

NEW MUSICAL EXPRESS

Meat Loaf, Selector,

Cheap Trick verbals

Buzzcocks, Numan wax

Art Up A Tree, Pic: Pennie Smith.

Happiness Is A Muddy Slit

Frolic with NME's Page One girls inside

NEWS

EDITED BY DEREK
JOHNSON

Multi-culture Slits package

THE SLITS headline an intriguing 11-concert package tour during the second half of this month, in support of their debut album 'Cut' — which, as reported a fortnight ago, is released by Island this weekend. The tour bill has been chosen special to emphasise the unity between three musical cultures — the second act is top jazz trumpeter Don Cherry, who'll be playing with Lou Reed's back-up band Happy House; and the third spot features leading Jamaican toaster Prince Hammer, together with Creation Rebel.

The tour climaxes at London Rainbow on September 28, prior to which it plays Leicester De Montfort Hall (17), Oxford New Theatre (18), Birmingham Digbeth Civic Hall (19), Bradford St. George's Hall (20), Coventry Theatre (21), Newcastle City Hall (23), Edinburgh Astoria (24), Manchester Apollo (25), Glasgow City Hall (26) and Liverpool Eric's (27). Ticket prices at all events are £2.50 in advance and £3 on the doors; seats will be allocated on a first come, first served basis — which means that those booking early will be assured of the best seats.

VIBRATORS ARE BACK

THE VIBRATORS have re-formed with a new line-up, and play their first gig for a year at London Kensington Nashville on September 14, prior to going into the studios. Jon Edwards (drums) and Greg Van Cook (guitar) remain from the previous line-up, and they are now joined by Elliot 'Brooklyn' Michaels (guitar), Ian Woodcock (bass) and Kip (vocals).

Michaels is an American who has played with The Electric Chairs. Woodcock was founder member of new-wave outfit Eater, and Kip was found after two months of auditions. The new-look Vibrators have been together for three months, writing and rehearsing, and they plan more live work — including a U.S. visit — later in the autumn.

Soft Boys shake-up

THE SOFT BOYS have undergone a personnel shake-up, with bassist Andy Metcalfe leaving to join Telephone Bill & The Smooth Operators, and percussionist Jim Melton quitting to form his own band. Melton is not being replaced, but ex-Bruce Woolley sideman Matthew Seligman comes in on bass — joining the nucleus of Robyn Hitchcock (guitar, harp and lead vocals) Kimberley Rew (lead guitar) and Morris Windsor (drums). This means the Boys revert to their original four-piece format.

Since the end of their lengthy spring tour, the band have been working on a brand new stage act, as well as recording new material for an upcoming album. They debut their new act and new look at three London venues — Covent Garden Rock Garden (tomorrow, Friday), Clapham 101 Club (September 22) and Islington Hope & Anchor (30) — and at Harrow College of Higher Education on September 21. A series of provincial college dates is being lined up for the autumn, and will be announced shortly.

More by Subs, Members

UK SUBS have added another seven dates to their British tour, reported two weeks ago — at Gt Yarmouth Garribaldi (October 3), Retford Porthouse (26), Cheltenham Whitcombe Lodge (27), Leeds Fan Club (30), York Pop Club (31), Hull Wellington Club (November 1) and Newcastle Mayfair (2). And their gig at Sheffield Panhouse is switched from October 15 to 29. Release date of their new Gem Records album 'Another Kind Of Blues' is now confirmed as September 14.

● THE MEMBERS, whose new single 'Killing Time' is issued by Virgin this weekend, play four gigs before leaving for an American tour — Norwich Cromwells (September 18), London Marquee (20 and 21) and Jacksall Grey Topper (22).

● PENETRATION have added Manchester Russells (October 2), Glasgow Strathclyde University (13), Portsmouth Locarno (16), Canterbury Odeon (21) and Peterborough Wirrana

Stadium (November 3) to their upcoming tour. Carlisle Market Hall moves from October 3 to 1, and Bristol Locarno from 7 to 28. Chelmsford Chancellor Hall (October 21) is now cancelled.

● GLORIA MUNDI play their first UK date for some months tomorrow (Friday), when they appear at London Marquee. It's the prelude to a British tour in October, to coincide with the release of their second RCA album 'The Word Is Out'.

● THE INMATES, who have just finished recording their debut album for Radar, play London Islington Hope & Anchor this Thursday and Friday (6-7) and Market Harborough Greyhound on Saturday (8).

● DEVO have called off their five UK concerts planned for early October. Their visit is being re-scheduled for the spring. Ticket-holders should apply for cash refunds. More details next week.

Jam's PAUL WELLER

THE JAM are going out on a major late autumn concert tour, playing 23 dates over a month-long period. Their schedule includes three nights at London Rainbow (with a fourth likely to be added later), plus two nights in each of Manchester, Newcastle and Leicester — and they are also visiting such impressive venues as Brighton Centre and Cardiff Sophia Gardens.

THE SKIDS, who headline the last night of the Edinburgh Rock Festival at the city's Odeon tomorrow (Friday), begin a 21-date UK tour in mid-October — supported by their Virgin label-mates Fingerprinth. The itinerary, which includes a headlining appearance at London Rainbow, comprises:

Cleethorpes Winter Gardens (October

18), Liverpool Mountford Hall (19), St Austell New Cornish Riviera (20), Great Yarmouth Tiffany's (22), Manchester Apollo (23), Sheffield Top Rank (24), Birmingham Odeon (25), Cambridge Corn Exchange (26), Northampton County Ground (27), Blackburn King George's Hall (28), Newcastle City Hall (29), Wolverhampton Civic Hall (30), Brighton

Top Rank (31), London Rainbow (November 2), Cardiff Top Rank (4), Bournemouth Winter Gardens (5), Bristol Locarno (6), Hanley Victoria Hall (7), Perth City Hall (8), Glasgow Apollo (9) and Aberdeen Capitol (10).

The band's new single 'Charade'/'Grey Parade', produced by Bill Nelson, is released by Virgin this weekend.

GETTIN' THEIR SKIDS ON

TOURISTS HIT THE TRAIL

THE TOURISTS set out early next month on an extensive tour, confined mainly to the college circuit, but also taking in a few club gigs. So far two dozen dates have been confirmed, but a major London appearance has still to be finalised. The band are currently putting the finishing touches to their new album, as yet untitled, which Logo Records plan to release in mid-October.

Dates set are Norwich East Anglia University (October 4), London Queen Mary College (5), Cambridge Corn Exchange (6), Middlesbrough Polytechnic (9), Lancaster University (12), Leicester University (13), Bradford University (17), Manchester UMIST (18), Newcastle Polytechnic (19), Nottingham Peabbles College (20), Bournemouth College (23), Keele University (24), Coventry Warwick University (25), Bristol University (26), Wolverhampton Polytechnic (27), Stirling University (30), Glasgow Strathclyde University (31), Oxford Polytechnic (November 2), Northampton County Ground (3), Exeter Routes (5), Plymouth Woods (6), Newton Abbot Seale Hayne College (7), Port Talbot Troubadour (8) and Sheffield Polytechnic (9).

Tourist ANNE LENNOX

Blondie make their excuses

BLONDIE have now confirmed officially that they will not be playing any live shows in Britain or Europe this year, although they are likely to come over later this month for a promotional visit, as their now-completed fourth album 'Eat The Bear' has been scheduled for early October release — and a new single is also in the pipeline. The band are currently planning a brand new stage show for their 1980 world tour, in which Britain will take priority early in the New Year.

ROD STEWART's plans to play a series of concerts in Scotland this autumn, as part of a European tour, now appear to have been shelved until the New Year. He's due to arrive in Britain at the end of this month, and will be based in London until mid-December, rehearsing a new studio album — but a spokesman said that, having recently become a father, he's no longer keen to go on the road for the next few months. Meanwhile, Riva are to release a Rod Stewart 'Greatest Hits' album in October — which, coupled with massive TV advertising, could become one of the top Christmas hits.

STUDENTS!

SEE PAGE 51
FOR DETAILS OF HIGHER EDUCATION COURSES

MUSIC BY POST

Comprehensive Catalogue free on receipt of 8p/10p stamp

This week's best selling SONGBOOKS

BLONDIE Picture This	£3.95
JAM All Mod Cons	£2.50
SHAM All Songbooks	£3.95
THE LIZZY Black Rose	£2.95
Nice Moody Tunes	£3.95
MOORHEAD Overkill	£2.95
BLONDIE Songbooks	£1.95
THE CLASH Songbooks	£2.95
KATE BUSH The Kick Inside	£1.95
KATE BUSH Live Through This	£3.95
IAN DURY Songbooks	£2.95
SEX PISTOLS Never Mind The Bollocks	£2.95
DEEP PURPLE Machine Head	£1.95
THE LIZZY Beat of the Drum	£2.95
BUZZCOCKS Songbooks	£2.95
ROD STEWART Blondie Wave More Fun	£2.95

BOOKS

SEX PISTOLS Gig	£2.95
Sublimed The Beatles' Songs	£2.95
BOYNE The Lives & Times Of	£1.95
BLONDIE	£1.95
TUTORIALS
Scott Woodson — Play in a Day	£1.95
Self Check Sheets	£1.95
Bass Guitar tutor + record	£3.95
Rhythm Guitar tutor	£3.95
Lead Guitar Tutor + record	£3.95
POSTAGE & PACKING CHARGES
ORDER	GB & IRELAND OVERSEAS
£2 or under	35p
£3 or under	60p
£4 or under	80p
Over £10	£1.50

PASH MUSIC STORES, 5 ELGIN CRESCENT, LONDON W11

STRAIGHT MUSIC PRESENTS

LOU DON WAINWRIGHT III

THEATRE ROYAL - DRURY LANE

SUNDAY 9th SEPTEMBER at 7.30

TICKETS: £10, £5, £2.50, £1.00, £0.50, £0.25, £0.10, £0.05, £0.02, £0.01 (London only). BOOKINGS: 01-234 5678, 01-234 5679, 01-234 5680, 01-234 5681, 01-234 5682, 01-234 5683, 01-234 5684, 01-234 5685, 01-234 5686, 01-234 5687, 01-234 5688, 01-234 5689, 01-234 5690, 01-234 5691, 01-234 5692, 01-234 5693, 01-234 5694, 01-234 5695, 01-234 5696, 01-234 5697, 01-234 5698, 01-234 5699, 01-234 5700.

Wembley charity rock bill for TV

A MASSIVE charity rock concert is to be staged at London's Wembley Arena on Thursday, November 22, in connection with the Year Of The Child campaign. It's being organised by Promoter Mel Bush in association with Radio 1 and BBC-2, on behalf of UNICEF, Oxfam and the 'Together For Children' organisation.

Radio 1 producer Johnny Beerling expects to air the entire show, while 'Whistle Test' producer Michael Appleton will prepare an edited version for screening on the Eurovision link the following Sunday (25), with syndication to other parts of the world. No names have yet been finalised for the bill, but a spokesman said they are hoping to make it the British equivalent of the huge UNICEF show in America at the beginning of the year.

● Meanwhile BBC-2's 'Old Grey Whistle Test' returns for the 1979-80 season on Tuesday, September 18, with a Nils Lofgren special filmed at London Dominion Theatre. The following week (25) features Rickie Lee Jones at Birmingham Odeon. Thereafter the show reverts to its studio format — but for this series it will be coming, not from the Television Centre, but from The Who's stage at Shepperton Studios.

'Woodstock' in Europe

THE TENTH anniversary of the near-legendary Woodstock Festival is being celebrated in Europe this month, even though plans to stage a massive Woodstock 2 in America fell through last month. The Joe Cocker Band, the Arlo Guthrie Band, the Richie Havens Band and Country Joe McDonald are taking part in a package show called 'Woodstock In Europe 1979' which is playing 14 major stadium dates in Germany, Italy, Holland, Switzerland, Austria and Portugal between September 15 and October 5. It's promoted by an Egyptian-backed company called Pyramid Productions. Asked why no UK dates are involved, a spokesman commented: "Nobody in Britain wanted to know!"

Gallagher & Lyle

GALLAGHER & LYLE have been lined up for an extensive 29-date British tour, starting at the end of next month — with the extra attraction of new chart star Judie Tzuke appearing as special guest on all dates.

They visit Bridlington Spa Royal Hall (October 27), Hanley Victoria Hall (28), Coventry Theatre (29), Birmingham Odeon (30), Leicester De Montfort Hall (31), Gloucester Leisure Centre (November 1), Bradford St. George's Hall (2), Middlesbrough Town Hall (3), Newcastle City Hall (4), Carlisle Market Hall (5), Edinburgh Usher Hall (6), Aberdeen Capitol (7), Dundee Caird Hall (8), Glasgow Apollo (10), Preston Guildhall (11), Manchester Apollo (12), Derby Assembly Hall (13), Liverpool Empire (14), London Hammersmith Odeon (15 and 16), Ipswich Gaumont (17), Oxford New (18), Bristol Colston Hall (19), Exeter University (20), Southampton Gaumont (22), Bournemouth Winter Gardens (23), Croydon Fairfield Hall (25), Brighton Dome (26) and Belfast Kings Hall (29).

Tickets are on sale now at all venues, except Bristol (September 19) and Brighton (October 26). After these dates, the show goes on to play four concerts in Eire.

Gallagher & Lyle, who recently signed with Phonogram after a long spell with A&M, will be backed on stage by a six-piece band and introducing material from their upcoming album — their first single on the Mercury label 'Missing You' was released a couple of weeks ago. Judie Tzuke, using a five-piece band, will perform unreleased material as well as songs from her hit album 'Welcome To The Cruise'.

JUDIE TZUKE

THE SUTHERLAND BROTHERS

THE SUTHERLANDS are set for their first British tour in two years, and their first since the demise of Quiver.

They play Treforest Wales Polytechnic (September 27), Bath University (28), Bradford University (29), Blackburn King George's Hall (30), Aberystwyth University (October 1), Bournemouth Town Hall (2), Durham University (4), Newcastle Polytechnic (5), Aberdeen University (6), Dundee University (7), Ayr Pavilion (8), Glasgow Strathclyde University (9), Middlesbrough Town Hall (11), Birmingham Aston University (12), Manchester

FISCHER Z

FISCHER Z, just back from Europe, begin a lengthy series of UK dates next week. With further gigs still to be added, their confirmed schedule so far is Edinburgh Tiffany's (September 10), Aberdeen Ruffies (11), Dumfries Queen's Hall (12), Dundee Teasers (13), Newcastle Mayfair (14), Retford Porterhouse (15), Newport Gwent Stowaway (19), Newport Salop Village (21), Dudley J.B.'s (22), Jacksdale Grey Topper (23), Middlesbrough Teesside Poly (27), Wolverhampton Poly (29), Manchester University (October 1), Nottingham Trent Poly (2), Port Talbot Troubadour (4) and Uxbridge Brunel University (5).

THE SUTHERLAND BROTHERS

University (13), Ipswich Gaumont (14), Sheffield Polytechnic (17), Croydon Fairfield Hall (19), Reading University (20) and Peterborough ABC (21). Two more dates have still to be added.

John and Gavin Sutherland have assembled a new back-up band for the tour, comprising Steve Simpson (lead guitar), Mick Weaver (keyboards), Chrissie Stewart (bass) and Billy Rankin (drums). Support act for the first three gigs is CBS rock group The Bliss Band — then Live Wire, fresh off the Nils Lofgren tour, take over for the rest of the dates.

MARY WILSON

MARY WILSON, founder member of The Supremes who is now working as a soloist, is set for her first solo British tour. Her itinerary consists mainly of club engagements, and those confirmed so far are Birmingham Night Out (September 10-15), Manchester Golden Garter (17-22), Windsor Glaziers (October 14-20), Sheffield Fiesta (22-27), Nottingham Heat Of The Midlands (29-November 3), Leicester Bailey's (12-17), Ceaselessly Double Diamond (19-24), Luton Caesar's Palace (25) and Dublin Starlight (29-December 1). Her single 'Red Hot' is issued by Motown on September 14, followed two weeks later by her debut solo album 'Mary Wilson'.

MARY WILSON

MANHATTAN TRANSFER

MANHATTAN TRANSFER return to the UK in November for another concert series, including a string of seven successive nights at London Dominion Theatre (13-19). Other dates are Brighton Centre (November 3), Coventry Theatre (4), Manchester Apollo (5, 6 and 7) and Birmingham Odeon (9 and 10). Promoter is Harvey Goldsmith, and ticket prices are £7.50, £8.50 and £5.50 (Brighton and Coventry); £7.50 and £8.50 (Manchester and Birmingham); and £8.50 and £7.50 (London). A new Transfer album will be issued in advance of their visit, with a single taken from the LP released at the same time. All box-offices have already opened.

B.Rats, Siouxsie, Pistols, Sham: upcoming releases

- The Boomtown Rats' new album is set for early October release on Ensign, to coincide with their upcoming UK tour — titled 'The Fine Art Of Surfacing'. It consists of 14 tracks, mainly Bob Geldof compositions. Meanwhile their international smash hit single 'I Don't Like Mondays' is being issued on September 21 in America, following legal advice to CBS (the distributors) that it will not prejudice the trial of Brenda Spencer, on whose case it is based.
- Siouxsie & The Banshees' German-language track 'Mittagsessen' (meaning 'Metal Postcard') is being released by Polydor in this country on September 14. It was originally recorded strictly for the German market, and has only been available here as a high-priced import, but heavy demand has persuaded Polydor to issue it officially. The B-side is 'Love In A Void'.
- The Sex Pistols' next single, provisionally planned for early October release by Virgin, is expected to be the title track from their film soundtrack 'The Great Rock 'n' Roll Swindle' coupled with 'Rock Around The Clock'. There is still no news of the film being screened, as the receivers are still seeking a distributor.
- Sham 69 are likely to be heard on record again later in the year. The recent farewell gigs at Glasgow Apollo and London Rainbow were recorded, and there are plans for a live album featuring these and other gigs.

'SOMETHING THAT I SAID' THE EXPLOSIVE NEW SINGLE FROM THE RUTS!

VIRGIN RECORDS VS285

KENNEDY STREET ENTERPRISES LTD Presents

Tues Sept 13	MANCHESTER APOLLO 061-273 1112 Tickets £2.25
Thurs Sept 13	WOLVERHAMPTON CIVIC HALL 0902 26482 Tickets £2.25 £1.75
Mon Sept 17	THE RAINBOW 01-263 3140 Tickets £3.50 £2.50 £2.00
Tues Sept 18	BRISTOL COLSTON HALL 0272 21182 Tickets £2.25 £1.75

Plus Special Guests YACHTS and
THE DAZZLERS

ROADSHOW: SWEEPS UK

Sayer for Christmas

LEO SAYER will be this year's pre-Christmas attraction at London Hammersmith Odeon — he was confirmed this week for a string of five nights there on December 20, 21, 22, 23 and 24. Immediately prior to this season he plays three dates at Bournemouth Winter Gardens (December 16, 17 and 18), and right after the holiday he headlines a four-night stint at Birmingham Odeon (December 27, 28, 29 and 30).

Details of ticket prices and booking arrangements will be announced next week. These shows are additions to Sayer's extensive autumn tour, already reported by NME. Meanwhile, his new single 'When The Money Runs Out' is issued by Chrysalis this weekend — and the album from which it is taken, titled 'Here' follows on September 21.

RAR BENEFITS

A FURTHER series of Rock Against Racism gigs is being staged over the next two months under the banner of 'Dance And Defend', to help provide aid for the hundreds of people charged after Anti-Nazi demonstrations earlier this year in Southall, Leicester and West Bromwich.

The first batch of gigs includes Castleford Civic Centre with The Mekons, Artery and Gravity (September 14); London Hackney Chats Palace with Charge and Bigger (also 14); Harrow Carnival with The Enchanters, The Chanters and Bozoz (15); Doncaster Romeo & Juliet with Kick Stars, Jump and Gravity (17); Rotherham Clifton Ballroom with Xero, The Prams and I'm So Hollow (21); Harrow Co-Op Hall with Charge and Chaos (22); Chesterfield Conservative Club with Disease and I'm So Hollow (27); Barnley Portcullis Club with Stunt Kicks, Ex-Rippers and Deal Aids (28); and Sheffield Polytechnic with The Butzards, Artery and others (29). October gigs are now being finalised.

A free RAR concert takes place this Sunday (9) in Liverpool Princes Park with Exodus, Sadista Sisters, Kell-Kun, Panama Steel Band, Equal Temperament and Decadence. It starts at 2 pm after a march from the Cathedral. There will be stalls, refreshments and provision for children.

CAMEL

CAMEL go back on the road next month with concert appearances at Brighton Dome (October 8), Sheffield City Hall (9), Bristol Hippodrome (10), London Hammersmith Odeon (11 and 12), Manchester Apollo (13), Liverpool Empire (14), Birmingham Odeon (16), Southampton Gaumont (17), Aylesbury Friars (18), Ipswich Gaumont (19), Leicester De Montfort Hall (21), Glasgow Apollo (22), Edinburgh Odeon (23), Newcastle City Hall (24) and Oxford New (25). Ticket prices at Hammersmith are £3.75, £2.25, £2.75 and £2.25; at all other venues they are £3.25, £2.75 and £2.25. The tour ties in with the October 5 release of their new album 'I Can See Your House From Here', their first since Peter Bardens quit the band. In fact, they have a distinctly new look, with two new members in the current line-up — ex-Steve Hillage bassist Colin Bass and keyboards man Kit Watkins.

- The new Status Quo single, issued by Phonogram on September 14, is the Rick Parfitt-Andy Bown composition 'Whatever You Want'. It's taken from their long-awaited new album 'Hard Ride', now officially due out on October 5.
- Brakes, newly signed by Magnet Records, have their debut album and single both issued on September 14 — titled 'For Why You Kicks My Donkey?' and 'The Way I See It' respectively. They have a string of promotional gigs at London Marquee on September 17 and 24, October 6 and 15.
- The Kinks' new album 'Low Budget' and single 'Moving Pictures' are both out tomorrow (Friday) on the Arista label.
- Adam & The Ants' first album 'Dirk Wears White Socks' is due out in two weeks' time on Do It Records.

THE CROOKS are the first signing to newly-formed London label Blueprint Records. They are at present in the studios with producer Simon Boswell recording their first album, for release towards the end of the year, preceded by a single at the end of this month. During breaks in recording, they have gigs at London Clapham 101 Club (this Sunday), Besidon Double Six (September 19), Brixton (20), Oxford City Hall (21), London Fulham Greyhound (27),

The Undertones

THE UNDERTONES return from their U.S. debut at the end of the month, and launch straight into their biggest-ever British tour, climaxing at London Rainbow. To coincide, Sire Records release their fifth single on September 28 — a band composition titled 'You've Got My Number (Why Don't You Use It?)', coupled with an up-dated version of the Chocolate Watch Band's 'Let's Talk About Girls', both songs having been included in their stage act for some time.

Tour dates are Bristol Locarno (September 30), Norwich St. Andrew's Hall (October 1), Oxford New Theatre (2), Hemel Hempstead Pavilion (3), Cambridge Corn Exchange (5), Manchester Factory (6), Leicester De Montfort Hall (7), Newcastle City Hall (8), Wolverhampton Civic Hall (15), Blackburn King George's Hall (16), Bradford St. George's Hall (17), Derby Assembly Hall (18), Aberdeen University (20), Cardiff Top Rank (21), Liverpool Mountford Hall (22), Birmingham Odeon (23), Loughborough University (24), Portsmouth Locarno (25), Bournemouth Winter Gardens (26), Bracknell Sports Centre (27) and London Rainbow (30).

The band's debut album 'Undertones' will be deleted on October 5, and on the same day a newly-packaged LP will be issued with the same title. It includes the entire previous release, with addition of the original versions of 'Teenage Kicks' and 'Get Over You', plus the substitution of the single version of 'Here Comes The Summer'.

JUSTIN HAYWARD

MOODY BLUES

THE MOODY BLUES are at last set for their British concert return, some 18 months after their re-formation. They play Glasgow Apollo (October 29), Stafford Bingley Hall (31) and London Wembley Arena (November 3), with the likelihood of a second Wembley gig being added later. These are the Moodies' first UK dates for six years and, of course, their first since Patrick Moraz joined the band. Ticket prices for Wembley are £6.50, £5.50 and £4.50; at the other two venues they are £6, £5 and £4.

There won't be a new album to coincide with these gigs, but K-Tel are to issue a Greatest Hits compilation, and Justin Hayward hopes to have his second solo album available at the time — he is currently completing it with 'War Of The Worlds' producer Jeff Wayne. At the end of this month Decca are putting out a maxi-single compiling 'I'm Just A Singer In A Rock 'n' Roll Band', 'Question' and 'Nights In White Satin'.

TOUR BRIEFS

- FATBACK BAND fly in to play two club weeks — Watford Bailey's (September 24-30) and Leicester Bailey's (October 1-6). To coincide with the visit, Polydor release their new single 'You're My Candy Sweet' on the Spring label.
- SKY have now added a string of London dates to their previously-reported UK tour. They play live nights at the Dominion Theatre from October 16 to 20. Tickets are £8, £5 and £3.
- BOSTON play their concert at Edinburgh Royal Highland Exhibition Hall on October 26. Plans for this additional gig were announced last week, but the date was omitted.
- DANNY ADLER (ex-Roagator) launches his new band at London Oxford St 100 Club this Sunday (9). The line-up features three sax players, bass and drums, with Adler on guitar.
- UNIVERSITY have added Cardiff University (December 7) and Carlisle Market Hall (4) to their extensive autumn tour, already reported. The Leeds University gig switches from December 7 to 8.
- THE CRICKETS headline a special concert for Buddy Holly Week at London Hammersmith Odeon on September 14. The organisers say that several surprise guests will appear.
- THE THREE DEGREES are backed by the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra in concert at London Royal Albert Hall on Monday, October 8. Provincial dates will be announced shortly.

PUNILUX

PUNISHMENT OF LUXURY, who are one of the acts in this weekend's Sci-Fi Music Festival in Leeds, begin a 30-date UK tour later this month. It ties in with the release by Liberty-United tomorrow (Friday) of their debut album 'Laughing Academy'. Confirmed dates are Scarborough Penthouse (September 21), Middlesbrough Rock Garden (22), Dumfries Stagecoach (23), Newport Showway (26), London Kensington Nashville (28 and 29), Norwich St. Andrew's Hall (October 3), Stafford North Staffs Polytechnic (4), Retford Porterhouse (6), Shrewsbury Cascade (10), Chesterfield Fusion (11), London Central Polytechnic (12), Colchester Essex University (13), Nottingham University (17), Manchester Polytechnic (18), London Middlesex Polytechnic (19), Portsmouth Polytechnic (23), Plymouth Clones (24), Wakefield Unity Hall (26), Bath University (29) and London Marquee (30 and 31). More are being finalised.

RECORD NEWS

- Adrian Munsey, whose singles 'The Lost Sheep' and 'Cent Sheep' were issued by Virgin, has started his own My Records label. First release is the single 'The World Is Moving On' sung by Dephne, due out on September 20.
- Rockburgh Records have concluded a licensing deal for the UK release of four albums by top Australian band Jo Jo Zep & The Falcons, who have worked Down Under with Elvis Costello and Graham Parker. A 'Best Of' album and the single 'So Young' are issued on September 14. Also from Rockburgh on the same date is the new Ian Matthews album 'Siamese Friends'.

- Rory Gallagher's new album 'Top Priority' is issued by Chrysalis this weekend, and on September 21, his previous six albums on that label are re-released.
- As a prelude to their upcoming UK tour, Boston have a special four-track EP issued by Epic on September 21. Titles are 'More Than A Feeling', 'Peace Of Mind', 'Don't Look Back' and 'Long Time'.
- Rhesus Records of Manchester have signed a one-off deal with Decca for the release of 'What's What', the current single by The Donkeys — and Decca are reactivating their dormant Darnley label specifically for this single.
- For their thirteenth LP issued by CBS this weekend, Chicago revert to their original policy of naming their albums in numerical order. It's called 'XIII'.

- Independent Doncaster label Future Earth Records debut this week with a single by Sheffield band Heikini 5 Below, coupling 'Jennifer Darling' and 'Women In Love'. A single from The Dicks is due shortly.
- Small Wonder this week reissues the first single by North London outfit The Cockney Rivets, after last month's first pressing of 5,000 sold out in two weeks. Titled 'Flares And Slippers', it has 'Police Car' and 'I Wanna Be A Star' on the B-side.
- Chrysalis are introducing a series of budget-price albums by selected new and up-and-coming artists, retailing at £3.99. First of these is the new Pete Ubbi album 'New Picnic Time', out on September 21.

- Simple Minds are recording their second Zoom Records album at Rockfield Studios, titled 'Real To Real Cacophony' and scheduled for mid-autumn release. Zoom have also signed Edinburgh band The Cheats and issue their debut single 'Radioactive' this weekend.
- Following their departure from Island, Eddie & The Hot Rods have signed with EMI. They go into the studios next month to start work on their first album for the label. There are no plans for any British gigs until the LP is released in the New Year.
- The Monochrome Set's third single, due out later this month on Rough Trade Records, has the intriguing title of 'The Monochrome Set'.
- Oval Records re-launch their own independent label on September 14 with the release of the album 'Honky-Tonk Demos', a collection of 13 tapes from Charlie Gillett's Radio London show — including the first-ever broadcasts by Dave Struts, Darts and Graham Parker. It calls at £3.99, and distribution is through Spartan. Out the same day is a three-track EP by Coventry six-piece The Reluctant Stereotype.
- Liberty-United launch a new golden olden series called Silver Spotlight on September 21, with Eddie Cochran's 'The Sun Was To Heaven' and Fats Domino's 'Walking To New Orleans', plus others by Johnny Burnette, Ricky Nelson and Bobby Vee.
- The debut EP from three-piece Sheffield band Vice Versa, titled 'Music', is out this week on the newly-formed Neutron Records label. Available by post at £1.16 from S. Singleton, c/o Neutron, 44 Bowwood Road, Sheffield S11 8YD, or at £1 from Rough Trade outlets.

Harvey Goldsmith Entertainments by arrangement with MCA's present

NILS LOFGREN

— special guests Live Wire

Friday 7th September
SHEFFIELD CITY HALL
Balm Green
Tel. Sheffield 735295 6

Monday 17th September
BRIGHTON DOME
New Street
Tel. Brighton 682127

Wednesday 19th September
NEWCASTLE CITY HALL
Northumberland Road
Tel. Newcastle 20007

Thursday 20th September
BIRMINGHAM ODEON
New Street
Tel. 021 643 6101

TICKETS £3.50 £1.00 £2.50 £2.00

SAMMY HAGAR

DEF LEPPARD

MAYFAIR

THURSDAY 13th SEPTEMBER at 8-00

THURSDAY 13th SEPTEMBER at 8-00

FREE TRADE HALL

FRIDAY 14th SEPTEMBER at 7-30

BIRMINGHAM ODEON

SATURDAY 15th SEPTEMBER at 7-30

HAMMERSMITH ODEON

SUNDAY 16th SEPTEMBER at 7-30

NEIL KAY BANDWAGON — HEAVY METAL SOUNDHOUSE

WILD HORSES

FRI/SAT — 21/22 SEPTEMBER at 7-30

Tickets £4.50 (inc. VAT) Available from the following outlets: London: Premier Box Office, London Theatre Bookings, Edwards & Edwards, Birmingham: Cyclops Sounds, Wolverhampton: Sundown Records, Hanley, Tunstall: Newcastle-Lynne, Mike Lloyd Record Shops, Stafford: Lotus Records, Manchester: Piccadilly Records, of The New Bingley Hall. By post from: Straight Music Ltd, 11 Munro Terrace, London SW10 6DL. (please enclose SAE for available on night)

NEW TICKET OUTLETS

Cardiff: Virgin Records, Spillers, Bristol: Virgin Records, Bristol Records, Leicester: Penny Lane Records, Sheffield: Wilson Pack, Newcastle: City Hall Box Office.

STUDENTS!

NME continues it's college feature.

DON'T MISS OUT

JOAN ARMATRADING STEPPIN' OUT

OUR PRICE

OUR PRICE TOP 60

LONDON'S ORIGINAL ALBUM CHART

WEEK	LAST WEEK	TITLE	R.R.P.	OUR PRICE	WEEK	LAST WEEK	TITLE	R.R.P.	OUR PRICE
1	27	LED ZEPPELIN — IN THROUGH THE OUT DOOR	5.00	3.75	31	13	TUBEWAY ARMY — THE FIRST ALBUM	5.00	3.75
2	31	BOB DYLAN — SLOW TRAIN COMING	5.29	4.04	32	29	DAVE EDWARDS — REPEAT WHEN NECESSARY	5.00	3.75
3	1	SUPERTRAMP — BREAKFAST IN AMERICA	4.78	3.53	33	30	ROSE ROYCE — RAINBOW CONNECTION	5.00	3.75
4	4	SPYRO-GYRA — MIMING BARGE	4.69	3.44	34	32	HILL LOGGERS — HILLS	4.78	3.53
5	2	EASTN WIND AND FIRE — I AM	5.29	4.04	35	35	BILLI EYSTER CITY — MIMOS	5.29	4.04
6	10	JAYI TRIBE — WELCOME TO THE CRUISE	4.65	3.40	36	37	SKY	5.25	4.00
7	5	J.J. GALE — S	5.00	3.75	37	39	ROXY MUSIC — MANIFESTO	5.31	4.06
8	11	F.L.G. — DISCOVERY	5.49	4.24	38	40	CHARLIE — FIGHT DIRTY	5.06	3.81
9	3	CRUSADERS — STREET LIFE	4.69	3.44	39	41	KINKS — LOW BUDGET	5.00	3.75
10	9	POLICE — OUTLANDS (ZAMBU)	4.78	3.53	40	36	HERMAN BROOD	4.80	3.55
11	33	VAN MORRISON — INTO THE MUSIC	4.65	3.40	41	25	ROBERT PALMER — SECRETS	5.00	3.75
12	8	THE BEST DISCO ALBUM IN THE WORLD	5.00	4.20	42	44	DIANA ROSS — THE BOSS	5.29	4.04
13	16	TUBEWAY ARMY — REPLICAS	5.00	3.75	43	47	JOHN MITCHELL — MMVCUS	5.00	3.75
14	21	COMMODORES — MIDNIGHT MAGIC	5.69	4.44	44	48	WINGS — BACK TO THE EGG	5.49	4.24
15	17	DOMINA SUMMER — BAD GIRLS	6.50	4.75	45	56	JOAN ARMATRADING — STEPPIN' OUT	4.78	3.53
16	6	BARBOW — DOWN TO EARTH	5.06	3.81	46	49	ANDREX — TEENAGE WARNING	5.00	3.75
17	7	AC/DC — HIGHWAY TO HELL	5.00	3.75	47	38	ROCKY SHAMPE — AAMA LABA	5.29	4.04
18	14	BLONDIE — PARALLEL LINES	4.78	3.53	48	34	QUEEN — LIVE KILLERS	8.45	6.45
19	18	WIL YOUNG — MUST NEVER SLEEP	5.00	3.75	49	42	NICK LOWE — LABOUR OF LOVE	5.00	3.75
20	22	JOE JACKSON — LOOK SHARP!	4.78	3.53	50	51	PAT TRAVERS BAND — LIVE!	4.63	3.38
21	24	INCO LEE JONES	5.00	3.75	51	45	THE KRAK — GET THE CRACK	5.29	4.04
22	15	CINC — RESOLVE	5.00	3.75	52	50	THIRD WORLD — THE STORIES BEEN TOLD	5.00	3.75
23	20	DIRE STRAITS — COMMUNIQUE	5.30	4.05	53	53	STEEL PULSE — TRIBUTE TO THE MIMOS	5.00	3.75
24	19	ABBA — VOLEX-VOUS	5.29	4.04	54	54	GRUEZZE — COOL FOR CATS	4.78	3.53
25	28	BOB DYLAN — AT BUDOKAN	7.99	5.99	55	55	GARY BROOKER — NO MORE FEAR OF FLYING	4.46	3.21
26	26	ALAN PARSONS PROJECT — EYE	5.00	3.75	56	43	CHAS AND DAVE — DON'T GIVE A MONKEY'S	5.29	4.04
27	26	WIND — THE KIDS ARE ALRIGHT	9.04	6.54	57	52	C.C.A. — 20 GREATEST HITS	5.29	4.04
28	12	RY COOPER — BOB TELL YOU BOB?	5.00	3.75	58	58	AMERICA	5.29	4.04
29	23	B.S.Z.	5.00	3.75	59	59	JOHN WATY — SLUG LINE	4.69	3.44
30	30	TALKING HEADS — FEAR OF MUSIC	5.00	3.75	60	49

Forthcoming Attractions
1. Johnny, Barry Manilow, Barry M. Fox, Eagles, Gary Nardino, Mountain Parkas, Ted Cray, Randy Newman, Jerry Pham, Mar de Fox, Chapp Track, Stranglers, Buzzcocks, Wyo, Ed Richard, Shon III UK, Wyo — Quadrophonia, Bob Marley, Stea, Blondie, Les Sayer, Jullio Tall, 100c, Southside, Johnny, Brand K, Status Quo, Live Wyo, Blue Brothers, Foreign

YOU'LL GET IT
CHEAPER AT OUR PRICE
£1.25 OFF
REG. PRICE £4.78 OUR PRICE £3.53

137 CHARING CROSS ROAD WC2
TEL: 01-437 1713.

70 NORTH END CROYDON
TEL: 01-681 7107.

151 EDGWARE ROAD W2
TEL: 01-723 1883.

12 TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD W1
TEL: 01-636 4631.

14 CHASE SIDE SOUTHGATE N14
TEL: 01-882 5566

16 GOLDERS GREEN ROAD NW11
TEL: 01-455 1078.

95 CLARENCE STREET KINGSTON
TEL: 01-546 6353.

100 KENSINGTON HIGH STREET W8
TEL: 01-937 0257.

219A FINCHLEY ROAD NW3
TEL: 01-624 2217.

1 CRANBOURN ST LEICESTER SQ WC2
TEL: 01-734 7660.

29 RIVERDALE SHOPPING CENTRE,
LEWISHAM SE14 TEL: 01-318 2297

36 KINGS ROAD CHELSEA SW3
TEL: 01-581 0877

YOU'LL GET IT CHEAPER
AT OUR PRICE
RECORDS

£1.25
TO
£2.50
OFF
TOP 60

EXCEPT SOME TV ADVERTISED ALBUMS

THIS WEEK'S SHEFFIELD: SHEFFIELD

"We might give a lot of inspiration, directions to other people who might carry on where we leave off, therefore what we've done is not completely at a loss. We're only part of a chain..."

Mal of Cabaret Voltaire

THAT QUOTE, lifted from 1978's "This Week's Leeds" progress-report on Sheffield, serves as a pretty good introduction to this year's missive from the northern front.

Unlike any other city of comparable size, Sheffield lacks the basic machinery for indigenous musical growth. Manchester, Liverpool, all those other provincial outposts, possess local studios and small clubs prepared to act as a platform for local talent — as well as the myths, legends and general mystique of earlier musical enterprise which help generate hope in current activities.

Of the latter, Sheffield has only the rotting memory of a grotesque gas-fitter made good (what a tradition!), and of the former — well, there just isn't (with the honourable exception of the university Now Society, any studios, and what clubs there are can't afford to put on local bands because of a strange psychological barrier which prevents local gig-goers from admitting that home-grown talent can be (at least) as good as that from out of town. As Rod Leigh from I'm So Hollow puts it:

"It's just the way people think. They're very proud to come from Sheffield — proud of their cheap bus fares, proud of their Working Men's Clubs, proud of the Crucible Theatre and Sheffield steel — yet they ignore any talent from Sheffield."

"They'd rather see, say, The B52's 'from America' — it was packed out for them. We might do that, put 'from America' on the posters, get all these idiots coming down!"

Which is why Cabaret Voltaire are doubly important to the Sheffield music scene. Unlike the get-rich-quick attitude of The Human League (take that as a slap across the wrist, boys), Cabaret Voltaire, having achieved some moderate success on a national scale, have ploughed whatever resources they can manage back into the local scene. And not only have they used their limited studio facilities to record other local bands, they are also in the process (although they probably don't realise it) of constructing a much-needed morale-boosting historical perspective: theirs will be, I think, the "earlier musical enterprise" most looked-back on in years to come, as an example that, yes, cultural decentralisation can work! It can be done in Sheffield!

So, what state's the chain in now? Well, it's lost a few links — the most regrettable being the odd Molodoy — although for every one lost, a dozen have been forged, some from the remnants of the broken; others have been tempered, hardened, grown stronger; and some have changed shape altogether.

The four bands this article is most concerned with are those who, for one reason or another, you are most likely to encounter over the next year or two. But no account of Sheffield's musics could be complete without at least a passing reference to the earnest ClockDVA and lovable They Must Be Russians (the pair most direct in descent from the Cabs), the tick-tock complex transatlantic pop of Xero, the defiant throwback punkery of The Stunt Kites, the crossover populism of The Deaf Aids, elektronische untermenschen Vice Versa, whose secondhand Normal Human League clone EP "Music 4" is reviewed by Paul Morley this week on page 25, and a whole bunch more whose names just can't fit in this time round; your day will come, I'm sure. And, of course, a tip of the titter to Martin XRussian's excellent (though uncritical) fanzine New Musical Excess, a pot-pourri of gossip and info which concentrates almost completely on local talent — in itself

Last year ANDY GILL wrote his famous dissertation "This Week's Leeds: Sheffield" — the feature which launched The Human League to international superstardom, and 2.3... well, we won't talk about them.

Anyway, here's the 1979 Sheffield Show. It's taken Andy a year to research it, it cost you 1½p to buy it and it'll take you all of 20 minutes to consume it. So whaddaya waiting for?

1
Salon Graph

2
Com-Sat Angels

something of an indication of the extent to which the Sheffield scene's grown in the past year.

IF YOU asked me to name only one Sheffield band you should watch out for, I'd point you at The Com-Sat Angels and tell you to listen for yourself.

Which you can easily do by grabbing a copy of their 'Red Planet' EP on their own Junta label and listening to the second side (not, please, the dated unrepresentative 'Red Planet' itself), a couple of songs called 'I Get Excited' and 'Specimen No. 2' which serve as a good example of what can happen when jazz techniques are used with wit and imagination in rock — not ponderous, pedantic riffs and extraneous embellishment thrusting fiercely up its own arse, but sharp, concise textual statements and themes which reappear tantalisingly in the mind days later.

For gourmets rather than gourmands, 'I Get Excited', a bittersweet tale of symbolic obsession, is a peach: a tense, edgy intro gives way to a chord-structure whose homely security belies the anxiety and neurosis of the lyrics, which, with lines like "Automotives in my mental garage" and "My alphabet is archetypal-cast", are at once light and heavy, humorous and serious — witty, without resorting to the populist verbal slapstick of a Cooper Clarke.

And that's only the visible tip of the iceberg; their demo tape of songs like 'Independence Day', 'Missing in Action', 'Monkey Pilot' and 'Baby' is still the most-played music in the Gill household, after more than a month's hard listening.

A quartet (Kevin Bacon, bass; Andy Peake, keyboards; Mick Glaisher, drums; Steve Fellows, guitar and vocals), The Com-Sat Angels started out in jazz-rock climes before migrating towards the complex-pop regions of XTC where, as Radio Earth, they had a brief flirtation with Radar Records, who ditched them when WEA pulled the purse-strings shut. As Fellows put it, "because we were the last to come, we were the first to go."

Following a period of hibernation, they re-emerged with a new name and a new music, to say nothing of a new attitude.

"Radio Earth music was the music of panic," assesses Fellows bluntly. "We wanted to get something which would impress record companies. After the Radar business fell through we felt, 'Well, we'll do what we want to do.'"

"We still liked it," Bacon points out. "Oh yes. But we were so anxious to impress we crammed about three songs into each one: the structures were so complex. Now we let it breathe a bit, y'know? We don't bruise the ears of the listener, hopefully..."

Left to right, top to bottom: Pam Young, Ian Burdon, Rod Siddell, Elliott, Martin Rootes; Andy Peake, Mick Glaisher, Steve Fellows, Kevin Bacon. Pictures: Philip Barnes.

"Some people say it appears 'complex' and 'weird', but really it's much simpler than the Radio Earth stuff," adds Glaisher. "Listen to it a few times, and it's really very melodic." "It's just more mature really," Fellows sums up. "The important word here is 'construction'."

"What we do is simplify rather than complicate things. Everything that we play is written by the particular player: what others might call 'arranging', we call 'writing'."

The Com-Sat Angels are, to a large extent, their own men; they have only slight contact with the Sheffield "scene", which they see as suffering from an over-abundance of gossip, ego-stroking and cliquishness, and a paucity of constructive criticism. The basic difference between them and a lot of other Sheffield bands, as Bacon sees it, is that "we'd be here anyway, no matter whether there were all those other groups or not, and they wouldn't be there if there wasn't that 'scene'."

And he's probably right. What really sets The Com-Sat Angels apart is their intentionality, their volition. Style plays no part in it. Which is as it should be for a band who exist in a space bounded on three sides by Steely Dan, Wire and Pere Ubu, and on the fourth by their own imagination (which is prodigious).

As Steve Fellows says: "I'm really keen on the work-ethic. You've gotta work, and you've gotta work hard."

■ Continues over

THIS WEEK'S SHEFFIELD

From previous page

UNLIKE the Com-Sats, whose businesslike attitude has garnered them both a Dutch tour (with Minny Pops and Zo Pops) and several offers from interested labels of various sizes, the no-compromise anarchist stance of their friends Salon Graph has probably worked to the band's detriment. Salon Graph, until recently, were known simply as Graph, but changed their name because it emphasised only the rigid, mechanical aspects of their music and neglected the more romantic side. As Graph, they contributed a track, 'Drowning', to Bob Fast's 'Earcorn', although they now dismiss that as hopelessly outdated. A wry poke at populist politicising in pop music ('Nobody's gonna sink this ship because they've got a fear of drowning'), it does however still serve as a good introduction to their music, despite the godawful sound-quality.

Originally a trio consisting of Martin Rootes (keyboard, tapes and little boxes), Ian Burdon (bass) and Elliott (guitar and vocals), they were joined until recently by drummer Nik Allday, whose 'no cymbals please, we're rhythmic' style (more than a little reminiscent of Can's Jaki Liebezelt) was the perfect complement to Burdon's lumpy, jerky, rolling bass rhythms: disco music for camels.

With Allday's departure, they recruited a new name and two new members, drummer Rod Siddall and vocalist/melodica player Pam Young, the former as replacement and the latter as a result of recent exposure to The Beach Boys — quite a revelation, it seems, as their earliest musical influences (mainly German) came from outside the mainstream pop list. As the loquacious Elliott explains:

"What we regarded as 'good' music didn't correspond to others' views, and when we started to create music, because we were in a kind of vacuum, we created it based upon the values of those experimentalists. But we didn't have what they'd had in the first place: they'd gone through rejecting pop music to creating 'experimental' music, whereas we accepted 'experimental' music and didn't really know much about pop music, because we didn't listen to the radio."

"So when we did hear pop music we recognised things such as beat, hook, rhythm, as important, and just transposed the value-systems of those experimentalists onto those bases for pop music."

"It sounds like a bit of a snobby attitude, just liking something because it's banal," clarifies Burdon, "but in actual fact we didn't get to hear pop music — we lived in foreign countries and simply didn't have access to radio or television."

"I refute that!" laughs Elliott. "Because I was a snob! Because if you realise that most of the people in this country would like to bring back hanging, you'll realise that most of the people in this country are morose! And most of the people in this country like pop music."

Dodgy logic, of course, this one-to-one relationship between hanging and pop music, but it's a good example of Elliott's penchant for making outrageously antagonistic statements just to get a reaction.

Which is not to say he doesn't mean what he says. For instance, when I ask whether his two main lyrical concerns — romance and politics — are linked, whether he sees romance in political terms, he answers: "In that I don't approve of human beings being parasites. The boyfriend/girlfriend thing immortalised by pop music makes me shudder, because by this 'falling in love' syndrome you simply use somebody else to support your own futile optimism. And that makes you weak."

"The family, 'love', and all those teen-romance things are political things, in that they're organised towards oppressing you and your thought."

"The traditional view of love is hideous."

That's why I won't write happy love songs. I just don't think those things exist: people are just conned into believing they exist because it makes their lives easier to lead. And consequently, they're less of a threat to the authority that keeps them happy."

Elliott and Burdon claim Salon Graph are as much influenced by other 'arts' as by music. Elliott, as lyricist, cites Isadore ("Lautremont"), Duca's 'Maidoror' and French Romantics such as Baudelaire and Verlaine as chief among his literary influences, explaining that he prefers poems to novels because "attempts to characterise don't seem real to me."

Are there any particular visual artists they think are an influence?

"Anything from about 1880 to 1920," says Burdon. "In other words, Impressionism and Expressionism. The latter-day Expressionists, as well. Up until that point, painting was largely a duty to communicate, things like religious paintings — visual narrative. Then it gets to that point, which coincides roughly with the invention of photography, and painters were freed from that duty and could express themselves. How it connects with music, I don't know."

"I'll tell you how it does," Elliott launches in. "There's a lot of stuff about social realism nowadays — the typical social realism TV plays, and so on. They bloody stink! As far as I'm concerned, I'll express what goes on in my head; I'm not bothered about social realism."

"The predominant ideology in the music press — at the moment, anyway — is almost as restrictive as the educational system!"

No comment. As the interview draws to a close, Elliott, worried about possible misinterpretation, decides to add a postscript:

"A lot of the things we've said might seem in contradiction to our stand as libertarians. But the thing which enabled the Baader-Meinhof Group to move from being a pacifist anarchist organisation to a military anarchist organisation was their reading of Marcuse, who said that the working-class had been so indoctrinated that their viewpoint was no longer relevant. The capitalists have organised society in such a way that it no longer matters what the average person's view is — it's very sad that the average person thinks that hanging should be brought back. "And we find ourselves in rather the same position. It may be misconstrued as being elitist, but it isn't intended to be."

So what you're saying is that you think Joe Public has sold his birthright, not for a mess of pottage, but for a colour TV?

"Absolutely. Or for a record player..."

LIKE SALON Graph, Artery are currently in the process of adding to their line-up, expanding the range of sounds at their disposal. Rising out of the ashes of a fairly straightforward tower-block punk band called simply 'The', their membership went through a few changes before settling down, with the addition of bassist Neil MacKenzie last September, to Gary Wilson (drums), Mark Gouldthorpe (guitar), Royce Ashley (vocals/2nd guitar) and MacKenzie.

With this line-up they produced their first single, a three-tracker ('Mother Moon', 'Pretends', 'Heinz') which surfaced a few months ago on their manager Marcus Featherby's Limited Edition Records.

As a debut, it's an excellent indication of their strengths and idiosyncracies. Generally speaking, the Artery sound has its basis in the combination of Gouldthorpe's dense washes of fuzz-guitar and the razor-sharp, almost military sprightliness of Wilson and MacKenzie's rhythm section. Over this, Ashley's vocals are a curious kind of nasal whine, quite unlike anything I've heard before, the singer also adding occasional interjections of tunatic slide-guitar.

On their last few gigs, jazz saxist Steve McDool has appeared with the band on a few numbers, a move which signals both openness to change and dissatisfaction with present possibilities:

"There's only so much you can do with two guitars, bass and drums. It tends to sound the same after a while."

"We're thinking more of the future, with the sax, than of what we've already got. We'll be experimenting more."

Artery's next single 'The Slide' is also indicative of their willingness to take chances: few other bands would be prepared to release a single consisting solely of vocals and percussion, no other instruments at all. It's a high-spot of their set, a kind of bridge between the denser textures which open and close their performance.

Like most other local bands, they're both devoted to Sheffield and slightly exasperated by the lack of facilities and support in the city. Nonetheless, they approach the London-based Biz with caution, rightly afraid that the more spiritual values may get overlooked when materialism rears its ugly head: "Just looking at it from the outside, its whole attitude seems to destroy creativity. What happens to bands when they make it..."

It's hardly surprising that they come down, in the Great '70s Label War, wholeheartedly on the side of the minors, the small labels, as more sensitive to the needs of smaller bands, even though the minors mightn't have the resources to fulfil those needs as effectively as the majors.

Left to right, top to bottom: Gary Wilson, Mark Gouldthorpe, Neil MacKenzie, Steve McDool, Royce Ashley; Joe Sawicki, Rod Leigh, Gary Marsden, Jane Wilson. Pictures: Philip Barnes.

It's a situation which is in a way analogous to Sheffield: despite its drawbacks, the city's proving to be a fertile breeding-ground for new talent. The major stumbling-block is the attitude of audiences (and hence promoters), an attitude which threatens to stifle such openings as exist.

"TV Product (another new local band) wanted to book the Poly, and they said, 'You can't play unless you get someone like Artery to headline'. We had the same thing about six months ago..."

Which is why Marcus, a photographer turned entrepreneur, has taken to promoting regular gigs at local clubs, featuring both "name" bands and local outfits. As he says: "Talk about retrogressive attitudes! The actual audiences in Sheffield think that unless

Continues page 53

WHAT'S EDDIE HARDIN, CHARLIE WHITNEY, CHARLIE McCRACKEN AND ROB TOWNSEND DOING

A Family Affair

RCA

AXIS POINT
THE ALBUM ON RCA

AXIS POINT
THE ALBUM ON RCA
PL 30039

SIOUXSIE AND THE BANSHEES

Sept 5 BELFAST Ulster Hall
 Sept 7 ABERDEEN Capital Theatre
 Sept 8 GLASGOW Apollo
 Sept 9 DUNFERMLINE Kinnema
 Sept 12 BRADFORD St. Georges Hall
 Sept 14 OXFORD New Theatre

Empire LIVERPOOL Sept 15
 De Montfort Hall LEICESTER Sept 18
 Odeon BIRMINGHAM Sept 19

Sept 21 MANCHESTER Apollo
 Sept 22 MALVERN Winter Garden
 Sept 25 CARDIFF Sofia Gardens
 Sept 27 TAUNTON Odeon
 Sept 28 SOUTHAMPTON Gaumont
 Sept 29 HEMEL HEMPSTEAD The Pavilion

University NOTTINGHAM Oct 1
 Polytechnic NEWCASTLE Oct 3
 City Hall HULL Oct 8
 Gaumont IPSWICH Oct 9
 Conference Centre BRIGHTON Oct 10
 Odeon CHELMSFORD Oct 11
 Odeon LEWISHAM Oct 13
 Odeon HAMMERSMITH Oct 15

NEW ALBUM  JOIN HANDS

A FREE POSTER, WIN A STRAT, AND STILL £10 OFF.

The HMV Shop is giving away a Rory Gallagher poster, exclusive only to HMV, with the first 500 copies sold of 'Top Priority' - Rory Gallagher's new album.

The HMV Shop has also taken

£10 OFF

the list price of 'Top Priority' and is giving you the chance to win a Fender Stratocaster worth £300. The prize will be presented by Rory Gallagher. Pick up an entry form with the album at The HMV Shop where Rory Gallagher is 'Top Priority'.

And at the HMV Shop every week:
The HMV Shop Top Albums up to £1.50 off list price.
The HMV Shop Top Cassettes at 70p off list price.
Valid until 29th September. Subject to availability.

the HMV shop

363 Oxford Street,
London W.1.
(next to Bond Street tube)

Bedford
Birmingham
Bradford
Brighton
Bristol

Coventry
Derby
Edinburgh
Enfield
Exeter

Glasgow
Gloucester
Gravesend
Holloway
Hall

Kingston
Leeds
Leicester
Lewisham
Liverpool

Luton
Manchester
Newcastle
Nottingham
Notting Hill Gate

Plymouth
Portsmouth
Southampton
Stockton Stratford

Sunderland
Sutton
Swansea
Wolverhampton

THRILLS

Big Brother Is Watching You

1. Bootlegs

THE ONLY bootleg album pressed up in Britain this year was at the instigation of the British Phonographic Industry Ltd (BPI) — an organisation pledged to eliminate the manufacture and trade of bootlegs.

The album in question was David Bowie's 'The Wembley Wizard Touches The Dial', and, as a direct result, on Monday Aug. 20 a series of carefully co-ordinated raids — in London, Manchester, Newcastle and St. Helena — smashed Britain's largest bootleg gang.

This four month long operation, involving up to 40 investigators, is estimated to have cost in the region of £50,000.

Earlier this year, a BPI undercover agent successfully infiltrated a Northern-based bootleg organisation. When the Bowie album went out of stock, the bootleggers encountered problems obtaining fresh supplies from abroad. At this juncture, the undercover agent informed his new-found friends that he had access to no-questions-asked record pressing facilities here in Britain. He was then handed the metal stampers and unbeknown to the gang 2,000 copies were manufactured by the BPI. The bootleggers then commenced selling them to certain retail outlets.

Once these secretly marked albums began circulating, 40 BPI investigators, armed with a High Court inspection order, swooped, and recovered the Bowie albums, along with many others.

BPI Press Officer, Richard Robson, refuted stories that the album had in fact been originated by the BPI in collusion with RCA. "All that we did was re-press and mark an album that had already been in circulation."

Though some artists go to extreme lengths to counteract bootlegging there are others who openly encourage it.

One record shop owner who occasionally trades in bootlegs told me: "Two of my best customers are members of world famous rock bands. One of them usually buys half-a-dozen of each title to give to the rest of the guys in the band!"

The late Lowell George once informed this writer that he had been responsible for mixing the tapes of at least two Little Feat bootlegs.

Said George: "If anyone is going to buy a Little Feat bootleg, then at least I want to make certain the quality is good. Anyone who buys a bootleg is going to be the loyal fan who will buy every one of our official records."

One world famous Brit-Rock band has also had some degree of artistic control over their bootlegs. When embarking on a lengthy US tour the group have recorded a couple of early gigs and handed over mixed tapes to the more professional bootleggers in an effort to eliminate the hand-held cassette cowboy outfits. The logic behind such a move being, it's best to sell, at most 20,000 bootlegs than risk one's reputation by putting out what could prove to be a poor selling official souvenir.

Also, it's more prestigious and collectable and, nobody really loses out! Richard Robson doesn't dispute this, but felt that it was a curious attitude for artists to adopt. "It's one," he claimed, "that I don't understand!"

ROY CARR

THRILLS

Warning: This Album Can Seriously Damage Your Legal Position

2. Tapes

ARE CASSETTE recorder detector vans at the dark end of the street an imminent possibility? Can we soon anticipate dawn raids by teams of official investigators to check whether or not that tape you were playing wasn't a prerecorded Smith's 80p-off purchase, but a home tape made from a mate's bargain bin acquisition! And, come Christmas, will all recording equipment owners seriously be required to cough-up anything between a fiver and a tenner for a Home Recording Licence?

If the Department of Trade approve suggestions currently being put before it by the BPI (British Phonographic Industry Ltd), the MCPS (Mechanical Copyright Protection Society), the Musicians' Union and representatives from the recording industry, such measure could become a harsh reality.

If you own home-taping equipment, but not one of those thirty bob (plus VAT-BPI home-taping licences (but then, only an estimated 6,000 people do), every time you activate the record button, you're not only breaking the law but, say the major labels, cutting into their projected profits.

Business is business and, with few exceptions, record companies don't exist for the benefit of either artist or audience — though naturally they rely on both parties to stay in business. They exist for the benefit of stockholders and, if a company doesn't publish that all-important ten per cent annual profit growth, the value of its shares plummet.

According to WEA's Managing Director John Fuin, sales have slumped by nearly 30 per cent whereas, over the last quarter, blank cassette sales have dramatically increased by 20 per cent. A state of affairs that has resulted in the British recording industry claiming a potential loss of earnings in the region of £150 million.

When another journalist pressed the BPI's press officer, Richard Robson, about how they hoped to enforce a Home Recording Licence law, Robson's reply was both smug and forbidding.

He replied, "The idea has been kicked around that maybe we should bring a prosecution against a private individual as an example. There are ways of getting access to people's premises provided one has reasonable grounds for suspecting they are breaking the law."

THRILLS

Bad Luck Of The Irish

HEARD THE latest joke about the thick Englishman who gets up on stage, seizes a mike, spouts a few banalities, brings the whole gig to a close and still thinks he's smart?

No, I didn't laugh either, nor did Stiff Little Fingers nor the vast majority of a large crowd at Brixton's Anti-Racist Carnival last Sunday.

The Stiff Little Fingers set got off to a bad start when fighting broke out in the crowd almost immediately. But the trouble really started when a bear of very little brain managed to get on stage and grab a microphone. When an inadequate crash barrier in front of the stage finally gave way our hero was of course joined by many others. The stage was quickly overrun and though the band tried to keep playing this soon proved impossible and they left the stage. Unfortunately, no-one else followed their example.

To be fair, a lot of people on the stage couldn't get off, but plenty of others just wouldn't. And while most were just enjoying themselves and showing their appreciation in their own way, shouts of "Smash the IRA" and "Mountbatten died for you" (!!) made it clear others were there for more sinister reasons.

This week's Brain Of Britain award goes to the gent with the raised arm. He's the one who started — or rather finished — it all. Pic: Mark Risher.

Later, SLF manager Gordon Ogilvie was fairly stoical about the whole affair.

He was nonetheless critical of security arrangements and stewarding by the Lambeth Anti-Racist Movement.

This is the second time recently that an SLF gig has been prematurely halted which must cause speculation that they are to have the dubious honour of following Sham 69 as the band who aren't allowed to play. Gordon Ogilvie doesn't feel that this is a danger and everyone with more than empty space between their ears will no doubt hope he's right.

As for those who did set out to ruin this gig, one can only echo the word of Jake Burns last time this happened — Bastards!

STUART JOHNSTON

THRILLS

Death At Lyceum

The rock 'n' roll machine must once more pay tribute to, but is not accountable for a tragic accident at the Only Ones Lyceum gig on Sunday.

Fans were more than surprised to find at the end of the performance a police cordon manning the main exit with instructions to collect everyone's name and address before leaving.

Amongst the confusion and 1000 Mickey Mouse addresses later, impromptu and hysterical rumours circulated to the effect that someone had been stabbed or poisoned near the front of the stage. Whatever, something pretty grisly had evidently happened despite no eggo between punk/mod/skinhead factions.

A policeman told me later that Tobias Sladek, aged only 15 or 16, had 'died suddenly', and that 'no suspicious circumstances' are being investigated. The poor kid definitely wasn't stabbed, I suppose drugs cannot be but the cause of death will not be established until the post mortem.

Tobias apparently lay on the floor for some time until someone realised he was seriously ill, and he died after being admitted to hospital.

CHARLOTTE WYLIE

THRILLS

Mods—"It's Official": Mr Levi Strauss.

"Music is the medium of the young and the music press tells us that the boys are back in town. Mod connoisseurs in Spring 1980 will be buying the original 501 shrink-to-fit Levi's."

Oh yeah? You can bet your last fly-button on it, if the renowned trouser-merchants are to be believed. And for why?

"It's the mystique and the imagery that give the appeal to 'jeans experts' to whom uniqueness and originality is vital."

Well, it had to happen, didn't it? It was only a matter of time before Levi Strauss Ltd — and presumably their rivals as well — sensed there'd be a buck to be made from the burgeoning Mod movement and brought out their very own range of clothes.

Youth-culture, mod style, all packaged and price-tagged and ready to collect.

"No self-respecting 1980 mod would be seen without the true uniform of the 1960 mod. So iridescent jeans are back for the boys, in red/black and blue/yellow colours with shirts to match."

manages to balance articles on The Chords, Teen Beats and Spizz Energy with a well researched breakdown on How To Get A Gig and DIY recording.

Can't Explain (no address yet, this is issue number one

Thrills took a ring-side seat at last week's launch — all flashing lights, disco music and distinctly un-mod models kind of frugging around with a yellow Lambretta — and came out clutching a presentation elpee ('The Levi's Story') and a free Levi's biro.

Happiest man in the operation is Alan Joy, himself an original East End-and-Upminster mod who grew up to be Levi's Product Manager. He it was that noticed the present phenomenon last year, on a sentimental visit to his Sixties scooter-gang hang-out, the Bridge House in Canning Town... and sensed that he could push his own nostalgic interest to corporate advantage. Nice story, what? PAUL DU NOYER and costs 20p) has excellent visuals, a pop art supplement on tops, a comprehensive new bands file and an especially silly, highly readable piece on buying a scooter.

THRILLS

Hours of fun for all the family. BEN SHERMAN

THRILLS

Benyon

The Lone Groover

The Real Clint Eastwood Skanks Up

"I AM THE real Clint Eastwood 'cause I come from the ghetto..." grinned a skippin' and skankin' Eastwood onstage in the sweat soaked atmosphere of Dingwalls. The place was rammed... CORKED... and with Red Stripe outstripping blues dance prices at 55p a can there's no reason to be there other than to hear him.

Romping through versions of 'Primo Ballerina', 'Drifter', 'Country Boy', 'Down In Jamaica', 'DJ Jamboree / Sex Educational Class', and 'Caroline' amongst others Clint sang and toasted with energy and verve.

Among the Eastwood entourage were Keith Hudson, militant Barry and Clint's big brother and top toaster Trinity. As we'd huddled over the tape recorder in the dressing room earlier Clint had told how Trinity had introduced him into the runnings via a Joe Gibbs rehearsal day. Despite competition from six other DJs said Clint, "I was the one that success out of the crowd". His tune 'Badder Than You' was also a big seller.

Still only 19, Eastwood's prolific output, mostly via Channel One and Bunny 'Striker' Lee, has borne little fruit financially and in future he intends to work on his own or with other young producers with whom he feels he can get somewhere. Of the others he says, "they bring you down all the while... come penalsise and rob all the little youth of the ghetto. Pure aufferation."

The musical reception here has been good but says Clint, "I couldn't live in Britain. Most of me black bradde, me sorry fe dem 'cause more time the police jus' beat them up... see them SUS SUS!! and 'all dem tings deh. Is depraved living."

Angrily he described how he personally had bucked up against our infamous SUS law and ended up spending seven hours in jail before being released on bail. The case is still pending.

"Right now," said Clint, "I'm glad I preach music 'cause Babylon too nuff fe I and I. I feel soh I'll plan a revolution an' jus' use words, sound and power to conquer them."

Along with exuberant performances by Prince Hammer on the recent Mitrun tour, Eastwood's gigs constitute another useful example of 'youth man promotion' and we can definitely look forward to the forthcoming joint Clint Eastwood and Trinity shows to see who's badder than who!

PAUL BRADSHAW

THRILLS

Under The Mistletoe

Emily: "Ken, I don't mean to pry but..."

Ken (indignant): "But what, Emily."

Emily (cowering): "But Thrills has learned that you are a high ranking druid. What I want to know is... well is it true Ken, is it true?"

Ken (with some shame): "Yeah, it's true Emily, but I'd rather not... y'know..."

NME: Did You Know? (No. 1 Of An Occasional Series) William Roach — the fabulous Ken Barlow of the much-missed Coronation Street — is a leading spokesman in the hierarchy of Britain's whacky Druid cult! Yes, my friends, humble mumble Kenneth is prone to dressing in long skirts and awaving the mistletoe! Well we couldn't quite swallow it when we heard it first but on contacting Granada TV, who make the show, all was proved true.

"Ah... yes... well William is in fact a spokesperson for his group but he insists that his Druid activities are part of his private life and no longer wishes to discuss it all... And thusly doth the deviousness

"I tell you, Deirdre, sacrificing young Tracy here will be a great honour for you."

thicken friends. Ken Barlow in Stonehenge Nonsense Shock Horror? Will Annie come out in favour of the Flat Earth? Does Eddie Yates owe his lot to Buddha? Ivy Tilsley in Frank Krishna confession? No matter. Wherever pervers lurk, NME shall find it its duty to root them out!

Noele Gordon is priceless.

COLIN WILSON

THRILLS

Wheels Cha! Cha!

Roller Disco
By Dale A Marzano

THIS IS the type of book where it's best not to wait for the movie. A big-print "How-To" cash-in, 'Roller Disco' lives in hope that this ridiculous craze will hit London like it's hit the States. Quite frankly, the sight of large, fit bejauned hipsters trundling nobly along Tottenham Court Road — for, you see, the fad is not confined to subterranean nightspots — is not the sort of thing that built a nation's empire. In New York it's different. This young city is crazy enough to allow the fad to merge in with its youthful exercise programmes like jogging, health foods and dodgy films. But England doesn't have the same oddball glint in its national eye. Quite frankly the sight of somebody over the age of eleven sliding past on absurd little wheels might provoke a violent reaction. In a nutshell, skate travel is wet.

Inside a nightclub? Well, our ice rinks have been doing much the same thing for donkeys years. Loud, bad acoustic music while you struggle around in pointless circles. Sure, it gives you the speed that no dance can, but it is strictly a Stateside preoccupation, their only stopgap on cruising since the oil ran out. Bronzed wallies!

Fun it might be. Dst definitely (this book costs £2.99!). Essential?

No!

DANNY BAKER

THRILLS

TOM VERLAINE

Life After Television.

Tom Verlaine the man who brought you Marquee Moon, has now released his first highly original solo album.

K52156

Available on Elektra Record and Tapes.

NOTHING GUARANTEES more scorn in rock 'n' roll circles than a man who 'gets religion'. I mean, we pay these guys to visit hell and bring us back colour slides and here they go slipping off to heaven. It's a severe breach of contract.

Bob Dylan's new found faith shouldn't come as too much of a surprise though. In 1965 he claimed 'I just don't have any religion or philosophy' and then went on to plug the I Ching. In his 1966 Playboy interview he's asked by Nat Hentoff: 'You told an interviewer last year, "I've done everything I ever wanted to." If that's true, what do you have to look forward to?' 'Salvation', replied Dylan, 'Just plain salvation.'

Perhaps the most interesting interview in the light of recent events is one he gave to the American TV Guide in 1976. The interviewer asked him about his 1971 visit to Israel and subsequent interest in Judaism. 'I'm interested in what and who a Jew is,' said Dylan. 'I'm interested in the fact that Jews are Semites, like Babylonians, Hittites, Arabs, Syrians, Ethiopians. But a Jew is different because a lot of people hate Jews. There's something going on there that's hard to explain.' He was then asked how he imagined God. 'I can see God in a daisy. I can see God at night in the wind and rain. I see creation just about everywhere. The highest form of song is prayer. King David's, Solomon's, the wailing of a coyote, the rumble of the earth. It must be wonderful to be God. There's so much going on out there that you can't get to it all. It would take longer than forever.'

During the 1976 Rolling Thunder Revue Dylan found himself working alongside three musicians who were later to become born-again Christians — T-Bone Burnett on bass, Steven Soles rhythm and David Mansfield violin. Soles and Mansfield accompanied Dylan on the 1978 European tour and Soles in particular had spent a lot of time arguing religion with his boss. In retrospect he and Burnett don't feel that they had much effect on the man although it's hard to believe that their words went wasted. The only thing that Soles can recall registering with him was his constantly saying that: 'You can't place your faith in man. I kept telling him that I was so glad that I didn't have to place my faith in man any longer.'

The turning point for Dylan came when the girl he'd been living with became a committed Christian. She promptly moved out on him as she'd attained a new set of values. The depth of this commitment caused him to set about investigating for himself. She is now immortalised as the Precious Angel who was 'the one to show me I was blinded/to show me I was gone.'

His first step was a bible study led by Hal Lindsey, an American Christian author whose book 'The Late Great Planet Earth' came out in 1970 and has remained a best seller. Lindsey's particular concern — the final events in the history of the world as prophesied by the Book of Revelation — obviously captured Dylan's imagination and he would have been intrigued by Lindsey's emphasis on Biblical prophecies concerning the role of Israel and the Jewish people in the days before the return of Christ to earth.

Basically Lindsey, in common with many Christian eschatologists of the past 350 years, sees the restoration of the Land of Israel to the Jewish people as the beginning of the end — an end which sees Jews acknowledging Jesus Christ as the Messiah, a holocaust in the Middle Steve Soles, T-Bone Burnett, David Mansfield. Those Beatific gleams can only mean one thing — yep, these boys have seen the light too.

Dylan's conversion: We name the guilty men

East involving Russia, China, the Arab nations and the Common Market countries and the literal return of Christ.

Close friends like Soles and Burnett all remark on the difference in Dylan's attitude since the conversion. 'He's excited by the fact that he feels he's been rescued,' said one. Others commented on the love and warmth that he's now projecting. One of his first worries has been to decide his relationship with his back catalogue. Initially he felt he could no longer sing many of the songs from his past but a musician friend of his, a fellow Jewish Christian who has become something of a spiritual confidant to him, advised him to carry on performing them as they were a valid part of his pilgrimage.

Dylan's conversion is as much as anything an indication of two movements that have been gaining ground in the U.S. The first is amongst musicians with Dan Peek (America), Ritchie Furay (Poco), Roger McGuinn (Byrds), Al Perkins (Mannassahs), B. J. Thomas, Barry McGuire and Leon Pettilo (Santana) becoming Christians in recent years. The second is the rise of Messianic Judaism — Jews who believe that acceptance of Jesus Christ as the Messiah prophesied in the Old Testament merely completes their Jewishness rather than negates it.

STEVE TURNER

Lowry

PHILBY WAS THE THIRD MAN

"Tipped off Burgess and Maclean"

WORKED FOR RUSSIA SAYS MR. HEATH

...3 TRACK SINGLE. (HELLCAT PREVIOUSLY UNRELEASED)...

...RORY GALLAGHER. NEW SINGLE IN CLEAR VINYL. PHILBY. C/W HELLCAT. COUNTRY MILE. CHS 2364...

Is There Life Beyond S.F. Conferences?

IF THERE was any real point to the 37th World Science Fiction Convention held in Brighton's Metropole Hotel over the bank holiday weekend, guest of honour Brian Aldiss virtually summed it up. "If you meet somebody who says he genuinely cares about the future — it's like the politician who says he really cares about the people — you must start distrusting him from then on."

Though Aldiss tells odd tales of siamese twin rock stars, eternal space voyages and futuristic sex, he isn't prone to off-the-cuff predictions. His response to an interviewer's insistent request for his views on micro processors post-technological effects wasn't really surprising. "If you had told me five years ago that I would have paid £1.20 for petrol to come to Brighton, I would have left the country for Beirut or somewhere. Everything seems awful in the future, but when you get there, it isn't so bad. You live with it. That's the way the future is.

"We'll all get on with micro-processors, just as we got on with income tax and all the rest. These things are unreal to talk about in a future scenario unless it's presented as fiction."

Clearly sf writing isn't prophecy, magic or prediction to the thirty or so writers who spent five days here. They may take some unlikely ideas to logical conclusions, but their goals are mainly to illuminate the present.

A science fair this wasn't. The 3200 plus attendees were equally entertained by lectures on Dragon biology and cost runs and profits (165 million dollars after expenses) on Star Wars. With the multi-coloured ladies from the fancy dress parade, myriad space ship posters and flashy book covers in the huckster room, the fantastic art from Dragon Dream books, this was a visual fantasy as well.

Although American writers Greg Benford, Ben Bova and

Hal Clement as well as Britishers Chris Evans and world-renowned Arthur C. Clarke are top-knotch scientists, knowledge of science was scant requirement for honouring the writers. Non-scientists like Vonda McIntyre and Paul Anderson won for best novel and novelette respectively the science fiction oscar — the Hugo Award.

When sf doyen Alfred Bester (author of the innovative novel Tiger) masterminded his talk on failures of sf, he unabashedly admitted, "I don't care about the science except when it enhances the story. The story is what counts."

Making future speculations was still part of the show, though. Clarke, Bova, Joe Haldeman and Norman Spinrad debated man's future in space. Thinking machines, alien consciousness, madness and voyages across the galaxy were all grist for the mill, but so was a stop at the pub.

Professional organizers didn't make this convention happen. It grew out of a lonely search for people who shared an interest in sf or "a community of imagination," as one 25-year-old Scottish fan called it. Forty years ago people started meeting through the latter columns of pulp magazines. Now they've created a little sub-culture which spawns its own idols and these conventions. Writers like Haldeman and banquet toastmaster/author Bob Shaw were fans before becoming writers and the first world conference was held 40 years ago.

Above: Brian Aldiss.

Left: a delegate shows off his space-age baseball bat.

Pics: Gabor J. F. Scott.

When actor Christopher Reeve appeared to accept the Hugo for Superman, he explained how he tried to humanize such an impossible character. Intuitively, he grasped some of the essence of sf beyond the current big money deals and shop talk that absorbed much of the time at the private authors' parties. Maybe Spinrad — in the same controversial way he created Bug Jack Barron — expressed it best when he recognised sf's current popularity as a search for mystical satisfaction when science has so undermined religion.

But as far as consciousness expanding goes, like Spinrad said, it may be the next best thing to drugs.

HUGO AWARD

THRILLS

Is St Helens turning into St Tropez?

21 stockists in St. Helens now sell the longer, milder French kings! Gauloises Longues—The cigarette of France. 60p.

Gauloises Longues

LOW TO MIDDLE TAR As defined by H.M. Government
H.M. Government Health Departments' WARNING:
CIGARETTES CAN SERIOUSLY DAMAGE YOUR HEALTH

R.A.R.-U.S.A. (Revisited)

IT WOULD appear that last week's Thrills about USA RAR contained something of an understatement when it said that Washington DC RAR was just starting up. In fact the Chocolate City, so christened because of its 80% black population, has been Rocking Against Racism for four months now in the shape of the Madam's Organ Art Co-op on 18th St NW in the Adams Morgan district of DC.

Though their first attendance was only 30, the last gig, a six band effort featuring black punk band, the Bad Brains; Californian punks, the Insect Surfers; the Resistors, Young Turds, Trenchmouth and a psychedelic synthesiser freak called Rupert, pulled in over 300.

On October 6th RAR are holding a "pro-abortion, pro-women, pro-gay, pro racial understanding, and pro-marijuana rally" in Lafayette Park (across the road from the White House), to coincide with the Pope's visit to their city, as part of his 12 day US tour.

And to headline this rally, they're trying to contact the doyens of politico-rock, the Clash, who're playing a gig in the University of Maryland stadium a few days beforehand. Should they be successful in catching the Clash, or similar headliner, DC RAR expect a crowd of 30,000 or more to attend their rally, which still pales in comparison to the one million Catholics expected to attend the Pope's mass on DC Mall the following day.

TONY SMART

THRILLS

Disco: A Theory

JUDGING BY the largely male-dominated interest and involvement in rock music, it would seem that there are an awful lot of frustrated young men around, if we are to accept the theory put forward by Dr. John Parkhal, a social scientist speaking in Atlanta to disco station managers from around America.

He claims that rock is aimed at young men who are afraid of sex, and "the violent sex rhythm of rock reflects their frustration". So why confront it, when, as Parkhal said, "reality is getting tougher and disco is an escape from reality"?

Could it be a fear of the large numbers of the female

The lovely Deanne Pearson illustrates a point species to be found at discos, "attracted by the smoother sex rhythms of disco music", or just a fear of getting close to anybody, which, Parkhal claims, disco copes with by holding a sort of tribal dance — "the Village People being the perfect group for this?"

DEANNE PEARSON

THRILLS

How To Be Famous Without Really Trying

THE POINT of the matter is that the music is perfectly loathsome. Attack is one thing, but an ice pick between the eyes is only good for an evening of auto-induced migraine.

Toyah Willcox fronts a most professional band — a bit like ELP.

"Toyah" — the generic for the band (as Hoover is to Electrolux) — are headlining at the Music Machine. The 'support' are of the rent-a-mod variety — lots of Union Jack wigs and A.C. 30s (and very little else). At the end of the evening the place fills to the requisite 'capacity', the beer goes warm and this band ("Toyah") fill the stage and assault the audience with the kind of professionalism that leaves the bulk gaping.

It's a bit like seeing the Pink Floyd ten years on, except that fewer people are actually asleep.

Toyah (herself) is part-English, part-Spanish. She was born with webbed feet (sic), had a traumatic childhood and figures (as an actor) in Jubilee and Quadrophrenia. She has also played opposite Katherine Hepburn — but was ordered off the set for complaining that "Hepburn's late".

I have to admit that Toyah is a nice person. And so is her ever-loving fiancée, guitarist Joel Bogen.

Ultimately, she (Toyah) slides into a prone position on the floor in order to appear more casual although I get the strong impression that she can't wait to leave.

Toyah Willcox is of the great showbusiness tradition of trooperism. She knows how to get associated with the right sort of names and seems, in her early twenties, to have perfected the art of

The Cameo Appearance.

Take, for example, the requisite press kit: the facts are well-guarded, the releases themselves being straight-to-the-point but skimpy.

In light of the fact that the rest is left to the imagination — Emperor's New Clothes-style — it is entirely understandable that the high-pressure stage act (which used to include staged fights with the audience) would lead to a front cover and three full-page spreads elsewhere at a time when Toyah hadn't played a single gig outside of London or produced a single record.

It's clever; and not a little calculated.

Toyah fulfill the need for Abandon With A Little Polish. Respectabilised punk (New Wave?).

There are no group shots in their press release. This may be because they have only been together for a couple of months in their present form. Instead, one is presented with six quasi-fashion shots of the lady (including two that're dead ringers for Zandra Rhodes) plus two on-set numbers (Toyah with Hepburn, Toyah-as-petulant-sub-Railway Child).

These, it is claimed, are to show that Toyah progresses with the times. In particular, Toyah says that at least four of them are intended to show fluctuations in her bodily weight because she has a hang-up about being "short and stocky".

I had asked her what the point of it all was.

"They are me progressing," she adds, emphatically, "I want my character to become more interesting."

She had, she said, played the Marquee the previous night, been spat at and had her top torn off. Despite which she is keen to out with the old justifier that her duty, her raison d'être is to 'please the audience' by denying their wish-fulfillment.

"That's what I'm there for — to please them."

What about the money?

"I'm not there to earn money am I?" she snorts.

"You don't earn money in this business."

Toyah gets thirty pounds a week from Safari, her record company. Subsistence living, she reckons. The gigs just about pay for themselves.

Elsewhere, we have Toyah telling another source that she has made more money in the last year than her mother (an actress) made in an entire lifetime.

Toyah is right in there pitching; on the one hand I reckon it's admirable that at least someone has capitalised on a sense of total cynicism to rock music; on the other, the 'devices' simply don't amount to a culmination in the end product. Thus far we have the sum total of a series of expectant interviews to go on — and one can't help but notice the lady's predilection for tossing out significant facts for subsequent factoids for subsequent interviewers to feed on.

Naively, I had asked whether or not people still spit at people on stage and if so how do Toyah deal with it?

"I eat it," she says. "Really. Last night (at the Marquee) someone blew his nose in his hands and threw it at me. I caught it in my mouth."

"Come on, it's only saliva ... it's only snot."

Toyah, Toyah, Toyah!

You ever had oysters?

"The thought of oysters revolts me, but I can eat passion fruit — it's a similar sort of texture and everything."

And finally, the precipitate of all this: Toyah have a new record out, their second, which has six tracks and includes the band's masterwork ("Toyah Willcox — verbals") in which we have the lady "standing alone inside the Neon Womb".

"It's about Being in The Neon Womb, it's like taking 'womb consciousness' to the extent that we live in houses to be surrounded by this mothering feeling. Lit by electric light."

"You can take it as very pretentious. (Te — Thrills Ed.)

I mean nowadays they like the womb to be up if you're pregnant. All the baby can hear is talk and he can't understand it.

"It's like ... verbal mime."

Actually the introduction's a straight steal from "I Am The Walrus".

PETER ERSKINE

THRILLS

ARCHIVE FUN

ERE 'olden! It's that geezer wiv the dog innit? I'd know that boat anywhere. Honest somethin' or other if me memory serves me. 'Do are them tarts though, and that daft lookin' lemon sittin' down? Might be ole waddy macallit's first popular combo, The Birds. There again it might not. Bit kinky eh, one bloke and four bits of fluff. Surly sod. Blimey O'Reilly 'ee's still got that poxo jumper on! Wot's 'is game — marchin' into the Kensington Antique Supermarket wivout so much as a bye your leave or a kiss me arse. 'Scuse my French. Oll get that bloody mongrel on me leg. George! Call a copper quick before 'ee scarpers.

ROY MILES

THRILLS

REX
PROFESSIONAL

THE MEMBERS KILLING TIME!
G.L.C.
NEW SINGLE OUT NOW!
VIRGIN RECORDS VS292

Just the ticket for Bob Dylan's 'Slow Train Coming'

£1.20
*OFF THE ALBUM

£1.00
*OFF THE CASSETTE

Bob Dylan's new album is at W. H. Smith now.
And it's going for a price you can't afford to miss.
Catch it before 17th Sept.
because we've taken
£1.20 OFF* the album and there's £1.00 OFF the cassette.

Album
price now: £4.09
Cassette
price now: £4.49

WHSMITH

Branches throughout England and Wales.
Subject to availability where you see this sign.
Prices correct at time of going to press.
* Manufacturers Recommended Price.

 WELCOME

CHEAP TRICK

Interview by NICK KENT

LET'S NOT mince words. The basic premise here is the why, wherefore and whatever's backing up the simple contention that within the next 12 months Cheap Trick will be the biggest rock band on Planet Earth.

Facts is facts and whether you or I find it to our liking, well that's strictly our tough cheddar. Up in the heavenly market place the dice have been rolled.

So they haven't scored a worthy hit single here yet and their four albums (with a fifth in the final stages) haven't even tickled the underbelly of the UK album charts (the first release, three years old and a real corker as it happens, still remains unrelaxed in the British Isles); criminal negligence on the part of the powers that be!

Well, there are pertinent reasons behind this Angloid indifference — reasons that the band and their manager are well aware of, which have nothing to do with matters like commercial accessibility, quality or even working in a musical vein somehow alien to current Brit rock tastes. It's the same blight that causes Ted Nugent, another artist allied to Epic/CBS, to sell a measly 8,000 albums per release here and a band as superb as The Only Ones to miss out on the gravy train whilst inferior outfits bop merrily around the upper echelons of the charts.

This considerable shortcoming doesn't however deter Cheap Trick from their quest — even though they've already blitzkrieged infinitely richer pastures around the globe.

"We're going all out for universal domination" maintain guitarist Rick Nielsen and manager Ken Adamany when the subject of the UK is broached, and if that means continual touring of our suburban sprawl, well that's what will be delivered, even at a considerable financial loss.

Certainly, the previous occasion Cheap Trick tramped the boards across the UK earlier this year the itinerary was appreciably more expensive than the usual 'hit, git and split' rituals — the three obligatory gigs and away stunt — that most Yank combos dash through. A thorough four-week tour was performed, with all the extras.

Now, just over six months later, Cheap Trick are squeezing in a guest spot at the Reading Festival at no slight expense as a further move to woo the Limeys — a whistle-stop at the outset of an unrelenting eleven-month world tour.

IF YOU tend to ignore such matters, you'll probably be unaware of Cheap Trick's sudden ascendancy to American mega-stradom.

At the beginning of the year, the band had released three potent, high-quality commercially viable albums which, abetted by their gruelling tour schedules, had displayed an encouraging build-up in sales.

The first album simply titled 'Cheap Trick' acted as a dual introduction to the band. Musically it spotlighted an ensemble capable of playing taut, compellingly powerful hard rock but using well-toned melodies, not to mention a host of often ingeniously constructed hook-lines. Also the band's composer guitarist Nielsen, as well as being an audaciously accomplished instrumentalist, was an intriguingly bizarre lyricist, his themes usually dealing with the perverse and couched in the kind of black humour that took John Entwistle's most successful ghoulish songs a step further into a more subtle zone of disorientation.

Nielsen's subtleties, and the ensemble's impressive fore-power (vocalist Robin Zander, even on this debut, displayed a vocal talent that surpassed even Roger Daltrey), seemed however at first to be by the Cheap Trick image. Cheap Trick comprised visually of two archetypal pretty boys (Zander and bassist Tom Petersson) and two absurd looking geeks (drummer Bun E. Carlos, a somewhat less bombastic-looking Oliver Hardy replete with a dark moustache and glasses plus wardrobe of clothes worthy of a down-at-heel Sidney Greenstreet and Nielsen, himself a wiry, freakish character constantly sporting a dopey grin and clothes designed to transform him into a ludicrous walking advert for his group).

Although ultimately a masterstroke, this image was initially generally considered suspiciously calculating. Critical acceptance

Dream policeman on guard

Wake up, Rick — you're the first superstar of the '80s was slow but sure. 'In Colour' expanded the image — separating the pretty boys from the dorks on the cover — and, with a new producer in CBS staffer Tom Werman, hit upon a sound that had greater clarity and more verve. As commercial product, 'In Colour's' saleside failure remains perplexing.

Nielsen decided to let his more ghoulish works stay in the immense reservoir of songs — dating back as far as ten years — for future reference and instead went for tunes with naggingly addictive melodies which demonstrated the full extent of his Anglophile bent, constructing an album which bore strong influential cross-reference to the Beatles' 'White' 'Abbey Road' glory days matched with the sound of Pete Townshend's production on 'Who's Next'.

The record caused some commotion in the States, but failed to catch the Billboard bullet express. However the Japanese, the world's second biggest rock consumers, possibly none too satisfied by the infrequent visits of the likes of fave raves Kiss and Queen, latched on to the McCartneyesque cuteness of 'I Want You To Want Me', sky-rocketed to No. 1 followed swiftly by the relentless pulsebeat of 'Clock Strikes Ten'. Suddenly Cheap Trick, always bridesmaids in their own country, were the hottest band to hit the Nips in years.

A third album 'Heaven Tonight' again drew more homegrown converts, although the album's natural single 'Surrender', the perfect powerpop record conceived and recorded long before the blighted term got its brusque airing, failed. Again with Werman at the controls, Nielsen returned to his hook-ridden melodies around sardonically grim lyrics. One song cheerily crooned about the joys of suicide, the title track was a compellingly eerie description/entertainment to the dubious joys of death through drug overdose, whilst 'Surrender', a vintage Nielsen song, had to have its lyrics extensively overhauled for public consumption.

As 'Heaven Tonight' hit the Jap market with

Pictures by MIKE LAYE

'Surrender' bulleting to No. 1 instantaneously, Cheap Trick toured the country to hysterical reaction. Not unnaturally, all the conceptual subtleties were completely lost on the vast Nipponese audiences. Instead they idolised Petersson and particularly Zander, by taking the pair as a surrogate Hall and Oates (what the 'In Colour' and 'Heaven Tonight' covers had attempted to totally undermine).

Photograph upon photograph appeared of the band members in their clichéd roles. Zander and Petersson smiled politely whilst Nielsen yucked it up with every rock star who came backstage for the obligatory snapshot Nielsen even managed to get a snap of himself next to the camera-shy Elvis Costello, the two of them clutching a plectrum.

It's a telling little snap. Nielsen has his role down pat — the mouth agape, the bug eyes, his uniform in full regalia. Costello however (who later claimed privately — a touch sourly — that the shot was a complete set-up job with Nielsen moving in so quickly Costello didn't even know what was going on) has his typically jaundiced "are you going through the motions?" look.

The Japanese tour however did far more than just introduce Cheap Trick to the dubious joys of fan mania and backstage bouquets. CBS Sony, the Jap contingent of the world-wide Columbia network, somehow has gained the rights with or without a CBS artist's consent to record and release live albums from tours of the Eastern metropolis. Lavishly packaged, and boasting the best pressings in the world, this contractual loophole has provided a live Santana triple album and a number of live sets by CBS jazz acts, the most important being the Miles Davis packages that have helped fill the unsettling silence that the trumpet player's cancer of the throat has left in contemporary music. In the last 12 months two rock acts from the CBS roster have had albums released from recorded performances at the gargantuan Budokan amphitheatre.

On the one hand, Bob Dylan's sets at the concert hall produced a scrappy double set of his rearranged evergreens that made him sound unbearably at times like the gruesome Neil Diamond.

On the other, Cheap Trick cut 'Live At The Budokan', a single album released in Japan only towards the end of last year.

At this point, the band had in fact recorded, mixed and finished their fourth Epic studio album. Entitled 'Dream Police', it was slated for mid-March release in the States. Six months later, the record is still not out in the shops anywhere.

Simply, the 'Budokan' album received such heavy radio play in America, Epic were forced to release it. The album, reminiscent in parts of '60s live albums like 'The Kinks At Kelvin Hall' due to the mass commotion and volume of screams from the audience ('We had to mix them as far back as we could', remarks Nielsen nonchalantly) gave Trick their first taste of platinum.

"The way I see it," says Nielsen, "we'd built up a following slowly but surely by constantly touring. The radio was getting into playing our music, so really it was a matter of time, of waiting for that right moment."

"The emphasis on the live aspect worked perfectly because we'd established ourselves as a strong, very consistent live act more than anything else. So here's this record of us 'live' with all the screaming and craziness — it sounds just like a Cheap Trick concert with a truly wild audience. Now I think about it, it appears obvious."

THE INTERVIEW is set for 12.30 on the Saturday of Cheap Trick's Reading gig. Nielsen appears exactly on time, having sent a roadie ahead to inform myself and the photographer at hand of his imminent arrival. When he enters the hotel hallway he is impossible to miss. The knitted cardigan, Cheap Trick bow tie pinned to a yellow shirt collar, jogging shoes and brazen chockered skintight slacks — the only article of clothing not familiar is a pair of red framed Richard Moll-style round-rimmed shades that don't hide his eyes so much as grant him a certain aloofness.

The uniform remains the same but Nielsen, when not mugging for the camera or gooning it up for a crowd of fans expecting 'the wacky guitarist going through the motions', has a hardness to his face that is instantaneously unsettling. His manner is politely brusque but the hardness is not constructed from road fatigue or jet lag but the tough exterior of a businessman.

■ Continues over

CHEAP TRICK

■ From previous page

He immediately asks the two of us to join him for his midday repast. [Later he informs me that he concerns himself with protein and nutritional matters on a ritualistic level, due to the amount of sweat that he loses during a gig. He has steadfastly worked out his eating habits down to the very last calorie in order to sustain the level of energy involved in an hour-plus show].

Once seated and with the inevitable two or three ice-breaker questions out of the way, Nielsen's manner solidifies itself into that of a man who is indeed the very opposite of the twerpish facade maintained for the media. The tenor of his voice is if anything harsh — not unfriendly, just business-like. Questions about the sudden success are fielded neatly — Nielsen is nothing if not a pro with the media — but the humour, goon-like when the shutter switch clicks, is sardonic, deeply cynical.

It's in this area of his psyche that all those ghoulish vignettes manifest themselves, and he seems most amenable when discussing those aspects. When I ask if he considers his songs and by direct association Cheap Trick itself to be primarily an exercise in 'subversive pop/rock', he lunges for the definition as if people's negligence of that aspect causes him genuine grief.

"Yes, that's exactly what we are. A subversive rock group."

I quote several examples in the songs on Dream Police where a perfectly innocent-sounding pop or hard-rock song suddenly appears to contain the core of some mental instability or a mark of the supernatural. One number, 'Voices', is immediately evocative of some placid Beatles-like harmony enterprise until one realises that the song is about the singer becoming a schizophrenic. 'I'll Be With You Tonight' has typical punchy Nielsen rock chords while Zander's full-throttle pitching, at first simply appear to deal with a groupie situation, is rooted in the super-natural.

"Ah, but you missed the main one," Nielsen states half excitedly, half admonishingly. "The Dream Police itself is the real obvious one, don't you think? It's about this guy who... yeah well paranoia has a little to do with it but it's more like these two gremlin type figures and like one's standing for good, the other's the devil."

In order to demonstrate the conflict under discussion, Nielsen indicates the two parties, each manifested by one of his clenched fists. The lean contours of his visage tighten and for a second Nielsen's gesture is eerily reminiscent of Robert Mitchum's sadistic preacher with "Love" and "Hate" tattooed on his fists in the classic Night Of The Hunter.

Does vocalist Zander, I inquire, always understand the themes and unnatural passions redolent in Nielsen's lyrics?

"Not always," replies Nielsen nonchalantly. "He works more by instinct when it comes to dealing with the more subtle aspects. His voice has so many modulations — it's the perfect instrument for my songs — that he can utilise his pitching to convey the basic emotions required with ease."

"I think actually that his vocals on the 'Dream Police' album are easily his best to date. Like, on 'Voices' he instinctively gets that eeriness where most singers would just sing it straight or else go right over the top. Then on 'Gonna Raise Hell' (a 10-minute opus constructed around a teeth-grinding Nielsen chord progression) his voice has that brutish scream of a hell-fire preacher which is exactly what I was aiming for."

Nielsen is less enamoured of Zander's guitar playing.

"It's strictly an expandable embellishment to the overall sound, really. I mean, he's no virtuoso by any means, just adequate. The guitar chores are really all down to me and that's how I like it. The best thing I can say is that his playing doesn't get in the way."

He pauses to consider the candour of the statement and then shrugs. "Well, you asked me!"

A few more queries, paramount amongst these being the question as to whether 'Dream Police's' drastic rescheduling by Columbia caused Nielsen and co. any grief, draw out the guitarist's business acumen.

"'Budokan' hit straight out of the blue. The fact that it clashed with 'Dream Police's' release date is just coincidence. It would have been dumb not to ride the success out. God knows we'd worked hard enough for it."

Was there pressure from Columbia to further stall 'Police' — now due out this month — in order to milk 'Budokan' and the band's back catalogue?

"Not really," Nielsen muses. "Budokan had made its mark and the company wanted 'Police' out in September to tie in with the demand for new product."

An acute business sense Nielsen most certainly possesses but the fact that in the U.S. alone 'Dream Police' has notched up advance orders somewhere in region of 2 to 3 million units leaves him vaguely nonplussed.

"All the numbers, all the statistics and zero-zero-zero figures tend to leave me numb. It's gratifying but I can't frankly get worked up about something as... distant as that. It's all figures, figures, figures. Numbers with quadruple zeroes. It's hard to relate to all that."

Trick sport clichés (L-R): Zander, Petersson, Carlos, Nielsen.

WHEN ASKED his own tastes in music, Nielsen invites myself and photographer Mike Laye up to his hotel room to check out his travelling tape collection. The room — a modestly sized affair — is cluttered with the occupant's not inconsiderable possessions. A telescope, purchased that morning, lays on the bed around which are strewn carrier bags full of presents for friends and other accoutrements. A compact cassette system is set up to one side of the room whilst a massive clutter of cassettes lay piled up on a nearby table.

A brusque check-out of the selection proves that Nielsen has diverse tastes, but far more acute is the plethora of new releases. Nothing is left unchecked. The B-52s, Devo and Talking Heads rub shoulders alongside Queen's live Abortion and Bad Company's latest piece of pabulum whilst Led Zeppelin's 'Out Door' is actually on the machines. Nielsen proclaims the latter "really great" in the same way he waxes enthusiastic about Public Image and Tubeway Army in virtually the same breath. Even Bad Company's album he rates highly.

Placing a live Elvis Costello tape on the machine — the show was recorded just prior to the Skills-Bramlett run in — I sit back listening to a ream of new Costello songs — 'Opportunity', 'Real To Real' plus a scintillating rendition of 'Girls Talk' — as Nielsen obligingly does a brusque photo session.

The taut features and penetrating glare instantaneously elasticise into the glazed bozo look, eyes popping out, mouth open, aghast like some pre-adolescent who's just found a used condom in his parents' wastepaper basket. This is the Rick Nielsen photo persona — part mischievous, part loopy but forever obliging. As soon as the mini-session terminates, his facial muscles return to their gaunt construction. A brusque amiable handshake with the photographer and it's back to business.

I meanwhile mosey down to the lobby to kill some 15 minutes before departure time to the Reading Festival. After ten minutes idling, other members of the group start to congregate.

Bassist Tom Petersson, a typically handsome young American marvellously bereft of the machismo complex that makes the species so unbearable, exudes an unselfconscious friendliness that is immediately attractive. He's accompanied by his mother — a graceful middle-aged woman — whose presence here in London is a birthday present from her son, plus a couple of old friends resident in London. Drummer Carlos, apparently a shy individual, is simply present and correct, shaking my hand almost bashfully when introductions are made.

Robin Zander also has materialised — a veritable vision of physical perfection with looks so exquisite photographs literally don't do his angelic visage — perfect cheekbones, stunningly genteel eyes topped off with swathes of blond hair parted off centre to the left — justice. Yet even though he makes Tom Petty look like Lester Bangs by comparison, he shares none of the tacky narcissism that the Robert Plants of this world osmose. Instead he seems the archetypal perfect gentleman, taking great pains to be as congenial as possible. A creditable example of mid-western middleclass upbringing, one can easily imagine his teenage years spent learning etiquette (calling his elders "sis") and spending his 'leisure hours' writing poetry. (Zander in fact writes songs himself according to Nielsen: "He's not that prolific but more crucial, his style of composing is diametrically opposed to the Cheap Trick style. He's more involved in working in a Neil Young 'Harvest'-type vein. Very sensitive and kind of romantic.")

Reading on the Saturday stretch is a nightmarish spectacle. With Thin Lizzy off the bill, German heavy metal nabbits The Scorpions are topping the bill whilst lower down the list all manner of hideous groups are present.

As the limos arrive, the strangled yelping of Ian Gillan rings out over a typically redundant riff amped-up with ear piercing volume and 'made' feeling. Matters become so desperate that Gillan has to resort to a half-baked retreat of 'Smoke On The Water' for effect.

Out front, an ample crowd of heavy metal fans awaying macabrely, obviously short of sleep and staggering under a metabolism drenched with a downer of alcoholic over-indulgence that has them staggering, eyes closed and semi-comatose. The backstage area is scarcely any better. Bereft of bonafide celebrities photographers stand around morosely looking for any signs of action, whilst the usual liggers wander about looking for drubs or else vying for free booze.

Cheap Trick however seize the occasion and blitzkrieg the event with all guns blazing. Every aspect — Carlos' crack shot pulse-beat. Petersson's 12-string bass holding down the lines whilst using the instrument to grant the overall sound a thicker, more densely textured layer. Zander's vocal thunder and Nielsen's ridiculous power driving guitar calisthenics — rails down on the listener until studios critical perceptions are pointless.

Nielsen himself is centre of attention, easily the strongest guitar 'performer' since Pete Townshend, never motionless, taking audacious risks with his fretboard and limbs until the sweat dripping from him drenches the stage.

Back in the dressing-room Jake Riviera,

■ Continues page 53

THIS HEAT

a new kind of water

THIS HEAT

routine enquiries

Rough Trade, 202 Kensington Park Road, London W.11

Harrah
THE ROCK VENUE

MUSIC FOR THE 80's

36 West 62 Street
New York NY 10023 212-541-4909

MORE
COURSES
NEXT WEEKS
ISSUE

THE SECRET'S OUT

SECRET AFFAIR
THE SINGLE

TIME FOR ACTION

ON

I-SPY
RECORDS

SAMMY HAGAR

UK TOUR '79

NEWCASTLE
MAYFAIR
THURS 13th SEPT

MANCHESTER
FREE TRADE
HALL

FRI 14th SEPT

BIRMINGHAM
ODEON
SAT 15th SEPT

LONDON
HAMMERSMITH
ODEON
SUN 16th SEPT

WITH GUESTS DEF LEPPARD

THE NEW ALBUM

STREET MACHINE

Includes free limited edition
3 track live EP

Tomorrows Girls
NEW SINGLE RELEASE
AUGUST 31st
GEM
c/w
SCUM OF THE EARTH
TELEPHONE NUMBERS
7 Blue Vinyl
Limited Edition
Full Colour
Picture Bag
GEM
Marketed by GEM RECORDS
GEMS 10
All dates booked by MAM Agency, see music press for Additional dates
U.K. SUBS

THE AUTUMN TOUR
SEPTEMBER
20, Derby, Adjanta
21, Wt. Runton, Pavil
22, Northampton
Cricket Club
23, Bristol, Larcarno
RCA
24, Plymouth, Woods
25, Exeter, Routes
27, High Wycombe
Town Hall
28, Peterboro, Winc
Stadium
29, Bradford,
St. George Town Hall
30, Poole, Art Centre
GEM
OCTOBER
3, Garribaldi Balrm,
Great Yarmouth
5, Wigton, Market Hill
7, Dunfermline,
Kinema
10, Manchester, Univ.
12, Newport,
Shropshire Village
13, Nottingham,
Sand Piper
14, Jacksdaie, Grey
16-17-18
Marque
London

TOMORROWS GIRLS
U.K. SUBS

SILVER

Dracula: Frank Langella with equine friend and (inset) Larry Oliver with dodgy digits

Purple Hearts
Millions Like Us
THE NEW SINGLE BY
Purple Hearts

MARKETED BY POLYDOR LIMITED

SCREEN

Drac's back

Dracula

Directed by John Badham
Starring Frank Langella,
Laurence Olivier, Kate
Nelligan and Donald Pleasence
(CIC)

Of all the celluloid versions of Bram Stoker's Romantic novel there are several which remain undead in cinematic terms: Murnau's Nosferatu in 1922 defined the parasitic animal imagery that Herzog was to use in his revamped version — both Max Shreck and Klaus Kinski appearing as physical manifestations of a bloodsucking piece of corrupt flesh — while Universal's previous 1932 effort and Hammer's Horror of Dracula employed Lugosi and Lee as more aesthetic creatures, counterpoints to social decadence and the moral climate, and embodying more traditional yet more subtle elements of Romantic evil.

This current version based on the play by Hamilton Deane and John Balderston focuses on the events at Whitby and offers an interesting combination of the two separate images.

Langella's performance succeeds as the urbane blood junkie washed ashore from a shipwreck who proceeds to wreak havoc having first made his intentions clear by ripping out the throats of the hapless crew. Having established his ability to transform into wolf, bat and ladies' man, the lycanthropic Lothario lopes through the well-known series of confrontations leading to the Big One against Van Helsing, a sort of Transylvanian Santa Claus in the shape of Laurence Olivier. Their conflict is crucial not only for the inner tension of the film but for our understanding of all the other characters. The two must strike sparks off each other for a wholly satisfying movie. They don't, and the film is marred.

Whether this is the fault of the actors (they were not exactly bosom buddies from what I can gather) or the director is debatable, though I'm inclined to believe the latter is to blame. Instead of concentrating on the apposition of the two protagonists and letting all other considerations stem from that, director John Badham (whose previous effort was Saturday Night Fever, for better or worse) clutters the screen and the narrative with distracting metaphors: his principal concern being the conflict between past and present. Motorcars vie with carriages in the same way that the heroine's modern language grates against the archaisms delivered by her father and Van Helsing.

Every image is painfully integral. A dripping fried egg on its way to Donald Pleasence's mouth speaks volumes where a sentence would have sufficed. The overhead shot of a cobweb in Carfax Abbey with a spider crawling towards the figure of Lucy twenty feet beneath is echoed in the asylum when we see Harker approaching his vampirised loved one through a steel mesh roof. Time and again the camera intrudes and comments when it should show and tell.

Colour, though, is used with care and the blues, greys and dull greens of the background allow the dramatic highlights of Dracula's black and white and the stark crimson blood to stand out like bas-reliefs.

The violence is pretty icky too, with Renfield's particularly unpleasant demise bringing gasps from the press audience. The two passages borrowed from Corman, when Lucy yields her blood maidenhead to the Count and the vampire's final come-uppance, has the screen bathed in great swashes of colour and jers with the otherwise consistent tone.

Once the layers have been peeled away what are we left with? Because the story has been approached from the outside no amount of veneer can disguise the fact that this is little more than a leading contender for the best-dressed Dracula award. Perhaps I shouldn't complain. Perhaps we really do need a supremely elegant version of an old-filmed novel. I doubt however whether it will achieve the cinematic immortality of its predecessors. Elegance is not enough for that.

Nell Norman

Bloodline

Directed by Terence Young Starring Audrey Hepburn,
James Mason, Irene
Papes, Omar Sharif (CIC)

Take one Behind Closed Boardroom Doors pulp bestseller, one waiting room full of wealthy German dentists in search of a convenient tax loss, one lurid, splashy canvas of 'exotic' locations, one bored, hammy all-star cast — and waddyago?

Bloodline, that's what, a film that need never have been made. The plot? A lazy trail of murder mystery clues followed by Inspector Frobe and his talking Interpol computers. The action? As gripping as a finely chopped python. The script? As clichéd as Christmas. The direction? As tired as old Mr Mortality himself.

A big hit (everyone seemed to have read the book but me) and even bigger miss. Super-schlock starts here.

Angus MacKinnon

Great British film shock

TONIGHT (Thursday) BBC TV is repeating The Spongers in a 'Play For Today' slot. Do not, on any account, miss it.

And just why, you ask, is Silver Screen bothered about television plays? Several reasons. For one, Jim Allen — author of The Spongers — is a fine writer (Days Of Hope, The Price Of Coal). For another, The Spongers happens to be a fine film. Roland Joffe directed it and, like a lot of similar TV source material, it owes little to the small screen, a lot to the big. If The Spongers were a Latvian flick with sub-titles it would've swept the boards at any film festival (it made do with the Prix Italia and the Czechoslovak Golden Award). The point being that — because of the pathetic nature of our film industry — England's most promising up and coming directors are working in TV: remember Licking Hitler? Lew And Order? Dummy? And Ken Loach has, Kes excepted, done nothing better than Days Of Hope or The Price Of Coal.

Watch The Spongers and weep. For the savage irony of its intent and for the woeful insularity of our indigenous 'film industry'.

Monty Smith

BROTHER RAY

RAY CHARLES' OWN STORY
RAY CHARLES & DAVID RITZ

Acclaimed the world over as a musical genius, Ray Charles talks freely in his autobiography of the influences and circumstances that have shaped his life and career. He talks of his blindness; his difficult struggle to the top; his years on the road; his attitudes towards drugs, women, money, and of course, music.

Illustrated £5.95

M&J Macdonald General Books

This book is available from your local bookshop, or in case of difficulty from

The Sales Department,
Macdonald General Books,
8, Shepherdess Walk, London N.1.
Please send me _____ copy/copies of BROTHER RAY at £6.75 (post paid) per copy

I enclose my cheque/P.O. for £

Name _____

Address _____

A L I E N

In space no one can hear you scream.

20TH CENTURY FOX PRESENTS

A L I E N (X)

TOM SKERRITT SIGOURNEY WEAVER JOHN HURT IAN HOLM VERONICA CARTWRIGHT
HARRY DEAN STANTON and YAPHET KOTTO

EXECUTIVE PRODUCER RONALD SHUSETT PRODUCED BY GORDON CARROLL DAVID OLER and WALTER HILL DIRECTED BY RIDLEY SCOTT

STORY BY DAN O'BANNON and RONALD SHUSETT SCREENPLAY BY DAN O'BANNON MUSIC JERRY GOLDSMITH

PRINTS BY DELUXE PANAVISION EASTMAN KODAK COLOR

70MM DOLBY STEREO

READ THE FUTURE IN PAPERBACK SOUNDTRACK ALBUM ON 20TH CENTURY RECORDS & TAPES

NOW ODEON Leicester Square

PHONE
930 6111

BOOK
NOW!

Separate Performances Daily 1.00p.m. 4.30p.m. 8.00p.m. Late Night Show 11.45p.m. Tonight and every night until September 15th.
ALL SEATS BOOKABLE IN ADVANCE AT BOX OFFICE OR BY POST

Tea break.

Coke adds life.
REGD. TRADE MARK

"COCA-COLA" AND "COKE" ARE REGISTERED TRADE MARKS WHICH IDENTIFY THE SAME PRODUCT OF THE COCA-COLA COMPANY

I CALLED MEAT LOAF A FAIRY

IT WAS the day I called Meat Loaf a fairy and lived to tell the tale.

The world's biggest rock star was over in London for the tedious CBS Records International Convention. Seeking something to fill the pauses between meals, Mr Loaf decided to speak to the press.

So here he was, testing the construction of the sofa in his room at the Inter-Continental Hotel, ready with details of his new career in films.

Not only has he just made Americathon with Elvis Costello, but he's also poised to star in a futuristic version of Peter Pan called Neverland.

What's his role in it?

"I play the part of a character called Tink."

Called what?

"Tink. That's the equivalent of Tinkerbell."

In the original Peter Pan, Tinkerbell is of course a fairy. This posed a dilemma for the interviewer. Meat Loaf cultivates a reputation for giving journalists a hard time, and he's also proud of his machismo.

How I can possible ask him if he's going to play a fairy? Easy, I just ask him.

"You're a fairy?" I ask.

There is a horrible silence. The room seems to spin gently on its axis.

Silly of me, really. I knew he was in a difficult mood. He'd complained of indigestion before the interview. Too many cow pies, no doubt. And now I've provoked him.

I attempt an appeasing grin and fail. The silence continues.

Suddenly there's a noise like an oil well blowing out. It is Mr Loaf laughing.

"Oh, oh, oh, oh, ho, ho, ho," he rumbles. "Nobody's dared to say that to me before. A fairy! That's real good. It's okay. You're the first one that's ever hit back at me."

"Okay, you mother. I'll just break your tape recorder."

So saying, Meat seizes the cassette player that's been recording our conversation and waves it violently in the air. He relents and puts the recorder back on the table.

"Maybe I could have your arms broken instead," he says. "I've got some friends in Chicago."

"Yeah," comments an ecolyte across the room. "Some friends, but no fans."

"I like it," says Mr Loaf. "Some friends, but no fans."

The oil well rumbles again.

... AND LIVED

A true story by BOB EDMANDS
with pictures by CHRIS HORLER

MEAT LOAF is currently between albums. The last one, 'Bat Out Of Hell', is two years old. It turned him into a multi-platinum star because of the impassioned way in which he sang the literate, melodic songs of Jim Steinman.

The album's reputation was largely made on the strength of two epic songs, the title track and an item called 'Paradise By The Dashboard Light'. 'Paradise' was a witty, perceptive insight into sexual power politics, and its high quality was matched by the rest of the album. What was most impressive about it, though, was the way in which Meat Loaf music appealed to a whole range of audiences, from ADR music centre owners to heavy metal head bangers.

The next album has a hard act to follow.

"I've got a hard act to follow," says Meat Loaf. "But Jimmy's got his together. All the tunes are together, and they're even better this time round. Everybody will be looking to see whether we've got the answers to 'Bat' and 'Paradise', and we have."

The first thing we did was to keep well away from 'Paradise'. Then all of a sudden it just came. It's called 'Dance In My Pants'. I sing: 'I'm a lover, not a dancer/Don't want to be on my feet when I can be on my back/Don't want to be on the floor when I can be in the sack/I'm a lover not a dancer'.

"It's the heaviest rock'n'roll we've done really. It boogies. Just gets up and goes at it. Doesn't fuckin' fool around at all."

Work on the album began last January, and Mr Loaf expects it'll be out early next year. "We never said we were fast. We always said we were slow."

He reckons that it takes at least four months just to record the vocals. Why's that?

"Because you have to sing these songs."

It's not just: "Baby, baby, baby. I wanna take you down to Broadway and do it to ya. Momma. That ain't what's going down with us. You have to know these songs."

Meat Loaf's wife, Mrs Meat Loaf, who's sitting with us, says at this point that Meat is "a method singer", meaning (presumably) that his approach to singing is the same as Brando's approach to acting.

"Jimmy directs me in the studio," says Meat. "We discuss what colour the girl's hair is that I'm singing about, how long we've known each other, what the situation really is. I have to live the part."

"I need to take a couple of trips to the mental institution. A few blows on the head with a hammer. You need to suffer to sing this sort of stuff. I have people beating me in the studio. Sing, you mother!"

"I think the general consensus will be that the new album tops the old one. People won't be able to say we're some kind of fly-by-night organisation."

People never said that, did they?

"Listen boy," says Meat. "They're always trying to gun you down. They always got their guns out ready to shoot you down."

Not only does Meat Loaf use very aggressive language, but he also seems to have a violent approach to his work.

"Yeah, well, we live very violent lives. You're lucky. This is just a tame moment in my life. I have a tendency to rough up interviewers. If I make any quick moves, leave."

I ask Meat Loaf what sort of person Jim Steinman is to come up with such classy songs.

"Steinman spends a lot of time in the closet. He actually sleeps in the closet. The guy is a fuckin' Class-A fuckin' weirdo. Let me tell you. He is one of the weirdest muthas you'll ever see in your whole life."

"I moved him into his apartment five years ago and the boxes are still on the floor where I left them. He has a family of cockroaches that eat with him. They have their own place settings."

"You know those white gloves he wears on stage? Well, he wears them all the time. He's sterile on the street, but not sterile at home. He's like — what's that guy's name? — Howard Hughes, a Class-A nut. If you wanna know where those lyrics come from, they come from the closet."

Has Steinman got long fingernails like Howard Hughes?

"No, he finds he can't play the piano with long fingernails."

On the cover of 'Bat Out Of Hell' Jim Steinman gets a credit for the songwriting that's almost as big as the album title. Was that Meat Loaf's idea?

"Yes," he says. "I wanted it bigger. I wanted it to say 'Meat Loaf and Jim Steinman'. But Jimmy's not going to tour with us in future. He'll just make the occasional appearance, and people will know that it's something special. When he does appear with us, he'll be like a little superstar coming out on stage. That'll be real nice."

THROUGHOUT THE conversation, Meat Loaf has been playing with a couple of coffee cups, banging them together like castanets.

"Do you like these cups?" he says.

"They're Concorde cups. They give ya them on Concorde. It's real china. Royal Doulton. They give you a set. My wife asked for two. Cute aren't they? You like them?"

Very nice, I say.

"You're crazy. But I like them, too. The great thing is that if you fly six times on Concorde, you get place settings for 12 people. Great, isn't it?"

Had you flown on Concorde before?

"This was the first time. Three hours and 20 minutes, and not really any jet-lag. Not like that regular old flight that lasts 97 hours. When you're on Concorde, you know, you're on the edge of space. You look out the window, you look up and it's dark. Down below, it's daylight, and you can see that the world is round."

At the CBS Convention, Meat Loaf appeared without his band and did what he calls his "stand-up comedy routine". This primarily consists of insulting people, and his chosen target was the President of CBS International, a Mr Dick Asher.

"I didn't like his clothes," says Mr Loaf. "He had on this terrible sports jacket with

■ Continues page 53

"Whaddaya mean, prove it?" Mr Loaf holds up a cut-out of how he appears in his upcoming movie.

"And we got Bob Hite as a wood nymph... Mr Loaf holds up his upcoming clear vinyl LP.

ON TOUR IN SEPTEMBER

- 11 MANCHESTER APOLLO
- 12 SHEFFIELD TOP RANK
- 13 WOLVERHAMPTON CIVIC HALL
- 14 PETERBOROUGH WIRRENA HALL
- 16 GUILDFORD CIVIC HALL
- 17 LONDON RAINBOW
- 18 BRISTOL COLSTON HALL
- 20 EDINBURGH ODEON
- 21 NEWCASTLE MAYFAIR

SPECIAL GUESTS
THE YACHTS AND THE DAZZLERS

NEW ALBUM DRUMS AND WIRES
V2129-CASSETTE TCV2129
INCLUDES FREE SINGLE IN A LIMITED EDITION

Virgin

ROCKERS TIME

YOUR REGGAE ROUNDUP

NOW that everyone's bored with making new versions of the 'My Conversation' rhythm, attention switches to the Soul Vendors' Real Rock, one of Coxsone Dodd's rock steady instrumentals. Dodd has continually made the best use of rhythm, and now comes up with a new singing cut, Willie Williams' Armageddon Time (Studio One), the backing track has been bolstered with extra percussion, and little Willie reminds us that 'a lot of people won't get no supper tonight'. The staccato drum and bass arrangement pushes the song along almost unaided until the original trombone track elbows its way to the front to take a nonchalant solo.

The dub, with percussion whispering just below the surface, owes a debt to Georgio Moroder, but then who doesn't these days? Why only the other day I tapped him for half a crown — I hope he forgets all about it. Just before the dub fades, an uncredited toaster bursts into the studio and blurts out half a sentence before Dodd gives him the elbow. All in all, an entertaining variation on a classic rhythm, and you should be able to find the original at your local store specialist.

Alton Ellis's The Fool (Studio One) is another original dressed up with modern drumming; although Alton and the vocal group sing impeccably, I think it sounds more like a rehearsal tape: the song never gets going, and it's so short Coxsone has added a touch of dub at the end of the a-side — good idea, it works well. Alton is one of the great reggae singers, and he carries himself well here.

Freddy McKay's I Man (Roots From The Yard) also drifts into dub before the fade: could this be a last ditch stand by the 7" single in its fight for survival against the marauding 12" disc mix? Perhaps so. I-man is sitting in I-man corner, strong strong strong — 'I Man' is a presentable piece of self-assertion by Freddy, who earns his popularity. On the other hand, the b-side is a new version of Burning Spear's Creation, and while Freddy's Spear impersonation is fair, he just can't match the splendour of the original. Stick to new tunes Freddy.

There are a lot of things I don't expect from British reggae: wit, vivacity, imagination, stuff like that. But Matumbi's Point Of View (MR Records, 12") has them all, thanks in large part to the brass and vocal chorus, Glenn Miller style. Dennis Bovell of course is the man responsible. The toasting section is handled by I Roy, who recaptures some of his old joie de vivre as he warns us 'spit in the sky, it will fall in your eye' — I think I've heard that one before. On the other side you get 'Pretender!', more conventional but still fun, with Bovell getting his teeth into someone's reputation — 'I know that you're trying to make me mad, by telling me about all the hits that you've had... pretender you better surrender, because I have you under heavy binocular'. I don't know who he's referring to, but he sounds as if he means business.

Once upon a time, Paul Blackman called himself Paul Whiteman, but that's another story. Now, his Earth, Wind And Fire (Daddy Kool 12") is produced by Augustus Pablo, who has plenty of music in the shops at the moment. The song, as you might expect, is a bit aimless, with Paul

ALTON ELLIS makes a stand.

Pic: J. B. Sohler

working out some penetrating social categories: 'some are for good, some for bad and others indifferent' — useful information, eh? Paul sings well enough over a backing pared down to little more than drum and bass, and the dub section picks up extra impetus once Paul bows out. On the other side Ras Menlik Congo (Harpi) doesn't in fact feature harp, which could have been interesting: instead you get Pablo's melodica version, with hypnotic bass and an echo that goes on forever — spitting in the sky — alright lads, I promise I won't do it again. Pablo's trusty old melodica strolls through the dubside, 'Pablo In Fine Style', with no problems.

Ranking Joe's Youthman Promotion (Sufferers Heights, 12") is produced by Sugar Minott, and continues Sugar's campaign for a better world for the youth of today. Joe enjoys his unostentatious toast, and the whole record is nicely played down, with the added appeal of Berry definitely one of his most vital 1979 efforts.

Stepping Out: NICK KIMBERLEY

Pablo also produced Tetrack's Love And Unity (Rockers Int'l, 12"), an updated version of Carlton and The Shoes' Love Is A Treasure. 'All we need is peace and harmony' sing the boys, but you don't get them here: the falsetto harmonies are distinctly out of line. Still, what they lack in vocal precision they make up for in enthusiasm, and the sprightly rhythm carries them along; then Jah Bull and Jah Lavi take over with a toasting duet which again warns against Brown's I Love Sweet Jah Jah on the other side — a good combination.

Gregory Isaacs, who plays an all-purpose hooligan in the Rockers film, extends his activities to embrace the role of social secretary on Tune In (African Museum), as he tries to arrange a rendezvous 'on the corner of the avenue'. After seeing what he gets up to in the film, I think I'll opt out, to be honest, but it's a pleasant if run-of-the-mill Isaacs record, with pretty organ and what sounds like a submarine preparing to dive: clear the decks, Gregory!

SINGLES

TOP TEN

SWELL MAPS: Real Shocks (Rather/Rough Trade). The Maps comic-serious pop has caused a lot of confusion. People sling words like exuberant, sloppy and crazy at them as insulting criticisms!

The Maps have simply smashed through all the tiresome mystery of rock music. They unaffectedly question such terms as 'tightness', 'production', 'paying your dues'. They are not venturing out into a career, they don't want to mature if that means sobering up. What they're doing is having funny, fragmented, intriguing conversations with whosoever wants to listen and it's no big deal. They are transient and charming frolickers who say something serious when you're least expecting it.

'Real Shocks' is a typically dry, cut-up example; on the other side are some uneasy smatterings of surreal pop satire for those who care, recorded in Phones Sportsman's bedroom.

If people continue to place old and failed standards onto such impulsive music then they're totally missing the point. Groups like Swell Maps are a sign of the times. They have things to say, to laugh at and about, they like the idea of making records, and are actually able to do so. They're not wasting anybody's time; the noises they make are often more discerning and demanding than the efforts of their so-called mature, conscientious elders. The Maps' light hearted subversion is rash and wonderful. Have a nibble.

SILICON TEENS: Memphis Tennessee (Mute).
VICE VERSA: Music 4 (Neutron).

There is one 'mod' disc in the huge pile this week, over at the far end of this column. I get angry at the feebling retreading on the Purple Hearts' debut. Such lightweight pop we can do without in these exciting times. What is really worth observing is that the witless and superficial mod muddle is just a diverting, reactionary and unimaginative prelude to a pop culture leap into the '80s that is starting... now.

Trifling early signs are already around: through Gary Numan, Telex, Bowie, Ultravox, through the wishes of Devo to move all electronic, through the playlists of the avant garde discos. As I've said before, prepare for the deluge. Everyone will want to be modern and speculative; the itty bitty mod thing will be a good hanger for abuse.

Why, here comes the Human League LP. Already the group are an acknowledged influence. Is there any excuse for The Human League not to be massive? Are they catalysts to spark the...?

It's the '80s and there's no guitars and no drums and a brand new rationality. The unreasonably scrutinised mod pimple doesn't stand a chance. What a target for ridicule! A quick squeeze and it's gone.

All over the country people are tampering with wires and switches and machines. It's another startling blast of demystification: groups influenced by Germany calling, the Voltaire approach, the League interpretation, the Gristle abstraction, and finding brand new ways to use the experience of twenty years' pop discovery. There's nothing cold about all this.

Silicon Teens, on Daniel Miller's Mute label, have simply transferred a couple of pop museum pieces, 'Memphis Tennessee' and 'Let's Dance', to today's

THE DISC TO RISK

THE DISTRACTIONS: Time Goes By So Slow (Factory). Anyone with a fraction of an idea what makes Great Pop will melt in front of your eyes whenever this modern masterpiece is played.

Manchester's unlikely Distractions possess a rare understanding of the pressures and principles involved in assembling sensual and sharp pop. This follow-up to their scintillating four-track 'You're Not Going Out Dressed Like That' EP was actually the seventh choice for their first Factory single. They're saving the rest for a later date — if we can wait that long.

It takes a few plays before 'Time Goes By' hooks into the heart. A short, impressionistic lament of lingering love, the words are elegantly sorrowful. The arrangement is steady, almost serene; instruments interlock beautifully, the guitar sound is the sweetest. Mike Finney's lead vocals are shut-eyed and heart-felt, the spinning harmonies are the most natural and inspired side of The Undertones.

Like The Undertones, The Distractions produce, as if it's as easy as buttering bread, sad but invigorating pop songs, eclectic and unique. The Distractions are on a line from 'Love Me Do' Beatles, bashful Byrds, 'Love You More' Buzzcocks and Stax soul. Their music will move you.

Picks to click by PAUL MORLEY

climate. That they use synthesizers and electronic percussion to give new vitality and freshness to such ageing pieces is significant. That they could have a hit is no surprise if you look at the early signs.

Vice Versa are from Sheffield: a methodical trio who lean towards the League way of composing short structured songs. Development is steady, images are sharp, the sound insinuating. Such records still sound thin, perhaps pompous, but the genre is still in primitive, derivative stages. There's a long way to go. Watch it move.

THE TRANSMITTERS: Still Hunting For The Ugly Man (Step Forward). Ealing's Transmitters are an insular, sinister sort of group. As is typical of those who, for whatever reason, develop out of sight and mind of media scrutiny, they have developed a powerfully idiosyncratic sound. The group use the same line-up as their labelmates The Fall, and it's not irrelevant to point out certain similarities.

Both groups are cynics and critics. Both groups are fronted by hurried, mocking inciters. Both groups deal with instabilities, abnormalities, ambitions, truths... and make demented shell-shocked music.

This 12" four-track 45 is an obsessive, frustrated record. Consistently effective and annoying, it rummages restlessly out on lunatic fringes. It's difficult, discomfiting and oppressively manic, but worth exploring.

POISON GIRLS: Hex (TRIX/Small Wonder). Brittle music, savage and jaundiced observations and despairs. Eight songs, 45 rpm words included, it's a substantial record of grudges, jealousy, tension and inadequacy.

Singer Vi Subversa (aka Vi Squad) is a determined non-conformist. It seems she's learned the hard way. A lot of pain comes through in this music.

Through the differently challenging 'Old Tan's Song'.

'Crisis', 'Ideologically Unsound', 'Bremen Song', 'Political Love', 'Jump Mama Jump', 'Under The Doctor' and 'Reality Attack' she viciously questions prejudices, roles, expectations, particularly concerning the negotiability and condition of Woman. It's a stark, extreme work, hardly deserving to be ignored. Like The Transmitters, it's not easy listening, verging on the hysterical, the hallucinatory. Subversa herself sounding like a manic mixture of Jim Morrison and Dietrich. Hear it.

STEVE MIRO AND THE EYES: Dreams Of Desire (Object). An attractive song from Manchester's mysterious Steve Miro that I can see I'm going to have lots of fun with. Miro is backed by the select group of pop pumpers The Eyes. More superb Manchester swing, a gloriously understated melody you just have to go back to again and again, a chorus you hardly notice until it flutters around your mind hours later, a winning sax part and a timely dose of delightful guitar solo.

Dainty, discreet and distinctive light rock that appears to be distantly related to the protesting whimsy of Giles, Giles And Frupp, even the enigmatic elegance of Kevin Ayers. How much more of this assertive and bright Manchester new pop can there be to bely the current notion that Liverpool's the home of the wacky and jolly, and Manchester all doom-laden?

IQ ZERO: Insects (Object). Yet more! Actually Zero are Blackburn heroes, but that's close enough. They're first period XTC clones, but quite convincing with it. 'Insects' is an erratic dart of buffoonery — there's a lot of revision that needs to be done, but there's a promising sparkle in their style.

THE REVILLOS: Where's The Boy For Me (Snatzo/Dindisc). Virgin's new toy, Dindisc's opening crack, and smart it is too. The Revillos, all slit and sun specs, padded shoulders, woollen tights and stiff grimaces, are not unlike a defunct Sire legend, this mainly because lead singers Eugene Reynolds and Fay Fife are the same asinine duo that leapt and swapped high kicks in the front of that defunct Sire legend.

This is a tinny, artfully senseless scrape of new pop that should send you dizzy with its simpleton riff and nutty insistence. Will it be a hit? Let's wait and see!

THE QUADS: There Must Be Thousands (Big Bear). The record that John Peel has singlehandedly nudged to the edge of the charts: he even persuaded Paul Burnett to make it his record of the week. The Quads are Birmingham based, and their single is blessed with extravagant wedges of guitar, made irresistible thanks to a cranked-up imbecilic lead guitar motif that pushes itself to the front of the mix as often as it can, and not harmed by a vocal that recalls The Bay City Rollers' occasional attempts at toughness. Gormless pop dementia. Lovely.

THE DISTURBED: Betrayed (Parole). I reviewed this last time round, but it got snipped onto the cutting room floor. It's taken time but 'Betrayed' has since become a favourite. A kinky, almost genial Barry riff-roll, and deliberate, sulky vocals from Josh Munnis, sounding like a slightly more 'grown up' Honey Bane. Beguiling stepping out music

Continues over page

SINGLES

■ From previous page

● COMMERCIAL BREAK
THE DICKIES: Nights In White Satin (A&M). Far superior to the Moody Blues original.

JANET KAY: Loving You (Pye). Not as good as the Minnie Ripperton original.

TOMMY MORRISON: Breaking Promises (Real). The original, but unoriginal. A colourless sub Bad Company strut. Just what's needed.

GALLAGHER AND LYLE: Missing You (Phonogram). It doesn't seem possible to be so safe, soft and reserved without disappearing in on yourself. A shadow of a song presented with repellent correctness and presumably sung chin deep in green slime.

NONA HENDRYX: Snakes Alive (Arista). Smooth and slippery, it drifts unpersuasively, promising something but never bothering to get up there. None sings with defeatist glumness. The song just sort of wanders wearily into the distance. Strange.

JACK-KNIFE: Walking On Heaven's Ground (EG/Polydor). John Wetton's new group: an earnest, unimaginative sample from a forthcoming LP. Never have Wetton's stops on the route to anonymity been so damp and dispirited.

SWEET: Big Apple Waltz (Polydor). At a time when their former glory craziness would be appreciated and probably perversely respected, these goons are trying to be mature and make sophisticated ballads that no one could ever fall in love with. Dismal. If you hear this on the radio and are waiting for something to happen, take it from me nothing does. Like nothing — absolutely nothing — happens on the six or seven records above. And what do all these records have in common . . . ?

● CLEAN NOISE
THE RADIATORS: Kitty Ricketts (Chiswick).
THE BUZZARDS: We Make A Noise (Chrysalis).
FINGERPRINTZ: Tough Luck (Virgin).
 The Buzzards' We Make A Noise has a keen thematic persistence that old Jim Pursey would be proud of. Considering the current prevalence of matey melo-dramatic rock chants we can all join in with, this polished piece of confessional silliness will probably roar into the charts. That'll turn tables on their whining.

The Radiators' Kitty Ricketts is a wispy, Tony Visconti assisted dribble, catchy and irritating enough to earn much airplay. It doesn't appeal to me — too mannered and old-fashioned.

Fingerprintz' Tough Luck is a disappointingly anonymous barely updated R&B shuffle that ends up nowhere. Where are the prickly guitars, the awkward atmospheres? It's indicative of Virgin's current state of play that they now have a rota of second rate ordinaries (Interview, Cowboys International, Fingerprintz) where not long ago all their choices were carefully selected and lovingly cared for.

● DIRTY NOISE
COCKNEY REJECTS: Flares And Slippers (Small Wonder).
UK SUBS: Tomorrows Girls (Gem). PETE ZEAR:

Tomorrows World (No Label).
VERMILION AND THE ACES: The Letter (Megal).
 Cockney Rejects' Feel session was great. Flares And Slippers is thumpy and grumpy pure punk-out in the Upstarts corner, and is noisy and assertive enough to have already sold over 5,000 copies. The Rejects are actually abrasive enough to replace shaving as an early morning necessity.

The Subs' 2½ minute excerpt from their up and coming 17 song 'Another Kind Of Blues' LP is yet more of the gruff poetic punk that has developed into such a valid if controversial part of the contemporary vitality. It'll either please you or upset you.

Pete Zear appears to be produced by Rat Scabies, and sounds nothing much other than what you'd imagine Bad Company to be like if they were produced by Rat Scabies.

Vermilion, backed by ex-punky punka Menace, now the Aces, appears to be produced by Mick Farren. It sounds like what you'd expect Maggie Bell to sound like if she were produced by Rat Scabies.

● ACCIDENTS WILL HAPPEN
PURPLE HEARTS: Millions Like Us (Fiction). There's such a lack of positive new vibrations on this smartened and modified power pop trash, but I'm probably prejudiced into saying that because I am appalled by the new tribal warfare and the depressing fuss over the clumsy exhuming of a dead culture.

I must calm down; I feel like a reactionary. Actually I'm just a little amused and disturbed. And actually this is almost a likeable noise that rushes to a fervent and messy climax, but there's a mountain of more forward-looking, broad-minded and above all, more imaginative pop records released this week. Look back to the top of the list.

"You'd think a band with Elvis Costello for a chauffeur would get their picture on the first singles page, wouldn'tcha! Oh well, back to the garage Herbert . . ."

SERGE CLERC

the REVILLOS

ROBO RHYTHM
 On ROBO-BEATING

Hi-Fi HARRIS
 On GUITARING

FAY FIFE
 On SINGING

EUGENE REYNOLDS
 On SINGING

FELIX
 On BASSING

BABS & GABRIE
 On BACKING AND SINGING

Where's the boy for Me?

OUT NOW!
FIRST SINGLE
 ON BOB 1241
SHAZZO RECORD

MUCHO GIGS:

SEPTEMBER
 5 WAKEFIELD
 6 LONDON
 15 MIDDLESBOROUGH
 21 MANCHESTER
 22 LIVERPOOL
 28 DUNDEE
 OCTOBER
 5 BIRMINGHAM
 6 NOTTINGHAM
 12 EGHAM
 13 NORTHAMPTON
 18 SHEFFIELD
 19 RETFORD
 20 STERLING
 26 PLYMOUTH
 27 TORQUAY

Unity Hall
 Notre Dame Hall
 Rock Garden
 Factory
 Eric's (2 shows)
 Technical College

Digbeth's Civic Hall
 Sandpiper
 Royal Holloway College
 County Cricket Ground
 Limit Club
 Porterhouse University
 Clones
 Town Hall

MUCHO MORE SOON

DIN 1

BLACK SHOES, bright socks, black shades, white shirt, black trilby, iridescent trousers a tad too short and chest-hugger jackets... Stepping down from the inter-city train to skaville I double-check the notice boards for fear of transgressing a local by-law that requires the youth of the city of Coventry to look sharp as a crease and rough as a rudie.

There isn't one. There might as well be.

Simmering down amidst the red-brick post-war development, elevated ring roads and concrete shopping precincts, is a melting pot of what you might call trans-cultural music and dress that could very soon — if not already — effect a sound and style for '79.

Not a renewal — the euphemism for revival — made in '65 for re-consumption in '79 but a little something for the present, looking forward rather than back. Sated as you may well be with people too busy looking in a rear-view mirror to reflect what it is to be approaching the '80s (which, despite evidence to the contrary, I can't help feeling we are) the prospect must beckon.

It's a meeting of minds, a marriage of idioms; something old, something new, something borrowed, something blue (beat) and this isn't meant to sound cynical but it's probably the most bankable thing to come out of Coventry since the Climax fork truck. At its vanguard are The Specials, bringing up the rear, The Selecter. Inbetween? Not a lot. Not yet anyway.

The Selecter originated on the flip side of The Specials' 'Gangsters', an instrumental skank hung around Neol (sic) Davis guitar with Specials drummer Prince Rimshot and Selecter bassist Charlie. It's better than the 'A' side, but then that's one of The Specials' lesser songs, so there you go.

The name Selecter invokes those old autochanger decks for stacking up old hits in the current nostalgia-ridden air. The Selecter are nothing of the sort. They're infectious ska-based reggae rockers who on present form alone could give any club level outfit a run for your money. And they only fell in alongside Neol Davis some six months back, coalescing from the same Coventry clique whence came The Specials.

Neol, hunched over the wheel of his rusty black Beetle, sorts a few facts from the confusion.

"The difference between us and The Specials is the different kind of balance of influences between all the members. There are 14 musicians involved between the two bands at the moment, then there are other people outside the two bands, whom we've all been involved with over the years. There's loads of us. We've all been in rock bands, we've all been in soul bands, we've all been in reggae bands, and it all relates. It's a hybrid that works."

"People pick up on ska so easily because it's so good," remarks Neol, almost matter-of-factly. "Every place has a particular identity, like Sheffield and The Human League or Manchester and Buzzcocks. You can always tell a London band, they've got a certain sound. It's the same with Coventry bands. We aren't setting out for a specific sound, we play what we play because of the things we've absorbed over the years."

"Don't get the impression that's the only music alive in this area. That's the thing about us — we're not a ska band. It's everything, the soul, the rock, the reggae, the ska, everything. And around the country it's wild; it's there straight away. The band and the audience... one."

ARRIVING AT a one up and one down terraced house in Hillfield, where Charlie the dreadlocked bass player lives, and where the rest of the Selecter are easing out of Saturday night and into Sunday afternoon, the cool notes of the Upsetters greet us from the makeshift hi-fi.

Decked out in what one supposes is not just their Sunday best are Charlie, Desmond (organ), Camplin (second guitar), Charlie H (drums) and Gaps and Pauline (vocals).

Selecter: l to r: Neol, Desmond, Pauline, Charlie H, Camplin, Charlie, Gaps.

They Still Bear The Skas

Paul Rambali is sent to Coventry where The Selecter agree to talk to him all the same. Chris Horler gets the pictures.

The latter two, once they take up the slack on a few arrangements and maybe add some third part harmony, are going to be a vocal team every bit as good to hear as they already are to watch. The rest of the band aren't great musicians, and waste no time trying to be, they just lay it down tight and right.

There's never been a British band like them. Not that they reject all that has gone before or anything, it's just that no-one's ever arrived at their combination. Which is something of a surprise when you see them (which you ought and soon) because it's obviously a great idea, full of subtlety and vigour, that performs the remarkable feat of slipping between rock reggae and funk rhythms on pop soul songs emerging with a strong identity and without seeming remotely like the uncertain, schizophrenic catch-all such a description might imply.

Their background grants them the chops to pull it off; collectively, everything from rock to steel bands and back the other way. Take Desmond, in control of one of the hardest instruments to handle well, the Hammond organ. He lists his favourite players as Jimmy Reed, Booker T, Jackie Mittoo and Dave Greenfield.

Desmond is The Selecter's most passionate spokesman and biggest clown.

"How did we get together? Music, schooldays, friendship, fighting in the same gang, sharing the same sort of experience."

"I've known Charlie since I was 15. Me, him and Lynval from The Specials used to play in a soul band, and we've played in a reggae band, but we didn't like the heavy reggae too much, we were never into the dub side of it, we were more into the rhythm and the fun."

From these strands of mutual friendship The Selecter selected itself.

"Of all that was going on," explains Charlie, "us lot here were more able to move as a band. You've got to have everybody aiming for the same thing, seven people moving in the same direction. Then you're cool."

The Selecter's aim is to have a good time, and to say something resonant about the circumstances around them. How?

"In all ways really," says Desmond. "From the point of view of kids who are down and out, destitute. I mean, it falls right back on us. We're just like everybody else who is struggling to make something of life."

"I've been in funk and soul bands and we'd go out and say, like, 'Hey, I'm a black boy, I can skip a fucking ring!' and I really get into that. But in this situation we can say, 'look, life is not all money, life is not all fun.' We have the same problems as them, we're operating from their level."

But when you're on stage people don't see that side of your existence.

"That's why we play the music and lyrics we do. Like the line 'I was only having some fun, and they come and take me away.' Anybody can relate to that."

"You see how we do it?" asks Charlie. "We don't mention SUS or anything, we just point it out. Take another song, 'Murder' — we don't do many covers, about three or four — that song was done by Owen Gray in '62 and it says 'Murder, murder, please don't do it, because that's what they want you to do'. Then they just come and take you away. And 'Carry Go Bring Come' by The Champs, that's about gossip, loose talk."

"You could take it on a broader level too, the whole thing about the media distorting facts," adds Pauline, suddenly animated.

"A lot of the papers, if they talk to someone who happens to be influencing the youth, or the people in general, they have to find this deep underlying reason why they're doing it. We're just together because we want to put out a certain sound, with certain lyrics."

"The sound is forceful, it makes people move, and it also makes people sit up and fucking listen. And the lyrics are meaningful as well. They relate in a really simple way, like you can just sit there and think, well shit, yeah, I know what they're talking about... providing the PA's good. And that's all!"

Says Neol: "It's black, it's white, it's boys, it's girls all mix."

"Yeah," interrupts Pauline. "Girls. This is very important. It's not just rock boys."

"And we're not just sex symbols," adds Neol.

"You speak for yourself," says Pauline.

NOW YOU must understand that various popular refreshments have served to loosen up the atmosphere by this point, and there is something of a party going on this late afternoon in Hillfield. Unable to make herself heard above the general din, Pauline comes over to make a brief, but none the less pertinent, point.

"I just want to put across that you can get up, as a woman, and you can just sing, and that's it, just dress the way you wanna dress. Joan Armatrading is the only one who actually reaches an audience as a woman. That's what I want to do, without all that shit you get from disco queens and all the rest of it."

Hearing this, Desmond subdues his spirits for a second.

"It's up to each individual to suss what is what. I mean to say, a pum-pum is a pum-pum an."

Pauline takes the bait of Desmond's macho tease and promptly lands him a sound wallop. I participate in some skanking and then take a powder.

UP SLIT CREED

THE IRONIES of meeting The Slits one evening last week in Covent Garden's Neal Street were not lost on your humble quill-driver: the place was no more than a stone's throw from what was once the Roxy Club.

It was a return to the vicinity of an old stopping ground not only for me but also the The Slits themselves. Though they were not one of the bands widely associated with Andy Czerowski's punk mecca, The Slits did play one of their typically tempestuous early gigs in the murky bowels of the seamy Neal Street cellar — sharing a plum Saturday night bill with the nascent Siouxsie And The Banshees, no less, if my memory serves me right. Furthermore, because Texas was first introduced to the two original band members, singer Ari and drummer Palmolive, at the Roxy.

Reversing the plane, which closed its doors to punk for the first time around the beginning of last year, jotted me like a sharp rock to the ribs. It was a timely reminder of just how much things have moved on in the last couple of years. Not least for The Slits.

Their story to date has been one of an enigmatic band with rare, radical promise and earth-shattering potential. But there has been little in the way of actual realisation of this until very recently. Though their gigs have always been exciting, unpredictable affairs, that vital spark of true greenness was

On the plus side there was always Ari, wrongly maligned as just a puerile and precocious teen-age brat — a fine singer with the effervescence, spontaneity and looseness of one of UK's talk-show kings. At her best, Ari can be the most open, stage performer since

Bargain. The Slits' Ari, the only one of the four who has not changed her look of control, their failure to improve the musical ability to fully realise their far-reaching artistic visions. If things started to go wrong onstage — usually through Texas falling to keep time or Ari throwing a tantrum — their live set always fell apart at the seams. The Slits — in some ways to their credit — have never been able to do this.

TOWARDS THE end of last year it began to look as if The Slits' somewhat patchy slow progress could turn around in a quagmire of indecision and a lot of realisation.

But, like I said, things have moved on. From the rampant cacophony of their roots, this band have now matured into something rather apocryphal.

It is an album of extremes, from the teasing, urgent voices of Ari and the discord, scratchy guitar work of Viv Albright to 'Tessie's' thudding, semi-out, drum, drummer Budgie's reggae-influenced bass and Dennis

Yes, those tempestuous temptresses of British rock are back and loud. Since the loopy lovelies last graced our pages they've lost two drummers, made an LP, and had some highly unusual pix taken. Is that enough?

"It certainly is," says ADRIAN THRILLS. "OK by me," says PENNIE SMITH.

It is a triumph because The Slits have harnessed and directed their turbulent, muddled energies creatively.

Above all, they have disciplined themselves — and that is the last word which would previously have come to mind when The Slits are involved.

Ari, for one, is all-too-ready to admit as much as she munches her way through a massive platter of rice and vegetables outside the Roxy.

"When you make your record, you have to go through something mind-blowing the same way as you do physically when you're learning something like Kung Fu."

Under a tumbled mop of rumble-dyed blonde hair, "I learnt about myself a lot, and about having really closely to other people."

"That's one thing about being in a group — you have to learn to live with people who you wouldn't necessarily disciplined types. It's not a cold discipline. It's a personal thing. A creative discipline.

"It's the effort to not just say 'Ah, fuck it! I can't work with you anymore!' You could say that after a month or two if you weren't bothered to understand other people's problems and then your own problems in relating to them and your own insecurities."

It is an effort that The Slits, in their early days, did not really make.

"How could we possibly have been disciplined when we didn't get on at all in the beginning? The whole point is that anyone can do it! You just have to take the action in doing it."

Every sound that you hear is rhythm!" she giggles, not half as seriously or pompously as it looks in print. "Everything is part of the pattern. Humans are my drugs and rhythm is sex! Putting in rhythm and so is the earth going round and every footstep and every

"The way you go about your music is the way you go about your life. Like I said, rhythm and life go together. Like if you see someone playing what they think is music, like some of the groups you get on Top Of The Pops now, then you can see their feelings from it. And if you say that they are a bunch of wankers, what makes you say that? It's not only the music. It's the way that they pose to it. Then you see that both things go together. Their rhythm is their lifetime.

"Some rhythm isn't music to me. Like when you're into a thing for money, then your heart drops out and the heart is made out of rhythm and if you ain't got the heart, then the rhythm ain't there... like we've checked so many fucking drummers!"

Which brings us, briefly, to the subject of The Slits' percussive problems.

Since the departure of their first drummer, Dennis, in 1976, the band has had three drummers, one of whom, Budgie, a Liverpool lad formerly of Big In Japan and The Spizzies, has completed one tour with the band and is now playing

So although they are currently rehearsing with a drummer by the name of Ranting Rant, the band's position remarkably similar to that The Clash were in two years ago — a classic debut album in the bag but they have no means of going out and promoting it as they would wish, as a complete band. Still, there are strong rumours of a tour being in the pipeline for the autumn.

INTERVIEWING The Slits can be an awkward and difficult affair — at one point I looked my tape machine off in resignation at the fact that Ari and Viv obviously refuse to answer any direct questions about the album, or how it was made, or their songwriting, or their relationship with producer Steve Nieve, who the broody Texas simply says "I don't want to talk about anything as trivial as ourselves!" faces to them, are boring and unnecessary.

And for a group who — with a certain amount of justification — are continually being labelled as "punk", their reasoning is surprising. It is when I ask whether led to the album being called "Cut" — admittedly a dumb question — that Ari gets heated, launching into a broadside against the soundbites of "People think that we're arrogant. But that's 'cause they've got into the trap of believing things. We were all in it together," says Ari. "We struggled and sweated together. If Palmolive would have left three days earlier and Viv or me or Tessie had written another three songs, we would still be in it together."

"It's selfish and snobbish to talk about your records. That's how groups get into their own ego trips: because they answer all those questions. But by refusing to talk about your record you can build the whole thing into a great big mysterious secret, which is just what you are trying to avoid."

Viv disagrees. "With questions like that you just help build a great mystique around people and make them snobbish. When you talk about your record it becomes difficult for other people to relate to. It's of no use to anyone else."

"But everyone is a human and everyone has millions of things in common that you could use something that might be a bit of help to someone else. Maybe they might think 'I do that as well, and they won't feel so lonely. I'd like to know more about them.'"

"The one thing that you have to accept is that there are parts of you that are shit! If you think that you are a good person but you are a part of you that is shit, then you start hating yourself and get depressed with yourself."

"The way you go about your music is the way you go about your life. Like I said, rhythm and life go together."

Talking specifically about the lyrics on the album also gets a unanimous thumbs down. As much as I repeat groups unwilling to discuss the content of their songs, The Slits are at least prepared to justify their stance.

"They're not abstract lyrics," Viv again. "They're not that hard to figure out. It's fucking obvious! That's as far as it goes. They're not abstract 'cause we want them to be understood. We don't want to have to sit around explaining them. They're there to be understood."

"You can't explain to everyone how it should be resolved. It touches everyone in a different way. It will spark off different ways depending on what they're at."

One thing the band readily concedes, however, is the debt they owe to Palmolive, one of the founder members with Ari and a vital figure in shaping the group until her departure less than a year ago.

It is not just for the sake of making me royalty payments simpler that all the songs on "Cut" are credited to The Slits and Palmolive. "We were all in it together," says Ari. "We struggled and sweated together. If Palmolive would have left three days earlier and Viv or me or Tessie had written another three songs, we would still be in it together."

"We have done it all as a together thing. We sweated together. You shouldn't separate it. never. No matter who wrote the lyrics, the influence came through what you went through together."

AND MAKE no mistake, The Slits have been through a lot together, regardless of the fact that they have never been recorded on vinyl until now. They've gigged sporadically for two years, toured, been through more managers than hot dinners. But more than any of that stuff, they have grown up together, creating some of the pride and prejudices in their characters along the way.

"I don't think there's a deeper struggle for some sort of harmony or whatever, for a free yourself properly, you have to go on a 'character' diet. Just accept that there is good and bad in everyone, including yourself, and shed the bad parts like a spare tyre of

"The one thing that you have to accept is that there are parts of you that are shit! If you think that you are a good person but you are a part of you that is shit, then you start hating yourself and get depressed with yourself."

"The way you go about your music is the way you go about your life. Like I said, rhythm and life go together."

Talking specifically about the lyrics on the album also gets a unanimous thumbs down. As much as I repeat groups unwilling to discuss the content of their songs, The Slits are at least prepared to justify their stance.

"They're not abstract lyrics," Viv again. "They're not that hard to figure out. It's fucking obvious! That's as far as it goes. They're not abstract 'cause we want them to be understood. We don't want to have to sit around explaining them. They're there to be understood."

"You can't explain to everyone how it should be resolved. It touches everyone in a different way. It will spark off different ways depending on what they're at."

One thing the band readily concedes, however, is the debt they owe to Palmolive, one of the founder members with Ari and a vital figure in shaping the group until her departure less than a year ago.

It is not just for the sake of making me royalty payments simpler that all the songs on "Cut" are credited to The Slits and Palmolive. "We were all in it together," says Ari. "We struggled and sweated together. If Palmolive would have left three days earlier and Viv or me or Tessie had written another three songs, we would still be in it together."

"We have done it all as a together thing. We the earth exists and space exists and it goes through its millions of years. The life pattern is civilisation and Babylon. The system that we're in is a system that's going to be destroyed."

Come again? "What she's trying to say," interprets Viv helpfully, "is that there are things that you can't see with your eyes. It's a system that's going to be destroyed. What we're trying to do is not let them upset us too much... which we usually don't do very well at."

"And then there's the deeper struggle for some sort of harmony or whatever, for a free yourself properly, you have to go on a 'character' diet. Just accept that there is good and bad in everyone, including yourself, and shed the bad parts like a spare tyre of

"The one thing that you have to accept is that there are parts of you that are shit! If you think that you are a good person but you are a part of you that is shit, then you start hating yourself and get depressed with yourself."

"The way you go about your music is the way you go about your life. Like I said, rhythm and life go together."

Talking specifically about the lyrics on the album also gets a unanimous thumbs down. As much as I repeat groups unwilling to discuss the content of their songs, The Slits are at least prepared to justify their stance.

"They're not abstract lyrics," Viv again. "They're not that hard to figure out. It's fucking obvious! That's as far as it goes. They're not abstract 'cause we want them to be understood. We don't want to have to sit around explaining them. They're there to be understood."

"You can't explain to everyone how it should be resolved. It touches everyone in a different way. It will spark off different ways depending on what they're at."

One thing the band readily concedes, however, is the debt they owe to Palmolive, one of the founder members with Ari and a vital figure in shaping the group until her departure less than a year ago.

It is not just for the sake of making me royalty payments simpler that all the songs on "Cut" are credited to The Slits and Palmolive. "We were all in it together," says Ari. "We struggled and sweated together. If Palmolive would have left three days earlier and Viv or me or Tessie had written another three songs, we would still be in it together."

"We have done it all as a together thing. We

It's time that the ladies had a bath (don't be left).

TODAY, THEY'VE MORE IN COMMON THAN JUST JOHN, PAUL, GEORGE & RINGO.

They were all acting just like any other self-respecting Beatles' fan acted.

But that was fifteen years ago, and the thing that's closest to their hearts now was probably the furthest away from their minds then.

Today, believe it or not, they're all probably married with children and a home of their own.

It comes to us all.

And when it does, more people come to the Halifax for help with that first home than any other building society in Britain.

Last year alone, the Halifax granted nearly 150,000 mortgages. That's a whole lot of homes.

Mind you, the Halifax is the biggest building society in the world, with over five million savers.

So it's a place where you know your money is safe and secure.

And with a number of different savings plans that all pay good interest rates, there's bound to be one just right for you.

So when you've stopped screaming and started dreaming of a place of your own, remember, start saving with the Halifax.

HALIFAX
The kind of rock everybody needs.

ALBUMS

The Young Modernists Search for God...

BUZZCOCKS A Different Kind Of Tension (United Artists)

Since the departure of Howard Devoto Buzzcocks have degenerated into an incoherent, neutral pop group where acidity and criticism have become lamentably diluted. The processes of becoming a popular group interfered with the development of the art and the creativity; the demands of communicating became more important than the nature of the communication. The punk problem.

A Different Kind Of Tension is Buzzcocks in total control of their sound and their confessions. It is a work of accusation, stress and examination that is worth involving yourself with as much as 'Spiral Scratch', the harder parts of 'Another Music In A Different Kitchen' and the more rigorous of their minor hit singles. It is a restoration of the descriptive, moralistic assertion of the purest and most passionate Buzzcocks. And that is very good.

The LP is an aggravated, convincingly disenchanted and critically realistic collection of realisations, arguments and doubts. Buzzcocks' super-vitality has always shown when they explore the pressures and ambiguities of emotional and moral compromises. 'Spiral Scratch' was hardly such an unimaginable classic for its place in 'history', or for Devoto's wretched, fanatical vocals, but because it was four precise, definitive images of the euphoric, depressive balances between the urgency of desires and the mundanity of their actuality. The best of post 'Spiral' Shelley the conversationalist's songs have had the dialectic, deductive and dramatic attack of that record, but there has been progressively more softhearted affection and casual exchanges. Added to this, there's been no sort of consistency, or even genuine controversy.

The Peter Shelley of 'Another Kind Of Tension' is a songwriter and commentator of new maturity, dedication and discretion. The songs on 'Tension' are his first since the early days that needed to be written by Peter Shelley and obviously have been. In its depth, with the extent of its probing, voyeurism and insight, and ultimately because of its compulsive vitality, 'Tension' is at least the full follow-up to 'Spiral Scratch'. Finally, an extension. Shelley facing up to new surroundings, ironies, compromises. New values.

This is not a happy record, but it is not resigned. The ironical viewpoint Shelley attempted to make with the clumsy 'Everybody's Happy Nowadays' biases all his contributions here in a much firmer manner. Shelley plows through valuable self-analysis in his songs that are as much about the contemporary predicament as anyone's I can think of. These are egocentric investigations, but they are symptomatically confused. Crucially, Shelley has moved out of the one dimension of awkward bisexuality, bitter-sweet lost lust/love and reality-dream, now he is looking past the cheek of his current close companion and experiencing and attacking new disappointments.

Symbolic of his present state of mind is side one's third song, 'You Say You Don't Love Me'. A shockingly cruel parody of the Shelley pop gem, the vocals are malicious and mocking. Such malice signifies the end of the Shelley love moan. Nowhere on the album is there a thrilling, kicking 'I Don't Mind' melody. Melodies are less jolly, more deliberate, except occasionally when Shelley's undermining the gravity of his own words.

Shelley: 'I'm sure He was here a minute ago.'

Musically, the album has a consistency that wasn't achieved by either the patchy, chronological 'Another Music...' or the messy 'Love Bites'. For all that, it still seems like a blueprint for better things; Buzzcocks have attained, after some hesitation, a ravishing symmetry, an intelligent balance of alert, agitated guitars and forceful, flexible rhythmic incitement, but there's still plenty of room to move from there. The music of 'Tension' comes from the sensitised, glancing rush and nervy twist of 'Ever Fallen In Love...' and the accumulative, gripping repetition of the B side of the ugly 'Harmony in My Head', 'Something's Gone Wrong Again'. It's an accessible, exhilarating and interesting sound, but it's not conclusive.

Side one is a mixture of Diggle and Shelley shorts, three of each. The arrangement isn't as sloppy as on 'Love Bites', where Diggle's intrusions were badly lopsided. Here, none of Diggle's songs are as uncouth as 'Harmony' or as ambitious as 'Automony'. 'Sitting Round

At Home', 'You Know You Can't Help It' and 'Mad Mad Judy' are rough 'Abbey Road' surrogate rousers, succeeding because of their artful spray of guitars and the stern rhythm discipline, yet almost losing that success because of Diggle's uncomfortable voices.

Shelley's side one songs, the urgent opening affirmation, 'Paradise', 'You Say You Don't Love Me' with its unnerving Nick Drake soundlike phrasing, and 'Raison D'Etre' are scattered hints of the new Shelley concern.

Side one is brisk and biting: almost standard rock mobility. Side two is the Shelley tour-de-force, undoubtedly the best Buzzcocks since 'Spiral Scratch'. The lonely and unsure solipsist is not looking for meaning, but looking for ways to survive in the opaque, obstinate world of lack of meaning. This isn't comprehension, but confrontation and compromise. Side two systematically constructs a turbulent, impressionable pattern of disillusionment, despondency, defiance, compliance, hostility, integrity, banality and identity.

'I Don't Know What To Do With My Life' is a short, tight study of restlessness. 'Money' is an economic, almost pathetic representation of paranoia and isolation, with a contorted riff that straightens into 'Hollow Inside', a bass-heavy, insistent, claustrophobic anthem of futility which drifts to an impressive fade. 'A Different Kind Of Tension' itself is an overwrought, effective translation of inner struggle, using dervish call and response.

After this disturbing build-up, this evocative series of observations from the verge of a nervous breakdown, Shelley offers his answer, his relief, his escape. With its atmosphere of childish curiosity, of stubborn naivety, with its warming appreciation of the need to be concerned, the seven minute 'I Believe' is a touching, tempered solution to the feelings of futility. Shelley nakedly and unashamedly reels off his faith in the small things: 'I believe that I'm not the only one... I believe in my mum and dad... I believe in the immaculate conception... I believe in the resurrection... I believe in the elixir of youth... I believe in the absolute truth... I believe in perpetual motion... I believe in total devotion...'

Against such niceties, Shelley's pained chorus contradicts with 'there is no love in this world anymore'. Shelley, though, has his faith. His survival is a blend of cynicism and naivety, whilst all through the side Buzzcocks complement these passionate emotional / spiritual fragments with an immaculate sense of atmosphere and arrangement. The side develops with soulful, imposing and tense drama.

In a year when Joy Division, The Slits, who not long ago were looking up to and supporting Buzzcocks, Swell Maps and The Undertones, who will quote the group as a major influence, when all these have made music that is 'better', that is more imaginative, adventurous and stimulating than anything Buzzcocks have produced since 'Spiral Scratch' and 'What Do I Get?', it is right and proper that Buzzcocks should resoundingly prove that they are not already worn out. 'Another Kind Of Tension' is a relevant LP and shows Peter Shelley to be so much more than a craftsman who made up a handful of sublime melodies.

Paul Morley

STRAIGHT EIGHT No Noise From Here (Eel Pie)

Elton John apart, it's hard to think of a megastar whose proteges have amounted to much, artistically or commercially. The Pete Townshend/Thunderclap Newman link-up being an honourable exception, Straight Eight's debut on Townshend's Eel Pie label was a mildly intriguing prospect.

Captain Powerchords' influence is largely confined to the opener, 'I Idolise You', but the overall stamp is still firmly traditional, evoking names like Free, Humble Pie and The Faces. Rick Cassman's tunes usually avoid the obvious, his voice is lightweight yet strong and the result is personalized guitar boogie.

'No Noise From Here' is virtually a compilation, culled from sporadic sessions during the band's 15 months with Eel Pie, and as such is particularly impressive. (They're now signed to WEA.) Drummer Rod Berriedale-Johnson is consistently solid and incisive and the whole thing hangs together better than many purpose-made albums.

More to the point, recent events could conspire to yank Straight Eight from its ho-hum status to a position of intense grooviness. Y'see, I've a sneaking suspicion that the current Mod-ness is proving a convenient umbrella for anyone seeking to replace the pogo pulse with regular tunes and a classic dance beat, yet anxious to avoid the stigma of powerpop wimpiness.

Since these have been Straight Eight's prime ingredients all along, a slight honing of the guitar solos and a visit to the appropriate costumers could pay off handsomely. My commission? Oh, five per cent would do...

Harry George

... Or At Least Some Sort Of Soul

GARY NUMAN The Pleasure Principle (Beggars Banquet)

And people seethe at the Golden Boy.

Let's forget the threadbare rock'n'roll bitch that it's all been done before by 'proper' artists — Bowie this, Kraftwerk that — because, although the groundwork was laid down by lots of clever folk long ago nobody has done what Gary Numan is doing right now. Outside of Moroder, electronic music has always avoided commercial success with its accent on extended aural think pieces 'hi, Tangerine Dream', or indulgent student pranks (hey, Orchestral Manoeuvres In The Dark or, perhaps, Telex!).

But Numan is knocking out a bunch of important sounding moog anthems that never threaten to stray from ABC pattern, gives them a traditional rock backbone and stammers through the most obvious of futuristic babble lyrics — and thus lulls the punter to believe that their musical tastes are taking leaps forward.

Simply, Numan is making intelligent music for people who aren't intelligent. (And, unless you're the most guilty liberal, you know just how many folk just aren't too sharp).

This outlook I have confirmed by the amount of people, mainly boys, who will trot up to my DJ podium and ask for something by 'The Tube'. When I have to decline their requests, they invariably step back and with the look of a conqueror on their face say "What, is he too weird for this place?" then stride away with the air of a person of great discernment.

And Gary is their Hero. I think Numan is harmless enough. I certainly don't believe the man himself is overly smart, which is probably his biggest selling point. After all, anyone with a bit of suss would shrink from penning anything as embarrassing as ninety per cent of the lyrics on 'TPP'. Example: "These are no faces/This is my complex... Am I a photo?/I can't remember..." Very witty, Numan. Very very witty.

No, the signs point to old Gal being a bit of an intellectual earwig by anyone's standards, but this aspect is what causes him to have a bottle to be free from all yearnings of critical respect; that all rock/pop crossover acts so desperately try to maintain. He sincerely believes in that 1984/Modern Man pantomime and his introduction of rifling synthesizers has tapped a very, ah, rich vein.

The Pleasure Principle is pure Big Brother Status Quo.

The lyrics are rarely more than duosyllabic and, by picking out the middles of sentences, they try hard to remain obscure — not that they are about much in the first place. I imagine Gary would love to be the subject of large 'in-depth' features where he could be quizzed as to What It All Means, and then he could be even more tight-lipped and spin his bluff out even further.

But at the moment he seems to have forgotten that it is a bluff at all. Like, National Lampoon couldn't have got together a better 'futurepose' sleeve than this. (In which we see Gary Numan asking questions of a small red pyramid). No, our Gary is just a ham with a synthesizer and, by God, the British public does love a ham.

The music on this LP is easy and listenable — albeit not for too long — and the production — by Gazza himself — is excellent. Only 'Metal' (and didn'tcha know all the titles were but one word) is as good as 'Are Friends Electric?', but it will certainly be a number one record; its faultless inanity is irresistible.

It's ironic, too, that this is the chap who advertised to us all Don't be a dummy.

It seems to me that the instant Gary Numan wises up — well, that's when he stops selling records.

Danny Baker

Pic: Chris Harber

Numan: "Do you think this pose is intense enough?"

THE KINKSLow Budget (Arista)

The Kinks and the '70s have not enjoyed the most harmonious of relationships.

Things started off most tickety-boo with 1971's 'Muswell Hillbillies' (a.k.a. 'The Last Great Kinks Album') and thereafter stumbled into the most hideous series of debacles imaginable: all those El Dumbo concept albums and the most shambolic live gigs this side of Dunkirk. Ray Davies spent most of the '60s establishing a reputation as one of the UK's best and most prestigious songwriters and most of the '70s tearing it down.

As the decade zooms to a close, the chief Kink extracts the digit from wherever it had been lurking for the past eight years, injects a giant slug of silicone into his sagging reputation and whips out an entire long-playing record's worth of excellent songs.

It may come as a surprise to Modern Youth, who only know Davies from The Jam's version of 'David Watts', a few revived 45s and all those concept-epic, that old uncle Ray was into British concerns when most of his illustrious contemporaries (chaps like The Beatles, the Stones and even The Who) were getting religious and psychedelic and mid-Atlantic and generally embarrassing, that The Kinks eschewed elitism and technoflash, that Dave Davies still sounded like a garage guitarist even after he learned to play in tune, that The Kinks were one of the Great British Groups.

Gentle reader, can you believe an Excellent Kinks Album even after all these years? 'Low Budget' kicks off with a blaze of dirty guitar, a brisk, beshing tempo and Ray yelling incoherent abuse at some hapless third party who's probably himself: "You try so hard not to follow any trends, then you cry in your beer and say you've got no friends, but it's not the make-up or the way that you dress, it's not your appearance that they all detest, it's not your manners that you've got to improve — it's your attitude!"

An ode to positivism and awareness, 'Attitude' sets the tone for much of the album: the world is falling to bits, so let's all stop pissing about and bitching and whining and actually do something. In 'Misery' over on the second side, Ray delivers a message similar to that in John Cooper Clarke's 'I Don't Wanna Be Nice': "Until you learn to laugh you'll never come to any parties at my house/If you go on like this the only house you'll ever visit is the nut house... look in the mirror and don't take yourself so seriously." Advice of this nature would seem condescending if Davies hadn't so patently learned the lesson himself.

Elsewhere, he indulges in much timely parody: 'National Health' extracts much urine from the Stones' 'Shattered', dismisses valium as a cure for nervous tension and depression and ends up recommending exercise in much the same tone as he recommended "a nice cup of tea" on 'Muswell Hillbillies'. 'A Gallon Of Gas' is a nicely topical answer song to Chuck Berry's 'No Money Down' with the same bruising strutter of a riff. Ray's finally got that dream car, but it's rusting in his driveway for lack of fuel.

The Woody Allen Play (Ray as puzzled, inadequate little fellow in a big nasty world) is charmingly resurrected on 'Superman' (the Kinks' US disco hit with the 'Heart Of Glass' riff). Ray is 'a nine stone weakling with knobby knees': "I'd really like to change the world and save it from the mess it's in/I'm too weak, I'm so thin, I'd like to fly but I can't even swim."

On the title track, we find

High Merit

Ray as "a cut price person in a low budget world": his size 28 trousers that he brought in a sale are pinching his size 34 waist (gerawaywiyall), his cheap shoes pinch and, on 'Little Bit Of Emotion', he borrows a few of the changes from the Stones' 'Beast Of Burden' to intone a genuinely moving plea for people to face up to their own (and other people's) emotions. The discreet employment of a fake Cockney accent on the choruses heightens the impact by putting the chorus into implied inverted commas for ironic distance. We see.

Drummer Mick Avory thrashes away as artlessly as ever, Dave Davies still sounds as though he's plugged into the world's cheapest fuzz box, Jim Rodford has cleaned up the Kinks' traditionally dilapidated rhythm section no end and Ray Davies is writing great songs again. This album is a smash in the States (which doesn't necessarily make it a bad album). We must repeat: the first great Kinks album in eight years. To go even further: 'Low Budget' is actually worth spending money on, even in these El Skinto times. A miracle, yet.

Charles Shear Murray

PUNISHMENT OF LUXURY

Laughing Academy (United Artists)

Over the desolate nuclear landscapes, a desert of barren devastation, four animal-men come stumbling into view, the puppet-baboons of de-evolution — and all to grace this gorgeous gate-fold album cover.

Well, that and a bit more besides, because Punitlux (for it is they) are really trying to tell us something. And so remorselessly will they hammer their points home, such appalling artistic risks will they take, that this album debut turns out to be as exciting and rewarding a venture as it is ambitious.

But back to the baboons. They are, it seems, a symbol of the retrogressive, the most primitive and loathsome elements of Man. They co-exist with and complement their evolutionary opposites, the graduates of the Laughing Academy, their brains processed and neutralised beyond all natural feeling.

Simply put, Modern Man is half-slob and half-robot. Either way, he's easier to control — kept in line by the rationed gratification of his appetites (although denied understanding of genuine sensuality) and compensated for his powerlessness by pathetic delusions of racial and sexual mastery.

Why, I'll bet your toes are tapping already. Sure, it's 'pretentious', and it's 'un-rock'n'rolishly earnest' ('clicheé' and 'insulating' will undoubtedly spring to many minds also). But the sheer obsessive attack with which Punishment Of Luxury invest their project renders it a work of quite extraordinary power, and without a doubt deserving of respect.

Of course the band's always been likened to a radical fringe theatre group. And there's something very Devo-ish about their image and packaging (though not their message) in its subordination of individual identities to the dominating group 'concept'. All that could so easily act as dead weight. But it doesn't. The music just happens to be superb.

I suppose comparison is the cheapest form of description, so let's start with The Stranglers but not push it too far. Vocals are thrown from one to another (Giro, Bond, Luxury, Sekrit), so look to the instrumentation for a recognisable Punitlux sound: the edginess of the moog and string machine, the nervous urgency of the guitar, the gut-punching undertug from bass and drums.

Expect songs that shudder with disgust, optimism flickers, but only fitfully. 'The Message' and 'Radar Bug' aren't so successful — formula SF, more confused than convincing. 'British Baboon' and 'All White Jack' are put-downs, pure and simple, venomously effective.

'Funk Me' is raw, as bitter as 'Metropolis' or the near-savagery of 'Excess Bleeding Heart' — in contrast to the first and last tracks 'Puppet Life' and 'Laughing Academy', both pieces of sardonic pop.

'Obsession' is the crucial number, a fearsome account of sexual repression's worst effect, while 'Babalon' attempts no less than an epic exploration of the source and triumph of that repression, the triumph of Baboon over Babylon. But the war's not over yet.

Pause for breath. Well, I told you they took risks, didn't I? Go get a share in the rewards.

Paul Du Noyer

Angus Gave of Aswad Pic: Pennie Smith

Cool Running ↑

ASWAD Hulet (Groove)

It's easy to feel alienated by certain aspects of reggae, not the least of which is the idolatry afforded it by impressionable whites: 'Milky Bar Rastas' as the species is classified by John Lydon.

But does Rasta lyricism drag on a little too far? Do you pay your money and in choosing get wound up in a maze of shaky, meta-moralistic soothing and sayings?

Or again, would it be good enough to choose to recommend you to buy Aswad's 'Hulet' over Dylan's 'Slow Train' — an album and person one has demned considerably elsewhere — for no better reason than, well, it sounds groovier to me? No.

But then once you get past the pearly aesthetic gates — Aswad's is a sprightly dub album, Dylan's a dull American FM album — the answer is probably 'yes'. Religious interest in religious reggae is always spread wider; Aswad is about collectivism, not individual moralising. 'Jeh' is probably best seen by us unbelievers as a myth, a reflection in language of an element of our society in which a collective will, which has already been recognised and has to some extent actively asserted itself, begins to take some form.

In other words, Aswad's organisation is social; Dylan's is CBS.

Which leaves me, obliged by space and employment to evaluate the object in hand (not my typewriter): 'Hulet', British reggae group Aswad's second album.

As a reggae album, 'Hulet' is unusually listenable. As a British reggae album, it's produced by Michael Campbell and sounds seductively subtle, pleasantly adventurous — although it's true that individual musicians, especially Drumme, are often sacrificed too far in favour of Aswad's group sound. As the second Aswad album (coming so long after 1976's 'Aswad' on Island), it is or isn't 'Disappointing'.

If you know anything about them, then you don't need me to answer the last question; if you don't, it's even dafter.

Apart from a quote of pretty conventional guitar solos as per usual for reggae (and you can't go much for them in as nice a room as this), Aswad are certainly a more rhythmically exploratory outfit than most, and more worthwhile checking out than anything stemming from a British base I'd care to mention.

I can't stomach their preachy sleeve notes, because even if they are 'better' than most beat music Hard Sell graphics, it's still someone telling you the 'right' way to live.

Sure as Satan I'm not about to tell you the 'right' things to buy but, relatively speaking, Aswad are a front line act if you're looking for one.

Ian Penman

THIS HEAT This Heat (Piano)

For much of This Heat's album, it's difficult and at times impossible to decipher which instrument is playing what. This is some indication of their intentions, and the way This Heat set about realising those intentions.

Despite nominal instrumental credits of guitar and clarinet (Charles Bullen), percussion, keyboards and lead vocals (Charles Hayward), and bass and organ

Hot Water ↓

This Heat of themselves Pic: Lesley Evans

(Gareth Williams). This Heat effectively deal in sounds, not instruments. For my part, I think they're innocent of such accusations of irrelevance and irresponsibility. The end — this album, for now — more than justifies the means, exonerating them from charges of dilettantism dabbling precisely because the stakes are so high: it's either out there or nowhere, and the greater part of 'This Heat' is definitely out there, diligently restructuring musical values left, right and centre.

The album is not without its weak spots, of course, but side one is high on perfect. The high-pitched itchy babble of 'Testcard' on the run-in groove is shockingly, abruptly obliterated by the entry of 'Horizontal Hold', a cross between a snorting, bellowing bull and an express steam train whose obvious points of reference are 'Lark's Tongues'—period Crimao and the Can of 'Landed'. After an equally abrupt, painfully sifted mid-section, the main riff re-enters modified by some intense rhythm guitar, building to a climax of guitar and organ breaks — the former a bizarre balance of logic and illogic, the latter murderously aggressive.

After the sheer power and exhilaration of 'Horizontal Hold', the utter despair of 'Not Waving' comes as an emotional sucker-punch: meandering, helpless organ and clarinet sounds seemingly suspended in space resolve into an almost unbearably slow, haunting lament, with Hayward's Wyatt-esque vocals hitting just the right tone of vulnerable dignity and resignation.

Passing by the metallic ring of 'Water' and interlocking Afro-rhythms of 'Twilight Furniture' which complete the side, I'll skip to side two's most satisfying pieces, '24 Track Loop' and 'Fall Of Saigon'.

'24 Track Loop' is literally that, a tape-loop whose tracks are dubbed in and out; it's a basic cycle of which is a kind of shuffling dance rhythm. Continuing on where JA producers leave off, the mixing desk is used here both as an instrument and a compositional tool: the dub technique isn't just an effect or treatment ladled willy-nilly onto a finished piece, but a constructive force.

'The Fall Of Saigon', which closes the album, is another This Heat classic and probably (via John Peel) their most well-known piece. Stately and mournful, with a texture like grainy morocco book-leather, it tells the sad and slightly humorous tale of how the American Embassy staff, under siege in Saigon, ate their pet cat. This Heat's relentlessly Gothic, belated memorial service climaxes with a fittingly feline, tortured guitar passage which metamorphoses finally into the run-out groove reprise of 'Testcard', like a TV reminder to switch off your set.

'This Heat' is a good album, at times a great one, always interesting and more often than not enjoyable. For a debut, it displays a staggering range of future possibilities, new directions to follow up. And although undeniably uneasy listening — tense, nerve-wracking, downright morbid in places — it rebukes quite soundly those oft-levelled accusations of coldness. On the contrary, This Heat are probably one of the most emotional rock groups of all time.

It's been worth waiting for.

Andy Gill

SQUEEZE SLAP & TICKLE

THE NEW SINGLE

GET IT AND YOU'LL TELL ALL YOUR FRIENDS
AVAILABLE IN A FULL COLOUR SLEEVE
FIRST 50,000 IN RED VINYL

ROSE ROYCE
Rainbow Connection IV
(Whitfield)

TEDDY PENDERGRASS
Teddy (Philadelphia Int.)

Time is tight so let's not beat about the bush: does the new Rose Royce album have a potential hit on it or does it not? It does not.

Pop's got an even shorter memory than rock. In Rose Royce's game you're only ever as good as your last single, and their unashamedly commercial aim creates its own criteria, which they met on their last album but fall far short of here. And nothing withers so fast as music that tries to be commercial and, even on its own terms, fails. It works about as well as a car without wheels.

In the driver's seat of this unhappy contraption is Norman Whitfield, who co-wrote a song called 'I Heard It Through The Grapevine' and single-handedly invented symphonic soul psychedelia with The Temptations. But the bubblegum social commentary of 'Papa Was A Rolling Stone' and his masterpiece, 'Ball Of Confusion', eventually gave way to his current vehicles, The Undisputed Truth and Rose Royce, out there shaking their space-suited money-makers on the big time soul tour circuit. Rose Royce's angle is butt-jam-packed variety. The rainbow of the title and the prism on the cover allude to the contents: a ballad here, some heavy funk there, an instrumental, some disco, some more funky stuff. As a commercial fail-safe it plays safe and fails.

None of the slow cuts measure up to 'Love Don't Live Here Anymore', despite liberal use of the syndrome (whose irritating little bleep is the sound of escapism today, from disco to Star Wars to electronic games. . .) and all of the 'funk' cuts borrow heavily from the Brides Of Funkenstein, The Ohio Players and Ian Dury's mainman, Bootsy Collins. Though it's nowhere as incisive as the song he wrote for Steward, 'Which Way Is Up?', some of Whitfield's anti-Superfly propaganda crops up on 'You Can't Run From Yourself' along with a dose of the fancy keyboard work that on 'Pazazz' provides the record's one profitable interlude.

Teddy, the solo album by Harold Melvin And The Blue

Notes former lead singer that's doing some serious banking business Stateside, seeks to appeal on another level entirely.

This is the sound of bourgeois black America today, up from the ghetto and into a Brownstone: smooth, tailored, sassy, sophisticated and supposedly sexy (by the standards of a society that makes sexiness the prerogative of the affluent). This is the new black chic (pun intended). If Whitfield really wanted to point the finger this is where he should point it; this is the new Superfly — not beating whitey by staying outside his game, but beating whitey in it.

I have nothing against that as such, it's just I can't stand to see people waste their lives trying to live up to whatever cultural model is currently being peddled.

And I can't believe anybody could take Teddy Pendergrass seriously as he flashes the diamond and silk on the cover and sings his seduction suite — a side-long action narrative in which Teddy effects the pick up at the disco ('You say your car's right outside?') and then takes the lucky thing home for a shower and rub down with hot oils (I kid not) before he gives her his special treat, all delivered in husky, self-assured tones to the most pillow-soft sounds Philly can muster. But then my circumstances are a million miles away from those of the people who are buying Teddy Pendergrass. This is probably their wish fulfillment. I wish them luck.

On a strictly musical level 'Teddy' well nigh represents the peak of the Philly sound: lush and soaring, cut so crisp and clean and so smooth it just melts in your mouth, or into your lifestyle. Side two hots up the tempo, aims four-square at the dancefloor rather than the waterbed, and provides one stone Philly gem to rank alongside 'Bad Luck' in the shape of 'Do Me'. The innuendo is about as subtle as an air raid but, oh, what a riff!

Get it in perspective though. 'Teddy' was originally made about six years ago by someone else and made much better at that. The real title of this album is 'Let's Get It On Part Two'.

Paul Rambali

ROOT BOY SLIM AND THE SEX CHANGE BAND
W/ THE ROOTETTES
Zoom (Illegal)

Straight from supporting the Blockheads around the nation — calculated sex and drugs and rock and roll.

Root Boy Slim's conservative collection of greasy anthems to excess and easy anarchy is a sorry triumph of mannerism over ideas: old jokes and parody without discretion. That the songs smear and growl from affected belching to the flimsy grousing and leave impressions of nothing but bouncy blandness is indication of the failure of the music; it hopes to be gross, searing and comically vulgar, but is nothing but an urbane, fastidious, continually anti-climactic distant cousin of over-the-top American 'chock' rock as in Dr. Hook and Black Oak Arkansas.

The sobbing, complaining Root Boy disastrously recalls the daintiest parts of such natural heroes as Dr. John, Beefheart and Meatloaf and the defective ultra-light relief of Barry White, Jim Dandy and the lovely Todd Rundgren. He's nice where he should be nasty, courteous when he should be uncouth and always boring when he needs to be brutal, bizarre and ludicrous. Hardly the stuff that cuts are made of.

The Sex Change Band are compliant, theatrical experts at cranking out slickly ribald, swamp-blotted, sax-scarred R&B-ish masquerades — always smart, never rowdy, with the flourishes just so — which are decorated with well-mannered measures of country, soul, cool, whimsy or whatever it is the banal words require to spruce up their tone.

So . . . songs about love and drugs and war and rock and sleep and sex and food and roll somewhere on the road again. 'World War III' is spunky, the inevitable dance caper 'Do The Gator' is frisky. 'The Loneliest Room In The World' is muppet-melancholic. 'Ignite It' pretends to reggae a little — some cha-ch! A friend termed 'Dare To Be Gay' as the 'Glad-To-Be-Gay' for fannies, and that'll do. 'Dozin' And Droolin' sounds so much like a song called 'Dozin' and Droolin' was surely meant to sound it's almost funny. 'Express Train' shuts everything down, charging into the distance in a suitably frenzied state. Are you ready for more?

No. This rigidly eccentric entertainment falls closer to Las Vegas condescension than even the most preposterous, flawed Zappa burlesque. Sex and drugs and rock and roll with no passion, no panic and no invention. How phoney do you need it to be?

Paul Morley

MAX MIDDLETON AND ROBERT AHWAI
Another Sleeper (Harvest Fusion)
DICK MORRISSEY AND JIM MULLEN
Cape Wrath (Harvest Fusion)
When Max Middleton popped up in Jeff Beck's early '70s comeback band, he was clearly a more inventive if less rocky pianist than his predecessor, Nicky Hopkins. Tracks like 'Raynes Park Blues' and 'Definitely Maybe' showed him to have a fine sense of drama and it was no surprise when he re-appeared on 'Blow By Blow'. Beck's sophisto-funk blockbuster.

'Another Sleeper' and 'Cape Wrath', lacking a soloist with a fraction of the ex-Yardbird's stinging and unpredictability, reveal the genre in all its rapid glossiness. Common to both albums are similar covers, Middleton, Ahwai (guitar), the Kuma Harada/Richard Bailey rhythm section and a numbing lack of excitement.

The Middleton/Ahwai effort is the more animated, bass and drums getting a fair slice of the action, but potentially memorable themes like 'Dance By The Light Of The Moon' and 'Plane Sailing' are squandered in passionless soloing.

Morrissey and Mullen appear to be aiming straight for Radio Two, as their utterly docile versions of 'Love Don't Live Here Anymore' (not included here) and Bill Withers' 'Lovely Day' suggest. Swamped by some of the lushest string arrangements (Middleton) since Judy Collins' 'Wild Flowers', only the pianist's 'Bristol Boogie' raises a canter.

I normally find music impossible to work or think to. With these albums, I had no trouble at all.

Harry George

ROY A LONEY AND THE PHANTOM MOVERS
Out After Dark
(Solid Smoke)

I like American pop music and I love Roy A. Loney's new record, his first major achievement since the demise of 'Teenage Head'. And not because it's obscure or independent or San Franciscan.

Perhaps instinct says this Phantom Move is too left-field to attract the quantity of punters that keep say, The Knack in starched shirts and tweezers, but I'm on Loney's case for the simple reason that this mutha cranks up the adrenalin with real rock and roll, with smart, witty, defined rockabilly.

All the principle parts are the same; it isn't breath-takingly 'modern' but it has a heart and some soul and the catalyst can sing.

Max Bell

At its best 'Out After Dark' approaches classic American flash filigree with Loney and former Groovies Danny Mihm and James Ferrell assisted in their search for the flame by the like-minded Maurice Tani and Larry Lea. The results are fun too, scarred, drunken and brutal slices of whipped, freewheeling garage dementia. Loney's originals are genuine, mojo testaments. 'Used Hoodoo' and 'Phantom Mover' are the kind of finished electric parties that The Gramps mangle on the boards but may never commit to plastic.

Roy A. Loney doesn't want to bind you with fantasy or pubescent obsession and his album isn't the pabulum of contented eternal youth.

There's 'Rockin' In The Graveyard' and the legacy of life in 'Scum City'. The back line is dirty surf, a witch doctor prescription guaranteed to lift the lid off your coffin — and don't think that clove of garlic will help.

Indeed, comparing this biscuit to recent Groovies' releases goes all the way to showing where the F.G.'s went wrong. Loney has retained the atmosphere, the chops and the vocal idiosyncrasies that made 'Teenage Head' such a vital experience, that made you swear the Groovies were unsurpassed kings in the greased-down, boathel-rocking ring, and he hasn't been content to rest there.

Fundamentally this is brilliance in spades. Roy A. Loney is still getting stung by the concentrated power of his muse. If you ever got bitten by that bug, you'll know how to get the antidote.

Good rockin' tonight, listen to the man.

LAMONT DOZIER: Bittersweet (Warner Brothers) 'Bittersweet' lives up to its title with the expected equation of rhetorical boogie dictum and the services of almost every sessioner currently resident in El Lay, tho' dozens of vintage Lamont will yearn for something less predictably clear cut. The man steps out with a soulful brand of disco which just about disturbs the salt in the brain pan and definitely activates the toes, it isn't Motown, but what the hell?

BILLY PAUL: First Class (Philadelphia International). The Sound of Philadelphia gets into line again after the hideously barren mid-period when the likes of MFSL ruled the airwaves. I'm sure Billy Paul clutes his messages for commercial reasons, but he can still rough up the easy listening with an individual vocal panache (I see ere). Great music for getting up to. Guaranteed to burn the toast.

AVIARY: Avirey (Epic). Pomposus dinosaurs aiming for the megastadia jocular without one halfway original idea. The people responsible for this brand of over produced yewish should be shot on sight. Worse than Yes and post-Gabriel Genesis combined (if that's possible).

JIM CAPALDI: Electric Nights (Polydor). Drummers with inflated egos cashing in on every fat extant must be amongst the saddest forms of human existence — especially when they're chiefly remembered for holding down the back seat in one of GB's erstwhile great bands. I'm sure that Jim Capaldi, just to take a name at random, could never stoop so low. But I could be wrong.

THE DARK RIDGE BOYS: Have Arrived (MCA). Only far long suffering advocates of all things Nashville. I can listen to it for the singing and 'stuff', but it's so wet

The Mincer
Max Bell has the dubious honour

you could wash your feet in it. Pass.

MARSHALL TUCKER BAND: Running Like The Wind (Capricorn). Stations off to MTB for forcing Knabworth promoter Fred Benmister to consult solicitors when the Southern boys withdrew from his Zap bash. Musically the Marshalls continue to mope meandering country boogie by glossing jazzily. Their live energy, particularly the pleasantness lavished up from the brain valve pickers Toy Caldwell and George McCordie, and the sultry reed work of Jerry Eubanks, fails to transfer to disc, even with Stewart Levine at the controls. Shame.

BO HANSSON: Lord of the Rings (Charisma). At last! The release of the record of the cartoon of the book. Everybody's Tolkien at me but this deadly Hobbit-forming otherworld evocation passes unnoticed. As Swedish Pink Floyd goes, this is marginally more tedious than the original scores. According to the cover note Bo recorded hours of (unreleased) material with the late Jimi Hendrix. Funny that.

JENNIFER WARNES: Shot Through The Heart (Arista). Variety is the spice of life but the cook has to be good. Jennifer Warnes in predictably sub-Joni, circa 'Blue' period, although her choice of material leaves everything to be desired. Produced by Rob 'Rick Danko' Fraboni.

PAUL WILLIAMS: A Little On The Windy Side (Portrait). Paul Williams is the funny little fat barrel who made Phantom Of The Paradise (Brian De Palma) such an enjoyable celluloid satire on music biz corruption. A lunctic, wit and inspired amateur, Williams occasionally writes a good number (such as 'Fill Your Heart' with Briff Rose, 'Out In The Country', 'We've Only Just Begun', etc) and makes a saving grace of melody and pathos. Keep your money though.

THE NEVILLE BROTHERS: The Neville Brothers (Capitol). I've saved the best for last and so have the Neville Brothers (ex Mothers, Toussaint connexion, New Orleans). First impressions left me cold but the punch is inaudible. Produced by Jack Nitzsche in Bogalusa, LA (that's Louisiana, sir). The Nevilles' direction is recognisably deep, swamp funk, but listen to those black harmonies get to grips with 'Washable Silks' (John Hiatt) or Charles Neville's immaculate 'Speed Of Light', a certain smash hit '12' if Capitol show some programming class. Sleeper soul album of the year, y'all.

Pinnacle Distribution's Fastest Sellers!

THE QUADS

'There must be Thousands'/
'You've Gotta Jive'
BIG BEAR BB 23

THE REZILLOS

'I can't Stand my Baby'/
'I wanna be Your Man'
SENSIBLE FAB 1

In stock now at local retail outlets!

PRINT

An epic illustration from M. Druillet's Yragael

YRAGAEI

By Philip Druillet
(Dragon's Dream)

It's inevitable that a country so enamoured of the images and mythology of rock should take to the graphic aspects of that particular demi-monde. Because in France they don't speak English, but a picture tells the same story in any language.

French rockers both on the boards and in the stalls have a notorious preoccupation with style. Punk circa '77 produced a spate of bands utterly committed to urban commando chic and quite oblivious to actual content. The truly iconoclastic moves were being made elsewhere — in the French comic medium in fact — by the likes of the Bazooka art team (who designed the NME French rock special early this year) and by Les Humanoïdes Associés, formed by Philip Druillet, Moebius, Jean Pierre Dionnet and Bernard Farkas in December of '74 as a comic production house. Their first project was the magazine

Metal Mutant, eventually published in America as Heavy Metal.

France already had a tradition of pulp output when the U.S. underground comic arrived in the '60s, and the French took this American cultural import to their bosom at once. So successful were they that much of the fantasy art produced in the States nowadays owes more than a passing glance to the work of French illustrators. Working in an underground medium, these illustrators took the sort of liberties their Yankee counterparts, working under the constraint of the big dime-store comics houses, couldn't.

At the vanguard of this were the Associated Humanoids, whose most determined explorer of the visual frontier was and is Philip Druillet. A cult figure, Druillet lives in a Paris apartment with walls covered by the fruits of his strange twilight.

Both these books were first published in France around '76, in larger editions with a French text that's turned unbelievably purple in translation. But their point is the pictures, not so much the words. Druillet's obsessional delineation of worlds stranded in a hinterland of myth and science knows few equals in the field, and the sheer scale and detail of his imagination is without doubt the mark of the driven.

People who pursue their imagination to its limits always have it in them to cast a wide spell of fascination. But ultimately you either dig it or you don't, for reasons that are perfectly clear to those who do and perfectly baffling to those who don't. Come to think of it, I once met a man who didn't understand The Ramones. I told him there was nothing to understand but

Paul Rambali

Cosmic Comix & Phonebooks

DIRECTORY 1979

By John Cooper Clarke
(Omnibus Press £2.50)

The moment Cooper Clarke's 'Disguise In Love' album appeared without an attendant lyric-sheet, it was inevitable that some kind of compilation was soon to follow. Directory 1979 is the first to surface. The fact that it contains nothing off his recent live '10' 'Walking Back To Happiness' suggests that others are in the pipeline. I can only hope they reflect an ounce more imagination than this one.

The book's dreadful punk-chic composition and exorbitant mark-up prove it's aimed squarely for the coffee-table market where it will doubtless serve as a tea tray/conversation piece for as long as is considered hip.

Anyone who's genuinely interested in JCC will find they're already familiar with its contents (the 'Disguise' album's entire tracklist) and also the majority of its photos (which include some excellent portraits from the files of Kevin Cummins, Tom Sheehan and Paul Slattery).

Part of the problem is that to a large extent Clarke's poems aren't intended to be read. He's quite obviously a 'live' poet; without the force of his own delivery and the stamp of all its idiosyncrasies a fair portion of his lyrics are little more than metrically pleasing.

So, plainly, the book's only means of adding any perspective to the poems lies in its illustrations, and rather than risk confusing our personal impressions by using specific drawings, Directory confines itself entirely to photos. These are either hung at irritating angles beside cheap geometric artwork, or else make simplicistic overtures to their adjacent lyrics — 'Health Fanatic' has Clarke posed beneath a sign that reads "Gymnastic Equipment".

The overall layout fares little better. It stretches a very sketchy 'directory' theme to rapidly tedious limits by overprinting throughout on pages from a phone-book — headed with Cooper or Clarke — with all bar the names crossed out.

The sole decent entry in the entire book is an extract from his (as yet unpublished) semi-fictional autobiography Ten Years In An Open Necked Shirt. This hilarious chunk of prose traces the development of the beat poet Otto Drekschasse, the bastard offspring of a lard mogul, from his natal gropings with language up to the day he changes his name to John Cooper Clarke.

Otto, it reflects, then "issued the slang anthems of the zip age in the desperate esperanto of bop."

After flicking through Directory 1979, you'd hardly have guessed it.

Mark Ellen

THE GREAT BRITISH EXPORT

THE KINKS LOW BUDGET

Current Chart Positions in America:

BILLBOARD: No. 11 with a bullet (last week 12).

CASHBOX: No. 17 with a bullet (last week 22).

RECORD WORLD: No. 23 with a bullet (last week 30).

LOW BUDGET · THE KINKS · NEW ALBUM

Album: SPART 1099. Cassette: TCART 1099.

"MOVING PICTURES" THE KINKS NEW SINGLE. ARIST 300.

ARISTA

marquee

90 Wardour St., W.1 01-437 6603

OPEN EVERY NIGHT FROM 7.30 PM TO 11.30 PM
REDUCED ADMISSION FOR STUDENTS AND MILITARY

Thurs 8th Sept (Adm £1.00) WARM JETS Plus Support + Ian Fleming	Mon 10th Sept (Adm £1.50) MOD NIGHT WITH THE CHORDS Plus Support + Jerry Floyd
Fri 7th Sept (Adm £1.50) GLORIA MUNDI Plus Guests + Ian Fleming	Tues 11th Sept (Adm £1.25) SHAKE Ex-Rezillos Plus Guests + Joe Lung
Sat 8th Sept STAR JETS Plus X-Effects + Ian Fleming	Wed 12th Sept (Adm £1.75) MERTON PARKAS Small Hour + Jerry Floyd
Sun 9th Sept (Adm £1.00) YOUNG ONES Plus Support + Mandy H	Thurs 12th Sept (Adm £1.25) COWBOY INTERNATIONAL Plus Support + Ian Fleming

HAMBURGERS AND OTHER HOT AND COLD SNACKS AVAILABLE

THE NASHVILLE ROOM

FULLERS TRADITIONAL ALES

Thursday September 6th THE ROYAL RASSES + King Sounds & The Israelites	£1.25
Friday September 7th PROTEX + Innocent	£1.50
Saturday September 8th THE PIRANHAS + Woody & The Splinters	£1.50
Sunday September 9th MADNESS + Beatty	£1.50
Monday September 10th SHAKE + Support	£1.00
Tuesday September 11th MERGER + Support	£1.25
Thursday September 12th LOCAL OPERATOR + The Paranoids	£1.00

D.J. Mandy Hermitage Thursday, Friday, & Saturday

CORNER CROMWELL ROAD/NORTH END ROW W14
Adjacent West Kensington Tube Tel. 01-503 6071

HOPE & ANCHOR UPPER STREET ISLINGTON, N.1

Thursday September 6th INMATES	£1	Monday September 10th THE PIRANHAS	£1.25
Friday September 7th INMATES	£1	Tuesday September 11th ROY ST. JOHN	75p
Saturday September 8th THE CLEANERS	£1	Wednesday September 12th THE PHOTOS	75p
Sunday September 9th THE PIRANHAS	£1.25	Thursday September 13th TOURS	75p

CAROLINE Roadshow

Friday September 7th Institute, Braintree, Essex	Thursday September 13th Leas Cliff Hall, Folkestone, Kent.
Saturday September 8th Town Hall, Chatham, Kent.	Friday September 14th Chancellor Hall, CHELMSFORD, ESSEX.
Wednesday September 12th Shrimpers Club, Southend United F.C., Victoria Ave., Southend.	Saturday September 15th CASTLE HALL, HERTFORDSHIRE.

Promoters for Bookings Phone 0621-783229

Unembarrassed D.J.'s will enact your own fantasies before your very eyes — N.M.E. Doors open 8 pm. Bar Admission £1.50

D.J.'s Rob Eden! Robbie Day! Harvey the Rabbit!

NINA HAGEN BAND

THE PACK

THE MO DETTES

LYCEUM

SUNDAY 9th SEPTEMBER at 7-30

TICKETS £3.50 (incl. VAT) ADVANCE LYCEUM BOX OFFICE TEL: 458 3715
LONDON THEATRE BOOKINGS: SHAFTESBURY AVE. TEL: 438 2331, PLYMOUTH BOX OFFICE TEL: 349 2245
20 BUCKINGHAM GARDENS, 5, TOTTENHAM RD., 3RD FLOOR, 458 5055

MUSIC MACHINE

Playing times 10.30 pm and midnight

CAMDEN HIGH ST OFF. ROBINSON STREET TUBE STATION

Wednesday September 5th SQUIRE V.I.P.s + THE LEGEND	£1.20	Thursday September 6th BUZZARDS + ROGER RUSKIN SPEAR + THE KINETIC WARDROBES	£1.70
Friday September 7th PHOTO'S + TOUR DE FORCE	£2.20	Saturday September 8th IRON MAIDEN + QUARTZ + MAGNUM FORCE D.J. WER KAY	£2.20
Sunday September 9th CAROL GRIMES SWEET F.A. + AGENT	£2.20	Monday September 10th SIXATIONS + THE MONITORS	£1.20
Tuesday September 11th TENNIS SHOES + ONE EYED JACKS	£1.20	Wednesday September 12th PHOTO'S + TOUR DE FORCE	£1.20

CLINT EASTWOOD + TRINITY + FREEDOM FIGHTERS

TO BE RECORDED BY JAMAICAN SOUNDS
ADVANCE TICKETS £2.50 FROM BOX OFFICE.

LICENSED BARS - LIVE MUSIC - DANCING
3PM - 2 AM MONDAY TO SATURDAY
OVER 18s ONLY

THE DAZZLERS

NEW SINGLE: 'FEELING FREE' CB 338

ON TOUR

Manchester Apollo	Sept. 11 (With XTC/The Yachts)
Sheffield Top Rank	12
Wolverhampton Civic	13
Peterborough Wyrina	14
Guildford Civic	15
London Rainbow	17
Bristol Colston Hall	18
Edinburgh Odeon	20
Newcastle Mayfair	21

LIMITED EDITION PICTURE SLEEVE

DINGWALLS

RHYTHM 'N' BOOZE

THURS

THE PIRANHAS

SUN 8.00 NIGHT WITH

THE UNTOUCHABLES

WED 12 FROM JAMAICA - FIRST EVER U.K. SHOW

JAH LLOYD

WITH CREATION REBEL

THURS 13 FOR NIGHT & ONE NIGHT ONLY

THE ADVERTS

CAMDEN LOCK, CHALK FARM ROAD, LONDON NW1 01-267 4867

THE BRIDGE HOUSE

23 BARKING ROAD, CANNING TOWN, E16

Thursday September 6th FAMOUS MYSTERY BAND come early - limited seats	75p	Monday September 10th SQUIRE + S.W.1	50p
Friday September 7th SCHOOL BULLIES + COCKNEY REJECTS	75p	Tuesday September 11th CATCH + TOUCH	40p
Saturday September 8th YOUNG ONES + WALKING WOUNDED	60p	Wednesday September 12th BOMBSHELL	50p
Sunday September 9th TOUR DE FORCE + NEVER NEVER BAND	40p	Thursday September 13th PHOTO'S + CLONES	50p

100 CLUB

100 OXFORD STREET
LONDON WEST ONE

The Best
Live Reggae

Thursday
September 6th

TRADITION

Thursday September 13th

GROUNATION

DUKE OF LANCASTER

Approach Road, NEW BARNET
(beside 34 New Barnet)

Thursday September 6th RARE BLOOD	Friday September 7th LAMMAGYRE
Saturday September 8th UNEXPLAINED	Sunday September 9th CLIENTELLE
Tuesday September 10th WILD LIFE dog watch

Thursday September 6th

Windsor Castle,
Harrow Road, W.9.
Admission 50p

Debut Album 'Penfriend' available now on Bridge House Records
01-476 2889

BERND WEBER AND THE LAST RESORT

101 CLUB, CLAPHAM
SATURDAY 8th. 9.30

THE Venue

100 VICTORIA ST. SW1
(opp Victoria Tube station)
01-304 5500

Tickets from The Venue Box Office and the Ticket Machine in the Virgin
Magasine, 14 Oxford Street, W.1.
Postal Applications (P.O.s only) from
The Venue

Food, Drink, Live Bands, Dancing
7pm-3am.

JAMES BROWN REVUE

Two shows each night, 9 pm & 11.30 pm, except Sunday 6 pm & 9 pm
£3.50 each night

Thursday September 13th

AFTER THE FIRE

FINGERPRINTZ + YOUNG ONES

Saturday September 15th-16th

BRAND X

£3.50 each night

Monday September 17th &
Tuesday September 18th

£3.50

JOHN STEWART

Wednesday September 19th-20th

RORY GALLAGHER

£3 each night

Friday September 21st

£3.50

GINGER BAKER N.N.G.

Saturday September 22nd

£3.25

CLIMAX BLUES BAND

NATIONWIDE GIG GUIDE

Thursday

Birmingham Mercat Cross: The Clinic
Birmingham Odeon: Rickie Lee Jones
Birmingham Railway Hotel: Orphan
Blackburn Cavendish: J.A.L.N. Band (for three days)

Bradford Maxims: T.C.O.J.
Brighton Buccaneer: Hollywood Wires
Bristol Crown Celler Bar: Scissor Fits
Burnwood Troubadour: The Amazing Dark Horses
Chesterfield Fusion Club: Carol Grimes Band

Cole Union Hotel: The Tunes
Darwen Union Reform Church: Direct Hits/Sweeney
Dunstable Queensway Hall: The Crusaders

Gloucester Leisure Centre: The Dooleys
Hayes (Middlesex): Adam & Eve: Small House/Squire
Hull Wellington Club: Butterflies
Keele University: Ricky Coof & The Icebergs

Lancaster No.12 Club: Art Failure/The Out/Gordon The Monon
Leeds Fun Club: Shake
Leeds Florde Green Hotel: Spyder Blues Band

Liverpool Eric's: The Not Sensibles/Vibrant Thigh/Property Of/Manchester Mekons
London Acton Kings Head: The Details
London Camden Dingwalls: The Pashas
London Clapham St. Anna's Hall: The Administrators/The Leopards
London Clapham 101 Club: David Blossie Band

London Covent Garden Rock Garden: Prolet/The Buffoons
London Crackers: The Invaders
London Deptford Albany Empire: Red Tape/The Subterraneans/The Leopards/Shoot Straight At Right Angles

London Holborn Bunters: Lip Service (for three days)
London Islington Hope & Anchor: The Innates
London Kennington The Cricketers: Lucy's Allstars

London Kensington De Villiers Bar: Gold Dust Twins
London Kensington The Nashville: The Reasas
London Knightsbridge Pizza on the Park: Martin Taylor & His Insects

London Leicester Sq. Notre Dame Hall: The Revillos/Another Pretty Face
London Marquee Club: Warm Jets
London Notting Hill Old Swan: Sister Ray
London Oxford St. 100 Club: Tradition
London Southgate Royalty Ballroom: Crazy Cavan & The Rhythm Rockers

London Tooting The Castle: The V.I.P.'s
London Victoria The Venue: James Brown Revue
London Waterloo Royal Victoria: Freddy's Feetwarmers

London W.1 Maunberry's: Andre De Shields
London WC1 New Marlin's Cave: Big Chief
Manchester The Factory: Toyah
Norwich Cromwell's: Revelation
Nottingham Hearty Good Fellow: Medium Medium

Nottingham Imperial Hotel: Gaffs
Oxford New Theatre: Nils Lofgren
Poynton Folk Club: Rosie Hardman
Preston Warehouse: The Accelerators
Ratford Porterhouse: The Chords
Rotherham Windmill Club: The Oaks
Sheffield Pantheons: Velled

Sheffield Racket
St. Albans Horn of Plenty: The OK Band

Friday

Aberdeen Capitol Theatre: Siouxsie & The Banshees/The Cure
Birmingham Serris Circus: Bright Eyes
Birmingham Bournebrook Hotel: Poison Girls/Au Pair
Birmingham Elizabethan Days: The Traitors

Birmingham Odeon: The Crusaders
Bournemouth Newdown Conservative Club: Ricki & The Cufflinks
Bradford St. George's Hall: Aswad/Misty/Bongo Danny Brighton Alhambra: Hollywood Wires
Brighton Leves Rd. Inn: Yekety Yek
Bridlington Spa Royal Hall: Boney M
Bromley William Morris Hall: The Switch
Burnwood Troubadour: Firefly

Burton-on-Trent 76 Club: Toyah
Canconk The Forum: Ocean Boulevard
Cardiff Grassroots Coffee Bar: Lee All-Use/Amus/Animal
Chiddingfold Six Balls: The Oaks
Coventry Ryton Bridge: Streetwise
Cromer West Hutton Pavilion: The Parasnoids

THE CIRCUIT COMES ALIVE

AS USUAL, the summer has produced a crop of major festivals and one-off events, but the tour circuit has fallen into the doldrums. With the exception of Ian Dury, the big names have been off the road — resting, recording or travelling abroad — in preparation for the inevitable autumn onslaught. And although we're still officially in summer, the autumn bonanza gets under way this week, as the first batch of major attractions sets out. These are the ones to watch for during the seven days covered by this Gig Guide...

SILOUSIE & THE BANSHEES, who've already played a few warm-up gigs, start their tour proper at Aberdeen (Friday), Glasgow (Saturday), Dunfermline (Sunday) and Bradford (Wednesday), with The Cure supporting... THE POLICE begin another extensive outing at Derby (Monday) and Blackburn (Tuesday)... XTC have strong support from both The Yachts and The Dazzlers when they kick off at Manchester (Tuesday) and Sheffield (Wednesday)...

THE RUTS open another long itinerary at Dudley (Saturday) and Newport (Wednesday)... BRAND X start a mini-tour in Guildford on Wednesday... and DARTS play their initial three gigs at Cardiff (Monday), Swansea (Tuesday) and Bristol (Wednesday).

From America, THE CRUSADERS dispense their particular brand of street life at Dunstable (Thursday), Birmingham (Friday), London Hammersmith (Saturday, Sunday and Monday), Bristol (Tuesday) and Liverpool (Wednesday)... NILS LOFGREN, fresh from Wembley and Reading, sets out on the rounds at Oxford (Thursday), Sheffield (Friday), Manchester (Monday), Edinburgh (Tuesday) and Glasgow (Wednesday)... RICKIE LEE JONES wraps up her brief visit at Birmingham (Thursday) and London (Sunday)... and LOUDON WAINWRIGHT embarks on a long concert series at London (Sunday) and Oxford (Wednesday).

BILLY PRESTON

Among the one-off shows of special interest this week are THE SKIDS at Edinburgh Odeon (Friday) as the final event in the city's rock festival... BILLY PRESTON and BILLY PAUL sharing the honours at London's Hammersmith Odeon, also on Friday... The remarkable NINA HAGEN and her band in concert at London Lyceum on Sunday... and the ambitious Science Fiction Music Festival at Leeds Queens Hall over the weekend, with a strong bill topped by PUBLIC IMAGE LTD (Saturday) and HAWKWIND (Sunday).

And this, of course, is only the beginning! Autumn — traditionally the high point of the gig calendar — will have much, much more to offer in the coming weeks.

NINA HAGEN

NEW YORK GIG GUIDE

MONDAY (10): Max's Kansas City — New York Niggers; Bottom Line — Tracey Nelson / Johnny Cougar (2 days); My Father's Place — The Medications; Capitol (Passaic, NJ) — The Who (2 days); LoneStar — Bob Diddley (4 days); Tramps — Robert Kraft and Ivory Coast; Westchester Theatre — Don Rickles (one week); Minskoff Theatre — Shirley Bassey (2 weeks); Carnegie Hall — Liza Minnelli (5 days).

TUESDAY (11): Palladium — Dire Straits / Ian Gomm; Village Vanguard — Bill Evans (one week); Max's Kansas City — N. Dodo / Frank Mayo & The Decols / The Flux; Madison Square Gardens — Bee Gees (2 days); My Father's Place — Caroline Mas; U.S. Blues (Roslyn) — Dizzy Gillespie; Kenny's Castaways — Paul Siebel (3 days).

WEDNESDAY (12): Bradleys — Lou Levy; Tramps — Roosevelt Sykes (2 days); Max's Kansas City — Panic Squad / Roni & The Jitters / The Sinatras.

THURSDAY (13): Madison Square Garden — The Who (also 14th, 16th, 17th & 18th); Radio City Music Hall — Roy Charles; Capitol (Passaic, N.J.) — Dire Straits; Max's Kansas City — Loudocor / Pasco Rowe / Mando Dahl.

FRIDAY (14): Bottom Line — The Dillards (2 days); My Father's Place — New Riders Of The Purple Sage (2 days); Symphony Hall — James Blood Oliver / Amira Baraka; Avery Fisher Hall — Dionne Warwick; Club 57 — John Cale & Niko / Cheap Perfume (2 days); Max's Kansas City — The Senders / Robert Ross.

SATURDAY (15): Symphony Hall (Newark) — Stephanie Mills; Capitol (Passaic, N.J.) — The Police; Max's Kansas City — Buzz & The Flyers / The Zantees / Justin Trouble / Fast Floyd & The Famous Firebirds.

SUNDAY (16): U.S. Blues (Roslyn) — Albert King; The Cookery — Alberto Hunter; Max's Kansas City — Lyn Todd & Puroide / Maroons.

Ratford Porterhouse: The Starjets/The Diks
Rotherham Arts Centre: de tian
Scarborough Pantheons: The Invaders
Sheffield City Hall: Nils Lofgren
Southend Minerva: Wild Angels
Sunderland Empire Theatre: The Dooleys
Turo Punchbowl & Ladle: Lip Service

Saturday

Aylesbury Friars: Madness
Barrow Maxims: T.C.O.J.
Bicester Nowhere Club: The Shattered Dolls
Birmingham Hopwood Caravan Club: Eddie Ryder

Birmingham Mercat Cross: Strider
Birmingham Railway Hotel: School Sports
Blackburn Fleece Hotel: Direct Hits
Brighton (The) Adur: Tokyo Rose
Bognor Ocean Bars: High Flames
Bournemouth Newdown Labour Club: Bournes

Bristol Crown Celler Bar: Sneak Preview
Bristol Granary: Cowboys International
Cardiff Grassroots Coffee Bar: Cross-wired/Feedback
Carshalton St. Helier Arms: Johnny & The Jailbirds

Cheltenham Whitcombe Lodge: Echo & The Bunnymen/Teardrop Explodes
Coventry Lancaster Polytechnic: The Urge
Dudley J.B.'s Club: The Ruts

Eastbourne Lottbridge Arms: Hollywood Wires
Featherstone Ravens Social Club: Little Tony & The Tennessee Rebels
Glasgow Apollo Centre: Siouxsie & The Banshees/The Cure

Hull New Theatre: The Dooleys
Leeds Queens Hall: "Futurama 79" with Public Image Limited/Punkishment Of Lust/Invaders/Cabaret /Vokals/Jay Division/Orchestral Manoeuvres In The Dark/Essential Logic/Prag Voo/A Certain Ratio/Spizz Energy/The Edge/The Expatriates/Stranger And Fiction/The Void/Persad (also on Sunday)

Liverpool Eric's: Shake/Nightmares In Wax
London Camden Dingwalls: Jackie Lyn-ton's N.D. Band/The Remoulds

London Clapham 101 Club: Bernard Weber & The Last Resort/Earthbound
London Covent Garden Rock Garden: Charles Anley
London Hackney Adam & Eve: Yekety Yek
London Hammersmith Odeon: The Crusaders
London Harrow Rd. Windsor Castle: Dog Watch
London Holborn Conway Hall: Poison Girls/Cross/Rondos
London Islington Hope & Anchor: The Cleaners
London Kennington The Nashville: The Pashas/Woody & The Splinters
London Marquee Club: The Starjets
London Peckham Newlands Tavern: Billy Karloff Band
London Plumstead Green Man: The Switch
London Royal Festival Hall: Dana
London Stoke Newington Pegasus: Big Chief
London Upstairs at Ronnie Scott's: Match
London Victoria The Venue: James Brown Revue
London Waterloo The Wellington: Squire Manchester Apollo Theatre: Boney M
Mantleway Cross Hands Inn: Crazy Cavan & The Rhythm Rockers
Middlebrough Rock Garden: The Chords
Milton Keynes Concert Bowl: Hi-Tension/Chairman Of The Board/Diamond Dektar/Gene Washington Jimmy James
Nottingham Bowl Club: Quanz
Nottingham Sandpiper: Teat
Oxford New Theatre: The Shadows
Ratford Porterhouse: Budgie
Rhyl Little Theatre: Amsterdam
South Fulcrum Centre: Mud
Southern Top Alex: The Steve Hooker Band
Widemouth Manor: Lip Service
Wishaw Crown Hotel (lunchtime): The Pests

Sunday

Birmingham Odeon: The Shadows
Birmingham Railway Hotel: Prime Donna
Birmingham Shirley Red Lion: The Crack
Bishops Cleeve Triad Leisure Centre: Anthony Heapy/Mad Chateaux/The Rave/Travis/The Newtown
Neurates/The Redwells
Blackburn Stars Hall: Direct Hits
Bradford Alhambra Theatre: The Dooleys
Bradford Princetown: Spider
Bromley The Northover (lunchtime): Bill
Bromley & Ian Ellis
Chester Smarmy: The Invaders
Coventry The Climax: The Nostoc Band
Croydon Greyhound: Flying Saucers
Dunfermline Kinema: Siouxsie & The Banshees/The Cure
Eastbourne Congress Theatre: Dana
Hawick Kings Head: T.C.O.J.
Jockdale Grey Topper: Toyah
Leeds Florde Green Hotel: The E.F. Band
Leeds Queens Hall: "Futurama 79" with Hawkwind / The Only Ones / Simple Minds / Fisher-Z / Monochrome Set / Teardrop Explodes / Echo & The Bunnymen / Scritti Politti / Manicured Noise / Agony Column / Gotham City Jazzband / Screens / ER2 / Robert Calvert / Roger Ruskin Spear
Leeds Greenwood Club: Clem Curtis & The Foundations
Leeds Royal Park Hotel: Windows
Liverpool Princes Park (RAR): Exodus /Sadista /Staters/Kali-Kur/Equal Temperament/Panama Steel Band etc.
London Battersea Nags Head: Jugular Vein
London Camden Dingwalls: The Untouchables
London Canning Town Bridge House: Remus Under Boulevard
London Charing Cross Duke of Buckingham: The Invisibles (for four days)
London Clapham 101 Club: The Crooks
London Covent Garden Rock Garden: White Magic London Drury Lane Theatre Royal: Loudon Wainwright
London Hammersmith Odeon: The Crusaders
London Islington Hope & Anchor: The Pashas
London Kennington The Cricketers: The OK Band
London Kensington The Nashville: Mad-ness/Beatty
London Oxford St. 100 Club: Danny Adler Band
London Peckham Montpelier (lunchtime): Blue Moon
London Royal Festival Hall: Sarah Vaughan

CONTINUES OVER

XTC

STUART ANDERSON of Skids

THE RUTS

London Strand Lyceum Ballroom: Nine Hagen Band/The Pack/The Modettes
 London Tottenham Court Road Dominion Theatre: Rickie Lee Jones
 London Victoria The Venue: James Brown Revue
 London W.1 Portman Hotel (lunchtime): Pete Allen Jazzmen
 Newcastle Red House: Hot Snax
 Newquay Central Hotel: The Winners
 Poole Brewers Arms: Rikki & The Cufinks
 Portsmouth Guildhall: Sonny M
 Poynton Folk Centre: The Waterstones
 Reading Cherry's Wine Bar: El Seven
 Walsall Dirty Duck (lunchtime): The Amazing Dark Horse
 Worthing Connaught Theatre: Heathcliff

Darwen Albion Hotel: Direct Hits
 Derby Assembly Rooms: The Police
 Ilford Cauliflower Hotel: Original East Side Stompers
 Leeds Florida Green Hotel: Crazy Caves & The Rhythm Rockers
 Leeds Victoria Hotel: Clem Curtis & The Foundations
 Leicester Bailey's: High Flames (for a week)
 Liverpool The Crown: The Clerks
 London Bermondsey Apples & Pears: Stan's Blues Band
 London Camden Dingwalls Red Tape/Billy Karloff Band/Shades
 London Camden Music Machine: Quarts
 London Canning Town Bridge House: Squire
 London Clapham Two Brewers: First Aid
 London Clapham 101 Club: The Thrillers
 London Covent Garden Rock Garden: Skin Deep
 London Hammersmith Odeon: The Crusaders
 London Islington Hope & Anchor: The Prunehes
 London Kensington The Nashville: Shake
 London Knightsbridge Plaza on the Park: Al Hail
 London Marquee Club: The Chords
 London N.4 The Stapleton: The OK Band

London Putney Half Moon: Bert Jansch
 London Putney Star & Garter: Penny Royal
 London Royal Festival Hall: Sarah Vaughan
 London W.1 Mauniberry's: Sarah Bryn
 London W.14 The Kensington: London Zoo
 Manchester Apollo Theatre: Nils Lofgren
 Nottingham Imperial Hotel: Gwaihir
 Rayleigh Cross: Yelkety Yak
 Southend Zebra: Musiciana Workshop
 Wolverhampton Grand Theatre: "Rocky Horror Show" (for a week)
 Worcester Hidesway: Ricky Cool & The Icebergs

London Camden Brecknock: First Aid
 London Camden Dingwalls: Kevin Berich Express
 London Clapham 101 Club: The Blunters
 London Covent Garden Rock Garden: Small Hours
 London Harrow Rd. Windsor Castle: Col our Vision
 London Islington Hope & Anchor: Roy St. John & The Huskies
 London Kensington The Nashville: Manger
 London Manor Park Three Rabbits: Jerry The Ferret
 London Old Kent Road Thomas A'Beckett: Stan's Blues Band
 London Royal Festival Hall: Nina Simone
 London Soho Pize Express: Brian Lemon
 London Tooting The Castle: The V.I.P.'s
 London W.1 Mauniberry's: Little Nell (for three days)
 Manchester Apollo Theatre: XTC/The Yachts/The Dazzlers
 Newcastle Casablanca Club: Clem Curtis & The Foundations
 Norwich Boogie House: Philip Rambow
 Sheffield Limit Club: The Chords
 Swansea Brangwyn Hall: Darts
 Walsall Dirty Duck: The Amazing Dark Horse

Wednesday

Birmingham Barrel Organ: Bruja
 Birmingham Railway Hotel: Rainmaker
 Birmingham (Vardley) Bulla Head: Ross Bradford St. George's Hall: Siouxsie & The Banshees/The Cure
 Brighton Buccaneer: Tokyo Rose
 Bristol Colston Hall: Darts
 Bristol Snuffys: The Doobies (for four days)
 Carlisle St. Helier Arms: Charlie Grace/Dynamite
 Cheltenham Plough Inn: Roadsters
 Derby Assembly Hall: The Shadows
 Glasgow Apollo Centre: Nils Lofgren
 Guildford Civic Hall: Brand X
 High Wycombe Naga Head: Philip Rambow
 Hulme The Eagle: The Swinging Lampshades
 Leeds Wags Wine Bar: Snyder Blues Band
 Liverpool Empire Theatre: The Crusaders
 London Camden Brecknock: Geneva
 London Camden Dingwalls: Jah Lloyd/Creation Rebel
 London Camden Music Machine: Tennis Shoes
 London Clapham 101 Club: Stan's Blues Band/The Works
 London Ealing Ye Old Hatter: A.D. 1964
 London Fulham Greyhound: Lip Service
 London Hammersmith The Swan: Squire
 London Islington Hope & Anchor: The Photos
 London Knightsbridge The Grove: Free Beer
 London Marquee Club: The Merton Parkes
 London N.4 The Stapleton: Jerry The Ferret
 London Peckham Montpelier: Blue Moon
 London Putney Star & Garter: Dana Simmonds & Greg's Folk & Blues Showcase
 London Royal Festival Hall: Nina Simone
 London Southall White Hart: Flying Saucers
 London Stoke Newington Pegasus: The Reet
 London Wimbledon F.C. Nelson's Club: Roy St. John & The Huskies
 London W.14 Cock Tavern: Trimmer & Jenkins
 Manchester (Ashton) Birch Hotel: Any Trouble
 Newcastle-under-Lyme Arts Centre: Amphitug Band
 Newport (Gwent) Stowaway: The Ruts
 Nottingham Hearty Good Fellow: Gwaihir
 Nottingham Imperial Hotel: Some Chicken
 Oxford New Theatre: Loudon Wainwright
 Sheffield Top Rank: XTC/The Yachts/The Dazzlers
 South Woodford Railway Bell: Original East Side Stompers
 Stockton Bentley's: Clem Curtis & The Foundations
 Upminster New Windmill Club: The Prunehes
 York Pop Club: The Chords

Monday

Birkenhead Hamilton Club: Mud
 Birmingham Barrel Organ: Freebird
 Birmingham Night Out: Mary Wilson (for a week)
 Birmingham Railway Hotel: The Out
 Brighton Jantinson's: Gene Washington (for a week)
 Bristol Colston Hall: The Shadows
 Cardiff Sophia Gardens: Darts
 Carlisle Flaps: T.C.O.J.

Darwen Albion Hotel: Direct Hits
 Derby Assembly Rooms: The Police
 Ilford Cauliflower Hotel: Original East Side Stompers
 Leeds Florida Green Hotel: Crazy Caves & The Rhythm Rockers
 Leeds Victoria Hotel: Clem Curtis & The Foundations
 Leicester Bailey's: High Flames (for a week)
 Liverpool The Crown: The Clerks
 London Bermondsey Apples & Pears: Stan's Blues Band
 London Camden Dingwalls Red Tape/Billy Karloff Band/Shades
 London Camden Music Machine: Quarts
 London Canning Town Bridge House: Squire
 London Clapham Two Brewers: First Aid
 London Clapham 101 Club: The Thrillers
 London Covent Garden Rock Garden: Skin Deep
 London Hammersmith Odeon: The Crusaders
 London Islington Hope & Anchor: The Prunehes
 London Kensington The Nashville: Shake
 London Knightsbridge Plaza on the Park: Al Hail
 London Marquee Club: The Chords
 London N.4 The Stapleton: The OK Band

Tuesday

Birmingham Fighting Cocks: Bruja
 Birmingham Market Cross: Killer
 Birmingham Railway Hotel: Speed Limit
 Bishops Stortford Triad Leisure Centre: The E.F. Band
 Blackburn King George's Hall: The Police
 Bristol Colston Hall: The Crusaders
 Dunstable Queensway Hall: Inner Circle
 Edinburgh Usher Hall: Nils Lofgren
 Leicester De Montfort Hall: The Shadows

London Camden Brecknock: First Aid
 London Camden Dingwalls: Kevin Berich Express
 London Clapham 101 Club: The Blunters
 London Covent Garden Rock Garden: Small Hours
 London Harrow Rd. Windsor Castle: Col our Vision
 London Islington Hope & Anchor: Roy St. John & The Huskies
 London Kensington The Nashville: Manger
 London Manor Park Three Rabbits: Jerry The Ferret
 London Old Kent Road Thomas A'Beckett: Stan's Blues Band
 London Royal Festival Hall: Nina Simone
 London Soho Pize Express: Brian Lemon
 London Tooting The Castle: The V.I.P.'s
 London W.1 Mauniberry's: Little Nell (for three days)
 Manchester Apollo Theatre: XTC/The Yachts/The Dazzlers
 Newcastle Casablanca Club: Clem Curtis & The Foundations
 Norwich Boogie House: Philip Rambow
 Sheffield Limit Club: The Chords
 Swansea Brangwyn Hall: Darts
 Walsall Dirty Duck: The Amazing Dark Horse

GIG GUIDE

Siouxsie & Banshees hitting the gig trail

COMPILED BY DEREK JOHNSON

WINDSOR CASTLE
309 HARROW ROAD, W9

Thurs 8th ZORRO + Chaset 10p Adm	Mon 10th WORLD SERVICE + Support Free
Fri 11th V.I.P.'s + Statics 10p Adm	Tues 11th ANDY BECK BAND + Support Free
Sat 12th DOGWATCH + Support 10p Adm	Wed 12th KAY RUSSIA + Support Free
Sun 13th FOUR KINGS Free

Open till 12pm: Mon-Sat. Close 10.30pm Sun
 Wesbourne Park Tube 01-226 8400

Simply . . . What's Happening

THE SLITS
DON CHERRY
plus
HAPPY HOUSE
PRINCE HAMMER
plus
CREATION REBEL

September

Monday 17th Leicester De Montford Hall
 Tuesday 18th Oxford New Theatre
 Wednesday 19th Birmingham Digbeth Civic Hall
 Thursday 20th Bradford St. George's Hall
 Friday 21st Coventry The Coventry Theatre
 Sunday 23rd Newcastle City Hall
 Monday 24th Edinburgh The Astoria
 Tuesday 25th Manchester Apollo
 Wednesday 26th Glasgow City Hall
 Thursday 27th Liverpool Eric's
 Friday 28th London The Rainbow

FRIARS AT THE MAXWELL HALL
AYLESBURY

Saturday September 8th 7.00 pm

SECRET AFFAIR
MADNESS
SQUIRE
THE STOAWAYS

A.C. Sound and vision

Tickets 210p from Earm Records Aylesbury, Scorpions High Wycombe, Hairport, Amersham, Old Town Records, Hemel Hempstead, F.L. Moore Blatchley, Dunstable & Luton, H-Vu Buckingham, or 210p at door on night.
 Life membership 25p. New Times

PTARMIGAN

You've read the film!
 You've heard the book!
 Now, live for the first time on the London Stage. The Band Everybody ought to be talking about!

UPSTAIRS AT RONNIE SCOTT'S
WEDNESDAY SEPT. 12th
 Can you afford not to be there?
 (Band Enquiries Emsworth 3537)

TO PLACE YOUR ADS IN THE LIVE PAGE

RING 01-261 6153

ROCK EVERY THURSDAY NIGHT at The Lobster Factory

THE ADAM & EVE
830 Uxbridge Road, Hayes, Middlesex
 London's Newest Rock Venue
 DINEST CASABLINGTON BEERS

Amazing Mod Double Bill! Thursday September 8th SMALL HOURS + SQUIRE Admission £1.00	Thursday September 13th Contemporary Psychedelic TIGER ASHBY + SAD AMONG STRANGERS Admission £1.00
Thursday September 20th THE SATELLITES + LONDON PRIDE Industrial R&B Admission £1.00	Thursday September 27th Gadget Rock from Cambridge DEVICE + THE DESKS Admission £1.00

W. 195, 207 buses stop nearby
 All Events Start 7.30 pm. Bar till 11 pm

THE BRECKNOCK
227 CAMDEN ROAD N.W.1

Sept 5th NOTHING FANCY
 Sept 6th SCARECROWS
 Sept 7th THE FEATURES
 Sept 8th URCHIN
 Sept 9th am AGENTS, pm OUTSIDERS
 Sept 10th FAST EXIT
 Sept 11th FIRST AID
 Sept 12th GENEVA

THE LAMBRETTAS

Headlining at

Greyhound, Fulham Palace Road, Thursday 6th September
 Marquee, Saturday, 22nd September
 Bridge House, Canning Town, Monday 24th September
 Enquiries 01-749-2082. Pete.

LIVE!!!

Twist & Shout presents

SQUIRE

Thursday 6th, The Adam & Eve, Uxbridge
Road, Hayes, with The Small House.
Saturday 8th, Friars, Aylesbury (with Secret Affair + Madness)
Monday 10th, Bridgehouse, Caning Town.
Wednesday 12th, The Swan, Hammermith.

Enquiries Squire 01-223 6481

V.I.Ps

Thursday 6th, The Castle, Tooting Broadway.
Friday 7th, The Windsor Castle, Harrow Road.
Tuesday 11th, The Castle, Tooting
Broadway.

Enquiries Nimcoch 01-584 7584
01-581 0978

Surrealist Acid Punk from Hounslow

SCISSOR FITS

LIVE

Friday September 7th, 8.30pm.

at

Rock Garden, Covent Garden

Supporting

THE SOFT BOYS

Bring your own washing machine!

App's Failure

IN BRITAIN

THE PORTERHOUSE

20 Carolgate, Retford, Notts.
Tel. 0777 704981

Thursday September 6th

THE CHORDS + KILLOMETERS

Friday September 7th

STARJETS + THE DIKS

Saturday September 8th

BUDGIE + TRICKSTER

Klingons

Support (in playing order)

Urban Decay, The Others, The Mox

Date: Sept 8th, Saturday Time: 7-11pm Adm: 75p Venue: Waterloo action Centre, 14 Bayfield Rd, (opposite the Old Vic)

LIP SERVICE

SEPTEMBER DATES

6th, 7th, 8th
BUNTERS (HOLBORN)
12th, THE GREYHOUND
14th, THE MUSIC MACHINE
15th, 101 CLUB
19th, GOLDEN LION
24th, ROCK GARDEN

CONTACT 458-1525

ALAN STUART MANAGEMENT

PRESENTS

THE FEATURES

BRECKNOCK
CAMDEN

FRIDAY 7th SEPTEMBER

CLIFF RICHARD

CLIFF RICHARD Rock 'N' Roll Juvenile (EMI)

THE SHADOWS String Of Hits (EMI)

If life does not begin at 40, at least it continues. Cliff Richard's name is synonymous with mellifluousness, longevity and reaction (not to mention family entertainment) and — lot — the old fellow can be found at or near the top of the charts demonstrating that the physique and pipes are still functioning a'en as we speak.

'Rock 'N' Roll Juvenile', released to ride the wave created by 'We Don't Even Talk Any More' (chucked onto the album as an afterthought, according to the liner note) is an attempt to re-establish Cliff Richard's rock and roll credibility. The type of clothes Cliff inhabited at the dusk of the '50s are now hot threads for chic chaps once again, which is why the cover artwork gives us Cliff in creepers, Stratoaster and Johnson & Johnson suit rocking it up like a good 'un (even though his awful haircut mars the effect more than somewhat).

'Rock 'N' Roll Juvenile' is a slick, tuneful assimilation of styles established by people who played music like they meant it. The end result is the right notes and riffs (can you imagine a Cliff Richard track that cops the riff from Lou Reed's 'Sweet Jane'? It's here, fairly near one that borrows from 'Spanish Stroll') played with the wrong feel. Just as the cover is an earnestly self-conscious attempt to recapture the joys of an innocent, unselfconscious youth, the music (expertly supplied by loads of highly musical studio players) is too smooth and comfy to achieve the desired effect.

We'll mention Christianity once, because the album only mentions Christianity once, significantly enough on the composition by The Artists which gives the album its title, and also because Bob Dylan has — ahem — ripped off Cliff's whole stance. Cliff's alliance with the forces of repression led him to condemn the punk bands when they were fresh and upsetting and then espouse them when a few of them made it into the mainstream, just as he slagged all the doper weird-out bands of the late '60s until ditto. Here, his natural conservatism bars him forever from that charmed rock and roll never-neverland he's trying so hard to evoke: rock and roll without that sweet and sour scent of illicit pleasures is just cant and mush, which (in its most professional and well-meant incarnation) is what we got here.

Albums Extra

This man has a lovely voice, but he's too careful. The album tells white lies even when it thinks it's speaking the truth. His nice-glass borders on the obnoxious.

Meanwhile, Cliff's old comrades return with an album that is literally beneath contempt. Songs like 'Baker Street', 'Heart Of Glass', 'You're The One That I Want' and 'Bright Eyes' are herein rendered with a passion and drive that makes the muzak at Waterloo Station sound like the first Clash album by comparison.

'String Of Hits' contains a lot of carefully placed notes and no music whatsoever. It's the music they play in the cinemas that show the films you don't want to see. If Hank Marvin has some music in him that he actually wants to play, then I'd like to hear him play it. On this album, the musicians sound almost as bored as the listeners. If it was ten times better, it'd still be horrid. The Shadows should count themselves lucky that they have an audience who wouldn't want it any other way.

Charles Shear Murray

A LIVERPOOL ALBUM Street To Street (Open Eye)

As Liverpool finally wakes up and waves a healthy, inviting hello, 'Street To Street' is an appropriate and enterprising representation of a city's music falling into place.

It is an LP of half-formed ideas, smiles, mistakes and comradeship, the sort of diary LP the early days of Manchester, Leeds, Sheffield, etc, missed out on. It's based on a loose spirit of discovery, determination, and good humour. It contains songs from rare survivors, memories, groups of friends, hopefuls, temporaries and even once or twice from bands who hope to be around in a year's time.

'Street To Street' logically commences with the now completely legendary Big In Japan twirling through the sturdy instrumental 'Match Of The Day'.

Big In Japan (I fell in love with them) were Liverpool's infamous punky link with the dauntlessly decadent Deaf School, and one of the few signs that the city was breathing two years ago — if it hadn't have been for Eric's, who would have spared Liverpool even a thought?

Echo And The Bunnymen, who are represented by 'Monkeys', have baked David Bowie, Neil Young, Arthur Lee and a blankety-blank drum machine into a ridiculously appetising pie. I still don't know whether to laugh or cry — and are one of Liverpool's current top five; the other are Teardrop Explodes, Levi And The Chameleons, Pink Military and Orchestral Manoeuvres In The Dark.

Orchestral Manoeuvres are featured from the days when they were The Id with 'Julia's Song', which remains in their repertoire. It is notable for revealing yet again the exquisite OMITD sense of melody and delicacy of detail. If the Id/OMITD and Echo And The Bunnymen represent the new strength of Liverpool Music, its real beginning in fact, The Accelerators are lone survivors from the murky weak period some two years ago. Big In Japan were the darlings, but The Accelerators were undoubtedly the untold uglies — a role they eventually relished and tried to exploit. Their 'Radio Blues' is no surprise: decent dance music, duff lyrics, and it doesn't affect the soft spot I have for these enduring, totally committed worthies.

Between the drab days of The Accelerators and Big In Japan (The Yachts took an easy way out) and the recent boom, the apparent lack of activity was misleading. Nothing appeared to be happening.

The rest of the music on 'Street To Street' is essentially music from these underground times: Liverpool people looking for a way out. Jacqui and Jeanette perform '194 Radio City' and sound attractively like poppy Slapp Happy and are perhaps never to be heard of again.

Modern Eon ('Benched Down/70s '60s') and Activity Minimal ('Television Game') are two units looking for a sound and are not as developed as either OMITD or the Bunnymen. Dead Trout ('The Arab') are a flexible collection of philosophers captured happily indulging themselves. Tontrix have split, leaving behind, not inconsiderably, the careful 'Screen Love'. Machine, with 'Crisis', and Fun, with 'I Heard You Call My Name', are the least inventive or lighthearted of the contributors, but at least they're not monotonous.

The frail 'I Don't Want To Go Bald' from The Moderates could well bring tears to your eyes.

'Street To Street', along with a complete set of Zoo singles, will supply a comprehensive history of modern Liverpool rock. But not for long.

Paul Marley

TRIBESMAN

Street Level (Boa)

British and Jamaican reggae keep moving further apart; UK-grown Lovers Rock frequently outsells JA product and is beginning to dent the national pop charts whilst the steady march forward of Brit reggae bands has little counterpart back in the Isle of Springs.

Tribesman are in many ways typical of the many UK reggae bands grown up in the last couple of years — large and inclined to sprawling, hard working, playing often to mixed or white audiences, good for small venues but sometimes found wanting at larger concerts, apparently unlikely to cut a disc that will outstrip the Jamaican 'real thing' either artistically or commercially.

All of which is slightly unfair since the ten-piece London group have begun to find a real identity recently, and certainly their live shows are among the most consistently enjoyable on the UK circuit.

'Street Level', their debut for Dave Goodman's The Label, features much of their live material given a very crisp polished production by keyboardman Skito; Third World could clearly figure as an influence. The choice of material shows a similar bias, focusing on the downbeat, funk-tinged, soul-vocaled side of their repertoire, closer to The Commodores than Greg Isaacs.

I suppose I'd take it in preference to its Yankee counterpart (and I'm sure many Brit sophisticates will), but I'd rather take a trip to the Gents and get back in time for the rock-outs: 'The Tribe', an anti-Babylonian lyric laced over an appealing keyboard riff, and 'Finsbury Park', a halting paean to the unlikelyst of London meccas. 'Don't come alive till it's after dark' — take your pick from Irish pubs, The Arsenal, The Rainbow, blues parties. When 'Father Come' fails somewhere between the two up and down tempo modes, with keyboard hookline again prominent.

A worthy debut LP.

Neil Spencer

IMPORTS

Doncha just love bad records? I mean really bad records, slop-rock two and a half chord tricks, tasteless death shots, garageland thumps and psychedelic wonders.

If you do, then the 'Pebbles' series being put out by the Aussie BFD label should have you dribbling fit to bust. For, in the wake of the first two volumes, garageland obscurities glowing appraised by the suitably unstable Paul Rambali some weeks ago, comes Vol 3 'The Acid Gallery', a magnificent monstrosity which foists itself as 'A mind blowing collection of 18 demented classics from the psychedelic '60s'. One glimpse of the track listing and any accredited bad record nut has to be absolutely sold, for it contains 'I'm Allergic To Flowers' by Jefferson Handkerchief, 'The Reality of (Air) Fried Borsk' by The Driving Stupid, 'Like A Dribbling Fram' by The Race Marbles, and a whole host of similar hallucinogenic hall of famers.

'Dribbling Fram' is a grade A classic. A dippy 'Like A Rolling Stone' mickay-take that emanates from Canada, it opens with the line 'I used to have these Argy socks' and then, amid gasps of anemic mouth-harp, it disintegrates into a babbling miscellany of totally nonsensical rhymes as the vocalist heads for the padded cell.

Driving Stupid's 'Horror Asparagus Stories' almost lets the side down by commencing in acceptable fashion, with vocalese lines being spun out over a 'I'm A Man' type riff. But this, of course, is just too good to last and the side eventually goes the same way as 'Fram', with the vocalist mumbling 'They're coming to take me away', 'Swami', on which one William Penn

V emotes 'I went to see the Swami and tried to wake him from his trance — but he was stoned instead', revives memories of rage-rock, while 'Let's Take A Trip', a monologue penned by Kim Fowley (who else?) and performed by LA DJ Godfrey is so abysmally pathetic that it qualifies for instant replay and honours. Better than 'Jonathan King's Greatest Hits' (even if I can't locate one of the listed tracks), 'Pebbles Vol. 3' is awesome in its disposability. Now if I could only locate Vol 4, a surfing compilation which is said to include 'London's A Lonely Town' performed by Dave Edmunds, Terry Melcher, Curt Becker and Bruce Johnstone, then my joy would be complete.

Morningstar, who have an album called 'Venue' out on Columbia, are just another one of those Stateside outfits that provide overlaid guitars, heap up the harmonies and sing about hard roads to travel. All very professional I suppose, but passe as spats at liften.

Finally, a mention of Elizabeth Sarnaclough, whom I once remember seeing on an OGWT devoted to the wonders of the Bearsville label. But though Liz is still on the label, she'd seem to be ruling the fact, for her latest offering is called 'Hi', which is not meant so much as a greeting but serves rather as an indication as to the type of sound emanating from the record's grooves. For the disc was produced and engineered by Willie Mitchell at the Hi Studio, and all Memphis plus Paul Butterfield would appear to have been involved on the sessions.

Next week, in a reciprocal mood, maybe we'll see Al Green wax the Todd Rundgren joke-book. But only if he's desperate.

Fred Dellar

LIVE!

It didn't rain on Van, but he pissed all over Edinburgh

Van Morrison ■ Talking Heads ■ Chieftains ■ Squeeze
The Undertones ■ Steel Pulse ■ Valves ■ Cheetahs

Words: Paul Morley

Pix: Jill Furmanovsky

The close of the outdoor pop festival season was an under-attended, poorly located and insignificant collection of modern contradictions. The soul of the party was Irish; the light heart was from East London; there was a dash of anguish from America; and the joke of the day was Irish too.

On paper the festival was a good assortment of individualists, and the event deserved to succeed. But in a ramshackle, miserable show jumping/go-kart venue, with the stage set awkwardly in a corner and the weather relentlessly grey, only occasionally did the day transcend the dreary.

The organisers needed a good 20,000 to break even. I'll be generous and estimate the gathering at about 8,000. The organisation was faultless, facilities excellent — and that the day fell a long way short of being memorable yet again emphasises the redundancy of such uncomfortable gatherings.

I'm saying bye bye to open air rock'n'roll, and I'm not going back.

The specific 'failure' of Talking Heads is symbolic of one of the major drawbacks of such occasions: enjoyment at festivals has to be one dimensional and superficial.

Talking Heads' troubled, troubling demands dissolved into the early evening dusk, leaving appealing impressions of a bent and worrying rock music that has interpretive integrity, but the brusque David Byrne probably jolted the cheerful audience as little as Squeeze's unashamedly frivolous pop muzak.

There is very little chance of any 'art' at a pop festival.

In the open air, where concentration and sympathy are problematical, Squeeze's self-conscious goodtime bravado and Talking Heads' self-conscious suppositional provocation are both ultimately nothing more than a jumble of bland, stable, if aggressively projected, noises. One jumble just happens to be a little more conventional than the other.

It's almost impossible to criticise, more pertinently analyse, the tense combination of language, logic, lurch and dry dignity of Talking Heads in an environment where any cutting edges are inevitably eroded. It's an insult all round really, but a few assumptions can be made.

Talking Heads are a classic synergic pop group. If the exacting effect of frontman Byrne's sombre silhouettes and fragments of interior monologue are lost in the winds (as they obviously were), the Heads are nowhere near a whole group. They're resourceful musical strategists, but because of the innate action of the music and the lyrics, if the words are lost then everything becomes trivial and we're left to trip with the astringent shade and desolation of empty musical gestures.

The fastidious Heads' performance verged on the comic; which is tragic.

If on record Talking Heads are a vacant or vital puzzle (and I'm sitting on the fence about that) which needs to be put together, then in these circumstances a majority of the puzzle is missing. What's left is a discriminating, disorientating dance band putting it all together with pointless menace.

The insecurity and vulnerability of Byrne's safety-valve observations can be vaguely sensed through the music's development and his performance. But Talking Heads under grey clouds is not about mischievous provocation and precarious admonishment, but moderately venturesome entertainment.

So they played well, and probably didn't do their callow enigma image too much of a disservice.

They practically rose to a 'Love Building Goes To Fire', 'Psycho Killer' climax; were cheered back to titillate some more; and ended with a truly devastating 'Take Me To The River'. They came, they poised, they refreshed. This is not really enough, but all they could hope for. No chill, no confusion.

Birthday boy Van Morrison stubbornly (factically, if you're being nice) stipulated that he would not be preceded by a rock group. The homeless failed weirdo wait considers Talking Heads to be a rock group, and would not have his ventilated fusion music stained by the close proximity of a 'dirtier' ventilated fusion music.

This man is uncompromising to the bitter end. And this fussiness was the cause of the mystery guest farce. Morrison wanted a solo troubadour to calm the audience before his arrival. The choice was Loudon Wainwright, but he pulled out a long time ago. Wild guesses included Nils Lofgren and even The Clash, but there was no replacement.

On the day, with manipulation and an 'explanation' about The Chieftains being delayed on their flight from Dublin, the Irish folk semi-circle ended up setting the scene for Morrison.

It was the endearing eccentricity and precious expertise of the Irish traditionalists that won them their warm appreciation.

The mood was right. Bonfires were lit, haphazard jigs danced and people wandered through the night towards the fairground and food stalls.

The complex but undemanding, instrumentals are perfect unorthodox easy listening for the open air. The vitality and purity of their unaffected, uncompromising music is contagious (at least in small doses). People happily fell for their cosy oddity, their fiddling and twiddling. It proved that the best, the only festival music, is full of gusto and freshness; for dancing to, smiling at and feeling warm with. That means it must be either totally familiar or luxuriously melodic and consistent. Of course, darkness always helps.

Twenty minute opening spots by local boys The Chestnuts and The Valve were swallowed up by the early afternoon daylight and not helped by the drabness of the venue and the dribbling arrival of spectators.

The Chestnuts were gruff and hardworking riffmen. The Valves huffed and puffed through a farewell performance that had been forced on them by unsavoury anonymity, alas doing nothing that indicated they'd be missed.

Steel Pulse brought colour to the mid-afternoon haze and achieved easy rapport with the steadily growing audience.

In a way, their rigorous, dogmatic music was an equally accessible delicacy as The Chieftains': unorthodox for many, and unquestionably sweet in small doses. Anyway, it noticeably and expectedly went chukka chukka, up and down, up and down, on and on, on and on. This was the kind of fluid familiarity that people needed. Pulse encored... up and down, on and on.

Vocalist of the day was undoubtedly The Undertones' Fergal Sharkey. He sang not with the axiomatic dependability of Van Morrison, but with a massive and indisputable soulfulness. Sharkey is one of the great white blues singers, and it's this unacknowledged virtue — one of a multitude of subtle factors — that makes The Undertones one of the most exciting and uplifting groups of all time.

Analysis of The Undertones'

Irish Van's guard of honour protects him from terrorist photographers.

evasive genius is always a fumble through contentious claims about their intuitive sensitivity and of their inspiration that is given voracious thrust because of their root motivation. Lovers of the group do tend to get intractably irrational about what they feel is The Greatness. It's so hard to explain; The Undertones are a true enigma.

Ramones droolers, if forced, can quite rationally point to that group's comic, implicitly, critical quality. With The Undertones any humour isn't as obvious or clumsily logic-chopping.

There is a lot of melancholy and barely disguised disenchantment. The overriding sense of optimism comes from the lads' irrepressible surprise and delight to be doing what they're doing. And it's this joyous urgency which blends so magically with the sadness and the naivety, the intolerance and the humility, the cheek and the love.

The Undertones play sad-eyed, glad-hearted urchin blues music with the passionate drive of demons.

I'm familiar with the group's endlessly inspiring songs; they made me dance and smile, warmed my heart, moistened my eyes. How could they not be my favourite group of the day, the year, all time?

I was not the only one to think so. They could have played all day and all night, and no one would have complained — least of all The Undertones.

Probably Van Morrison would have been a little unsettled, but then he made an unforgivable mistake by not arriving early and experiencing some life.

The Undertones are in some ways unknowing children of The Beatles, who properly explored the theoretical groundwork for all modern rock from avant garde to AOR. The Undertones are improving the awesome, elusive pop vivacity of the early Beatles.

Squeeze are deliberate craftsmen and much more aware of any Beatles inheritance. Their modern setting is not exhilarating; they're buoyant, debonair and confident traditionalist who appreciate the values of wit, economy and insistence.

Hard workers, they rely on the enlivening stimulation of their more skilfully constructed songs to win favour. They do write good songs, but they also write plain ones. They have difficulty sustaining interest and often use the boogie way out.

For The Undertones, it comes so easy but they never sound casual; for Squeeze it's a lot harder and they can suffer for trying too hard and sound contrived. A classic juke box group they lack the individualism and immediacy of the greats.

Being carefree and enterprising chaps. Squeeze won their encores.

Later on in the night, the foreboding Van Morrison gloomily led a basic seven piece show band through restrained motions. His set had a graceful feeling of vulgarity, a sour sense of pointless functioning. It was sullen and obnoxiously smug, and for all this distressing.

I had decided that if Morrison failed to turn up to hear The Undertones I would lose a little bit of faith. But I was not expecting such a haggard, almost remorseful performance, which completely destroyed all my faith anyway.

There is still The Voice — now an isolated instrument. Tolerantly composed, it is not used to emote or enchant but merely to play around with. It sounds good, but closer to pleasant than rapturous. He was patronising more than possessed. God knows what I was expecting.

Looking stern and stoical, stuffed inelegantly into tight waistcoat and trousers, at times it seemed as though he was punishing himself out of some secret puritanical ritual. If he was forced to play for some mysterious reason, it would explain a lot.

Morrison's group were inevitably ultra-capable musicians who operated with strict perfection. The performances of old stand-bys David Hayes (bass), Peter Van Hooke (drums), Herbie Armstrong (guitars), Toni Marcus (violin), John Attman (bass), Pete Wingfield (keyboards) and Katie Kiasoon cannot of course be seriously faulted. They did their jobs with unflappable skill and sympathy.

The day's unambitious balance was a light and straight balm of comfortable jazz and fluid folk, flawlessly manicured and maintained, and often monotonously predictable. Even when it bit hard and jumped about it still sounded nonchalant.

All this is perfect for the frigid Morrison, who didn't really want to torture himself but just show off his voice.

He deftly eased through and around the frictionless mood music, singing not from the heart but moving automatically and undramatically to places he knows he can reach. It was a passive exhibition, not a sentimental celebration.

Morrison's dour intimidation and severely chaste presence lacks dignity; and when the voice isn't giving that to him it's a sorry, hollow sight and sound. The audience were ultimately appreciating competent standards of performance which were chipped out for the sake of it and relied on memories to raise everything to emotional heights. Van and band stayed on one level — concisely entertaining.

Morrison came across as a singer full stop — and not the great one he obviously can be.

It was something like Al Green's cynical Venue dates. Songs like 'Tupelo Honey', 'Wavelength', 'Here Comes The Night' and 'Crazy Love', were all numb exercises: immaculately delivered but lacking emotional edge or penetration. They were simply turned over, disposed of. It suggested Morrison's future lies in pub singing, which isn't as absurd as it seems.

Encores were an unaffectionate 'Brown Eyed Girl' and an undemonstrative 'Gloria'. The band were then joined by The Chieftains for a mawkish hymnal finale.

Morrison then rushed from the stage and into the waiting limousine, with no time to savour what he'd just done or why he'd done it. The audience, soaked to the skin, drifted away.

I wandered into the night wondering what the hell had just happened.

Glen Tillbrook

The promoter

David Byrne

The brilliant Undertones scarpers before moody Van arrives.

Babble On . .

'Babble'

Oval House

The events that led to the banning of 'Babble' — Kevin Coyne's song-cycle with dialogue — are both too absurd and too depressing to warrant much comment here.

Deprived of its last venue by an unsavoury alliance of muck-hungry Fleet Street, council and craven theatre management, the production has found another home at Kennington's Oval House, just for four days, and that is a reason to be cheerful.

Cheerful because however harrowing or bleak the content of 'Babble' might appear, it's immensely heartening to know that alongside all the flash, panache and bullshit, British music can find a place for a performer like this.

Coyne is a writer of awkward honesty, and a singer of often chilling incision; in a medium grown bloated by selling our cellophane-wrapped fantasies back to us, he works at presenting one uncompromised brand of reality.

It isn't bludgeoning or aggressive, but it is to be taken on its own terms.

'Babble' is a particularly thorough, painstaking exploration of the reality of one relationship, stripped of romance and artifice. The format employed is correspondingly stark. Against a stage-set of light-bulb, table and chairs Coyne and his partner Dagmar Krause stand at either side; the only accompaniment comes from Bob Ward and Brian Godding, playing electric and acoustic guitar in the gloom behind.

Each of 16 songs, taken more or less alternately by the Man and the Woman, deal with a specific mood or emotion — suspicion, elation, apathy, cynicism, optimism — and each relates to one stage or facet of the process of people drawing closer, or trying to.

Linking each number, introducing and expanding on their themes, the two characters improvised an improved dialogue, act out their reminiscences, their confusion and their hopes in simple and understated scenes. The results might be funny, or moving, or occasionally puzzling — though I more often found the obscurity of the Man's mental suffering to be quite chilling — the final effect is bitterly poignant.

It all sounds like the kind of evening you'd expect to squirm through, either bored or embarrassed, or both. After all, 'bleeding hearts' went out with the '60s — and compassion is out of fashion, replaced by escapism born of facile cynicism.

Kevin Coyne's vision can, in the modern context, seem like an anachronism, a grainy re-run of The Wednesday Play after you've got used to Charlie's Angels.

And yet 'Babble' does work; it's an important work, of relevance and of warmth with uncomfortable authenticity. But it's difficult to imagine two other performers who might succeed inside its suffocating, claustrophobic scope in the way that Krause and Coyne do.

Their acting — he as the troubled and brooding loner, fighting his lapses into self-absorption and hostility, she as the patient, vulnerable lover — is never less than natural, and never more.

Coyne plays the shuffling, crumpled Man whose memory remorselessly pushes up grotesque images, battling with his vague and forlorn "Plans" for the future. The voice should be known to you, but it is otherwise beyond adequate description — and the one definable characteristic is its capacity to shock, to annihilate complacency.

While for her part, Dagmar Krause (of the Stapp Happy and Henry Cow ventures) provides the warmer, more sympathetic foil; her soft mid-European voice gliding across the material to daunting effect.

It's only to be hoped Krause and Coyne can find the time — and place — for future presentations of 'Babble'. For anyone who doubts rock's potential for the maturer types of insight, it's a piece of rare encouragement.

Paul Du Noyer

Leaping with a Purple Heart. Pic Justin Thomas.

Secret Affair Purple Hearts Madness Back To Zero

Lyceum

"You've done the Monkey, you've done the Jerk and the Mashed Potato too. The Swim and the Fly have all gone by, got a brand new dance for you."

That's right. You've heard the word, you've seen the film, now play the part. If the parka fits, wear it.

It seems to fit uncannily well — tailor made for the new Tory prosperity that Satchel's Saatchi promised us. The past few years saw revolt — punk and rasta — turned into style. This is a revolt into style, pure and simple. Nothing to rebel

OUT-OF-THE-DUMPER

ST AR RING
PH LI P
RAM BO W

SEPT 11: CROMWELLS/NORWICH 12: NAGS HEAD/HIGHWYCOMBE
13: F-CLUB/LEEDS 14: JB'S/DUDLEY SEPT 17: HOPE & ANCHOR
SEPT 18: HOPE & ANCHOR 20: U-FUSION-CLUB/CHESTERFIELD
21: SANDPIPER/NOTTS SEPT 24: THE NASHVILLE SEPT 25: THE NASHVILLE
SEPT 26: MARQUEE 27: ERIC'S/LIVERPOOL 28: LIMIT-CLUB/SHEFFIELD

THE SECRET'S OUT

SECRET AFFAIR
THE SINGLE

TIME FOR ACTION

ON

I-SPY
RECORDS

How to get away with half fare on a train.

If you're under 14 years of age, no problem. If you're over 14, it's not so easy.

Unless, of course, you're a full time student. In which case you can buy a British Rail Student Railcard which gives you 50% off Ordinary Single or Return or Awaysday tickets. You can also use your Railcard on Sealink services to the Channel Islands and Ireland.

And it'll only set you back £8 a year, valid from 15th September 1979 to 30th September 1980.

So whether it's nipping home to see the folks, visiting friends, or going up to town for a party or disco, it could save you a lot of money over the year.

If you're a first year student and open a current account with Lloyds Bank before 31st October, 1979, you save even more.

Because they'll offer you a £4 voucher towards the cost of your Railcard.

For full details, pick up a leaflet at any British Rail station.

Student Railcard
Half price travel

Doing The Tory Trot

against, except the unstylish; nothing to aspire to, except the stylish; no need to compromise even, except on grounds of budget.

Mod as a movement totally lacks the ambition, the decelt, the ugliness of its predecessors. It promises nothing more than it can deliver. That's why some people hate it. That's why some people love it.

Mod as a music is as nebulous as the clouds. It has no focus nor definition beyond a vague idolisation of certain aspects of The Who and The Jam; just like Mod as a movement. And reversing the usual scheme of things, it's a movement that was just waiting for a figurehead.

Never a very ruthless fellow, Paul Weller predictably refused the unspoken offer of the crown. Secret Affair seem only too happy to fit the bill and take the glory.

On the Bank Holiday Mod Night Special, they looked the proverbial part; almost too tailor made for it.

But let's get one thing straight: Secret Affair (and The Purple Hearts and Back To Zero) are not dance bands. They play too fast, their rhythms are sloppy, there's no natural grace, no understanding of pace.

People dance, yes, but just look at them. They're all over the place, all bopping differently to a beat that isn't even there. Everybody just jerks and lunges with an eagerness that suggests they've heard the word, but with a gangliness that shows they haven't understood it.

So Secret Affair aren't a dance band, but they are a very tight rock band; as tight and flash as their fitted tonic threads. And they're oh-so soss (more likely suspect). Soss enough to write songs that are crisp, smart and cleverly composed of ordinary off-the-peg hooks; songs like 'Get Smarter' that set out to anthemise the popular pre-occupations in The Who's tradition of rock rabble-rousing and succeed only because neither The Purple Hearts nor Back To Zero (who attempt the same thing) are as good at it, and there's no-one else around who's any better.

Plus the charisma count of the Hearts and Back To Zero is negligible, while Secret Affair's is overwhelming. But it's all so much style and no content — no sense of someone who really feels something, anything behind the songs: just a ready glorification of whatever's going, backed up by direct commercial rock moves of the old, and no longer so commercial, school.

The Purple Hearts and Back To Zero leave the same sort of mark, but where Secret Affair are slick and contrived, they are rough and earnest. That's not a lot to choose between.

But anyway, the choice reception went to Madness halfway through the night, for their cartoon skank shenanigans. Big fun, hugely disposable, they're probably the only living example of what happens when The Blockheads meet The Rezillos at the cross roads of reggae. People danced easily.

A Secret rabble-rouser. Pic Chris Horler.

naturally, in the thick, infectious groove touched off by these juvenile relations to the superior Specials.

Madness lack that Specials' wit: The Specials aren't as up-front funny. But both bands have seven members and singers whose delivery is a flat — in Madness' case too flat — foil for their crew's frantic antics, specifically the frontline toasters. Although

Chas Smash stuck to his Toy Soldier routine on this occasion and left out the best malchick leer this side of Malcolm McDowell.

Best of all, he didn't say "see you at Southend tomorrow." He just said, "Don't do that. Do this!"

And just at this moment, there isn't really anything better to do. Is there?

Paul Remball

Rickie Lee Jones

Edinburgh

Lights dim to the customary applause for shadows looming incognito on the darkened stage. Some minutes later a muffled spotlight reveals a pianist playing subdued, smoky jazz.

Orange sparks bounce as Rickie Lee flicks her cigarette into the gloom, then begins to sing quietly. The song is slow and dramatic: whispered lines ending in a shout.

Between songs she wanders off to light cigarettes or find another drink — highly unprofessional, but charming in the way it complements her Shirley MacLaine as the drunk country girl character. A second-hand rose in her shapeless black dress and seedy, lured scarves, swapping beret for battered hat according to whim.

After the opening song, the band materialise, bathed in pests throughout. Here are their adjectives: tasteful, mellow, restrained, immaculate; occasionally soulful; later long-winded and self-indulgent, aside from some vaguely witty vocals synthesised organically through a saxophone.

Basically it's another American sessionmen band, their functionally funky jazz rippling and swelling quietly as sleek, elegant atmosphere for Rickie Lee's scenarios.

Occasionally the band surges, Rickie Lee's voice soars abruptly — but it's just for a second, no more than a moan from the crowd, lulled near comatose if they caught the mood.

This tempo variation between dirge and funeral works surprisingly well, though this is due mainly to Rickie Lee and the various idiosyncrasies of her vocal style. It may occasionally seem to be a wide range of stylish mannerisms: the husky whispers and impassioned wails collaged with meandering spoken fragments. But often it's pure and sensuous enough to transcend any accusations of Californian, laid-back blandness.

Her spoken introductions are usually long and rambling, full of tangents and pauses; the usual American impressions of Britain — this is, after all, her first gig outside America — generally evolve into some evocative tale or childhood memory, finally arriving, quite logically, at the next song.

Here she's loud and sloppy; a fallen woman; the archetypal angelic hooker — "Y'ALL WANNA DRINK?"

And this is where the 'female Tom Waits' comparisons arise. Certainly Waits' and Jones' jazz influences are similar, ditto the cracked-voice, wearied beatnik personas; yet both are separate, distinctive characters. Rickie Lee, though, is considerably less of a shock than Tom Waits.

After the subdued atmosphere — a metamorphosis! Rickie Lee dances, scat sings with the sax, introduces her six-piece band.

The encore is some ancient, stylised, urban blues riff, embellished with cymbals and used in a million movie dance sequences for late-night, back-alley skulking.

Rickie Lee dances again; a temptress, slinky and sexy now in the tight, shiny catsuit previously beneath the dress — the minx! Between her dance it's a Kerouac/Waits rhythmic monologue, with jive interjections rather poorly performed by her guitarist. These two songs seemed longer than the rest of the show.

There's still some hope she could be a cult figure.

Glenn Gibson

Phillip gave her everything—a romantic dinner, a gold ankle bracelet, all his best lines, and his bad breath.

Sorry Phil.

He should have remembered Double Amplex.

Available from Chemists throughout the U.K. and the Republic of Ireland.

FAMOUS NEW-YORKER GOES BRITISH

THE BEST ROCK READ OF THE NEW AMERICAN MUSIC SCENE

Siouxsie And The Banshees The Cure

Aylesbury

It wasn't until the last number that I remembered what all the fuss was about earlier this year, concerning a new, young band called The Cure who had the professed sound of '79 with one excellent single — 'Killing An Arab'.

It still sounds as good, with its high, piercing guitar hookline and climbing, floating rhythm; but it stood out tonight as a fluke — a momentary flash of brilliance not repeated in anything else The Cure have done.

They came over as a good, heavy rock band with a seriousness and depth to their music that suggests they have the technical know-how but lack imagination.

Their flamboyant drum sound — a hollow thumping softened by a multitude of brushing cymbals blended with a heavy bass line — was used effectively in 'Play For Today'. But there is a bare, basic sound, void of excitement or real feeling. The Banshees could offer little more.

They only succeeded in transmitting their own negative attitude to the audience who responded — as Siouxsie put it — as if they were at a football match. At least they woke up Siouxsie; unfortunately some suffered the consequences.

But Siouxsie only exploited the violence to add drama to The Banshees' flagging show, which was steadily losing ground with the majority of punters.

She didn't have much to say. But her sarcastic warnings to the trouble-makers — "Why don't you dance? I'm sure one of the bouncers will dance with you" — threatened to develop into a running glancing match between band and audience, until dragged by their leader into the next number.

In a reckless display of anger, she then raced across the stage and attempted to kick down the PA stack — it swayed dangerously, but (fortunately) didn't topple onto the audience.

But what would you have said if it had Siouxsie? 'I'm sorry that I hit you but my string snapped... I asked myself 'what for?' then something snapped/I had a relapse... A suburban relapse?'

But that's not good enough any more; there should be an another explanation... new ideas... new sounds.

The new numbers they played from the new album, 'Join Hands' (titles unannounced except for 'Icons') had a familiar ring, as if the old arrangements — their master sound — had merely been juggled around. The shuddering chords, once so exhilarating, sounded predictable and reduced what was once a very intense feeling into listless mundanity. The band just didn't seem to be trying.

The only number that did come over with anything like the force I used to associate with this band, was 'Switch'. The spine-chilling guitar sounds, echoing from speaker to speaker, isolated by Kenny Morris's drum breaks, had the desired effect on the audience:

'People walk/And even talk/people listen/then they halt...'

It stopped the fighting — just long enough to take in the excellent 'Hong Kong Garden' at the end of the set.

Siouxsie cavorted, as expected, but it really did seem too much effort; and I got the impression that the audience if not being taken for a ride, were being taken for granted. But after all, it was only a warm-up gig and consequently the band were only using half of their equipment.

I was warned beforehand. Were you?

Deanne Pearson

Wake Up Little Siouxsie

If you want to get in and out of town a bit sharpish, here's the code: GT250X7.

Of course there are other 250's. But there's only one GT250X7—and Suzuki make it. Suzuki make it go so quickly that top speed nudges 100 mph.

Suzuki make it stop swiftly because it boasts beefy 10" discs up front and weighs a lean yet muscular 272 lbs.

Suzuki make it so well balanced that it takes the curves like a midget high speed train.

Suzuki make it with an unbreakable "Power-Read" engine. Pointless ignition. 6-speed gearbox. Alloy wheels. Climb aboard. For £799 you can shrink the big city. GT250X7 £799

HERON SUZUKI

the getaway bike

Joni Mitchell

New York

A balmy summer night under an open sky at the Forest Hills tennis stadium. It's a perfect location on a night perfectly suited to gentle music, and perhaps the pleasantness lulled critical senses because the crowd loved Mitchell in any of her many styles and guises.

Mitchell is lucky to have such loyal fans. But she doesn't need them. She has a palpable star stature; an ability to put over what she is doing, whatever its inherent flaws. She has the confidence of long experience that wins people over.

You could feel her strength as she sang 'Furry Sings The Blues' — just her strumming an electric guitar and guitarist Pat Metheny providing pointed but unobtrusive fills. It was in the way she made the song seem like a story being told to friends; in the way she caught the live talk and accents of the New Orleans musicians she sang about.

You could feel it as she sang 'Dreamland', unaccompanied except for her drummer rapping out a funky jungle rhythm on congas as her voice etched power into lines about "burning with knowledge of things to come". You could feel it when she did 'Amelia' (again just with Metheny) singing about driving across deserts of the imagination and again making it sound as real as Merz! story-telling.

She was at her worst with her old hits, re-worked into soulless structures to support the weight of the instrumental virtuosity she had assembled around her.

Blame it on her band. The five-piece she is touring with includes three certified jazz-fusion heavies: Metheny (guitar), Jaco Pastorius (bass) and Michael Brecker (horns). These players are extremely technically proficient, and their group sound is understandably high on technique but low on feeling.

Songs like 'Big Yellow Taxi', 'Raised On Robbery' and 'Free Man In Paris' cry out for a little instrumental passion, yet this lot were cold and clinical. Metheny and Pastorius played busy, decorative parts that skirted around the edges of the rhythms but would never launch directly into them. Worse was when individuals took solos — meaningless displays of chops for their own sake. Once, when a Pastorius bass solo veered off into Hendrix-inspired guitar-hero pyrotechnics, even this incredibly polite audience became audibly upset, crying out for Mitchell's return.

The band's work was most successful with the material from 'Mingus'. They played it close to the album, giving Mitchell a chance to show her ability as a jazz singer, a style she has not yet perfected to the degree she has with her narrative forms of songs, such as 'Amelia'. But at least the band had more of an affinity for the biting swing of the 'Mingus' material than they did for the rock 'n' roll needed to carry off songs like 'Raised On Robbery'.

But Mitchell triumphed — usually when she dispensed with the group and accompanied herself on guitar.

Taking command of a song is certainly less complicated when solo, but she did more. She picked up on the innate rhythms of her lyrics and ran with them, she brought home the impact of her visions and made her words seem like they were being composed on the spot, a personal and privileged communication.

Her first of three encores was a gem. Mitchell brought on the opening act, the a cappella singing group The Persuasions, for a beautiful, gospel rendition of 'Shadows And Light'. Joni's airy soprano and the husky Persuasions' voices seemed made for each other.

The dilemma that now confronts Mitchell in presenting her material live seems formidable: her work seems so many styles that no one band could be expected to handle its full range.

Still, this show was a success. She sang beautifully and showed a mastery that said this was one body of work, though diverse, and should be considered as such.

Mitchell has a restive, searching nature. It has kept her from becoming a boring folkie recluse; kept her from resting on her laurels as an LA studio-scene hit-maker; kept her from being just a dilettante dabbling in jazz.

Hopefully, it will keep her in motion, and perhaps the current impasse of a Joni Mitchell performance will resolve itself through the directions she takes.

Richard Grabel

Heavy racket on a tennis lawn

THE SECRET'S OUT

SECRET AFFAIR
THE SINGLE

TIME FOR ACTION
ON

I-SPY
RECORDS

GET THIS....

....full page of bargains that are not available in your local High Street.
Just select the item that suits you and fill in the simple coupon below.

deal of the month

Leather

L04. Good quality leather jacket, full quilt lining, waist adjusters, big fastenings and pockets.
Size 34-42 chest
ONLY £47.95
inc p&p

L03. Genuine 'straight' black leather vest.
ONLY £4.25
inc p&p

L02. Black leather bomber jacket fully lined, metal top.
Size 32-42 chest
ONLY £26.95
inc p&p

521, 501, 526
L01. The original leather waistcoat in quality black or brown.
Size 32-42 chest
ONLY £12.95
inc p&p

Denim

P001. Patch knee jeans recycled old and new Wrangler/Levi's etc.
Size 28-38 waist
ONLY £9.95
inc p&p

P002. Lapel jacket old and new denim, centre vent, copper studs.
Size 32-42 chest
ONLY £10.95
inc p&p

P003. Denim shirt, smart fitted old/new denim.
Size 32-42 chest
ONLY £9.95
inc p&p

P005. Patch denim cut-offs, recycled old and new Wrangler/Levi's etc.
Size 28-38 waist
ONLY £4.95
inc p&p

NO VAT INCREASE ON MANY ITEMS

General items

SV03. Ex prison tie, narrow style in black.
ONLY £1.99
inc p&p

MIRROR-SHADES
SV01. Super cool Polar style mirror shades, with case.
ONLY £3.95
inc p&p

PVC
SV05. Super styling top quality PVC jeans, latest style in black.
Size 28-34 waist
ONLY £14.95
inc p&p

Military

M011. Army combat trousers with back pockets and rips, ankle ties and knee pads, in olive drab.
Size 30-36 waist
ONLY £5.95
inc p&p
(Images suit with M008)

M006. US Army M*A*S*H cap, brand new, black, olive.
Size S-M-L
ONLY £2.50
inc p&p

M005. Genuine US Army T-shirt, brand new, black, olive.
Size S-M-L
ONLY £3.25
inc p&p

M004. US Army 'Chino' trousers, beige cotton, giletine tropical issue.
Size 28-34 waist
ONLY £5.95
inc p&p

M010. US Army heavy khaki serge jacket, A1 condition.
Size 34-42 chest
ONLY £5.95
inc p&p

M001. Collared Army shirt, not new but excellent condition.
Size 32-50 chest
ONLY £4.95
inc p&p

M009. USAF: US Army shirts, heavy cotton drill in tan, (Tropical, Chino or green flag M*A*S*H style). Same type.
Size 34-42 chest
ONLY £5.95
inc p&p

M009. USAF Tropical jacket, blue with lining.
Size 32-42 chest
ONLY £6.95
inc p&p

M008. Commando combat jacket, dark olive, excellent condition.
Size 32-44 chest
ONLY £9.50
inc p&p
(Makes suit with M011)

M008. Commando combat jacket, dark olive, excellent condition.
Size 32-44 chest
ONLY £9.50
inc p&p
(Makes suit with M011)

CUSTOMER SERVICES DEPARTMENT

To assist all our customers we have a customer services department with an 'incoming calls only' line, to deal with telephone orders and any enquiries you may have, just ring Bedford (0234) 58355 between 9.30 and 5.30, Mon. to Fri.

TO ORDER

Simply fill in the enclosed order form with full details of the items you require. Please also indicate if any alternative is acceptable, should your goods be temporarily out of stock.

OVERSEAS ORDERS

For overseas orders please add £2.00 to the total cost to cover postage.

TELEPHONE ORDERS

For an even faster service — order by telephone with your Barclaycard, Trustcard or Access No.

MONEY BACK GUARANTEE

We will always exchange goods or refund your money should you not be satisfied, goods must be returned unwashed, unworn, etc. within 7 days.

SEND FOR OUR FREE CATALOGUE AND SEE MANY OTHER ITEMS INCLUDING PRINTED T-SHIRTS.
OR VISIT OUR RETAIL SHOP AT 62, MIDLAND ROAD, BEDFORD. MORE SHOPS OPENING SOON!

PLEASE TICK		STYLE	SIZE	COLOR
ITEM	REQ.	ALTER-NATIVE	SIZE	COLOR
L01. Waistcoat
L02. Bomber
L03. Tie
L04. Motor Bike jkt
P001. Jeans
P002. Jacket
P003. Shirt
P004. Bomber
P005. Shorts
LEV001. Levi's
LEV521. Levi's
LEV526. Levi's
M001. Shirt
M004. Trousers
M005. T-Shirt

M006 Hat
M008 Combat
M009 USAF Jkt
M010 Single Jkt
M011 Trousers
SV01. Shades
SV02. Flag
SV03. Tie
SV05 PVC Jeans
SV06. Bowling Shirts
SV07. Harrington
M007. Deal of the month
M008. USAF

CREDIT CARDS WELCOME BY PHONE!

GRINGO Casuals Co. DEPT. N.
55 ST PETER ST., BEDFORD, BEDS. TEL: (0234) 58355

NAME _____
ADDRESS _____

PAYMENT ENCLOSED £ . p

NEW CANADIAN Gov Surplus
Field Jackets
 In strong Olive Green
 Showerproof Cotton with 4 roomy flap pockets
 Zip drawstring and epaulettes

Sizes up to 42 chest
 only

£9-75
 plus £1

Cash Money, Postal Order or Cheques with order
 Satisfaction or money refunded
 Buying Surplus and Savings
 Please authorise and quote number:

KEEP ON ROCKIN' WITH

BE-BOP BADGES

THE BIGGEST AND BEST IN LANCASHIRE

ZEPPELIN FANS — Knebworth Rules OK — Some gear left so if you want it, write & get it — Knebworth '79 patch 40p only.

PATCHES Women and embroidered new-uns, 40p each or 3 for £1.00

FASTENERS

ACGCE

Black Sabbath - Ironsides
Black Sabbath - Mobbed
Black Sabbath - Demons
Led Zeppelin - Youth Zepplin
E.L.P.
Judas Priest
Aurifer Priest
Rox
Deafest Gae (Patched)
Whitesnake (St. Rocker)
Thin Lizzy metal
Thin Lizzy - Skulls & Matchhead
Morgoth
Black Oyster Cat (metal)
Kiss - Kiss
Led Zeppelin - Spinal
Pink Floyd
Marilyn Manson - Man
Santitas
Fanny
City Boyz
Cannal
The Police
Rocky By Night
Guns N' Roses
Guns N' Roses
UFO
Burrheadz
Deadly Rats
Purple
Deep Purple
King Crimson

Bush And The Winkles A

Rush 2112
Queen - normal
Rainbow (metal)
Dio
Nazareth
P.I.L.
Trey
Deafest Gae (Patched)
Kornat
Freddie Mercury
Thin Lizzy - Skulls & Matchhead
Black Sabbath
Metal (Lust)
The Who (Silver)
Black Sabbath
Guns N' (S)
Iron Maiden (S)
Sex (S)
Shen 18
The Police
Nirvana
Zepplin - Wargames
Led Zeppelin - Green Bay
Zeppelin - Knebworth '78
Thin Lizzy
The Who - Metal Style
Black Oyster Cat (Lust)
Green Day - Patch '79
S + S
Iron Maiden & Drugs & Bush & Bull

FLASHING SKULLS — EXPENSIVE BUT UNIQUE

Metal Skull, 1½" high, with two flashing eyes, which work from small replaceable watch batteries. Last hours continuous use — unless you stop flashing £5 Each but worth every penny!

KEY FOBs. New leatherette key fobs with drome discs 60p each, three for £1.50. Zeppelin, ELO, Genesis, Motorhead, UFO, Judas Priest, Sabbath, Bloody Sabbath, Black Sabbath (cross), Stranglers, Rush, Thin Lizzy, Ian Dury

SUPER PATCHES Giant women new-uns in shimmering Lustre, 60p each or 3 for £1.50

SUPER PATCHES

Hugh Dennis
Yes Led Zeppelin
Black Sabbath Kiss
Rush ELO

BADGES 21W photo-ns: Pictures, names, mostly 35p each or 4 for £1.00. Anti Nazi League, Band Sabbath, Bopin, Bloodin', B.O.C (P.), B.O.C. Bones (Star Definitive), Bookends, Blue, Boston, Buzzcocks, Camel, Diamond Dave, Deep Purple, E.A. Elvis Cosette, Evile Priestley, E.L.P., Exodus (P.). Fire the Go, 3, 4, Pich, The God Squad (No Machine Guns), Fortunate Son, Move A Head Daytime's a Good Day, No Cure, Rock Off! Led Zeppelin, Lynrd Skynyrd, Mottoshead (Lenny), 666, Nazareth, Paul Floyd (Pich), Queen, Road Dogs (Star Band Green), Rush, Rush 2112, Rolling Stones, Sanjour, Sunset Formulationism Squad, Strawberry, Status Quo, That's Me (Quasi I'm Coming), Kane My Amp I'm Gang, Sex Pistols, Swindon, Sharn B, Spitfire, Sex Machine, Spirit, Tulum, Thin Lizzy, Tom Robinson, Xmas, Live Anarchy, Wildie, Wishbone Ash, Newfound

CUSTOM MADE BADGES

Innovative 2½" pinners made from the actual sketch / design which you send to us. Design on paper disc of not more than 2½" please! Only 25p each CRYSTALS The very latest in ultra smart gear... 1 classy brooches with your favourite groups. Logo behind a clear crystal lens. Superb quality ONLY 60p each. Blue Oyster, Cliff, Juice Priest, Led Zeppelin, AC/DC, Rush 2112, Rainbow, Black Sabbath, Black Sabbath, Status Quo, Kiss, Pink Floyd, Thin Lizzy, David Bowie, Genesis, Meat Loaf, Van Halen, U.F.O., Deep Purple.

PENDANTS. New enamelled glass on chain. Best of the heavens! Quo, Priest, UFO, Rush, Lizzy, Sabbath, Genesis! Only 75p each, 3 for £2.00.

SEND YOUR ORDER WITH P.O. OR CHEQUE, AND DON'T FORGET YOUR REPLY PAID ENVELOPE. (Mail sent only All Items subject to availability, please state alternative choice to avoid disappointment. Wholesale prices for all items available on request. Rest on Action!)

BE OP BADGES, 3 Nonster Road, Burnley, Lancs BB10 2PX, England.

WRIST BANDS

Heavy brass bangles. 2 1/2 inches wide. polished brass studs and heavy duty clasps, just $29.95 for 12.

Send us for our various new catalogues of engraved brass, wrist bands and more - gaur straps

SEAGULL TRADING COMPANY

CANNABIS LEAF
Unique Jewellery for you in fabulous precious metals
OUR FAMOUS LEAF
 PENDANT 1 1/4" high

Solid Silver Leaf on Real Silver Chain...	£7.50
1 1/4" Solid Silver on Silver Plated Chain...	£4.95
1 1/4" Solid Silver in Real Silver Ear Hook...	£2.50
1 1/4" 9 carat on Real Gold Chain...	£38.50
1 1/4" 9 carat on Fine Real Gold Chain...	£18.50
1 1/4" 9 carat on Real Gold Chain...	£29.50
Popular Solid Silver Leaf Ring...	£8.00

(Send size or we make to order)
 Join the fun and send money to:

ATLAS
 28 KENSINGTON GARDENS

AFGHAN COATS!

Real Russian style
gorgette, gilette, parka or coat. $27.95
or 40" double breasted or 42" double breasted or 44" double breasted or 46" double breasted or 48" double breasted

FURS AND JEANS 06851

33 Manor View, London N2

01-262 3420 Thurs evenings. Visitors very first.

GUITAR MINIATURES
(4" LONG)

Assorted polystyrene guitar bodges.
Ottone embossed in gold, red, Arabesque in Les Paul or Stratocaster shape, in red, yellow, green or wood effect. Stays sharp and copious and send S.A.C. and help content to JOWGL LTD.

14A Stuart Terrace Talbot Green
Maidenhead, Berks. SL7 1WJ

BRIGHTON, SUSSEX

PRINTED COTTON WHAFAARMER SKIRT £4.50 + 30p P&P
A beauty like one girl, a well thought long 32" long, it coloured back. Choice of 10 colours, 10 items, one
One size 32" to 42" hips.

MADE LENGTH SKIRT £5.00 + 30p P&P
Same pattern as above and 44" long

CHEERFUL KURTA QUIT £2.85 + 15p P&P
A good quality easy care, washable Kurta with white embroidery. Chest size 30" to 40", girls 28" to 42". Hip size 30" to 42". Length 36" to 40".

COLORADO EMBROIDERED KURTA £2.90 + 15p P&P Same style as above but with colorful embroidery on a white cotton background. Chest size 30" to 42". Hip size 30" to 42".
Please state your chest/hip size.

PINK COTTON EMBROIDERED KURTA £1.85 + 15p P&P
A very fine cotton kurta to arrive with colorful embroidery. The pink color. Chest size 30" to 42". Hip size 30" to 42".

COLORADO CHEERFUL KURTA £3 + 15p P&P Same colour background as embroidery. Colors vary, red, black, white, blue, yellow, green, brown, black, light blue, 30" to 42" chest, 30" to 42" hips. 36" to 40" long. Please state alternative color.

MALE KURTA £2.50 + 15p P&P
In casual white, white, black, purple, turquoise, red, pink, beige, brown, yellow. All with colorful embroidery. Please state alternative color. Chest 32" to 42", body 32" to 42".

HEAVY DUTY JEANS £4.00 £3.50 + 40p P&P
A nice blue jean style heavy denim jeans made in England western style pockets, waist-flared bottoms. We want 28" to 36" waist 32" hips to 42". 32" and 38" inseam leg lengths. Please state Waist/leg size.

CREW AND V-NECK SWEAT SHIRTS. CREW NECK STYLE
£3.65 + 30p P&P Colors: blue, black, grey, red, yellow, pink, purple, beige, white. V-NECK STYLE £3.75 + 30p P&P, Colors: blue, red, black, white. V-NECK STYLE £3.75 + 30p P&P, Colors: black, white, cream, red, red, beige. 30" to 42", hips 32" to 42" long. Please state alternative color.

Postage outside UK Outside.

Please Write Your Name, Job Address, Colors and Size Care
All goods to be returned in original or returned colors within 10 days.
Send P.O. Order in WRAPPS (Cheq) £12 30 High Street, Walton, Essex.

TO ADVERTISE IN THE MAIL ORDER
RING
01 261 6133

MADE IN USA
LIBERTY DUNGAREE BEST OVERALL !!!

The authentic American Bib/Braze in 10oz. Indigo Denim with white and green handstitching and 2nd pocket on Bib. Waist sizes (in inches) girls please state hip (wz) 24", 25", 26", 27", 28", 29"

£21.95 + 90p
(P&P)

Matchplace Jeans Ltd
Dept NK 6 Stratton Road, West Gouden, Surrey
Tel: 0438 511 111

WIDGES & BARCLAYCARD QUOTE NUMBER

PRIESTLEYS

T-SHIRTS T-SHIRTS T-SHIRTS

1 Just Say The Word	25 Johnny Rotten
2 1st Solo Songwriting	27 Cam Peascoe
3 Dark Streets	28 Shogun
4 Johnny Rotten	29 Michael
5 Johny Rotten Plag	30 Whistle NO
6 Paradox	31 Bob Marley
7 BSZ	32 Acoustic
8 Specialty Gangster	33 Kalam Azad
9 Penetration	34 Reagan
10 S.I.P. Jugglers	35 ATV Whistles
11 S.I.P. G-Man	36 ATV Whistles
12 Scampering Element	37 Just
13 Top 100 Songs	38 Overkill
14 East Meets	39 Scrapbook
15 2nd Country	40 Fun
16 BT Beats	41 Go
17 Jazzman	42 Magnum
18 Looseman On Horse	43 Fit
19 CRS	44 Palace
20 Children On Stage	45 Int-Base
21 Dearest Son	46 Therapy
22 British LP Single	47 Fun
23 Class One	48 Young Of Four
24 Stal and Nasty	49 Whistleman
25 Industry	50 Brighton Mob

31 Priestleys Bay

All 1-300s £3.95 + 90p p.p. 14.50.
FREE POSTAGE !!! State S.M.L.
Cheques, P.O.s payable to:

PRIESTLEYS T-SHIRTS

36 BOOTHAM, YORK, N. YORKS.

LATEST DESIGNS
AVAILABLE ON TOP QUALITY GARMENTS
T-SHIRTS £2.75 + 30p p&p
SWEATS £4.95 + 40p p&p

Black print on white shirt

999 Black and green print on white shirt

Black and red print on sky-blue shirt

CLASH Black print on red shirt

Black print on white shirt

JAM Blue, red and black print on white shirt

Blue and red print on white shirt

MODS Black and red print on white shirt

Blue and red print on white shirt

TARGET

Sliver design on white, red, yellow, black or navy shirt

Send cheques or P.O.'s to:
PRINTOUT PROMOTIONS (MOD)
28A ABBINGTON SQUARE,
NORTHAMPTON.

Please allow 21 days delivery and we

SEE CATALOGUE WITH ORDER OR ON REQUEST		SUE TO 31018 SIZE required.		01-261 6172		Refurbished, 100% 100% Our Shop Open All Week
SECTION A

A7 HAWKWARD	A9 KEITH RICHARD	A20 STONES	A11 JIMI HENDRIX	A12 LYNRYD SKYNYRD	A35 RUSH	A36 UFO	A14 RAINBOW

A21 MOTORHEAD	A15 DAVID BOWIE	A2 BLACK SABBATH	A19 BOB DYLAN	A6 LED ZEPPELIN	A7 THIN LIZZY	A31 RAINBOW	A1 ALICE COOPER

A32 KISS	A30 SANTANA	A31 BOSTON	A28 AC/DC

SWEAT SHIRTS £5.50 inc P&P
 Colours: Yellow, White, Sky Blue (Also in Grey and Black)

T-SHIRTS £3.30 inc P&P
Colours: Yellow, White and Sky Blue.

Overseas postage and packing — 60p per T-Shirt 80p per Sweat Shirt

B3 BLONDIE	B4 STRAWBERRY FIELDS (GLITTER)	B5 BONY M
B6 BEACH BOYS	B7 BONY M	B13 BEACH BOYS

 86 MOUTH	 87 MARILYN	 88 LED ZEPPELIN	 89 QUEEN	 90 THE KINKS
--	---	---	--	--

PLEASE STATE ALTERNATIVE CHOICE WHERE POSSIBLE

QUANTITY	SIZE S, M, L or XL	DESIGN NUMBER	ALTERNATIVE CHOICE

I ENCLOSE CHEQUE/P.O. FOR £ _____ DEPT NME MADE PAYABLE TO:
FRESH DESIGNS
 88 Pall Mall, London SW1

[illegible]

BONAFIDE MAIL OFF

Realize. Can't stand my baby and I
Spend my days and nights
Dances. Nights in white pain (singing)
L.E. Sub
R.I.C. Something that I need (P)
Gary Numan. Cars (P)
Loudness. This is what a noise (P)
I.O.U. Minority (P)
Quads. There must Mainline. The price
Cannery Palace
Lovers. Double peak (singing) Real. (singing)
You're. Double peak. Don't want to be Thirteen
John. Du. Can't. Don't be sunny. (singing)
Jags. (singing) of my hand (P)
Latter. I. Later (singing)
Angel. Popcorn (singing) (singing)

[illegible][illegible][illegible]

- [illegible]

T-shirt: I go to prison (and get) with Teenies: Explosives. Bouncing babies. /
 LP
 T-shirt: Prime time (lookout & get)
 I'm long (lookout & get)
 T-shirt: I'm long (lookout & get)
 I'm long (lookout & get)
 T-shirt: I'm long (lookout & get)
 I'm long (lookout & get)
 T-shirt: I'm long (lookout & get)
 I'm long (lookout & get)

[illegible]

EDUCATIONAL

B.Ed. Honours Degree
B.A., B.Sc.
Ordinary & Honours

Collegiate Combined Studies Degrees of the University of Leeds

Write to the Registrar, The College,
Lord Mayor's Walk, YORK YO1 7EX. Phone (0904) 56771

New options exist on our degree course

BA and BA (Hons) Humanities

Students can achieve a 'combined major' degree in two of the following subjects:

Economics
English
French
Geography

History
Linguistics
Politics

Please note that there is a good supply of high standard local accommodation at our Poulton-le-Fylde (near Blackpool) campus even for late applicants.

For further details contact:
Admissions Office (Dept. 298)
Preston Polytechnic
Poulton-le-Fylde Campus
Brack Road
Poulton-le-Fylde FY6 7AW
Tel: (0253) 884651

PRESTON POLY TECHNIC

S. Martin's College 1979
Lancaster entry

BA (Hons) SOCIAL ETHICS with Education, Geography or Religious Studies.

BA (Hons) English Literature with French, History or Religious Studies.

BEd (Hons and Ord).

PGCE

MA Religious Education (now recruiting for 1980)

Details of places available and course requirements: The Registrar (Dept N), S Martin's College, Lancaster LA 1 3JD (0524) 63446

1980 Prospectus now available with details of new BA (Ord) degrees in English, Geography, History, Social Ethics.

UCB TWO YEAR DEGREE COURSES

The University College at Buckingham offers two year degree courses, beginning each January, in:

ECONOMICS
HISTORY, POLITICS, AND ENGLISH LITERATURE

POLITICS, ECONOMICS, AND LAW (also a July entry)

ACCOUNTING AND FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT

BIOLOGY AND SOCIETY and a three year course, with one year spent in a French or German University (Aix-Marseille, Nancy, Tubingen) in:

EUROPEAN STUDIES with several options in Economics, Law, French, English, German and European Institutions

The Buckingham Licence has been recognised as having the standing of an Honours Degree by other universities and many professional organisations. Great importance is attached to tutorial teaching. Able students may sit for scholarships or apply for bursaries. A number of Local Authorities award discretionary grants. Full details are given in the UCB prospectus which, together with an application form, can be obtained from the address below.

The Dean of Admissions, (Ref NME 479),
University College at Buckingham,
Buckingham, MK18 1EQ.
Tel: Buckingham (02982) 4161.

University College at Buckingham
Supported by the Independent University Trust

Unexpected 'A' level results? Still undecided on your future? Seeking good career prospects?

If you have two 'A' levels you might be qualified to take the degree course in Institutional Management at the Polytechnic of North London. If you have one 'A' level you may have the entry to an HND or other diploma course.

The Food Sciences Department offers the following courses:

Diploma in Home Economics
BSc in Institutional Management
HND in Institutional Management

The Diploma in Home Economics course prepares students for posts in industry, commerce, journalism and consumer affairs in areas such as product testing and development, quality control, recipe development and writing and consumer guidance. Subjects covered include scientific and technological aspects of materials equipment, food and services; practical food preparation and presentation, communications, social studies, management and administration.

The Institutional Management courses are designed to train managers who will be able to adapt to the rapidly changing technological and scientific developments taking place in catering and accommodation management and take up administrative posts in the Health Service, social services, educational establishments, and in the commercial and industrial sector.

There will be members of staff available during the summer vacation to advise and interview prospective students.

The Polytechnic is close to the amenities of the West End and has excellent communications with all parts of London and the Home Counties.

For further information write or telephone: The Department of Food Sciences, Polytechnic of North London, Holloway, London N7 8DB, Tel: 01 607 2789, Ext 2226.

The Polytechnic of North London

Crewe+Alsager College THE NAME FOR YOUR FUTURE

Our first rate academic record, great educational and social amenities and beautiful location make us the name for your future in Higher Education. We're large, and up to date.

Accommodation is readily available and living in the beautiful countryside of South Cheshire is a tonic in itself. Why not take a look at the wide range of courses open to you?

DEGREE COURSES

BA or BA with Honours (Combined Studies)
Creative Arts (3 yrs) Choose two from Dance, Music, Drama, Visual Arts, Creative Writing

BA or BA with Honours (Combined Studies)
Humanities (3 yrs) Choose two from English, History, American Studies, French Studies, Modern Studies, Geography, Philosophy, Religious Studies

BA Combined Studies (Sports Studies)
(3 yrs) A range of sports plus one from Biology, Physical Science and Psychology

BA (Combined Studies)
Environmental Studies (3 years)
Environmental Studies with either Ecology or Physical Science

B Ed or B Ed with Honours (3 & 4 yrs)
B Ed Youth & Community Studies (3 yrs)

OTHER COURSES

HND Business Studies (3 yrs)
Post Graduate Certificate in Education
Diploma in Higher Education (2 yrs)
Diploma in Youth & Community Work (2 yrs)

In-Service Courses for Serving Teachers
Design, Craft & Technology Courses
Special courses for Engineers and Craftsmen/women

HOW TO FIND US

Conveniently situated on two sites, both are easily accessible from Crewe main-line station or M56 Motorway (junction 15). For our prospectus and other information on all our CMAA validated courses write to the Academic Office (Admissions), Crewe+Alsager College of Higher Education, Crewe, Cheshire CW1 1DU.

Crewe+Alsager College of Higher Education

CCAT DEGREE COURSES IN CAMBRIDGE

We are currently offering places in:

BA HONOURS GEOGRAPHY — with one ancillary subject chosen from Economics, Geology, History, Plant Biology, Sociology.

BA HONOURS HUMANITIES/SOCIAL STUDIES — two subjects chosen from Economics, English, European Thought and Literature, Geography, History, Sociology and Study of Art

BA HONOURS MODERN LANGUAGES — two choices from French, German, Italian or Spanish, with related historical studies.

BSc HONOURS SCIENCE — a modular course offering units in Biology, Chemistry, Geography, Geology and Mathematical Science.

BA HONOURS MODERN HISTORY — themes in modern social history.

BA HONOURS ENGLISH LITERATURE — medieval to modern periods.

Other advanced courses include:

PART-TIME BSc IN ELECTRONIC ENGINEERING
HND ELECTRICAL AND ELECTRONIC ENGINEERING

HND BUSINESS STUDIES
GRADUATE DIPLOMA IN MUSIC
LINGUIST SECRETARIAL COURSE
PERSONAL ASSISTANTS' COURSE

For further details and application forms, please contact the Information Officer, Room F152, Cambridgeshire College of Arts and Technology, Cambridge CB1 2AJ. Telephone (0223) 83271 Ext 46.

OPPORTUNITIES

WANT TO GET AWAY TO COLLEGE?

West Midlands College of Higher Education

B.A. Leisure and Recreational Studies. A new kind of degree course with a specific focus on the ever expanding Leisure, Arts, Sports, and Tourist Industries. Elements of various subjects related to Leisure with practical experience in a selection of arts and sports. (Starts this September).

B.A. Combined Humanities on the Theme of URBAN MAN AND SOCIETY: Courses from English, History, Geography, Government and American Studies. A study of Film is included in some courses.

B.Ed. degree for prospective teachers: Art and Design, Education, English, Geography, History, Mathematics, Music, Physical Education, Religious Studies, Science.

B.A. Visual Communications combining communication theory with practical skills in handling media (Drawing, Photography, Lettering and Typography and Television) has conditional approval for September 1980 start.

If you have any two 'A' levels get in touch with the Academic Registrar (NME) West Midlands College of Higher Education, Gorway, Walsall WS1 3BD. Telephone No. 0922 29141.

APPLY FOR COURSES AS SOON AS POSSIBLE TO AVOID DISAPPOINTMENT

PLYMOUTH POLYTECHNIC

If you are considering Higher Education, why not plan to choose the established opportunities at Plymouth Polytechnic?

Whether you are considering science, technology, social science, management or arts, you can benefit from the lively academic environment.

The courses available this Autumn, are:

Degree

Architecture
Biological Sciences
Business Studies
Civil Engineering
Combined Studies in:
- Science
- Social Science
- Science & Social Science
Communication Engineering
Environmental Sciences
Fishery Science
Geography
Humanities
Mechanical Engineering
Nautical Studies
Psychology
Social Policy and Administration

Diploma of Higher Education in

- Science
- Social Science
- Science & Social Science

Higher National Diplomas

Applied Biology
Business Studies
Computer Studies
Electrical Engineering
Mechanical Engineering
Nautical Science

Apply now to Peter Jenkin (N2), Registrar, Plymouth Polytechnic, or Tel: Plymouth (0752) 284674

Drake Circus, Plymouth, Devon, PL4 8AA

EDGE HILL COLLEGE OF HIGHER EDUCATION

- A long established college with a proven academic record in both B.Ed and BA courses.
- A 45 acre parkland site with purpose built teaching and residential accommodation.
- A rural environment yet close to Southport and the motorway network.
- Ample facilities for sport and recreation including a heated swimming pool.
- A very wide range of subjects from which to select a degree programme.
- Courses leading to degrees of the University of Lancaster.

APPLICATIONS ARE INVITED FOR THE FOLLOWING COURSES:

BA (HONOURS) AND BA majoring in:
Applied Social Sciences
Combined Social Studies (Courses in Human Geography and the Social Sciences with a focus on Community Relations)
English
Geography
History
B.Ed HONOURS and ORDINARY
Subject Specialist
Primary Specialist
The Teaching of Mentally Handicapped Children

- A common first year allows for a delay of final choice between BA and B.Ed programmes.

For further information please contact:—
Miss M Dodds, Admission Officer (NME), Edge Hill College of Higher Education, Ormskirk, Lancs L35 4QP
Telephone: Ormskirk (0695) 75171, ext. 269.

Grasshopper mind? You're halfway to being an excellent student.

Jumping over useless information.

A grasshopper mind is an intelligent mind that looks for new ideas and is easily bored.

And that's a mind which hasn't the patience to plough through miles of information without knowing if it's going to help.

A new 45-minute cassette will tell you how to make use of your grasshopper mind to jump over information you don't need.

It's called 'How to Study', and produced by Encyclopaedia Britannica.

It's very well presented by Richard Briers. And, of course, because it's a cassette you don't need to study to learn how to study.

Finding the facts you need.

'How to Study' will show you where to find what you need to know. And how to understand the general picture of what you're studying, before you fill in all the detail.

You will absorb these techniques without difficulty - you only have to listen.

And when you know 'How to Study' you'll find your study time achieves far more. So you won't feel bored or annoyed at wasting your time.

Reading faster. Remembering more.

One way 'How to Study' can save you time is by showing you the techniques of reading faster. Again, a grasshopper mind is a great advantage here. So you'll find the facts you need even faster, and fill in the background even faster.

After that, we teach you how to remember everything you've learnt.

We teach you - and in a free booklet which comes with the cassette we show you - what a Mind Map is. And how it can replace piles of jumbled notes.

Planning your time - leisure, sleep and work.

When you have a lot more time, you still need to plan it efficiently to avoid panic swotting. So we give you a Year Planner.

'The complete 'How to Study' package costs only £5.95. So don't waste any more time - send off for it now.

For 45 copies, this information is free of charge. £1.50 - 150-2000 Printed in Great Britain - 1979-80

I want to stop wasting my time studying.

I enclose £5.95.

Name

Address

Cheques or P.O.s should be made out to: EB 'How to Study' Office and sent to: EB 'How to Study' Office, Freeport 32, London W1F 3YZ.

You don't need a stamp.

Or quote your Access Barclaycard number.

We will send you 'How to Study' immediately, but please allow up to 28 days for delivery.

NME1

CHEAP TRICK

■ From page 18

fresh from the States, is his usual effusive self despite jetlag. Having driven down with Dave Edmunds, Riviera is joyously pinpointing all the omens currently facing the dinosaurs over in the States.

Peter Frampton for example, is apparently having trouble filling the halls he's currently playing. Aerosmith, The Bee Gees, Styx, Kansas, Chicago — all the old school are suffering very real traumatic set-backs. Meanwhile, 'new wave' is the hot ticket. Cheap Trick, The Cars and Blondie are the big three alongside Costello.

The order is rapidly changing and who can blame Riviera and Adamany for the triumphant grin?

ON THE way back to London Nielsen, satisfied with the gig, talks about the change. An 11-month tour will drive both 'Dream Police' and Cheap Trick into the highest echelons. The Cars, Nielsen reckons, don't have real lasting power whilst Blondie, the other hot contender, are apparently experiencing inner strife, with leaders Chris Stein and Debbie Harry more interested in making films than touring.

Nielsen, in his mid-30s, finds the idea of not touring virtually abhorrent.

"I get so angry when I read about these guys in their early 30s who reckon they're too old. I'm going to be doing this when I'm 50 and I'll be doing this when I'm a wizened old man. I love playing live and I'll be damned before I give up because of my fuckin' age."

Nielsen's commitment to his vocation is probably as much to do with a lack of any personal life. He denies being married whilst in a moment of rare candour he informs me that his best friend was a Vietnam vet who went insane and has threatened the band, believing that he wrote all Nielsen's songs. Another good friend died of a drug overdose. "But, see, I hate talking about that because it's just... well it got misconstrued and sensationalised. You know, here's this group and there are all their nutty guys around. Which is crap. We're just incredibly normal guys. We don't do drugs. We're boring. Really boring."

Nielsen's main preoccupation at this point was an up-coming festival to be held at Nuremberg featuring Cheap Trick and The Who.

Suddenly, two vital couplets from each group's repertoire make for an intriguing juxtaposition. On 'Surrender', Nielsen opines: "Surrender, surrender/But don't give yourself away."

On 'Won't Get Fooled Again' Townshend stated: "Meet the new boss/Same as the old boss."

In the next 12 months Cheap Trick will (most probably) be the new bosses. When that pressure drops on Nielsen and co, then we'll see if they can improve on the complacency of the old brigade. And just how much they can keep and how much they have to give away.

SHEFFIELD

■ From page 8

It comes from London, it's not very good. So they'll go and support some shitty London band, whereas they've got some excellent bands in Sheffield they should really be getting behind."

Amen to that.

WHICH BRINGS us back, quite neatly, to I'm So Hollow, whose guitarist Rod Leigh echoed those sentiments in this article's introduction. Unlike the other bands covered, I'm So Hollow have not yet released any material on record, despite being both more capable and more inventive than about 80% of the bands to surface in the past two or three years.

Rather than rush into things prematurely, they were prepared to wait.

"We haven't been doing what we wanted to do; it's only just coming to fruition now. Before, there were anomalies in it — suddenly, something from about six months ago sounds totally different."

The seeds of I'm So Hollow were sown in V4, a band which included both Rod and drummer Joe Sawicki. It was not, according to Rod, a very auspicious start.

"This bloke wanted to use some young-looking people for him to make some money and get in on the scene, or something. That lasted three weeks. We played one gig. It was terrible, so we kicked him out of his group and tried to get someone else to join us."

An ad in the local paper proclaiming "Are we not pins?" caught the attention of bassist Gary Marsden and vocalist Jane Wilson, who promptly joined, the latter also contributing more recently on Wasp synthesiser. Their name comes from one of their songs, adopted almost by default when they needed to make posters for a gig. Since then, it's survived through sheer contrariness.

"People said we ought to change it 'cos it's a terrible name, so we stuck to it, just to be awkward."

"We kept meaning to change it..."

But every name we suggested sounded pretentious. So we thought we'd have A Statement!

"They're always in little cliques, anyway, group names. Heavy rockers are always called something like 'Rocker', and punks are always 'The something'."

Their early gigs provoked mixed reactions, one (ironically enough, at a local hospital) being hurriedly cancelled because of the presence of a fight-hungry mob from the local heavy metal slugging hangout who'd come to exact retribution for being insulted at said hangout a week or two before.

"Well, they were insulting us, and I'd got a mike and was louder than them..."

It's hardly surprising, all things considered, that the local Def Leppard fans should regard I'm So Hollow with such animosity. ISH's music being closer to Siouxsie and The Banshees than to bands with names like Throbbing Gristle and Wanker. Not to mention the length of their hair and the cut of their clothes, trivia which assume monstrously symbolic proportions in an HM-dominated city like Sheffield.

Which is not to say that that particular problem is solely the province of one style of music. When they started playing, ISH admit they played in the punk style — although it was more the ideal than the sound which had a lasting influence. Now, they note sadly, they get a lot of kids stuck in the Pistols/Clash continuum dressing a la '76 and asking them to "Play summat fast", an equally depressing state of affairs which only goes to show that no one tribal group has a corner on bigotry.

"They're gonna look like teddy-boys, aren't they?" grins Gary. "Walking round aged about fifty with spiky hair and safety-pins..."

Like many of the more interesting bands that have surfaced over the past few years, ISH were influenced by a mixture of punk and glam. Unlike many, however, they openly admit the influence of the latter.

"It used to scare me, during the punk thing, that people just wouldn't admit to it, that they'd been influenced by glam — they were all going back to the '60s. The Stooges and all that. They'd never heard The Stooges or The Velvet Underground till they heard Bowie mention them!" says Gary sardonically.

"I hadn't heard of The Velvet Underground till I heard that all punks were influenced by them," adds Rod.

On the question of influences, they greet the oft-remarked Banshees similarities with a certain bemusement:

"S'funny, that one, 'cos no one had really listened to the Banshees," says Rod.

"They'd never made a record when we started," points out Gary. "We did sound a bit like them, but we'd sounded like that since we started. I'd never seen or heard them till 'Hong Kong Garden'..."

It's the same with any possible Wire connection:

"Again, nobody was aware of them till a few months ago. We didn't get 'Pink Flag' till about two weeks ago."

Indeed, although they're undeniably working in the same general area as the Banshees and early Wire, it's probably true to say that they derive most of their inspiration from what's happening locally, with especial reference to Cabaret Voltaire.

"It's like art, or anything," explains Rod.

"Someone springs up, and they inspire a whole cluster of people who've probably not got similar ideas or anything; they just see it can be done."

Which goes some way to explaining why they wouldn't dream of basing themselves anywhere else but Sheffield.

"Sheffield's a dump, but there is quite a lot happening in it."

"Everyone says now that it's crap in Sheffield — you go to a gig and everyone in the audience is in a band. I don't see what's wrong with that — it's just that there should be other people there as well. You can't blame everyone that's in a group — that's silly. More people should be in groups, then there'd be more people at gigs!"

Right! And if the idea of a self-supporting community of bands doesn't give you a kind of warm glow, I feel a bit sorry for you...

THE MEATLOAFATHON

■ From page 23

stripes. I had to tell him about it. It was terrible. He wanted to finish his speech, but there was no way I was gonna let him. And I didn't. He never got near to finishing it."

What was his speech about? "He was trying to say what a great guy I was."

Didn't you want to hear that?

"Nah, I didn't need to hear that."

IT'S NO surprise, really, that Hollywood has latched onto Meat Loaf. Even without his music, he's a walking variety act.

In addition to the Neverland movie, he's being considered for the part of Bluto in Robert Altman's Popeye, with Robin Williams as Popeye. Also he'll be the central character in a film called The Roadie.

"It's the story of a guy called Travis W. Redfish. I play Travis Redfish, and Jagger and Tatum O'Neal are also in it."

"Travis Redfish is a guy from Texas who doesn't know why anybody bothers to play rock'n'roll since Buddy Holly died. Anyway, he gets a job as a roadie, and he drives this truck full of equipment all the way from Dallas to Austin. Without a clutch."

"It would be an impossible feat for anyone except Travis W. Redfish. Travis W. Redfish is a chubby superman."

Does this description remind Meat Loaf of anyone?

He has no hesitation. "Me," he says. "Me, of course."

N MEXPRESS WORD

ACROSS

- 1 Wilko's band (5, 7)
- 8 You'll be sorry when I'm dead... Sting with a bitter ending! (4, 5, 6, 3)
- 10 The first hit from 'Lodger' (4, 4, 8)
- 13 & 30 Born to Simon (anag. 2 words)
- 14 Desmond Dekker's jumpman follow-up to 'The Israelites' (2, 3)
- 15 Clash 'Cost Of Living' track previously only available on a limited edition NME freebie (7, 5)
- 17 Clash 'Cost Of Living' track previously a US hit for the Bobby Fuller Four (1, 6, 3, 3)
- 19 Hometown of Devo, Christie Hynde, Rachel Sweet
- 20 He's very late (anag. 2 words)
- 21 & 7 Two and a half of 10cc who left La Crema
- 22 See 6
- 24 Songwriting brother of 16 down
- 25 There's disco in the smart part of Chicago!
- 27 See 10
- 28 First name of US singer whose hits included 'Walk On By' and 'Do You Know The Way To San Jose'
- 29 & 26 Bee Gees' baby brother
- 30 See 13

DOWN

- 1 Mod group out of powerpoppers New Hearts (8, 6)
- 2 Act Nine: Calm, dry (anag. 2 words)
- 3 Elvie Costello recorded here 'I Just Don't Know What To Do With Myself' on the Live Stiffs LP (5, 11)
- 4 & 25 down. As recorded by Darts and Boney M (i.e. same title, different song)

- 5 Concert engagements colloquially speaking (i.e. like what Danny Baker speaks)
- 6 & 22 One for you '60 freaks: Singer who replaced Paul Jones in Manfred Mann
- 7 See 21 across
- 9 Peter Green instrumental which gave Fleetwood Mac a top five single in 1968 and again in 1973
- 11 RAF involvement in electronic Kraut kombol
- 12 Mod Aptitude Test: Ska group who had the original hit with 'Long Shot Kick The Bucket'
- 16 Lesser known of the Kink brothers who had a solo hit in 1967 with 'Death Of A Clown' (4, 6)
- 18 Beserkley labelmates of J. Richman (4, 4)
- 21 Ms Young of 'Hot Shot'

- 23 Instrument
- 25 See 4
- 26 See 29

ANSWERS

ACROSS: 7 'Gone With A Wind'; 9 Trip, 10 Kenny Jones; 11 Lene Lovich; 12 'Lodger'; 14 (John) Denver; 16 'Strawberry Fields (Forever)'; 17 Gini; 18 'Rescue Me'; 19 (Hope And) Anchor; 23 King; 24 (Andy) Mackay; 25 Spyro (Gyra); 26 Supertramp.

DOWN: 1 'Rock Lobster'; 2 'Teenage Warning'; 3 Roky (Music); 4 (Howard) Devoto; 5 Hope And (Anchor); 6 'Jet'; 8 'Some Product (Carri On Sax Pistols)'; 11 Lonnies Mack; 13 Steve Jones; 15 Track; 19 Andy (Mackey); 20 (Marvin) Gaye; 21 (Spyro) Gyra; 22 Flip.

No. 1 ON THE FASHION SCENE!

Dazzling Disco Jewellery

IN SOLID SILVER or 9ct. GOLD

- * EARRINGS (approx. 5/8" diameter)
- * PENDANTS (approx 1" diameter)
- * BRACELET CHARMS (Approx. 3/4" diameter)

Add the finishing touch to any fashion outfit with the latest matching "Disco" jewellery — earrings, pendants and bracelet charms. All beautifully made in the shape of a miniature record.

HAVE YOUR PENDANT INDIVIDUALLY ENGRAVED!

Pendants can be engraved to your personal requirements, with names, initials or your favourite record title, at an extra charge of £1.25 (max 22 characters).

Although silver jewellery is supplied direct from stock, gold items are made to individual order only (prices available on application).

To order, please complete the form below and post to: Newbridge Mail Supplies, 29 Rensburg Street, Newbridge Road, Hull, North Humberside.

Please allow three weeks for delivery (four weeks for engraved items). All prices include postage, packing, insurance and V.A.T.

NAME _____

ADDRESS _____

TEL _____

Please send me: (state no. of items required in boxes provided)

- ☐ Silver pendant/s at £9.50 each
- ☐ Silver bracelet charm/s at £8.95 each
- ☐ Pair/s of silver earrings at £11.95 pair
- ☐ Price details for 9ct gold jewellery (tick here if required)

I enclose cheque/P.O. for £ _____ p made payable to Newbridge Mail Supplies.

PENDANTS ONLY Engraving (max. 22 characters) £1.25 extra (please use block capitals)

NME 8/8

Newbridge Mail Supplies, 29 Rensburg Street, Newbridge Road, Hull, North Humberside.

GASBAG

Scribble your dribble to Gasbag, NME, 5-7 Carnaby St.,
London W1.

'Ello, I'm a reject. Does living in Devontown automatically make me a wanker?

I mean, I hope that I won't cause you to suffer a credibility crisis when I, a sunny Southern Californian roller-skater disco booty-shaker non-person who obviously thinks that The Knack is New Wave and Joe Jackson is Punk, writes you a letter to say that I find NME to be the only paper (except for Slash) with as much balls, brains, anger, energy, quality, controversy and inspiration as the music it describes.

In other words, there are some of us here in El Lay who stand between the somnambulist gods and the so-called artists living "on the edge", there are some of us here who don't wear red satin disco shorts and don't have wild pogo-political rallies and yet we still are capable of enjoying, nay, devouring NME.

I sure as hell wish that I could have talked to Paul Morley when he was here in El Plasticland — love the way that he writes — his penchant for exposing the doubts and insecurities of his interviewees is unusual. He is one of the few who reveals the "human" side of our modern music idols. But when I read his uncharacteristically stilted and smug view of L.A., I was surprised and disappointed. That bad, huh? Did you ever read a copy of Slash or go to the Hong Kong Cafe? You might have found more of what you were looking for there.

But then, I have to admit, L.A. is still a city of apathy, homogeneity, and healthy white teeth, and any deviants are hard to find. But we're here, hiding in our abode hovels, reading NME and MM and Slash and saving our pennies to see The Buzzcocks, Magazine, and The Clash, and hopefully Joy Division, The Specials, Ian Dury, and Swell Maps.

So don't be so superior, you limy punters. Not everyone over here went gaga over James Taylor or Rickie Lee Jones, though we aren't as snotty as to deny that Joe Jackson and The Police make good, albeit frothy, pop records, even though I, for one, would rather listen to Mr. Elbow Costello, Ian Blockhead or Swell Maps.

No more American-type clichéd views of Slogging Jet-Lagging Lost Angeles, okay? It's so boring. Susan Smog, Pasadena, CA, USA.

You've probably never heard of me, Susan, and I've never heard of you either, but it can't be much fun being a nobody in a nowhere town all your life. I've said goodbye to all that now. — Dino.

I appreciate that your singles reviewers only have a limited space in which to make plain their opinions, but this is all the more reason why their observations should be worth making. Max Bell is an excellent case in point: "Barracuda's Anglo/Canuck/N. American amalgam of garbage garage wit and sidewalk surf makes them prime contenders for the left field novelty act of the summer."

These few lines represent the full extent of Mr Bell's critical insight. It would be difficult to construct for oneself a more neutral position than Max Bell does here; although that phrase "garbage garage wit", by reason of its being a hopelessly inadequate description of what is actually to be found on The Barracuda's single, destroyed any credibility that neutrality may have

Dear Gasbag,
Just thought we'd let you know we are an aqua-Mad band recording off Brighton coast. Look out for our new single about to surface called "I'm a Budy".

REMEMBER to use the
POST CO

GASBAG,
NME,
5-7 Carnaby St.,
LONDON W.1.

Besides, alliteration-packed and showily-turned sentences are demodés. Barry Kyrie. So... Max Bell informs me, are letters written on toilet paper. — Dino.

When will all the plebs who have started buying their tonic suits, parkas, loafers and Secret Affair records realise that they are just being manipulated to pour money into the bank accounts of the fashion and record business twerps of this world?

Wear what you like to wear, and listen to music that sounds good to you. Don't follow trends, lead them. Kenny V. (An old Mod who learned his lesson). You said it, buster. — Dino.

Dear Frank, I can't take anymore, when's the revolution?

There I was listening to Patrick Fitzgerald, Tubes, etc., thinking I'd just about got myself sussed out. Returning back to my flat I find a note: "You got three weeks to git." So they kick us out coz they want to sell the house. So what's left apart from Music, NME and John Peel?

So any of you Dino's out there, the revolution is on. New Year's Day 1980, 12 noon, Gillingham Football Ground. Gil, Sheffield N.F.A. Where's Gillingham? — An Angry Young Man. You leave me to worry about that. — Dino.

Does Stiff think we're a nation of paedophiles? Rachel Sweet was bad enough, but Angie? Aaaaagh. And to think that uncle John Peel played it as well! The Fragile Shoes, Liverpool. Use your head, how could John Peel resist it? — Dino.

Time to straighten things out a bit. There are two types of Anarchy: The Sex Pistols type of chaos anarchy and the anarchy advocated by Crass, real anarchy.

Crass do not look at incorrect dictionary definitions of the word, but have probably read anarchist literature, e.g. Stirner, Proudhon, Berkman, Bakunin, etc., depending on which type of anarchism they follow (e.g. Individualist, Communitist, Mutualistic, Philosophic, etc.).

So you see, Rambali you prat, there is more to Anarchy than chaos and outdated editions of T-shirts. I suggest you read some of the works by the above mentioned Anarchist authors before you start making statements about a subject which you are totally biased against and know nothing about.

Marx and Lenin agreed with Anarchy, yet Marxists hate anarchists. As C. Chads said (NME 25.8.79): "Everyone needs someone to hate in order to survive". etc.

I'm pissed off with this letter, so I'm going to stop. Pissed off person. Cheltenham, Glos. Boy, you anarchists sure have a great sense of humour. — Dino.

Never mind Gillingham. Western Bloc, 3rd from the sun, Universe, Mind of Jak, etc. — this has gotta be your first letter from Malaysia. I'm stranded in the jungle with the NME of July 21 and no camera to get a picture of myself for the Blockhead Competition which I'd obviously win considering the state I'm in. Gotta go now, there's a gorilla coming. Hope no-one turned up at Knebworth. Alan Tracer, Somewhere in the Malay Jungle.

Never mind Knebworth, I gotta go too, 'cos there's a red Hillman with two aerials coming — Dino, somewhere near the South Coast, sometime in August. Click. Whilerr...

At least we can't complain that the Purple Hearts sold out, since they haven't started out with any intention other than to do just that. Just a bunch of ordinary geezers who only want international fame and piles of cash.

The lessons of the '60s (remember those BOFs?) weren't learnt in '76 — I'm

"Hello, NME? Look, Paul Rambali can't do the bag this week so he asked me to fill in. The name's Dino..."

Your letters evaded by Britain's most wanted boy.

A postcard from the South Coast looking at you, Geldof, Idol etc. Just sign here boys... the expropriation of youth culture by the record companies begins again.

Tony Parsons and Julie Burchill's warning of the fickleness of R'n'R is more important than ever — so far only the Pop Group seem to have noticed the contradictions. By the way, I'm not hostile overall to the pork pie boys — it's only capitalism and rip-offs I gob at. Dave Hairdresser. Shoreham-by-Sea, Sussex. What does expropriation mean? — Dino. Who cares so long as it sells? — A Passing Record Business Mogul.

Paul Morley come down to earth! Let's get things in perspective. Your idea that we're in some golden age of popular music misguides. You must have tunnel vision!

If John Peel's show is the showcase for all this exciting new music and creative energy then why is it I never want to rush out and buy any of it? Some weeks you almost write the NME single handed. That's unhealthy. We might all start to believe you! Todays up and coming music is all imitation, there is no assimilation. There is nothing new. No "new pop!" Come down off the ceiling and listen with a greater sense of perspective. Burning Bridges, Redditch, Warks.

This is one of the two out of every three letters that arrived in the bag this week complaining about Morley. However, it's one of only two out of hundreds that didn't mention either Wembley or Knebworth or both. — Dino.

You should hand Morley his narrow-minded hat instead of paying him to talk through it. I, Dean Lidenorcan. That was the other one. — Dino.

No doubt raised on generations of posing white rock dickslingers, Nick Kent (NME Aug 25) was phased by Al Green's lack of macho. Kent says Green's movements were "weird, quasi-effeminate." Bullshit. The performance was sensuous and free of machismo. If Kent had been to a few more soul concerts — Smokey Robinson at the Hammersmith Odeon for instance — he'd maybe start questioning his culturebound (white, English) value judgements.

And what's so weird about effeminacy, quasi or otherwise?

Kent assumed Green's conversion to Christianity was post "Full of Fire". So how come Green recorded "My God Is Real"? Jesus is Waiting on pre "Full of Fire" albums? And who would have "habitual fears" of religious music being "blissed out tripe"? Only a pathetically ignorant, opinionated rock critic who's never sussed the consistent connection between Black church music and Black popular music. You think Curtis Mayfield, Aretha Franklin, The Swan Silvertones, Sam Cooke etc. are blissed out tripe? Steve Beresford, London NW1. Now you know why Al Green gets more girlfriends than Nick Kent. — Dino.

Reading your paper today, it struck me that the kind of criticism offered by such as Mr. Deehan (Gasbag 25.8.79), couching as it is in the very type language that represents the worst in trendy journalism — obscuring rather than clarifying thought — inadvertently pin-points, by being itself so clumsy a manifestation of the trait, everything that is bad about your writers.

Calling for reviews which equal "the art they began with" Mr. Deehan writes: "I pondered this necessarily suicidal honesty crashing itself upon the rocks while the biz/system/machine turned and promoted the event trying to turn rebellion into its own currency."

If Mr. Deehan's style is intended for an indication of what he expects from any writer with a claim to be "creative", and if his letter is itself the model of "artistic integrity" he would have us believe it to be, I think the NME should consider itself well pleased to be labelled the reverse of "informative, accessible" and "aware" by such a jump-up prat as Terry Deehan clearly is. Another Jumped-up Prat. Lucky they don't pay any attention to you lot anyway, otherwise they'd be well confused by now. — Dino.

The greatest argument against smoking dope — it makes you become like Chris Salawick.

The greatest argument against being a speed freak — it makes you become like Lemmy.

No really man, it's all a vast plot by Tesco's to take over the universe, they got highly-trained man (disguised as traffic wardens) armed with death rays, they bugged my phone and I... (quick nurse, the screens!)

The real Joe Hutcheon, Greenwich, London SE10. And the greatest argument against not taking drugs? It turns you into a normal human being. — Dino.

Pic: Pennie Smith.

T-ZERS

LISTEN, do you think we should be twiggling something here? Y'know, being shoved up the backside of the paper week after week. I mean, what's wrong with a double page centre spread on the T-Zers once in a while? There's even a letter in the Bag this week saying that this column is neglected. Jeez, if it weren't for the bills, let me tell ya, we'd walk outa this paper right here and leave ya with nothing but the anti-climax ad look at. As it is, we merely breathe deep and impart.

Excuse us while we whip this out. Talkin' 'bout Public Image and Virgin Records, and can we believe this crap? Listen, you know how fond the folk down at Vernon Yard are for the odd bit of hue'd vinyl or portrait platter? Well get ready for the new PiL plate. From what T-Zers hears the whacky, yacky, tacky folk at the 'Gin aim to release Lydon & Co's next album as a bunch of singles, and we mean forty-five's. Henry. The package will come in a cute round box and, seeing as how the title is 'The Metal Box', we can expect the product to resemble a movie holder. Anyway, after the initial pressing has been sold to all you young dudes, the thing reverts to the ancient, conventional 12" LP for all the collectors out there. Well, waddya know, waddya say? And don't tell us you'll be just as satisfied with the ordinary one.

The very satisfied people in the Squeeze pop outfit were all present when their frontperson Glen Tilbrook hired the fabulous, smouldering Albany Club in Deptford for his birthday high jinx. Apart from Danny Baker, nobody else at all famous was there. At different points during the night, Mr Tilbrook was quoted as being 22, 28, 35, and 18.

Actually, you may cancel that second paragraph. Let's continue to be obsessed with Public Image. And why not, eh? John Lydon and Keith Levine showed up at the Idlers Rest — the local NME boozebub — to accept all free drinks proffered. In amongst serious talk as to whether Liam Brady is totally fit yet, the pop stars let on that they find the Mod movement "desperate... if some geezer with hair down to his ears turned up in a parka people would think he was a mod."

Also, we are led to believe that we will be seeing more of the Beatles touring here over the next few months than PiL. "Rock bands shouldn't tour," said Lydon, "and rock bands shouldn't get too big. If they play a gig in North London it should be for the people in North London and not for thousands of people coming from all over the country." Or even — for that matter — from Chelsea.

The totally unsubstantiated rumour which music lovers have been awaiting with bated breath for many years: are Gary Moore, Ozzy Osbourne and Glen Hughes (not the Village Person, hipsters, the ex-Deep Purple bassist) really planning an L.A.-based supergroup and if so who will listen to it?

Gosh, Southend was fun over the Bank Holiday! Why, there were Mods and punks and skins trying to kill rockers who were trying to kill them while everybody tried to kill the police. Ideal fodder for mild-mannered holidaymakers, you might say. Famous personalities stalking the seashore in search of inspiration for their next load of teenage anthems

He man stepping forward for a film contract. On the bike is Leroy Wallace, otherwise known as Horsemouth, star of Theodoros Bafeloukos' new film Rockers (reviewed in Silver Screen last week) and he means business. Rockers should be surfacing soon but don't hold your breath till it appears at your local Odeon. Pic: Edgar Lustgarten included Brain B of Back To Zero, Billy H of The Chords, assorted members of Guns For Hire and no doubt hordes of others. Paul Weller declined to attend, and it is estimated that nobody present had ever had anything at all to do with Britt Ekland.

This Violent World: latest experiments in crowd control at football games include the rather odd tactic of printing articles about Abba and Blue Oyster Cult (now sadly bereft of their laser show; big ahhhhhhhhh, please) in Millwall and Gillingham programmes.

This Violent World: everybody's favourite gang of racist sickos — The British Movement to you — handing out "literature" to assembled mods at the Wellington in Waterloo and heaving their scumheads. Said British Movement also said to have played a not inconsiderable part in stirring up the Southend violence.

Witty exchange of the week (a witty exchange is no robbery, kids): A Dickie to an Australian: "You're from Australia, huh? Is that in Europe?" An Australian to a Dickie: "Are you guys friends of The Ramones?"

Tradespotting Corner: In the crowd at recent Local Operator gig at Dingwells Dance Hall was Frankie Miller, Pete Townshend and the ubiquitous Steve Hook (24 last Tuesday) and Paul Loans. Also sources reveal that Mr Townshend actually, gasp swallow, paid to get in. Just like a real person!

A little too much reality comes for a Dart. At the much ballyhooed Rye Festival last Saturday, one of the impromptu acts — going under the name of "Paul Jones' Blues Band" — featured a few members of the aforementioned Duo-Pop band. Well, during the set a couple of cans got aimed at stagehands and one fell squarely on the brow of Darts/Jones' bass man Thump Thomson. Mr Thomson, a devout Christian and teetotaler, left the stage in a state of blood. Later he commented, "I just preach peace man, and dig it, look what goes down!"

At this point can we just say that you should ignore all that's gone before and just think about the magnificent selection of soul that Edwin Starr chose in his capacity as guest DJ on Radio One last Sunday. Thought about it? Good. Next!

Piteous phone call from Homicide (a rock band of some sort) thanking the dots for carrying their denial of having played the NF party, but taking issue with our remark about 'white supremacist bands'. Homicide now deny being a racist band of any description whatsoever.

A new Pere Ubu album (the third thus far from the Cleveland mastini) entitled 'New Picnic Time' reported to be complete, imminent and strangely wonderful, whereas temperamental, preposterous bass virtuoso Jaco Pastorius is conspicuous by his absence on the studio side of the forthcoming '830' live double. Does this mean anything?

Waitasecond! We just turned on the radio (by whispering "Radio, I love you" natch) to help aid concentration among the more easily distracted dots and what do we hear but lengthy live Rockpile tapes.

What station are we tuned to? Answers on a postcard to 'Radio Dot, 987th floor, Post Office Tower, London'.

A true gent: on a recent visit to the NME office, Wilko Johnson was seen washing up several coffee cups. Has the old loony found God, and if so, where was He? (Round Dylan's place talking to Cliff on the phone, silly — Ed)

Quick there's aull. Just time enough for us here at T-Zers to let you know that we think that the current Cliff smasheroon is a dead ringer for something a Mr Todd Rundgren could have penned in the days before Utopia. Plus, it is too late to note that the last Rats single was a little Harleysque? We don't like, We don't like T-Zers.

And before the stars come out again, apologies to Pennie Smith for suggestions that her cover for the SBTs elpee was inspired by a section in Don Letts movie of the same. In fact Mr Letts was sitting in with his brownie at the time of Pennie's original sesh, and we might state that it was all her notion.

Purely for residents and day trippers: Reggae Superstore Daddy Kool's of London's Soho has now added an oldies basement to his ita wax waredon. Thousands of smouldering oldies are on sale at giveaway prices — like 50p to £1 — and proprietor 'smoothshaven' Keith is well on the case. "I love music too much and know what it's like wanting a record badly myself, so the prices aren't silly." No excuse now for the trilby hat and sta-prest not to check on a little more of what they claim to love so dear.

"Hi, this is Tina Weymouth talking 'mah head an' y'all." It's all true! Tina spoke thus to a Cream person but five minutes ago. "Y'know Eno thinks our music is good to hoover to? 'Good to hoover to? Let's hear it for Byrne, Bex and Bissell."

Here's the good news! Studio 54 (what about the taxed? Did Jimmy Carter's aid snort coke there? Oh, no! Not Cher and Blanca with their tits out again etc) to close. Here's the bad news! Controversial disco boss Steve Rubell will reopen the dreaded gingerbread palace after he's spent another million dollars tainting the sucker up still further. Never mind — the doormen still have standing orders not to admit Frank Sinatra unless he's with Jerry Hall, and you still can't get a drink after 3 o'clock (2.30 in Romford).

Unspoil charm dept: Duncan 'Kid' Reid of The Boys went to see The Undertones at the Marquee. During the course of their set, the Derry Innocents performed Reid's 'TCP' and when he went backstage after the show, he was besieged with Undertones demanding his autograph.

Whatever happened to Yusef Islam, we hear you asking daily. Well, he's gone the way of all great men and got himself engaged. Yusef, who in his pre-Moslem days went under the epithet 'Cat Stevens', will marry his Turkish sweetheart (Wow, not delight? — Ed) in the recently completed mosque skillfully sited in London's Regent's Park. The ceremony may or may not be recorded for a forthcoming 'Live At The Greek' album. This has been a service of T-Zers and the Dire Cat.

And while we're talking of religion, a word about the Scots and their homeland. Despite the over-the-years grumbling about lack of great events over the border, the tumbleweed blew round the feet of the patrons of the Van Morrison/T. Heads bash. The organisers needed about 20,000 to break even but, as it happens, only about two-thirds of that number showed. (Short pause whilst legions of NME readers grapple with Boots 'Work-it-Out' Budget Back-to-School Calculators). Mind you, Meadowbank were at home to Alloa that day.

And, a fore we go and just to say our circulation can stand giving rivals a decent plug, a message to all those East London way — as well as giving a nudge to the rest of you would be publishers nationwide. If you are fortunate enough to live in the aforementioned district, look out for the London Musical Advisor. This magazine will be available at music shops about — checks watch — now and is concerned with helping the local music scene to flourish. The LMA will review demo studios, encourage venues etc in the East End and as far as Essex and concentrate on all things "grass roots" (Ah, interesting — Milk Marketing Board). Now, get this, the real punch line is that this organ is absolutely free. As in nothing. So all the rest of you — get on the ball. Meanwhile NME shuffles its feet and blushes right down to its socks.

Banyon

"Gee, Hank — so that's what they wear under their kilts... bondage trousers!"

NME

EDITORIAL
3rd Floor
5-7 Carnaby Street
London W1V 1PG
Phone: 01-439 8761

EDITOR
Neil Spencer

Deputy Editor
Phil McNeill
News Editor
Derek Johnson
Production Editor
Stuart Johnston
Associate Editors
Charles Shaar Murray
Monty Smith
Special Projects Editor
Roy Carr

Staff
Tony Stewart
(Live Editor)
Angus MacKinnon
Paul Rambali
Max Bell
Danny Baker
Paul Morley

Photography
Pamela Smith

Contributors
Nick Kent
Fred Dellar
Steve Clarke
Tony Parsons
Julie Burchill
Chris Salewicz
Bob Edmunds
Lester Bangs
John May
Penny Reel
Adrian Thrills
Ian Penman
Andy Gill

Cartoons
Tony Bonnyon
Ray Lowry

Research
Fiona Foulger

New York
Joe Stevens
(212) 874 5024
Mick Farren

ADVERTISEMENT DEPT.
Room 2529
Kings Reach Tower
Stamford Street
London SE1 9LS

Ad Director
Percy Dickens
(01) 281 6080
Ad Manager
Peter Rhodes
(01) 261 6261
Classified Ads
(01) 261 6122
Live Ads
(01) 261 6153
Ad Production
Brian Gorman
Pete Christopher
Barry Cooper
(01) 261 6207

Publicity: Eric Jackson
Editorial Consultant: Andy Gray
IPC Magazines Ltd.
Production of any material without permission is strictly forbidden.

BETTER BADGES

MAIL ORDER TOP TEN

1	(11) Rock Against Racism	25p
2	(2) Special A.K.A.	25p
3	(15) Tubeway Army	20p
4	(16) Ruts	20p
5	(13) Secret Affair	20p
6	(18) S.O.S.	20p
7	(14) The Chords	20p
8	(5) S.T.P.	20p
9	(10) Clash Politics	20p
10	(1) The Art of Nocturne	20p

Best Albums: Pop Partridge, Guitar Scars
Lydon, Human Phil, Venom
Rock Against Racism, Frankie Miller, Paul
Laid, Laid Hanson, Solider Magpie, Heat Shag Nasty, Revolving London, Zoo Teenage Wasting Shade, Savage Rock, Back to Zero Lynx, Sound
Buddies, Harvey, Burrows Wrong, Grain Gledhill and Pross
All the Smoking Men, Go U2, Shaking Who Killed Lulu, Dead Kennedy, Porro Bunker, Heat
Torch

Add 10p P&P Per 11st
286 PORTOBELLO RD
LONDON W10 0K

20 GREAT ROCKERS FROM THE ORIGINAL MODS

DO WAH DIDDY DIDDY · 54321 · SHALALA · HUBBLE BUBBLE (TOIL AND TROUBLE) · HI LILI HI LO · THE ONE IN THE MIDDLE · GOT MY MOJO WORKING · WITH GOD ON OUR SIDE · COME TOMORROW · IF YOU GOTTA GO, GO NOW ·
PRETTY FLAMINGO · SEMI-DETACHED SUBURBAN MR.
JAMES · THERE'S NO LIVING WITHOUT YOUR LOVING ·
JUST LIKE A WOMAN · OH NO NOT MY BABY · HA HA SAID THE CLOWN · MY NAME IS JACK · FOX ON THE RUN · RAGAMUFFIN MAN · MIGHTY QUINN.

EMI Records Ltd.
Hayes, Middlesex,
England.

Side One produced by John Burgess (tracks 5, 8 & 10 for Air London). Tracks 1, 3 & 5 on Side Two produced by John Burgess for Air London.

Also available on tape.