don't need to grope for puns with this combo) beat, opening it up for solos by Molly Duncan (sax) and Ollie McIntyre (guitar), while Alan Gorrie (bass) and rhythm guitarist Hamish Stuart got it together on the vocal front. Gorrie said it all when he introduced a track from the old days — "which some of you might remember — if you were born then."

In the circumstances, it was just as well that Inner Circle, intense and heavy (in every sense of the word), were on hand as guests.

Featuring songs from their forthcoming album 'Everything Is Great', this latest reggae/funk JA band to get the big promo treatment takes rhythmic invention to the limit. With vocalist Jacob "Killer" Miller the personification of power and ingenious instrumental embellishments through

Heavier than the Average

(people like keyboardist Bernard Harvey, they effected a classic case of technical upstaging.

In a year's time, I doubt very much whether the Average White Band would want to "follow that"

Emma Ruth

The Venigmas

Glasgow

Comparisons between Glasgow's soon-to-be superstars Simple Minds and their near relations The Venigmas are, unfortunately but inevitably, doubly unfortunate for The Venigmas because they're going to come off worst.

The Venigmas are not my cup of meat; how much they're likely to be yours depends entirely on how you view heavy metal with artistic pretensions.

The HM tag stems from the relentless, wearisome sledgehammer battering of two rhythm guitars which they use to disguise an inability to pen a memorable tune between them. They also possess a lead guitarist called Andy Logan of whom they are inordinately proud.

Technically proficient, unfortunately he states little and gibbers away at top speed with zero emotional impact.

Their presentation also needs polishing. Links and introductions are generally unintelligible and the lead singer's posing is downright embarrassing. The lyrics too are often painfully inept — superficial, contrived scenarios of mystery and creatures of the night. This alone positively invites a "poor man's Simple Minds" tag.

Simple Minds' music is derivative, but at least they've achieved a near perfect synthesis of old and new;

INNER CIRCLE'S Jacob Miller. Pic: KEL EDGE.

while The Venigmas are merely heavily and aggressively nostalgic (more Bob Dylan, anyone?). Also in Jim Kerr Simple Minds have, if not a genius at least a true original, but The Venigmas have no one to match his gifts for strong tunes, dark images or strikingly new presentation. But they have a neat line in riffs and some of their more restrained material shows real promise. 'Nightmares' and 'Quiet And Cool' were getting on quite well until they decided to enter the speed-metal relay.

With a lighter metal touch than most and their avoidance of the worst of the genre's bombastic excesses, The Venigmas could fight their way to commercial if not critical success somewhere in rock's vast middle ground.

Ian Crahan

The Androids

Belfast

Recently opened in the Harp Bar is a small downstairs room generally used for Saturday afternoon gigs but tonight, because of an electricity failure, The Androids have to use a generator and play in the sweatiest, cramped but structurally less-incongruous surroundings of this intimate meeting place.

The Androids are now about a dozen gigs old. They retain only two members of the combo who were the first of Ulster's coterie of bands to go to London and publicise their presence at NME's offices, and famed for their support of the "Free Noreen Winchester" campaign. Heavy Metal/Punk dress and precious little else.

Never having had the opportunity to catch this new incarnation I was expecting an extension of the monochromatic ear-bleeding assault of old, but I was pleasantly surprised to find there is at least one band who are moving in areas different to those of Belfast's hot-pop bands and doing it with measurable, pleasurable style and success.

There was more than a suggestion that the band have a definite musical vision; they know what they're after and how to get it. No caterwauling clichés or simplistic chord structures this time around, although the venom of their attack is occasionally spoilt by an unhealthy penchant for self-indulgence, mostly apparent in the unnecessary instrumentals at the tailend of their songs.

But their sound is a high-grade steely excellence, redolent of Dead Fingers Talk (a sadly under-rated outfit) at their best, with strong precise guitar work cutting its way through a flourishing rhythm section. But they have pacing as well as punch and when the need arises they play with a modicum of gliding and sliding restraint.

Like D.F.T. their main problem is content rather than form. Having carved themselves a solid musical framework to work in, their ability to write songs suited to their own chosen niche is in question. Only one or two of their originals stood out as being of any real merit, while it was an impassioned reading of 'Heroin' and the short sharp flick-knife-to-the-jugular action deployed on Ray Davies' 'You Really Got Me', that displayed their confidence and brain-scouring vim to best advantage.

Visually, they're great with a bass player who looks like a Hanna-Barbera caricature of Frankenstein's monster pulling a few odd expressions as he moves and merges with the rest of the five-piece in a combustible presentation fitted to their music.

The Androids are exciting to watch. I'll add them to the list of Ulster bands to look out for.

Gavin Martin

Annie Ross

Country Cousins

It should have been a great evening. Annie Ross, one of the most respected lady jazz singers around plays an intimate venue with the right shadings of candlelight and smoke. Maybe because of her well-publicised financial and marital problems, or maybe because she's giving the vocal chords a back shove while concentrating on acting, this show sadly didn't make it.

Backed by the traditional three-piece of bass, drums and keyboards and clad in a silver split-skirt suit, Ross cut a snazzy figure with her orange hair and feather boa embellishments.

Her stage patter was superb: sly stories of California ("the land of the green death"), strippers ('Florence Of Arabia') and Mae West's sister Beverly putting 50 years' expertise to stylish use. But for all the theatricality, when it came to the songs Ross played it safe.

Nowhere in the repertoire was the self-penned and vocally punishing 'Twisted', a schizophrenic trip through the octaves that Bette Midler borrowed and stole the acclaim for; and experimentally very little indeed. Refreshed renditions of Paul Simon or watery bossa nova tunes were all we got from someone who's got so much more. Even the few jazz-influenced songs tended to be dull and uninspired, Ross straining for those hi-notes so crucial to female scat-singing.

I'm sure she'd be great at parties. Just not so good at this gig.

Martha Ellen Zentoff

THE JAM

STRANGE TOWN

£1.00 OFF YET ANOTHER ALBUM YOU DIDN'T THINK WOOLWORTH SOLD.

AVERAGE WHITE BAND

feel no
fret

Includes the new hit single 'Atlantic Avenue'.

EVERYBODY NEEDS
WOOLWORTH

And Woolco

Sometime!

Item featured subject to availability. Prices and availability of advertised product may be different in the Channel Islands, Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland. The advertised goods have not necessarily been sold by Woolworth at higher prices.

THE MEMBERS

on tour with
EDDIE & THE HOT RODS

MARCH

- 15th COVENTRY-Locarno
- 16th LEICESTER-Polytechnic
- 17th AYLESBURY-Friars
- 19th BIRMINGHAM-Barbarellas
- 20th NEWCASTLE-City Hall
- 21st LEEDS-Polytechnic
- 22nd LEEDS-Polytechnic
- 24th MANCHESTER-Apollo
- 25th SHEFFIELD-Top Rank
- 26th GUILDFORD-Civic Hall
- 27th PORTSMOUTH-Locarno
- 28th BRIGHTON-Top Rank
- 29th HEMEL HEMPSTEAD-Pavilion
- 30th LONDON-Rainbow Theatre.

APRIL

- 1st CARDIFF-Top Rank
- 2nd BRISTOL-Locarno

watch out for
THE MEMBERS
new single
"OFF SHORE BANKING BUSINESS"

VS 248
out soon

Virgin

Bad Company

Wembley Arena

Saddle up, pardner, and let's take a ride right down that long n' ione some highway — some call it the North Circular — and let's get ourselves into some Bad Company.

Turn in to the bleak precincts of this sprawling Wembley complex: an ugly Leisure City with the ambience of an emergency detention centre. Sample the merchandise: buy the badge, wear the shirt of the tour of the band of the album; feel fleeced and take your seat, third from the end, six-hundredth from the front. Yee-ha.

Megagigs, doncha just love 'em? We're really gonna whoop it up. GLC regulations permitting, it's been a long time since Bad Company played London and the buzz of excitement is unmistakable. I think I heard the first Wally of the Spring.

Setting at the piano for the opening "Bad Company", Paul Rodgers sets the tone, professional and assured, and throughout the show the band display a restrained job-of-work approach that borders on indifference.

Not that it can be easy to show commitment to material as worn-out as much of this. "The sky is burnin', I believe my soul's on fire" ("Burnin' Sky") is fairly startling information if you think about it, but Rodgers delivers the lines like his mind's on something else — anything else.

The songs divide between old favourites — "Ready For Love", "Feel Like Making Love", "Can't Get Enough Of Your Love" — and new favourites, like "She Brings Me Love", all uniformly well-received.

Paul Rodgers is a rock archetype, all in black with a touch of glitter and a hairy chest, still a great singer in need of something great to sing. For much of the set he shares guitar duties with Mick Ralphs, hotly in shirt and jeans. Snapper is bassist Boz Burrell in a Man At C&A cream suit (with a black armband for Patto) contrasting with an ultra-fit Simon Kirke who's wearing half a track-suit and a grin.

I'd prefer the music stripped of its lingering luxuriance and plodding grandiosity, cut down to a harder, stubbier R'n'B sound. But that's not going to happen so long as they win easy acceptance for stuff like this — coasting and expansive, full of mock-ferocity but no freshness, no imagination.

The raunch got left at the ranch. It shouldn't come as a surprise that almost all this fundamentalist audience is male. Bad Co peddle vacuous fantasies of a time when men were Men and the women, it has to be assumed, were grateful for it. Wild West imagery abounds (the good old gun/phallus confusion syndrome reigns supreme) and some of the crowd are well into the ruff-tuff appeal of "Run With The Pack".

Maybe they really do think they're wolves and cowboys; but observing all the punter/security confrontations, a flock-and-sheepdogs analogy looks more appropriate. It's an exercise in consumer regimentation that contrasts ironically with the half-baked individualism of the songs.

Still, a man's gotta do what a man's gotta do, so I did — I left.

Yee-ha.

Paul Du Noyer

Remember this one? PAUL RODGERS ropes 'n' brands that aluminium doggie. Pic KEL EDGE.

The first Wally of Spring

Joan Armatrading

Glasgow

From support act to selling out the Apollo, from reticence personified to slapping a ten million dollar law suit on her record company, Joan Armatrading has certainly come a long way.

This tour, without any new material to promote, is effectively marking time for her and seems an appropriate moment to take stock of progress so far.

In terms of musical accomplishment, this latest show is decidedly her best to date. From borrowing tasteful but timid back-up musicians, she's graduated to pulling her band right to the front with her, so that at times she appears simply as virtuoso vocalist for a hot little jazzy rock combo. It's clear she loves this new integration too — watch her look on delightedly as Lorne Price blows a powerful sax break.

This aggressively adventurous approach also lends a new strength to some of her older songs as well. And with this new confidence she's blossomed from being a nervous girl-with-guitar into an assertive lady without losing any of her natural charm.

It's Armatrading's material though that makes for interesting consideration. The set here is drawn from her last two albums plus selected earlier highlights. It's marvellously classy, almost ageless stuff but her evocative sketches of the single girl are also all much from the one mould. Since the breakthrough of "Love And Affection" and the "Joan Armatrading" album, she seems to have reached a plateau with very little subsequent progress in her songwriting structure or content. It's the treatment given to the songs that marks Armatrading's progress to date: not the songs themselves.

But there is a definite limit to the number of times you can repackage this material, as there is for public appetite for it.

Consequently, it's difficult to see why she's so upset with A&M. I would have thought that securing three respectable US album chart placings without the aid of matching chart singles wasn't, bad going.

You don't have to be Einstein to see that Armatrading's unsettled, unsettling style — distinctive and classy as it may be — simply does not lend itself to AM format hit singles. Indeed, any overlap between the two is little more than coincidence. So unless she's going to contrive some simple dirty as a sop to the playlists, then that final breakthrough into the all round bestseller lists seems as far away as ever. It's unrealistic to expect otherwise.

Where she goes from here will be interesting to see. Judging by their applause, her legions of devotees clearly preferred the more simple bedsitlerland style that has brought her to prominence; but her own inclinations seem towards jazzier climes — hardly the stuff of mass consumption either.

But if her future ambitions give food for thought, her present accomplishments remain her most impressive so far.

Ian Cranney

Culture

Paris

With a performance that confirmed them as one of the most exciting live reggae units operating today, Culture kicked off their European tour by conquering Paris on their debut there.

The mixed audience at the Palais — normally a posers' paradise — were treated to a near magical matinee from the trio and their six-piece band, with an immaculate and at times startling live mix from accompanying engineer and dread at the controls, Errol Brown.

The group have gained immeasurably in confidence since their '78 tour. Leader Joe Hill turned in a mesmerising tour de force which evoked Marley at the Lyceum '76 and Burning Spear at the Rainbow '77, with dazzling footwork, loose breathtaking vocals and an infectious and spontaneous intensity all virtually mugging the senses.

He added a zanyness all his own, his mock theatrics and wild eye-popping totally captivating. Albert Griffiths supplied superb Cultural harmonies with both Griffiths and conga player Harry Fowler adding a deal of their own wackiness.

Playing numbers from the whole of their short but illustrious career, from "Babylon Bridge" and "Two Sevens Clash" through "Innocent Blood" and "Fussing And Fighting" to "Natty Never Get Weary", a reminder of the astonishing wealth of material they've come up with in a mere two years.

They were everything they should have been and a bit more. Europe get your Culture.

Neil Spencer

ARMSTRONG COATS Brown
Leather Sheepskin standard
Leather quality Approx. 30 long £23.50 + £1.10
Special quality leather
Leather coat for spring
Long £24.50 short 22"
or 47 long £26.50 short
22" 22" Dark all

ARMSTRONG WAISTCOATS
Leather Sheepskin Chest 32" 22" £13.75 + £1.10

"FURS AND JEANS" (NMI)
46 MAJOR WYND, LONDON, NO
Tel. 01-360 3622 Thurs, evening
Visit D.K. Ring for interest

PEG TROUSERS

Flannel Pige
in grey, d. brown & n.
blue

£7.50 + 75p plus
OR 2 for £14.25 + 90p
plus

Also in black & blue
Oatmeal

£6.50 + 75p plus
OR 2 for £12.50 + 90p
plus

Size: 26" 34" waist: 32"
34" leg

Send cheque or P.O. order with address label
(2nd choice)

GEMINI (Dept. N)
25-27 ADELPHI WALK,
HARROGATE, N.Y.
Wholesale Enquiries
Please Ring 0190 2100

COUNT ON US! LANDAU
CALCULATOR
SPECIALISTS

NEW FROM CASIO
FX58
Super maths card LCD 31 percent function Clock with alarm, time
& stopwatch
Approx. 6000 battery life
With smart leatherette case

COLLEGE
FX80
LCD Scientific, 98
percent function engineering notation and statistics Approx.
40000 data
items with auto store

CHESSE CHALLENGER
10 Match your skills against this incredible computerised chess game
10 levels of play

SPECIAL WATCH
SYSTEMA T15
Situation LCD quartz watch with push button back light
Stylish stainless steel bracelet

CHILD LEARNING
AIDS
SPELLING B: £15.95
Phonics spelling book for beginners plus hangman, so on and so forth
Learning games in sturdy cases with address book

LITTLE PROFESSOR
10 with 4 top
5 years plus

DATA MAN
Advanced memory and 7 years plus

TEXAS T150
Time
Calculator
LCD
Scientific Clock 60
Tactical building unique memory which retains data when switched off 2 year full

9 Tottenham Court Road,
Telephone 01-436 6543

LION HOUSE
227 Tottenham Court Rd
London W1: 01-540 7363

GRANTS at Croydon,
14-22 High St. Croydon,
Surrey Tel. 01-668 4400

209 High Street,
Sutton, Surrey

144a Green Road
LANDAU CALCULATORS
195-199 High St. Sutton,
Surrey Tel. 01-643 0027

Visit our shops to see the extensive range of calculators, watches and electronic games

One year full life

[illegible]

My name is Spade, Sam Spade. Licence number 357896, issued by the Police Department of San Francisco. Occupation: Private Detective. Sometimes known as Private Eye.

My files on the case of the Maltese Falcon are closed. But, I've got the Maltese Falcon. I got it and some dough. My partner got murdered and a very slick chick went up for life.

I'll tell you about it. This slick dame comes to see me one day. Gives me a song and dance about her sister and a guy called Floyd Thursby. She wants us to get her back before her mother and father get in from Hawaii. I put my partner, Miles Archer, on the case. At night, he gets murdered and so does this guy Thursby. I go around to the apartment where this dame is living... the one called Brigid O'Shaughnessy. She had something I seem to go for...

In 1539 the Knight Templars of Malta paid tribute to Charles V of Spain by sending him a Golden Falcon encrusted from beak to claw with rarest jewels... but pirates seized the galley carrying this priceless token and the fate of the Maltese Falcon remains a mystery to this day...

HUMPHREY BOGART IN

THE MALTESE BAG

wiseguy... you're not a star until they can spell your name in Karachi! — H.B.

Look, I accept that it is now fashionable and fairly cool to enjoy Disco (from time to time I have even been seen to tap my foot to it — in fact, I once got quite excited about a new Earth, Wind & Fire album), but doesn't anybody else find the whole concept of 'Beats-Per-Minute' just a little bit nauseating?

ALLEN — A First time Caller, Studio 54, Harrow, Middlesex. P.S. I always thought dancing was somewhat spontaneous, but the doctors at the Munich Machine have obviously got us very well trained.

Play It Again, Sam... Play It Again, Sam... Play It Again, Sam... Play It Again, Sam... Play It Again, Sam... Play It Again, Sam... — H.B.

I must say I did like CSM on Nationwide. Very smart in his suit. Didn't care much for the other fellow. One of those punky chappies wasn't he? Dashed bad show. Bring back the whip, that's what I say. Flog them good and proper. BRIGADIER SIR EUGENE PICKET, Deepford, Bucks. P.S. I never kissed the editor of the NME.

If you want me just whistle, You know how to whistle, don't you? You just put your lips together and blow! — Neil Spencer.

Long hair is like sex, you can have it in all different positions! A CROPPED PUNK who's not getting enough. If you want me just whistle, You know how to whistle, don't you? You just put your lips together and blow! — Lauren Bacall.

I know I'm going to destroy my street credibility, but in spite of the fact that I'm female I like The Stranglers.

Whatever you feel about their lyrics, they often play bloody good music.

The trouble is everyone's so hung up about presenting themselves as radical and unprejudiced that they won't acknowledge it.

If you see an attractive woman I bet you don't immediately think: "I wonder if she could calculate the square root of 693.5 in under ten seconds?" You admire her, which is what The Stranglers do in many of their songs.

I'm anti-sexist as all the rest of you hip punters, but I don't see anything wrong in appreciating good looks as well as intelligence.

I expect The Stranglers have women friends. I'm not condoning all their lyrics or all their statements, but I just wish you'd all realise that you can disagree with some of their sentiments while liking their music.

Don't place too much emphasis on the sexist angle of their songs.

SARAH (no fixed abode).

I'm just writing to ask why the hell write an article on Bowie's performance in Just A Gigolo when all you were wanting to do was tear him to shreds (NME Feb 24).

Okay! Maybe (David) Hemming's direction was terrible and Bowie's performance trash. So what! Who cares what you say or think. If the film was so rubbishy why bother writing about it at all. All I can say, is that to see Bowie on screen

O'Clock Shadow, which perhaps gives you an idea of our dominant preoccupation. Many of our songs are about shaving. In fact I think I can say that most of our songs have shaving images.

As guitarist Janice puts it: "Simply, Kid's writing the lyrics, and every 24 hours he's gonna have to shave."

People often giggle nervously when we announce a song about, say, the painful drag from blunt Philishave,

David Bowie has to shave. Three or four times a day, I bet. I should think even Jean-Jacques Burnel has to shave sometimes. Especially his chest.

We're going to keep playing for as long as it takes to get people to accept and come to terms with themselves. As Janice says: "It all depends how long the follicles last."

KID GILLETTE. Just remember this

May I be the first to say I bet I have a much smaller penis than Graham Fellows! WILTED JOHN (LP winner????) Middlesbrough, Cleveland. Haven't we all? — Wee Willie Harris.

The only album I could recommend is 'Schlongs For Swingin' Lovers.' — H.B.

... of all the newspapers in all of the towns all over the world, they gotta write to my letters page! — H.B.

Every week I buy NME and as I browse through it a perverse side of my nature makes me gleefully look for the latest Julie Burchill atrocity-shock-horror-how-dare-she review.

I read it and normally smirk a lot. Even if the piece is about an artist I particularly admire, her scathing criticism doesn't bother me. In fact I quite enjoy it. So even when Miss Burchill sums up the writings of Bob Dylan in three words — "archaic, surrealist verbiage" — even a person like me with an on-going Dylan fixation isn't very perturbed, for Julie, as she has admitted, "may not know music from snot."

However I feel I am in a minority. Every week the columns of Gasbag are filled with letters from outraged readers who feel some inherent need to protect their various idols from JB's assault and non-flattery. To me this is probably exactly what she (never mind the editor) wants.

If Julie Burchill is comparable to anyone in the rock spectrum, it is Elvis Costello. Costello proclaimed to Nick Kent that his ultimate aim was to be an

"irritant... someone who irritates, who disorients." I believe Julie Burchill attempts to do exactly the same thing, and so far she's succeeding very well.

So, Mister Outraged, Grimby, if Julie Burchill writes something in next week's NME that grossly offends you, completely ignore it. Don't write letters and JB's aim to irritate you will seem to be foiled. I say "seem" because she may well have irritated you but she won't know about it.

People like Burchill and Costello strive upon audience reaction, feedback. If Costello doesn't get an audience that goes crazy right in front of his eyes, he gets petulant and sulks away, refuses encores, shortens the length of his set. And maybe if people stopped writing letters to Gasbag about her she'd do the same and leave the way for some journalism by people with a genuine interest in music as against her dilettantish passing interest.

I hope this is the last letter about Julie Burchill in Gasbag.

KIM MARSLAVI, Cardiff, Wales.

Dames... just when you think you've got 'em figured out... H.B.

On reading your paper last week I was outraged by the review of Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band (the film) by Charles Shaar Murray.

How can he say that this film adds "whole new dimensions of resonance and meaning to the word crap"? Did he go to see the film or did he base his "review" on other reviews of said film? Also does he appreciate the fact that The Beatles (who wrote the music on which the film is based) changed the face of popular music?

When he next writes a review (of anything) I suggest he uses this plan, which would help him (if it is possible) to be fair.

(1) Give the names of the stars who appear (if it's a film) or the people concerned and what parts they had to play.

(2) Tell what it's about (if it's a film) and if it's a record, the titles of the songs.

(3) Say what he thinks of (thing and why he thinks that. (4) Say what might interest people and why. (5) Leave the reader to make up his own mind on the subject.

Thus he would be offering practical criticism of the thing!

FIONA WHERRETT, Livingston, West Lothian, Scotland.

Yep, I saw the movie (and I've still got the burst blood vessels to prove it). Yep, I appreciate that The Beatles changed the face of popular music (with a little help from their friends), but Stilwood's given the fab mops the kind of tribute that Sirhan gave Kennedy! Thank you for the tips on how to review movies and records: I shall most assuredly take them to heart and apply them at the first possible opportunity. — The Illustrated CSM (Revised Edition).

for a whole hour or so was sheer bliss. A Young Bowie Freak. Listen sweetheart... and this also applies to you, Fiona. You hire gumshoes like us to do your dirty work, and then when we lay the whole scam on you you can't face the truth. Look it's just a job, and somebody's gotta do it! — H.B.

With reference to your recent article on Ludus and singer Linder's interest in her own menstruation.

I am lead singer of Lupin, the only male in an otherwise all-girl band. I too am interested in exposing people's embarrassed prejudices about their own hormonal functions. Our original name was Five or the irritating rash you get off the wrong kinds of brushless foam. Sometimes they walk out when we get going on the chorus of (Little Bits Of) Plaster On My Chin": "Kiss me, kiss my plaster/ Cos I got plaster on my face/ It ain't no disaster/ No it ain't no disgrace."

Once I went onstage with three-days' growth of beard to see what would happen. A girl in the front row went hysterical, the gig was cancelled and the local newspapers had splash headlines about our "filthy public displays".

We're not out to shock people. We want to heighten their awareness of themselves. A lot of people have to shave, yet there's this deep-seated stigma about it?

Directed by ROY CARR
Screenplay by ROY CARR

Technivision by ROY CARR
Tee made by ROY CARR

Hi. We here at the Sign Of The Triple Dots have an admission to make, and it's only because we consider you to be our friends (hah heh) that we feel free to bring this up so frankly. In a spirit of fraternity and indulgence, we throw ourselves upon your mercy as follows:

This week we have no Lead Teaser. That's because nothing happened. Not nothing as in nothing, but nothing as in nothing fit to occupy the hallowed spot, which leaves us with a temporary but hopelessly soluble problem — i.e. what to put in its place. We could — this is purely idle speculation, you dig — invent a story, which is not on because somebody would (at best) complain bitterly or (at worst) sue us. We could pick any of the other items at random and elevate them to the dizzy heights of Lead Teaserdom, but the joys would show and it might suffer from Vertigo (this is not a reference to Graham Parker). On reflection, our best bet would be to rabbit on about nothing particular. Which we've just done.

Whew! It's great to have that off our chests (if three dots can be said to have chests, which is in itself highly debatable) so let's get down to whatever must be gotten down to. To commence: what part of your body would you like to leave to your favourite rock star? Completely unknown and obscure Welsh percussionist Phil Ellis has that one totally sussed out: he would like to be cremated (presumably after his demise, whenever that is scheduled to occur) and have his ashes stuffed into a pair of maracas and sent to his hero, Uriah Heep drummer Lee Kerslake. The dots would like to know how Lee would feel about using such heavily personalised instruments and whether there would be any specific problems involved in employing same. We think Phil's onto something potentially wonderful, so what would you leave your love?

Cue Maurice Chevalier belting out about Pehr-riss Inza Spring: Willy DeVille is — them — laying down tracks in the City Of Lights round about (synchronise watches) NOW.

The Mekons apologise for blowing out their Newcastle gig last week: they were on the point of taking the stage when one of their guitarists got hurt in a passing fight and had to be whisked straight to hospital. We wait on tenterhooks for what Paul Morley proclaims as "the gig of the century" set for March 25 at the Lyceum, when Stiff Little Fingers, The Fall, The Mekons, Gang Of Four and The Human League share the same bill. This comes as a fitting outgrowth of the Stiff Little Fingers/Essential Logic/Robert Rental/The Normal tour which ended on Saturday at Camden's Electric Ballroom. TRB's Danny Kustow came on to play Stiff Little Fingers encore and drummer Jim Reilly fainted. An RAR spokesperson later decided this to be coincidence.

So's this: Radio Clyde recently received a silver disc from Polydor Records for playing Alicia Bridges' "I Love The Nightlife" over 250,000 times (We don't believe that for a moment — The Other Two Dots).

Pull the triggers, liggers, we're with you all the way: Police were into their third encore in Houston (Texas, y'all) last week when the house lights went up and they spotted Thin Lizzy and Nazareth in the audience. The former are — as previously noted — opening for" is a polite way of saying "supporting", but the dots weren't exactly surprised when reports started filtering

Blockheads were last year's thing: meet THE SHAPES from Leamington Spa — and read all about their Sofa Records EP 'Part Of The Furniture' in next week's thrilling edition of the Non-Musical Excess...

EARTHLINGS! TAKE US TO YOUR

T-ZERS

in from the States to the effect that Lizzy are blowing Naz away more than somewhat!

More massed liggers: Paul Jones, Phil May, the Floyd's David Gilmour and the massed ranks of Motorhead were on hand to welcome ex-MCS-er Wayne Kramer when he played Dingwalls, while Joe Jackson, Motorhead (again) Iggy Pop, Glen Matlock, Joe Strummer and Mick Jones paid their respects to the mighty Bo

Diddley at the Lyceum...

Get well soon, pal: Bishops guitarist Zenon de Fleur was in a car smash in the early hours of the morning after the band played the Nashville last Saturday, and is — at this moment — off the critical list but still in intensive care at West Middlesex Hospital in Brentford. He's not yet fit to receive visitors, but if he's allowed to get NME we'd just like to wish the gum-chewing polack a rapid and comfortable recovery...

GEORGE BONNAR goes click

... And talking of Furniture Music — here's the very latest appendage for today's most modern young man. It's clean (kind of), it's clone-like — it's contemporary! BILL NELSON (the one in the tie) holds the baby backstage at the Gaumont, Southampton — propped up by wife Jan, Elly (4 months) makes a Red Noise.

Another casualty is Tubes' guitarist Bill Spooner, currently playing from a wheelchair after tearing ligaments in a Lake Tahoe skiing accident...

Strictly personal (not to mention incomprehensible): could Garry Bushell please phone Danny Baker and tell him the result of the Millwall-Charlton match, as Disco Dan was in Germany with The Jam when the event in question took place...

(I can't get no) correction: in last week's singles column, weedy little vegetarian Ian Penman attributed the Rocky Sharpe and The Replays 45 to Rocky Sharpe and The Rezors. The Smurlike one has been duly chastised (i.e. we're forcing him to listen to nothing but UFO for a week). The same mistake was also made in Snouts, incidentally.

Shaaaaaaame: the excellent Dat Sun fanzine (available for 50p post free from Terry Wells at 7 Seagrave Road, London SW 6) has been denied an Arts Council grant on the grounds that "there is not the slightest trace of literary merit in any of its pages. Indeed, there is rather too much evidence of ignorance and illiteracy," says Literature Director Charles Osborne. What better recommendation could anyone require? Subscribe!

Public service time: an EMS AKS synthesiser was ripped off from Steve Hillage's truck in Liverpool, and the owner of the synth in question (Steve Lewis of the Hillage road crew) would like it back. Contact Steve L at 727 8070, give the poor sod his synth back. There's a no-questions-asked reward of a year's supply of green salad — sorry, of £100...

Aren't they outrageous: Bad Company held a disco party at the Roxy in Harlsden after their Wembley gigs, featuring stippers (wow!), roller-skating nuns (corrrr!) and lots of other challenging stuff. Mind you, Boz Burrell did wear a black armband in memory of Mike Patto...

This could be vital to your credibility next time you go to one of those really hip parties that we're always reading about (Don't you mean 'always going to'? — Credibility Conscious Ed). The colour supplement of every thinking leftie's favourite paper, the Sunday Telegraph, this week ran some helpful hints on which names were 'in' to drop. 'In' are Peter Frampton, Fleetwood Mac, Eddie Brooks, Wings and Jethro Tull (burgeoning cults destined for future superstardom) and 'out' are such already-forgotten figures of yesteryear as David Bowie, Kate Bush, The Rolling Stones, The Sex Pistols and Cliff Richard. Now you can spot Telegraph readers even when they're not wearing their 'Birch The Queens' badges...

Sandy Pearlman has been relieved of production duties for Blue Oyster Cult, who've opted for Cheap Trick's producer Tom Werman for their next album, which includes a collaboration between Eric Bloom and SF funster Michael Moorcock entitled 'The Sun King'. Pearlman, incidentally, is keeping busy by producing French metal-punk band Shakin' Street...

Producers, producers, producers (is there no end to them?): Peter Gabriel doing the honours for Interview on behalf of lovely, liberal Virgin Records...

Aren't they outrageous (2): due to U.S. objections, Judas Priest's fine record album 'Killing Machine' has been withdrawn and reissued with repackaged under the new inoffensive title 'Hell Bent for Leather'. Nothing bent about Judas Priest, is there?...

BETTER BADGES

TOP TEN
This week	Last week
1. Clash Police	(1)
2. PIL	(2)
3. Stiff Little Fingers	(3)
4. SSS	(4)
5. Buracocks	(5)
6. Gang of Four	(6)
7. RAB	(7)
8. Yellow Casserole	(8)
9. My Way	(9)
10. The Members	(10)

New releases 20p: On Stiff, The Future is Female (Wayne County), Sax Patrols, Rock'n'Roll Swindle, Never Trust a Happy, Cash From Chaos, Believe in the Name, The Only Notes That Matter, They Swindled Their Way to the Top, True Love Liked John, UK Subs CID.

COMPILED FROM MAIL ORDER ONLY TEN BEST
SEE FOR SALE SECTION FOR FULL LISTING

NME

EDITORIAL

3rd Floor
5-7 Carnaby Street
London W1V 1PG
Phone: 01-439 8761

EDITOR

Neil Spencer
Assistant Editor
Phil McNeill
News Editor
Derek Johnson
Production Editor
Jack Scott
Associate Editors
Charles Shear Murray
Monty Smith
Special Projects Editor
Roy Carr

Staff
Tony Stewart
Steve Clarke
Tony Parsons
Julie Burchill
Angus MacKinnon
Paul Rambali
Photography
Pennie Smith

Contributors

Nick Kent
Mick Farren
Bob Edmunds
Tony Benyon
Max Bell
Fred Dellar
Chris Salewicz
Cliff White
Bob Woffinden
Lester Bangs
John May
Paul Morley
Penny Reel
Adrian Thrills
Ian Penman
Andy Gill
Danny Baker
Research
Fiona Foulger
New York:
Joe Stevens
(Temporary answer service)
N.Y. 686 7723

ADVERTISEMENT DEPT.

Room 2529
Kings Reach Tower
Stamford Street
London SE1 9LS
Ad Director
Percy Dickens
(01) 261 6080
Ad Manager:
Peter Rhodes
(01) 261 6251
Classified Ads:
(01) 261 6122
Live Ads
(01) 261 6153
Ad Production
Mike Proctor
Pete Christopher
Barry Cooper
(01) 261 6207

Publisher: E. J. Jackson
Editorial Consultant: Andy Gray
©C Magazines Ltd
Production of any material without permission is strictly forbidden

Bottom of the page

Ted Nugent

STEELY DAN

GREATEST HITS

INCLUDING HAITIAN DIVORCE
PRETZEL LOGIC
DO IT AGAIN
 PLUS THEIR HIT SINGLE
RIKKI DON'T LOSE THAT NUMBER

ABCD 616

DOUBLE ALBUM

THE ALBUM

LEGEND

ABCL 5264

THE SINGLE

CRAZY LOVE

ABC 4240

abc Records