

NEW NME EXPRESS

MODS

Bank Holiday Battles Revisited

Scooters Clothes Riots Rhythm & Blues
MOD MEMORIES pages 26-31

AN NME
Special

Harvey Goldsmith Entertainments presents

THE ROOTS OF ROCK AND ROLL,
BLUES AND BOOGIE WOOGIE FESTIVAL '79
THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY LANE,
Tuesday 24th April.

Featuring the one and only MEMPHIS SLIM on guitar and keyboards.

That legendary blues guitarist MICKY BAKER,
HAL "CORNBREAD" SINGER
with his rhythm and blues saxophone.

The King of Boogie Woogie SAMMY PRICE

Tickets £5.50 £4.50 £3.50 £2

Tickets available from the Theatre Royal Box Office, Drury Lane, London WC2R 2D
Or 0161 5876 and the Harvey Goldsmith Box Office at Chappin's
50 New Bond Street, London W1 (01-629 3453) (25p booking fee per ticket).

SPECIAL IMPORT SPECIAL IMPORT SPECIAL IMPORT

SPECIAL IMPORT RELEASE

ROEDELIOUS
'JARDIN
AU FOU

The new solo album from Hans Roedelius follows his recent collaboration with Eno and Moebius on "After the Heat".

DIRECT FROM FRANCE

Distributed by RCA

SPECIAL IMPORT SPECIAL IMPORT SPECIAL IMPORT

NME CLASSIFIEDS

REACH 199,000 MORE READERS
THAN ITS NEAREST COMPETITOR.
WHATEVER YOU WANT, WE'RE THE BEST.
IT'S YOUR PAPER — USE IT

FIVE YEARS AGO

Weekending April 16, 1974

Last This Week
1	SEASONS IN THE SUN	Terry Jacks (Bell)
2	ANGEL FACE	Glitter Band (Bell)
3	EVERYDAY	Slide (Polydor)
4	REMEMBER ME THIS WAY	Gary Glitter (Bell)
5	THE CAT CREPT IN	Mud (Rak)
6	YOU ARE EVERYTHING	Diana Ross & Marvin Gaye (Tamla Motown)
7	EMMA	Hot Chocolate (Rak)
8	BILLY DON'T BE A HERO	Paper Lace (Bus Stop)
9	DOCTORS ORDERS	Sunny (CBS)
10	REMEMBER YOU'RE A WOMBLE	Wombles (CBS)

TEN YEARS AGO

Week ending April 16, 1969

Last This Week
1	THE ISRAELITES	Desmond Dekker (Pyramid)
2	I HEARD IT THROUGH THE GRAPEVINE	Marvin Gaye (Tamla Motown)
3	GENTLE ON MY MIND	Dean Martin (Reprise)
4	BOOM-BANG-A-BANG	Lulu (Columbia)
5	THE BAD OLD DAYS	Foundations (Pye)
6	SORRY SUZANNE	Hollies (Parlophone)
7	GOODBYE	Mary Hopkin (Apple)
8	GAMES PEOPLE PLAY	Joe South (Capitol)
9	WINDMILLS OF YOUR MIND	Noel Harrison (Reprise)
10	PINBALL WIZARD	Who (Track)

15 YEARS AGO

Week ending April 17, 1954

Last This Week
1	CAN'T BUY ME LOVE	Beattles (Parlophone)
2	WORLD WITHOUT LOVE	Peter and Gordon (Columbia)
3	I BELIEVE	Bachelors (Decca)
4	LITTLE CHILDREN	Billy J Kramer (Parlophone)
5	TELL ME WHEN	Appalooses (Decca)
6	MY BOY LOLLIPOP	Mike Fontana (RCA)
7	I LOVE YOU BECAUSE	Jim Reeves (RCA)
8	DON'T THROW YOUR LOVE AWAY	Searchers (Pye)
9	NOT FADE AWAY	Rolling Stones (Decca)
10	JUST ONE LOOK	Hollies (Parlophone)

CHARTS

SINGLES

Week ending April 14, 1979

This Last Week			Week ending April 14, 1979
1	(12)	BRIGHT EYES	Art Garfunkel (CBS)	3	1
2	(2)	I WILL SURVIVE	Gloria Gaynor (Polydor)	10	1
3	(1)	IN THE NAVY	Village People (Mercury)	4	1
4	(10)	COOL FOR CATS	Squeeze (A & M)	3	4
5	(3)	I WANT YOUR LOVE	Chic (Atlantic)	7	3
6	(29)	SOME GIRLS	Racey (RAK)	2	6
7	(9)	SULTANS OF SWING	Dire Straits (Vertigo)	5	7
8	(20)	HE'S THE GREATEST DANCER	Sister Sledge (Atlantic)	2	8
9	(4)	SOMETHING ELSE	Sex Pistols (Virgin)	6	4
10	(—)	SILLY THING/WHO KILLED BAMBI	Sex Pistols (Virgin)	1	10
11	(7)	LUCKY NUMBER	Lene Lovich (Stiff)	7	2
12	(6)	TURN THE MUSIC UP	Players Association (Vanguard)	5	8
13	(6)	CAN YOU FEEL THE FORCE	Real Thing (Pye)	7	5
14	(28)	SHAKE YOUR BODY	Jacksons (Epic)	2	14
15	(5)	OLIVER'S ARMY	Elvis Costello (Radar)	9	1
16	(21)	THE RUNNER	Three Degrees (Ariola)	2	16
17	(—)	I DON'T WANNA LOSE YOU	Kandida (RAK)	1	17
18	(15)	MONEY IN MY POCKET	Dennis Brown (Atlantic)	6	12
19	(23)	STRANGE TOWN	Jam (Polydor)	4	17
20	(13)	KEEP ON DANCIN'	Gary's Gang (CBS)	7	8
21	(30)	THE STAIRCASE (MYSTERY)	Siouxsie & The Banshees (Polydor)	2	21
22	(18)	WOW	Kate Bush (EMI)	3	18
23	(11)	DON'T STOP ME NOW	Queen (EMI)	7	11
24	(—)	GOODNIGHT TONIGHT	Wings (Parlophone)	1	24
25	(19)	FOREVER IN BLUE JEANS	Neil Diamond (CBS)	5	19
26	(14)	WAITING FOR AN ALBI	Thin Lizzy (Vertigo)	5	7
27	(—)	LET'S FLY AWAY	Voyage (GTO/Hansa)	1	27
28	(—)	FIRE	Pointer Sisters (Planet)	2	28
29	(—)	THE LOGICAL SONG	Supertamp (A&M)	1	29
30	(22)	HOLD THE LINE	Toto (CBS)	5	12

BUBBLING UNDER...
VALLEY OF THE DOLLS — Generation X (Chrysalis); HAVEN'T STOPPED DANCIN' YET — Gonzalez
(Sidelwalk); KNOCK ON WOOD — Amli Stewart (Atlantic); OFFSHORE BANKING BUSINESS — Members
(Virgin).

U.S. SINGLES

Week ending April 7, 1979

This Last Week
1	(1)	WHAT A FOOL BELIEVES
2	(3)	MUSIC BOX DANCER
3	(4)	KNOCK ON WOOD
4	(2)	TRAGEDY
5	(5)	SULTANS OF SWING
6	(9)	HEART OF GLASS
7	(7)	I WILL SURVIVE
8	(6)	DO YA THINK I'M SEXY
9	(12)	STUMBLIN' IN
10	(17)	REUNITED
11	(13)	I JUST FALL IN LOVE AGAIN
12	(15)	I WANT YOUR LOVE
13	(10)	LADY
14	(19)	HE'S THE GREATEST DANCER
15	(21)	SHAKE YOUR BODY (DOWN TO THE GROUND)
16	(18)	LIVIN' IT UP (FRIDAY NIGHT)
17	(8)	EVERY TIME I THINK OF YOU
18	(23)	IN THE NAVY
19	(26)	GOODNIGHT TONIGHT
20	(22)	PRECIOUS LOVE
21	(24)	LOVE BALLAD
22	(14)	CAZE LOVE
23	(27)	TAKE ME HOME
24	(28)	BLOW AWAY
25	(11)	SHAKE YOUR GROOVE THING

HEAVEN KNOWS — Donna Summer with Brooklyn Dreams
I GOT MY MIND MADE UP — Instant Funk
FOREVER IN BLUE JEANS — Neil Diamond
LOVE IS THE ANSWER — England Dan & John Ford Coley
I DON'T KNOW IF IT'S RIGHT — Evelyn "Champagne" King
Courtesy "CASH BOX"

ALBUMS

Week ending April 14, 1979

This Last Week			Week ending April 14, 1979
1	(1)	BARBRA STREISAND'S GREATEST HITS VOL 2	Barbra Streisand (CBS)	5	1
2	(11)	BREAKFAST IN AMERICA	Supertamp (A & M)	3	2
3	(5)	C'EST CHIC	Chic (Atlantic)	10	1
4	(2)	MANILOW MAGIC	Barry Manilow (Arista)	6	2
5	(7)	DIRE STRAITS	Dire Straits (Vertigo)	6	5
6	(8)	THE VERY BEST OF LEO SAYER	Leo Sayer (Chrysalis)	2	6
7	(3)	PARALLEL LINES	Blondie (Chrysalis)	26	1
8	(4)	SPIRITS HAVING FLOWN	Bee Gees (RSO)	10	1
9	(6)	THE GREAT ROCK 'N' ROLL SWINDLE	Sex Pistols (Virgin)	6	5
10	(8)	ARMED FORCES	Elvis Costello (Radar)	13	2
11	(12)	DESOLATION ANGELS	Bad Company (Swansong)	4	11
12	(16)	52nd STREET	Billy Joel (CBS)	12	10
13	(—)	COUNTRY PORTRAITS	Various (Warwick)	1	13
14	(22)	MANIFESTO	Roxy Music (Polydor)	3	14
15	(21)	LIONHEART	Kate Bush (EMI)	11	12
16	(10)	20 GREATEST HITS	Three Degrees (Epic)	7	9
17	(14)	MARTY ROBBINS COLLECTION	Marty Robbins (Lotus)	9	5
18	(18)	FEEL NO FRET	Average White Band (RCA)	4	18
19	(13)	BAT OUT OF HELL	Meat Loaf (Epic)	31	6
20	(24)	TRB TWO	Tom Robinson Band (EMI)	4	20
21	(27)	SCARED TO DANCE	Skids (Virgin)	4	19
22	(—)	YOU DON'T BRING ME FLOWERS	Neil Diamond (CBS)	9	14
23	(—)	SQUEEZING OUT SPARKS	Graham Parker & The Rumour (Vertigo)	1	23
24	(25)	EQUINOXE	Jean Michel Jarre (Polydor)	16	6
25	(—)	COUNTRY LIFE	Various (EMI)	1	25
26	(15)	THE BEST OF EARTH WIND AND FIRE VOL 1	(CBS)	14	5
27	(—)	VAN HALEN II	Van Halen (Werner Bros)	1	27
28	(19)	TURN THE MUSIC UP	Players Association (Vanguard)	5	18
29	(—)	IMPERIAL WIZARD	David Essex (Mercury)	1	29
30	(—)	DISCO INFERNO	Various (K-Tel)	1	30

BUBBLING UNDER...
THE BEST DAYS OF MY LIFE — Johnny Mathis (CBS);
LIVIN' INSIDE YOUR LOVE — George Benson (Warner Bros);
ANGEL STATION — Manfred Mann's Earthband (Bronze);
AT THE CHELSEA NIGHTCLUB — Members (Virgin).

U.S. ALBUMS

Week ending April 14, 1979

This Last Week
1	(1)	SPIRITS HAVING FLOWN
2	(2)	MINUTE BY MINUTE
3	(3)	DIRE STRAITS
4	(4)	BLONDES HAVE MORE FUN
5	(5)	2 HOT!
6	(7)	LIVIN' INSIDE YOUR LOVE
7	(15)	DESOLATION ANGELS
8	(9)	ENLIGHTENED ROGUES
9	(6)	52nd STREET
10	(10)	AT THE BUDOKAN
11	(28)	BREAKFAST IN AMERICA
12	(14)	GEORGE HARRISON
13	(8)	BRIEFCASE FULL OF BLUES
14	(20)	PARALLEL LINES
15	(18)	DESTINY
16	(16)	THREE HEARTS
17	(11)	LOVE TRACKS
18	(19)	LEGEND
19	(25)	WE ARE FAMILY
20	(13)	CRUISH
21	(17)	C'EST CHIC
22	(23)	THE CARS
23	(27)	INSTANT FUNK
24	(12)	BUSTIN' OUT OF L SEVEN
25	(26)	HEAD FIRST
26	(24)	LIVE AND MORE
27	(22)	LIFE FOR THE TAKING
28	(—)	KNOCK ON WOOD
29	(—)	NEW KIND OF FEELING
30	(—)	OUTLANDERS D'AMOUR

Courtesy "CASH BOX"

NEWS DESK

Stranglers confirmed!

THE STRANGLERS have now been officially confirmed for a headlining appearance in the two-day Spring Bank Holiday festival in Scotland, plans for which were revealed exclusively by NME last week. And it can now be revealed that the site is the Loch Lomond Wildlife Park, adjacent to the village of Balloch and about 18 miles from Glasgow.

Saturday, May 26, is the date of The Stranglers' appearance, and it's understood that Dr. Feelgood will be among the support acts. The Average White Band top on the Sunday (27), when Fairport Convention are also confirmed. Many other acts are in the process of being finalised.

OPEN-AIR GIG IN SCOTLAND

Ample camping facilities are available at the site, and weekend tickets cost £9. Otherwise daily admission is £5.50 (advance) and £6.50 (on the gates).

BUT BURNEL IS BANNED!

JEAN JACQUES BURNEL has been banned from performing at London's celebrated Theatre Royal in Drury Lane, where he was to have starred on April 30 as the climax of his solo British tour, opening this week. The venue owners, Moss Empires, imposed the ban at the end of last week — even though hundreds of tickets had already been sold.

It seems the theatre's manager was happy to accept the booking, but the hierarchy clamped down when they realised that Burnel was a member of The Stranglers. Apparently new-wave acts are unacceptable within such hallowed portals — Magazine were banned from the venue a few months ago under similar circumstances.

Although Moss were unwilling to comment on the ban, they evidently did not learn of Burnel's background until recently — when reports of riots in Australia, in which The Stranglers were involved, were brought to their attention. It matters not that Burnel's solo act is concept rather than punk — the fact is that ticket-holders are once again inconvenienced by having to apply for cash refunds.

Meanwhile, Burnel has added Brighton Dome on April 21 to his existing schedule. And there have been two venue changes on April 23 he now plays Canterbury Odeon instead of Hanley, and on April 26 he's at Bradford St George's Hall instead of Huddersfield.

■ MOTORHEAD have been banned from future appearances at Newcastle City Hall because of an incident when they played there recently. It seems that a slogan, far from complimentary to David Essex, was found painted on the wall of their dressing-room — and Essex was due to appear there the next night! The band disclaim responsibility, saying it was all down to fans who came backstage — but they have had to take the blame!

■ THE DAMNED have had their projected concert at Carlisle Market Hall on April 17 called off, as the result of a decision by the local council, and they've had a booking application rejected by Newcastle City Hall. But they have added extra gigs at Port Talbot Troubadour (April 19) and Nottingham Sandpiper (26).

Bishops re-schedule

THE BISHOPS have made numerous changes to their spring tour, reported last week. Nine new dates have been added and seven venues switched, leaving only six gigs unchanged from the original list. The extra dates are at Hitchin College (April 28), Middlesbrough Rock Garden (May 6), Manchester The Factory (15), Newport Stowaway (16), Stafford North Staffs Polytechnic (18), Dudley J.B.'s (19), Birmingham Digbeth Civic Hall (22), Blackpool Norbreck Castle (24) and Wakefield Breton Hall College (25).

The following seven dates are at venues different from those announced last week: Northampton Acne Club (May 2), Leeds Floride Green Hotel (3), Nottingham University (4), Southend Technical College (5), Aberdeen University (10), Dundee College (11) and Retford, Porterhouse (26). Gigs at Cleethorpes (May 7), Sheffield (8), Edinburgh (12), St. Andrew's (13), Chester (14) and Portsmouth (17) are unchanged.

DIRE STRAITS ADD ANOTHER

DIRE STRAITS have added a second concert at London Hammermith Odeon to their June tour schedule, as their originally announced gig at that venue sold out within 24 hours of the box-office opening. The extra show is on June 20, and tickets are priced £3, £2.50 and £2.

THE UNDERTONES announce the release of their third single and debut album, plus details of their second headlining tour this year — a 27-date itinerary, including a major London show at the Lyceum.

The single, titled 'Jimmy Jimmy', is issued by Sire Records on April 20 and is available in a limited edition on green vinyl in a clear plastic sleeve. The album, titled simply 'The Undertones', was produced in London by Roger Bechirian and it comes out on May 5. The band are calling their outing the 'Plug The LP Tour', and the confirmed dates are:

Stirling University (April 27), Aberdeen University (28), Fife St. Andrew's University (29), Chester Smartys (30), Sheffield Top Rank (May 2), Hull University (3), Wolverhampton Lafayette (4), Manchester The Factory (5), Coventry City (8), Keele University (9), Hanley Victoria Hall (10), Newport The Village (11), Liverpool Eric's (12), Cambridge Corn Exchange (16), London Strand Lyceum (20), York Pop Club (21), Middlesbrough Rock Garden (22), Newcastle University (23), Leeds Polytechnic (24), Oxford Polytechnic (25), Aylesbury Friars (26), Guildford Civic Hall (27), Bristol Locarno (28), Rayleigh Crocs (30), Norwich St. Andrew's Hall (June 1), Brighton Polytechnic (2) and Chelmsford Chancellor Hall (3).

THE POP GROUP are going out on a nationwide tour at the end of this month. Seventeen dates have been confirmed so far, with more to follow, and their itinerary includes an appearance at London's Empire Ballroom — the first time the venue has been used for a gig of this nature in over two years. Support act on all dates are The Good Missionaries (formerly Alternative TV), plus another band still to be named.

The tour ties in with the April 20 release of the band's first album, called simply 'Y'. Produced by Dennis 'Blackbeard' Bovell and The Pop Group themselves, it features a cover photograph by Donald McCullin, and includes a large free poster with pictures and lyrics. The band's outing is being billed as the 'Animal Instinct Tour', and dates set so far are:

Cambridge Corn Exchange (April 27),

THE UNDERTONES at a recent Marquee gig

HITTING THE GIG TRAIL Undertones, Pop Group & Punilux

Sheffield University (28), Bristol Locarno (30), Newcastle Polytechnic (May 2), Liverpool University (4), Manchester University (5), Newcastle Polytechnic (May 2), Liverpool University (4), Manchester University (5), London Leicester Square Empire Ballroom (7), Loughborough Town Hall (9), Aberdeen University (11), Fife St. Andrew's University (13), Edinburgh Tiffany's (14), Malvern Winter Gardens (19), Chelmsford Chancellor Hall (20), Norwich St. Andrew's Hall (21), Guildford Civic Hall (22), Birmingham Top Rank (30) and Leeds Polytechnic (31).

PUNISHMENT OF LUXURY set out after Easter on another tour, tied in with the release of their new United Artists single.

Originally planned for this weekend, the single now comes out on April 27, and the two titles have been switched to make 'Engine Of Excess' the A-side coupled with 'Jellyfish'. A number of other dates are still being finalised, but those confirmed so far (including a major London concert at the Lyceum) are:

London Kensington Nashville (April 20 and 21), Chelmsford Chancellor Hall (22), Chester Arts Centre (28), Bedford Corn Exchange (27), Dundee University (May 4), Ilkley College (5), London Marquee (10), Middlesbrough Rock Garden (12), Sheffield Limit Club (17), Newcastle University (19), Rayleigh Crocs (23), Birmingham Barbarella's (24), Hull College of Further Education (25), Chatham Town Hall (26), London Strand Lyceum (27), Milton Keynes Crawford Club (28) and Chesterfield Fusion (31).

MEMBERS, XTC: TOUR CHANGES, NEW DATES

THE MEMBERS' headlining tour has undergone a number of changes since being reported last week. Four new dates have been added — at Port Talbot Troubadour (April 28), Gt. Vermouth Star & Garter (May 2), Northampton County Ground (19) and Scarborough Penthouse (25) — while Bath Pavilion (April 27) and Retford Porterhouse (May 11) are now cancelled. Wolverhampton Lafayette moves from May 25 to 11, and two West Country gigs are interchanged — Plymouth Tops is now May 14, with Bristol Locarno the next night (15). And the Middlesbrough gig on May 26 is at the Rock Garden instead of the Polytechnic.

SEVERAL changes have been made in the XTC tour itinerary, reported two weeks ago. The opening date at Liverpool Eric's is brought forward one day to April 19, the gig on April 27 is switched from Liverpool Polytechnic to Newcastle University, and there's a new booking at High Wycombe Town Hall on May 6. But two dates have now been cancelled — at Hatfield Forum (May 7) and Bournemouth Winter Gardens (14).

BLONDIE IN TOWN

BLONDIE flew into town briefly at the weekend to appear in the filming of BBC's 'Multi-Coloured Swap Shop' Awards Show. They then left for Europe where they are doing TV in Italy, Germany in France. They'll be back on Good Friday to guest in Radio 1's 'Round Table', and on Saturday they're live on Radio Luxembourg at 8 pm. But they're not doing any gigs on this occasion.

JOE ELY VISIT

JOE ELY (third from left) and his current band

JOE ELY and his band undertake a short UK tour, starting at the end of this month and climaxing at London Victoria The Venue on May 5 (admission £3). These will be their first headlining dates in Britain, their only previous visit having been as support to Merle Haggard last year. Other confirmed gigs are Bristol Redland College (April 28), Newmarket Grand Ole Opry (29) and Stoke North Staffs Polytechnic (May 4). They will also film a BBC-2 special for screening later in the year. The visit ties in with the release of Ely's third MCA album 'Down On The Drag', recorded with celebrated producer Bob Johnston, and from which the title track is released as a single this weekend.

LOOKING AHEAD Wings touring soon

PAUL McCARTNEY said at the weekend that Wings will be returning to live performances in the very near future. Although he declined to be specific when asked about British gigs, he gave a broad hint that the band would be back on the road "within the next two months."

McCartney also revealed that Wings have been invited to play an open-air concert in Moscow's Red Square next summer — they are already known in Russia, where their 'Band On The Run' album is on release, and the Moscow gig (currently under negotiation) would take place a week before the opening of the Olympic Games in that city.

Meanwhile, the band are at present completing their first studio album with their new line-up.

Summer dates: Rod, Naz, Third World

ROD STEWART is to play a major open-air concert in Scotland during the summer, providing a suitable venue can be found, and negotiations are currently in progress with this object in view. Object of the exercise is to compensate his supporters there for his failure to appear in Scotland during his pre-Christmas tour. His U.S. tour ends in the first week of July, so the timing of the event will probably be late July or early August, and it will be followed by a similar big show in Ireland and two or three in Germany. But there are no plans for Stewart to appear anywhere else in the United Kingdom during 1979, even at Christmas.

NAZARETH are being lined up for at least two outdoor appearances in Britain this summer. A spokesman for the band confirmed this week that there are plans for them to appear "in various festivals here," and added that negotiations are already under way. However, such appearances are unlikely to be until later in the summer, as they begin a series of Japanese concerts on May 15 — and these are followed by an extensive six-week tour of the United States.

THIRD WORLD are expected to tour Britain in the early summer, to tie in with the June release of their new album, which they are currently completing in Los Angeles. Island Records say their visit is not yet confirmed, but it's known that several dates have already been pencilled in — including the new Stateside Center venue in Bournemouth on July 4.

VILLAGE PEOPLE's management are considering several offers for them to headline major UK concerts in the summer. A final decision is awaited, but it's understood they are considering coming over to play a few prestige gigs here and on the Continent, soon after their most important concert to date — at New York's massive Madison Square Garden on June 24.

THE FLAMIN' GROOVIES are due back in Britain in the early summer for an extensive tour, probably comprising as many as 30 dates. It's expected to begin towards the end of June, and full details will be announced in a week or two.

DOUBTS OVER STONES PLANS

Pressures mount on Richards in Canada

ALTHOUGH Keith Richards has now fixed the date and venue of the charity concerts he was ordered to give in Canada as one of the terms of his release on probation after being convicted on drug charges, he still runs the risk of further action being taken against him when he arrives in that country.

As previously reported, certain members of the Canadian Government (including the Justice Minister) feel that he was treated too lightly by the court, and are reportedly appealing against the sentence in the hope of having him committed to prison.

A spokesman for The Rolling Stones commented: "There is still a very real risk that Keith will be served with a subpoena which, in turn, would mean his passport being confiscated. But we are hoping the people concerned will realise that he is honouring his obligations, though he could easily have ducked out on them, and consequently won't deliberately cause trouble on this occasion."

The occasion in question is April 22, when Richards gives two performances at the 5,000 seater Varsity Hall in Toronto. And there's the further complication of the court being unhappy about him playing public gigs (with proceeds donated to blind charities), instead of actually performing to blind audiences.

Contrary to some reports, there is still no indication as to who will be playing with him — even Ronnie Wood, who has been widely tipped as one of the musicians involved, is so far unconfirmed.

The Stones themselves are delaying finalising future plans until Richards' Toronto commitment is fulfilled, and meanwhile are completing the last few tracks for their new album. It seems that plans to visit Australia this spring have now been shelved, but the prospect of British dates — probably in the summer — is still on the cards, providing there is no hitch in Canada.

VIOLINSKI SET DEBUT DATES

VIOLINSKI, the five-piece outfit fronted by ELO violinist Mik Kaminski, make their stage debut next month when they undertake an 11-date concert tour. It also marks the introduction of the band's two new members, bassist Paul Mann and guitarist Michael de Albuquerque, the latter being a former ELO member (with whom he played bass) until he left in 1975 to pursue a solo career.

Following the chart success of their debut single 'Clog Dance', the group have their first album issued by Jet Records today (Thursday).

And their tour dates are Folkestone Leas Cliff Hall (May 5), Poole Arts Centre (5), Manchester Ardri Cinema (10), Withamsea Grand Pavilion (11), Birmingham Barbarella's (12), Keele University (16), Wolverhampton Lafayette's (17), Cromer West Runton Pavilion (18), Leeds Ffordes Green Hotel (20), London Victoria The Venue (23) and Newcastle Mayfair (25).

Violinski are — from left to right above — John Marcangelo (keyboards), John Hodgson (drums), Mik Kaminski (violin), Michael de Albuquerque (guitar) and Paul Mann (bass).

CHAPIN GIGS

HARRY CHAPIN is to play a short British tour next month, though only three dates have so far been confirmed — at Belfast Grosvenor Hall (May 25), Croydon Fairfield Hall (27) and London Drury Lane Theatre Royal (June 2).

Several more concerts are in the process of being set up, and Chapin also visits Eire for a gig at Dublin Stadium on May 26. Tickets for the London show go on sale on May 1, priced £3.50, £3, £2.50 and £2.

RECORD NEWS

● Elektra have signed Japanese girl duo Pink Lady, claimed to be the world's largest selling female recording act. In Japan they've sold 17 million records in 30 months, had ten consecutive No. 1 singles and eight No. 1 albums. Their first British single, a disc out called 'Kiss Me In The Dark', is being rush released.

● Newwave's third album for GTO Records comes out in May — it's titled 'Hot Property' and is preceded on April 27 by a single taken from it called 'Razle Dazle'. Today (Thursday), the same label issues the first Gary Clatter single for yonks — this is 'Superhero' and the first 10,000 copies are in 12-inch form.

● EMI have signed Sponcho, the new group formed by the six recently-departed members of Hot Gossip. Their first single 'Crimestopper', penned by the writers of 'Starship Trooper', comes out on April 27.

● Arista Records' biggest-ever album package, comprising 13 releases this month, includes 'Wave' by Patti Smith, 'The Bell' by Lou Reed, 'New Values' by Iggy Pop, 'Rock On' by Raydio, 'Life In A Day' by Simple Minds (on the Zoom label), 'The Roads Of Life' by Bobby Womack and 'Disco Nights' by G.O.

● The Tourists have signed a long-term deal with Lingo Records. They are currently in Germany recording their debut album with producer Conny Plank — who has previously worked with Devo, Talking Heads, Kraftwerk and David Bowie.

● Southside Johnny & The Asbury Dukes have just signed with Mercury Records in the States (distributed in Britain by Phonogram). They're at present recording an album for their new outfit, and hope to visit Britain in the autumn to coincide with its release.

● Interview, the Beth band who supported Peter Gabriel in his Christmas shows at Hemmersmith, have been signed by Virgin who will be issuing their debut album in the early summer. Meanwhile they can be seen in London at Kensington Nashville (April 16, 23 and 30) and Islington Hope & Anchor (18 and 25).

● Michael Chapman has a new album and single issued by Criminal Records today (Thursday). They are 'Life On The Ceiling' and 'Blue Season' respectively.

● On May 4, United Artists release the second set of 20 volumes from the Blue Note jazz catalogue, all in their original sleeves. Artists featured range from Sidney Bechet to Dizzy Gillespie and Art Blakey.

● Judea Priest's single 'Evening Star' is issued by CBS on April 27. The normal version has a live version of 'Beyond The Realm Of Death' on the B-side. The 12-inch transparent disc has an extra track, the band's version of Fleetwood Mac's 'Green Manalishi'.

● The Fabulous Foodles' first picture single titled 'Workaholic', is released by Pye early next month. Same label issues the Patrick Juvet album 'Lady Night' today (Thursday), followed by his single 'Swiss Kiss' on April 27.

● Motorhead's hit album 'Overkill' is now available in a limited edition of 15,000 copies pressed in green vinyl, say Bronze Records.

● CBS release a new single by Earth Wind & Fire on April 27 — titled 'Boogie Wonderland', it also features The Emotions, and comes as a 12-inch in a picture bag. It's a prelude to the band's new album 'I Am', due out in a few weeks.

● The Damned have a three-track maxi-single issued by Chiswick on April 20, their first release for 16 months. The titles, all self-penned, are 'Love Song', 'Noise Noise Noise' and 'Suicide'.

● Salsoul Records are presenting a concert by all their catalogue artists at New York's Carnegie Hall on May 12 — including Instant Funk, Bunny Sigler, Loleatta Holloway and the Salsoul Orchestra. It's being recorded for a live album, to be issued later in the year.

● Still Little Fingers follow their chart album 'Inflammable Material' by issuing a new single on April 27. Titles are 'Gotta Getaway' and 'Bloody Sunday', and it's being put out under a partnership agreement between the band's own Rigid Digits label and Rough Trade Records.

Allstar Firemen in Patto benefit

THE OCCASIONAL pit-ster band Dick & The Firemen make one of their rare appearances this weekend, when they play a London charity concert in aid of Mike Patto's widow and children. It's at The Venue in Victoria this Saturday (14), and admission is £3. The line-up for this gig comprises Tim Hinkley and Zoot Money (piano), Boz Burrows and Alan Spenser (bass), Mitch Mitchell and John Halsey (drums), Bobby Tanch, Henry McCullough and Neil Hubbard (guitar), Poli Palmer (vibes) and Mel Collins (sax).

Rough Trade's package; Wayne County to tour

ROUGH TRADE have put together a package comprising The Raincoats, Cabaret Voltaire and — playing their first dates in this country — Swiss band Die Kleenax, who together open a month-long UK tour at London's Actium Hall on May 10. Rest of the gigs will be announced in a week or two. Released at the end of April are a Kleenax single titled 'You/Us' and a Raincoats single called 'Fairytale In The Supermarket'.

WAYNE COUNTY & The Electric Chairs begin a major British tour at Leicester University on April 21. It will run through May, and the rest of the dates are promised for next week. The tour coincides with the release on May 4 of the band's new album 'Things Your Mother Never Told You' on Safari Records — produced by David Cunningham, it's packaged in what's claimed as the world's first washable cover.

Stars shine in Sky

SKY are a brand new band comprising five pedigree musicians — John Williams and Kevin Peak (guitars), Herbie Flowers (bass), Francis Monkman (keyboards) and Tristan Fry (drums). They've been signed by Ariola who release their debut album, with the band's name as its title, on May 4 — preceded on April 27 by a single called 'Cannonball'. Sky also undertake their first tour next month, kicking off in style at seven top venues — Edinburgh Usher Hall (May 17), Sheffield City Hall (18), Manchester Apollo (19), Birmingham Odeon (21), Bristol Colston Hall (22), Southampton Gaspoint (23) and London Royal Albert Hall (24). Ticket prices are £4.50, £3.50, £2.75, £2.50, £1.50 and £1 (London); and £3.50, £2.50 and £1.50 (all other venues).

That resemblance between Accrington and Avignon.

25 stockists in Accrington now sell the longer, milder French kings! Gauloises Longues—The cigarette of France. 52p.

Gauloises Longues

LOW TO MIDDLE TAR As defined by H.M. Government

H.M. Government Health Departments' WARNING:

CIGARETTES CAN SERIOUSLY DAMAGE YOUR HEALTH

with who he is also filming a 40-minute Old Grey Whistle Test special, for screening by BBC-2 on Tuesday, May 1.

There are, however, no plans for any new Winter records to be issued in conjunction with his visit.

● Also set for The Venue is Roger Chapman, who appears there with his new band The Shortlist on Thursday and Friday, April 26 and 27.

verhampston Polytechnic (30)
Newcastle Mayfair (June 1)
Cleethorpe Winter Gardens
(5), Bradford University (6) and Brighton Sussex University (8).
Support act is Straight 8, EM
Records' first picture disc is set to be the new No Dice single 'Come Dancing', due out on April 20 and taken from their recently-issued album — retails at 99p, which is exceptionally low for the picture-disc process.

MIKE ABSALOM is touring extensively through the spring and early summer, with confirmed gigs at Scarborough Penthouse (April 16), Harlepool Nursery (22), Middlesbrough Teasdale Poly (23), Bridlington, Queen's Hotel, Leeds University (25), Robin Hood's Bay (26), Dolphin (27), Hull Art College (May 1), Fife School of Music (2), Osgodby, The Barn (3), Trefore, Wales Poly (4), Harfield Poly (6), High Wycombe Bucks College (9), London Waltham Forest North-East Poly (10), Luton College of Higher Education (11), Grimsby Technical College (15), Newcastle Poly (16), Manchester UMIST (18), Bolton Technical Institute (26), Preston Poly (June 8), Reading University (13), Manchester University (16), London Hampstead Westfield College (22), Birmingham University (23), Uxbridge Brunel University (24), London Royal Dental Hospital (27) and Birmingham Aston University (29).

BOURNEMOUTH's Village Disco re-opens on April 27 as the Statewide Center, after over £100,000 has been spent on renovations and £55,000-worth of new audio-visual equipment installed. The complex now comprises the New York Disco, Village Bowl Concert Theatre, Walt's Diner, Brickendackers and Sneaky Pete's Disco Bar.

BLACK SLATE promotes their new single 'Mind Your Motion' at London Kensington Nashville (this Saturday), Birmingham Rialto (April 16), Sheffield Top Rank (20), London Marquee (25), Fife St Andrew's University (27) and Aberdeen University (28).

chalet accommodation, restaur

FOLLOWING the success of its rock'n'roll weekend last month, and the advance sell-out of its three-day disco event after Easter, the Caister Holiday Centre at Great Yarmouth is staging several more weekends of holiday this year. The first, 'National Weekend', basically a disco presentation, is set for October 12-14. An International Country Jamboree (November 9-11) features Transatlantic stars The Family Brown, Vernon Oxford and Jimmy Lawton, plus at least 13 leading British C&W acts. And the second Rock'n'Roll Hop (November 16-18) is headlined by U.S. rockability star Mac Marcis, supported by Matchbox, Crazy Cavan and Flying Saucers, among others. Weekend tickets for all three events are £15, including chalet accommodation, restaurant and other facilities.

MUSIC BY POST

Comprehensive Catalogue free on receipt of 7p/3p stamp

This week's best selling SONGBOOKS

BLONDI Smooth	£1.90
LED ZEPPELIN Complete	£5.50
THE CLASH Complete	£2.95
KATE BUSH The Box Set	£1.95
GATE BUSH Livealbum	£2.25
IAN BURY Complete	£2.95
BOB DYLAN Box Set	£2.95
THE WHO Who Are The	£2.95
BOWIE Songs	£2.95
ELP Complete	£2.50
SEX PISTOLS Never Mind The Bollocks	£2.95
QUEEN Live	£2.95
DEEP PURPLE Complete	£2.50
THE LIZZY BORDERS	£1.95
BUZZCOCKS Smooth	£2.95
ROD STAMPEY Don't Give More Shores	£2.95

FLASH MUSIC STORES, 5 PELICAN CRESCENT, LONDON W11

BOOKS

SEAVILLE'S File	£2.25
SAWYER & Forth	£2.95
3 A.S. System	£1.50

PISTOLS

2nd Edition - This is a Day	£1.40
3rd Choker Shapers	£2.95
Rock Radio under a second	£2.95
Rhythmic Guitar Solter	£2.95
Lead Guitar Tutor - second	£2.95

POSTAGE & PACKING CHARGES

ORDER	GB & N IRELAND	OVERSEAS
25 or under	50p	40p
£10 or under	70p	70p
over £10	£1.00	£1.50

LIFE WITH THE LIONS

A SPIRITUAL SAFARI

"Ben Lyon — star of long-running radio and TV show Life With The Lyons — died last night, presumably from a heart attack, aboard the Queen Elizabeth II ocean liner."
(Sunday Mirror: March 26, 1978)

THE SAME Sunday that I wake up on a couch in the living room of Physicals' bassist Crister Solman, I take a short walk to Kilburn for breakfast of hot tea, cigarettes and the downmarket press; catch a bus to St Johns Wood, where I stop for an hour by the hotel Joseph Hill is staying; and spend the rest of the morning in Regents Park, inspecting the Moslem mosque, playing football, and looking at the lions in London Zoo.

After lunch in a Parkway cafe, I go Scritti Politti spotting with Chris Salewicz in Camden Market, where I also back up against an inmate, a flat mate, a penman, a former member of Man man, and a policeman, the latter of whom proceeds to take my face, name and number (8) — the fifth such occurrence in the past month — while I courteously inform him that Babylon will burn, and that the merciful shall know mercy, but no mercy for the merciless.

I go home, nyam a banana, crack a Special Brew, put on a Dubinners album, brush my teeth, and step it on Rock Street for heaven in the Seven Sisters Road at Finsbury Park's Rainbow Theatre, sighting Culture, Ranking Fish I and Nick Kimberley, the dearest writer on matters reggae in the UK, as his sardonic, occasional columns in Time Out and New Musical Express invariably testify.

Now I am not saying it is not a great and singular privilege to negotiate the company of such talented and personable parties in this man's town, in particular the policeman, as the watchmaker from Westminster said when the IRA blew up Big Ben, but by far the greatest pleasure of my day is that spent at the gates of the lions' enclosure chanting victory unto the Most High King of Kings

Seated there in their pride, the London Zoo lions contrive to put me in mind of sound-system boss Fat Man, assorted idlers and sistren, ranged in a group and seated at the foot of the main speaker during one of his late night Hackney sessions, whilst lesser lions of the same beer group prowling the edges in display of dance, and step it up official on the outer periphery.

"Lion! I roar. 'Zion!'"

JOSEPH HILL is another lion I check. Ever since I first heard 'This Time' pounding from the pre-emps of D'Nunes Hi Fi at a Four Aces session in 1976, Culture have been a group whose progress I have studied with continued interest.

Hill and company followed up 'This Time' with 'See Them A Come', 'Two Sevens Clash' and 'I Am Not Ashamed' — all for Joe Gibbs — at about which time the 'Two Sevens Clash' LP made its appearance in this country, with a wider audience awake to the trio's own particular cultural expression, defined by their two early discomix titles 'Trod On' and 'Baldhead Bridge'.

JOSEPH HILL. Pic: DENNIS MORRIS

PENNY REEL brushes with the Babylon, reflects in Regent Park zoo, and raps righteously with JOSEPH HILL of CULTURE.

Since then, Culture have achieved critical kudos for their April waxing 'Africa Stand Alone', recorded a further two albums — 'Harder Than The Rest' and 'Cumbolo' — for Front Line, with whom the group signed a monkey money contract last spring; generated considerable excitement on their debut UK tour of 1978; and scored a No. 1 hit back in Jamaica with their rendition of the traditional tune 'This Train'.

Paying my respects to Joe Hill on his second UK tour, I now stand at the window of his hotel room overlooking Lords cricket ground, humming Samuel Bramwell's current London discomix monster 'Rose Marie', and thinking about the Law.

Splendid view of Lords, I remark, shaking my locks ruefully at Hill's request for dispensation of a herbal nature. Do you play cricket, Joseph?

"Is true me prefer to play football more," says Joseph. "Soccer keep I fit. Soccer is the Resteman's game, you no see?"

Not really, I say. How do you work that out, lah?

"Soccer is a prophecy of defeat from His Imperial Majesty to his enemies," Joseph explains. "Even the ball of itself, it was designed in the shape of the world, representing the overthrow of Babylon by Jah Jah chosen people."

Funnily enough, I observe, a cricket ball is of identical shape, if somewhat smaller. How come you single out soccer for such sanctified remark?

"Is only soccer where a man uses all parts of his physical and mental self," insists Joseph. "And right now, the fittest must stand."

How does the fittest of the fittest stand in his relationship to Virgin Records. Are you happy with your treatment?

"Cho, not really man," comes the answering lament. "To me skip, Virgin is a company that does not really understand reggae music to penetrate it to the fullest. An artist needs to advance himself to produce great works, he needs a whole heap of space in which to move, and Virgin are not really capable of providing this, nor even appreciating it to the highest."

"The way I see it now," he continues, "is that Virgin have wasted a whole lot of money on what I call non-progressive reggae artists; but I think that they have learned their lesson by now in that respect, and learned it well."

What you call a lot of money is joke to sugar to a company like Virgin, I maintain. They've already recouped all their investments in reggae; their accountants would have made sure of that in advance. But if you are not happy, will you be staying with them?

"If I get all my instruments that Virgin have promised me," Joseph bites into a croissant as if to emphasise his point, "and if I have the time to get my music together," he says between mouthfuls, "then I think you could say I am happy to work with them."

"On the other hand," he suddenly grins, "if not, then is still fine with me. When one door close, one thousand open."

"I seem forsaken and alone,
I hear the lion roar.

And every door is shut but one,
And that is Mercy's door."

(William Cowper: Olney Hymns)

"A second Daniel, a Daniel, Jew!
Now, infidel, I have thee on the hip."

(Merchant Of Venice — IV. 1.)

WHEN ONE door close, one thousand open; there is a white bretheren me a know who believes, rightly or wrongly, that he has been forsaken by his own race, whom he has rejected, and who now spends most of his time stranded like Daniel in the lion's den of the black diaspora.

But Daniel and the lion is friend, as Ras Allah and Tapper Zukie testify on exclusive Fat Man slate, while I stand rocking at a late session in a small church hall off Victoria Park, a benefit organised by Owen Isaacar of the Twelve Tribes movement in celebration of Errol Dunkley's send-off dance; and keeping company with a pride of humble lions such as regularly prowling with Fat Man Hi Fi, including A Roy the Number One Mike, Robert "Riba", Ras Michael, Geese, King R, Nosey Charlie, Bouncing Stanley the Caretaker, and a special guest for the night, Mr Gregory Isaacs.

According to his own testimony, Fat Man would like to see more white people at his dances, and declares that reggae can be a unifying force of the two peoples.

He also feels that most of the white folk who profess a liking for reggae have only experienced it as good time music on soft sound-systems in clubs, and never penetrated the heavy pressure that is the music's most vital characteristic, only to be found in the presence of sounds such as his own. Corson's and Jah Shaka's.

"There shouldn't be any no-go areas in reggae," he tells me.

"There are no signs on any doors saying that this is or that is only for blacks. I went white people to stop thinking that black people are going to pick on them or anything. I welcome everyone."

"Besides, we need white people if reggae music is to go further. It's not enough that only black and black should check it, that can't help us any."

■ Continues over

LIFE WITH THE LIONS

Contd.

The mane attraction... CULTURE — pic DENNIS MORRIS.

■ From previous page

"The wrath of the lion is the wisdom of God."

(Blake: The Marriage of Heaven And Hell)

"RIGHT NOW," says Joseph Hill, "the feeling is around strong that reggae music is truly the music of tomorrow."

"It's a total cultural fight. Ish: it's like — snap! — automatically the Armageddon start. And each man have his own testimony to give, each has his own particular — statement."

"But from what I see in this time, I do honour and bless and pray daily for Bob Marley. I wouldn't even call him bother Bob — Mister Bob Marley."

What most absorbs me, I return, is the total destruction of Babylon works, advertisements and telecreens in particular, all the fuckeries which strip us of our independence and humanity. It's like that classic line of yours: 'Is that the right way for a human as a policeman?' "Cho, that's no way at all; all the time I get pulled on the street because I wear my locks long, man."

"Well them wickets must fight down the Rastaman, so prophecy reveal it Penny Reel," nods Joseph, "yet still, I want to ask it within myself, when the police do this they claim they are exercising their duty..."

A man shouldn't have duties like that. His duty is to himself and God.

"Yes I, but if he does have those duties, he should not abuse them so a man will appear in court the next day wearing cuts and bruises."

"That same man Rowbotham who arrest I and carry me to Stony Hill jail, his prayers was his guns, he wanted to hit me but I quoted Psalm 109 at him and he have to stop in the presence of Jehovah's power."

"He was applying man power, which is force and ignorance."

This train — I murmur — only to carry Jah Jah chosen people.

"Seen. I try to emphasise it in that song. I try to sing it with such a tone that the people are supposed to listen, for we need the attention. Love."

"Iron sharpeneth iron; so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend."

(Psalm 22)

TWO NIGHTS in a row, Culture played magnificent full house shows at the Rainbow, going about and prophesying equal rights and justice to the nation, I know.

Fired by the impetus of enthusiastic audiences, demonstrating the group's increase of popularity since its previous visit to the venue last year, Joseph Hill turned in an inspired onstage display, playing a selection of time-honoured Culture favourites and whirling about the stage like some dread dervish.

From the opening bars of his set, the crowd was upon its feet understudying Joseph in gymnastic prance, swaying in time to the music and singing along to the words, while overhead a great cloud of ganga smoke hung from the auditorium in limp pall, as if the funeral pyre of Babylon was already lit and burning.

A lion roar of approval went up as the three Culture brethren, all attired in stricker crises militance, stepped from the wings onstage to invoke the uplifting chant of 'Behold (The Land Where We Belong)'.

"Fret not thyself because of evildoers," advised Joe Hill, "neither be annoyed." And the multi-racial audience raised its collective fists in acknowledgement with the sentiment, in unity, while outside on the streets the ginal forces of Babylon waited like scavenging wolves of the steppes.

"Tell Me Where You Get It" followed, and then 'This Train' — carrying Jah chosen people in its execution and spiritual definition.

On either wing of the stage was massed a formidable congregation of dread and dread youth, imploring Hill and company to even wider display of frenzy, casting a continuous line of ites, gold and green in its midst.

Culture responded with 'Jah People' and 'I Am Not Ashamed'; as the evening wore on the charged atmosphere increased in intensity, nor did the pace let up, not even in the short intervals between songs.

"Be careful of the things you do, the everyday words you speak," warned Hill on 'Iron Sharpen Iron' — provoking similar sentiment with 'Stop The Fusing And Fighting' and 'See Them A Come'.

The loudest cheer of the night was reserved for 'Down In Jamaica'; and for the first time Joseph's vocal was temporarily drowned in the anguishing crowd chant.

To close the show, Culture revisited the past territory of 'Two Savens Clash', and encoored with 'Natty Dread Taking Over' and 'Never Get Weary' — The Revolutionaries dubbing up the rhythm in extended instrumental as the trio left stage.

I returned to the Queen of Spades.

BLUE RECORDS AVAILABLE NOW!

See Chris on tour:

Friday	27th April	EDINBURGH	Herriot Watt University
Saturday	28th April	GLASGOW	Strathclyde University
Sunday	29th April	NEWCASTLE	Polytechnic
Tuesday	1st May	SALTBURN	Filmora
Thursday	3rd May	LONDON	The Venue
Friday	4th May	LONDON	Middlesex Polytechnic — Hendon
Saturday	5th May	READING	University
Sunday	6th May	LONDON	Nashville Rooms
Monday	7th May	MANCHESTER	University
Thursday	10th May	LEICESTER	University
Friday	11th May	BIRMINGHAM	Barbarella's
Saturday	12th May	SHEFFIELD	University (N.U.S. Conference)

THE NEW ALBUM BY CHRIS REA

DELTICS

MAGNET RECORDS

PRODUCED BY GUS DUDGEON

THE ALBUM MAG1 5028
THE CASSETTE TC MAG1 5028

Records & Tapes

Available on tape

GUILTY

Mike Oldfield

New single out now on Virgin Records.
12" limited edition in blue vinyl also available.

Virgin

VS245 VS24512

MIKE OLDFIELD
CONDUCTOR: DAVID BEDFORD
WEMBLEY ARENA IN CONCERT
Saturday April 28th & Sunday April 29th at 8.00 p.m.
Tickets at £4.25, £3.50, £2.75
For more information contact: Virgin Records Ltd, 14, Bedford Way, London WC1R 4EU
Telephone 01-253 8141

THRILLS

CENSOR AT THE CONTROLS

BBC Baldheads Ban LKJ

Linton Johnson: A man must think what he must.

ONCE AGAIN that strange virus 'election fever' sweeps the UK, and once again there is fear and bumbling down the corridors of the BBC Television Centre in London's Wood Lane.

The BBC has caught no less than its fair share of fak recently for a string of cancellations of supposedly 'controversial' programmes and projects. Last week it risked further opprobrium by scrapping Dread, Beat An' Blood, a documentary by Franco Rosso on 27-year-old Brixton poet and black activist Linton Kwesi Johnson.

Apparently the Beeb's decision was only conveyed indirectly to Rosso on the evening of March 2, and this after a statement had been issued to the press. The next morning's Guardian quoted the statement as claiming that the documentary, originally scheduled for the March 5 Omnibus slot and now postponed until June 7, had been so shunted 'because of its political content.'

Presumably the BBC had seen fit to make their move on the grounds of their distinctly nebulous policy that no programme which is likely to 'prejudice' the outcome of an election can be shown during the run-up period to that election. Another casualty of this policy has been a repeat of a Mike Yarwood Christmas show which included a sketch at the expense of Conservative leader Margaret Thatcher.

Dread, Beat An' Blood has already been on general release as an Arts Council-funded film in UK cinemas. It's an extremely cogent and coherent feature, and the impression it gives of Johnson is precisely that I gained from interviewing him recently: an accomplished poet, he's also a highly articulate spokesman for the British black community.

The 'political' moments in the film are these. At one stage, whilst being interviewed by LBC, Johnson remarks that 'There is a vast array of political forces (in the UK) varying from the National Front right up to Margaret Thatcher and the Tory party who are trying to put blacks in a position of demoralisation that we were in during the '50s and '60s.'

Again, towards the end of the film, Johnson is seen twice reciting and twice singing the lyric of his 'It Dread Inna Inglest', which includes the line: 'Maggie Thatcher on the go with her racist show, but she a fe go...'

It should be emphasised that neither Johnson nor Race Today, the organisation of which he is a member, are seeking an electoral platform. His views of Thatcher — which many have good cause to share given both recent Tory pronouncements on race issues and the party's insistence on 'law and order' (i.e. increased police powers) — are therefore personal views.

Whereas the National Front, simply because they have fielded more than the required number of candidates in this election, are — or so it seems — going to be given prime TV time to broadcast and promote unadulterated racism under the guise of it being a party political line.

Weren't the BBC therefore operating a double standard? I asked their publicity office at Wood Lane. No, a spokeswoman replied, the decision was consistent with BBC electoral policy, and anyway there were pressures on facilities at the Beeb during the election period.

Pressures not to show an already 'in the can' programme with no extra live studio work needed? Pressures to replace it with 'official' election material? Whatever, Dread, Beat An' Blood was eventually replaced by an Omnibus repeat of a film about painter Albert Houthausen.

Finally, I put it to the spokeswoman that the BBC decision amounted to sheer censorship, denying a man and a community a right to express their opinions at a time when they were most entitled to do so. I was met with a longish pause and a predictable 'No comment'.

Dread, Beat An' Blood has encountered distribution problems elsewhere. Broadside, a Birmingham alternative community paper, were planning to show the film on March 17 at the city's Gala cinema as part of a benefit to enable them to recover the costs of a recent libel suit.

The paper's Andy Burchill told me that he had approached both the cinema and the Arts Council with a view to showing the film and everything seemed hunky dory. Whereupon the Birmingham police, negotiating with the Arts Council, abruptly served notice that they were going to refuse the film a licence on the grounds that it was 'liable to incite a riot' — grounds which they had previously invoked to stop a showing of The Harder They Come at the same cinema before Christmas.

Johnson himself has this to say about the BBC postponement. 'I cannot', he told Thrills over the phone, 'see any justification for the action.' Race Today has sent a strongly worded letter of protest to the Director General of the BBC and also issued a press statement in similar vein. This statement has, to my knowledge, been reported nowhere in the national press.

Are our politicians really so paranoid they feel threatened by just one man's outspoken views? Is the BBC, currently in dire financial straits, just going out of its way to ingratiate itself with what it thinks will be the next government? Your guesses must remain as good as mine.

ANGUS MACKINNON

THRILLS

ELVIS' DAD SPEAKS OUT

"My Son's No Racist"

ELVIS Costello's father this week attacked the 'racist' tag put on his son by angry American press reports following incidents during the singer's current American tour.

Elvis had reportedly made slighting remarks about 'nigger' singers like Ray Charles and James Brown in a bar-room run in with the Steve Stills Band. A fight broke out in which Elvis apparently received a dislocated shoulder.

Elvis' father rang up the Thrills desk following last week's exclusive Thrills report on the furor that followed when the bar-room story and nigger remarks reached the US press and radio. Threats were made against Costello's life and at a subsequent press conference in New York the bespectacled singer apologised for the remarks.

"Elvis is no racist," said Costello senior angrily. "His mother and I were always very strict on that point. The race issue was always very important in our house. It wasn't just something on the side, it was a central issue."

Regular readers will recall that Elvis' father is a singer in his own right. An Irishman who settled in Liverpool, he was a featured vocalist with the Joe Loss Orchestra in the 1950s and these days works as a cabaret artist under his real name of Ross McManus (Elvis' real name being Declan McManus).

"You can tell your readers that Elvis' mother is a Liverpool lady who'd beat the fucking tar out of him if she thought he was turning into a racist," continued Mr McManus. "When she was younger one of her best friends was a Chinese girl and she used to help her out at the Chinese laundry where she worked. It never bothered her that she was writing Chinese laundry labels or anything, she just accepted it."

"You know that I work the cabaret circuit and I hear all the Irish jokes and the Pakistani jokes and I still think it's wrong. My nose still isn't straight from the time when I had an argument with a trumpet player who was making racist remarks.

"I'm upset about these allegations against Elvis because I know they're not true. It's one thing I feel very strongly about."

Thrills wouldn't propose for a moment that Elvis — who you'll recall played last year's Anti-Nazi rally in Brixton alongside reggae bands Misty and Aswad — was a racist, but maybe he should be as careful about what he says when out drinking as he is about giving interviews.

THRILLS

Snouds Gets It Wrong Again

Last week's Jaws column in Sounds carried a report which alleged that NME's Manchester correspondent Ian Wood was the owner of SmirkSongs Records, the label which recently issued The Smirks' three-track EP.

This is completely untrue. SmirkSongs is owned jointly by the four Smirks and their manager Andrew Jasper. At no stage has Ian Wood been involved with the label.

The Sounds report went on to suggest that there might have been some link between Ian's alleged 'ownership' and the praise which he gave The Smirks in a recent Thrills article on the group in NME. In fact, Ian wrote nice things about The Smirks because he genuinely likes the band's music and admires their pluck in starting their own label at a time when most bands in their position — discarded by a major record label and deep in the financial mire — would simply have packed it all in. The implication that he would write complimentary articles on a group for financial gain is, to say the very least, unprofessional — though, may we say, not totally untypical. At the time of going to press, legal action was being taken against Sounds by both Ian Wood and The Smirks. Who's smirking now?

THRILLS

Blackmail Corner

Ah, youth! The all-too-fleeting moment when life lies open like a never-ending highway, stretching towards the horizon as far as your mind's eye can see. In these golden times, it seems as if one can live forever, one can redefine one's identity, one can be whatever one wants to be. Or... one can just be, you know?

Take this ninny, for example. Observe the ludicrous Johnny Cash hairstyle. Observe that poop-eating smirk. Observe those pudgy shockie cheeks. Observe, if you can suppress your nausea, that unforgivable shirt, that preposterous jacket, those laughable ears. And then console yourself with the thought that this oaf grew up to — in some small way — change the world. As we know it.

If you've sussed the schnook (as opposed to blackmailing the boss), then you may be as smart as you think you are. We are as smart as you think we are, we know the answer — so don't bother telling us. Well, you can if you like.

IDI OTWIND

THIRTEENS

On The Road On The Screen

ROCK 'N' ROLL on TV is no good. That's the way it's always been, and probably always will be.

No TV programme has consistently captured the passion and compulsion of great rock 'n' roll. The two heavy survivors snub on, eating deeper and deeper into their own functional formats: the reactionary smug Old Grey Whistle Test, the bright, empty Top Of The Pops, both of which simply package the music dry cleaned and freshly pressed.

Rock 'n' roll doesn't need television, and television doesn't need rock 'n' roll, but that's hardly an excuse for the apathy, condescension and ignorance present on both sides. Rock 'n' roll can work on television, and deserves screen time as much as anything else.

Some of the outstanding moments in rock 'n' roll TV have originated from Granada, who locally and nationally have consistently shown how to portray rock 'n' roll sympathetically. A handful of enthusiasts beavering within the company's complex bureaucracy have achieved a lot. Such programmes as So It Goes and the Randy Newman and Tom Robinson documentaries are just the networked tip of what Granada does with rock 'n' roll — in the past they've interviewed Iggy Pop, John Lydon, Debbie Harry, and had early Buzzcocks, solo Elvis Costello, Patrick Fitzgerald performing — all on the testtime magazine half hour!

So It Goes was an extension of this, putting people like Siouxsie And The Banshees, Magazine, Clash, Sex Pistols, Buzzcocks, Jam, Penetration and Mink DeVille on TV for the first time. Not only that, but they captured them all perfectly, chaotically without contrivance, without any false prettiness, without any insulating frivolity, without smothering the energy or intent.

Granada's most recent national foray into rock 'n' roll TV was a series of hour-long documentaries — so far there have been unpretentious, revealing looks at Randy Newman and Tom Robinson, coming soon is a programme on Dave Edmunds and Nick Lowe making a record, an attempt to evaluate Ian Dury, a report on Elton John's trip to Russia and one other as yet undecided subject, all to be screened before the end of the year.

The director's view of David Essex... and David's view of the director. Keef McMillan and assistants at work. Pix: Kevin Cummins.

And now comes a series of seven peak-time hour-long in-concert shows entitled On The Road that are to feature Bad Company, Blondie, Gerry Rafferty, Tina Turner, David Essex, Earth Wind And Fire and Kate Bush.

On The Road is produced by Chris Pye, a likeable, bearded Granadaman who produced the first series of So It Goes and executive produced the second series. He reveals that there has been no high level decision to permanently cancel the programme, so it could yet reappear and "in terms of the acts chosen, could take the Old Grey Whistle Test off the screen." He also produces the documentary series.

His director is Keef McMillan, a freelance video director committed to the idea of 'rock 'n' roll TV' and to that concept as being an art. McMillan has directed distinctive videos for Kate Bush and Blondie, among others. When the video discs arrive — any minute now — McMillan will be in great demand.

On The Road is not as meek and mild as the format and selection of performers indicate. For a start, Granada specifically asked McMillan to direct, in an attempt, as Pye explains, "to make the visuals more electronic, more creative, more adventurous." McMillan emphasises that the series will not be straight in-concert filming. "I have developed lots of techniques whilst doing promotional films that haven't been used. They're new. I want to apply them to live concerts, to see if it's possible to record a live concert per se and make good rock 'n' roll television."

Yet the initial choice of acts seems excessively MOR.

"This first series is really a PR job," Pye admits. "We have to make sure it looks good, that people watch it, to get a high profile. If we made seven shows now, taking people like the Alberts, Skids, Undertones say, we wouldn't get a second series. The people who make the decisions aren't ready to give the freedom... to allow a guaranteed network slot to music they find deeply unpalatable as opposed to mildly unpalatable. Having got the first series over with music they find at least

tubeway army
REPLICAS
the second album bega 7

THE PARK

BEGGARS BANQUET

acceptable, then the next series' choice of acts will be more adventurous.

"Ever since Ready Steady Go right through to Kenny Everett, which is now established though I regard it as MOR — there has been a history of stop and start. What I'm going to do is get the slot established and then experiment. It's no good having a great show if it's taken off after three weeks."

Pye's other concerted attempt to put rock'n'roll television onto the network is his "series of intimate one hour documentaries... an attempt to make films with musicians who have something to say... to show to the uncommitted 10% who might leave the set on when one appears that there is something more to the subject other than noise."

It took constant pressure before Granada agreed to sponsor both series. Although they eventually did, Pye considers the Granada hierarchy to be ultimately as safety-conscious as other companies.

"Granada are not very flexible. They would not have thought of doing it if I and a couple of other people hadn't said, 'Hey why don't we do this?' You've got to push them. I'm sure there are people in other companies who feel the same as I do — it's just whether you can get it on the screen. Granada will say, 'We've never heard of Nick Lowe but if you think he's worth doing then go ahead'. That's probably the difference with Granada. Other people have the ideas but ultimately can't make the film.

Granada are more receptive. They'll take the odd risk. Not too many, but the odd one."

But if the suspicious and ignorant attitude of the TV companies restricts the quantity of rock'n'roll on TV, or means there'll be a series or two of something promising that'll disappear before it has a chance to grow, there's nothing to say that the quality of the rock'n'roll that reaches the screen will be particularly good. It's no way a case of quality over quantity — both OGWT and TOTP are produced rigidly and plainly.

The day I met Keef McMillan he was as depressed as someone as cheerful as him can be, and in his own words "not enjoying myself". He had eagerly agreed to do the series to find out if rock'n'roll on television could be interesting. "I'm not sure that it can be," he kept sighing. Despite having the access, the talent, the enthusiasm, the vision, McMillan reckons that On The Road will not be as good as it could be, because of the fundamental problem that the equipment (mixers, cameras, etc.) is ten years out of date.

"We have taken a few steps in the right direction though. It will be good television. It will be worth watching. On The Road could develop into a strong new rock'n'roll series. There are a few barriers which I don't feel I've got the energy to tear down, nor the ability — but potentially it's very very exciting."

It does seem, though, that the days when rock on television actually adds something to the music, when rock has a place on the screen, are a long way off.

Take heart, though, that despite the obstacles, there are people in the distant, faceless world of television actively attempting to put up some relevant, rigorous opposition to OGWT and TOTP. And make it stick.

PAUL MORLEY
THROLES

Kevin Cummins' view of David Essex and Chris Pye.

IGNORE AT YOUR PERIL! PENETRATION

ON TOUR

APRIL

20	HANLEY	Victoria Hall
21	MIDDLESBROUGH	Rock Garden
22	MIDDLESBROUGH	Rock Garden
24	BRISTOL	Locarno
25	CARDIFF	Top Rank
27	LIVERPOOL	Mountford Hall
28	COLCHESTER	Essex University
29	HEMEL HEMPSTEAD	Pavilion

MAY

2	BRIGHTON	Top Rank
4	UXBRIDGE	Brunel University
5	LEEDS	Polytechnic
6	SHEFFIELD	Top Rank
7	BLACKPOOL	Norbreak Castle
9	LONDON	Rainbow
10	GUILDFORD	Civic Hall
11	CAMBRIDGE	Corn Exchange
12	NORTHAMPTON	Pavilion
13	CHELMSFORD	Chancellor Hall
14	NORWICH	St. Andrews
16	BIRMINGHAM	Top Rank
17	COVENTRY	Locarno
18	MANCHESTER	Apollo
19	CARLISLE	Market Hall

SPECIAL GUESTS:

COWBOYS INTERNATIONAL

DANGER SIGNS

New single to be released on April 20

VS257

12" version also available VS257 12

Go to Paris from £14

It's as easy as one, two, three

Travel centre-to-centre by train and ship or hovercraft. With a choice of day and night services, and a whole range of special low offers.

There's a night fare from only £14, a Seaspeed Youth Fare (under 26 yrs old) from only £16 and a 72-hour Excursion fare from only £20.00. It's the easy, no-hassle way to travel from the centre of London to the centre of Paris.

Book now at principal British Rail stations, Travel Centres, or your local Travel Agent.

London-Paris

SNCF

Capital City Service

LOWRY

THE BUDDY HOLLY BOX SET IS COMPLETE

For the first time ever this is the complete collection of every record by Buddy Holly & The Crickets together with many rare and hard to find interviews, television appearances and demo recordings. Over 120 tracks from the original mono and stereo masters complete with session dates and personnel. Also many rare and unpublished photographs in a special 60 page Buddy Holly and The Crickets souvenir scrapbook.

R.R.P. £14.99

CDMS 807

cassette version also available

TCCDMS 807

MCA RECORDS

1 Great Portland Street, London W1R 3PL

He did it Otway...

(GROANS ALL ROUND)

GREATER GLASGOW, just like I pictured it: a pylon-griddled bleakorama of faceless Glaxo factories and Kleenex box housing estates. A pork-pie at a barmitzvah couldn't be more conspicuous than our big black limousine as it flashes down Paisley's main drag, spilling its contents (John Otway, Manager, Press Officer, and two hacks) at The Railway Inn on this drizzly Friday morning.

We order a bottle of Champagne and are dutifully ignored. London is only two hours away; a slug of Scotland's finest softens the culture-shock. Get to the point, Joseph.

Well, in a moment of rare sobriety John Otway recently put his head together and conceived an ACE BOFFO WHEEZE...

Among the twenty thousand distributed copies of his new single release

"Frightened And Scared", there exist just three copies which were pressed without a vocal track. Anyone who purchased one of these freak discs was invited (as per the sleeve-notes) to contact Polydor, Otway's record company, whereupon it would be arranged for the Otter to call round in person to perform the song alive and loud in their own living room to the accompaniment of the backing track.

The first 'lucky' winner was mild-mannered Jim Stanley, 23, fork-lift trucker of Broom Crescent, East Kilbride, an avid Quo and heavy rock buff, and intrepid NME subscriber.

The little suburban semi was overrun with press-weasels, snapsters and radio-jocks in red anoraks. The entire Stanley clan — Jim, parents, in-laws, sproggies, granny — were there, exuding hospitality and mild disbelief at all these media aliens milling around their paff.

Otway gurgled with delight as the aforesaid platter was slipped on the Dansette and turned up to its full 0.3 decibels. With two-square miles of idiot grin, he launched into a bladder-tickling rendition of 'Frightened And Scared'. He remembered all the words, and his voice dropped only twice, causing china ducks to change course midstream.

Ma Stanley knew enough in advance of Otway's swashbuckling gibbon antics to have removed the chandelier, so Otway ended his jape by collapsing ass-over-sea, his elbow narrowly missing a heap of sarnies that Granny had laid on.

John Otway is 73

RICK JOSEPH

THIRTEENS

Jim Stanley admires John Otway's trained tonsils.

Doobie boobs

FACE FACTS... Life for those mentors of mellowness The Doobie Brothers isn't exactly Fat City these days. Thrills understands from People Magazine that, despite such luminaries as Jane Fonda admitting to "getting high on their good vibes", they've all been feeling a bit gripey lately.

"Rock 'n' roll has become big business," intones John Hartman shrewdly. "Tax concerns have eaten away at my true love — simple old blues music." He's quitting the band in a year's time to raise Arabian stallions on his Sonoma County spread, and to study to be a vet.

Success for the ever-popular Jeff 'Skunk' Baxter means having to sleep in the bathtub as "there's too many people in the house". Jeff can't wait to hi-tail it to the privacy of a solar-heated pad in Tucson.

Even drummer Keith Knudsen's wife Tracy sounds worried about the boys. "Sometimes they get on each other's nerves, like a married couple," claims the foxy one from the privacy of their personal Jacuzzi. The only difference between a marriage and a group "she adds, "is that in marriage there's sex". So much for group sex, eh?

But for "bearded baby-faced sex symbol Michael McDonald", it's these spikey tops that really get his goat. "If those punk rock guys were anti-everything, they wouldn't stand up there and act like morons in front of people," he seethes. "They'd go in the woods and eat mud and really live like rebels."

Now that's telling 'em, Mike.

MARK ELLEN

THIRTEENS

Skunk Baxter (sporting the shades) demonstrates for a fellow Doobie his favourite method of relieving the boredom of their chosen rock 'n' roll lifestyle. Pic: Joe Stevens.

Otis Redding does the frug

Otis film definite

ENDING months of speculation, Phil Walden, head of Capricorn records, recently confirmed his plans for a film biography of the late, great Otis Redding.

Otis will be played by Teddy Pendergrass, former Harold Melvin and The Blue Notes lead singer, whose recent album 'Life Is A Song Worth Singing' sold 3½ million copies in the U.S.

Walden, former manager and lifetime friend of Redding, has set up Capricorn films to handle the project and aims to keep total control of all aspects including the highly lucrative soundtrack album.

Pendergrass records for Philadelphia International, owned by Kenny Gamble and Leon Huff, Philly soul veterans who will be producing the music for the film.

Originally a documentary approach was planned, but that fell through due to lack of good footage. Pendergrass will not lip-synch Otis' songs. Walden commented: 'We decided we didn't want to clone Otis. Gamble and Huff will produce the music using Otis' songs, and it will be different because their style of music is a little more sophisticated than the Memphis era of soul music. But, there is a lot of Otis in Teddy — it's almost a contemporary extension of Otis'.

Teddy Pendergrass, who'll play Otis

Otis Redding's scorching deep soul style made him the most respected soul singer of the '60s. Phenomenal performances on the European Stax-Volt tour and at the Monterey Pop festival brought him to the verge of widespread fame, which he was never able to capitalize on because of his tragic and premature death.

Otis died on December 10th, 1967, when his plane crashed to the bottom of the frozen Lake Monona in Wisconsin.

DICK TRACY

Zine Soon Come Shock

THE reggae zine industry rolls up and rolls on: out now is issue 2 of East London's Small Axe and issue 4 of Edinburgh's Ital Rockers. The new Axe is sharper than the first. It's uncompromisingly a fanzine, unafraid to indulge: like five pages on Prince Far I and some well-informed record reviews. Hardly any visuals, but the fab Hugh Mindell full mini-page pin-up conquers all.

Back cover of Small Axe 2

Ital Rockers is more of a scaled down version of a grown up mag: sensible reviews, scant obscurity, working features on Aswad, Matumbi, Jahmen, Far I, Paul Bradshaw's Jamaican diary is favourite here; Leroy Smart over lunch etc.

Also out: Reggae, a Norwegian (!) papersized zine (ing): its green and gold cover, nice pic, all written in strange scold tongue.

Small Axe from Roy Hurford, 17 Hume Point, 2 Jersey Road, Custom House, London E16. 30p plus p & p. Ital Rockers from Dougie Thompson, 70 Milton Road West, Edinburgh EH15 1QY.

Reggae from Mari Tott, Fagerlynn 1, Oslo 5, Norway. JOE FRAZIER

MOONSTOMPING WITH TIN TIN...

and other unlikely tales from French comics...

THE Gauls have finally gotten round to combining their long-standing tradition of comic art excellence with their equally long-standing rock imagery obsession. The result: Metal Hurlant's Rock Special.

It includes text (en Français) from our very own Tony and Julie, amongst others, and features some truly wild renderings of rock's past, present, and future from the likes of Clerc, Moebius, Benoit, Douy and Drulllet.

No news of an English print yet, but a comic connoisseur who could grapple with the diction would just have to say: Wawel! Envoyez-moi prompt! Enquiries to Metal Hurlant, 15-17 Passage de Petites, Ecuries, Paris 75010.

PHILLIPE DOUBT

Above: Philip Drulllet's rock science fantasy. Right: Tin Tin and friend fangpop courtesy of Ted Benoit.

Steve Hillage A Special Project

Music For The Rainbow Dome
At The Festival For Mind Body And Spirit
21st - 29th April 1979 at Olympia, London

Rainbow Dome Musick A Special Record

Available on Crystal Clear Vinyl

Rainbow Dome Musick A Special Price

Only £2.99

Rainbow Dome Musick A Special Release Date

Good Friday - April 13th

SO THERE I was on a snowswept Wednesday morning, sipping tea in bed, when out of my old transistor bursts a single called 'No Time'.

I crank Radio Leeds up in time to hear the DJ inform listeners that it's by Rats and Delicious. Could that be the Rats and Delicious I remember from two years back — the Rats and Delicious who used to walk around the punk clubs in suspenders and New York Dolls tat. Rats toting her pet, a seven foot python?

At the time Rats worked in a mortician's learning embalming and Delicious modelled. I've still got Delicious' phone number. I ring her and check. Yes it's them singing; she invites me to meet her at Leeds bus station and we go up to Rats' house to hear some stuff they've been recording.

Down at the bus station I'm met by the girls and their manager. We board the bus and start to chat. Like, how come they've got a record contract when they've never played on stage and have no musical ability? Delicious smiles.

"Boys are good for one thing..."

"We got a job go-go dancing at the Batley Variety Club. I was singing Marlene Dietrich songs and Rats pogoed with her python. Someone filmed it and Wayne Bickerton saw us and signed us up."

Their manager tells me Wayne Bickerton had 37 hits with Mac and Katy Kissoon and The Rubettes. He explains that Radio One is being broadcast from Leeds next week and he's managed to hustle the girls a chat with Tony Blackburn.

"I'm going to hit 'im on the 'ed, the dummy," says Ms Rats.

"She's only joking," the manager adds with a nervous laugh.

Is Rats taking her python along? "Na, I haven't got it any more. Some drunks

RATS (left) and DELICIOUS

"Yeah — for spending money on our record!"

nicked it and smashed it to death with a brick. Just as well really, it kept shitting on me when I pogoed."

I mentioned the fact that they don't have a band. "We're rehearsing with a band called The Naughty Boys but they're dead slow," complains Rats. Mr Managers smooth things over: "The band is made up of professionals. It takes them three minutes to learn a song. Rats gets impatient. She doesn't understand musicians."

It transpires that the drummer is from the Gary Glitter Band and the bassist from FBI. Did they play on the record then?

"Na, it was session men. We 'ad that Clem Cattini, 'im out of the Shadows," ventures Rats. They show me some publicity pix. Blatantly appealing to the beer and titbits mentality, it's the suspenders and lace bodices of old. Bit sexist, isn't it? "What do ya mean! We've always gone around like that!"

PIG: STEVE DIXON

I know, Rats but... "Men are good for one thing," Rats insists. And What might that be, I ask. By now the old ladies on the Number 15 have stopped chatting. They strain to hear Rats reply. "Schwein", what else?"

The old ladies look suitably shocked. Mr Manager gazes out of the window.

We arrive at Sescroft, one of the biggest council estates in Europe. It's hardly the Kings Road. Rats and Delicious are both 18, still living at home with mum and dad in a council semi.

"Everyone's used to us now. My dad even took our photos to work."

When we arrive the manager plays me 'No Time' again and again. It's great. Totally honest manipulation. Glam rock radio pop punk pap. Ain't technology wonderful?

STEVE DIXON

THRILLS

Giving the image a tweak

ROCK 'N' ROLL got pregnant and they called the baby... Assist-Card. According to Ms London magazine, the New York-based concern thrives on helping rock stars and others with more money than sense to get through the great Monopoly Game of Life.

For around £250 p.e., Assist-Card handle day-to-day problems like bail, rescue for the stranded, and medical aid for potentially bluish-inducing situations. "There need be no need for adverse publicity," they declare. Members include nobility and... it's said, The Rolling Stones. Spokesman Ms S. Purvins anticipates further business from "rock groups and students... the kind of people who are always getting in trouble."

HARRY GEORGE

The Lone Groover

BENYON

Moonlight becomes her... it goes with her hair...

Cherry Vanilla's new single:
Moonlight
b/w Mr Spider

In full-colour bag
PB 5145

From the forthcoming album,
'Venus d' Vinyl'

RCA
Records and Cassettes

Roxy Music

THE NEW SINGLE

D
A N
C
E

A
W
A
Y

PICTURE BAG

Rush

With special guests
Max Webster

RUSH TOUR OF THE HEMISPHERES

A FAIRWELL TO KINGS
ALB: 9100 042 CASS: 7142 580

ALL THE WORLD'S A STAGE
ALB: 6672 015 CASS: 7231 400

ARCHIVES
ALB: 6641 799 CASS: 7649 103

HEMISPHERES
ALB: 9100 059 CASS: 7142 647

EUROPEAN TOUR
17th MAY - 4th JUNE

Monday 23rd April NEWCASTLE City Hall
Tuesday 24th April NEWCASTLE City Hall
Wednesday 25th April GLASGOW Apollo
Thursday 26th April GLASGOW Apollo
Saturday 28th April EDINBURGH Odeon
Sunday MANCHESTER Apollo
Monday 30th April MANCHESTER Apollo
Tuesday 1st May LIVERPOOL Empire
Wednesday 2nd May LIVERPOOL Empire
Friday 4th May HAMMERSMITH Odeon
Saturday 5th May HAMMERSMITH Odeon
Sunday 6th May HAMMERSMITH Odeon
Monday 7th May HAMMERSMITH Odeon
Wednesday 9th May COVENTRY Theatre
Thursday 10th May BIRMINGHAM Odeon
Friday 11th May BIRMINGHAM Odeon
Sunday 13th May SOUTHAMPTON Gaumont
Monday 14th May BRISTOL Colston Hall
Tuesday 15th May BRISTOL Colston Hall

ALL TOUR DATES SOLD OUT.

marketed by phonogram

The Return Of Supermarket Chic

SOMETIME back I wrote a jokey Thrills on budget records which, if you have the time to go searching for good music, can be picked up cheaply in your local supermarket.

Pickwick's Star Trax have now made the task even easier. They've just brought out eight albums off costing £1.49 and displaying taste and consideration often lacking in budget compilations.

Each LP contains fifteen titles — which if my pocket calculator isn't faulty works out at 10p per track. Highlights:

'Disco Frenzy'

Dumb title — it's nothing to do with disco and everything to do with '60s soul. Dobbie Gray's 'The In Crowd', Bob and Earl's 'Harlem Shuffle', Sam and Dave's 'Soul Man' and 'Hold On I'm Coming', Eddie Floyd's 'Knock On Wood' rub shoulders with contributions from Mary Wells, The Drifters and Clarence Carter to produce a tasty collection of classics ideal for keeping disco in its proper perspective.

'15 Monster Hits Vol 1 and 2' Straight pop ranging from Bobby Vee's 'Rubber Ball' through to The Box Tops 'The Letter'. Where else can you pick up The Marcels' 'Blue Moon' or The Kingsmen's 'Louie Louie' for the price of a Mars Bar? I still love it when the singer comes in too soon on 'Louie Louie', dumb as

The Ramones could never be.

'15 Mersey Hits' Well power poppers, I'm no expert on beat music but I can enjoy The Swinging Blue Jeans' 'Hippy Hippy Shake' and 'Good Golly Miss Molly'. The Premiers add a touch of the obscure with 'Farmer John' while Gerry and the Pacemakers and Freddie and the Dreamers, who take up eleven tracks between them, leave me cold. The Troggs' 'Wild Thing' is included, though they had nothing to do with Liverpool, but as it's the best record on the album I'll let that pass.

'15 Heartbreakers' The early '60s Jilted John, Del Shannon has 'Mats Off To Larry' and the immortal 'Runaway' included but hard-core schmaltz merchants like Gary Puckett and B. J. Thomas make this one a no-no.

'15 Tear Jerkers' This is better, The Shirelles' 'Will You Still Love Me Tomorrow', The Cascades' 'Rhythm Of The Rain', The Box Tops' 'Cry Like A Baby' and The Fleetwoods' 'Come Softly To Me' will have you crying into your Korn Flakes.

'Memories 15 Golden Hits' Some nice '50s stuff like The Crew Cuts' 'Sh'boom', The Four Lads' 'Standing On The Corner' and 'Three Coins In The Fountain'. Unfortunately The Coasters triumph over 'Yakety Yak', 'Poison Ivy' and 'Charlie Brown' are followed by Johnny Ray's 'The Little White Cloud That Cried' — which may have been thrown in as camp bait but I doubt it.

'Surfin' USA' With summer coming along this is the best buy. I'll list all the tracks as they are all worthy of a mention: Jan and Dean's 'Little Deuce Coupe', 'I Get Around', 'Drag City', 'Fun Fun Fun', 'Ride The Wild Surf', 'Help Me Rhonda', 'Little Old Lady From Pasadena', 'Deadmen's Curve', 'Surf City'. The Beach Boys' 'Surfin' Safari', 'Surfin'', 'Surfer Girl', The Hondells' 'Little Honda', The Chantays' 'Pipeline'. The Surfaris' 'Wipe Out'. Throw open the windows get your skateboard out and ride the wild concrete.

STEVE DIXON

THRILLS

Disco's tallest . .

DISCOMANIA, presently neck and neck in the running with inflation, may be coming to the 110-story World Trade Center in New York. Rising to the occasion, the center management said that the idea of a disco on the 107th floor (Studio 1077) is a possibility.

The numero uno man at the Trade Center a Mr Guy Tozzoli has asked Inhilco, the company that operates the 22 restaurants and bars in the billion dollar complex to check out the disco possibilities. Tozzoli told Thrills that a disco there would be a sure bet for raking in the bucks, and at six quid ($12.00) a throw they could gross up to $4 million a year easily.

Windows of the World atop the North Tower is already the world's most successful restaurant grossing a cool $10m p.a.

Mr Tozzoli, picking up Thrills' tab for white wine and casaba melon, said, "Studio 54 just couldn't compete with a Trade Center Disco. I mean we'd have to turn away crowds in the middle of a snow storm, don't you think?"

The memo sent by Inhilco to Mr Tozzoli, says that the initial outlay would only be maybe a half million bucks for a sound system, smoke machines and lights with drinks pegged at $2.50 a shot.

When I mentioned NME's disco specialist the inebriated Danny Baker the more - than - generous Mr Tozzoli said, "Why not have him come over for the opening? I mean how much would it cost us, a couple of grand? Hey, it would be the kind of publicity we'd want. It would be great! A whole bunch of British people coming over. My aunt's British."

. . . and fastest

SINCE THE demise of the Alfy-Patly Rink ten years ago, London has been sorely lacking in facilities for grown-ups to be ten years old again. But that's all changed since the opening of the Global Village Roller Disco, the first of its kind in the capital and only the third in the UK.

The great thing is that even if you're a lousy disco dancer, much less prestige is at stake if you're on wheels.

Most people skid around in a state of mobile nirvana (Cruisers) — although, not surprisingly, the bionic elite is there in full force: Adonis-shaped boys with moustaches and A's shorts, and smunchy, Blaise-clad nubbettes who are called Movers.

Three large stone floor discos, a dozen bars to confide into, plenty of private corners to be precocious in, and a live video screen make this place the most exciting thing since Fortnuma dropped its ties only rule.

Is it dangerous? Well, Einstein would suggest that once your skates are on you adjust to a Wheels - Time Space continuum. Fall over and the chances are that your landing site is moving at the same velocity as yourself.

GROPER FIRMLY
THRILLS

Revising for Exams?

Worried by the effect of school closures?

CELTIC REVISION AIDS

are designed to help.

- ★ All major CSE, GCE O and A Level subjects covered
- ★ Written by teachers and examiners
- ★ Only 60p to £1.25
- ★ Free Students Competition with super prizes
- ★ In your local bookshop NOW

or

Write for free list of titles to:

Celtic Revision Aids,

Lincoln Way, Windmill Road,
Sunbury-on-Thames, Middlesex or phone

Michael McWhinnie (Sunbury 85681 ext 274)

LOOK OUT FOR THE CELTIC OWL
— IT'S THE
SYMBOL OF EXAM SUCCESS

On a Medina Club holiday there are 24 hours in every day

If you want a holiday where the action never stops, join the Club.

The Samira Club.

On the soft, golden sands of Hammamet beach in Tunisia.

During the day, there's swimming, water ski-ing, sailing, horse-riding, camel trekking, competitions, excursions and desert trips.

At night the Club runs special entertainment evenings and has its own live group and disco — or you can enjoy the live bands, belly dancing and local folklore shows at almost every hotel in Hammamet.

The Club's main buildings and extensive bar open on to sun terraces that surround the swimming pool, which is just a few steps to the beach. By the pool there's a barbecue which serves snacks and local dishes.

Your accommodation at the Club is in very simple and modestly furnished chalets with twin beds and the basic facilities of hand-shower and w.c.

Don't expect hotel room comforts, because there aren't any. But do expect to enjoy yourself — with a lot of other young people from all over Europe — 24 hours a day!

Club holidays in Tunisia from £139.00 for 2 weeks.

MEDINA HOLIDAYS

Please send me your Colour brochure.

Name _____
Address _____

Send to: Medina Holidays,
33 Cranborne Street, London WC2
or ring 01-836 4995

NAME

STREET

POST CODE

MAGAZINE

SPECIAL GUESTS
TOUR- SIMPLE MINDS
 (ALL DATES)

APRIL	BOX OFFICE
16 MALVERN WINTER GARDENS	06845 4700
17 BLACKBURN KING GEORGE'S HALL	0254 53092
18 SHEFFIELD TOP RANK	0742 21927
19 LEICESTER DE MONTFORT HALL	0533 27632
20 EDINBURGH CLOUDS	031 229 5553
21 ABERDEEN UNIVERSITY	0224 522751
22 ST ANDREWS UNIVERSITY	0334 73145
23 MANCHESTER APOLLO	061 273 3533
25 NEWCASTLE CITY HALL	0632 20007
26 HANLEY VICTORIA HALL	SEE LOCAL PRESS
27 BIRMINGHAM ODEON	021 643 6101
28 SOUTHAMPTON BALMONT	0703 29772/3
29 OXFORD NEW THEATRE	0865 40544
30 BRISTOL COLSTON HALL	0272 291768
MAY
1 EXETER UNIVERSITY	0392 7791
2 LONDON THEATRE ROYAL DRURY LANE	01 856 8108
3 CANTERBURY ODEON	0227 62480
4 CAMBRIDGE CORN EXCHANGE	0223 6221
5 LEEDS UNIVERSITY	0532 39071
6 LIVERPOOL EMPIRE	051 709 1555

Virgin

'SECONDHAND DAYLIGHT'

ALBUM

V2121 (Cassette TCY2121)

PLASTIC EPISTLE OF THE WEEK

THE RECORDS: Rock And Roll Love Letter (Virgin). Twelve inches of heaven. The Records take Tim Moore's erudite statement of postal intent and by dint of the Hugh Gower/John Wicks as close as this guitar onslaught actually manage to preserve the author's gist whilst updating his original fury into summum even more potent. The Records lose nothing in translation. They slam into the spirit like men possessed, with all the professional's polish and the passion of pure fans. The Bay City Rollers never did justice to Moore's discovery — I see an ancient rhythm in a man's genetic code/Gonna keep on rock and rollin' 'til my genes explode' — but Birch, Brown and friends are right in there with him.

On the flip there's the bonus of Records favourites, 'Wives And Mothers Of Tomorrow' and 'Starry Eyes (Live)', a 100 per cent success story, a sugary treat for glutinous pop addicts. Who said there was a postal strike?

AVERAGE WHITE BAND: Walk On By (RCA). Not so much average as plain mediocre. This offering from the former Scottish golden boys — everybody's favourite, tame funk outfit — commits cold blooded slaughter on the cherished Burnel and Cornwell musical hit of yesteryear. Can nothing be done to quell this outrage?

J. J. BURNEL: Freddie Laker (Concorde & Eurobus) (U.A.). Rest assured that J.J.'s blueprint for the new Euroman won't be featuring the kilt. Mind you the Dauphin's pen to cheap transatlantic flights is a trifle difficult to decipher, a bit of a mouthful. To a foreground of heavily treated vocal android neo-Roxy, and a background of Brian James plus a drum machine, J. J. points the finger of scorn at the silly Yanks who 'wouldn't let our Concorde in'. Obviously we're having none of that; 'Let Boeing-Douglas go and stew', ripostes Burnel gamely. Too much 'accuse for my liking. B side is preferable. Jean Jacques relates the cautionary tale of Ozymandias in his best withering 'Olivier plays Henry V' voice. Mind you, we won hands down at Agincourt. Jolly good show, what? Talking of which...

TELEPHONE: Hygiaphone (Pathe). Sacre bleu! Some of Burnel's compatriots putting the lie to the accepted near truth that there's no such thing as a decent French rock band. Jean-Louis Aubert and his cronies in Telephone inject a healthy shot of rhythm and blues Chuck-style into this intriguingly christened swipe at English acceptance. I can't understand their gripe — must be a gripe in there somewhere — but the rest of the message is electronically perfect. The Frog always did love a good, simple rock & roll band. With this lot and Shakin' Street they just came up with two of their own. Well done. I

SINGLES

Invasion Of The Vinyl Snatchers

We have come for your 45s still can't believe that a Scotsman invented the telephone.

THE BEE GEES: Love You Inside Out (RSO). And it certainly wasn't an Australian. The Sisters Gibb are in a remarkable hurry to follow 'Tragedy' (you said it) up the charts. The kinky but dreary 'Love You Inside Out' is the usual fail-safe formula — chintzy strings, dreary slushy melody you could teach a

Robert Gordon can reckon on fooling everyone into believing it's relevant today. The Richard Gottelher (Blondie) sound means that the effects are all sleek, it's just Gordon's delivery that doesn't work. Simply, the man sounds silly. No offence. Robert, but you make me laugh. The voice is mannered and warped to a level where any feeling is utterly killed. Try 'Rock Billy Boogie' for a real chortler. Heady stuff.

INNER CIRCLE: Stop Breaking My Heart (Island). TWINKLE BROS: Keep On Trying (Virgin Front Line). Inner Circle remind me of Bachman Turner Overdrive, fat men making tin noises. While it's possible to applaud any effort that attempts to bring reggae to Babylon, there's no excuse for watering the rhythms down so bad that your layman is left unmoved. Inner Circle are sitting on a style but they don't have any. This rudimentary, bass riff disco allied to a steal from 'Everlastin' Love' fails to win credibility in any market, least of all my feet.

Twinkle Bros, on the other hand, aren't about to jump on a bandwagon. Their record is seductive and serious, benefits from a swirling Norman Grant production that keeps the beat moody, and whets the appetite for 'Praise Jah', out any time now.

DEADLY TOYS: EP (Bonnaud/Hunt). Two out of four for Deadly Toys. The plusses are for being among the most charming of the English releases this week. 'Dooms Day' is particularly fetching, muted British psychedelia that links evocative lyrics ('bout London during the impending floods) to an unassuming tune; it's growing on me by the minute. 'Don't Mess Around' is similarly engaging, flirts with dub, but hardly so as you'd notice. Deadly Toys keep a low profile throughout, no writing credits and no fancy cover, but they can't hide an intense talent.

MAX BELL has too much to dream this week

parrot and the coup de grace, those revolting emasculated shrieks, hammering out their idiot refrains with subliminal frequency. Real insincere, uncool jerks.

GARY GLITTER: Superhero (GTO). This is more like it. The man who single-handed discovered new wave and pioneered avant garde 'new glam'. Yes, the man who insisted on disco's human face is back. We're talking about Gary Glitter, ladies and gentlemen, I think you know who I mean. The thin line between Donna Summer and The Human League, the missing link between Clark Kent and a very bad sinus condition. This stalwart never needed no Butfworker and how we floored to touch him (Parts 1 and 2).

Another immense spoof — with Glitter in better form on the other side, 'Sleeping Beauty'. Mike Leander production. Nuff said.

ROBERT GORDON: It's Only Make Believe (RCA). This was of course a hit for Twitty and Nance (or was it Twitt and Nancery) as far back as 1958 so

GARY NUMAN of Tubeway Army says nail polish is back

GARY RECORDS (all four of 'em) deny it

GARY GLITTER says 'I'm Back!' Wot, again?

NICK PLYTAS: Johnny Runaway (Do R). The ex-Roogalator keyboards man, later to work with Lone Lovich, Clash and TRB, makes his own debut in sprightly fashion assisted by some Sinceros and an ace guitarist. Mark Kjeldsen. Pyltas' subject is diametrically opposed to 'David Watts' but the delivery is humorous enough to avoid any other derogatory interpretation. White boys play reggae again, and they can, with shades of a nod at J King's 'Johnny Reggae'. I reckon that the Bot Scaggs chanted flip, 'Your Dream Is A Daydream', would have stood a better chance at chart success. Classy record.

BAR-KAYS: Holy Ghost (Stax). Hardly Stax soul as we might like to remember it. The Bar-Kays have become adept at vamping moderate funk but generally forget to add the best. Fans of Parliament and the Isleys could check on the musical elements while everyone else shuffles off to the bog.

JERRY LEE LEWIS: Hello Josephine (Charly). From the 'Duets' LP on Sun. Rock and roll buffs the world over are at this minute arguing the toss as to whether that really is Elvis singin' along with the 'Killer'. John Hutson from the East Kent Times replies in the affirmative and who am I to disagree? Whatever the identity of the masked man, this single dates back to 1960 or '61, a time when Lewis, Presley, Johnny Cash and Carl Perkins recorded as the Million Dollar Quartet (RCA are holding back the tapes). The Fats Domino song is treated to a rebellious, boozy rendition and the B side does better with Ray Charles's 'What'd I Say'. Neither of them are at their peak but fascinating listening if you like solving mysteries.

ANGELIC UPSTARTS: I'm An Upstart (WEA). The notorious Angelic Upstarts debut in the big time with a surprisingly feeble slice of manic noise dressed up as the usual 'I'm bored-I'm a social misfit' truism. There's an absolutely heavy metal backing too, Virginia. Jimmy Pursey's attitude to the havoc his charges will undoubtedly cause (have already caused) puts me in mind of the line, 'I love animals... that's why I kill them'. Sounds like a pretty antique, rabble rousing din.

THIRD RAIL: It's Over Now (Spoonfed). We noticed out there, they all looked the same. That's Richard Nolan's staggering insight into English rock circa 1979. Having taken offence at Angelic Upstarts brand of hysterical mumbling I must say that this kind of knuckle tapping — from Boston U.S.A. at that — is more irritating. Third Rail are never going to mean a snuffed candle outside the East Coast, and they know it. Chief Car mechanic Ric Ocasek plays the board straight but Nolan and chums aren't going nowhere. Blue vinyl too! We are catching on fast, aren't we?

THE WIMPS: Hamburger Radio EP (Sniff). The Wimps come on like died in the wool reactionary misogynists from Golders Green but a few spins reveal that 'neath their outer covering of cynicism, hatred and clumsy pastiche lies a heart of gold. They love schoolgirls, McDonald's and power pop nostalgia, the little cutie pies. AME gets a rather back-handed name-check, as does a girl called Caroline. Alluring stupidity.

1967 OR THEREABOUTS

THE ELECTRIC PRUNES: I Had Too Much To Dream Last Night (Radar).

THE JEFFERSON AIRPLANE: White Rabbit (RCA). ZAGER AND EVANS: In The Year 2525 (Exordium & Terminus) (RCA). The difference between Radar and

Continues over

ENO MUSIC FOR AIRPORTS ON AMBIENT RECORDS

Ambient Music must be able to accommodate many levels of listening attention without enforcing one in particular; it must be as ignorable as it is interesting.

From previous page

just about every other record company in the world is that the former realise that packaging properly, with artistic flair and taste, is as much a part of record buying as the final vinyl (almost). The re-released Prunes classic is a mouth-watering prospect on all fronts, an acid punk piece de resistance, shimmering from the top of Jim Lowe's autoharp right down to the toes of Kenneth Williams' backwards guitar (immortalised in the film Carry On Backwards). Preston Ritter woke up the turn in one of the great psycho drum performances, perfectly attuned to the horrors of sleeping apart from the one you love. Fresh as a daisy.

J.A. are represented in RCA's welcome but drably marketed Golden Oldies series (the title alone puts you off). The two compositions are Grace Slick at an early best.

One is the interpretation of Lewis Carroll so beloved by the genus Hippy i.e. that Alice took a funny little tablet and was thus in 'Wonderland'.

'Somebody To Love' is another Airplane anthem of twelve years vintage. How the mighty have fallen.

Zeger and Evans got in on the fog and of psychodelia when everyone was suffering from 'acid casualty' paranoia. They exploited the absence of what we neuro-surgeons call the 'brain' in the same manner that Sonny and Cher exploited folk-rock. It worked, they got rich. Clever sods.

ROGER C. REALE & RUE MORGUE: Stop And Go (London)

YANKEES: Take It Like A Man (London)

THE SCRATCH BAND: Rock 'n' Roll Love Letter (London). Decca discover the '70s — at least the American new wave, as represented in London.

signings from Big Sound, the sound of Connecticut.

Roger C. Reale (geddit?) is the pick of this bunch with a track or two from the

YET MORE SINGLES

commended 'Radio Active' album. He can be equal parts fast, funny, deft and deft, and manages to sound authentically punk but isn't just stopping there. Naturally, London have lifted one of the worst cuts on the LP so I'll say a brief hill to the B side, a cover of the omnipotent C. Berry's 'Dear Dad' (1.36). Hill

The Yankees are the Big Sound house band, led by ex-Alex Chilton sidekick and former rock writer Jon Tiven. Their 'High 'n' Inside' long playing disc makes more sense in total than anything taken off at random. This is no exception — an energetic but disappointing thrash. Chilton freaks who can't afford the whole thing could get it for the flip, another version of 'Take Me Home And Make Me Like It' (marginally better than the original).

The Scratch Band are quick off the mark, covering the single of the week even as I was lifting off the needle and heading for the sin-bin. Pity that their version only promises. Still, it remains a great song (you'd hardly expect me to have changed my mind already would you?). The most interesting artist on Big Sound is a geezer called Tommy Hoehn, London haven't taken up his British Option. Just thought I'd tell you.

MANDRAKE ROOTE: Babop Junkie (Treehouse). They brought this one into the office themselves, eager lads. As Danny Baker noted last week, there is a problem in reviewing an independently produced artefact which may well be the pride and joy of all involved — especially when you don't happen to like the end result. It's a professional outing but the band seem unsure where their direction lies, using certain R&B flavoured nuances to strained effect on a Babop song effect. This is more apparent on the B-side, a plodding instrumental which doesn't benefit from a lacklustre mix. Mandrake Roote may have something better inside, but as yet they don't induce strange visions in my cerebral cortex. Will they shriek when they read this?

DWIGHT TWILLEY: Out Of My Hands (Shelter). From the new album, imaginatively called 'Twilley', I love Dwight's music but he isn't making the commercial headway he deserves. Now vital sidekick Phil Seymour has upped and left via 20/20 and solo prospects. Still, this is prime Twilley, enigmatic, luscious, sexy. The weepy, balladeer strings are fine and the song has the charisma to suggest that Dwight is hoping some established luminary will pick up on his back catalogue and give him the leg up he so badly needs. I urge you to buy this, knowing that you won't. He looks remarkably like Jim Morrison too. Good record. Good image.

BATTERED WIVES: Uganda Stamp (Bomp Idi Bomp) (Bomb)

ROBERT SEGARINI: Don't Believe A Word I Say (Bomb). Two Canadian releases on the Bomb (not Bomp) label. Battered Wives are a fairly undistinguished crossover punk band. In other words they weren't punks until it became mandatory. Idi Amin is an easy target who has already been properly stitched up by Reggie Knighton with his 'VD Got To Idi'. The Wives album is energetically satisfying but this single makes no impression.

Segarini is a curious figure, forever flitting across the hinterland of potential outdoom made good. With Roxy Family Tree, Wackers and Oudes he could be relied upon to titillate, yet his comeback with Bomb, 'Gotta Have Pop', is anything but what it pretends to be. Awful doo-wop is spiced ham-fisted against a heavy-handed attempt at wit that falls flat on its face. The flip side is a passable re-make of 'People Are Strange' (Segarini's chief claim to fame being that he used to drink with Jim). I prefer the original. Several million times in fact.

DESTROY ALL MONSTERS: Xanadu EP (Xanadu). Destroy All Monsters are the infamous Detroit metal band formed from the embers of the Stooges and MC5. This is their second hard-to-find EP. Ron Asheton and Michael Davis have quit since 1977, leaving the original work force somewhat depleted in style and kick. Cary Loren, Larry and Ben Miller roar along alright without 'em however, injecting some Chromesque weirdness into 'Back Out In The City'. The rest is standard sub-Stooges with Iggy circa 1969 vocal inflexion. Not essential but worth hunting out if the mentioned strata of underground Americana appeals.

THE AURORA PUSHUPS: Angels On Runway 1 (Pop Up). Let's hear it for the San Francisco new wave 'cos it's great. Aurora Pushups have laid claim to name of the week and share curiosity value with Deadly Toys. Their sound is beautifully synthesised Tommy James and Tommy Roe meet The Pop (L.A. band). This lot understand the radio, breathe in hot rock and roll fire. 'Angels' is totally baffling but the flip, 'Victims Of Terrorism' is frighteningly clear, and funny. Mussorgsky with a guitar.

TUBEWAY ARMY: Down In The Park (Beggars Banquet). Not to be confused with The Clovers' 'Down In The Alley' but just as spooky. Gary Numan's Tubeway Army may be besotted with the eerie subterranean wastelands of Burgess and Bowie but they can keep a spectre alive. If this don't make you look over your shoulder in horrified disbelief then you're a better man than I am gunga din. Waough...

中國
CHINA

中國

VANGELIS

His New Album for Polydor

THE BRIDGE BETWEEN EAST AND WEST

First live appearance for 5 years. Theatre Royal, Drury Lane Sunday 22nd April

The BEACH BOYS

New Album
New Cassette

'L.A. (Light Album)'

Featuring the hit single 'Here Comes The Night'

Innovative and adventurous, "L.A. (Light Album)" is a new chapter in the living legend of The Beach Boys.

Album: CRB 85081, Cassette: 40-85081

Capitol Records

IT HAS TAKEN Johnny Winter all of ten years to arrive right back where he first started out: blowin' the blues for a living around the clubs.

Winter's present low-key profile shouldn't be misconstrued as a fall from grace. By his own volition Winter has turned his back on the stadiums to return to basics. As a result, he's amused rather than resentful whenever an inquisitive bar-fly shuffles up to him between sets and enquires "Hey, ma'an, didn't you used to be Johnny Winter, huh?"

The club circuit, Winter insists, "is the place that I've always wanted to be all the time. Trouble is, nobody would ever believe me!"

The Winter tale is one of rock's greatest ironies — and only his determination and strength of character have prevented it from degenerating into a tragedy replete with epitaph.

On the strength of just one feature in a 1968 edition of Rolling Stone, the Texas-born guitarist was plucked from a decade of working in almost total obscurity and placed upon the auction block. For a time it appeared as though the entire American recording industry was obsessed with out-bidding itself to secure the guitarist's services. CBS eventually shutdown the opposition, making quite a commotion of the fact they'd guaranteed Winter the biggest-ever advance for an unknown signing.

Henceforth Winter was reduced to the status of product, being unscrupulously promoted by his benefactors as America's deterrent to the seemingly unstoppable British guitar-hero axis spearheaded by Clapton, Beck, Page, Lee and token American expatriate Jimi Hendrix.

"I wasn't looking for all that," says Winter, still chilled at the memory. "Sure, I knew I was a damn good guitar player, but all that I was doing was performing my version of regular blues. What all those other guys were doing was blues rock."

"We were just a funky blues trio with a totally different concept. Unfortunately, few people ever realised it."

Basist Tommy Shannon and drummer John Turner survived two albums before being replaced by the McCoy's, a move that coincided with a drastic swing towards a more extreme rock stance and Winter's elevation as a personality.

Despite having tried to stay true to his beliefs, Winter now admits that as his first two CBS albums hadn't cut it with the blues crowd, he had no option but to transform himself into a regular guitar-hero stereotype. "I was just binging my head against a wall, because the rock'n'rollers cared more about what I was doing than the blues fans."

The next couple of years proved to be a nightmare for the kid from Beaumont. The more popular he became, the more he was forced to compromise his values. In the end, he was sacrificing content for style.

"I was made extremely aware that the show was all-important. At first I didn't wanna believe it, but it was proved to me that if I went out there and jumped around and acted real crazy, the crowd would go apeshit."

"It got to the point where I do believe that people thought that as I've got long white hair all I had to do was shake it to make a living. People around me would say, 'See what the kids want, they really don't care if you play good guitar.' It was like the people around me saying, 'And we don't care either, just get out there and drive everyone crazy.'"

"And all I ever wanted to be was plain ol' Johnny Winter, but nobody would help me."

THE WHOLE bizarre masterplan quickly backfired. Suddenly, Johnny Winter became inaccessible. Even though my long-standing relationship with the guitarist went far beyond a professional level, all attempts to contact him were systematically blocked. Furthermore, the press were informed that all interviews were vetoed unless a cover story / centre spread deal was guaranteed. NME was just one of many publications to reject such an ultimatum.

Then it became known that Winter was being overworked to the point where he had no option but to shoot

JOHNNY WINTER

Pic: PENNIE SMITH

White Face Pink Eyes White Hair Blues Guitar

... Sweet Johnny Winter — from blues to white powders and back to blues again. ROY CARR charts a '70s sob-story with a happy ending smack to complete the most horrendous tour schedules.

Surprisingly, he is able to discuss that period of his career without becoming over-emotional.

"Well, to begin with, most managers think that artists are expendable, and that they're crazy and temperamental people anyway. Like, they don't know what's good for their career."

"My management didn't want me to take drugs, but it came to the point where I was compelled to take them if I had any hope of getting through a show."

"In one way they cared about my welfare, but at the same time they kept on trying to convince me that I needed to be that big, that I needed to be a gigantic rock'n'roll star and that I needed to work as hard as I was being forced to work."

"Nobody believed me when I complained that it was killing me and that it was making me dreadfully unhappy. All that they would say was 'we're working for your best interests'. Well, you don't feel like some big rock star when you've got your head stuck down the toilet."

Within two years of his being thrust into the limelight, enough was enough. Winter had come to the realisation that, at the age of 27, not only his career, but even more important, his life was one great disaster area.

"It was like searching for the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, only to discover that when you get there, it's full of shit."

He prepared himself for what seemed the inevitable escape clause.

"I'd reached the state where I was either gonna die or I'd have to kill myself. I was that unhappy. In fact, I actually went back to Texas to see my parents and tell them goodbye."

"I was so unhappy and so messed up on drugs that I couldn't see no other way to make things better. I didn't wanna die, but I couldn't continue to live the way I was... people telling me 'Johnny, it was to be this way!' — when all along I knew it didn't have to be this way, but nobody was prepared to help me except myself."

Attempts to go cold turkey would fail within a couple of weeks.

"I'd feel so ill, I'd take something just to feel fine for a few hours."

Nevertheless, the idea of being addicted for the rest of his life disgusted him and in one last desperate effort he checked into the River Oaks Clinic in New Orleans.

"I decided to stay there until I either felt better about the whole thing or until I decided that it was never gonna work out right. If the latter was the case, I'd check out and kill myself quietly. Take an O.D. and hope it would be better later."

For the next twelve months, Winter remained under the strict supervision of the River Oaks medical staff. His self-imposed isolation makes One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest look like The Good Life.

"There were kids who had absolutely no right being in there in the first place," states the former inmate. "Kids who'd either just smoked a couple of joints or some 16-year-old runaway who'd got herself pregnant and been shoved in there by their rich parents as being problem kids. At the other extreme, there were the total basket-cases who didn't know where the hell they were and just shit all over the floor."

Fortunately Winter kicked his habit and, against all odds, retained his sanity through the help of a sympathetic doctor who also taught him to become self-sufficient.

"At the time I checked into River Oaks, I had been totally dehumanised by the music business. I was a human jukebox — just stick a quarter in my ear. Nobody wanted to know me for myself, I was just some money-making product called

Johnny Winter.

"Nevertheless, I showed both myself and other people that I was capable of doing other things than just play guitar and therefore I wasn't scared that I might have to take a job outside of music."

IF UPON his recovery, Winter's career needed renovating, so did that of legendary blues avatar Muddy Waters.

Having been with Chess Records for the best part of 30 years, the great man had more or less been put out to graze when the label was bought out by All-Platinum.

From the outset, both parties were aware that they were placing their mutual careers on the line.

Most people had assumed that Muddy Waters had long since called his best shots, whilst Winter knew that as his first two CBS albums had failed to gain him the patronage of the blues purists, there was a distinct possibility that this partnership could just as easily alienate those who still held an image of him as the Rock'n'Roll Hoochie Koo Man.

"Not only that," he points out, "the blues people could have hated it as well. Though perhaps not too many people realise it, it was as much a gamble for me as it was for Muddy."

However, both artists had instilled one another with such confidence and sense of purpose that, had the enterprise flopped, there would have been no recriminations on either side.

Recorded live in Dan Hartman's studio in just two and a half days, their initial collaboration 'Hard Again' not only proved to be both a critical and commercial success, but earned the participants a coveted Grammy Award: a feat Waters was to repeat upon the release of his second Winter-produced album, 'I'm Ready'.

At a time when the blues were distinctly unfashionable, not only had Waters 'n' Winter demonstrated the power of the blues as a contemporary force but the project had also enabled Winter to fulfil his ambition and invest in his future.

"People told me that going back into the clubs and playing blues was not only unpractical but commercial suicide. Well, I saw that it worked for Muddy and as such wasn't impossible. See, it depends upon how badly you wanna do something."

For the first time in his professional career Johnny Winter is fuelled with natural, as opposed to artificial, energy.

"You know, working with Muddy has changed my entire outlook on life. See, I'm doing what I want to do without anyone putting pressures on me to conform to an image people expect."

"It's a real nice feeling to realise that your career no longer stands on the success of your last record. As far as I'm concerned, a hit record is just the icing on the cake."

"For so many musicians, it's super-important to be the biggest, and that was never my main priority. I've tried it and it ain't glamorous. It ain't nothing but hard work and the only thing that can ever make it worthwhile is loving what you're doing. Well, I sure as hell didn't enjoy what I was doing and I wouldn't go through that trip again for anything."

"I would have had it like this ten years ago, if only those people who claimed they were working in my interest had been prepared to listen. The only thing that counts is your happiness and your self-respect and only now have I been able to achieve this."

"Before that, it was like, this whole thing ain't working out the way we planned... maybe we're all supposed to self-destruct after five years like Jimi and Janis. I was the lucky one, I found out that this was not true."

"I only wish Jimi and Janis and, in particular, Al Wilson had realised that. Yer know, I hate that sonovabitch Al Wilson for dying, 'cause he was the real blues pioneer of the '60s... the one guy I really wanted in my group. I really needed him."

Johnny Winter brings his new, white hot and blue blues to London for the entire first week in May, sporting a new trio consisting of Bobby Torello (drums) and Jon Paris (bass) and that crazy cross-eyed Albino boy from Beaumont Texas on guitar and vocals. Don't miss out.

This weekend's the time for a bit of heart-searching.

Bob Welch

The man who gives you Three Hearts

The new album 'THREE HEARTS' from BOB WELCH, features CHRISTINE McVIE, MICK FLEETWOOD & STEVIE NICKS.

12 great tracks including a rock arrangement of LENNON & McCARTNEY'S 'I Saw Her

EST 11907

Standing There' and the superb current single 'PRECIOUS LOVE' – all add up to his best album ever.

on  records and tapes

Above: SHADES.
Below: Jerry Sikorski of THE ROCKABILLY REBELS and Graham Fenton of MATCHBOX.

Left: The Best Dressed Ted. Below: more Teds. Centre: blittopper RAY CAMPI. All pix by GRAHAM BARKER

THE SHAPE OF THINGS TO COME?

CLIFF WHITE checks out a new concept in festivals

TELL ME about a weekend music festival in Britain that was all fun and frolic on a sun-kissed hillside and I'll tell you you've been dead lucky. Coz most festivals I've attended have been three days of purgatory in a sea of mud and rancid yoghurt, peering through driving sleet at a distant stage where the musical efforts of anonymous specks were blown out to sea by unforecast gales.

Not for nothing has the 10-year-old cry "Wally!" become synonymous with the ultimate in nambuccullery. Dunno why it's taken so long for some bright spark to come up with the next best thing to a controllable climate but, in case it's escaped your attention, 1979 is turning out to be the year of the weekend music festival without pneumonia.

The answer? Those relics of the pre-cheap-flight-to-Majorca days, the hostels of many a teenage deflowerment: holidays camps. Or to be precise, at the time of writing, one particular camp: Caister Holiday Centre, Great Yarmouth.

Last month this chalet town precariously strewn about the edge of one of our most exposed coastal plains housed the very first encamped music fest, with 3,000 cats bopped the blues to the tune of nine live acts and three rock 'n' roll discos simultaneously alternating (think about it) in two on-site venues for the best part of three days. In short, 'A Rock 'n' Roll Weekend Hop'.

In a couple of weeks there'll be a second music orgy at the same camp, this one for the disco/soul clan, and so successful was the first effort that another rock 'n' roll weekend has already been booked for after the regular holiday period in November. I can readily testify that the first rock 'n' roll weekend was a helluva fine party — if only by the fact that it's taken me this long to recover and write about it.

The wild weekenders have been organised by Showstopper Promotions (Adrian Webb, John Morris, Roger Dance) in conjunction with Ladbrokes, who own the holiday camp. Torn between the welcome prospect of some unexpected off-peak trade and the possible folly of allowing drunken, rock-crazed hordes on to their property, several camp owners dithered or turned the idea down flat until Ladbrokes, appropriately, decided to take a chance.

As it turned out they're well chuffed by events, as were the camp staff ("These rockers are generally better behaved than the people we get here in the summer," said a matronly bar lady), the local police (conspicuous by their absence), the small squad of hired security bods (an uncommonly civil crew) and, of course, the promoters — who'd never before attempted anything quite so grand, although they've been promoting rock 'n' roll gigs a while now, most notably at the Southgate Royalty.

They'd originally planned the Caister R&R Hop as a low-key, trial-run for the forthcoming soul weekend, deliberately restricting advertising about the event to circulars in rock 'n' roll clubs and magazines with the idea of attracting about 1,000 punters, "just to get the feel of the thing."

They misjudged the response by a long chalk. Within five or six weeks of the first announcements going out the camp was all but fully booked (save for an emergency reserve block), not only from all over Britain but from pockets of rockers around Europe and even including, so rumour had it, a couple who flew over from The States.

Any road, what of the gig itself? First, for the scandal mongers, the final score on the shock-horror sheet: two brief punch-ups in the main dance hall on Saturday evening; two chalets trashed in the early hours of Sunday morning. No more friction that you usually get when a couple of hundred bloods rub egos for a few hours, let alone when 3,000 party hearty for three days.

The entertainment took place in two contrasting venues at opposite ends of the camp: The Holiday Inn, a low-ceilinged, dimly-lit bar-cum-club-room with a small dance floor and a couple of temporary stages — a funky dive — and Neptune's Palace, a largish Mecca-style dance hall with a permanent seating, bars and perimeter seating — a hop ballroom that couldn't have been bettered for rock 'n' roll.

By devious quirks of fate / time / disorganisation on my part I never did get to see Gina And The Rockin' Rebels, The Riot Rockers or Freddy 'Fingers' Lee. But of the rest, Flying Saucers and Ray Campi And His Rockabilly Rebels played solid, unsensational sets, Shades and Crazy Cavan 'n' The Rhythm Rockers peaked highest on the yell-o-meter (both groups attracting large mobs of staunch supporters to the event), while Jets and Matchbox were, for me, the most interesting groups — for exactly opposite reasons.

No chickens, Matchbox are in danger of getting trapped within the faithful but limited rock 'n' roll circuit if they don't soon break out, but of all the contenders their polished versatility currently makes them The Band Most Likely To.

Jets, on the other hand, are youthfully ragged, a little light-weight and rather too fond of the 'authentic' slap-bass sound (which only works well when appropriately miked) to yet make a big impression, but they're remarkably able for 13-16 year olds. Time is on their side.

American Campi was naturally billed as the star attraction. An English teacher by trade, he once cut some country / rockabilly sides about 20 years ago and has now 'come back' with a much younger bend for vacational gigs and new recordings. On The Town recently: hard workers with a sharp sense of rockin' theatrics (that occasionally borders on pastiche), they're musically comparable with most of the British bands.

Shades look as if they've been kicking around since Hank Marvin was ousting Bert Weedon from top rating as World's Leading Guitarist and suddenly find themselves back in fashion. Their version of 'Apache' was faithfully detailed, right down to the footwork. Still, they're not all twang and shuffle. With a musically more varied repertoire than most (pop to rock to rockabilly) and a raunchy sex player in their line-up, they went down a treat with flagon or two of ale.

That's the main thing about all these groups; about rock 'n' roll in general. The fact of the matter is, YA SHOULD BIN THERE.

No better example than Crazy Cavan and the boys. They're unattractive as a wet night in Wigan and well past the point in their career when they might have broken big, yet one of the most memorable hours of a memorable weekend was down at The Holiday Inn dive with Cavan's crew breaking their balls for a hopped-up mob of boppers and stompers. It may have partly been the beer. It may have partly been the sense of occasion. But it sure as hell was rock 'n' roll.

The disco / soul fraternity who'll be descending on Caister on April 20 will have to go some to have as much fun as the rockers WITH A MINIMUM AMOUNT OF AGGRO. Is that a challenge or is that a challenge???

LIFE IN TOKYO.

An incredible track just recorded by Japan. Available in 7" and 12" red vinyl versions, in limited edition picture bags.

See Japan live at the Rainbow on Thursday 12th of April, the final date of Japan's successful world tour

VISIT JAPAN AT THE RAINBOW, THURSDAY 12TH OF APRIL.

Life in Tokyo.

mods

1. The Young Mod's Forgotten Story

By PENNY REEL

IN THE BEGINNING — or so the story goes — there are only three real mods, and one of these is flecking Lea Davis's brother.

Mind you, it is Lea Davis himself who first puts this about in general currency, which means it is not necessarily true, as it is known locally and wide that Lea Davis is more than somewhat fond of his brother, whose name is Wayne, and who is said to have the best collection of Jimmy Witherspoon records in London.

Personally, I always consider that Lea Davis is a real mod, but he assures me this is not the case, so I reserve judgement and buy a collarless brown cord Pierre Cardin jacket in Harry Fentons and wear it on a Saturday afternoon idling expedition along Whitechapel Road, which is where I run into Charlie Steiger and Yonker Malcolm Chiswick out searching for this Ben E King LP that is supposedly on sale in some shop in Mile End — this being around the time when Ben E King LPs are as rare as albino negroes in this man's town, or even rarer.

Well, I stand there with Charlie Steiger and Yonker Malcolm Chiswick for some time, talking of this and that, until Charlie Steiger suggests that the three of us might just as agreeably carry our conversation to Tower Hill and at the same time amuse ourselves in the extraction of enjoyment out of the parishes and prophets, nomads, seers, racing tipsters and other lusus naturae who regularly and often congregate there, such as Derrick and Pilgrim, Fascist Frankie, Moshe Bagels, Prince Honolulu, Big Jesus, Born Again, and many other wondrous and colourful characters, this being a long-established favourite pastime of Charlie Steiger and Yonker Malcolm Chiswick, and indeed of many other citizens as well.

So here am I standing on Tower Hill in the company of Charlie Steiger and Yonker Malcolm Chiswick, discussing the relative merits of Shep and The Limelites, heckling Fascist Frankie, and joining the evangelist Born Again in a loud, lusty rendition of 'Whist I Was Sleeping Somebody Touched My Soul', when who should come into view brushing an imaginary speck of dust from his mohair and doing the Continental Walk, but flecking Lennie Tyler.

Now this Lennie Tyler is probably the most clothes-conscious guy I ever meet in my whole life, although you wouldn't really be aware of it just to look at him, as he is conservative to the extreme in his mode of dress. In fact, Lennie Tyler is a very conservative guy all round.

Unlike most of the guys you see about in these times, Lennie Tyler shuns the sartorial fripperies of fashionable emporiums such as Conicks Young Esq. in the Kingsland Waist and Gaylords of Shaftesbury Avenue, preferring instead to cultivate business acquaintance with old-fashioned gents outfitters in the City and arcane tailors along Pentonville Road for his wardrobe, or at least so he always claims. Personally, I walk down Pentonville Road on many occasions, but I never see any tailors down there, arcane or otherwise.

Furthermore, Lennie Tyler is a very intense and temperamental character, much disposed to extended bouts of broody, sulky silence, even in gay, lively places like Tottenham Lido and The Royal and especially in the latter. The general consensus of opinion is that Lennie Tyler is somewhat neurotic, and probably more than somewhat.

On this occasion of which I am speaking, he is dressed casually in a simple midnight blue mohair suit, a dazzling white Fred Perry jersey shirt and wearing narrow fitting black Chelsea shoes with a slight suggestion of a chisel point on his feet.

Now Lennie Tyler is an old friend of mine, and in fact I sometimes go around to his house to listen to his Jack Jones records and ogle his younger sister, Lennie Tyler having a very pretty younger sister, so I give him a big hello, and he stops and the following conversation ensues:

"How is it going with you, Len?" I say to Lennie Tyler, although of course I do not really care one sou how it is going with him, "It's not too often we see you down Tower Hill of a Saturday afternoon."

"So who flecking reckons himself in his new collarless brown cord Pierre Cardin jacket that he more than likely bought in Harry Fentons?" Lennie Tyler says, referring to me in the third person, such as is a common mannerism of his. "And who flecking reckons himself in his matelot flares and the Courtney brothers tread warily, and where he keeps the company of some very dangerous parties indeed. Some of these parties, such as Crazy Danny Rushton and Buster Boulter, are from Shoreditch, and several are from Hoxton, including Stanley Churchill and Big Sandra O'Sullivan, who even though a girl is at least as formidable a fighting proposition as any of her companions, especially when she starts scratching, and others are from Hackney Wick and London Fields and Haggerston, and none of these parties are any concession at any time.

Of all Lea Davis's regular associates, however, there is one who achieves singular notoriety in this town, and this is a guy by the name of Beardy Pegley.

Standing less than five feet tall in his high heel Chelsea Boots, Beardy Pegley is a brawny, red-complexioned youth with gingerish hair and beard, shaggy red eyebrows, heavily-freckled face and hands, bronze-green eyes, a full sensuous mouth, and an all-round generally hireute appearance. He lives in a turning off Victoria Park Road and is only slightly less well-respected in the district than the Krays, this being at the peak of the twins' East End rule.

Around 1965, Beardy Pegley gets his mug in the national dailies when he leads a gang of mods to the amusement arcade in Mare Street, draws a John Roscoe on rockers autocrat Buttons Walsh, and shoots at him three times in the chest, apparently as retribution for Buttons Walsh's superior winning ways with the female sex.

The upshot of this is that Buttons Walsh gets a free ride to Hackney Hospital, where he wakes up close to death, and Beardy Pegley is sent to prison to repent his evil ways. Later, a fully-recovered Buttons Walsh goes on to become commander-in-chief of the UK Hell's Angels, and ends up alongside Flann O'Brien, Damon Runyon, and Anita Loos in Picador Books, who publish his autobiography Buttons in the '70s.

When I know him, Beardy Pegley is already fully embarked on his profligate and primrose path, though at this time he doesn't possess a gun, but gets by fine with a flick knife, a rubber cash, and one of the most exquisite collections of knuckle-dusters I ever see.

Moreover, Beardy Pegley is celebrated among the leading lights of the local modernist movement, and indeed is one of its most progressive and original elements. Unlike Lennie Tyler and Lea Davis, however, Beardy Pegley positively revels in his role as mod notability, and conducts himself in a manner that would even have put Dion DiMucci's lady love Donna in the shade.

Not only is he the first guy I ever see wear hair lacquer and lipstick, but he is also the earliest on the scene with a pink tab-collar shirt, a grey crew neck jersey, knitted tie, scarlet suede jacket with matching leather collar, navy blue crombie overcoat, white half-mast flares, and candy-stripe socks, as well as being the first mod to sing the praises of Laurel Aitken, James Brown, The Pretty Things, the Flamingo Club in Wardour Street, Lawrence Ferlinghetti and marijuana, insult Eden Kane in the Chez Don, and is still the only guy I ever meet who owns a pair of bright emerald green fur booties, all this circa 1962.

Now I am a guy that keeps pretty much his own counsel, and rarely talks to anyone at all, so even though I see Beardy Pegley around and about for some considerable while, and recognise him at that, I do not feel any particular compunction to introduce myself, and besides I figure he shares a similar attitude, since we never get around the exchanging even the most perfunctory of nods, until one night I am sitting in Stamford Hill bowling-alley sipping a Pepsi-Cola and thinking about slightly less than nothing when Beardy Pegley comes over to where I am sitting, orders a coffee, and says to me like this:

"I hear you reckon Solomon Burke as being keen," says Beardy Pegley. "So do I."

Now, of course, I do not feel inclined to ask Beardy Pegley how he comes by this information of my feelings for Solomon Burke, as he will probably think I want to know, so I merely nod my assent and say I think 'Cry To Me' is one of the best records I ever hear.

"Furthermore," I say, "I think Solomon Burke is the best rhythm and blues singer I have heard since Chuck Jackson."

"You check Chuck Jackson?" Beardy Pegley exclaims. "Have you heard 'The Breaking Point' by any chance?"

"Yes," I say, "but I don't rate it nearly as highly as 'I Don't Wanna Cry', which is currently my favourite record on Top Rank, although Ulysses Samuel Bonds' 'Quarter To Three' runs it a close second."

"I like 'New Orleans' best of his," Beardy Pegley says, "although 'Not Me' was pretty keen, too. You ever heard of The Pastel Six?"

"Of 'Cinnamon Cinder' fame," I

Gaylords tab collar shirt? Who's a little mod boy, then?"

"But, Len", I say, "You are also a mod."

"Listen son," Lennie Tyler says, "there are only three real mods, and one of these is flecking Lea Davis's brother."

NEVER get to personally meet Lea Davis's brother, although I do see him on one occasion, hanging out by the pinball tables in the Schtip on Stamford Hill and listening to Fats Domino records. Schtip being a more than somewhat yiddish word used to describe the prodigal waste of money, and with its rows upon rows of gleaming pinball machines, one arm bandits, and a juke box containing some 50 rhythm and blues records, the Schtip offering more than ample opportunity for Lea Davis's brother to do as much, in spite of the fact that Lea Davis's brother is not in the least bit yiddish at all.

Nevertheless, although I cannot honestly claim any acquaintanceship with Lea Davis's brother, I am on reasonably chatty terms with Lea Davis himself, and in fact one time recommend a hair lotion to him, Lea Davis being slightly obsessed with fears of premature baldness, and seeking my counsel on the subject. Seeing as Lea Davis never shows any sign of premature baldness in all the time I know him, I assume that he takes my advice about the hair lotion. Whatever, Lea Davis always gives me a large hello whenever we meet, and I am extremely careful to respond in a like manner.

Now Lea Davis is very modernistic in his outlook and dress, and is in fact the first person to turn up in Dalston's Chez Don club wearing a brown bri-nylon mackintosh, although he discards it the following week when Grocer Peter Bendon arrives wearing a raiment of identical design.

Furthermore, Lea Davis hangs around Wolverton Mountain, west of the Wall in Morning Lane, an area of local infamy, where even say, "How about The Desifinados?"

Young dudes exhibit Madras, Levis, hand-made vents, pose.

"You mean 'Mister Dillon' on HMV," says Beady Pagley. "Same label as 'Imagination' by The Quotations."

"Bit too second-rate Marceles for my liking," I say. "How about proper rhythm and blues, Bo Diddley, Hank Ballard..."

"Little Walter, Jimmy McCracklin, Howling Wolf," Beady Pagley says. "Tell me one more thing, do you know about Blue Beat?"

"I've got 'Too Much Whisky' by Errol Dixon," I say, "and also 'Gypsy Woman' by Derrick and Patsy, which is on this new Blue Beat label called Island. But I don't really know very much about it — I mean one of them are American hits or Record Mirror new releases or anything."

"Yeah," Beady Pagley says, "I know. I've also got this record on Island, 'King Of Kings' by Jimmy Cliff. I don't know what it's all about, but it's great. You know something," he adds, "Lea Davis is right about you, you're a clever little bastard, and too cocky for your own good, but you're an okay guy."

"I mean, you reckon Solomon Burke," Beady Pagley says.

THE maiden wave of modernist youth emerges out of the East End and Essex some time around 1960, as reaction in style against the coffee-bar cowboy definition of check shirts, striped drainpipe trousers, winklepicker shoes, Tony Curtis hair styles, Marino Marini records on the Durium label, and Old Compton Street in Soho. In short, against all things that men like Jack Good and Tommy Steele hold dearest to their hearts — men like Jack Good and Tommy Steele representing total anathema to the emergent mod movement.

Precursors of the new look wear their hair cut short in the French style, back-combed, and with a centre parting. They dress in severe, clerical shirts of simple design, with detachable stiff white collars, navy-blue or grey terylene trousers tapered to a baggy 14 inches sans turn-ups, black round-toed shoes, preferably with a patent leather tip, carry umbrellas and LPs of the soundtrack from On The Waterfront, smoke Sobranie cigarettes, and put their hands in their back-pockets, Betty Davis style.

At first, these are very rare and wonderful people, such as you might see no more than half a dozen, and probably not even that, on a Sunday morning saunter along Middlesex Street and Club Row markets, mods having an unusual predilection for Middlesex Street and Club Row markets, and later Barwick Street market in the West End.

By late 1962, the ranks of the modernist has swelled considerably to embrace the greater element of stylish working class youth in London and the suburbs, some still at school, but the majority of them ensconced as City clerks, working in shipping and insurance offices for the most part, for reasons that are never entirely clear.

It is around this same time that the more marked and outrageous constituents generally associated with the movement come into clearer focus, including the wearing of anoraks, crumple overcoats and G-macs, paisley and polka-dot giraffe neck shirts and pink tab-collar ones, the baseball jerseys and the inevitable crew necks, Blue Beat hats and leather triblys, suede jackets, suede ties, suede cardigans and suede shoes, brightly coloured pants worn at half mast to display scarlet socks to their fullest advantage, the obscure blues albums, Prince Buster singles, and modern French literature. It is also the same time as the word mod replaces the earlier definition of modernist; and that pep pills become a way of life, of endless night. And it is also the same time that The Beatles break into the hit parade with 'Love Me Do'.

MOD boys hate Beatle boys. Mod boys hate Beatle boys almost as much as they hate Rockers, and they positively detest The Rolling Stones.

Mod boys hate The Beatles because John, Paul, George and Ringo replace themselves in mod girls' affections, and also because the group are from Liverpool, and therefore rate as provincial louts. They detest The Rolling Stones because The Rolling Stones are dirty, undesirable, long-haired art school beatniks who rip off riffs from mod heroes such as Benny Spellman and Arthur Alexander, because Mick Jagger has a pair of lips that just bage a mod fist, and because Brian Jones looks like a woman, or even worse an aesthete, but most of all mods detest The Rolling Stones because the Stones are minor images of themselves, but who seem to be doing something with their lives that the majority of mods wish they had thought of first.

On one memorable occasion a crowd of over one hundred mods on scooters arrive at the television studios of Ready, Steady, Go with the declared intention of sorting out the four Beatles, who are at the time recording a session inside, and it is only the quick-witted presence of a policeman on a white horse...

Sometimes mod aggression is put to positive use, like when Sir Oswald Mosely attempts a comeback speech in the East End and sets up a meeting in Ridley Road market on the platform of Jewish landorism and black vermin overrunning the country, whereby a united front of local mods and taxi-drivers hound the former Cabinet minister and his attendant pusillanimous blackshirts from the streets, never to return henceforth.

Mostly, however, a considerable part of the inclusive mod lifestyle is determined in the pursuit of aimless recklessness, occasionally of a violent nature, eventually culminating in the clashes with Rocker youth at Clacton over Easter Bank Holiday weekend in 1964, and the subsequent Whitsun re-runs at Brighton and Margate.

Four years from its inception, the national press finally encounters the mod phenomenon with its teeth bared, and the general public wakes up to find its very existence threatened by the menace of "polluted hordes of long-haired, mentally unstable, petty little hoodlums, these sawdust Caesars who can only find courage like rats, in hunting in packs" — as the magistrate at Margate modestly puts it — only to be eclipsed in turn by the subsequent menace of hippies, skinheads, Hells Angels, football hooligans, Rastafarians and punks.

WHAT IS never explained in the national press, or anywhere else for that matter, is that what Easter Sunday 1964 most properly signifies is the spiritual death of the mod fraternity in this man's town, even though the term lingers on for a number of years afterwards, mostly as an exploitative term for the more glib of its adherents by commercial enterprises such as the rag trade centred about Carnaby Street, pop groups like The Small Faces and The Who, discotheques such as Tiles and Le Poubelle of Frith Street, and manufacturers of dextrine tablets in the back streets of Earls Court — reaching its zenith with the totally spurious fabrication of Swinging London by Time-Life journalists.

From conception, the modernists are a self-generating body of single-minded individuals, to whom any glib categorisation is of fatal error. After Clacton, a great number of the original mods are quick to disassociate themselves from the stigmatisation thrust on them by sensation-seeking apologists dealing in the medium of mass hysteria, even to the point of discarding their wardrobes in favour of black corduroy jackets, Levi jeans, and hanging around the London folk scene drinking endless cups of coffee and discussing Art with a capital A. A few even cross the Channel to France, where they disappear into the oblivion of unknown Paris bistros in search of the lost horizons of the Existentialists, all of whom have long departed to Mexico.

Nevertheless, there does remain some activity in London to excite the less critical mods of the period, and these include the Wednesday night ska and Friday night Georgie Fame sessions at the Flamingo, an ever-growing exodus of bona-fide rhythm and blues artists to these shores, and the fact that Monday morning brings about the inevitable prospect of Fenchurch Street small death perspicuity.

The Scene Club in Ham Yard is justly recognised as the mecca for second-generation mods during this time, and even though the innovative serendipity and edgy frenzy of pre-Clacton days is gone forever, Guy Stevens' forward disco of R&B, Motown, and ska classics provides some defiant solace in the declining twilight of the era.

Down the scene, a disillusioned mod has been of 16 can still witness the kaleidoscopic vagaries of fashion as they change from week to week, check the familiar faces as they flit past his vision in unceasing parade, and keep in step with all the latest dances imported from the US and Jamaica, in fine style.

Even though most mods do not dance as such, preferring to stand in small, sullen groups twitching from side to side, there are always some uncool people who will dance anywhere, at any time, and particularly to Baba Brooks shuffle instrumentals.

One such couple is a regular attraction at the Scene, and excite much comment and admiration in the club for their urbane ability to maintain an impressive track record of always being one step ahead of everybody else in their clothes and dancing, which they always contrive to practice with cosmopolitan expertise.

When anybody else is still struggling to learn the correct way of doing the Locomotion, this couple are already mastering the Fish, and by the time the rest of London finally catches up with the Swim, they are already well advanced in accomplishment of the Watutsi Wobble.

ONE memorable night in 1965 this same pair arrive at the Scene Club both dressed in exotic Tibetan smocks, with Indian silk scarves affixed to their wrists, sandals on their bare feet, wooden beads around their necks, daisies in their hair, and looking for all the world like, as one observer puts it, two flecking gypsies.

They proceed to tell anyone who will listen that love is all what really matters, although of course Marvin Gaye has already got the first premium on this sentiment, and then proceed to ask the gathered congregation whether or not they have assimilated the psychedelic experience.

Mind you, Lennie Tyler anticipates all this a few years previous. One time I ask him the direction in which he thinks the mod movement is likely to go, and he replies that everybody is going to be dressing like flecking beatniks in the not too distant future. "Although, personally," Lennie Tyler says, "I'm just going to get myself an immaculate black mac and white shirt, and stand around on street corners looking smart."

QUADS? QUODS?

Who are they and how do you spell it? ADRIAN THRILLS looks at the sounds and styles of Modrophenia '79

"Every time you walk down Oxford Street these days, you see one more bloke wearing a parka."
Billy H. The Chords.

"In the last few years, everything has come back — skins, teds, rockabilly — and the mod thing is the last to make a real comeback. So it's got to be the one with a real chance of staying."
Bob, 18, Bethnal Green mod.

"Mod is not just what you look like. It's what goes on in your head. It's more an attitude than anything else. But the mods you're getting now are '79 mods. They're not trying to revive anything."
Clive, Enfield mod fanzine editor.

YOU SEE them at Jam gigs, or maybe just sniffing out a pair of Doctor Marten's or some ex-army threads in a surplus store. You'll soon be noting the multiplying numbers of scooters on runs down to the south coast resorts: check the loafers, white socks, sta-prests, two-button jackets, Fred Perry and Slazenger shirts...

All of a sudden — over the past 12 months — there seem to be all these sharply-dressed, short-haired kids in baggy dark green parkas, more often than not carpeted in badges, stickers, tassels, patches, iron-on transfers, or chalked-on slogans.

This time last year we were in the middle of a small-scale grass-roots rockabilly revival. This year: M-O-D!

Just what we needed, eh? Another revival, another movement with all the blinkered narrow-mindedness and gang battles that Another Movement usually entails...

However, something — as they say — is most definitely in the air.

No-one seems to know precisely what it signifies. Few people seem to have any idea of what is going to become of it. But it is happening, albeit on a minor scale as yet.

And — unlike the powerpop hype of 12 months back which was generated in the minds of the media and the sweaty palms of cash-hungry A&R men — this year's 'ting (oops!) is coming from the roots upwards.

There haven't been as many gigs advertised almost solely by word of mouth or — at best — a couple of hundred Xeroxed handbills since the embryonic days of punk.

The effectiveness of the rootsy DIY enthusiasm that characterises Mod '79 was illustrated recently when The Chords — one of the capital's leading nouveau mod groups — played their fortnightly Saturday residency at The Wellington, in Waterloo.

The tiny bar was sardined to the light fittings by parka-clad hordes.

Which brings us to the bands, a rough list of which is as long as Brighton beach itself. There's Purple Hearts and The Cobras from Romford, the aforementioned Chords from Deptford, The Fixations from Holloway, The Merton Parkas from — oh yes! — Merton Park, Captain Scarlet And The Mysterons from Elm Park, The Scooters from Enfield / Coventry / Southend (take your pick), Long Tall Shorty and Chicane from Brighton, The Low Numbers from Camden Town, The Estimators from Tottenham, Secret Affair from Ilford, The Ricky Tics from Nottingham,

The Vespas from Watford, The Points, French Blues, The Teenbeats, Detours, Back To Zero, The Golden Faces...

Most are unknown quantities. A fair number are doomed to obscurity. But the best — three of which are featured later on in this piece — are definitely worthy of your attention as good bands in their own right, irrespective of 'the mod thing'.

Many of them are prone to continually changing those wonderfully evocative names, the trouble with mod monikers being that demand is already starting to outstrip the limited supply.

Thus The Low Numbers were until recently The Two Tones, and before that The Camden Town Action. Long Tall Shorty used to be The Indicators, Captain Scarlet etc were formerly The Sharp Set, and Secret Affair sprang from the ashes of the dreaded New Hearts.

Get the picture? Don't bother. It's probably already changed!

"It's a neat scene at the moment, but that's partly 'cos it's on a really small scale. Once it gets big you won't know where you are."

"At the moment most of the kids we know are mods. Like, if you see someone at a gig and they're a mod you'll go up and talk to them because of that."

"There's a type of comradeship like in the early days of punk."
Paul, 17, Swiss Cottage mod.

THE FIRST thing you need to know about what could all-too-easily get tagged as no more than just The New Mod Sound is that, strictly speaking, there isn't one.

There is nothing that'll change the world or revolutionise rock as we know it. There are no extravagant claims made, and none to fulfil.

That said, the current mod scenario is more than an unnecessary anachronism — it fits as healthily into the late '70s scheme as The Gang Of Four, The Members and Public Image Ltd.

Just realise that and we should be okay.

What does exist, here and now, is a plethora of bands each identifying themselves to some degree with various aspects of '80s youth culture.

The current crop of groups will readily doff their tiffers and acknowledge their respect for the flavour of '60s mod. Just as vigorously they will emphasise their hard-headed, post-punk characteristics. But to assume that none of the bands listed above have any individual character or anything original and contemporary to offer would be cynical and inaccurate.

Indeed, The Chords, say, are as different from The Purple Hearts as the Sex Pistols were from The Clash 30 months ago.

Naturally, there is intense rivalry — always a healthy sign — and this often spills over into bitchiness: The Fixations claim The Scooters are trying too hard to revive the 'arty' aspects of '60s modism and The Chords stupidly slag off The Purple Hearts for occasionally doing 'London's Burning' as an encore.

In the main, however, there's a spirit of camaraderie that again harks back to the halcyon 100 Club days of The Clash and Pistols.

But the bands are not having it all their own way.

Already the first fanzine of the modwave

Reconstructions of the mod lifestyle from The Who's forthcoming 'Quadrophenia' movie. Above: blood and bluebeat hats. Below Life on an LI.

has emerged: Maximum Speed.

Run by three Enfield mods and edited by Clive — one of the fans whose comments form the framework of this article — Maximum Speed features band reviews plus a collage of old pictures, including the inevitable beach fights.

Interestingly, the three scribblers who produce it have also started promoting their own gigs, the first of which was a mini-festival in Enfield boasting four groups — The Purple Hearts, The Fixations, The Scooters and Back To Zero — backed by a bluebeat, ska and mottown disco. And all for 50 pence!

A clear-cut case of someone doing the right deed for the right reasons at the right price.

Inevitably, entrepreneurs are beginning to get hip to the trip that there's lucre in dem dem loafers and exploiting this healthy, refreshingly rootsy, naive confused 'scene' for what they can.

'Jam' jackets are already selling at £35 a throw in the Carnaby Cavern around the corner from NME Central, sta-prests are available at £18 in the Kings Road and the classified pages of the music papers are steadily filling with ads for ex-NATO parkas.

And just try counting the A&R men at the bar should you happen to chance upon a Purple Hearts gig. So it goes.

Just where it's heading we should know by summer, with the general release of the Quadrophenia film and mod centre page spreads in all the tabloids.

"Most of the girls who go to the mod gigs with us wear pretty much the same clothes as the blokes. The main reason you don't see many girls dressed as mods is just that there's been no publicity about what they're supposed to wear."

"Unlike the blokes, they've had no-one to model themselves on. I suppose the only person in the last few years has been Faye Fife really... she dressed it although she never actually came out and said that she was a mod."

"Another thing is that most of the bands in London are too concerned with trying to look right as mods in terms of dress."

"Most of the best bands are from the suburbs — places like Enfield and Romford."
Tony, 19, Wembley mod.

THE PURPLE HEARTS, regarded by many as the best, hail from Romford in Essex.

They formed in 1977 playing spirited punk as Robbie Ratchett — not Jack Plug! — And The Sockets, before heisting their present name from the back of a Small Faces album.

Bob Manton, their restive, volatile vocalist, says the mod affiliation came about through their disillusionment with what had become of punk.

"We just wanted to do something other than punk. We didn't ever quite fit into the punk thing and I personally got disillusioned with it pretty quickly."

The Chords from Deptford. Pic: Mike Laye

The Fixations from North London. Pic: Stevenson

The Purple Hearts from Romford. Pic: Mike Laye

"We were naive enough to think punk was going to change the world.

"At one stage we just knocked the band on the head for about a month or so 'cos we got so fed up. But then we reckoned that if we did give up it would just be admitting defeat.

"The thing is, when we got back together, we didn't have to radically change any of our ideas. We always did want to play this type of music.

"It was just that we hadn't been technically able to play it up until now. No-one's going to believe us, but we've been into the mod thing for five years.

"Even when we played The Roxy as The Sockets, we were doing 'Whatcha Gonna Do About It'.

"To us there's much more to it than just mod and the mod revival. We are playing this sort of music at the moment and we'll still be playing it this time next year when the present mod revival thing has blown over.

"Personally, I can only see this current mod thing lasting six months. Maybe a year. The trouble is there are too many people trying to revive it exactly as it was then, going out and buying scooters and all that."

If The Sockets were, in Bob's words, "punk taken to its logical conclusion — no song had more than three chords", then the Hearts are never anything less than competent and classy, with guitarist Simon Stebbing's feedback-ridden haywire raunch well to the fore.

They cover three oldies — The Monkees' 'Steppin' Stone', David Bowie And The Lower Third's 'Can't Help Thinking About Me' and wicked Wilson Pickett's gut-wrenching 'If You Need Me'. But it's the eight originals that make up the bulk of their live set that leave no doubts as to what decade Purple Hearts are living in.

"It's a fact that none of our songs could have been written in 1965," emphasises drummer Gary Sparks.

"It would be narrowminded of us to say that we're a mod band, fullstop, and that we only play mod music. We get a total mixture at our gigs. There's punks, skins and mods.

"Our music is pop music. We're a pop group. My influences are obviously Stax stuff and '60s pop. But even now we're still influenced by punk, especially early Clash and things like that.

"On the first Clash album they were talking about things that actually meant something in the everyday lives of people like us. On the second album, it's all this world politics shit.

"We don't want to recreate and revive the '60s mod thing. The spirit of the original punk bands is living on in groups like us."

The Purple Hearts, still in their late teens like most of their contemporaries, are also quite a wacky bunch, particularly prone to extravagantly verbose, tongue-in-cheek classifications of their music.

Bassist Jeff (year, just Jeff) describes their epic single-to-be, 'Jimmy', thus:

"It's not about Quedrophonia for a start, which is what everyone's going to say. It's just about the frustrations of a kid who gets pushed around at school.

"It's a Pop - Art - Teen - Confusion - Anthem!"

The last word goes to Bob Manton:

"The Purple Hearts are the gap between Newton's Third Law and Einstein's Theory of the toilet seat!"

"I got into The Jam, I used to wear a suit when I first started going to see them and I just took it from there."

Gary, 17 Puddington mod.

THE CHORDS are perhaps more readily identifiable as A Mod Band than The Purple Hearts. Visually they look the part — all Rickenbackers, neat suits and '60s flesh. My main musical reservation is the similarity of some of their songs to pieces on The Jam's first album.

But there are plenty of London mods prepared to vouch that they're far and away the best, technically, of the bands to emerge in the past year or so.

The Chords talk passionately and articulately, particularly when faced with criticism. Vocalist Billy H — who plays exactly the same guitar as Paul Weller — puts it this way.

"If there is a similarity in the sound, it's not because I'm trying to copy Weller. I just find the Rickenbacker very easy to play. My fingers are really small and that guitar has a really slim neck. It's as simple as that.

"Our music comes from the same roots as The Jam — blues and soul — but we don't want to end up sounding like them.

"We don't look like them. Lyrically, we're nothing like them."

The Chords got together in Deptford last August when Billy H met lead guitarist Chris Pope and bassist Martin Mason. Drummer Brett Ascot is a more recent recruit.

They rehearsed for months on a diet consisting largely of old Sam And Dave classics, but only started gigging seriously this year.

Their current set still features Sam And Dave's 'Hold On I'm Coming' alongside the obligatory Who, Small Faces and Beatles numbers as well as half-a-dozen originals penned by Pope.

"We're likely to get labelled as no more than just another mod band," opines the guitarist, realistically aware of the backlash that's always just around the corner.

"But if we're strong enough we'll pull through. If we're good enough to play strong gigs and produce strong records, then we'll be able to stand up after this current mod thing, no matter what image we portray.

"If not then we deserve to die.

"The mod thing is like a natural progression from punk. Hopefully it's strong enough to progress on into the '80s. We want to do something better than mod achieved in the '60s. It died a death before it ever reached its natural conclusion."

So how will The Chords develop it?

"Well, being a four-piece we've got more of a chance to do exactly what we want live than, say, The Jam. Onstage The Jam always do numbers exactly the same way as on record. It's perfect and it's cold.

"What we want onstage and on record is a much more improvised sound. Something that gives us more of a chance to be more versatile visually and musically, gives our individual personalities more of a chance to shine through.

"I think that the mod bands coming out now are actually better technically than the bands that were forming in 1976."

The Chords were last seen recording demos of their three best songs — 'Now It's Gone', 'Maybe Tomorrow', and 'Dream Dolls' — for JP Records.

"Mod is the sort of thing that should be accessible to everyone. Even the disco kids. The soul boys will be into it for the smooth image."

Bob, 18 Bethnal Green mod.

THE FIXATIONS, unlike both The Chords and The Purple Hearts, play all their own material — yet were not as impressive when I saw them recently supporting Berni Torme and The Nips at Acklam Hall.

I admired their spirit — it takes guts to play wittily and with enthusiasm in front of two dozen disinterested faces — but any appreciation of their musical finesse was jaunted by a truly dire sound and the instrumental shambles that resulted.

However, as singer Paul Cattin points out, "what the mod bands need at the moment is the chance to grow. The scene is healthy — although we all know that it wouldn't be here if it hadn't been for the new wave."

Cattin was turned on to mod by an elder brother, claims not to have missed a Who gig in London since 1970, but sees himself and the band categorically in post-punk terms.

He formed The Fixations with guitarist Paul Cathcart, drummer Ken Gamby and Bassist Richard Sharpe over two years ago in North London, although they have only been playing consistently for the last six months.

"The real equivalent of the '60s mods in today's youth culture are the soul boys," he tells me after the Acklam debacle. "It's important to realise that the mods of today are all '79 mods."

"I'm not into it for the fighting. It's the smartness, the camaraderie, the fact that the mods were the first youth group ever to actually start thinking about things in the '60s, start questioning things."

I turn to guitarist Cathcart — obviously the thinker of the band — and enquire innocently what mod means to him. His reply is short, instant and sweet.

"We're arguing about exactly what it means all the time."

ALL INCLUSIVE DEMOS

£200 WILL BUY:

- 1) A DEMO OF 4 SONGS
Recorded in West End studio or live

PLUS

- 2) 200 EP CASSETTES
Of the demo ideal for sale at gigs or sending to record companies

OR

£150 ALL INCLUSIVE

Will buy an all in package demo

FOR FURTHER DETAILS CONTACT:

nemone

Sound Facilities Limited,
O'Arday House,
10 Poland Street, London W1

Tel: 01-439 9611

Wipe that smile off your face

THE DAMNED are back!!

Love Song / Noise Noise Noise / Suicide out soon!!

Chris
CHS 112

On tour - see gig guide for details

The New Tribalism, part 17: a Chord fan's Parks.

Pic: Mike Lave

SILVER SCREEN

Spiderman's coming to getcha — again and again

It's The Wiz. It's The Wazz. It's The School Holidays Razzamatazz

Easter means fun for everyone — even for Mrs Whitehouse

The Wiz

Directed by Sidney Lumet
Starring Diana Ross,
Michael Jackson and Richard Pryor
(CIC)

The most expensive musical ever, The Wiz must also be one of the least satisfactory. The millions of dollars it cost (provided mostly by Motown) have been lavished on peripheral production values, leaving a gaping void at the centre. Why, one wonders, did anyone ever consider this such a good idea in the first place?

It's a film version of a Broadway show, which shifted the original Wizard Of Oz (which I've never seen) from Kansas to New York. In movie terms, this means that when Dorothy (Diana Ross) is swept up from the stability of her home environment by a white tornado and deposited in a huge bowl of cornflakes in Munchkinland, she finds herself in a steely, urbanised desert. She proceeds to gather her companions — the Scarecrow (Michael Jackson), the Tin Man (Nipsey Russell) and the Cowardly Lion (Ted Ross, no relation) — and all go off together to meet the Wiz (Richard Pryor).

In fairness, it would be wrong to suggest that the inflated expenditure had been a complete waste of time. The costumes are dazzling and inventive, while the sets are lavish and spacious, providing the cast of thousands with ample room for manoeuvre. There is, in short, usually something on which to feast the eye.

Neither is there any particular problem with the casting. There was much fuss over the choice of Ms Ross (actually she chose herself), who is a generation older than Judy Garland had been when she made the part famous. But Diana always was waif-like, and with her hair cut short au naturel, can practically pass as a teenager.

Although the innocence of the part is something she is hardly able to convey, she does approach the role with uncharacteristic restraint. Not a single costume change in the entire two-and-a-quarter hours — surely an act of forbearance that deserves a Jimmy Carter award for conserving resources in the face of monumental usuriousness.

Michael Jackson is superb, giving a performance of charm and exuberance. He was only 19 at the time of filming, and is almost unrecognisable underneath what must have been a particularly unpleasant make-up job (more like plastic surgery), but he's clearly the one person whose career The Wiz looks set to enhance.

The rest is bad news. I suppose the greatest let-down, this being a musical 'en' all, is the music. Well orchestrated by Quincy Jones and expertly played by all the usual famous session names, undoubtedly, but what about the songs? That slice of barely-memorable routine boogie called 'Ease On Down The Road' hardly cut a swathe through the charts, and yet that's the show's standout number; everything else is instantly forgettable. Perhaps it illustrates only too well the current impoverishment of that genre we used to call 'soul'.

Joel Schumacher's screenplay is relentlessly dull. The language oscillates uncomfortably between black 'jive talkin'' of the kind Pryor usually handles brilliantly (though he gets scant opportunity here) and the mundane stuff we whites can understand.

It's that sort of miscegenation that's the root of the problem. There's one subway scene where the urban paranoia and the fairy-tale successfully mesh. Otherwise, the general distaste of uncontrollable urbanisation that The Wiz seems to want to communicate is never properly reconciled with the sentimental homilies of the original.

Sidney Lumet has directed some of my favourite films (Dog Day Afternoon, sure), but here he never gives the impression that he clearly understood what he was trying to achieve.

Bob Woffinden

The Thief Of Baghdad

Starring Roddy McDowall,
Kabir Bedi and Peter
Ustinov
Directed by Clive Donner
(Columbia)

Spider-Man Strikes Back

Starring Nicholas
Hammond
Directed by Ron Saito
(Columbia)

You'll believe a carpet can fly. Battered by Blue Collar, disoriented by Eraserhead, wanting to feel like a kid again, and enmeshed in a Turkish delight of an Arabian Nights-style fantasy-farce like The Thief Of Baghdad paired up with an awful made-for-TV Spider-Man movie that makes the old Batman TV show look like a more expensive version of the Superman movie... on a rainy Saturday afternoon, all the pieces fall into place.

The Thief Of Baghdad is stolen by a trio of Old Masters and a sparing but excellent use of special effects. Terence Stamp's stone-faced, even-voiced Wazir is as quietly sinister a villain as any imaginative child could desire. Peter Ustinov's pompous, bumbling Caliph is a charming tour de force and Frank Finlay's stoical holy man just screams moral courage.

Genre pop out of bottles, the heroes get high on rugs (you'll love the travelling mate, dear) and the whole thing is set in a glowing fantasy landscape that could almost house Conan and Red Sonja. Soft-core mysticism, sword-fights, a wimpy but

THE MOVIE! THE MUSIC! THE ALBUM!

Double soundtrack album including booklet and poster

MCSF 287

featuring the hit single

'Ease on Down the Road' by Diana Ross & Michael Jackson
plus

'You Can't Win' by Michael Jackson

AVAILABLE NOW

MCA RECORDS

1 Great Portland Street, London W1R 3JW

THE FILM NOW SHOWING ON EXCLUSIVE RUN.
DOMINION, TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD, LONDON. 01-580 9562. ALL SEATS BOOKABLE.

"Those fools think it's easy to act in stuff like this."
Peter Ustinov points the way to Baghdad, studio-style

"You put your right leg in, your left leg out..." Diane does The Wiz (left) while Spidey puts his best foot forward.

indomitable hero with a charmingly corrupt aide... it's been a long time since anybody made a movie more suited to watching while eating ice-cream.

Spider-Man Strikes Back could fool the unwary into thinking that it was written by a committee consisting of two gorillas, a chimpanzee and a stuffed elk, whereas the script was in fact the work of something called a Robert Janes.

It's still fun to see Spidey running up and down walls, but I don't recognise these people impersonating my childhood companions Peter Parker and J. Jonah Jameson (Parker's too stupid and Jameson's too nice).

A piece of fluff involving stolen plutonium and a newspaperwoman seeking an interview with Spider-Man, the best moments are a fudicrous parody of a chase sequence and JoAnne Cameron looking stunning in a white bikini (Where do you think you are? Time Out? — Ed.).

Made on a budget of almost fourpence by people who obviously don't care about the special magic that made the Spider-Man comic book so successful and influential, this only emphasises the amount of love (as well as money) that went into the Superman movie. It's sad that Stan Lee is prepared to allow Marvel's flagship character to be debased in such a tacky movie. If Spider-Man really does strike back, Janes and director Ron Satloff will find themselves suspended over a pondful of piranhas by slowly dissolving strands of thin but unbelievably strong webbing.

Charles Shaar Murray

SUPERMAN
THE MOVIE

You'll believe a man can fly.

ALEXANDER SALKIND PRESENTS MARLON BRANDO • GENE HACKMAN IN A RICHARD DONNER FILM

SUPERMAN

STARRING: CHRISTOPHER REEVE • NED BENTLEY • JACKIE COOPER • GLENN FORD • TREVOR HOWARD
MARGOT KIDDER • VALERIE PERRINE • MARIA SCHELL • TERENCE STAMP • PHYLLIS THAXTER • SUSANNAH YORK
STORY BY MARIO PUZO • SCREENPLAY BY MARIO PUZO, DAVID NEWMAN, LESLIE NEWMAN AND ROBERT BENTON

CREATIVE CONSULTANT: TOM MANNIEWICZ • DIRECTOR OF PHOTOGRAPHY: GEOFFREY UNSWORTH B.S.C.
PRODUCTION DESIGNER: JOHN BARRY • MUSIC BY: JOHN WILLIAMS • EXECUTIVE PRODUCER: ILYA SALKIND • PRODUCED BY: PIERRE SPENGLER
DIRECTED BY: RICHARD DONNER • PANAVISION • TECHNICOLOR • AN ALEXANDER AND ILYA SALKIND PRODUCTION

Warning: Contains Material That May Be Offensive to Some Audiences. (TV-14) (Some Material May Be Offensive to Some Audiences) (R) (Some Material May Be Offensive to Some Audiences)

STILL SHOWING

WARNER WEST END 2 ABC ABC
LEICESTER SQUARE 439 0791 (Fully Air Conditioned) SHAFTESBURY AVE 836 8851 FULHAM ROAD 370 2636

AND ALL OVER LONDON FROM SUNDAY AT SELECTED ABC's & OTHER IMPORTANT CINEMAS

NICE SLEEVE — NO SPECIAL VINYL

THE NEWBORN

AT — THE CHELSEA — NIGHTCLUB

ALSO AVAILABLE ON ALBUM V 2120
NEW CASSETTE

HUGE TOUR

APRIL 18	YORK	Pho Club
19	SHEFFIELD	Live Club
20	CAMBRIDGE	Cam Exchange
21	DUDLEY	J&K
22	NOTTINGHAM	Jackie's Dry, Super
23	BRIMINGHAM	Darwin's
24	NEARBY	Stamming
25	POPE BLUNT	Trouble
26	DEERE	University
27	LONDON	Lynum
28	LEEDS	Polystyrene
29	MANCHESTER	Pho Club
30	LIVERPOOL	Pho Club
1	DUMFRIES	Stamming
2	EDINBURGH	Stamming
3	WALLEY	Pho Club
4	ROUTHAMPTON	Lafayette
5	REDF	University
6	GUILDFORD	Pho Club
7	PURMOUTH	Pho Club
8	BREXIT	Lafayette
9	WROTHAM	Pho Club
10	PORTSMOUTH	Pho Club
11	NOTTINGHAM	Pho Club
12	NORTH HAMPTON	Pho Club
13	WEST ALTON	Pho Club
14	SCARBOROUGH	Pho Club
15	MEDFORD	Pho Club

Virgin

ALBUMS

IAN HUNTER You're Never Alone With A Schizophrenic (Chrysalis)

'ALLO ...
Here's Ian Hunter's fourth solo album in four years, a label switch from CBS to Chrysalis, a renewal of the Ronson partnership and a pitifully pathetic example of a hero straining and waning in comfortable isolation.

Clothed in warm sweaters, soothed by a deserved but well worn reputation, Hunter has lost his bite, bitterness or motivation. His betteries have faded. At best 'You're Never Alone ...' is a charming, spacious self-parody of his solo grazing and mannered Hoople bits; at worst it's a celebration of nothing, for nothing. Ian Hunter has always celebrated. But no longer.

IT'S A MIGHTY LONG WAY DOWN ...

Hunter's first two solo albums were produced pre-punk, when times were hard and you had to take what you were given.

Naah, actually they were good — 'All American Alien Boy' was superb, the best things Hunter has done — but in these streamlined positive times such vain, defective if attractive romanticism is something of an unstable anachronism. And with this album, where he's got nothing new to say or wonder about, where the music is merely competently arranged — certainly there's nothing approaching the imagination and inspiration of the songs on 'Alien Boy' — well, it just doesn't belong.

It's about as relevant and fresh as Dana's new single. This is a travesty. The nine plain, plodding songs on this album are from someone who three years ago wrote 'Apathy 83', a rock'n'roll classic.

"There ain't no rock'n'roll no more, just the music of the rich!"

WHATEVER HAPPENED TO DIGNITY?

Hunter's third Mottless album, the Roy Thomas-Baker produced 'Overnite Angels', was so indistinguishable I can't even remember its release, which emphasises Hunter's irrelevance and how much fun we were having without him.

I'm assured, though, by an expert that this record, which sounds like Hunter yawning before doing something positive about following up 'Alien Boy', is actually a 'step in the right direction.'

THE VILLAGE PEOPLE Go West (Casablanca Import)

'Go West' is the most patriotic album since John Wayne wiped the back of his hand across his jaw and from deep within his heart drew "America, I love you."

Indeed, Village People mentor Jacques Morali wasn't shooting the breeze when he claimed that his boys represented a large cross-section of red-blooded all-American manhood.

Over the last year such stirring, chest-beating anthems as 'Macho Man', 'YMCA' and 'In The Navy' demonstrate beyond doubt that The Village People are a credit to both flag and country.

It's at times like this when, once again, America is being called upon to defend the cause of liberty, mom and apple pie, that it can heed the call-to-arms to the proud marching beat of 'In The Navy' — the greatest incentive to enlist since Gene Kelly and Frank Sinatra linked arms to sing 'Anchors Aweigh'. And it

A Once And Future Star?

One Paul Morley has reservations about
Ian 'Oonter's schizoid tendencies. So does the other.

By CHRIS HORLER

Something to get excited about, I suppose.

Hunter was probably in a predicament concerning the form of this record — whether to adapt to the directives of the times (which could have been interesting but he would probably have been shot to pieces) or to continue his way.

He's continued his own way, ignoring the obvious obstacle that he long ago exhausted the tricks of his musical trade. Theoretically, he's played safe/boiled, whichever way you want to look at it, tried to go for the throat as well as the mind. By using Bruce Springsteen's rhythm section Roy Bittan (piano), Gary Tallant (bass), Max Weinberg (drums) plus people like Ronson and John Cale — to strengthen the music, to give it 'contemporary' penetration.

But, of course, no fire, no smoke. It doesn't work. How could it? The songs are played clean and carefully — not even a hint of power or depth. IT AIN'T EASY WHEN YOU FALL

There's nothing intrinsically terrible about the record. It has unintentional appeal.

But just a glance at the song titles (and the album title!) clues you to the creative redundancy: 'Just Another Night' (written with Ronson and the corniest, Dylanest and best cut on the record by default), 'Wild East', 'Cleveland Rocks', 'Ship', 'When The Daylight Comes', 'Life After Death', 'Standin' in My Light', 'Bastard', and 'The Outsider'. All these songs are shockingly ordinary and obvious.

Only from Hunter is there any belief in what is going on, and even he more often than not sounds like he's cleaning his nails.

It was when I got to 'Life After Death' — Hunter stupidly whimpering at the beginning and end 'is there life, is there life after death ...' like he's poorly parodying Perry or something — that the full extent of the damage hit me. Ian Hunter has lost sense of his own reality — any reality — and spends the entire record wandering about playing what he hopes are the expected games.

Every moment of every song echoes something he's already done, the lyrics clumsy caricatures of his past flirtations, fun moralising.

Is it possible not to smile at the Dylanisms, the Mottisms, the old classic lurch and bounce — reduced here to a limp and a raise of the eyebrows — that demand to be taken seriously? The slow, sorrowful ballads? Almost, but not quite.

'Ship' repeats the appalling line 'When two ships pass in the night' and sounds like John Lydon singing Elton John, 'Death be my mistress'. 'Is the first line of 'The Outsider', which is unfortunately closer to the pomp of David Essex than the pride of 'The Journey' or the honesty of 'Ballad of Mott'. There's no sign of a self-mocking grin. No longer can you smile with Hunter — not even at him. Just at ... memories.

Oh bloody memories. ... I tell you, a few years ago when I felt down I always used to play 'Sea Diver' ('And I'm just a sea diver lost in space'), but these days I play 'Heater Skelter' ('When I get to the bottom I go back to the top').

At the end of the '70s Ian Hunter is surplus to requirements, where once he was crucial. It doesn't have to be that way.

Paul Morley

points out: "I know that money, honey, always makes you smile/You like to eat out, meet out, party for awhile." The American woman knows her place.

It's albums like this and citizens like The Village People who have made America what it is today.

Roy Carr

INNER CIRCLE Everything Is Great (Island)

Can Jamaicans sing the Discos? Is cross-over reggae a sell-out, or at least a flop-out? How big can Jacob Miller and the Lewis brothers get before they burst?

Answers in order: yes, sometimes, and a bit more yet.

Question the first: Third World have produced a bunch of finely executed singles that have cleaned up the dance floors and pop charts by virtue of the way they combine elements of black American music (crystal sharp production, cooling harmonies, disco drumming) and reggae (bass line, strong yet unorthodox melodies). More important, the fusion is relatively organic — there's nothing forced. Of course, there are people like me who'll say Third World's music is mostly bland and tedious but then that's another matter ...

Question the second: there's a crucial difference between roots reggae that makes the pop/disco charts on the strength of its inbuilt excellence — Dennis Brown's 'Money in My Pocket' and 'The Royal Rasse' — 'Unconventional People' being the two recent prime examples — and reggae which deliberately compromises its character to achieve widespread commercial success. Inner Circle being the prime culprits here I'm afraid. Scores of records that should come in the first category here are ignored by the media every month. Gregory Isaacs for Top Of The Pops, you no see't.

Question the third: back home in Jamdown Jacob and his big italic belly are recognised as a bit of a lad and more end are enjoyed appropriately. As a solo artist he's had a lot of success with his stutter, infectious personality and rousing singalongs like 'Natty No Live In A Tenement Yard', 'Tired Fe Lick Weed In A Bush', 'All Night Till Day Light' and others. Besides, Jacob and Inner Circle are one of the few working road bands on the island, you can always rely on rude boy Miller to pull a stunt (Peter Tosh wasn't the only one to smoke a spliff in front of the Prime Minister at last year's Peace Concert), and 'cho', the man can sing.

But still, the Jamaican music bit have watched through three years and two Capitol albums as Inner Circle have reached frantically for acceptance in the rock market and seen them achieve little artistically or commercially.

Enter Disco and Third World's success, enter Island Records, enter 'Everything Is Great', a wallowing disco tune with reggae bass hook that only clods can ignore but the more discerning can still not like. Enter album of the same name: title cut plus seven tracks of the most sickly produced, most gruesome rock/disco/reggae fusion ('ing yet to reach these ears, all wrapped in a perfectly yucky cover).

This is ugly, self-conscious music, contrived, false. 'Mary Mary' is a dumb attempt to sing the herb's praises to American metal audiences. 'Roots Rock Symphony' — where none of the title's words describe the confused mishmash offered. 'Playing it' — fantasies about 'Dreads on the corner playing that disco beat' with nothing real to say to anyone. Did some jester mention 'Too Much Commercialisation of Rastafari', one of Jacob's better solo outings (for Augustus-Pablo)? Do I have to go on describing how awful this record is?

So what have Inner Circle got out of this album? Musical satisfaction? I hope not, they can do better. Dunza? I dunno. Playing to a deserted Marquee and Jacob pleading to play the UK roots circuit? Certainly. You should never have turned your back on 'em in the first place, skip.

Neil Spencer

HOLLY NEVER FADES AWAY. OFFICIAL.

Buddy — no sparing the dimes (or dollars)

BUDDY HOLLY The Complete Buddy Holly (MCA)

I suppose there's a good case to be made for living fast, dying young.

It's the stuff of all great legends. Like James Dean, Buddy Holly established his legend the hard way. Nevertheless, they were never called upon to follow themselves. In Dean's case, it took just three movies — two of which were screened posthumously. Holly (with and without The Crickets) achieved immortality with just 47 sides, 35 of which were made during an 18 month period following the success of the second recording of 'That'll Be The Day'. The remainder of Holly's recorded legacy was issued after his death on February 3rd 1959, at the age of 22.

Buddy Holly produced a series of remarkable recordings, the standard of which few artists have ever equalled. The undeniable fact is that, 20 years on they have lost none of their original vitality, which makes them much more than nostalgic curios.

As both performer and tunesmith Buddy Holly was so ahead of his time as to completely transcend vogue. If, as can be ascertained from the recent success of a TV-promoted hits compilation, his recordings possess unlimited mileage, then the actual songs themselves — in the care of other artists — regularly demonstrate that they can be successfully re-cycled on their own merits.

Practically everything that can be written about Holly — the man and his music — has been documented. And, following innumerable re-issues, the definitive Buddy Holly anthology is a reality. Painstakingly compiled by John Beecher and Malcolm Jones, the way in which this six album boxed set (accompanied by lavishly illustrated 64 page book) has been annotated, presented and packaged amounts to the most meticulously detailed tribute ever afforded a rock artist's entire work. It's by this standard that all future works must be measured.

The first five albums (complete with session details) document Buddy Holly and The Crickets' entire Decca/Brunswick / Coral output, plus the Bob Montgomery tapes. However, it's the sixth LP — 'The Elvis and The Attractions debut on the Ed Sullivan TV show, ratings soar etc.

Collector's Buddy Holly' — which is the ace up the sleeve: seven home-made demos ('Slippin' and Slidin'', 'Dearest', 'Love Is Strange', 'Peggy Sue Got Married', 'That Makes It Tough', 'Learning The Game' and 'You're The One') Holly cut with just his guitar in his New York apartment only weeks before his death — tracks which were later instrumentally over-dubbed for commercial consumption.

Next, three production jobs upon which he also participated: Ivan's (Jerry Allison) 'Real Wild Child' and 'Oh, You Beautiful Doll', Waylon Jennings' 'Jole Blon' and 'When Sin Stops' and two rare tracks Holly co-produced with Phil Everly of singer Lou Giordano warbling a Holly composition, 'Stay Close To Me' (recently covered by Mike Berry) plus Phil Everly's 'Don't Cha Know'. The remainder of the album includes Buddy beating out 'That'll Be The Day' and 'Peggy Sue' live on The Ed Sullivan Show Dec 1st 1957 — plus four interviews, including chats with Alan Freed and Dick Clark.

Never before has one been afforded the opportunity of putting any artist's entire career into such perspective. Yet, despite the (welcome) trimmings and the myth that surrounds his very name, it's the music that stands the test of time.

Elvis Presley may have given rock'n'roll its original imagery, but it was Buddy Holly and Chuck Berry that gave the music much of its durable style.

Like I said, Holly was never asked to compete with himself, whereas Chuck and Elvis did — with disastrous results.

Roy Carr

STEVE SOLAMAR Indiscreet Music / Dubious Collaborations (Object)

Steve Solamar's thoughtful and imaginative Object Label (of the Spherical type) is undoubtedly one of the healthiest and selectest of the active independent labels. The quality of their releases is unquestionable.

The bemusing 'Indiscreet Music / Dubious Collaborations', sub-titled 'A collage of improvisations in full frequency claustrophobic sound', is a questionable, indulgent assemblage of fractured, distracting traces improvised in private moments by Steve Solamar with a variety of friends — Steve Miro, Chris Gribble, Martin Fruhstick, Alan Robinson and Keith Davis.

There's 23 fumbling, rummaging, tentative and crudely trimmed selections of noise, predominately created by two or three musicians — Solamar ever present — using acoustic guitars, violins, mandolins, harmonicas, percussion, cisterns, pianos, jawharp, phono-fiddles and voices. These swift snatches of spontaneity and playful probing, these intimate musical discussions, these unrefined doodlings were recorded on tap from 1971 to 1976, and are often oddly, endearingly folk based — there's constant melody and whimsy, albeit clipped and unqualified.

The value and justification of selling such abrasively insular music — as the title cheekily implies — dubious. But it's certainly not a cynical or contemptuous ploy by the honest and objective Solamar. More, it's an innocuous, mildly irritating indulgent experiment to see how people respond — actually listenable and enjoyable enough to transcend vigorous resentment.

There is a perverse pleasure in what is nothing more than eavesdropping on a group of friends fiddling about. There is also a paradoxical idiosyncrasy in the casual audacity of a bunch of anonymous musicians releasing a record of extremely personal and rudimentary improvisations that were taped more than

Don't expect anything remotely resembling the sound of the Spherical Objects — but, maybe, continue the correspondence?

Paul Morley

MOTOR CYCLING

NEW LOOK

WIN IT The first of two chances to win a Honda CX500 in our free-entry competition.

STOP IT! Whatever your bike, you'll learn something from our disc brake strip and maintenance coverage.

FIX IT "Super Service" on how to give your Honda 250 or 400 a good going over!

RIDE IT 8-page special on touring and camping at home and abroad.

TEST The new BMW 1979 twins. Scoop — Suzuki's new 200cc bikes.

RIP-OFF? "Lead Story" susses-out the spares situation for modern machinery. Find out your manufacturer's rating!

FREE BARRY SHEENE DOUBLE-SIDED POSTER
(Maintenance chart on the back.)

Do yourself a favour — get MOTORCYCLING MAY ISSUE OUT NOW

FREE Poster of BARRY SHEENE

Road Tests: BMW 900 & 1100, Suzuki New GT200 & 500cc, Super Service: Honda CX250/400

The Champions: GRAHAM HAYES

Right: Page Biking Holiday Guide

A SPECIAL MAGAZINE FOR COUNTRY MUSIC LOVERS

COUNTRY PEOPLE

BILLIE JO SPEARS
-why did her husband make her do those things?

TAMMY WYNETTE
-living in constant fear...

JOHNNY CASH
WILLIE NELSON
CRYSTAL GAYLE
LORETTA LYNN

OLIVIA NEWTON JOHN
Miss TOO-GOOD-TO-BE-TRUE?

WHO'S THE GOD OF TEXAS?
IS OLIVIA TOO GOOD TO BE TRUE?
KING OF SKIFFLE MAKING A COME BACK?
Plus!
JOHNNY CASH, DON WILLIAMS, DOLLY PARTON, BILLIE JO SPEARS, TAMMY WYNETTE, CRYSTAL GAYLE, EDDIE RABBITT AND GRAHAM PARSONS!!

OUT NOW 80p

FREE Poster of OLIVIA NEWTON JOHN

FREE Poster of BARRY SHEENE

Road Tests: BMW 900 & 1100, Suzuki New GT200 & 500cc, Super Service: Honda CX250/400

The Champions: GRAHAM HAYES

Right: Page Biking Holiday Guide

SCORPIONS

Lovedrive (Hervest)

Tokyo Tapes (RCA)

Those who refuse to bang their heads will be taken outside and shot.

Since "blitzkrieg" is one of the most favoured metaphors used by heavy metal reviewers, it's surprising that the Germans have taken so long to assert themselves in the HM stakes.

The Scorpions are going to be the next monster metal band. It's as pre-destined as their riffs. There's nothing in the least original about their music, and that's bound to work in their favour with the nation's metallurgists.

What they do possess is the energy and confidence of an act that realises its hour of glory has finally arrived. They do their Deep Purple pastiches with great confidence, as though they'd stumbled upon some entirely new musical form and were proudly showing it off.

The 'Lovedrive' album's number one cranium crusher is 'Can't Get Enough', the side two opener, so fierce it makes Ted Nugent sound like his namesake Emily.

The HM hordes will turn out to see the Scorpions when they tour over here, partly because of their pedigree.

Rhythm guitarist Rudolf Schenker is the brother of Michel of that ilk, until recently with UFO. Michel was originally a Scorpions member, and he's back with them for a few cuts on this album. Not that he's particularly needed.

If you want to cop a cheap sample of the band's style you'd do well to invest in the earlier Tokyo Tapes double. Michel was nowhere in earshot on that one, but tracks like 'We'll Burn The Sky' and 'Suspender Love' (intellectual sort of band) are prime HM.

These guys make Generation X look like beginners.

Bob Edmonds

CAFE JACQUES

International (Epic)

Two years in the wake of their impressive debut album 'Round The Back' (they laughed in the face of fashion) comes this assertive but less distinguished offering from the luminaries of Tiffany's, Edinburgh.

Conflicting forces swarm around a slightly modified direction. Had they decided solely to consolidate the first album's individual sound — a deceptively smooth, restrained funk/rock, intense without being overbearingly complex — the narrowness of scope would have been unavoidably bland. Instead they aim for a harder-hitting, emphatically rhythmic approach, losing an appealing air of detachment (despite more suitably mystical titles) and, at times, falling foul of the pitfalls that, originally, they'd so tastefully managed to sidestep.

Mike O from Cafe Jacques: "What do they think of it so far, Joe?"

Mr Sample (right): "Beats me, Kid."

The lavish, layered textures of 'Station Of Dreams' and 'Knife Edge' are less an atmospheric sheen than a disguise for the songs' listless and uncommonly plain structures. All too often — as in their most up-beat track, 'Can't Stand Still' — the measured, precise funk element leaves their dance rhythms sounding canned and static. Perversely, it's the fact that the band never let rip that's both their most distinctive quality and their greatest limitation.

With the exception of the seductive shuffle 'How Easy', the extravagant 'Boulevard Of Broken Dreams' and the unique 'Man In The Meadow' — one of the most casual, mesmerising songs I've heard in a long while — the rest is uneven, and keeps to the thinly attractive side of unconvincing.

Cafe Jacques fit in that 'inventive, discursive and destined to be overlooked' bracket. The album that dropkicks them into another league will not be this one.

Mark Ellen

JOE SAMPLE

Carmel (ABC)

Joe Sample, perhaps best known as a member of elite group The Crusaders, is to be congratulated for continuing to create sophisticated modern jazz — non avant garde cadre — in a field populated by bubblegum charlatans and whorish funk pseudo.

'Carmel', Sample's follow up to '78's hypnotic 'Rainbow Seeker', centres around a suite of seven pieces dedicated to that stretch of Californian coastline immortalised by John Steinbeck and the producers of avocado pears. Some of the numbers were previewed by Sample as a preface to The Crusaders' patchy tour of England last autumn. The suggestion then of a relative stalemate in the group's performance — and the fairly dire Wilton Felder solo album — has not detracted from 'Carmel', which is as different to its predecessor as a bona fide Crusaders disc usually is to its ancestors.

This time Sample eschews extraneous strings. There are no strings attached, the context is a basic four piece, and the man himself concentrates on acoustic piano, a notoriously difficult instrument to mark time upon. As a result 'Carmel' is far more bouncy and effervescent than 'Rainbow Seeker', which tended towards pleasant abstraction. Sample actually attacks with a grace and joyful flair not normally experienced when he relies on the Fender Rhodes, his acoustic playing thus assuming the prominent focal space in a set-up of sympathetic dimensions (which doesn't sound like a juggle of overpaid side-men but musicians enjoying their work).

The enthusiasm for newly explored timbres and Sample's handling of specific subject matter can be heard in the title track, where a theme is suggested, picked up and elaborated upon in 'Paintings' and 'Cannery Row'. Certain phrases and elongated runs suggest Sample's obsession with a cluster of chords he's experimented with of late (notably, the reiteration of 'It Happens Every Day') but the settings are uptempo.

Sample reserves his reflective pieces for the closers on both sides. 'A Rainy Day In Monterey' conveys a feeling of solitary sentiment without being mawkish while 'More Beautiful Each Day' is a simple testimony to natural environment. 'Carmel' is a welcome addition to The Crusaders' extensive catalogue, dispelling the doubts of their Hammersmith blockage. It's no crossover/funk blow out either, simply Sample doing what he does best.

Fans of the man can investigate with pleasure.

Max Bell

Scorpions' 'Lovedrive' for Emily Nugent

ONCE IN SPIRIT: JAY FERGUSON ROCKS IN PEACE.

Jay Ferguson, once alive in Spirit and now dead in earnest to find his own rock future with the new album 'Real Life Ain't This Way'

"REAL LIFE AIN'T THIS WAY" K53086 Available on Asylum Records.

Jay
Ferguson

asylum

Bearing the Wembley Festival in mind, this week's column comes to you stetsoned and dobro-happy.

Which is why pride of place goes to 'Hiding' (A&M), a solo album from Albert Lee that comes on like the greatest stand for things Western since Custer last put his boots on. Frankly, the whole situation is crazy. For the British C&W scene — give or take a Wes McGhee or two — is overbrimming with insipid, yawn your head off, Nashville MOR soundalikes. Yet, in Lee, we've produced one of the finest pickers to ever grace the world of hoedown and honky-tonk. Irony, to say the least.

"I may look like a city slicker — but underneath I'm just a cotton-picker, pickin' out a mess o' blues," he proclaims on 'Country Boy', an opener that hurtles along with the velocity of a throttle-open Wabash Cannonball. And with the aid of ex-employer Emmylou and her Hot Band cohorts, he proceeds to prove his point, thereby producing an album that should do more for New Country than a whole wagonload of Dolly's disco delights.

Lee's title cut, sung in harmony with Don Everly, shapes up like the best Everly Brothers track since 'Love Is Strange', while the brace of home-brewed items — recorded in the company of Rockney unbeatables, along with one-time Head, Hands and Feet drummer Pete Gavin — will doubtless stand alongside the best that Texas and Tennessee can thrust our way this side of Michaelmas.

Imports

In short, 'Hiding' is one damn fine album. Get it or get out of town before sundown! Jane Fricke, whose second CBS album — 'Love Notes' — is now in the racks, is the latest addition to the crossover country squad. A singer who has the distinction of being on a Presley record without actually recording with El — she helped lay down some backing tracks for Presley's last session and though he tacked on his lead vocal, his death occurred before everyone got together for the final overdubs — Fricke's obviously the kind of lady who likes to keep all her options open.

Prompted by erudite Nashville producer Billy Sherrill, she makes like Crystal

Gayle, Tammy Wynette and even Barbra Streisand, hoping she'll spark somewhere along the line. Technically, she's got everything she needs and I guess it's just a case of waiting for the song before the model-like Fricke becomes big business and Hollywood bound.

Meanwhile, 'Love Notes' is just so much cold cream, pleasantly scented and quite hygienic — but hardly an essential commodity.

Better then to outlay your hard-earned loot on Butch Robins' 'Fragments Of My Imagination' (Rounder), a high-grade rock'n'bluegrass offering that features not only Robins' fine banjo-playing and Hartford-like vocals but also the multi-instrumental expertise of Sam Bush, whose Fender mandolin solo on a track titled 'Twelve O'clock, Eh Sonny' virtually melts the very vinyl it's pressed on.

Finally, a reminder that A&M are shortly to import copies of certain back-catalogue items, one of which being The Flying Burrito's 'Gilded Palace Of Sin', an album that contains some of Gram Parsons' most potent songs. The date to keep in mind is April 27.

Fred Dellar

WILLIE NELSON Willie and Family Live (CBS)

There'll Be No Teardrops Tonight (United Artists)
Along with Waylon Jennings, Willie Nelson is one of the leaders of the so-called 'outlaw' movement in country music, and the suggestion is that this style has more integrity than the Nashville variety.

In fairness, the differences are immediately apparent. Nelson's supporting musicians could easily earn a living as a rock band, and there's not a single chime of pedal steel to be heard. At the same time, Nelson's vocals are somewhat rough and ready. He tends to grunt rather than sing his lyrics, which strive hard to be perceptive. In fact, it's true to say that Nelson serves up a mixture of gruntery and perception — which is certainly preferable to country and western.

Awkwardly, though, even he sounds at times as though it's become dull routine. He can intone a lyric like 'I'm drowning in a whisky river' as though it has no meaning whatsoever.

Whether his insights are

Willie? Probably not any fresher or more valid than those of a million country singers before him is a moot point. Still, the CBS double live album is a generous offering of more than 30 songs. After four sides of this stuff, you feel you almost know what sort of after-shave Nelson wears. (A blend, no doubt, of sandalwood and Brut).

The UA collection, in contrast, is a bunch of schmaltzy oldies, heavily laden with strings and cocktail pianos. This suggests that even outlaws aren't born with gritty integrity. They have to acquire it.

If you think Willie Nelson is just Johnny Cash in drag, you may well be right.

Bob Edmunds

ORIGINAL SOUNDTRACK Banjoman (Sire)

The soundtrack to the film of the concert.

The gig was one honouring Earl Scruggs, the greatest banjo-picker to ever grace a Dylan (or any other) album. The Dirt Band did their all-join-in party pieces; Joan Baez trotted out the Dylan songbook for the umpteenth time; The Byrds performed 'Roll Over Beethoven' with some enthusiasm and 'Mr Tambourine Man' with less; Doc and Merle Watson did their usual, quite exemplary, country and blues thing; and Rambling Jack Elliott — who was suffering from severe laryngitis and only just about making it through the night — was recorded and granted album space, while Tracy Nelson's Mother Earth and David Bromberg — who, as far as I know, were as healthy as Henry Cooper at splash-on time — were not.

But it was Scruggs' night and his Revue (Earl, his three sons and drummer Jody Maphis) played the sort of triumphant bluegrass-rock befitting the occasion.

The album ain't bad then — but not really a patch on the live shot that The Scruggs Revue cut at the Austin City Limits TV show.

Fred Dellar

GORDON PAYNE Gordon Payne (A&M)

Gordon Payne is an ordinary name but his record, first one down I guess, is pleasant. If it's also more than occasionally reminiscent of J. J. Cale, well, that's no big deal.

Jean Jacques, the Okie sloth, woke up long enough to co-produce (with Audie Ashworth) and even plays guitar on one cut. Believe me, that adds up to a whole year's work for Cale whose own follow up to 'Troubadour' is lost in action and sorely missed, despite the fact that it's been finished for months and merely requires the yes from your great man himself; but 'til Shelter up Cale's ante you can keep waiting.

Back to Gordon. He has the backing (Karl Himmel, Joe Osborn, Jerry Carrigan) that is naturally bred in Tennessee. He is the provider of lyrical touches both witty and neat, and he wears a balladeer hat that don't fall off.

So now, Tom Waits scribbled his ballpoint over a Payne melody — 'Red Light/Fumblin' The Blues' — and the whimsical Randy Scruggs (you remember Randy Scruggs) slips in some bars of itchy electric flat top. All kinds fun.

Funkier folks might prefer 'Down On Love' (sounds like 'Lie') or the Wayne Jackson-Andrew Love Memphis big sound into Alabama ranch of 'Oklahoma Posse'. Then again, there's black humour for black folks on 'Blackmail' and white humour for rednecks on 'Go Ask Her' and 'Bare Naked'. Something for everyone really.

Gordon Payne is no firefighter but he knows what he can do and expresses himself like a gentleman and a scholar.

It's Spring music — fresh, invigorating, all that stuff.

Max Bell

THE SOLO SINGLE FROM J.J. BURNEL

C/W OZYMANDIAS (NOT ON ALBUM)

UP 36500

FREDDIE LAKER (CONCORDE & EUROBUS)

JJ BURNEL

APRIL TOUR

Sun 15th GLASGOW Pavilion
 Mon 16th MANCHESTER Apollo
 Tue 17th LIVERPOOL Eric's
 Wed 18th DERBY Assembly Rooms
 Fri 20th BIRMINGHAM Digbeth Town Hall
 Sat 21st BRIGHTON Dome
 Sun 22nd BRISTOL Locarno

Mon 23rd CANTERBURY Odeon
 Tue 24th PORTSMOUTH Locarno
 Wed 25th HEMEL HEMPSTEAD Pavilion
 Thur 26th NEWCASTLE Mayfair
 Fri 27th EDINBURGH Odeon
 Sat 28th BRADFORD St Georges Hall
 Sun 29th ILFORD Odeon
 Mon 30th LONDON

FREDDIE LAKER (CONCORDE & EUROBUS) IS TAKEN FROM THE ALBUM EUROMAN COMETH · ALBUM UAG 30214 CASSETTE TCK 30214

TO ADVERTISE
PHONE 01 261 6153 Brian B.

marquee

90 Wardour St., W.1 01-437 6603

OPEN EVERY NIGHT FROM 7.00 pm to 11.00 pm
REDUCED ADMISSION FOR STUDENTS AND MISSING

Thur 12th, Fri 13th, Sat 14th, Sun 15th
April
WILKO JOHNSON'S SOLID SENDERS
Plus friends & Ian Fleming
Advance tickets to members £1.50
Non members on the door £1.75

Mon 16th & Tue 17th April
WILD HORSES
Plus support & Jerry Floyd
Advance tickets to members £1.50
Non members on the door £1.75

Wed 18th Apr (Adm £1.25)
DOLL BY DOLL
Plus guests & Joe Lunn

Thur 19th Apr (Adm £1.25)
RAMROD
Plus friends & Ian Fleming

Fri 20th Apr (Adm £1.50)
SWT
Plus friends & Ian Fleming

Sat 21st Apr (Adm £1.00)
SHOWBIZ KIDS
Plus support & Ian Fleming

READING FESTIVAL
AUGUST BANK HOLIDAY WEEKEND

THE NASH VILLE ROOM

FULLERS TRADITIONAL ALES

Thursday April 12th £1.50
THE POLICE + Fashion
Friday April 13th £1.00
CAFE JACQUES + Mat Stagger
Saturday April 14th £1.50
BLACK SLATE + Support
Sunday April 15th £1.00
BARRY FORD BAND + London Zoo
Monday April 16th Free
INTERVIEW + TRIMMER & JENKINS
Tuesday April 17th £1.00
BARRY ANDREWS + Hazel & The Unknowns
Thursday April 19th £1.00
RACING CARS + Mark O'Connor

CORNER CROMWELL ROAD/NORTH END ROAD, W12
(Adjacent West Kensington Tube Tel: 01-603 6071)

FRANKIE MILLER AND HIS BAND

PLUS SUPPORT

HAMMERSMITH ODEON

SUNDAY APRIL 29th 7.30 PM

TICKETS £3.50 £3.00 £2.50 £2.00

Available from advance ticket box, 743 4061 London Theatre Bookings, Telephone 01-437 3371 Premier Box Office, 240 2243 and usual agents

HOPE & ANCHOR UPPER STREET
ISLINGTON, N.1

Thursday April 12th £1.00 THE INMATES	Monday April 16th 7p BOBBY HENRY
Friday April 13th 7p LEW LEWIS' REFORMER	Tuesday April 17th 8p 64 SPOONS
Saturday April 14th £1.00 BARRY ANDREWS	Wednesday April 18th 7p INTERVIEW
Sunday April 15th 7p THE STICKERS	Thursday April 19th 7p ANGLETRAX

TELEPHONE 01-387-0428/9

MUSIC MACHINE

Playing times 10.30 pm and midnight
CAMDEN HIGH ST OFF NORTHINGTON CRESCENT TUBE - NW1

Wednesday April 11th £1.00 SPLIT RIVIT + The Physicals	Tuesday April 17th £1.50 GIRLSCHOOL + First Aid + The Stoat
Thursday April 12th Friday April 13th Saturday April 14th CLOSED FOR EASTER	Wednesday April 18th £1.00 THE FLYS + Psychedelic Furs
Monday April 16th £2.00 Bank Holiday Special featuring MERGER + Special Guests	Thursday April 19th £1.50 MILITANT BARRY + Amba

Friday April 27th

WAYNE COUNTY & THE ELECTRIC CHAIRS

Admission £2.00 from Box Office

LICENSED BARS - LIVE MUSIC - DANCING
8 PM - 2 AM MONDAY TO SATURDAY
OVER 18s ONLY

ROCK WITH THE

CAROLITE Roadshow

APRIL
Thur 12 MAIDSTONE, Corn Exchange
Sat 14 BISHOPS STORTFORD, Rhodes Centre
Mon 15 TONBRIDGE, Golden Manor, London Road
Thur 19 BASILDON, Regals
Fri 20 COLCHESTER, Woods Sports Centre, Bargefoot Road
Sat 21 STONGBURY, Mid-Suffolk Sports Centre
Thur 26 BARKING F.C., Lodge Avenue, Barking
Fri 27 DUNSTABLE, Conventry Hall, Barron Place
Sat 28 IPSWICH, Gainsborough, Corn Exchange
Admission £2.00
Mon 30 BREKWOOD, Harriet Club

MAY
Sat 5 BERTFORD, Castle Hall
Mon 7 BRAINTREE, The Institute
Sat 12 READING, Salmons College of Higher Education, Woodland Avenue, Earley
Fri 18 SOUTHEND, Festival Club
Sat 19 Colchester, Corn Exchange
* Lighthouses acquired by Police, Photo, F.A.I., Zero 88 and Light Sound Studios. Loans by Tonel Bureau.

ALEXANDRA PALACE
SAT 14th APRIL 4.30pm - 12pm

ASWAD, ANGELIC
BAND, JOHN COOPER CLARKE, DAMBALA, LEYTON BUZZARDS,
TOM ROBINSON BAND, THE RUTS

TICKETS £1.70 (in advance)
£1.95 (on the door)
£1.70 (with dole card)

DINGWALLS
01-267 4367 Camden Lock, Chalk Farm Road, London NW1

THUR 13
LEE FARDON & THE LEGIONAIRE
IN & CLOSING AT MIDNIGHT

FRI 13
RAMROD
PLUS SUPPORT
SAT 14
SUSSEX
(8 MIDNIGHT ONE)

SUN 15
An Easter Evening of British Blues
WITH
Joanne Kelly Chris Yulden Paul Jones
Gordon Smith and the O.T.s
THURS 19 FROM U.S.A.

S.V.T. FEATURING
JACK CASADY - EX JEFFERSON AIRPLANE/HOT TUNA

The Triad Leisure Centre,
South Hill Road, Bishops Cleeve proudly presents
An Easter Monday Spectacular with

UK SUBS

+ The Crooks
+ The Books
+ 64 Spoons

and special guest appearance of SCANDAL between 3.30 and 4.30
2 pm-11 pm Food & drink available all day
Tickets available at door, £1.35

dog watch

Friday, 13th April
EASHDON, Double Six

Saturday, 14th April
NEW BARNET, Duke of Lancaster

Sunday, April 15th
EAST HAM, Reskin Arms

Tuesday, 17th April
WOOLWICH, Tramshed Theatre

Sound Scene Agency
01-261 9741/9774

THE Venue
160 VICTORIA ST. SW1
(opp Victoria Tube station)
01-434 5500
Doors open 8pm

Wednesday April 11th £3.00
LONNIE DONEGAN
2.30 & 12

Thursday April 12th £3.75
From America, only British appearance of
PATTI LABELLE
4.30 & 12
Plus Support
£2.50

Friday April 13th £2.00
JIMMY JAMES & THE VAGABONDS
2.30

Saturday April 14th 2.30
A TRIBUTE TO MIKE PATTO
(All proceeds to his family)

DICK AND THE FIREMEN
7.00 & 12.30

Saturday April 21st £3.00
ANDREA TRUE CONNECTION
8.30 & 12.00

Thursday April 26th & Friday April 27th £2.00
ROGER CHAPMAN & THE SHORT LIMIT
8.30

THE COAL BIN
DUBLIN CASTLE
CAMDEN TOWN

Wed April 18th
REMEMBER ZEN!
R&B SPECIAL
HOST OF GUEST STARS PAY THEIR RESPECTS
Admission £1.00

Wed April 25th
THE CANNIBALS
+ Support
Admission £1.00

ACKLAM HALL, PORTOBELLO ROAD, W.11
TUESDAY 17th APRIL

THE PSYCHEDELIC FURS

+ THE NOBODYS + THE VEINS

Doors open 8 p.m.
Admission £1.50, £1.00 with dole card.

LEE FARDON & THE LEGIONAIRES

THURSDAY
APRIL 12th

DINGWALLS
01-267 4367 Camden Lock, Chalk Farm Road, London NW1

NATIONWIDE GIG GUIDE

JEAN JACQUES
BURNEL

PLANXTY

What's on this week

JEAN JACQUES BURNEL of The Stranglers sets out on his much-publicised solo tour this week, to aid promotion of his upcoming solo album 'Euroman Cometh'. You can see how he shapes up to the challenge at Blackburn (Saturday), Glasgow (Sunday), Manchester (Monday), Liverpool (Tuesday) and Derby (Wednesday).

MAGAZINE are also on the trail, coinciding with the release of their latest Virgin LP 'Secondhand Daylight'. Supported by Scottish band Simple Minds, they open at Malvern (Monday), Blackburn (Tuesday) and Sheffield (Wednesday).

PLANXTY, one of the most successful mass-appeal folk groups ever, mark their reunion by way of a comeback tour kicking off at London (Sunday), Newcastle (Monday), Edinburgh (Tuesday) and Liverpool (Wednesday). They're still featuring the original line-up of Christy Moore, Liam O'Flynn, Donal Lunny and Andy Irvine, plus new man Matt Molloy.

PLAYERS ASSOCIATION are over from the States to celebrate their debut in both the LP and singles charts here, and they're in action at Salford (Sunday), Blackpool (Monday) and Brighton (Tuesday).

MARTY ROBBINS plays the Country Music Festival on Saturday (see next page), then sets out on his own concert tour. The veteran singer headlines at Norwich (Sunday), Ipswich (Monday), Aberdeen (Tuesday) and Middlesbrough (Wednesday).

THE THREE DEGREES have become increasingly popular in Britain, thanks to their seal of approval from you-know-who. And they're cashing in by way of a concert tour taking them to Manchester (Saturday), Liverpool (Sunday), Blackpool (Monday) and Dundee (Wednesday).

TOYAH is the name of the band fronted by that very exciting young lady Toyah Wilcox. And to celebrate their signing to Safari Records, they're out on their first major tour, calling at Leeds (Thursday), Manchester (Friday), Liverpool (Saturday), Dumfries (Sunday), Edinburgh (Monday), Sheffield (Tuesday) and York (Wednesday).

The main one-off events of the week are JAPAN at London Rainbow and PATTI LABELLE at London The Venue (both on Thursday); TOM ROBINSON BAND topping the big RAR gala at Alexandra Palace (Saturday); and VIV STANSHALL at London Drury Lane (Wednesday).

Pictured below: TOYAH

HOWARD DEVOTO of Magazine

Thursday

Birmingham (Hall Green): The Haven; Reno
Birmingham Jazz Society: Al Grey/Tony Coe
Birmingham Mercat Cross: The Clinic
Birmingham Railway Hotel: Orphan
Birmingham The Bell: The Clarks
Blackburn Kaledoscope: Direct Hits
Bournemouth Pineside Hotel: Interference
Bradford St. George's Hall: Motorhead/Girls School
Bristol Students Union: John Cooper Clarks/Merger / The X-Certs / U.K. Subs
Burntwood Troubadour: The Amazing Dark Horse
Chelmsford Chancelor Hall: Acher Bils Band
Cheltenham Plough Inn: Fashion
Cherfield The Fusion: Stray Kat
Coventry Dog & Trumpet: Ocean Boulevard
Coventry Hope & Anchor: Urge
Croydon Ashcroft Theatre: 'Godspell' (until April 21)
Derby Ajanta Cinema: Throbbing Girdles/Pre-De
Dublin Stadium: Lou Reed
Glasgow The Amphora: Underhand Jones

Glasgow Red Lion: The Piranhas
Halesowen Tiffany's: Quartz
Harrow The Havelock: The Chevrons
High Wycombe Town Hall: Derek Brimstone
Hilford The Cranbrook: Jerry The Ferret
Ipswich Talk of the Town: The Damned
Ipswich Gaumont Theatre: John Miles
Leeds Fan Club: Toyah
Leeds Royal Park Hotel: Snoots
Leeds Viva Wine Bar: Deadringer
Liverpool Eric's: Bolt By Doll
Liverpool (Huyton) The Bluebell: Lee All Lies
London Acton Town Hall: The Ruts/Exodus/The Satalines
London Brixton Canterbury Arms: The Week Heart Drops/The Tools
London Camden Dingwalls: The Voice Squad
London Camden Dublin Castle: The Realists
London Chiswick John Bull: Dog Watch
London Covent Garden Rock Garden: The Addix
London East Ham Rustin Arms: Shadr
London Hammersmith The Swan: Beast
London Harrow Rd. Windsor Castle: The Newtoven Neurotics/The Vains
London Islington Hope & Anchor: The Innates
London Kensington The Cricketers: Manyana
London Kensington De Villiers Bar: Gold Dust Twins
London Kensington The Nashville: The Police
London Knightsbridge Pizza on the Park: Martin Taylor/like Isaac
London Marquee Club: Wilko Johnson's Solid Senders/The Tools
London Mankin/ry's: Viola Wills
London Oxford St. 100 Club: Prince Fat I/Blm Sherman/Prince Hammer/Creaton Rebel
London Paddington Western Counties: The Flexible Duetline
London Rainbow Theatre: Japan
London Soho Pizza Express: Ron Rubin Quartet
London Southgate Royalty Ballroom: Rockhouse/Little Tony & The Tennessee Rebels
London St. Moritz Club: Red Tape
London Stoke Newington The Pegasus: The Psychodemic Furs/The Leopards
London Tottenham The Spurs: 21st

London Twickenham Turks Head: Ego
London Victoria The Venue: Patti Labelle
London W.14 The Kensington: The Bucks Band
Manchester Russell Club: Zydon 9
Middlesbrough Rock Garden: Mean Street Dealers
Newcastle City Hall: Thin Lizzy
Norwich Boogie House: The Warm Jets
Nottingham Hearty Good Fellow: The Hormones
Nottingham Imperial Hotel: Lap Region
Nottingham The Bodega: Art Failure
Oxford Corn Dolly: Barry Andrews
Poole Empire Hall: Town
Poynton Folk Centre: Gentleman Soldier/Pat Ryan
Sheffield Northern General Hospital: The Press
Southampton Gaumont Theatre: Elton John
Southport Arts Centre: George Melly & The Feetwarmers
St. Helens Glassbridge Hotel: The Accabonators
Sunderland Empire Theatre: Kate Bush
Swansea Harford Inn: Juke Box Express
Tunbridge Wells Assembly Rooms: Frankie Miller's Full House/Flicks
Wellingborough British Rail Club: The Wild Angels
Wigan Casino: Wild Horses

Friday

Aylesbury Stone Hall: Disco Students
Basildon Double Six: Dog Watch
Birmingham Barrel Organ: Bright Eyes
Birmingham Elizabethan Days: Bad Earth
Birmingham Railway Hotel: Spitfire
Birmingham (Small): Heath
Sydney: The Crack
Bishops Stortford Triad Leisure Centre: Serine Offensive
Bognor Sussex Hotel: Double Exposure
Bridlington Cook & Lion: Whitefire
Brighton Bombay Bar: Devil's Dyke/The Parents/Wood & The Splinters
Burntwood Troubadour: Strider
Burton 78 Club: Simple Minds
Cambridge Ragamuffins: The Bumpers
Chorley Centre: Head
Chiddingfold Six Belts: Nightrider
Coventry Ryton Bridge: Streetlife
Edinburgh Usher Hall: Kate Bush
Eitchingham Arms: John Thomas
Farnworth Veterans Club: Johnny & The Jailbirds
Guilford Royal Hotel: Nicky & The Dots
Hastings The Victoria: The Shades
Hanley The Place: George Melly & The Feetwarmers
Hilford The Cranbrook: Jerry The Ferret
Kettering Windmill Club: The Beershenk Band
Kirkcubright Country Club: The Scottish Monks
Knaresborough Folk Club: Hedgehog Pie
Leeds Florida Green Hotel: Shots
Leeds Viva Wine Bar: Side Effect
Lancaster Union Club: Matchbox
London Acton Kings Head: Paz
London Brixton A Little Bit Ritz: Linton Kwesi Johnson
London Camden Dublin Castle: ABC
London Camden Southampton Arms: Jettyroll Blues Band
London Canning Town Bridge House: Warm Jets
London Covent Garden Rock Garden: Brett Marvin & The Thunderbolts
London Enfield Hop Poles: Scandal
London Fulham Greyhound: The Crooks
London Harrow Rd. Windsor Castle: The Psychodemic Furs/The Out Patients
London Islington Hope & Anchor: Low Levels Reformer
London Lewisham Black Bull: Freddie 'Fingers' Lee
London Marquee Club: Wilko Johnson's Solid Senders

London Plumstead Green Man: First Aid
London Putney Star & Garter: Greig & Nigel's Folk and Blues Night
London Putney White Lion: The Realists
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The VIP's/The Agents
London Strand - Lyceum Ballroom: Motorhead/Nutz/Girls School
London Upstairs at Ronnie Scott's: More Than Scapes
London Victoria The Venue: Jimmy James & The Vagabonds
London West Hampstead Junjy Club: Tot & The Girls in Room 419/Bank of Dreadn
London Westminster The Tower: Flying Saucers
Manchester The Factory: Doll by Doll
Manchester Russell Club: Toyah
Newport The Village: The Cruisers
Nottingham Club Mailbox: Supercharge
Nottingham Hearty Good Fellow: Last Call
Nottingham Sandpiper: Medium Medium
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street
Poynton Folk Festival: Sam Sherry/Ticklers/Jam/East Coast/Johnny Collins/Bob Pax and Stu Luddley/Wayland Smithy/Marie Little/Tom Shepley's Band and many others (for three days)
Sheffield Colley Club: Strange Days
Southampton Jazz Society: Al Grey/Tony Coe
Usbridge Unit One: F.U.X.
Wolverhampton Lafayette: Jameson Field
Worcester The Retreat: Big Nose Band
Worthing The Balmoral: El Seven

Saturday

Andover Country Bumpkin: High Flames
Aylesbury Friars: Frankie Miller's Full House / Flicks

Beaconsfield Jubilee Hall: The Ladykillers / Vermin
Birkenhead The Galaxy: Quartz
Birmingham Barbarella's: Doll By Doll
Birmingham Barrel Organ: Reno
Birmingham Bogards: Dewbreaker
Birmingham Mercat Cross: Spider
Birmingham Railway Hotel: Mean Street Dealers
Bishops Stortford Triad Leisure Centre: Mosh
Blackburn King George's Hall: Jean Jacques Burnel
Bournemouth Pineside Hotel: Town
Brighton The Vault: Fan Club / Chicane / Double Den
Bristol Crown Callar Bar: The Wild Beasts
Bristol Hippodrome: Elton John
Bromsgrove The Hopwood: The Clinic
Canons The Moonraker: Ocean Boulevard
Canterbury Marlow Theatre: Heathcliff
Carlisle Twisted Wheel: Lee All Lies
Carnshaw St Helier Arms: The Rockin' Devils
Cherfield Brimington Tavern: Vesuvius
Chiddingfold Six Belts: Private Parts
Cromer West Norton Pavilion: Sore Throat
Croydon Fairfield Hall: Diane Solomon
Drybrook (Forest of Dean) Rugby Club: Retravators
Dudley J.B.'s Club: Supercharge
Glasgow Apollo Centre: Thin Lizzy / The Vipers
Harrow Rugby Club: The Crooks
Hastings Pier Pavilion: U.K. Subs / Teen Beets / 4th Reich
High Wycombe Nags Head: The Bucks Band
Ipswich Royal William: Boy Bastin
Ipswich Tracey's: Light Of The World
Leeds Florida Green Hotel: Minotaur
Leeds Park Horse Inn: Tebbles
Leeds Royal Park Hotel: Red Eye
Leeds Viva Wine Bar: The Vye
Liverpool Eric's: The Damned / Toyah
London Alexandra Palace: Tom Robinson Band / The Layton Buzzards / Aswad / The Angels Upstairs / The Ruts / John Cooper Clarks / Demobles / Belt & Brace Band
London Camden Dingwalls: Ramrod / Sussex
London Canning Town Bridge House: Jackie Lynskey's Happy Days
London Covent Garden Rock Garden: Amber
London - Enfield Hop Poles: The Psychodemic Furs
London Harrow Rd Windsor Castle: The Lightning Raiders / The Heroes
London Lewisham Black Bull: Flying Saucers
London Lewisham Concert Hall: Midnight Follies Orchestra
London Marquee Club: Wilko Johnson's Solid Senders
London New Barnet Duke of Lancaster: Dog Watch
London Paddington Western Counties: Too Much
London Soho Pizza Express: Al Grey / Tony Coe
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: Big Chief
London Upstairs at Ronnie Scott's: More Than Scapes
London Wembley Arena: Country Music Festival
London West Hampstead Moonlight Club: The Monochrome Set / The Soul Boys
London Wotton Ditton Community Centre: Acher Bils Band
Manchester Apollo Theatre: The Three Degrees
Manchester De La Salle College: Geisha Girls
Mertham Village Hall: John Thomas / The Escalators
Morecambe Central Pier: Matchbox /

Johnny & The Jailbirds
Nottingham Boat Club: Limestone
Nottingham Hearty Good Fellow: Outward Band
Nottingham Sandpiper: The Fall / The Shapes
Oxford Corn Dolly: Spring Offensive
Poole Brewers Arms: Town
Portsmouth Guildhall: Roger Whittaker
Reading Target Club: Earthbound
Reford Porthouse: Scandal
Sleaford RAF Coningsby: Strange Days
Southampton The Saints: Nightrider
St Albans City Hall: John Miles / Landit
Stevenage The Swan: 64 Spoons
Wishaw Crown Hotel (lunchtime): The Pests
Witherslack Eldon Five Club: The Cruisers

Sunday

Barnoldswick Stork Majestic: Mistrea
Birmingham Railway Hotel: Prime Donne
Birmingham Shirley Red Lion: The Crack
Bishops Stortford Triad Leisure Centre: Exit (lunchtime)/Ted Seament Trio (evening)
Bournemouth Winter Gardens: Roger Whittaker
Bradford Royal Standard Hotel: Bitch
Brighton Alhambra: The Piranhas
Bristol Hippodrome: Elton John
Bromley The Northover (lunchtime, 8.11)
Scott & Ian Ellis
Buckhurst Hill The Rebeck: George Melly & The Feetwarmers
Burnley Bankhall Club: Gerry & The Pacemakers
Cheltenham Plough Hotel: Richard Dignose
Chorley Joiners Arms: Vesuvius
Cleethorpes Bunby Club: Freddie Cole
Crawley The White Knight: The Little Jimmies
Dumfries Stagecoach: Toyah
Farncombe Three Lions: The Vipers
Glasgow Apollo Theatre: Thin Lizzy/The Vipers
Glasgow Doune Castle: The Alleged and support
Glasgow Pavilion: Jean-Jacques Burnel
Glenrothes Rothes Arms: Underhand Jones
Leeds Victoria Hotel (lunchtime): Best Friends
Leeds Viva Wine Bar: The City Limits
Liverpool Empire Theatre: The Three Degrees
London Acton Kings Head: Strange Fruit
London Battersea Nags Head: Jugular Vain
London Camden Brecknock: The Small Hours
London Camden Dingwalls: Paul Jones / Chris Yulden / Jo-Ann Kelly / Gordon Smith, etc
London Canning Town Bridge House: Remus Down Boulevard
London Charing Cross Duke of Buckingham: The Invisibles (for four days)
London Clapham Two Brewers: The V.I.P.s
London Hammersmith Odeon: Planxty
London Harrow Rd. Windsor Castle: Scandal
London Kensington The Nashville: Berry Ford Band/London Zoo
London Marquee Club: Wilko Johnson's Solid Senders
London Oxford Street 100 Club: Charles Brown
London Paddington Q Club: High Flames
London Pocham Montpelier (lunchtime): Blue Moon
London S.E.1 Duke of Clarence (lunchtime): Belt & Brace Band
London Soho Pizza Express: Lennie Felix
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: U.K. Subs
CONTINUES OVER...

And now Gig Guide presents the . . .

Pictured in fan formation are some of the Nashville stalwarts taking part in this year's Wembley bonanza. From left to right, they are BARBARA FAIRCHILD, BOBBY BARE, RONNIE MILSAP, MARTY ROBBINS, FLOYD CRAMER, BILLIE JO SPEARS, CONWAY TWITTY and TAMMY WYNETTE. The lady lounging bottom left is, of course, CRYSTAL GAYLE.

WEMBLEY COUNTRY EVENT

SATURDAY,
SUNDAY
& MONDAY

ACTS APPEARING

IT'S TIME again for the country fans' annual treat, with the three-day international festival at Wembley. If you can't get there, it'll be covered extensively by TV and radio for subsequent transmission. But for the benefit of those who are going along, here's the full list of acts, in what will probably be the running order:

SATURDAY
Phyllomena Bagley
Al Doeherty
Gloria
Nancy Peppers
Poacher
The Duffy Brothers
Billy Armstrong
Mark Williams
Orville Owens
Boomer Willie
Dotsey
Hank Locklin
Freddie Hart
Ronnie Prophet
Billie Jo Spears
Marty Robbins

SUNDAY
Ken & Billie Ford
Ray Lynam
Frank Yanco & The Superglades
Jeannie Denver
Jana Jax
Don Gibson
Guddy Emmons
Floyd Cramer
Charlie McCoy
Vernon Oxford
Barbara Fairchild
Freddie Fender
Moe Sandy
Ronnie Milsap
Tammy Wynette

MONDAY
Suzanne Klee
Lennie Donegan
Sleepy La Beef
Laney Smithwood
Raymond Froggett
Randy Barlow
Joe Stempley
The Mercury Brothers
Jim & Jesse & The Virginia Boys
Mickey Newbury
Bobby Bare
Conway Twitty
Crystal Gayle

Tuesday
Aberdeen Capitol Theatre: Marty Robbins
Birmingham Fighting Cocks: Snake
Birmingham Mackintosh Hotel: Gerry
and The Pacemakers
Birmingham Market Cross: Killer
Birmingham Railway Hotel: Speed Limit
Bishop Stortford Triad Leisure Centre: Lee Bender
Blackburn King George's Hall: Magazine
Bradford St George's Hall: Frankie Miller's Full House/Rickie
Branagrove Saddle Bars: Tours
Brentwood Youth Centre: Richard Dignone
Brighton Alhambra: Fan Club
Brighton The Richmond: The Little
Shedders
Brighton Top Rank: Players Association
Cannock Star & Garter: Queen Boulevard
Coventry Barrage Hotel: The
Shedders
Derby Old Bell Hotel: The Accelerators
Eastbourne (Normans Bay) The Star: Shakedown
Edinburgh Usher Hall: Planety
Preston Fox & Hounds: Bill Smith
Glasgow Drill Inn: Underhand Jones
Ipworth Gaumont Theatre: Billy Connolly
Leeds Viva Wine Bar: The Paradox
Leicester Jazz Society: Al Grey/Tony Cox
Liverpool Eric's: Supercharge
Liverpool The Crown: The Clarks
London Camden Braddock: Beasdale
London Canning Town Bridge House: The
Chords/Secret Affair
London Harrow Rd. Windsor Castle: J.O.W. Band
London Kensington The Nashville: Interview
London Marquee Club: Wild Herpes
London N.4 The Stapleton: The O.K. Band
London Old Brompton Rd. Troubadour: John Vennick
London Palladium: Kate Bush
London Putney Half Moon: Alex Campbell
London Royal Festival Hall: Burt Hove
London Southgate Royalty Ballroom: 'Wild Man' Tony Conn/Mitchell/Flying Saucers/The Wild Angels/The Spades/Dynasty

Wednesday
Birmingham Barrel Organ: Brujo
Birmingham Bogers: Del Bromham Band
Birmingham Railway Hotel: Rainmaker
Birmingham The Haven: Mean Street
Deedee
Birmingham (Yardley) Suite Head: Roses
Bishops Stortford Triad Leisure Centre: Take Away
Brighton Alhambra: Fischer-Z
Carshalton St. Helier Arms: Gina 'n' The Rockin' Rebels
Cheltenham Plough Inn: Roadsters
Coventry Theatre: Elton John
Dawlish Grand Hotel: The Fall
Derby Assembly Rooms: Jean Jacques
Barnes
Derby Old Bell Hotel: Lisa All Linn
Dundee Caird Hall: The Three Degrees
Farnham Memorial Hall: The Vapors
Great Yarmouth Wheels: Boy Seatin
Hazel Grove Youth Centre: Mental Ark
High Wycombe Town Hall: The Damned
Leeds Marquis of Granby: Tragik Minds
Leeds Viva Wine Bar: Stranded
Leicester De Montfort Hall: Billy Connolly
Liverpool Philharmonic Hall: Planety
London Camden Dingwells: Ray St. John
London Camden Music Machine: The Flys
London Canning Town Bridge House: The
Tickets
London Clapham 101 Club: The Polliclams
London Covent Garden Rock Garden: Random Hold
London Drury Lane Theatre Royal: Viv
Stanshall
London Hamersmith The Swan: The Parkies
London Harrow Rd. Windsor Castle: Dazy's Midnight Runners
London Word Oscar's: London Zoo
London Islington Hope & Anchor: Interview

Compiled by
DEREK JOHNSON

Oxford New Theatre: Elton John
Plymouth Tops Club: The Fall
Preston Guildhall: Thin Lizzy/The Vipers
Reading Hexagon Theatre: John Miles
/Bandid
Sheffield Lima Club: Toyah
Southport Seaside Hotel: Vassulus
Walsall Dirty Duck: The Amazing Dark Horse

London Knightsbridge The Grove: Free
London Lewisham Concert Hall: Billie Jo
London Marquee Club: Doll By Doll
London Maunbury's: Dana Gillespie
London Palladium: Kate Bush
London Peckham Montague: Blue Moon
London Putney Star & Garter: Dana Birmonds & Craig's Folk and Blues Showcase
London Royal Albert Hall: James Last
Orchestra
London Soho Pizza Express: Al Grey /
Tony Cox
London Southall White Hart: Johnny &
The Jailbirds
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: Tour
De Force / Gnasher
London Upstairs at Ronnie Scott's: The
Little Jennies
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: Girls School / The Planets
London Wimbledon F.C. Nelson's Club:
Low Lewis Reformers
Manchester Ashton Birch Hotel: Amy
Trouble
Manchester Bowden Vale Club: The
Seagulls
Manchester The Phoenix: Whitebelly
Middlesbrough Town Hall: Marty
Robbins
Minfield Long Bar Hotel: Snoots Newcastle Medeson: Roboto (for four days)
Nottingham Hearty Good Fellow: Gerald
Nottingham Imperial Hotel: Some
Chicken
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Bank Of Sweden
Portsmouth Guildhall: John Miles /
Bandid
Rayleigh Crocs: The Softies / The Photos
Reading Target Club: Daze Students
Salisbury City Hall: Wild Horses
Scarborough Parthons: Mike Absalom
Sheffield City Hall: Thin Lizzy / The Vipers
Sheffield Top Rank: Magazine
Solihull Golden Lion: The Clinic
South Woodford Railway Bell: Original
East Side Strangers
Yusufat Town Hall: The Accelerators
York Pop Club: Toyah

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Al Grey /
Tony Cox
London Southall White Hart: Johnny &
The Jailbirds
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: Tour
De Force / Gnasher
London Upstairs at Ronnie Scott's: The
Little Jennies
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: Girls School / The Planets
London Wimbledon F.C. Nelson's Club:
Low Lewis Reformers
Manchester Ashton Birch Hotel: Amy
Trouble
Manchester Bowden Vale Club: The
Seagulls
Manchester The Phoenix: Whitebelly
Middlesbrough Town Hall: Marty
Robbins
Minfield Long Bar Hotel: Snoots Newcastle Medeson: Roboto (for four days)
Nottingham Hearty Good Fellow: Gerald
Nottingham Imperial Hotel: Some
Chicken
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Bank Of Sweden
Portsmouth Guildhall: John Miles /
Bandid
Rayleigh Crocs: The Softies / The Photos
Reading Target Club: Daze Students
Salisbury City Hall: Wild Horses
Scarborough Parthons: Mike Absalom
Sheffield City Hall: Thin Lizzy / The Vipers
Sheffield Top Rank: Magazine
Solihull Golden Lion: The Clinic
South Woodford Railway Bell: Original
East Side Strangers
Yusufat Town Hall: The Accelerators
York Pop Club: Toyah

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Tottenham White Hart: Flying
Saucers
London Wembley Arena: Country Music
Festival
London W.1 Portman Hotel (lunchtime):
Pete Allen Band
Luton The Cotters: Spring Offensive
Macclesfield Bears Head: J.G. Spots
Newbridge Club & Institute: Doll By Doll
Newquay Central Hotel: The Winners
Norwich Theatre Royal: Marty Robbins
Nottingham Hearty Good Fellow: Medium
Mediam
Oxford Corn Dolly: Lee Bender
Oxford New Theatre: Billy Connolly
Redcar Coatham Bowl: Supercharge
Salford Variety Centre: Players Association
Sheffield Top Rank: Frankie Miller's Full
House/Rickie
Skagness North Derbyshire Miners
Camp: Exodus
Walsall Dirty Duck (lunchtime): The Amazing Dark Horse

Monday

Barnackburn Tartan Hall: Rokotto
Birmingham Barrel Organ: Freshbird
Birmingham Coach & Horses: The Clinic
Birmingham Hippodrome: James Last
Orchestra
Birmingham Market Cross: Orphan
Bishops Stortford Triad Leisure Centre:
U.K. Sub/The Crooks/The Books/84
Spoons/Scandal
Blackpool Opera House: The Three Degrees
Blackpool Tiffany's: Players Association
Bradford Metro Inn: Anniversary
Bristol Locarno: Frankie Miller's Full
House/Rickie
Bristol Romeo & Juliet: Prince Far I/Bim
Sherman/Prince Hammer/Creation
Rebel
Bristol Turntable Club: Delegation
Carshalton St. Helier Arms: Yabey Yab-
/Shades/Shades/The Chasers/Johnny
& The Jailbirds
Coatbridge The Beechwood: Underhand
Jones
Corby Nags Head: Vassulus
Eastbourne Congress Theatre: Roger Whittaker
Edinburgh Odeon: Thin Lizzy/The Vipers
Edinburgh Tiffany's: Toyah
Hilford Cauliflower Hotel: Original East Side Strangers
Ipworth Gaumont Theatre: Marty Robbins
Kingston The Noise Factory (at Grove Tavern): Steve Mark/Glaze Babies
Leeds Viva Wine Bar: Red Eye
Liverpool Eric's: Supercharge
Liverpool The Crown: The Clarks
London Camden Braddock: Beasdale
London Canning Town Bridge House: The
Chords/Secret Affair
London Harrow Rd. Windsor Castle: J.O.W. Band
London Kensington The Nashville: Interview
London Marquee Club: Wild Herpes
London N.4 The Stapleton: The O.K. Band
London Old Brompton Rd. Troubadour: John Vennick
London Palladium: Kate Bush
London Putney Half Moon: Alex Campbell
London Royal Festival Hall: Burt Hove
London Southgate Royalty Ballroom: 'Wild Man' Tony Conn/Mitchell/Flying Saucers/The Wild Angels/The Spades/Dynasty

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Stoke Newington Pegasus: London Zoo/Jurvis
London Upstairs at Ronnie Scott's: Billie
Jo Spears
London Wembley Arena: Country Music
Festival
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: Private Vices/Innocent Bystanders
Milvern Winter Gardens: Magazine
Manchester Apollo Theatre: Jean Jacques Burnel
Manchester Russell Club: Allie Omega
Middlebrough Marimba Club: Gerry &
The Pacemakers
Newcastle City Hall: Planety
Nottingham Hearty Good Fellow: The Party
Oxford Corn Dolly: Earthbound
Sheffield Fleets: The Drifters
Southampton Robury Old Mill: Eyes
Southend Miners: Crazy Geron & The Rhythm Rockers
Stevensage Gordon Craig Theatre: George
Melly & The Fastwarmers
Swansea Grand Theatre: Max
Boys/Telephone Bill & The Smooth
Operators (for a week)

Tuesday

Aberdeen Capitol Theatre: Marty Robbins
Birmingham Fighting Cocks: Snake
Birmingham Mackintosh Hotel: Gerry
and The Pacemakers
Birmingham Market Cross: Killer
Birmingham Railway Hotel: Speed Limit
Bishop Stortford Triad Leisure Centre:
Lee Bender
Blackburn King George's Hall: Magazine
Bradford St George's Hall: Frankie Miller's Full House/Rickie
Branagrove Saddle Bars: Tours
Brentwood Youth Centre: Richard Dignone
Brighton Alhambra: Fan Club
Brighton The Richmond: The Little
Shedders
Brighton Top Rank: Players Association
Cannock Star & Garter: Queen Boulevard
Coventry Barrage Hotel: The
Shedders
Derby Old Bell Hotel: The Accelerators
Eastbourne (Normans Bay) The Star: Shakedown
Edinburgh Usher Hall: Planety
Preston Fox & Hounds: Bill Smith
Glasgow Drill Inn: Underhand Jones
Ipworth Gaumont Theatre: Billy Connolly
Leeds Viva Wine Bar: The Paradox
Leicester Jazz Society: Al Grey/Tony Cox
Liverpool Eric's: Supercharge
Liverpool The Crown: The Clarks
London Camden Braddock: Beasdale
London Canning Town Bridge House: The
Chords/Secret Affair
London Harrow Rd. Windsor Castle: J.O.W. Band
London Kensington The Nashville: Interview
London Marquee Club: Wild Herpes
London N.4 The Stapleton: The O.K. Band
London Old Brompton Rd. Troubadour: John Vennick
London Palladium: Kate Bush
London Putney Half Moon: Alex Campbell
London Royal Festival Hall: Burt Hove
London Southgate Royalty Ballroom: 'Wild Man' Tony Conn/Mitchell/Flying Saucers/The Wild Angels/The Spades/Dynasty

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The Chords
London W.10 Asklam Hall: The
Psychotic Fury
Manchester Band on the Wall: Spherical
Objects/Grow Up/Picture Chords
Oldham Romeo & Juliet: Delegation
Oxford Corn Dolly: Angel Street

London Soho Pizza Express: Johnny
Barnes Quartet
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The
Rain/Brain Burgers
London Waterloo National Theatre Foyer:
Peter Ind Trio
London West Hampstead Moonlight
Club: The Jennies/The

LIVE PACKAGE

STRAIGHT MUSIC PRESENTS

THE MEMBERS THE MEKONS THE INMATES

LYCEUM STRAND WC2
SUNDAY 29TH APRIL at 7.30

Tickets £2.50 (incl. VAT) Advance Lyceum Box Office, Tel. 838 3715 London Theatre Bookings Tel. 839 3371 Premier Box Office, Tel. 240 2245, or Rock on Records, 9 Kentish Town Rd., NW1 Tel. 485 5080

TOYAH

THE RESURRECTION '79 TOUR

April

12th Leeds Fan Club	17th Sheffield Limit Club
13th Manchester Russell Club	18th York Pop Club
14th Liverpool Erics	19th Birmingham Barbarellas
15th Dumfries The Stagecoach	20th West Runton Pavilion
16th Edinburgh Tiffanys	21st London Music Machine

Something Special coming soon on Safari Records

Tour booked by MAM Agency

THE BRIDGE HOUSE

23 BARKING ROAD, CANNING TOWN, E16

Thursday, April 12th 40p REBEL + Support First 100 get free copy of "Rocks Rhonda" Rebel's first single on Bridge House Records	Sunday, April 15th 40p R.D.B. + Rare Breed
Friday, April 13th 60p WARM JETS (Current single "Blissful Jack") + Protex	Monday, April 16th 50p Rock's Memory with SECRET AFFAIR + The Chords
Saturday, April 14th 50p JACKIE LYNTON's H.D. BAND (Latest album on sale here)	Tuesday, April 17th 50p Back 'n' Better KENNY (Remember "The Bump"?) Wednesday, April 18th 40p THE TICKETS + Darren's Dead Flowers

HERMIT LIVE

Brentwood Youth House, Sharnfield Road, Brentwood

Monday, April 16th

GIRLSCHOOL

+ Special Guests
STEALER

If in doubt phone recorded programme on Brentwood 216827 anytime.

DUKE OF LANCASTER

Approach Road, NEW BARNET (Outside S&S New Barnet)

Thursday April 12th
SKINFUCKS

Friday April 13th
RAM

Saturday April 14th
DOG WATCH

Sunday April 15th
CANIS MAJOR

Tuesday April 17th
LITTLE EGYPT

FRANKIE MILLER and HIS BAND

AT THE MAXWELL HALL AYLESBURY

Saturday, April 14th at 7.30 pm
The Train

FRANKIE MILLER and HIS BAND

+ FLICKS + WEAPON
A. C. Sound and Vision

Tickets: 215p from Earth Records Aylesbury, Scorpion High Wycombe, Harport Amersham, Old Town Records Hemel Hempstead, F.L. Moore Blitchley Dunstable and Luton, H.V. Buddingham or 215p at door on night. Life membership 250. This will be Frankie Miller's 4th Great Franks Aylesbury appearance (1/1/72, 11/3/72, 7/8/77, 14/4/79).

and the Franks Aylesbury ladies will be in off the streets

JACKSONS ROCK CLUB

Anthony Road, N6 (opp. Highgate tube) Tel. 01-340 5228

Saturday 14 April at 8pm

STICKERS

+ The Method

Admission £1.25 — Members £1.00

This is all included in the Wednesday Club

VIP's

Friday April 13th
PEGASUS
Stoke Newington (9.20)

Sunday April 15th
TWO BREWERS
Clapham Common

Wednesday April 18th
CROC'S
Rayleigh, Essex

Bookings/Twist and Shout 01-223 6481

WINDSOR CASTLE

309 Harrow Road W.3

Mon 19th April
Just returned from USA
"Fulham Fallouts"

Tues 17th April
Ricky Cool & The Icebergs

Wed 18th April
Dexy's Midnight Brothers

Thurs 19th April
Soulboys + Millionsaires

Fri 20th April
Warm Jets + La Starza

Sat 21st April
Distributors + Satellites

Sun 22nd April
Spare Parts

Brian B

01-261 6153

ALBUMS EXTRA

THE SCRATCH BAND

The Scratch Band (London)

ROGER C. REALE

Radio Active (London)

Several months ago I reviewed with much enthusiasm the American import versions of these albums. As they've now been released in Britain, with additional tracks, a concise reappraisal seems appropriate.

Roger C. Reale sings brief, hard, very fast rock in a gruff, gravelly voice. Imagine a manic John Fogerty. Imagine a less accomplished Rockpile. Reale has attack, pace but no variety. 'Radio Active' is a jolt of adrenalin the first couple of times you play it, but the appeal quickly fades. This is monotonous, one-dimensional, ultimately arid music; and I'm a bit embarrassed now that I liked it in the first place. Oh well, I was younger and less rigorous then.

The Scratch Band however have remained firm favourites. All they do is play cosy, safe rock 'n' pop but at least they do it with skill, energy and enthusiasm. The word is panache.

They bounce through a torchy 'I Only Want To Be With You', a Lou Reed spoof, an affectionate Tamalesque pastiche, a vigorous rendition of Willie Dixon's 'Don't Go No Further', plus numerous other spirited versions of traditional pop styles. The production is somewhat threadbare, limiting a possibly excellent record to the plainly good. And one or two tracks are no more than ordinary; a little staid, a little too '60s.

But The Scratch Band, with a lotta heart and soul, continue to get my vote as the enjoyable face of pop irrelevance.

Graham Lock

THE AMAZING RHYTHM ACES

The Amazing Rhythm Aces (ABC)

Though riddled with influences, 'The Amazing Rhythm Aces' contrives somehow to exude considerable character of its own.

Glibly speaking, the Aces come on like the Deep South's answer to The Band, minus the metaphysics but with similar values: there's more Southern warmth in these grooves than in any amount of 'Have a nice day, y'all's'. With James Hooker (mainly piano) and Billy Earhart (mainly organ) fully justifying the Aces' keyboard double-up, the music has a slow-burning strength belied by its air of homespun philosophy.

Four of the six originals sport 'onesome traveller' lyrics of the 'Six Days On The Road' variety, yet the worldly-wise vocals — mostly Russell Smith — and lack of clichés make the theme seem icebox-fresh.

This lack of fancy imagery in the Aces' own songs means they can open with Al Green's 'Love And Happiness' and the elderly 'Lipstick Traces' with no loss of identity. Similarly, 'If You Gotta Make A Fool Of Somebody' is so well suited to their patented blend of passion and dignity it could be a Russell Smith song.

Guitarist Duncan Cameron is the group show-off, contributing sweet pedal steel to his own 'Homestead In My Heart' and git-along mandolin and banjo to 'Say You Lied'. But Smith is king ace, as the finale shows. 'Rodrigo, Rite And Elaine' shapes up like a melodrama in the 'Long Black Veil' tradition, dobro and accordion setting the scene. Smith plays the Lone Wolf observer figure watching lower Rita (Tracey Nelson and wife Elaine (Lisa Gilkyson) fight over Rodrigo/Roger, who shrewdly never shows up. Beat shaggy dog story I've heard in ages.

The Amazing Rhythm Aces are already a satisfying side alley if you're tired of the main drag. On the evidence here, they could be lot more.

Harry George

I ROY

Cancer (Front Line)

So what's the future for reggae, then? Will it disappear up its own red, gold and green bum, or will it work out some sort of interesting direction for itself?

Sometimes I just don't care any more; as long as I can listen to the old music I love, I think I can get by without the weekly trip to the dub store, which usually ends up disappointing me anyway — too many second-rate 45s these days.

In that frame of mind, I'm pleasantly surprised, if not taxed, by an instrumental album like 'Cancer', which — with the man Tommy McCook on tenor saxophone — incorporates several new cuts to rhythms from I Roy's last (and his best) in years, 'World On Fire'.

The back cover shows producer Roy in ecstasy at the mixing board — or has he just fallen asleep on the job? No, be fair, he's done well here, allowing the sax-dominated music to carry itself without relying too heavily on a dubster's gimmicks. True, the gimmicks are there: some geezer cleaning his comb, the boings and clangs of outrageous dub, all that and more. But the tricks don't intrude too much, the horns are allowed to get on with the job.

The classic dub albums of our time ('Aquarius', 'Dub Serial', etc) use good rhythms to push them forward where no electronics can take them. While it's by no means a classic, 'Cancer' applies the same principle: 'Virgin Affair', for example, has driven bass and drum well-supported by tuneful horn riffs, and is about the best track here.

To reggae rednecks like me, 'Cancer' is a small mercy. It may not change my life, but it's better than cleaning out the Aegean stables. Take it from me, I've tried.

Nick Kimberley

words (Barry Clarke) words words words words words words words words words words

CITY HALL, ST ALBANS

Saturday April 14th at 8pm

JOHN MILES

+ BANDIT

Mary Jane Disco Bar Food

Tickets £2.50

Saturday April 21st at 8pm

Capital Radio's

GRAHAM DENE

+ JOHN DeSADE REVERBERATION

ROADSHOW

Bar Food

Tickets £1.50

All tickets from Box Office, 37 Chequer Street, St Albans. Tel 64511 or available on door

Friday April 27th SUPERCARGE + Bleak House

words (Barry Clarke) words words words words words words words words words words

ASTORIA THEATRE

01-439 8031 01-734 4291

JACK GOOD'S

6 Rock'n Roll Concerts

Sunday April 1st, Sunday April 8th, Sunday April 15th, Sunday April 22nd.

5.30pm & 8.00pm

Prices: £3 £4 £5

THE REZILLOS

NEW Live
ALBUM

Mission Accomplished... but the beat goes on SRK 6069

Also available 1st album

• Can't Stand the Rezillos •

K 56530

NEW Live
SINGLE

Cold Wars b/w
▪ Flying Saucer Attack &
▪ Twist and Shout Sir 4014
▪ (not on album)

ON THE TOWN

"Hands up anybody who wants to go home..."
GRAHAM PARKER — PIC PENNIE SMITH

Graham Parker And The Rumour

Hammersmith Odeon

While no one was looking, Graham Parker has nimbly and single-mindedly stepped through his inner tangles and finally balanced purpose with expression and also brought himself into perspective in the widening scope of rock 'n' roll.

He has rediscovered (or re-established) economy and dazzled positivity, and recorded the mature follow-up to 'Howlin' Wind'. 'Squeezing Out Sparks' emphatically imposes new, extreme standards and it has justifiably grabbed the respect that nothing since that first minor revelation has suggested he honestly deserves.

Respect that acknowledges he has fought his way through to become one of the great rock 'n' roll entertainers of all time.

At the Hammersmith Odeon on Monday, he triumphantly proved that he has the pure physical presence and ability to demand audience attention. And he's undoubtedly up there with the Presleys, Sydneys, Jaggars, Marleys and all those people who've had that rare, ugly

Passion is no ordinary skill beauty.

Graham Parker is special. He probably always was, but right now everything has connected.

Onstage he is positive, direct and determined. He does not articulate the pressure or situations perfectly, and he is not as sharp and shaking with his clipped sketches as Costello. But his projection, and more specifically his singing of the carefully honest verse, violently transcends the standard limitations of the words, which aren't weak but nor are they profound. In the same way, the show's searing intensity overcame the basic limitations of form.

Parker makes a lyric hit hard, urges that each word matters. He needs to move his listeners.

After a song had surged its way through peaks, dipped, steadied and crashed to an exhilarating climax there was an emptiness in the Odeon's high hall: an element of communal exhaustion.

This alarming effect of disorientating the audience while entertaining them was not an instance of content overcoming form: it was one man's exultant emotion and natural style smashing his own strong dignity into each song; inspiring his band on to startling levels of sympathetic commitment. Yes despite the unique skills of The Rumour, Graham Parker And The Rumour are a one-man show.

Parker burns life into the songs and wastes no time while he's on the stage. Such visual intrusions as the odd pantomime gimmick of Brinsley Schwarz's cheeky posing, could not detract from Parker's magnetism.

Graham's presence alone makes Graham Parker And The Rumour come close to being, as the compere said, "The greatest rock 'n' roll band in the world."

These days I don't really know what that means, in fact it doesn't even make sense; but Parker the worker, passionately dominating the stage, was everything I've always thought rock 'n' roll should be about. It was all traditional, but Parker made it timeless. And although his music is predominantly a craft, that craft is artistic.

What Parker stands for is himself — and he wants you to know it.

Of course the show was over too quickly. The set was not a safe selection of warm oldies and the more obvious newbies, but was packed with much of the new album and broken up with explosively interpreted 'hits' plus a couple of songs as yet unreleased — 'Mercury Poisoning' and 'Crawling From The Wreckage'. Spontaneity and pull were omnipresent; even if he could have got away with sitting down, Parker much preferred to ignore the easy-chair and kneel the air.

Before he reached 'You Can't Be Too Strong' off the new LP about seven songs in, the show had been satisfyingly solid. It was hard and consistent, but the wrong side of a classic.

'Back To Schooldays' had been scalding; 'Mercury Poisoning' had been scathing. 'Heat Treatment' confirmed the sensationally composed brutality of The Rumour, and I hardly noticed they were brass-less, such was the vigour of the performance, the sweetness of the instrumentation, the clarity of the sound.

The Rumour play an uncluttered, punchy music that is like a miniature equivalent of an imposing wide-scale soul production, a finely channelled, restrained yet fierce assertive dual prong of insistency and impact that Parker directs and dissects with a voice that is stinging and... soulful. A voice that torments but never irritates; a voice that is dramatic but never mannered.

Then came 'You Can't Be Too Strong' where everything fell into ferocious focus. Where Parker became a giant.

Parker played guitar accompanied by obvious bass and keyboards. The song is not tremendous but, with Parker's subtle showmanship and his immodest domination of the Hammersmith Odeon and that veracious voice, it was something rare. It was greatness.

From those few minutes of suspended raw pride and yearning, the set was invincible and majestic; a stunning run of pointedly passionate classics — fast, streamlined and sparking.

But 'You Can't Be Too Strong' and the following two songs formed a spearhead with which the show hit its target: 'Love Gets You Twisted' — where the lyric implies opposite understanding and where Parker's delivery had me mentally screaming 'He Knows! He Knows!' — then 'One More Chance' — the irrational desperation of love — concluded a scorching three-part epic of derision, incision and need.

Graham Parker's voice and body reached out and crashed through the confining glamour of the venue.

The Rumour gave each assault the concentration and consideration absolutely necessary to maintain the power and precision from which Parker works. They were disciplined and openly enthusiastic — happy doing what they're doing right! They made some great noise. Without The Parker leading them they'd only be a clever machine, but he puts them right out there into the land of legends.

There was proper rapturous reception for this superb and convincing exhibition. Parker acted like, moved like, and was accepted as a Star with two standing ovations. The emotional power, the scintillating effectiveness of this new Graham Parker is a rare and splendid thing.

He is certainly not dull.

Paul Morley

Elvis Costello And The Attractions

New York

Over a weekend in New York, Elvis Costello proved his chameleon powers.

At the Palladium he was a consummate entertainer; a performer who built a perfect rapport with his audience and played them for the responses he wanted. At the Bottom Line club the following night, he was more like a fighter. With the audience close enough to see the bug-eyes he was making at them, Costello came out with his fists up.

The Rubinos, who opened both shows, are a band that everyone can love, though they made an odd pairing with Costello. They look so much like 'nice boys', apple-pie clean and wholesome but they do play with punch, creating pop-rock that is simultaneously playfully sweet and powerfully aggressive.

Onstage the group perfectly recreate the three-part vocal harmonies of their records which gives them that bright, bubbly quality. It's rare to see three members of a rock band pay such careful attention to their singing, and the effort pays off. Behind the voices, Tommy Dunbar's guitar provides the bite.

In keeping with 'The World Elvis Costello Tour Three' motif, from 'Armed Forces' the roadies were dressed in Army fatigues. But at the Palladium, Costello seemed to be saying that he had come in peace.

He opened with 'Peace, Love And Understanding', the band swirling and wild with a sound so full it was almost orchestral. By the end of the second number, 'Two Little Hitlers', it was clear that Elvis was a changed man. Last time here he did nothing but anger, but tonight he was actually smiling at the audience and friendly.

His attitude not only made him a more likeable figure, but made the audience more easy to manipulate. When he pleasantly asked, 'You're not going to be a boring, early show audience, are you?' the house got on its feet. Whereas last year, he tried haranguing for the same effect and failed.

Many of the songs were so re-worked or delivered with so much more power and drive that they sounded like completely new versions. The material from 'Armed Forces' especially benefited from an injection of venom, and the rough edges were retained rather than being smoothed over, making the songs more convincing.

'Two Little Hitlers' was given an extra verse with new lyrics, as was 'Alison'. 'No Dancing' had a new, disco arrangement and its organ-drum intro was unrecognisable until Costello's vocal. But the true source of the added impact was Costello's guitar playing and Steve Nieve's incredible organ work.

His organ, one of the most often abused instruments in rock 'n' roll, created atmosphere, soared and jabbed. He's now one of the best players in the business and The Attractions have developed from being an adequate 'back-up band to become a powerhouse in their own right.

This means that the focus no longer has to be on Costello's dramatic delivery. Now he rarely stands alone in the spot-light making faces while the band remain silent: the kind of moments which frequently dragged down past performances.

This was ensemble playing, and when Costello did make gestures, as in 'Chelsea', he was a purposeful drama-mester. And when he hung back for a moment in 'Big Boys' and then stepped up and snarled, 'Everything is so provocative', it was a direct challenge to everyone present.

He then danced to the edge of the stage, attacking with his guitar, getting the audience on its feet; and having done this, he danced back to the band, turning to them with a look that said, 'See, I did it!' Yet, Costello's stance was not threatening.

But at the Bottom Line the next night, the audience-performer confrontation one expects at Costello gigs was again evident.

Perhaps it was because he was angry that there were demonstrators outside protesting against his reported racist remarks. Whatever the reason, Costello's delivery was less controlled, but more impassioned. He shook himself like a snake's warning rattle; shook streams of sweat off his face. He grimaced and menaced, but the band never had to slow down to let him stare down his adversaries.

But Costello himself was forcefully, dramatically upfront. There was no way he would hide.

Richard Grabel

Siouxsie And The Banshees The Human League Rema Rema

Rema Rema
Rainbow

Rema Rema are prowling into the '80s. They pose no threats with their grey defiance, set no new grounds with their withdrawn presentation; but their noise — long shapeless sections of carefully coarse tunnel rock decorated with harsh synthesizer patterns — is absorbing if not shocking. They move closer to mid-Can than The Fall ever do, but never stumble like The Prefects used to.

The Human League are remembering the '60s.

They're cosy, quaint and curiously disturbing. They played a positive and consistent set, confirming the variety and strength of their compulsive pop songs.

They're also gaining confidence and relaxing on stage, and thus there's a warmth in their presentation previously lacking (are you listening, dissenters?). And they really are good to watch (still listening?).

The Human League truly have all angles covered. Soon they'll be virgins; let's hope they don't lose any of their full and fascinating flavour.

They deservedly encored with 'Rock And Roll Part One' (joined by the ubiquitous Spizz Oil in the appropriate dress, with the appropriate gestures) and Iggy's 'Nightclubbing'; which puts into perspective the new pop as it gratefully twists into the '80s.

Siouxsie And The Banshees revealed that in terms of audience response and the maturity of the music, they stand on the threshold of being the first real superstars of the '80s.

Performing this one-off to raise money for the National Society for Mentally Handicapped Children, they opened with unexpected Spectorian splendour with a hard hitting and massive 'Jigsaw Feeling', each instrument undistorted and selfishly selective. Kenny Morris' kit was set on a platform, beneath which sun-yellow lights burst out into the audience, extravagantly framing Siouxsie and exaggerating the wounded colours of her vulgar make-up. Steve Severin stood way out to the left, fighting the notes out of his bass. John McKay stood way to the right, composed and motionless.

Their sound is perhaps the only example of how a naturally unorthodox, distinct and coherent music has evolved from inspired incompetence. Instead of 'learning' to play instruments, they have stretched out from their initial intuitive approach, so that what's formed is a slightly altered, absorbing method of playing. Even when so loud, the co-ordination and movement of the music was obviously unique.

Severin's classic pulling, pulsing bass; Morris' pumping, thumping drumming that establishes a multitude of rhythms; McKay's potent, inverted chord work with Siouxsie's strong, demonstrative vocals sticking out at awkward angles or skimming over the music with stiff grace — it was endlessly enticing and thrilling.

It's still confusing trying to distinguish on what levels the Banshees are communicating. Are they so successful due to their subtlety and innovation? Do people identify with the Banshees' demonstrations and despair?

At The Rainbow, their two classic singles were well received, but 'Metal', 'Switch', 'Overground', 'Suburban Relpse' and 'Pure' from the album got an equally encouraging response. They also introduced a handful of new pieces, including their next single 'Playground Twist', which suggested a considerable extension of their musical and conceptual boundaries.

They do have a solidly young-punk audience; followers so determined to white-riot that the front rows of The Rainbow were demolished. During an emphatic 'Hong Kong Garden' parts of the seats were flung on stage and the atmosphere threatened to erupt. At such times I feel that new audiences don't want to grow up; that they want to be abused with clichés and indulgence; that they don't want diversity and subtlety.

And then the Banshees followed up 'Garden' with the slow, complex new song 'Premature Burial' and despite being unfamiliar, the audience listened and responded.

They finished with 'Pure', which accelerated into an inspired improvisational passage of symphonic drive. Confused by the negative-positive audience response they encored with a swift 'Heiter Skeler'... and Siouxsie skipped across the stage with the music like she did at the beginning.

The music churned, built, charged, contracted, exploded... stopped in the middle of nowhere like a lot of their songs do... slam!... and I used to think Siouxsie And The Banshees never sang love songs, but really every song they do is a love song in some way.

Yum yum on a merry-go-round; Siouxsie And The Banshees were great.

Paul Morley

2TV

Leeds

Gang of Four and Wild Horses aren't everybody's idea of raincheck material, but it still seemed significant that 2TV — the only other rock and roll contenders on the same Sunday night in Leeds — had precious little trouble packing out suburban prog venue, The Staging Post.

Check 'em out... 2TV — pic ALAN CLIFT.

Possessing comprehensive dollops of what we call 'local credibility', the Leeds Jumbo (formerly trading by the name of Rogue) attracted large-scale semi-euphoric responses from rent-a-punter and roving critics alike, and deservedly so. 2TV's sound is in no way revolutionary and it is either eulogised as 'half-baked new wave', or else dismissed outright as (yeucocch!) power pop, the degree and direction of the swing mostly depending on the way you feel on the night.

But in small doses, 2TV get pretty close to the modern rock and roll heart, embracing the strict functionalisms of both The Jam (notably with 'Have You Seen Gene?') and The Pirates ('Mary Thompson'); heavy on riffs, hooks and pastiche refrains, they occasionally cut it in a big way. Vocalist and rhythm guitarist Steve Speight produces another Bryan Rocky-style job, forcefully fronting the tight, effective sounds of lead guitarist Steve Barras, mod bassist Steve Young and (yeah, let's hear it for 1959's Christian Name of the Year) drummer Steve Gale.

Being the local band most likely to, there were plenty of esoteric cat-calls and enough "you'll-know-this-one" numbers to make the first-timer feel like a stranger. The boys are full of themselves — at the high on hope, low on fear stage of their careers, and while they're going to need to work on the Idiosyncrasy Factor, they're well in with a shout.

Emma Ruth

Dr Feelgood Cooper Clarke

Belfast

The Feelgoods first visit to Belfast in Autumn '78 was my first experience of live rock 'n' roll.

I went home dazed by the clean, continuous and unbelievably high that was engendered from the stage. They exposed a raw nerve somewhere in the psyche, set the blood racing through the veins and struck a chord deep in my heart, just like I'd heard it would happen. Thanks for the memories...

After that the Feelgoods became a less attractive proposition in the manic path trailblazed by the Pistols; which was perhaps a harsh sentence for one of the new genre's main influences — not that they had any commercial worries. Always a solid working band, they smoothed over the departure of Wilko, continued to make inroads into the large halls, and the chart-topping 'Stupidity' brought them a fair slice of the market.

I buggered off with my copy of that album (just for posterity, but it was never any substitute for the real thing), turned a head to the uneventful 'Be Seeing You' and though I've so far failed to hear 'Private Practice' the group's last two 45s have suggested that their composing talents and playing prowess have taken on renewed vigour. Certainly those releases must go some way in accounting for tonight's capacity audience.

The black clad figure of John Cooper Clarke is at once comic and charismatic looking like a tarantula on its hind legs he rails, torments and confides in the crowd. The

Until now the role of sheep in the rock music industry has been under-rated to say the least.

At last, Adrian Munsey, supported by the broad minds and deep pockets of Virgin Records A&R old department set the matter straight.

Lost sheep. It's new. It's wild. It's flock 'n' roll. It's the new single from Adrian Munsey on Virgin Records now. VS 254.

And you can see the lot on the Russell Harty show on April 14th.

Virgin

SIOUXSIE SIOUX: costume by Angus McFiorucci — pic CHRIS HORLER.

response is one of bemusement and mild abuse, for a regrettably short appearance.

What he did perform was marvellous; educational institutions should ditch the baloney of The Romantics and tune into this guy for some real Modern Culture.

The Feelgoods are perhaps the only group I've ever seen who start bang on time, play a set of reasonable length, and end in time to give the punter a fighting chance against the city's transport services.

Indicative of their straight-ahead approach and shrewd set planning, which has favourites juxtaposed with less well known tunes, the commercial makes the uncommercial palatable to the average listener. A band like the Feelgoods are far too professional ever to make mistakes in either pacing or performance.

John Mayo shook off the spectre of Wilko long ago and his playing is brisk, sharp and overwhelmingly powerful. His approach to an old song like 'Going Back Home' is patently his own as he winds stinging chords around the tune. The rest of the group play with a genuine understanding and assured empathy for R&B.

But that's as far as it goes; their set has very little colour or flavour, their appeal is one-dimensional, their sound too monochromatic ever to be taken in quantities larger than the odd single (the superbly incisive and commercial 'Milk And Alcohol').

Brilleaux still dangles the microphone between his legs for an extension of the masochism inherent in many of the compositions. Their overwhelming appeal is that of masculine assertiveness played through compulsive, danceable and appealing tunes. But this appeal is transient. The performance may be memorable, but few individual songs rise above the mundane.

Ultimately whatever way you rub it up, the Feelgoods are a group working in the same sphere of incitement as all-out-boogie specialists like Quo or even Canned Heat. Hey, what price Lee Brilleaux as this generation's Bob Hite?

Gavin Martin

The Hollies

Wembley Conference Centre

"Anyone see the Whistle Test last night?" asked Allan Clarke as he introduced a Bruce Springsteen song. The ensuing silence said more about The Hollies' dilemma than I ever could.

While writers crank it up on behalf of Big Star, Dwight Twilley, The Records or whoever, this band have been giving you spunky, impassioned harmony pop on six albums in the last four years. Yet here they are, playing this bloated lounge to an audience whose Hollies-consciousness ceased with 'The Air That I Breathe'.

Lulling them with 'I Can't Let Go', the polite volume and Allan Clarke's white suit briefly raise the spectre of the group's cabaret days, soon banished by Peter Arnisen's synthesizer and Bobby Elliott's incisive drums. Clarke then hurls his jacket over the amps and the '70's begin.

'Another Night' is superb, slipping into a Steely Dan groove during Tony Hicks' wah-wah solo, while those yearning voices are ideally suited to 'Sandy', a typical Springsteen melodrama. Though more than a touch autobiographical, 'Write On' ('For all the frustrated songwriters who feel there's no-one listening') avoids triteness, building confidently into an aggressive, shattering harmony climax. The applause is cautious, confused.

But The Hollies would no more disappoint than pander to their audience, so that even a teen-sage like 'Bus Stop' is played fresh and straight and their hits medley is more than the usual escape clause. Having announced they're going to do 'Just One Look' differently, it seems realistic rather than cynical for Clarke to add, "If you don't like it you can see the exit signs."

The home straight is all Phase II hits from 'He Ain't Heavy' onwards, plus 'Too Young To Be Married', Hicks' brilliant acoustic solo overshadowing the queasy lyrics. Clarke straps on an axe for 'Long Cool Woman In A Black Dress', that glorious chunk of John Fogerty-for-pop-pickers we Brits were dumb enough to pass up at the time.

"When Hendrix heard Allan play, he died," quipped Terry Sylvester, opening a cultural gap between band and audience you could have driven a bus through. Undeterred, The Hollies segued into a rock medley, with 'Peggy Sue' unsurprisingly the highlight; lightweight toughness is a speciality with these boys.

On the debit side, 'It's In Every One Of Us' continues their flirtation with super-club introspection best left to Neil Diamond and his ilk, while Arnisen gets enough rope to hang himself more than once. But Hicks and Elliott are absurdly underrated musicians; they're part of a thinking, thriving organism, not some rock 'n' pop Tussauds.

Sylvester took one look at the post-gig reception and commented disgustedly: "What a load of shit — they're all posers and we don't know any of them."

This wasn't the Second Coming, but if the name put you off then I'm sorry for you, not for The Hollies. They don't mess about.

Harry George

CRIME PLAYS.

BANDIT

Partners In Crime

'PARTNERS IN CRIME': THE NEW ALBUM FROM BANDIT.

BANDIT ON TOUR WITH JOHN MILES.

April 12th. IPSWICH Gaumont
April 14th. ST. ALBANS City Hall
April 16th. PLYMOUTH Fiesta
April 17th. READING Hexagon
April 18th. PORTSMOUTH Guildhall
April 19th. WOLVERHAMPTON Civic Hall
April 20th. LONDON Hammersmith Odeon
April 21st. EASTBOURNE Congress Theatre
April 22nd. CROYDON Fairfield Hall
April 23rd. BIRMINGHAM Odeon
April 24th. SHEFFIELD City Hall
April 25th. BRADFORD St. George's Hall
April 26th. DERBY Assembly Rooms
April 27th. BOURNEMOUTH Winter Gardens
April 28th. CANTERBURY Odeon
April 29th. LEICESTER De Montfort Hall

ARL 5010

Also available on cassette

An oddball's country swing

Dan Hicks

The Venue

In a field not noted for its eccentricity the one and only Dan Hicks stands out like a pork chop in a Kosher deli. His four shows at The Venue were packed with so much incident, changes in pressure, atmosphere and rapport, and such a range of sophisticated material that a casual observer not familiar with Mr Hicks might ponder that here is a man who commands respect — a man with powerful business concerns to protect his livelihood; a man of means. He'd be wrong on most counts.

Dan Hicks draws legend and myth to him in abundance. His track record with Blue Thumb marked a heyday in that company's roster of oddball country swing, and idiosyncratic modal jazz. Dan Hicks is/was as much of a pioneer in modern American musical idioms as Ry Cooder, Taj Mahal and their ilk. He is also renowned for a fatal attraction to the hobo who gives a shit lifestyle.

Hicks drinks like it was going out of fashion, insults his audience (although perhaps he tells them the truth), and refuses to kowtow to form and expectations.

At The Venue, Hicks shuffled on wisecracking like a Winchester, pork-pie hat balanced precariously, knees buckling at random. Then delivered a floating series of Hicksville classics, all of them stamped with the definitive mark of his native wit, his absurdly woven non-sequiturs, his painful insights and irreverent pokes. This time there were no Hot Licks; no Sid Page on fiddle, no Lickettes — Maryann and Naomi; and they were missed. Although Hicks arrived with a top notch bunch of West Coast pickers (Mike Helm, violin; Mark Curianis, string bass; and Kenneth 'Turtle' Van Damere, acoustic guitar), I think everyone wanted to see and hear the band who conceived the repertoire.

The new outfit were remarkably accomplished after only a month together, but lacked spontaneity and enthusiasm and were apparently in awe of their leader. Hicks himself played the same old decorated Guild that he used with later Charlatans, but his main instrument was a voice smoother than vintage Bourbon, full of savage twists and placid backwaters.

Hicks' catalogue ranged from the ridiculously sublime — 'I Scare Myself' and 'How Can I Miss You (When You Won't Go Away)', to the sublimely ridiculous — 'Payday Blues', 'O'Reilly At The Bar', 'I Got Mine'. There were also the traditional favourites — 'Fujiyama', the gorgeous 'Canned Music' and the whimsical 'The Buzzard Was Their Friend'. Even new songs like 'Twin Peaks' and 'Hell, I'd Go' (about a guy who meets a friendly spaceman) had the familiar Hicks

DAN HICKS: Bourbon Bottle Blues. Pic TOM SHEEHAN.

hailmarks.

I could continue to detail the qualities that ooze from Dan Hicks: the W. C. Fields mannerisms, the childlike perspectives and the caustic dissections of what is politely known as 'the human condition'.

But even if the old sod did refuse to do an interview, I can only say Thank God for Dan Hicks and have another drink.

Max Bell

Duffo

The Venue

Having rebuked both Parsons and Nightingale in one week, Jeff Duff (current enfant terrible of showbiz) has garnered enough interest to half-fill The Venue with innocent burger-munching onlookers; and someone has to review the half-baked amateur-hour in which this gawling, Antipodean Twigg-faced stick insect preened and warbled for an eager clutch of Pentax-toting lenspersons.

The poor sod. Endowed with a body designed by Frank Lloyd Wright, swaddled in an orthopaedic cat-suit and trailing festoons of risqué polythene, he looked like he had just stepped off an embalming slab.

When I walked in, Duffo was enacting some lewd contortions with an inflatable merkin-dolly (all good camera fodder), and from there it was downhill all the way. The rest of his performance was a shambling fiasco of sub-Wayne County jolly-japes, barely disguised as a rocky horror routine.

A sympathetic and snappy rock backing injected a quota of listenability into the night's proceedings, but, naivness aside, Duffo's songs are as interesting as most of what you're likely to hear on vinyl — assuming that you hunger for puerile, self-indulgent piffle that deals exclusively with Duffo, Duff Records, brainlessness, erections and masturbation.

Everyone had a good snigger and if it's any guide to musical credibility, Jesus of Shepherd's Bush was there waving his arms about.

The last 20 minutes were devoted to a sing-along-with-Duffo rendition of 'Let Me Fuck Your Mind', replete with a bunch of geezers in ecclesiastical drag supplying a falsetto chorus. A change of costume for an embarrassingly straight version of 'MacArthur Park' and, Bobs-ye-er-Uncle, you've got your money's worth.

For your average sophisticated fun loving rock aficionado, Duffo is The Pile. I hope that this review hastens the Golden Future that awaits him on the Seaside Special Circuit.

Rick Joseph

Billy Connolly

Glasgow

Hair Pointing in 90 different directions, seventh-generation-nuclear-fallout-victim make-up immaculate, you dashing New Music-hall Express correspondent site, surrounded by the, uh, 'cream' of the glittering world of Glasgow showbiz, writing notes about... a juggler (?) and a comedian (??).

Chris Bliss is 'The world's first rock'n'roll juggler'. He juggles his luminous balls beneath strobes and special lighting in time to the wild, exotic, jungle rhythms of Styx. The Beatles and synthesizer versions of classical music. The effect is like a one man Dancing Waters, or human Laserium, indubitably boring after five minutes.

Maybe he used to be a rock singer who extended the tambourine throwing part of his act.

Billy Connolly is a folk singer who extended his introductions until the songs became little more than improvisational reference points. This was a wise move, since he writes dreadful songs and sings them as well as any Glasgow drunk.

For some reason singer/songwriters have always felt the need to be funny between songs. Some of them have a rare talent for it, too: Loudon Wainwright, Pete Atkin, Ivor Cutler and Ron Geesin are all first-rate comedians. Even James Taylor used to be quite funny.

And if you believe in some kind of alternative society consisting of all the people who like rock music, existing slightly out of phase from standard reality like another dimension, then why not have alternative society jugglers, comedians, magicians and tightrope walkers as well as musicians for entertainment?

The standards necessary to be accepted by this audience are very high, but Billy Connolly still makes it. Not because of any great innovations in comedy or rising arrest at every performance with daring cocaine jokes, obscenities and general undermining of society. He does do those things, though in greatly diluted form, but mainly it's because he's one of the good guys; which is really the best way to have a long-term career.

Looking at the audience around me, you wouldn't think this was something which should be reviewed by NME. He may not be as hip as Richard Pryor or early Cheech and Chong, but at least he makes no concessions to anybody. The police jokes, the marital-aids routine, the cussing all get laughs. But from many it's the nervous kind of laughter at something vaguely illicit.

But he's been on television, so he must be okay. Even though he has long hair.

Foalist They don't recognise a child of the revolution leaking enlightened hippy attitudes to the opiated masses. Babylon will fall!

Like the best comedians, Connolly's main talent lies in noticing what goes on around him. Probably due to the lowered standards brought about by bulk produce, his show now includes many clichés, stock ad-libs and poor jokes alongside the good bits. But I still like him.

His audience like him more than I do. But I suspect many of them would've thought him a boor if they'd met in a pub ten years ago.

Glenn Gibson

Pinpoint

Hope and Anchor

Deep in the depths of a North-London basement, something stirs. Pinpoint, a three piece, angry and so grateful for 1977, are on stage powering out their stuff like Joe Strummer was still in swaddling clothes.

The three members with 40 gigs behind them now, stem from the country more famous for hills and rugby: Wales.

One-time Lurker Arturo and gangly Dave Allen form the front line, sharing vocals throughout a strong if uneventful set that owed much to the Rebel Passion created by The Clash at back in the year of the Garage and Towerblock.

The songs themselves are not slow. Neither are they quiet. Distortion-orientated and ever chopping between Hugh Griffiths snare-torn back drop, the pace was established right from the word go. And when this lot go they don't stop.

This gig was plagued by only two things: a cement-footed audience and Dave's passion for destroying his bass strings, but even so the basic strength of the band's raw energy shone through, kicking and stabbing our eardrums as if mortal injury was intended.

Highlights 'Richmond' and 'Asian Girls' left little doubt as to the quality of the music, no cheap disco pretensions of commercial visibility — just undiluted frenzy, young and urgent.

If you're under 25 and always wondered what the New Wave was like before the rot set in, go and see this band. They might not change your life, but they'll sure as hell try.

Julian Henry

March 5 - April 21

Signs of Spring

One, two, free.

TDK make superb quality cassettes. And Boots make some super springtime offers.

If you hurry you can pick up three TDK C90 dynamic cassettes for the price of two. That's a saving of £1.25.

So come into Boots before April 21st and get it taped with TDK.

Boots Normal Price for 3, £3.75.

Boots Special 3-pack Price £2.50*

3 TDK C90 Dynamic Cassettes for the price of 2

Boots normal price £2.25 each

Special 3 pack price £2.50

Boots

Make the most of your Boots.

*At this special offer price until April 21st from Boots Asda Departments subject to stock availability

'OUT THERE IN THE NIGHT'

a new single from

THE ONLY ONES

Available as a 3 track 12" EP in blue vinyl backed with
'Lovers Of Today' and 'Peter And The Pets'.

Taken from the album 'Even Serpents Shine'. Plus two highly acclaimed collectors tracks, unavailable since their appearance in 1977 on the independent Vengeance label. 'Lovers Of Today' and 'Peter And The Pets'.

See The Only Ones at
The Rainbow
Sat. April 28th.

Rainbow

'Out There In The Night' CBS 12-7285

from the album 'Even Serpents Shine' CBS 83451

[illegible]

£9.95 £6.95 £9.95 £13.99 £13.99

LEATHER
TIES
Available in genuine soft black or brown leather.
Well below shop prices at only
£2.50 + 70p P&P
Send cheque, P.O.'s to:
NICK STONE
LEATHERCRAFTS,
10 Sherrill St., off Handmade Rd.,
MANCHESTER M4 4BZ

[illegible]

UNION JACK
'JAM' JACKETS

£55. Limited Trousers £35, in red, suitable on knees. Sizes 28"- 34", any length.
Union
Jacks
£55. £55.00
Plain colour jackets
£30.00

Matching Trousers £15.00
in black, navy or light blue & light grey.

Button down shirts £35.00 in white, navy, light blue & grey.

Matching ties
£2.00
Black leather
ties £35.00

Prices include F & P.
We make for The Jam, Playboys, Shm 66, etc.
Trousers, etc. only. Set only with trade and group enquiries; most welcome.
Cheques & P.O.'s for:

Carnaby avenue

3 NEWBURGH STREET, LONDON W1A 4QG

[illegible]

SECTION A A17 HAWKWARD		 A18 KITH RICHARD		 A19 STONES		 A20 JIMI HENDRIX		 A21 LYNDIE BRYFORD		 A22 RUSH		 A23 UFO		 A24 RAINBOW		 A25 BOB MARLEY		 A26 DAVID BOWIE
 A2 BLACK SABBATH		 A10 BOB DYLAN		 A4 LED ZEPPELIN		 A7 THIN LIZZY		 A33 RAINBOW		 A1 ALICE COOPER		 A32 KISS		 A30 SANTANA		 A31 BOSTON		 A34 AC/DC

SWEAT SHIRTS £4.60 + p & p 40p EACH.
 Colours: Yellow, White, Sky Blue (Also in Grey and Beige)

T-SHIRTS £2.70 + p & p 30p EACH.
 Colours: Yellow, White and Sky Blue

POSTAGE and PACKING TREBLE FOR OVERSEAS

SECTION B B1 STATUS QUO		 B2 PINK FLOYD		 B3 BLONDIE		 B4 STRAWBERRY FIELDS CULTEEN		 B5 DONTIN		 B6 ROLLING STONES		 B7 MARILYN		 B8 LED ZEPPELIN		 B9 QUEEN		 B10 KISS
--	--	--------------------------	--	-----------------------	--	---	--	----------------------	--	------------------------------	--	-----------------------	--	----------------------------	--	---------------------	--	---------------------	--

PLEASE STATE ALTERNATIVE CHOICE WHERE POSSIBLE

QUANTITY	SIZE S, M, L or XL	DESIGN NUMBER	ALTERNATIVE CHOICE

ORDER FORM

NAME _____
 ADDRESS _____
 I ENCLOSE CHEQUE/P.O. FOR £ _____ DEPT NINE
 MADE PAYABLE TO: _____

FRESH DESIGNS, 82 Ashbourne House, Alberion Gardens, London NW11

FOR DETAILS OF ADVERTISING ON THE PLATTERSTALL, CONTACT SUNIE ON
01-261 6172

John F. Kennedy Drive Dublin.12.
Phone 505773 Telex 30544

NME Classifieds

REACH MORE PEOPLE THAN ANY OTHER MUSIC PAPER IN THIS COUNTRY

For further details ring

01-261 6122

New Musical Express
Classified Advertisements
26b King's Reach Tower,
Stamford Street, London, S.E.1

computer dating...
...and free postage, London & abroad. Send for your free guide to all the computer dating services in the UK. Contact: New Musical Express, 26b King's Reach Tower, Stamford Street, London, S.E.1. Tel: 01-261 6122

WANTED

15p per word

"AMERICAN GRAFFITI" Paperback

wid. W. Midlands

CAR EIGHT Track/Radio, London

tray 9 possible. S. Maywell, 2/133 Langton Way, Blackheath, SE3

ENGLAND/SCOTLAND Wembley

form. Kate Jimmy 0475 23163 offer form.

KATE BUSH tickets for London or Bristol, excellent prices. 0798 4265 evenings.

ONE BUSH call for one Bush House.

ROXY MUSIC London ticket, one price paid. High Wycombe 40005.

ROXY MUSIC Tickets wanted for any place, any date. Phone Liphook (Hampshire) 72222.

ROXY TICKET each night London, paid price paid or exchange for rare live

Roxy cassette. Phone 081-0625 523149

ROXY TICKETS, two or four urgently for Manchester, Liverpool or Birmingham. Anywhere considered, your price paid. Phone Nigel 0475 3174 outside

Manchester or Mossley 06880 3174, tricky. Manchester anytime. Leave phone number or address if not in.

SONG LYRICS wanted, seeking production. Details (S.A.) Robert

Norales, 20 Sneyd Hall, Broomfield, Staffordshire

FAN CLUBS 15p per word

COLLECTORS ITEM - Ceramic pen/ink portrait of John Travolta. Not a print - no cashers - £21 to T. Morgan,

"Newsm", Lymm, Penderly, Aberdeen, Glam

GENESIS OFFICIAL Fan Club send

see to Geoff Partyn, Genesis Information, P.O. Box 107, London, SE6.

LENA ZAVARONI Fan Club, see 20

St. Albans Road, Wymondham, Norfolk

NR18 1AY

OFFICIAL 1000 Fan Club - send see to Alan Davies, P.O. Box 50, London E18

1AX.

NEW YORK DOLLS Fan Club for information write to T. Starnes, Box 872, 3000

Joan Tullon, Montreal, H3S 2Z5, Quebec,

Canada

it's all bloody history!

The London Dungeon

BTA

award-winning exhibition

34 Tockley Street,

London, S.E.1

01-403 0606

OPEN EVERY DAY

FOR SALE

15p per word

ASBA, ASBA, New design stereo system, stereo and the stereo, also new

Boney M. carries 85p each P & P included (Overseas customers add 25p extra) send now to R. Harrison, 10 Cordon Road, Ingham, Skegness.

ALTERNATIVE SOUNDS Coventry

Fansite, April, 30p to 205 Albany Road,

Coventry.

AMERICAN AND British Radio Archives, see lists D. G. Prode, 45 High Street, Leamington, Surrey.

AMERICAN ROCK MAGAZINE -

SAENIC for instant list and order form. BOMB - No 15 Ramones, Acid

Punk, 8 (Anarchy in the U.S.A.), 10

Pistols Movie, Blonder, Generation X,

Nick Lowe, Devo - £1.25 Also Nov 15-

68 set in stock at £1.95 each. CRUISE

May 78, Nugent, Keith Emerson, Col-

lumb, Boston, Mica Taylor - 85p

OUTLAW PLAYER - January 79, Ace

Frimley, Gene Simmons, Paul Stanley,

Carlos Bonell, Mike Oldfield, 78s

Thelema, Talk Boies, February 79,

Lee Rocker, Chris Spedding, Television, 100 Greatest Rock & Roll 5-1ms

(1956-69), plus Movie Poster, Fulham

Nov 10/Jan 79, Devo, Dangle, Twisted

Band, Police, Carl Perkins, Gino Kiro

Band, Mica Ryder, £1.25 each. Also

£1.25 each, black, pink, blue, white.

All prices include post and packing. Cheques/P.O.s payable to GRAFFITI, Wagon

Road, London Road, Macclesfield, Wilt-

shire

AND NOW - Mirrors - Blondie,

Rita, Queen, Boney M, Siouxsie, Pre-

ter, David, Lizzy, Roddy, Bowie, Co-

lumb, Marley, Genesis, Ebon, Parle-

to, Madonna, Commodore, Culture,

E.P. Movie, Magazine, Gracie, B.G.'s,

A.G.O., Stones, T.B. Yes, Fanny, Tabbie

Haines, Clapton, Stewart, Reed, C.

Richard, Dylan, Font, Denny, £1.25

each. 200 postcard set for £3.95 for

£2.15 also MINOR BADGES (175 x

35) in same groups as above, plus a

booklet, £1.25 each. GENESIS (175 x

35) in same groups as above, plus a

booklet, £1.25 each. GENESIS (175 x

35) in same groups as above, plus a

booklet, £1.25 each. GENESIS (175 x

35) in same groups as above, plus a

booklet, £1.25 each. GENESIS (175 x

35) in same groups as above, plus a

booklet, £1.25 each. GENESIS (175 x

35) in same groups as above, plus a

booklet, £1.25 each. GENESIS (175 x

35) in same groups as above, plus a

booklet, £1.25 each. GENESIS (175 x

35) in same groups as above, plus a

booklet, £1.25 each. GENESIS (175 x

35) in same groups as above, plus a

booklet, £1.25 each. GENESIS (175 x

35) in same groups as above, plus a

booklet, £1.25 each. GENESIS (175 x

35) in same groups as above, plus a

booklet, £1.25 each. GENESIS (175 x

35) in same groups as above, plus a

booklet, £1.25 each. GENESIS (175 x

35) in same groups as above, plus a

booklet, £1.25 each. GENESIS (175 x

35) in same groups as above, plus a

booklet, £1.25 each. GENESIS (175 x

35) in same groups as above, plus a

booklet, £1.25 each. GENESIS (175 x

35) in same groups as above, plus a

booklet, £1.25 each. GENESIS (175 x

35) in same groups as above, plus a

booklet, £1.25 each. GENESIS (175 x

35) in same groups as above, plus a

booklet, £1.25 each. GENESIS (175 x

35) in same groups as above, plus a

booklet, £1.25 each. GENESIS (175 x

35) in same groups as above, plus a

FOR SALE

15p per word

BUZZCOCKS!!! at Hammerhead

Set of 10 colour photos 5" x 3 1/2" £3.60

inclusive. Also BOULEVARD, Blonder,

Strangers, Only Ones, Devo, Tubes,

many others! SAE lists. Sample photo

30p. Post Stamp Photography, 56 Marmont

Road, London, SE16

BUZZCOCKS!!! T. Shure SML

£2.50 T.I.T.S. 24 Coach Road, Throck-ley, Newcastle on Tyne 5.

BETTER BADGES: IMAGE AS

VIRUS DISEASE AS CLUE We have at B/S say Boney was not in

NOT A SHOP WE ARE A SERVICE

Starts at all Strangely gaps at Lycium and

Electric. 20p EACH. Clash Palace, Mica

James, More Rops, Sea Frocks, Swindle,

Swindle Slogans (8), Buzzcocks (7) different. P.G. 5 & F. Inflammable, Alena type Utafer, Members, Mekons, Jam, All

Mod Cons, Tube Station, UK Subs, C.I.D

Re. Soft, Gang of Four, Human League,

Scars, A.T.V. Strife, Spaz, Prag Vex, Sals,

Ants 1.5, Kraftwerk, Monochrome Set,

Dur, Sicks, Cabaret Voltaire, Magazine,

Pendragon, My Way, Joy Division, J.T.C.

Bones Low, Siouxsie, U.B.U. Spaz, Devo,

RAF, CND, Underones, Ruts, Dots,

Television, Janitors, Brits, 25p EACH

£1.25. Pretenders, Personalities,

Dodgson, Primitives, Destroy All Mon-

sters, O.A.G. Song, Motorhead (England),

Born to Love, Who, Ain't No, Residents,

Sid and Nancy, Here and Now, Anti 8,

Thorne, Nina Hagen, Peter Bright, F-

off, 30p EACH. Blonder (England),

Uncontrollable Urge, Drunk Punk, Drug

Users against Nazis O.K.I. still can't be bothered to tell us it's red/green/white pop, wind up, etc. but there are about 100 different. Send 5p or get a

RIPPED & TORN to find out. Put in 10p postage, make cheques payable to BET-

TER BADGES, keep your counterfoils and remember (don't lose) to put your address on the order (Nearly) ALL

MAX GOING OUT SAME DAY! -

overseas orders welcomed. Eur 20p

postage. WHOLESALE AND PRODUCTION

AVAILABLE - Send 5p or for lists

AND TO ORDER 25p EACH. NOT

NOTORIOUS D.V. SERVICE! -

Drawn out photographs of your own designs for 1/2" or 2 1/2" badges. Make up 100, 200, 500, 1000, 2000, 5000, 10000 allows for wear/rip - 20p each separate 10p postage. So come on you graph designers, let me see some

ACTION! - We still do a stand on

Portobello on (dry) and not too cold days. ONLINE - 25p each. ONLINE

ONLINE - 25p each. ONLINE

ONLINE - 25p each. ONLINE

ONLINE - 25p each. ONLINE

ONLINE - 25p each. ONLINE

ONLINE - 25p each. ONLINE

ONLINE - 25p each. ONLINE

ONLINE - 25p each. ONLINE

ONLINE - 25p each. ONLINE

ONLINE - 25p each. ONLINE

ONLINE - 25p each. ONLINE

ONLINE - 25p each. ONLINE

ONLINE - 25p each. ONLINE

ONLINE - 25p each. ONLINE

ONLINE - 25p each. ONLINE

ONLINE - 25p each. ONLINE

ONLINE - 25p each. ONLINE

ONLINE - 25p each. ONLINE

ONLINE - 25p each. ONLINE

ONLINE - 25p each. ONLINE

ONLINE - 25p each. ONLINE

ONLINE - 25p each. ONLINE

ONLINE - 25p each. ONLINE

ONLINE - 25p each. ONLINE

ONLINE - 25p each. ONLINE

ONLINE - 25p each. ONLINE

FOR SALE

15p per word

"FANS" BADGES ARE FAN-

TASTIC! For all fan club followers

Read on Range 1.11. badges - ENOUGH TO BE SEEN, SMALL

ENOUGH TO BE COOL! Strangely (1),

Jam (2), Stri, P.I., Blonder (2), Devo,

Buzzcocks, X-Ray Spas, Rots, 178, 990,

Clash (12), Rotten, Sid Memorial

Shit's Not Guitly, Sid, Dury, Billy Idol,

Sham Army, Sham 66, Target, Sex P-

103, Corolla, Union Jack, Rush, Who

(1), Jagger, Tongue and 5 Bowles as follows. Monro, Police, Full Face, Process with cobwebs, and wearing his Process each of 6 for £1.00 Range 2.11.

BLACK AND WHITE PHOTO BADGES

of PERFORMING ARTISTS, X Ray

Spaz, Rotten Hundred Club, Tom Robi-

Bad news I'm afraid. I bought a secondhand typewriter today.
BOLROG OF THE NORTH, Bedfordshire.

I haven't bought the NME for the past few weeks so it might have been mentioned already, but do you suppose the new Hair Lager commercial on the Box is sung by Bryan Ferry?
JOHN WILSON, Exeter, Devon.

I am Last Weeks Foreigner and I thank you for having printed parts of my letter but I missed the greatest lines. My letter was positive except for some justified criticism. Tony Parsons once said that he thought the readers of NME buy every issue hoping to disagree with plenty of it so I thought my letter would make you happy. It didn't, apparently. I don't really know what you consider unclear about it.

As I pointed out (in one of the lines you chose to leave out) I think it's disappointing to read a review that basically tells you to make up your mind about something you don't know or forget the band/artist. Isn't that accessible coherence? I prefer calling it straightforward opinions. You triumphantly announced that I lost control over my statements at one point. It was actually another point (did anyone read the whole letter?). Please don't misunderstand everything I say. You seem to think I disain NME. I don't! Wouldn't buy it every week if I did.

And what's so funny 'bout being eager?
GUNNAR KIHLESTEDT, Sweden.

Shit. I forgot what I wanted to complain about.
ELMAR, Germany.

If one is of conservative disposition, it means that one is opposed to change — ie one should vote Labour. I hope this clears up any misconceptions.
REGINALD APPRENTICE, M.P.

Please could you explain the relevance of a woman's tit on Brian B's page NME 24th March?

We look forward to seeing Brian B's phallus advertised in the NME in the near future. (Ms) W. BARR, London E. 15
Why do you assume it's a women's tit? In fact, the gland belongs to Brian B.

I'm writing about the Human League article in last week's issue.
EWAN MEE, Bethnal Green.

Playing music to plants does not make them grow better. I took mine to see Motorhead and they died.
RICK THE VIC, Nevada.

Can I be the first to say that Motorhead are louder than Ted Nugent?
C. LUNT, Rotherham, S. Yorks.

Ten seconds after you have read this letter the entire world will be destroyed, making the Middle East Peace Pact a complete waste of time and just stopping Ned Ludd and the Machine Wreckers from becoming the world's greatest rock group.
ORSON CARTE, Melton.

What's the point of trying to categorise your readers' letters? It's common knowledge that they are all

The Good, The BAG, and The Ugly

written by the same person — me. And I refuse to be categorized.
BARD INFLUENCE, St. Albans.

Next week's NME will be very much the same as this week's — but with a rearrangement of sarcasms, words and pictures.
PAUL SEERY, Lancaster, Lancs.

After the recent formation of Rock Against Racism, Rock Against Sexism and Rock Against The Bomb, all good causes, I have decided to set up Rock Against Hard Toilet Paper. (R.A.H.T.P.).

Please send all cheques/postal orders/loose change/2nd-hand Lou Reed albums/soft toilet paper/offers to do benefit gigs to:
STEVE MULLINER, Hedgerley, Bucks.

I took this photo a few months ago 20 miles south of Tournoussout in the middle of the Jordan Desert. Punk has reached the remote parts of the world! Vast empty spaces for people with vast empty heads?
P. CORY, Nth. Somercotes, Lincolnshire.

Re your review of our Music Machine fiasco. Apologies to all concerned, we were noisy, we were sloppy — we were drunk. Main problem, we arrived at two, they wouldn't let us play till 12. Too much time to waste, most of it in the pub. A thousand apologies.

However, I take great exception to any accusations of an identity problem. We haven't got one. Yours were based on a shallow, superficial level, i.e. our appearance doesn't conform (in your all important eyes) with our sound. To be honest, our appearance doesn't even conform with each other. Still, leather jackets are the Beale suits of the '70s and we're happy. We know where we're going but if Rick Joseph (who?) decides after half an hour that we don't, then who am I to argue?

Journalists, shmjournalists.
GEOFF DEANE, Leyton Buzzards.

Ease up, Geoff (who?). Rick's only in it for the beer money and so, it appears, are you.

Thank you, Ian Penman, for unmasking, demystifying and publicly debagging the absurdly pretentious Siouxsie and the Banshees. I have always detested the 'Me Artist You Bozo' attitude adopted by the Banshee waiters and Mr Penman's probing piece of journalism finally convinced me never to invite Siouxsie to my birthday party again.
PAUL DAVIES, Whitchurch, Cardiff.

Siouxsie and the Banshees may tend towards shallow pretension but Ian Penman beats them all the way down the line. I know who I'd rather share a life-raft with.
GIOVANNI DADOMO, London N7.

For the fifth time, Giovanni, there are no jobs available

Ha ha ha ha ha ha ha ha ha ha

just read ha ha ha ha ha ha ha ha ha ha
Penman's ha ha ha ha ha ha ha ha ha ha
Siouxsie article ha ha ha ha ha ha ha ha ha ha ha ha ha.
PHIL O'SUFA, Notting Hill Gate.

Sorry chaps, but you've finally done it. I've suffered this pseudly little pillock for long enough. Of whom do I speak? Why, one 'Ian Penman', the gentleman who has pirated my name.

I've been in the rock journalism (occasionally) and rock broadcasting (weekly) biz for approaching four years, which is at least two more than this pretender. I co-present and co-produce 'Bedrock' a programme that lays as much emphasis on local as national talent. We've given first exposure and radio play to people like Penetration, Tom Robinson, Neon, Punishment of Luxury and many others. Over the past year I've grown sick and tired of having to explain that no, I don't write for the NME, and no, I'm not a purveyor or pretentious pratt.

The caper came this week. My namesake's ridiculous review of 'Out For Revenge' by Newcastle band The Squad. Did he listen to the album or did he just read the lyric sheet and look at the sleeve? The band financed, produced, recorded and distributed the album themselves and not only is this quite a sizeable achievement, but it's also a bloody good record, which is something I've said at length on the air. Since I probably can't persuade you to look this twerp in a cupboard for the next twenty years or ask him to write his wretched prose Punk reaches the Empty Quarter. See letter above.

Distributed by
BAG PROMOTIONS,
NME, 4-6
Carnaby St, W1

LEMMY
The killer with the heart of gold and the nose of steel.

PENMAN
Doomed to be misunderstood — even by himself.

KENT
They laughed — but he took a terrible revenge.

under a different name I'd appreciate you printing this so that at least I won't get accused of being a schizophrenic poser.
IAN PENMAN, BBC Radio Newcastle.

I have an impression of Ian Penman as one of these puny little men with darting eyes, who perspire continually, and fart audibly at regular intervals. Please confirm.
SUE DE NIMES, Affirmative.

May I agree with all the above letters about Ian Penman's article?
MICKEY SHAPIRO, (aged 8) Kingston on Hull.

I'm sorry, but things have got so bad I must complain. I've been reading NME regularly for over 15 years — from the days of 'Lifelines' and 'New To The Charts', when critical comment was virtually nil — up to now, when the critics threaten to become more important than the music.

A recent issue really was the limit: almost every article saw the writer spending more time expounding his own views than giving the views of the artists concerned. Nick Kent prefaced his article on The Pretenders with a quote from Record Mirror: 'Danny Baker kept Paul Weller in cold storage whilst he (Baker) argued the critical toss with Ian Penman, whilst the article on Joan Armatrading was in reality an excuse for the unfavourably sanctimonious Graham Lock to flex his ideological muscles.'

I'm not arguing in favour of a return to the days of 'Well it must be good' 'cos the kids like it', but surely this critical nit-picking has gone far enough? Rock's not an art form in the way poetry, sculpture or ballet is — it's a mass entertainment, and your attempts to apply rigid, critical and moral (sic) standards to rock merely point out the alarming dichotomy between public tastes and critical tastes.

Every one of the successful acts in your recent poll has undergone a full scale slugging-off at the hands of one or another of your 'no-nonsense' critics. That's bad enough — because subjective views always offend when written in the (Graham) Lockean pontifical style — but when you take time out to debate each other's views within articles, then a sense that the end's in sight arises.

I mean, rock criticisms about rock criticisms? Despite Penman's sneers, Morley's theories and Lock's morals, the rock fans of this country — in the main — buy records and go to gigs because they love music, not because they've given the bands in question a positive moral and critical litmus test.

That's why CSM's article on Dylan's Earle Court gigs was so heartening — you sensed that, despite everything, Murray loved Dylan's music. He was a fan first, critic second. Some of the new guys are critics period.

If they're so dissatisfied with rock, why do they continue to write about it? But of course, they don't often write about rock — they write about writing.

Decadent, I call it.
PETE BRAY, Nelson, Lancs.
And you're probably not far wide of the beam, Pete. Penman's bobby is currently as red as his nose and the others, they've taken up with the Was God A Palindrome sect.

That Page 3 pic — what readers think

Hah heh... heh heh heh heh...
...tee-tee-tee...
hee-hee-hee-hee-ha... hah
hah hah hah hah oh ho ho ho-ho ho-ho ho-ho... oh dear, let's have another look, arrgh ha ha ha ha hahahahaha...
who ho ho ho oh oh migod...
hee-hee-hee-hee-hee-hee...
haw-haw-haw-haw... (sigh),
so that's what Nick Kent looks like, is it?

A. MUSED,
Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

Under no circumstance must you send me a signed photo of Nick Kent in his authentic "street punk" gear.

Meg Richardson,
Whilst not doubting Nick Kent's immense street credibility for one moment, it might be nice for us all if he could get an article out promptly. Must we wait until the arse-end of March to see the fruits of a visit to Paris in early February?
NICK THE NURD, Bedford.

It soon come — fruit soon ripe — fi take we bite strength soon come — fi fling we might

ISLAND

words by Linton Kwesi Johnson from the Album 'Forces of Victory' Cat. No. ILPS 9566

TO T-ZERS OR NOT TO

T-ZERS

But seriously folks, this Earth isn't all whoopee cushions and wax lips — as the sad stooped figure of Bob Dylan will bear witness. In decidedly melancholy mood our humble hero has been reflecting on the meaning of it all. "I know, if all this faded away it wouldn't bother me. I've had quite an experience doing it", he reveals in Rona Barrett's Hollywood glam mag. But what would the former Donovan copyist do in his senility? "I could be perfectly happy and content being a bus driver... or I could still go back to making pizza or something." Maybe the massive egg laid by the Renaldo And Clara has forced him to consider these alternatives. More important, though — is his cheese sauce as good as everyone says it is?

Slimmer of the Month and former Sex Pistol Steve Jones, 12, was the subject of a two page feature in last Monday's Daily Star (what else?). Mainly concerning itself with his crackpot, lovable exploits, we find of Jonesy running the full gammut of his repertoire. Rotten gets whipped, people's property stolen, birds get shagged and the name Sex Pistols gets dissolved. "After all", spouts Sticky Steve, "if we carry it on it'll go against everything we stood for." The Star sums up thus: "Jones is tough. He makes Tarzan look like Fred Flintstone. The wild man of The Sex Pistols loves a laugh".

Laugh? Thought our socks would never dry! Filling out The Members' horn section on Top Of The Pops last week we could've found the haile unlikely trombone of Rico attached to the man himself... On tour together in St Louis recently, Queen and Heart shared a Thanksgiving turkey dinner. The symbolism stuns...

Tragedy! Alternative TV have switched off. Thousands dead! Fed up with continued cries for, um, 'greatest hits' (sic) from his audience, Mark Perry — A Smile, A Song and A Cashier's Window — has decided the only way he can break his band away from its past is to fold it and then start again. Formed exactly two years ago in April '77, ATV will release one posthumous single, The Force Is Blind. Perry and Co will resume business, possibly with some new members, under the handle The Good Missionaries the name he adopted for the impromptu jam at the Lyceum recently...

What's that clicking on the phone line? It appears that The Stranglers are to have their new offices at 8 Carnaby St — that is, right next door to the world's most custard pied rock weekly. A council of war has been held and Max Bell has been employed as our official man with the glass against the wall and Jye on the fire escape. Straightaway we learn that Jean Jacques Burnel has been down in Carnaby Street filming a promo short to help shift Bern Omo's latest waxing...

Now they? White reggae band China Street were busted in Slaverger, Norway on their current Euro tour. For rowdiness? No. For dope? Nope. It transpires that NATO MPs interned and grilled our boys for suspected espionage! They were later released and are now planning a single titled 'Rock Against SMERSH'...

Despite having had a recent high roller album in the UK charts, Paul Simonon bewails that The Clash are still heavily in debt...

Nick Edmunds and Dave Lowe had to gasp! — buy their Graham Parker tickets for the petrol pumper's Hammersmith Odeon show — and from one of the touts outside, to boot. Mr Edmunds was detained in hospital with shock whilst Mr Lowe was arrested for breaking into a pound note, although he was later released on a caution because of it being his first offence...

THE BARD AND THE BORED: John Cooper Clarke (right) ponders the destiny of English literature while a thoroughly modern Will Shakespeare (left) checks out JCC's 'Gimmicks' and curses that JC was first to secure ex-Felt drummer Carl Burns for his new band. Apart from pulling an insubstantial feature in the 'Observer' colour mag, Manchester's favourite scribbler is also sporting a natty plaster cast on his left arm as a result of the stage accident in Eire which cracked three wrist bones. Luckily it's not John's Birt hand.

Lowe is also one of the names, along with Pete Townshend, being suggested as production gurnor for the forthcoming Mothers album...

We Have Branches Everywhere Dept: The tree that Marc Bolan's Mini crashed into has apparently become a shrine to his memory. Ever since the first morbid anniversary in September '78, the tree in Barnes, South West London, has been festooned with placards bearing tributes to the ex Mr Bolan and coachloads of pilgrims are planning to visit the spot this September...

Making a rumus in the Sundays we find Alex Harvey, 103, who appears in fear of his sanity. Vambo is seeking the help of a top American shrink who specialises in reincarnation and therefore may be of some help in sorting out the voices that haunt our man. Seems Al believes he served at Waterloo in his former life. Former life? By our calculations Alex was at least forty in 1815 — we suspect this claim is all part of some ridiculous denial-of-age campaign in anticipation of another comeback.

Absolutely no information at all that would even vaguely interest Y'all was disclosed last Sunday in TV's blandest ever documentary, Wings Over The World. Perhaps the tell-tale tagline 'An MPL Production' explains the lack of any real gist: MPL stands for McCartney Productions Limited.

And what, sir, is this? John 'You Are Howard Hughes and I claim my £5' Lennon and Yoko 'OK' Ono spotted buying real fur coats recently on a shopping expedition in New York. If Fleet Street reports are correct. And this from a couple who once posed in human hair coats as a protest against the animal fur trade...

Ga-ga oodballs Blondie shot into London at the weekend to pick up an award from BBC's Multi-Coloured Swap Shop before shooting out again...

Persistence pays off Dept: The Smirks are recording a one-off single for Virgin after issuing their 'Smirksongs' EP on their own label — their own label, mark you, and not one owned by any NME writer as foolishly suggested by Snouds, last week (see Thrills for full story)...

Eyton John now strongly denying he ran up a tab of £13,000 on fur coats, a spree which has seen Elsie come in for some considerable stick (see last week T-Zers)...

Megamogul and world ruler Jonathan King is standing for election (again) in his home constituency of Richmond on Thames. In absolute seriousness the man asks us to forgive and forget his previous record — Genesis, 10cc, Jonathan King — and consider the views now standing at platform four.

Economically the old brute is a hardcore Tory but he washes his hands of the Thatcherolla's attitudes on capital punishment etc and describes himself morally as "a small 'I' liberal". T-Zers hems and haws over the viability of putting itself forward as 'Return To The Ground Nut Scheme' candidate for Lower Marsh...

Are you listening Mark Perry? Nashville guitarist Daryl Chapman has been shot to death and members of his band wounded in a row springing from the fact that he didn't know a certain number during an audience request spot. Forget punk and reggae, C&W is a Very Serious Thing...

And to China, where the onset of Westernism shows itself in the paddy fields. Currently the toon on many a Peking lip is 'Someday I Shall Own A Washing Machine'. That is a fact. Less certain, however, are reports of gangs of frustrated chinese youth gathering in underground hideouts where they fearlessly discuss things like indoor saunas, button-down collars and ketchup. Plus a Nan Sek man was reportedly interned without trial for illegal possession of slacks...

Cult figure Alex Chilton has a new band called The Yard-Dogs who will insist on playing street corners in their hometown of Memphis and thereby rake it in to the tune of $30 a day — words Stigwood, music McLaren — after passing around the hat. They have an album which includes versions of K.C. and the Sunshine Band's 'Queen Of Clubs' and Troy Shondell's immortal 'Girl After Girl'. Yes, immortal!

Current issue of Q International gay mag has Village Person Philippe Rose flaunting his plonker in the centre. See, who says T-Zers hasn't got finesse?

Plea for HEEELLLLLPPP! Tot and The Girls are desperate for a fair-sized venue in which to stage a charity gig in aid of the Year Of The Child. Admission to the proposed gig would be a toy of some sort which would then be forwarded to Hammersmith Children's Hospital. All airways will be clutched at 01 883 4464...

The final Blast Furnace and the Best Wives gig sounded off at Dingwalls last Sunday amidst a night of a thousand celebrities. Stepping up to cause chaos: Wilko Johnson and Alex Harvey (that's him on the back of five pound notes). Low Lewis didn't stop for a breath after his Marquee gig, but bundled himself and his harps into a motor and dashed in the hope of a quick few blows with the Camden law suit faves — but it was not to be. Low stumbled through the door ten minutes after the final whistle. Charles Shear Murray is 53...

And we continue in a blowing our own trumpet situation with a report on last Tuesday's Talkabout on Radio One. In the studio were Alf Martin, Richard Williams, and Neil Spencer, editors of Record Mirror, MM, and NME respectively. Earlier in the day snivelling Tony Blackburn, 70, had described the three as being bosses of "so called influential pop papers", but the gig still went ahead and our man on the terraces reports thus: "After a slow start, Spencer acquitted himself well and showed admirably the hip, cynical sneer and sense of joie de vivre that has earned NME the position of world's largest selling and most imitated rock weekly. Asked why he refers to his, er, rival as Monotony Maker, the Northerners know-all quipped: 'Because it looks like a telephone book or Exchange & Mart or something'.

Misaooww! Yes it was quite a clash of the major papers! (Sounds is nine years old!)... ahead and our man on the terraces reports thus: "After a slow start, Spencer acquitted himself well and showed admirably the hip, cynical sneer and sense of joie de vivre that has earned NME the position of world's largest selling and most imitated rock weekly. Asked why he refers to his, er, rival as Monotony Maker, the Northerners know-all quipped: 'Because it looks like a telephone book or Exchange & Mart or something'.

BETTER BADGES

TOP TEN
This week	Last week
1. Clash Police	(13)
2. Strife Little Fingers	(11)
3. The Seids	(5)
4. Pili	(15)
5. Gang of Four	(4)
6. Buzzcocks (yellow & blue)	(—)
7. Members	(6)
8. The Jam (red)	(9)
9. Jam Tube Station	(—)
10. Mekons	(17)

NEW RELEASES 25p: Ostray All Monsters, OOA, The Pretenders, TV Personalities, Oddgods, Bene Bright, The Fall 20p Scars, Strife Little Fingers, Nicky and the Dots, Teen Beats, Throbbing Gristle, ATV Vibing, Les Fells

COMPILED FROM MAIL ORDER ONLY

TEN BEST SEE FOR SALE SECTION FOR FULL LISTING

NME

EDITORIAL
3rd Floor
5-7 Carnaby Street
London W1V 1PG
Phone: 01-439 8781

EDITOR
Neil Spencer

Assistant Editor
Phil McNeill

News Editor
Derek Johnson

Production Editor
Jack Scott

Associate Editors
Charles Shear Murray

Monty Smith

Special Projects Editor
Roy Carr

Staff

Tony Stewart

Tony Parsons

Julie Burchill

Angus MacKinnon

Paul Rambali

Max Bell

Photography

Pennie Smith

Contributors

Nick Kent

Mick Farren

Bob Edmunds

Tony Benyon

Steve Clarke

Fred Deller

Chris Salewicz

Cliff White

Bob Woffinden

Lester Bangs

John May

Paul Morley

Penny Reel

Adrian Thrills

Ian Penman

Andy Gill

Danny Baker

Research

Fiona Foulgar

New York:

Joe Stevens

N.Y. 686 7733

ADVERTISEMENT DEPT.

Room 2529

Kings Reach Tower

Stamford Street

London SE1 9LS.

Ad Director:

Percy Dickens

(01) 261 6080

Ad Manager:

Peter Rhodes

(01) 261 6251

Classified Ads:

(01) 261 6122

Live Ads

(01) 261 6153

Ad Production

Mike Proctor

Pete Christopher

Barry Cooper

(01) 261 6207

Publisher: Eric Jackson

Editorial: Jonathan Anderson

Production: John May

Printed by: [illegible]

In Next Week's NME
LOU REED

After years of stubborn silence, the Nabob of Nihilism decides he'll talk to us after all. Don't miss it. Plus all the usual fab pix, info, reviews and everything that makes NME the best in rock reading.

Drawing: Barbara Fry

THE POLICE

THE POLICE ARE BIG IN →
ALBUM → 38+ ♪
SINGLE → 40+ ♪

THE ALBUM – "OUTLANDOS D'AMOUR"
THE NEW SINGLE – "ROXANNE"

THIS IS AMERICA 38 THIS IS A CHART POSITION IN BILLBOARD + • THIS MEANS A BULLET (I.E. FASTER THAN A SPEEDING....)

